The

Kumārikākhaṇḍa

of the Manthānabhairavatantra

Volume One
Part One

Edition and Translation of
Chapters One to Seven

Mark S. G. Dyczkowski

CONTENTS OF VOLUME ONE OF TEXT AND TRANSLATION

Contents i-iv
Concerning the Edition v-xii

CHAPTER ONE: Śrīnātha's Inquiry

The Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra 3
Śrīnātha's questions concerning the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra 5

CHAPTER TWO: The Response to the Inquiry

The one who acts within the Maṇḍala and the Maṇḍala 9
The Power of Bliss, the Goddess in the Maṇḍala 9
The Transmission, the Groups of Four, Five, Six, Four, Five and Four 11
The Six Modalities of the Goddess and Mūlanātha, the Root Lord 11
The Consecration, the Clan 11
The Eight Deities, the Gesture, 13
The Three Transmissions and the Deity of the Transmission 13
The City of the Moon, Śrīnātha 13
The Divine Current: the Transmission of the Eighteen 15
The Couple, the Three Siddhas 15
Vṛkṣanātha, the Nine and Sixteen Siddhas 15
The Body (piṇḍa) and the Fifty Clans of the Wave of Sonic Energy 17
Śiva, the Plane of Repose, 17
Realisation, Authority and the Goddess of the Transmission 17
Bhairava and Kaulīśa, the Four Siddhas 19

CHAPTER THREE: Dakṣa's Curse and Grace

The Goddess's Liṅga: The Triangle in the Centre 21
Śrīkaṇṭha speaks with the Goddess 23
More Concerning the Triangle in the Centre 27
Bhairava and Bhairavī in the Centre 27
Vakrā, the Goddess Moon, the Liṅga, the City of the Moon and the Transmissions 29
The Goddess, the teacher in the City of the Moon, instructs Śrīkaṇṭha 31
The Goddess's Previous Life and the Destruction of Dakṣa's sacrifice 35

Dakṣa's Stavarāja 37
The Six Wheels 39
The Gods, Colours and Letters of the Six Wheels 41
The Yoginīs in the Six Wheels 41
The Play of the Full and the New Moon 43
The Voids of the Wheels
The Void of the Wheel of the Command 47
The Void of the Wheel of the Foundation 49
The Void of the Wheel of the Navel, the Void of the Wheel of the Heart 49
The Void of the Wheel of the Throat, the Void of the Wheel of the Palate 49
The Benefits (phalaśruti), Dakṣa's Repentance and Forgiveness 51
The Goddess's Self-immolation, re-birth, marriage and the god's enlightenment 53

CHAPTER FOUR: Concerning the Mālinīstavarāja

Śrīkaṇṭha declares his Devotion to the Goddess and implores her for the Teachings 57
The Hymn to Mālinī - the Mālinīstava 63
Benefits of the Hymn and Admonition to Secrecy 81
The Goddess Bursts out of the Liṅga and graces the God 83

CHAPTER FIVE: Śrīnātha's Consecration with the Command (ājñābhiṣeka)

The God Seeks to Persuade the Goddess to Accept Him as Her Disciple 85
The God Praises the Goddess in the Liṅga 87
The Emergence of the Goddess from the Liṅga and the God's Empowerment 89
The Goddess's Teaching 93
The God's Consecration 95
The Hymn of Twelve Verses 99

CHAPTER SIX: The Pervasion of Śrīnātha's Sacred Seat of the Command (ājñāpīṭha)

The Goddess's Contemplation in the Cave of the Liṅga and Her Emergence from It 103

The Five Sacred Seats, their Inhabitants and Bhairava's Consecration in Each One, Oḍiḍiyāna Bhairava meets the Goddess 103
The Sacred Tree, the Fifty Rudras 105
The Three Trees, Vellakas and Attendants, 107
Karavīra - the Cremation Ground 107
Khecarī - the Gesture, the Goddess and God of the Sacred Seat 109
The Twenty Sages, Jālandhara 109
Bhairava worships the Goddess in the Shade of the Bilva Tree 111
The Fifty Heroes 111
The Six Female Attendants, the Three Male Servants 113
Lakuṭa - The Cremation Ground, the Three Gestures, the Yogi and the Yoginī, 115
The Twelve Sages, Pūrṇagiri, Samarikā - the Goddess of the Sacred Seat 117
Bhairava's Initiation 119
The Fifty Bhairavas 121
The Three Goddesses, Maids and Attendents 123
Khecara - the Hidden Sacred Seat, Uḍḍāmara - the Cremation Ground 125
The Ten Sages 127
Kāmarūpa, Kāmeśvarī, Her Attendents and the Kadamba Tree 127
Bhairava receives the Alchemical Pill 129
The Fifty Rasasiddhas 131
The Six Female Attendents and the Three Male Servants 131
Kāmarūpaka, Ucchuṣma, the secret seat, the secret couple, the Siddha and the Gesture 133
Aṭavīmukha - the Cremation Ground, the Field and the Seat 133
The Eight Ṛṣis, Tisra - The Sacred Seat of the Future 135
Conclusion: in praise of the four sacred seats and admonitions 141
In Praise of the Sacred Seats 143
The Remaining Sacred Sites 145

CHAPTER SEVEN: The Authority of the Goddess in the Venerable City of the Moon

The Descent of the Scripture, the Western House 149
The Forty-eight Siddhas, the Forty-eight Yoginīs 153
Mahāntārikā the Vidyā and Kaulinī the Command in the Centre of the Triangle 155
The City of the Moon conjoined with the Twelve Verses and the Path of the Moon 157
The Lineages of Siddhas, the Three Siddhas, the Nine Siddhas 159
The Convention of the Flowers - the Eighteen Siddhas 159

The Nine Siddhas 161
The Sixteen Siddhas, the Three Lineages of the Sixteen Siddhas 163
The Locations of the Nine Siddhas in the Body 163
The Location of the Sixteen Siddhas in the Body 165
The Three Lineages 165
Conclusion 167

Concerning the Edition

The Manuscripts of the Kumārikākhaṇḍa of the Manthānabhairavatantra

All the MSs of the Kumārikākhaṇḍa that have so far been recovered are Nepalese. They have all been used for this edition. They are either deposited in the National Archives in Kathmandu or in private collections in the Valley. All are relatively recent paper manuscripts, the oldest of which is just over four hundred years old. They are as follows:

K: NAK MS no. 5-4827 Śaivatantra 1012; NGMPP reel no. A 172/3. There are 245 folios and the MS is complete. Size 30 x 12.5 cms. There are nine lines of text on each sheet. The script is Devanāgarī written in a clear and uniform hand. The scribal colophon of this manuscript is the same as that of manuscript G (see below), which was copied by the scribe along with the text. There is no date. Judging from the script and appearance the MS was probably copied in the 19th or possibly even in the early 20th century.

Kh: NAK MS no. 4-980 Śaivatantra 1006 kha; NGMPP A 175/3. There are 238 folios and the MS is complete. Size 30.5 x 13.5 cm. There are ten lines of text on each sheet. The script is late Nevārī written in a clear and uniform hand. According to the scribal colophon the MS was completed in December 1804 CE.[1]

G: NAK MS no. 1-811 Śaivatantra 992; NGMPP A 173/1. There are 243 folios and the MS is complete. Size 30 x 10.5 cm. There are nine lines of text on each sheet. The script is late Nevārī. The manuscript is clearly legible but somewhat messy due to the numerous corrections in the margins made by a second scribe. He has corrected the numbering of the folios and inserted missing words, parts of them and even in some cases entire lines. These corrections may well have been made from the original manuscript from which the first scribe copied. The colophon, which is common with MS K, states that it was copied in Bhaktapur during the reign of Jayajitāmitramalla (1673-1696)[2] in the NS 816, i.e. 1675 CE.

---

[1] saṁvat 925 mārgaśilakṛṣṇa 11 ro 5 siddha || śubham ||

[2] The part of the colophon common to MSs K and MS G reads:

*bhūmyākhaṇḍaśobhinā (k, g: -ḍalaśobhinā) jayajitāmitreṇa saṁpālitena (k, g: -te ) bhāgīrathasumantriṇā (k: bhāgīśāma-; g; bhāgīrāma-) saha mudādeśe ca bhaktākhye (g: -khyake) dānadhyānasurālayasya racanā devārcanāsatkriyā goviprapratipālanādhvaratapo-jāpyaprayogaiḥ (k: -ratayojāpyā-; g: --retayojāpyā-) sadā (k: sadāḥ) manthānabhairavaṁ (k: -naravaiyāṁ; g: naṁradayāṁ) cakāra tapasvī (k, g: tapasi) śrīcakrarājo dvijaḥ ṣaṣṭhānantagaje kṛte (k, g: -gajairmite) budhadine nepālajāte śake tiṣyanakṣatre (k, g: tiṣṭhastatra) trayodaśī-

Another date written in the hand of the second scribe is tacked onto the end of the colophon. This is NS 903 i.e. 1772 CE.[3]

Gh: This manuscript belongs to M. Ṁ. Miśra who lives in Patan. The running number of the manuscript is H 5530 and reel number NGMPP H 330/4. The MS consists of 237 folios and is almost complete. Size 33.4 x 9.3 cm. There are nine lines on each sheet. It is written in a clear, late Nevārī script. The text begins from the first verse and end at 69/23ab. There is no colophon as the last pages are missing.

Ṅ: This is a manuscript from a private collection, running number H 6563 and reel number H 366/4. It breaks off at the end of folio 92a. Size 31.8 x 17.5 cm. There are 13 lines per page. It is written in Devanāgarī with influences of Nevārī script. It begins from the first verse and ends at verse 29/3ab. There is no colophon.

C: NAK MS 1- 278 Śaivatantra 999; NGMPP reel no. A 170/2. The manuscript breaks off at the end of folio 81a. Size 16.5 x 11 cm. There are nine lines on each page. The text is clearly written in neat Devanāgarī. It ends in the middle of 18/88cd.

Ch: NAK MS no. 2-217 Śaivatantra 887; NGMPP reel no. A 173/3. There are 238 folios and the MS is complete. Size 35 x 9 cm. There are nine lines per page. The manuscript is quite worn. Although the writing, in Nevārī script, is fairly clear, blotches and marks make reading difficult in places. The scribe was a Rājopādhyāya Brahmin called Uddhavarāja. The copy was completed in June 1612 CE.[4]

J: NAK MS no. 5-4630 Śaivatantra 1010; NGMPP reel no. A 171/11. There are 216 folios and the MS is complete. Size 39.5 x 8 cm. There are eight lines on each sheet.

śubhatithau kṛṣṇākhyapakṣe śubhadine (k, g: -dānair) nanditakalpapādapamadayoṣitmanojopamaḥ (k, g: - nindita- .k, g: -mado-.) || śubham ||

The colophon tells us that the MS was comissioned by Bhāgīratha, a minister of Jayajitāmitramalla. It was copied by the Brahmin Śrīcakrarāja and completed on wednesday on the 13th day of the dark fortnight in the asterism of Tiṣya in the year NS 816, i.e. 1675 CE

[3] 903 saṁpūrṇṇaṁ.

[4] The colphon in Sanskrit and Nevārī reads:
saṁvat 733 jyeṣṭhavadi 10 saṁpūrṇaṁ |
*upādhyāyena (upādhyā ) śrī uddhavarājena likhitam idaṁ pustakaṁ |
idaṁ pustakaṁ śodhanīyaṁ (so-) yatnena (yaditena) || śrī ||
ghamahādukhanadayakājuho |
ghameva suyetā vidu ghamitraputrajulasāviyadavaḥ | 7 |
ghavastupitā yenemadupitā vilapātakalā ivaḥ ||

The script is late Nevārī. The hand is quite clear and the manuscript is in good condition. No colophon.

Jh: NAK MS. no. 4-83 Śaivatantra 1006K; NGMPP reel no. A 180/3. It consists of 280 folios (wrongly recorded in the card catalogue as 169) and breaks off just before the end. Size 40.5 x 17 cm. There are eleven lines per page. There are blotches of ink here and there on the sheets. The script is late Nevārī. The letters are separated from one another and the hand is untidy. It begins with the first verse and ends with verse 69/35ab.

Ñ: NAK MS no. 1-230 Śaivatantra 991; NGMPP reel no. A 209/14. It consists of just nine folios. Size 40 x 13.5 cm. There are eleven lines per sheet. The script is late Nevārī. It ends in the middle of chapter four with line 125 of the Mālinīstava. The hand is steady and clear. However, the folios are dirty to varying degrees especially on the right sides of the sheets.

Ṭ: NAK MS no. 5-4630 Śaivatantra 1010; NGMPP reel no. A 171/11. There are only twenty-five folios although the title card of the NGMPP says that it 216 folios long. Size 39.5 x 8 cm. There are eight lines per sheet. Although a paper manuscript, the folios have a hole in the middle after the manner of palmleaf manuscripts. The text is contained within double line borders. The script is late Nevārī and the hand is clear and uniform. Although dark, the manuscript is in good condition and clearly readable. It begins with the first verse and ends at 7/71ab.

Ṭh: NAK MS no. 1-1697 28/1 Śaivatantra 995; NGMPP reel no. B 135/42. There are 20 folios. Size 39 x 10.5 cm. There are nine line per sheet. The script is standard late Nevārī. The MS begins with the last folio which is 141a. This is followed by folios 25b-34b, which contain verses 7/50ab-8/121ab. Then come folios numbered 130a-140b. These, along with folio 141a, contain 36/85ab-39/161c.

Orthography and Sandhi

Variants in the MSs have been extensively noted. Many of little significance could well have been omitted but the intention is that the reader who cares to do so may, to a large extent, reconstruct the text of each MS, although not the exact orthography or sandhi. The following changes have been made in the printed text with respect to the MSs without noting them:

These MSs, as happens in MSs in general, do not not mark *avagraha*s. Single *avagraha*s have been simply restored.

Consonants after the letter ‘r’ are generally doubled in the MSs. These have been silently reduced to the single consonant.

Short ‘ṛ’ and ‘ḷ’ are normally indistinguishable from their long equivalents. These have generally been restored to their intended form without noting variants.

The conjuncts ‘nt’ and ‘tt’ are indistinguishable, as are ‘dgh’ and ‘ddh’. All the MSs write ‘va’ for ‘ba’ and so these too cannot be distinguished. In all these cases the correct, intended letters are in the edited text.

The sibillants ‘śa’ and ‘sa’ are often interchanged. The change from the former to the latter is particularly common and is not normally specifically noted as a variant.

The letters ‘sa’, ‘ma’ and ‘ya’ may be confused with one another and ‘pa’ with the last two. These variants, unless significant, are also in most cases not noted

In some MSs the conjunct ‘ccha’ is reduced to ‘cha’. The word ‘icchā’, for example, is always spelt ‘ichā’ in MS Ṅ.

The MSs occasionally confuse ‘t’ and ‘n’ in conjuncts. The word ‘ātman’, for example, may read ‘ānman’.

We often find that -śṛ- replaces ‘-śri-‘.

The MSs generally read niḥk- for niṣk-.

Scribes invariably write ‘ūddha-‘ for ‘ūrdhva-‘. The word ujjvala- almost always independently, and invariably in a compound, reads ujvala-.

Similarly, tattva- is written as tatva-.

MSs variously read ‘ṣaṭ’ or ‘ṣaḍ’ in a compound or sandhi as ‘ṣaṭ’, ‘ṣaḍ’ or even ‘ṣad’. These variants will normally not be noted.

The formation or otherwise of complete conjunct consonants with anusvāra within words such as ‘saṁkalpa-’ / sa"nkalpa-’ has been standardized according to common usage in printed texts and not noted.

Sanskrit MSs vary in the degree in which sandhi takes place between words. When sandhi may be formed in more than one way, this difference, if it appears in the MSs, will not be noted as a variant. Apart from cases of deviant sandhi that have been retained in the text and signalled as such in the notes, the sandhi commonly found in printed editions has been adopted. Thus, the homologization of final anusvāra with a consonant at the beginning of the following word will normally be avoided. For example, ‘phalantu’ would be resolved into ‘phalaṁ tu’ without normally noting variants. Also, for convenience, as this takes place often, the final ‘t’ in a word that is liable to change to final ‘d’ in sandhi with an initial soft consonant of the following word is uniformally changed in the critical edition without noting variants.

External Sources Used in the Edition

Over a third of the KuKh is drawn from other texts. Long passages, even entire chapters are copied wholesale, with occasional additions and omissions. The KuKh borrows most extensively from other parts of the MBT, especially the two recensions of the Yogakhaṇḍa. Out of its 69 chapters, chapters 50 to 66 of the KuKh are virtually entirely drawn from them. A few verses and short passages are found scattered here and there in many other chapters also. Although considerably less, the Siddhakhaṇḍa also contains common material, noteably the Mālinīstava in chapter four of the KuKh.

The Kulakaulinīmata and the Ambāsaṁhitā, which present themselves as the MBT, contain sections and short passages found in the KuKh but in the great majority of cases these are also found in the KMT and its expansion the ṢSS, which are their original source. These two texts are the most prominent amongst the other Kubjikā sources from which the KuKh draws. The KuKh shares only a few short passages and occasional verses with the Śrīmatottara, the other expansion of the KMT. While chapter 46 is largely drawn only from chapter 43 of the ṢSS, the other major passages found in one of these sources from which the KuKh draws are also found in some of the others. Thus Chapter 14 and a part of the following one of the KuKh (up to 15/13), which deals with the Vow of Knowledge, corresponds to a large part of chapter 25 of the KMT, 49 and part of 50 of the ṢSS and 7 of the KuKauM. Again much of chapter 16 of the KuKh corresponds to chapters 22, 34 and 6 of the KMT, ṢSS and the AS, respectively.

The other major source of the KuKh is the Tantrasadbhāva, as it is for the KMT, which draws most of it chapters 4, 5, 6[5] and 25 from it. The section that deals with the Vow of Knowledge (corresponding to KMT 25/29-171) is chapter 14 of the TS. Although found in the aforementioned Kubjikā sources, the redactor probably drew it directly from the TS. The ninth chapter of the TS is certainly the source of chapter 33 of the KuKh, as is the first chapter of the TS of chapters 40 and 41 of the KuKh.

Apart from these major texts we find a few verses in common with the Cinñcinīmatasārasamuccaya. These are from the three versions of the Root Sūtra to which chapter 26, 38 and 42 of the KuKh are dedicated and so is probably not the source. We find the same verses at the beginning of the Kriyāsūtrādhikāra.

Commentaries on parts of the KuKh are other sources that have been used to compare readings. The most extensive, although not long, is the Saṁvartārthaprakāśa by Mukundarāja*,* who quotes and glosses fifteen sūtras of the KuKh. The SaṁP also comments on the Mālinīstava in chapter four of the [5] See Goudriaan and Schoterman 1986: 488 ff. for a general survey of variant readings in chapters 4 to 6 of the KMT with respect to chapters 3, 6, and 8 of the TS.

---

KuKh as does the Bhaktibodha on those parts of it common to the version of this hymn in the KMT. The readings of these and other minor sources have been collated with the text of the KuKh. The references to them found in the notes of the edition are collected together in the concordance appended to the third volume of the introduction.

The Sanskrit of the Kumārikākhaṇḍa

Scholars who edit early Tantric texts generally face, in varying degrees, two major problems. One is the corruption of the transmission of the text they are editing and the other that of the Sanskrit in which the text is written. The former is due to scribal error and the latter to the imperfections of the Sanskrit the redactors have learnt, which may be further compounded by the mistakes they make in their own Sanskrit. As many, if not most of such texts are redacted by a number of people sometimes over a long period of time, as is probably the case with the KuKh, the two, although quite distinct phenomena, are not uncommonly related. The text supplimented by a second redactor needs to be copied either by him or an assistant. Moreover, considering the scribal errors common in the MSs of such Tantric texts, it is quite understandable that passages imported from sources in manuscripts that are often themselves corrupt should be subject to further corruptions. But this is not always the case. Just over half of the 6,000 verse of the ṢSS are drawn wholesale from the KMT. In this case we find that an appreciable number of readings in the ṢSS are preferable to those selected from the MSs of the KMT used to make the edition. This is due not just to an exceptionally good transmission with relatively few scribal errors compared to those of most Nepalese manuscripts, it is also because of the quality of the Sanskrit and the redaction of the text. The numerous deviant forms in the language of Tantric texts do warrant that it be called 'Tantric Sanskrit' on the analogy of the expression Buddhist hybrid Sanskrit with reference to the Sanskrit of Buddhist Sanskrit texts. Even so, the language of all the texts is far from uniform; indeed there is considerable variation between them in the quality of the Sanskrit.

The ṢSS is arguably the work of just one redactor. Moreover, the added valuation given to Brahmins we find there in passages not common to the KMT suggests that he was a Brahmin. As such he may well have had a better Sanskrit education than the authors of Tantric texts whose Sanskrit was limited to learning it from the texts and the schools that produced them. This is probably the case with the redactors of the MBT, a heavily segmented text that has suffered considerably both from a faulty transmission and the peculiarities of the Sanskrit in which it is written. While the tradition does intend, at least, to avoid the former, poor Sanskrit is not considered to be a defect. Just as the initiate takes pride in attending to essentials in his Kaula practice, he is equally proud of his disregard of the finer (or even not too fine!) points of grammar. What matters is the meaning not the form. Accordingly, in chapter thirty, where the writting, copying, and transmission of the scripture is discussed, the KuKh declares:

> The relationship between the cases and the verb, the inflection and case endings, along with the seven (types) of compounds - (all this) is kept hidden as one does a woman of good family. One should not analyse (the teaching) with difficult words. The wise man should refrain from (using) difficult (expressions). The (true) Śaivite (can) understand (the meaning of the teaching even) by means of simple, ungrammatical forms (apaśabda).
>
> One should purify (one's understanding of) the letter of the (linguistic) convention by (referring to) the one (true) oral tradition. (It should not be done) by blockheads and fools by means of dry logic and the like.
>
> O God, there is a divine form of speech (vāṇī), which is freedom (itself), that (operates) in the scripture (āgama) and (its) commentary. The Divine Tradition comes into being when this (reality), which is the reverse (of falsity), has been grasped. Abandoning (dry) scholarliness, one should listen to the Kaulikāgama which is easy (to understand) and the oral tradition that has been passed down from ear to ear.[6]

The 'freedom' of the 'divine form of speech' of the Tantric text not only allows for the creation of a variant form of Sanskrit, it also allows for inconsistencies in that Sanskrit also. Obviously, this creates a major problem for the modern editor. He must constantly decide whether the erroneousness of the word or the syntax of a sentence he has before him is due to scribal error or was originally intended by the redactor. This is particularly the case with the Sanskrit of the KuKh. The undoubtedly poor transmission of the text and the close relationship of the manuscripts justifies extensive emendation. This is so evident that one of the scribes recommends that the text be 'cleaned up with effort'.[7] But in a large number of cases this is not possible or clearly not required. Changes in the order of the constituents of compounds, for example, are hard to attribute to scribal error. Most significantly, a large number of such cases are supported by the metre. Sanskrit in general maintains the priority of metrics with respect to content. A well known dictum admonishes that: 'one should make even (the word) 'māṣa' (a type of lentil) into 'maṣa' (but) one should not disturb the metre.'[8] [7] See above note 4 on p. ii.

---

[6] KuKh 30/76-80.

Unfortunately, there are many cases where this criterion is of no assistence. One particularly common example is the use of anusvāra to make masculine words neuter. This involves a change of a final visarga in the nominative singular to an anusvāra, which makes no difference to the metre. In the scripts of some early palmleaf MSs[9] visarga and anusvāra look similar. The former is written as two dots one above the other, as it is in Devanāgarī. But anusvāra instead of being a single dot above the final consonant as it is in most North Indian scripts, including Nevārī, it is a dot which is a little higher than the upper dot of visarga, below which is a small rough semi-circle with a short extension on the side opposite the letter it follows. This kind of anusvāra has been retained in modern Bengali script. It may be argued that scribal error may partly, at least, account for the frequent change from masculine to neuter gender in the KuKh in this way, even though one would expect the opposite tendency, that is, from anusvāra to visarga. Moreover, if masculine nominative singulars have become neuters due to scribal error, it is so extensive in the KuKh that it is impossible to decide what the original form may have been. Throughout the Kubjikā corpus we find a marked tendency to make masculine nouns neuter. It is so common that the neuter may be said to function as a 'common gender' for both masculine and neuter nouns. We notice the same phenomenon in early Tantric texts of other schools. But the extent to which this occurs may vary considerably from text to text. Moreover, the change within a text is not always consistent. The editor is a in a dilemma when he sees this taking place in the case of proper names, when there can be no possible doubt of their gender. His distress becomes acute when he sees that in lists of such proper names some retain their regular gender. Moreover, the degree to which this takes place may vary from list to list. Well then, why not conceed that this distortion in the Sanskrit in the KuKh is simply the result of scribal error and that this is the case in most if not all the others? The reason is simply that in order to transform the text we have in the manuscripts into one in which the Sanskrit is everywhere correct, or even just consistent in its corruptions would involve massive emendation. The emendation of a substantive that has become neuter in this way, for example, involves emendation of attributives in concord with it, which may be several. Moreover, such corruptions are also commonly found in other cognate texts, although, admittedly, generally not in the same degree as we find in the KuKh.

---

[8] māṣam api maṣaṁ kuryāt chandobhaṅgaṁ na kārayet |

[9] An example is the 11th century palmleaf manscript of the Brahmayāmala (NAK MS no. 3-370, NGMPP reel no: A42/6).

.

The case for treating the Sanskrit of this and similar texts independently is further strengthened by an analysis of the variants from the sources of passages where these could be traced. We find that these are usually more corrupt than in their original location. This is commonly the case and need not surprise us. But what is surprising is that the form and extent of the corruptions we find in other parts of the text are consistantly maintained in the usual inconsistent manner of the Sanskrit of the rest of the text. The language of the source has been adapted to fit that of the recipient. When we compare the two versions of a passage - one in the KuKh and the other in its source, we find that in several instances the Sanskrit in the KuKh has been corrupted simply to make a misread word somehow fit with the metre and yield sense. While, this may be the work of a scribe, the uniformity of the manner in which the Sanskrit is corrupted supports the view that this scribe was also engaged in redacting the text he was copying in his own way.

In short, it is necessary to take into account particular instances as they come up in the text in order to decide on possible emendation or the choice of reading in the context of the language of the text that is being edited. This does not mean, of course, that the 'objectivity' of external referents should be ignored. In preparing this edition the occurrence of the same or analogous deviant forms in other early Śaiva texts have been noted, although, admittedly, more could have been done. Be that as it may, modern computer technology that provides the facility of searches of electronic texts, has been extensively used of to make statistical assessments of degrees of occurrence and identify locations of the same forms in the body of the edited text. In many instances these have also been searched in other e-texts that I have prepared from collated manuscript sources. These include the major unpublished Kubjikā texts and those of other related schools.

Rather than prepare a separate 'grammar' of the Sanskrit of the Kumārikākhaṇḍa, I have chosen to add notes to the critical edition justifying the readings I have chosen or the emendations that have been made or simply why the text has been left as it is in the MSs. Although the notes burden the critical apparatus and require extensive cross-referencing, they allow the reader to keep track of the deviant forms and assess whether the reasons advanced for considering them to be such are valid.

।। ॐ स्वस्ति ।।
श्रीनाथपादुकाभ्यां नमः। श्रीगणेशाय नमः।

मन्थानभैरवतन्त्रे कुमारिकाखण्डे

प्रथमानन्दः

[१]संवर्तामण्डलान्ते[२] क्रमपदनिहितानन्दशक्तिः[३] सुभीमा
सृष्टिन्याये[४] चतुष्कं[५] त्वकुलकुलगतं[६] पञ्चकं[७] चान्यषट्कम्[८] ।
चत्वारः[९] पञ्चकोऽन्यः[१०] पुनरपि चतुरः षोडशाज्ञाभिषेकं[११]
दिव्याष्टौ[१२] मूर्तिमध्ये[१३] हसखफरकला[१४] बिन्दुपुष्पा[१५] खमुद्रा ।। १ ।।

बालं[१६] कौमारवृद्धं[१७] परमशिवकला वक्रदेवी[१८] क्रमाणां[१९]
श्रीनाथं[२०] चन्द्रपुर्यां[२१] नवनवकलितं युग्मभेदं तु[२२] सारम् ।
त्रीणि[२३] सिद्धावतारं[२४] प्रथमकलियुगे[२५] कोङ्कणे चाधिकारं[२६]
तेषां[२७] वै पुत्रशिष्या नवपुरुषक्रमे[२८] तेषु मध्याद्[२९] द्विरष्टौ[३०] ।। २ ।।

सन्तानं[३१] गोत्रपिण्डं[३२] क्रमपदसकलं[३३] षोडशान्तं[३४] क्रमान्तं
शेषा[३५] वै[३६] मण्डलानि[३७] परिभ्रमविमलं[३८] पूज्यसद्भाववृन्दम्[३९] ।
आदावष्टादशान्तं कुलक्रमसकलं[४०] मण्डलोत्थानपूर्वं[४१]
संस्कारं[४२] त्रिक्रमेण[४३] पशुमलक्षयकृत् पिण्डशुद्धिः[४४] शिवाग्नौ[४५] ।। ३ ।।

मध्ये[४६] विश्रामभूमिः[४७] प्रसरमनुभवं[४८] प्रत्ययं[४९] स्वाधिकारम्[५०]
संसृष्टं येन तस्मै नमत[५१] गुरुवरं भैरवं[५२] श्रीकुलीशम्[५३] ।। ४ ।।

CHAPTER ONE

Śrīnātha's Inquiry

The Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra

[1]Within (the centre) of Saṁvartāmaṇḍala[2] is the power of bliss (ānandaśakti). Present in (every) part (pada) of the Transmission (kramapadanihitā),[3] she is pleasingly horrific (subhīmā). The quaternary is present in (both) Akula and Kula[4] (as is) the pentad and another, the hexad, (again) the four, another pentad and again four in the pattern of emanation.[5] There is the Sixteenfold Consecration of the Command,[6] the eight divine beings[7] and, in the middle of (Kubjikā's) form (mūrti), the energy (kalā - E) of (the consonants) Ha Sa Kha Pha Ra and the (goddess who is the) flower which is the Point (bindupuṣpā)[8] and the Gesture of Space (khamudrā).[9] (1)

(There is the Transmission of the) Child, the Youth and the Aged. She is the goddess Vakrā (the Crooked One), the energy of Supreme Śiva of (all) the Transmissions (krama). (Along with her) Śrīnātha[10] (resides in) the City of the Moon[11] manifested (kalita) (along with) the eighteen (Nāthas).[12] Indeed, the category of the Couple is the essence (of the Divine Current).[13] The three (constitute) the descent of the Siddhas in the beginning of the Age of Strife (prathamakaliyuga)[14] and the (spiritual) authority (that was thereby established in the land of) Koṅkaṇa.[15] These (three) had disciples (who were their spiritual) sons in the Lineage of the Nine Persons (navapuruṣakrama). Sixteen (disciples) (dviraṣṭau)[16] (arose) from amongst them. (2)

The lineage (santāna), the body (formed from the) clans (gotrapiṇḍa),[17] all the parts (pada) of the Transmission (kramapadasakala), the End of the Sixteen (ṣoḍaśānta)[18] that is the culmination of the Transmission (kramānta),[19] the remaining maṇḍalas,[20] the pure rotation (of Kuṇḍalinī) (paribhrama)[21]- (this) is the collection of the (teachings concerning) the essential nature (of the deity who is the) object of worship (pūjyasadbhāvavṛndam).[22] In the beginning[23] the entire Kulakrama is within the (group of) eighteen (Nāthas) prior to the emergence of the maṇḍala.[24] The purification (saṁskāra)[25] that destroys the impurity of the fettered[26] by means of the Triple Transmission (trikrama)[27] is the purification of the body (piṇḍa) in the fire of Śiva.[28] (3)

In the centre is the Plane of Repose,[29] it is the spread (of emanation) (prasara) and the experience (of ultimate reality),[30] realisation (pratyaya)[31] and one's own authority.[32] (You all) bow (namatha) to him by whom (all this) has been emitted,[33] the best of teachers, Bhairava, the venerable Kulīśa![34] (4)

वृत्ताध्युष्टं[५४] क्रमार्थं[५५] रचितमनुभवं खञ्जिनीमूर्तिपूर्वं[५६]
दिव्योऽयं[५७] देवसंज्ञं[५८] पुनरपि अपरं[५९] मानवं त्रिक्रमौघम्[६०] ।
भेदानेकैर्विभिन्नं[६१] सकलपदक्रमं[६२] मण्डलं षट्प्रकारं[६३]
संकेतं[६४] कादिपूर्वं[६५] सकलगुणयुतं[६६] मण्डलं भैरवं[६७] तम्[६८] ।। ५ ।।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

मण्डलान्ते तु[६९] कः कर्ता मण्डलं तु कथं भवेत् ।
कथमानन्दशक्तिस्तु[७०] सा शक्तिर्भीषणी[७१] कथम् ।। ६ ।।

तस्यावरणमादाय कीदृक्[७२] चैव पदक्रमम्[७३] ।
सृष्टिन्याये चतुष्कं तु[७४] अकुलं[७५] तु[७६] कथं भवेत् ।। ७ ।।

कुलं[७७] चैव[७८] कथं प्रोक्तं[७९] कुलाचारं[८०] च कीदृशम् ।
पञ्चकं किं[८१] समासेन षट्कं[८२] चत्वार एव च ।। ८ ।।

पञ्चकः[८३] कश्चतुर्भूयः[८४] षोडशाज्ञा कथं भवेत् ।
आदौ कुत्राभिषेकं[८५] तु[८६] देवताष्टौ[८७] वदस्व[८८] मे ।। ९ ।।

मूर्तिमध्ये कथं तच्च मुद्रा तत्रैव[८९] कीदृशी ।
बालक्रमं[९०] च[९१] कौमारं तथा वृद्धक्रमं कथम् ।। १० ।।

का कला परमा शार्वी क्रमाणां क्रमदेवता ।
चन्द्रपुर्यं[९२] कथं प्रोक्तं श्रीनाथं[९३] किं[९४] स्वरूपिणम् ।। ११ ।।

षोडशात्मकशिष्यौघं[९५] अवसानं[९६] कथं[९७] भवेत्[९८] ।
सन्तानं[९९] गोत्रपिण्डं तु सकलं तु पदक्रमम् ।। १२ ।।

The purport of the Transmission (kramārtha) is set in (these) three and a half (verses) (vṛttādhyuṣṭa).[35] It is the experience (of deity) that has been composed (racita in verse) in accord with (pūrva) Khañjinī's form (mūrti). This is the Divine Current (divyaugha) called that of the gods (devasaṁjña). There is also the other (apara) (immanent) one namely, the Current of the Triple Transmission (trikrama), which is human (mānava). (Thus) the maṇḍala consisting of six parts (prakāra) is the entire Krama with all its parts (sakalapadakrama)[36] divided into many types (bheda).[37] The teaching (saṁketa) commences with (the sacred seat whose name) begins with `Kā'[38] and, endowed with all the qualities, is Bhairava's maṇḍala. (5)

Śrīnātha's questions concerning the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra

Śrīnātha said:[39]

(1) Who acts within the maṇḍala? (2) How is the maṇḍala? (3) How is the power of bliss? (4) How is it that that energy is horrific? (6)

(5) Once taken up its enclosure (āvaraṇa), how is the sequence of parts (padakrama) (within the maṇḍala)? (6) (What is) the tetrad in the pattern of emanation? (7) How is Akula? (7)

Again, (8) what is Kula said to be? (9) How is the activity of Kula (kulācāra)? (10) What, in brief, is the pentad, the group of six and (the second) four? (8)

(11) What is the (second) pentad and, again, the (third group of) four? (12) How is the sixteenfold Command? (13) Where (does) the consecration (take place) in the beginning? (14) Pray tell me (about) the eight deities. (9)

(15) And how is that (group of eight) within the icon (of the deity) (mūrti)?[40] (16) How is the Gesture (mudrā) there? (17) How is the Transmission (krama) of the Child and that of the Youth and the Aged? (10)

(18) What is the energy (kalā), the supreme Śārvī[41] who is the Krama Deity (devatā) of (all) the Transmissions (krama)? (19) What is the City of the Moon (candrapurya)[42] said to be? (20) What is the (true) nature of Śrīnātha? (11)

(21) How is the conclusion (avasāna) (of the transmission)[43] namely, the sixteenfold current of disciples? (22) What is the family (santāna), the body (formed from the) clans (gotrapiṇḍa) and the entire sequence of parts (padakrama)? (12)

षोडशान्त[१००] क्रमान्त[१०१] कि[१०२] शेषा[१०३] वै मण्डलानि के[१०४] ।
परिभ्रमं न[१०५] मे[१०६] ज्ञात[१०७] विमलं तु विशेषतः ॥ १३ ॥

एतत् सर्वं समासेन पूज्यसद्भावनिर्णयम्[१०८] ।
तस्याष्टादशभेदानि[१०९] कथं ज्ञास्यन्ति[११०] पुत्रकाः[१११] ॥ १४ ॥

युग्मभेदं कथं सारं सिद्धास्त्रितयशासने[११२] ।
दक्षिणे कोऽधिकारी स्यान्नवकं किं स्वरूपिणम्[११३] ॥ १५ ॥[११४]

तथाष्टादशभेदानि[११५] आश्रम[११६] पूर्वमण्डलम्[११७] ।
कथं विज्ञायते[११८] देवि संस्कार[११९] त्रिक्रमेण[१२०] तु ॥ १६ ॥

पशुः कोऽत्र[१२१] समासेन मण्डलं तु कथं भवेत्[१२२] ।
क्षय[१२३] केन स्वरूपेण मलस्यैव[१२४] तु विद्यते ॥ १७ ॥

आदौ पिण्ड[१२५] तु किं प्रोक्तं देहे देहे व्यवस्थितम्[१२६] ।
शिव[१२७] नाम कथं ह्यग्निमध्ये[१२८] विश्रामभूमिका[१२९] ॥ १८ ॥

का[१३०] स्वरूपा च कि[१३१] देवि[१३२] प्रत्यय[१३३] स्वाधिकारकम्[१३४] ।
सृष्ट[१३५] येन स वै[१३६] कोऽत्र भैरवश्च[१३७] कथं भवेत् ॥ १९ ॥

कौलीश[१३८] नाम किं प्रोक्तं सर्वमेवानुपद्धतिः[१३९] ।
कथयस्व प्रसादेन[१४०] यदि तुष्टासि वक्रिके ॥ २० ॥

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[१४१] अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते[१४२]
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते विद्यापीठमार्गे[१४३] विमलषट्कनिर्णये[१४४]
कादिभेदे[१४५] आज्ञापारमेश्वरे[१४६] स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्र–
संहिताया[१४७] अव्वाक्रमभाषिते[१४८] श्रीनाथप्रश्नाधिकारो
नामानन्दः[१४९] प्रथमः ॥ १ ॥

(23) What is the End of the Sixteen which is the culmination (anta) of the Transmission (kramānta)?[44] (24) What are the remaining maṇḍalas? (25) I have not known the rotation (paribhrama) (of Kuṇḍalinī), particularly the pure one. (13)

All this, in brief, is the teaching concerning the essential nature of the object(s) of worship.[45] (26) How will the (spiritual) sons know its eighteen divisions? (14)

(27) How is the Division of the Couple the essence? (28) (Who are the) Siddhas in the teaching of the three (lineages) (tritayaśāsana)? (29) Who has authority in the South? (30) What is the group of nine? (15)

(31) Moreover, (what are) the eighteen divisions? (32) And (what is) the Hermitage (aśrama) which is the first maṇḍala? (33) O goddess, how can one know the purification (saṁskāra) (that takes place) by means of the Triple Transmission? (16)

(34) Who is the fettered soul here? (35) (Pray tell me) in brief how the maṇḍala is and (36) by means of what essential nature does the destruction of impurity take place? (17)

(37) What is said to be the body (piṇḍa) that is located in the beginning within each single body (deha)? (38) How is Śiva? (39) What is the nature of the Plane of Repose in the middle of (his) fire? (18)

O goddess, (40) what is the realisation that is one's own authority? (41) Who is the one here who has emanated (this)? And (42) how is Bhairava? (19)

(43) Who is said to be Kaulīśa? O Vakrikā, if you are satisfied tell me everything in due order, by (your) grace. (20)

This is the first chapter called Concerning Śrīnātha's Enquiry. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for a hundred and twenty-five thousand (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six (Thousand Verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses - caturviṁśatsahasrasaṁhitā) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

द्वितीयानन्दः

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१]

श‍ृणु नाथ महाप्राज्ञ कुलकौलस्य[२] भाजन ।
येन विज्ञातमात्रेण[३] संवित्तिर्भवते[४] स्फुटा[५] ।। १ ।।
तदहं संप्रवक्ष्यामि वक्रिकां परमेश्वरीम् ।

यः[६] शावरादिरित्याहुरेकधा[७] बहुधा गतः ।। २ ।।
मण्डलान्ते स्थितो[८] नित्यं सृष्टिसंहारकारकः[९] ।

अतसीपुष्पसंकाश[१०] नित्योदितमखण्डितम् ।। ३ ।।
सर्वगं सर्वदा शान्तं मण्डलं त[११] कुलक्रमे[१२] ।

खरण्डदण्डमध्यस्था[१३] अणुचित्कलयापिनी[१४] ।। ४ ।।
प्राणापानान्तरे[१५] लीना आनन्दशक्तिरुच्यते[१६] ।
कालवेलाविचित्राङ्गी[१७] तन्वी तत्त्वप्रबोधकी[१८] ।। ५ ।।
निरानन्दपदे लीना भीषणी परमाव्यया ।

पदषोडशप्रस्तारे[१९] देव्या मूर्तिस्त्रिधा[२०] गता ।। ६ ।।
अङ्गप्रत्यङ्गवक्त्रैस्तु पदभेदैर्व्यवस्थिता[२१] ।

CHAPTER TWO

The Response to the Inquiry

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

O Lord! Greatly wise one! Repository of Kula and Kaula! Listen. I will explain that, namely, (the true nature of) the Supreme Goddess (parameśvarī) Vakrikā, by just knowing which the realisation (of attainment) (saṁvitti)[1] is clearly evident (sphuṭā). (1-2ab)

The one who acts within the Maṇḍala and the Maṇḍala

He[2] whom (the wise) call Śāvara[3] and the like is one and has assumed many forms. He resides permanently within the maṇḍala and (is the one there who) engenders emanation and withdrawal. (2cd-3ab)

[4]The maṇḍala in the Kula transmission (kulakrama) is always peaceful, pervasive, unbroken and perpetually manifest (nityodita). It is (dark blue) like the flower of the hemp plant (atasī).[5] (3cd-4ab)

The Power of Bliss

[6]Merged between the exhaled (prāṇa) and inhaled breath (apāna), (she is) said to be the power of bliss. Located in the middle of the Stick of the Cavity of Space (i.e. Suṣumṇā),[7] she pervades the energy of the consciousness of the individual soul.[8] Slender, her limbs beautifully variegated by time and moment, she awakens to (ultimate) reality. Merged in the plane of the Bliss of Stillness (nirānanda),[9] she is supreme, imperishable and horrific.[10] (4cd-6ab)

The Goddess in the Maṇḍala

[11]The form (mūrti) of the goddess has become threefold[12] within the layout (prastāra) of the sixteen parts (pada of her Vidyā)[13] and is established (within the maṇḍala) according to the division of the parts (of her Vidyā, which are her), faces and limbs, major and minor.[14] (6cd-7ab)

भर्गपूर्वक्रमं[२२] यच्च[२३] विलोमांशे[२४] व्यवस्थितम्[२५] ।
क्रमं[२६] तु नवधा भिन्नं वृद्धं कौमारबालकम्[२७] ॥ ७ ॥[२८]

इच्छा ज्ञानी क्रियाख्या[२९] प्रकटितविभवा[३०] बुद्धिरेतच्चतुष्कं[३१]
तन्मात्राः[३२] पञ्च शब्दप्रभृतय[३३] इति ये[३४] पञ्चकं ज्ञानपूर्वम् ।
त्वक्चक्षुर्घ्राणजिह्वाश्रवण[३५] इति[३६] मनांसीति[३७] षट्कं क्रियाख्यम्[३८]
जाग्रत् सुप्तं सुषुप्तं[३९] पदमपि अपरं तुर्यगं तच्चतुष्कं ॥ ८ ॥
आपस्तेजोऽथ पृथ्वीपवनगगनकं[४०] पञ्चकं रत्नपूर्वम्
सत्त्वं रजस्तमांसि[४१] त्रिगुणगुणयुतं[४२] संस्थितं वृक्षनाथम् ।

श्रीकुब्जी षट्प्रकारा[४३] हसखफरकला[४४] व्यापयन्ती भगाख्या
तस्यान्ते क्षोभितायां परमसुखनिधौ[४५] रुद्रशक्तौ प्रविश्य[४६] ॥ ९ ॥
संलीना मूलनाथे[४७] पुनरपि च तदाच्छादकाः[४८] षट्प्रकाराः
पीठाद्यैः षट्प्रकारैस्तदुपरिमथनं[४९] दिव्यलिङ्गं विभिन्नम् ।
तत्राज्ञानन्दरूपा सुखरतिविमला विश्वकर्त्री[५०] च हन्त्री
चिद्रूपा वक्रिकाख्या परमपदगता[५१] भुक्तिदा मुक्तिदा[५२] च[५३] ॥ १० ॥

ललनार्थं[५४] खमादाय[५५] घण्टिकायाः[५६] परामृतम्[५७] ।
आत्मानं प्लाव्य[५८] तेनैव अभिषेकमिदं[५९] भवेत् ॥ ११ ॥

मालिनी शब्दराशिश्च[६०] गोत्रं व्याप्य[६१] व्यवस्थितौ ।
तद्[६२] गोत्रं[६३] सृष्टिकर्तारं[६४] शिवशक्त्यावृतं जगत् ॥ १२ ॥

The Transmission

[15]The Transmission (krama) that begins with Bharga is established in the reverse aspect.[16] Again, the transmission is divided nine times. It is that of the Aged, the Youth and the Child. (7cd-7ef)

The Groups of Four, Five, Six, Four, Five and Four

[17]The intellect, will, knowledge and (the energy) called action whose power has been made manifest: this is the tetrad. The subtle elements namely, the five - sound and the rest: this is the pentad of knowledge. The skin, eye, nose, tongue and hearing, along with the mind (manas): this is the hexad called action. Waking, sleep, deep sleep and the other state established in the Fourth: that is the tetrad. Water, fire, earth, wind and sky are the group of Five Jewels.[18] Vṛkṣanātha[19] abides (there) endowed with the qualities of the three qualities namely, sattva, rajas and tamas.[20] (8-9ab)

The Six Modalities of the Goddess and Mūlanātha, the Root Lord

[21]The venerable (goddess) Kubjī has six modalities (ṣaṭprakārā).[22] She is the energy (E) of Ha Sa Kha Pha Ra and, pervading (all things), is called the Yoni (bhaga). When she who is Rudra's power, the treasure of Supreme Bliss, is aroused and has entered within him (i.e. Vṛkṣanātha), then the six modalities (prakāra) that are (her) enclosures (āchādaka) are again merged into the Root Lord (Mūlanātha).[23] By churning from above, the Divine Liṅga is divided into six modalities (prakāra) namely, the sacred seats (pīṭha) and the rest. The (goddess) called Vakrikā (resides) there. She is the bliss of the Command (ājñā), pure with blissful intercourse (sukharati). She creates all things and destroys (them). She is consciousness and, abiding in the supreme state, she bestows both (worldly) enjoyment and liberation. (9cd-10)

The Consecration

[24]This consecration (abhiṣeka) takes place once the Self has been flooded with the supreme nectar (that flows from the psychic centre) of the uvula (after) having laid hold (ādāya) of the Void (kha)[25] in order to play (lalanārtha). (11)

The Clan

[26]Mālinī and Śabdarāśi having pervaded the clan (gotra) are (well) established. That clan is the agent of emanation and the universe enveloped by Śiva and Śakti.[27] (12)

गृहवर्गसमोपेतं[६५] कुलाष्टकसमन्वितम्[६६] ।
चक्राष्टकसमायुक्तं[६७] ब्रह्माणीदेवताष्टकम्[६८] ।। १३ ।।

मुद्राशक्ति: समाख्याता ययेदं[६९] मुद्रितं जगत् ।
चतुर्विधा[७०] तु[७१] सा सृष्टिर्भूतग्रामे[७२] चतुर्विधे[७३] ।। १४ ।।

बालक्रमं च कौमारं तथा वृद्धं[७४] क्रमं[७५] क्रमात् ।
विषुवस्थानमार्गेण[७६] त्रिमार्गे संव्यवस्थिता[७७] ।। १५ ।।
खकला[७८] पूर्णिमास्यन्ते[७९] अमान्ते[८०] संव्यवस्थिता ।
सा कला खकला[८१] ज्ञेया सा च पूर्णा[८२] हृदि स्थिता[८३] ।। १६ ।।

अन्वयं[८४] श्रीमताख्यं[८५] च देवी त्रैलोक्यचारिणी ।
चतु:षष्टिक्रमेणोक्ता[८६] क्रमदेवी च वक्रिका[८७] ।। १७ ।।

विसर्गयोगमध्ये[८८] तु चन्द्रपूर्य[८९] व्यवस्थितम् ।
सूष्मणामण्डलाधारं[९०] कल्लोलामृतवाहिन:[९१] ।। १८ ।।

विश्वरूपं परं तत्त्वं उन्मनान्ते[९२] व्यवस्थितम् ।
श्रीनाथं तं[९३] कुलालम्बी[९४] कुजीशं[९५] सिद्धनायकम्[९६] ।। १९ ।।

The Eight Deities

[28]The group of eight deities (beginning with) Brahmāṇī[29] is associated with eight wheels,[30] the Octad of Kula, the classes (of phonemes) and the houses (gṛha). (13)

The Gesture

[31]The energy of Gesture (mudrāśakti) is said to be that by which the universe is made manifest (mudrita lit. 'stamped'). It is the fourfold emanation that takes place in the fourfold aggregate of elements (bhūtagrāma).[32] (14)

The Three Transmissions and the Deity of the Transmission

The Transmission (krama) of the Child, that of Youth and the Transmission of the Aged, in due order.[33] [34]Established (saṁvyavasthitā)[35] on the triple path, by means of the Path of the Stations of the Equinox (viṣuvasthāna),[36] the energy of the Void (khakalā) is established within the New Moon at the end of the Full Moon[37] (pūrṇamāsī).[38] That energy should be known to be the energy of the Void and, full (pūrṇā), it abides within the Heart.[39] (15-16)

The Tradition (anvaya) is called the Śrīmata and the goddess is she who moves (throughout) the Three Worlds by means of the Sequence of Sixty-four (energies).[40] She is said to be Vakrikā, the goddess of the transmissions (kramadevī). (17)

The City of the Moon

[41]The City of the Moon is located in the centre of the Union of Emission (visargayoga). It is the foundation of the Maṇḍala of Sūṣmaṇā[42] and transports the waves of nectar.[43] (18)

Śrīnātha

The supreme, omniform (viśvarūpa) reality (tattva) is located within the Transmental (unmanānte). That is Śrīnātha (otherwise know as) Kujīśa who sustains the Kula (kulālambin)[44] and is the leader of those who have achieved perfection (siddhanāyaka).[45] (19)

दिव्याष्टादशभेदानि[९७] कथयामि[९८] सुरेश्वर[९९] ।
अष्टादशक्रमाम्नायं उन्मनाज्ञाविनिर्गतम्[१००] ॥ २० ॥
चतु:प्रकारसंयुक्तं पञ्च षट् च[१०१] त्रिधात्मकम् ।

प्रथममुन्मनाम्नाय[१०२] द्वितीयं च[१०३] मनोन्मनम् ॥ २१ ॥
तृतीयं समनाव्याप्ति:[१०४] व्यापिन्यायाश्चतुर्थकम्[१०५] ।
अव्यक्तं पञ्चमं शम्भो नन्दिन्या[१०६] षष्ठ उच्यते ॥ २२ ॥
मन्थानं सप्तमं वक्रे[१०७] अष्टमं फेरुक[१०८] भवेत् ।
नवमं समयाख्य[१०९] च जम्भलं दशमं स्मृतम्[११०] ॥ २३ ॥
दशैक[१११] कालसंकर्ष[११२] द्वादशं चण्डनिर्णयम्[११३] ।
त्रयोदशमघोरीश[११४] त्रैलोक्यं च चतुर्दशम्[११५] ॥ २४ ॥
विनयं पञ्चदशं प्रोक्त[११६] कमल[११७] षोडश[११८] भवेत् ।
दशसप्त[११९] चर्चिका[१२०] देवी श्रीनाथोऽष्टादश[१२१] भवेत् ॥ २५ ॥

इत्यष्टादशभेदानि[१२२] पारम्पर्यक्रमागता:[१२३] ।
आगत[१२४] ओघभेदेन[१२५] दिव्याम्नायमनुक्रमात् ॥ २६ ॥

शिवशक्तिसमायोग[१२६] सामरस्य[१२७] विदुस्तथा[१२८] ।
उभे पक्षे[१२९] तु मेलाप[१३०] युग्मभेदमिदं स्मृतम्[१३१] ॥ २७ ॥

चन्द्रार्काग्निस्त्रय:[१३२] सिद्धा मि–ष–ओ[१३३] वै त्रिके मता:[१३४] ।
अधिकारपदस्थाश्च[१३५] सिद्धास्त्रिभुवनाधिपा:[१३६] ॥ २८ ॥

सोमार्कानलमध्यस्था चित्कला अमृतोपमा[१३७] ।
षडध्वशुद्धतत्त्वात्मावृक्षनाथ[१३८] तु दक्षिणे ॥ २९ ॥
नवात्मानन्ददेवेशं नवशक्तिसमन्वितम् ।

The Divine Current: the Transmission of the Eighteen

[46]O Lord of the gods, I will now explain the eighteen divine divisions namely, the tradition (āmnāya) of the Transmission of the Eighteen that has emerged as the Command of the Transmental. Endowed with four aspects, (there are) five and six (divisions) and it is threefold.[47] (20-21ab)

(1) The first (division) is the tradition (āmnāya) of Unmana (the Transmental), the second Manonmana (Mind Beyond Mind), the third is the pervasion of Samanā (the Equal One) and the fourth (division) is that of Vyāpinyā (the Pervasive). (2) O Śambhu, Avyakta (Unmanifest) is the fifth while (the division of) Nandinii is said to be the sixth. O Vakrā, the seventh is Manthāna, the eighth is Pheruka[48] and the ninth is called Samaya. (3) Jambhala is said to be the tenth. The eleventh is Kālasaṁkārṣa. The twelfth (division) is the teaching (nirṇaya) (concerning) Caṇḍa. The thirteenth is Aghorīśa and the fourteenth Trailokya. The fifteenth is said to be Vinaya. (4) The sixteenth is Kamala. The seventeenth is the goddess Carcikā and the eighteenth is Śrīnātha. (21cd-25)

These are the eighteen divisions that have come (into the world) through the uninterrupted succession of the transmission (of the teaching) (pāramparyakrama). It is the Divine Tradition (divyāmnāya) that has come as (one of) the currents (oghabheda) (of the teachings transmitted) in due order.[49] (26)

The Couple

[50](The wise) know the union of Śiva and Śakti to be oneness (sāmarasya). This, the Division of the Couple (yugmabheda), is said to be the union (melāpa) that takes place in both polarities.[51] (27)

The Three Siddhas

The three Siddhas,[52] MI (Mitranātha),[53] Ṣa (Ṣaṣṭhanātha) and O (Oḍḍīśanātha)[54] are the Moon, Sun and Fire, honoured in the three (lineages) (trika).[55] They occupy the post of authority and, Siddhas, they are the lords of the Three Worlds. (28)

Vṛkṣanātha, the Nine and Sixteen Siddhas

The energy of consciousness (citkalā), similar to nectar, is in the middle of the Moon, Sun and Fire. Vṛkṣanātha,[56] who is the pure principle of the Sixfold Path,[57] is in the Deccan.[58] He, the lord of the gods, is the bliss of Navātman[59] endowed with nine powers. (29-30ab)

नवधागतिरागत्य[१३९] गकारादिव्यवस्थितम्[१४०] ॥ ३० ॥
भर्गस्थानादयश्चैव[१४१] षोडशाधारमण्डलाः[१४२] ।
शिष्यौघामोघसंभूत[१४३] महाभ्युदयकारकम्[१४४] ॥ ३१ ॥

पिण्डं कुण्डलिनी[१४५] प्रोक्तं नवात्मानन्दसंयुतम् ।
क्रमणे[१४६] क्रमभेदेन[१४७] पिण्डरूपा[१४८] तु पीठगा[१४९] ॥ ३२ ॥
अवतारक्रमेणैव द्वादशान्ते व्यवस्थिता ।
अपरपरभेदेन[१५०a] अवतीर्णा[१५०b] च वक्रिका[१५१] ॥ ३३ ॥
सन्ततिप्रसरौघ[१५२] स्यान्निरानन्दा[१५३] च सा कला ।

संसारे[१५४] वर्तते तस्मात्[१५५] तरङ्गिण्या[१५६] परा कला ॥ ३४ ॥
गोत्रपञ्चाशद्भिर्भिन्ना[१५७] पिण्डरूपा शिवा कला[१५८] ।

शिव[१५९] तु निर्विकारं वै संसारोत्तीर्णभेषजम्[१६०] ॥ ३५ ॥
उदासीनमनाम[१६१] च शिवमित्युच्यते[१६२] ततः[१६३] ।

इडापिङ्गलयोर्मध्ये[१६४] वक्रा[१६५] विश्रामभूमिका ॥ ३६ ॥
कारणोत्था[१६६] सदा तिष्ठेच्छिवमार्गानुयायिनी[१६७] ।
अतसीपुष्पसंकाशा षड्वक्त्रा[१६८] परमा कला ॥ ३७ ॥

चैतन्यसहिता तिष्ठेद् विद्यारूपा परा कला ।
प्रत्यय[१६९] बहुधा तस्याः[१७०] विज्ञानाज्ञानुगा[१७१] परा ॥ ३८ ॥
भुवनाधिपतिः[१७२] सा वै वक्रिका कुलरूपिणी[१७३] ।
अधिकारे प्रसिद्धा सा पञ्चतत्त्वैरधिष्ठिता[१७४] ॥ ३९ ॥

(Vṛkṣanātha), the one who possesses nine modalities (gati),[60] having come (into the world) the (Nine Nāthas) starting with the one (whose name begins with the) letter Ga are established (here).[61] While the maṇḍalas of the sixteen supports are those beginning with Bharga's place (bhargasthāna).[62] (In this way) the unfailing current of disciples (śiṣyogha), that brings great prosperity, has come into being. (30cd-31)

The Body (piṇḍa) and the Fifty Clans of the Wave of Sonic Energy

[63]The Body (piṇḍa), endowed with the bliss of Navātman, is said to be Kuṇḍalinī. Her nature the Body (of letters) (piṇḍarūpā), in (her onward) advance (kramaṇa) in association with the transmission (kramabheda), she resides in (all) the sacred seats (pīṭha). By the sequence of (her) descent (avatārakrama) she is established in the End of the Twelve and (so) Vakrikā has descended as (both) supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent) so that the current (ogha) of the extension of (her spiritual) family may exist.[64] And that energy (kalā) is the Bliss of Stillness (nirānandā).[65] (32-34ab)

She resides within the world of transmigration (saṁsāra) and so she, the supreme energy (kalā), is (called) Taraṅgiṇī (the Wave (of power that flows through manifestation).[66] Divided into the fifty clans (gotra),[67] she is the energy (called) Śivā and her nature the Body (of letters) (piṇḍarūpā).[68] (34cd-35ab)

Śiva

(It is) auspicious (śiva), the (divine medicinal) herb beyond the sphere of transmigration and free of change, then (that reality which is) aloof (from the world) and has no name (anāma) is said to be `Śiva'.[69] (35cd-36ab)

The Plane of Repose

Vakrā resides between the (two psychic nerves) Iḍā and Piṅgalā[70] and is the Plane of Repose.[71] Arisen from (the god who is the primal) cause (of all things), she is always (well) established and follows Śiva's Path.[72] (Blue) like the flower of the hemp plant (atasī),[73] she has six faces[74] and is the supreme energy. (36cd-37)

Realisation, Authority and the Goddess of the Transmission

[75]The supreme energy (kalā), whose form is (the goddess's) Vidyā (vidyārūpā), abides endowed with consciousness. Supreme and in accord with the Command of realised consciousness (vijñānājñā), her sign of attainment (pratyaya) is manifold.[76] Indeed, she, Vakrikā, is the lord of the worlds (bhuvanādhipati)[77] and is Kula (the aggregate of energies). She is well known in the post of authority (adhikāra) and is sustained by the five Principles.[78] (38-39)

क्रमनायकिविख्याता[१७५] साधिकारे[१७६] तु शाम्भवे[१७७] ।
पञ्चाशद्भुवनव्याप्तिः[१७८] कालाग्न्यादिशिवान्तिका[१७९] ।। ४० ।।
तत्र मध्ये मया सृष्टं[१८०] चराचरं[१८१] चतुर्विधम् ।
त्रिगुणा[१८२] सा[१८३] त्रिमात्रा[१८४] च सृष्टिरूपा व्यवस्थिता[१८५] ।। ४१ ।।

भैरवं[१८६] भरिताकारं अनादिनिधनं महत् ।
भरत्यमृतरूपेण व्योमगात्रं[१८७] निरञ्जनम् ।। ४२ ।।
रवति[१८८] ज्ञानसद्भावं[१८९] तेनासौ भैरवः[१९०] प्रभुः ।
अक्षयः क्षयहीनश्च[१९१] भैरवः परिकीर्तितः ।। ४३ ।।
कुलकौलान्तमध्यस्थं[१९२] ईशं नाम व्यवस्थितम् ।
ईश्वरं सर्वदेवानां कौलीशं परिकीर्तितम् ।। ४४ ।।

चतुष्कं चतुरो[१९३] भेदैः सा शक्तिश्च चतुर्विधा ।
मि–ष–च–ओ[१९४] प्रसिद्धाश्च पद्धतिस्तैर्निदर्शिता[१९५] ।। ४५ ।।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[१९६] अन्वये[१९७] सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके[१९८] आद्यपीठावतारिते[१९९] विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये
कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे[२००] स्वामिनीमते[२०१] श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्र–
संहितायां[२०२] अव्वाक्रमभाषिते[२०३] प्रश्नोत्तराधिकारवर्णने[२०४]
क्रमोदयो[२०५] नामानन्दो[२०६] द्वितीयः[२०७] ।। २ ।।

[79]She is known as the Mistress of the Transmission (kramanāyakī) within Śiva's (śāmbhava) sphere of authority. She is the pervasion of the fifty worlds that ranges from the Fire of Time (kālāgni) up to Śiva in the end.[80] There, in the centre, I have emanated the moving and immobile (universe) of four kinds.[81] She has three qualities,[82] three measures (trimātrā)[83] and abides in the form of emanation. (40-41)

Bhairava and Kaulīśa

[84]Bhairava is (the god) whose form is full (bharita) (of all things). Devoid of origin and end, he is great. Stainless (nirñjana), he fills (bharati) with nectar (his) body which is the Void (vyomagātra). He emits (vamati) the essence of knowledge and so he is Bhairava, the lord. Imperishable and devoid of decay, he is known as Bhairava.[85] The lord (īśa) abides in the centre between Kula and Kaula.[86] He is the lord of all the gods and is known as Kaulīśa. (42-44)

The Four Siddhas

The group of four (catuṣka) (is formed) by means of the four divisions and that energy is also fourfold. Again, MI (Mitranātha), Ṣa (Ṣaṣṭhanātha), Ca (Caryānātha) and O (Oḍḍīśanātha) are famous. They have shown the path (paddhati).87

This is the second chapter which is the emergence of the transmission (kramodaya) with regards to the description Concerning the Response to the Inquiry. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for a hundred and twenty-five thousand (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six (Thousand Verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Transmission of the Mother (avvākrama).

तृतीयानन्दः

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१]

कैलासस्यापरे[२] मूर्तौ[३] मेरुमन्दिरमूर्धनि[४] ।
महारामे च रम्ये च तूष्णीनाथगुहाश्रमम्[५] ।। १ ।।

त्रिरस्त्रं[६] सप्तस्कन्धाभं[७] कुलाष्टकसमावृतम्[८] ।
तन्मध्ये च त्रिरस्त्रं[९] तु शतयोजनविस्तरम्[१०] ।। २ ।।

सा शिला[११] चन्द्रकान्तिस्तु तप्तहेमसमप्रभा[१२] ।
मणिमुक्ताप्रवालैस्तु[१३] चित्रिता सुमनोरमा ।। ३ ।।

सुस्पष्टा च महादीप्ता चन्द्रकोटिसमप्रभा ।
सप्तस्कन्धसमायुक्ता पञ्चासनसमन्विता ।। ४ ।।

तन्मध्ये वर्तुलाकारं[१४] षडशीतिस्तु[१५] योजनाः[१६] ।
विस्तारं[१७] च अधश्चैव[१८] शुद्धस्फटिकनिर्मलम्[१९] ।। ५ ।।

तोरणद्वयसंयुक्तं[२०] प्राकाराष्टकभूषितम् ।
देवताष्टकसंयुक्तं विकरालं च[२१] भीषणम् ।। ६ ।।

अखण्डमण्डलावासं[२२] सिंहनादमलंकृतम्[२३] ।
महासान्निध्यकरणं[२४] आदिकादिसमायुतम्[२५] ।। ७ ।।

CHAPTER THREE

Dakṣa's Curse and Grace

The Goddess's Liṅga: The Triangle in the Centre

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

The cave hermitage (āśrama) of Tūṣṇīnātha (the Silent Lord) is located in a large and beautiful grove situated on the peak of the temple of Meru, which is another form of (mount) Kailāsa.[1] (1)

It is triangular and appears to have seven sections (skandha).[2] It is surrounded by the Octad of Kula.[3] The triangle that is in the middle of that (Octad of Kula) extends for one hundred leagues (yojana).[4] (2)

That is the Stone (śilā), beautiful as the moon, the light of which is like heated gold. It is decorated with jewels, pearls and corals and is most delightful. (3)

It is clearly visible (suspaṣṭā),[5] greatly illumined, like the light of ten million moons. It possesses seven sections (skandha) and is endowed with five seats (āsana).[6] (4)

There is a circular form in the centre of that which is eighty-six leagues[7] in diameter (vistāra). And below (the foundation) is as clean as pure crystal. (5)

It possesses two arches[8] and is adorned with eight ramparts. Endowed with the group of eight deities,[9] it is very terrible and horrific. (6)

Its abode is the unbroken circle (akhaṇḍamaṇḍalāvāsa)[10] and is adorned with the Lion's Sound (siṁhanāda).[11] Endowed with (the vowels) `A' and the rest (as well as the consonants) `Ka' and so forth,[12] it is the great means (to draw the deity) near (mahāsānnidhyakaraṇa). (7)

तन्मध्ये[२६] तं[२७] त्रिकोणं तु योजनानां शतार्धकम्[२८] ।
मेखलात्रयसंयुक्तं[२९] भूगृहं[३०] देवतालयम् ॥ ८ ॥

आरक्तं राजतं[३१] सुभ्रं[३२] शतार्कवपुतेजसम्[३३] ।
योजनाः[३४] पञ्चविंशैव[३५] तन्मध्येऽखण्डमण्डलम्[३६] ॥ ९ ॥

निशाकरार्धजठरं[३७] तन्मध्ये कुलकालिका[३८] ।
शतार्धं[३९] योजनानां तु आत्मानं[४०] रविमण्डलम् ॥ १० ॥

तन्मध्ये क्रममुद्रा च आज्ञा उलित्रये[४१] गुरुः[४२] ।
ज्येष्ठमध्यमबालं[४३] च सदिव्यं[४४] खेचरक्रमम्[४५] ॥ ११ ॥
एतद्[४६] वै[४७] पश्चिमं वेश्मं[४८] चन्द्रपुर्येति[४९] नामतः ।
मण्डलं प्रथमेदं[५०] तु अधिकारं[५१] तु मन्त्रिणाम् ॥ १२ ॥

एकपादं[५२] त्रिशक्ति तु[५३] विद्यात्रितयभेदितम् ।
तन्मध्ये चाधिकारिण्या[५४] सुखोपायेन कौलिनी ॥ १३ ॥
संस्थिता लिङ्गरूपेण[५५] सिंहरूपा[५६] अधोमुखी[५७] ।

पृच्छते[५८] भगवान् रुद्रो[५९] श्रीकण्ठोऽसौ उमापतिः ॥ १४ ॥

श्रीकण्ठ उवाच

अस्मिन् गुरुगृहे शाक्ते[६०] मध्यलिङ्गे[६१] भगोदिते[६२] ।
कस्याधिकारमायातं[६३] तिष्ठते[६४] को गुरुर्नृणाम्[६५] ॥ १५ ॥

श्रीकौलिन्युवाच[६६]

सद्योजातक्रमस्यैव पश्चिमस्य गृहस्य च ।
अधिकारं[६७] ममेहैव दत्तं वै गुरुणा पुरा ॥ १६ ॥

That is the triangle in the centre of that which is one hundred and fifty leagues (in diameter śatārdha).[13] (This), the house of the earth and the abode of the gods, possesses three girdles (mekhalā).[14] (8)

Light red (ārakta) (in colour)[15] and shining (like) silver, its form is as brilliant as a hundred suns. (The sides of the triangle extend for) five times twenty (pañcaviṁśa) leagues. In the middle of that is the unbroken circle. (9)

In the centre of that is Kulakālikā, the semi-circle of the Moon.[16] The Circle of the Sun (ravimaṇḍala), which is the self (ātman) (of the maṇḍala),[17] is one hundred and fifty leagues (śatārdha) (in diameter).[18] (10)

In centre of that is the Gesture of the Transmission (kramamudrā).[19] It is the Command, which is the teacher in the Three Traditions (uli). (The lineages of) the Eldest, the Middling and the Child along with the divine one (divya), the Transmission of the Skyfarers (khecarakrama).[20] (All) that, indeed, is the Western House (veśman) called the City of the Moon. This is the first maṇḍala[21] and the (the source of) authority for (initiates) who recite mantras. (11-12)

(This maṇḍala) has one foot[22] and consists of the triple energy conjoined with the Triple Vidyā.[23] And in the middle of that is Kaulinī,[24] she who, by means of the practice of bliss (sukhopāya), possesses authority. She whose form is a lion, resides (there) facing downwards in the shape of a Liṅga.[25] (13-14ab)

Śrīkaṇṭha speaks with the Goddess

The lord (bhagavān) Rudra, he who is Śrīkaṇṭha, husband of Umā, enquired (of the goddess). (14cd)

Śrīkaṇṭha said:

[26]Who has acquired authority in this, the Teacher's House free of ties, the Liṅga in the centre, arisen as the Yoni (bhaga)? Who resides (here as) the teacher of men?[27] (15)

The venerable (goddess) Kaulinī said:

It is I myself who here possess the authority of the Western House (gṛha) which is the Transmission of Sadyojāta.[28] Previously, it was given (to me by my) teacher. (16)

या सा शक्तिर्भगाख्या च[६८] जगन्माता[६९] त्रिरक्षरी[७०] ।
सा चाज्ञा[७१] कौलिनी ह्यैव[७२] नपुंसकपदे[७३] स्थिता ॥ १७ ॥

श्रीकण्ठ उवाच

त्वं[७४] योनिः[७५] परमाकाशं दिव्यलिङ्गं नपुंसकम्[७६] ।
अन्तःपुरवरं[७७] गर्भं[७८] भगाह्लादेन[७९] भैरवी[८०] ॥ १८ ॥
संस्थिताज्ञा[८१] त्रिभिर्भेदैस्त्रिमूर्तिरिति[८२] कौलिनी ।
बहुरूपक्रमेणैव[८३] एका त्वं कुलदेवता[८४] ॥ १९ ॥
त्वं माता जगतां[८५] देवि विश्वयोनिः[८६] पितामहे[८७] ।
त्वया मया च देवेशि[८८] ओतप्रोतं[८९] जगत्त्रयम्[९०] ॥ २० ॥
नाहं शिष्यस्तव[९१] प्रायः किन्तु मित्रत्वमागतः[९२] ।
पूर्वप्रीतिवशाद् देवि[९३] पूजाज्ञानं[९४] तवान्तिकम्[९५] ॥ २१ ॥

आयातो[९६] ज्ञानकाङ्क्षी[९७] च समाचक्ष्व[९८] ततो उमे[९९] ।
अनेकशो[१००] मया ख्यातं तव ज्ञानमनुत्तमम् ॥ २२ ॥
त्वयापि मम[१०१] पूर्वं हि तदाख्यातमशेषतः[१०२] ।
तस्मान्न भग्नशिष्यत्वं[१०३] आवयोर्विद्यते[१०४] परे[१०५] ॥ २३ ॥
केवलं[१०६] सौहृदं[१०७] भद्रे[१०८] तस्मान्निःसंशय[१०९] वद[११०] ।
यस्माद्[१११] ज्ञानं तु वांच्छामि कौलिकं प्रत्ययात्मकम् ॥ २४ ॥

श्रीकौलिनी उवाच[११२]

मानवेन तु रूपेण किं[११३] त्वं श्रीकण्ठ उच्यसे[११४] ।
देवप्रकृतिरायातः निश्चयं त्वमुमापतिः[११५] ॥ २५ ॥
मायावेशधरो[११६] धीमान् स्नेहेन[११७] मम लुब्धकः[११८] ।
स्वगिरा लक्षितः शम्भो[११९] मायाजालेन मोहितः ॥ २६ ॥
तमोविध्वंसनार्थाय[१२०] आगतो ज्ञानलुब्धकः[१२१] ।
मया ज्ञातं महाशम्भो[१२२] तत् किमर्थं[१२३] महेश्वर ॥ २७ ॥
आत्मानं[१२४] गूहसे नूनं[१२५] कस्य हेतोः[१२६] समाश्रयात् ।
यथावृत्तं प्रवक्ष्यामि अतीव[१२७] मम वल्लभ[१२८] ॥ २८ ॥

That energy called the Yoni (bhaga) who is the mother of the universe and consists of three letters,[29] is the Command, Kaulinī who abides on the plane of the Neuter One (napuṁsakapada).[30] (17)

Śrīkaṇṭha said:

You are the Yoni, the Supreme Space (paramākāśa), the Divine Liṅga,[31] the Neuter (absolute).[32] (You are) the Womb (garbha), the best of inner sanctums and, by virtue of the bliss of the Yoni, (you are) Bhairavī.[33] (18)

(You are) Kaulinī, the well established Command and (you have) three forms, by virtue of the three divisions (of the Tradition). Due to the transmission in many forms (bahurūpakrameṇa) you are the one deity of the Kula (kuladevatā).[34] (19)

You, O goddess, are the mother of the worlds, O grandmother,[35] (you are) the source (yoni) of the universe. By you and by me, O mistress of the gods, the triple world is woven warp and woof. (20)

I am not, as it were, your disciple but (rather) have come in friendship.[36] (Indeed) O goddess, the knowledge of ritual is close to you because of (our) previous affection.[37] (21)

And (I) have come (as one who) craves knowledge, thus, O Umā, tell me. I have imparted (this) most excellent knowledge to you many times and you also have explained it to me completely in the past. Therefore, O Supreme One (Parā), our condition as disciples (of one another) is uncompromised.[38] All (there is between us is) affection, O auspicious one, and so speak without (harbouring any) doubt for I desire Kaulika knowledge which is the experience (of ultimate reality) (pratyayātmaka). (22-24)

The venerable (goddess) Kaulinī said:

O Śrīkaṇṭha, what are you saying! The truth is that you are Umā's lord who has come (into this world) in the form of a man (but) with the nature of a god.[39] (You who are) wise, wear the garment of Māyā and, out of love, are greedy for me, O Śambhu, it is apparent by your voice that (it is you) deluded by the net of Māyā. You have came (here), greedy for knowledge, to destroy the darkness (of ignorance). I have understood (this is so) why, O great Śambhu, do you conceal yourself?[40] O Great Lord, what is the reason (for this)? O my dearly beloved, I will explain (things) truly (as they are) (yathāvṛtta).[41] (25-28)

तथा[१२९] शृणुष्व[१३०] भो नाथ योगकारणमुत्तमम्[१३१] ।
विस्तरेणाभिधास्यामि पूर्वं[१३२] यत् सूचितं[१३३] मया ।। २९ ।।[१३४]

कैलासस्यापरे[१३५] बिम्बे मेरुमन्दिरमूर्धनि[१३६] ।
महारामे[१३७] च रम्ये[१३८] च तुष्णीनाथगुहाश्रमम् ।। ३० ।।

त्रिरस्त्रं सप्तस्कन्धाभं[१३९] कुलाष्टकसमावृतम्[१४०] ।
योजनानां शतास्त्रीणि[१४१] श्लोकद्वादशवेष्टितम्[१४२] ।। ३१ ।।
पञ्चाशत्[१४३] सिद्धयोगिन्य:[१४४] संजाता:[१४५] श्रीकुलेच्छया ।
आदिकादिथकारादित्रिप्रकारमया[१४६] शिला[१४७] ।। ३२ ।।

जननी कुलमात्रीणां[१४८] सिद्धानां मोक्षदायिका[१४९] ।
विनिष्क्रान्ता[१५०] गुहावासान्मन्त्रमुद्रा[१५१] त्रयोलिषु[१५२] ।। ३३ ।।
रजोभावेन[१५३] रूपं[१५४] स्यात्[१५५] पुष्पवत्[१५६] परिगीयते ।
सा शिला[१५७] चन्द्रकान्तिस्तु तप्तहेमसमप्रभा[१५८] ।। ३४ ।।

सुस्पष्टा हक्षमध्यस्था[१५९] अमया[१६०] मध्यभेदिता[१६१] ।
शक्तिस्था शक्तिमध्यस्था हक्षद्वयविसर्पिणी[१६२] ।। ३५ ।।
त्रिकोणभुवनाधारे[१६३] आग्नेये[१६४] योनिमण्डले[१६५] ।

रविमण्डल[१६६] तद्बाह्ये[१६७] आरक्तं[१६८] तत् सुतेजसम् ।। ३६ ।।
योजनानां शतं[१६९] सार्धं[१७०] समन्तात् तन्मनोरमम्[१७१] ।
अखण्डमण्डलाकारं भुवनं सर्वयोगिनाम्[१७२] ।। ३७ ।।

तन्मध्यात्[१७३] तु विनिष्क्रान्तमन्वयं[१७४] सप्तकोटिकम् ।
तथा च भैरवं[१७५] घोरं द्वात्रिंशत्सिंहसंज्ञकम् ।। ३८ ।।

बीजस्थं पञ्चधावस्थं[१७६] शक्तिस्थं[१७७] पञ्चधास्थितम् ।
तस्योत्सङ्गें[१७८] च सा विद्या सूष्मणामृतवर्षिणी[१७९] ।। ३९ ।।

More concerning the Triangle in the centre

And so listen, O lord, to the most excellent cause of Yoga. I will (now) explain in detail what I previously (merely) indicated to you. (29)

The cave hermitage (āśrama) of Tūṣṇīnātha (the Silent Lord) is located in a large and beautiful grove situated on the peak of the temple of Meru, which is another form of (mount) Kailāsa. (30)

It is triangular and appears to have seven sections (skandha). It is surrounded by the Octad of Kula.[42] (The three sides together measure) three times a hundred leagues (long)[43] and it is surrounded by the Twelve Verses.[44] (Within it reside) the fifty Siddhas and Yoginīs born of the will of the Śrīkula.[45] The Stone is made of three parts. (One) begins with (the letter) `A', (another) begins with (the letter) `Ka' and (the third) begins with (the letter) `Tha'.[46] (31-32)

She is the Mother of the (eight) mothers of Kula[47] who bestows liberation to the accomplished (siddha). She who is mantra and gesture (mudrā) in the Three Lineages (trayoli) has emerged from the Cave Dwelling as menstruation (rajobhāva) (and such) is (her) form which is lauded as menstruated (puṣpavat).[48] That is the Stone (śilā), beautiful as the moon, the light of which is like heated gold. (33-34)

Clearly visible, (the Command) is located between (the letters) Ha and KṢa and is conjoined in the centre with Amā (the New Moon).[49] Residing within energy and located in the middle of energy, (the Command) flows out from (between) the two, Ha and KṢa into the igneous maṇḍala of the Yoni, that is, into the Triangle which is the foundation of the world.[50] (35-36ab)

The Circle of the Sun is outside that. It is light red and very brilliant. Delightful, that is one hundred and fifty leagues all around.[51] Its form that of an unbroken circle, it is the world of all yogis. (36cd-37)

Bhairava and Bhairavī in the Centre

The tradition (taught in) seventy million (verses) has emerged from the (triangle in the) middle of that.[52] And so has the formidable (ghora) Bhairava called the lion of the thirty-two (syllable Vidyā).[53] (38)

He resides within the seed-syllable,[54] possesses five states and, residing in (his divine) energy (śakti), is established fivefold.[55] Seated next to him[56] is the Vidyā who rains down the nectar of Sūṣmaṇā.[57] (39)

भैरवी कालिकानन्दा त्रैलोक्ये[१८०] क्षोभकारिणी ।
निशाकरार्धजठरं[१८१] आपीतं[१८२] कालिकासनम्[१८३] ॥ ४० ॥
सुतप्तहेमसंकाशं[१८४] चतुराशीतियोजनम्[१८५] ।
उत्तानं तदधस्थं[१८६] तु तन्मध्ये तु नपुंसकम् ॥ ४१ ॥

शुद्धस्फटिकसंकाशं वर्तुलं[१८७] रविमण्डलम् ।
तच्चात्मा[१८८] तस्य चक्रस्य[१८९] चन्द्रार्कानलभेदितम्[१९०] ॥ ४२ ॥

तन्मध्ये तु अमा देवी पक्षापक्षनिरोधिनी ।
तदा सिंहक्रमे जाता वक्रदेवी त्रिवर्गसु[१९१] ॥ ४३ ॥
मयूखचन्द्रिकाकारा[१९२] पञ्चस्था पञ्चभूषिता ।
पञ्चपञ्चक्रमेणापि संपूर्णा[१९३] नग्नवाससा[१९४] ॥ ४४ ॥

कुमारी ब्रह्मचर्येण श्रीमान्देवी[१९५] भगोदरा[१९६] ।
अधिकारं[१९७] त्रिधाभूतं[१९८] द्वीपान्ते[१९९] कुरुतेच्छया[२००] ॥ ४५ ॥

न स्त्री न पुरुषाकारं[२०१] आनन्दं[२०२] तं[२०३] नपुंसकम् ।
साधिकारं लिङ्गरूपं[२०४] निरधिकरणं[२०५] तथा ॥ ४६ ॥
खस्थं[२०६] निवर्तिताकारं अव्यक्तं भैरवात्मकम् ।
एवमानन्दशक्तिस्तु दिव्यलिङ्गा क्रमोदिता[२०७] ॥ ४७ ॥

उभयोर्बाह्यगं[२०८] क्षेत्रं मुद्रात्रितयभेदितम् ।
कूटस्थं[२०९] वर्णराशिस्तु[२१०] त्रिकोणं[२११] गुहवासकम्[२१२] ॥ ४८ ॥

गृहं[२१३] चन्द्रपुरं नाम पश्चिमस्थमधोमुखम्[२१४] ।
एकपादं त्रिहस्तं तु त्रिशक्तितरुमण्डितम्[२१५] ॥ ४९ ॥

तन्मध्ये चाधिकारं[२१६] तु मन्थानस्य महत्पुरे[२१७] ।
मन्थानभैरवी शक्तिर्भेदानां[२१८] कुलकौलिनी ॥ ५० ॥

(She is) Bhairavī, the bliss of Kālikā who arouses the Three Worlds. Light yellow, Kālikā's seat is the Half-moon. (Brilliant) like well heated gold, (it is) eighty-four leagues (wide). In the middle of that is the Neuter (absolute - napuṁsaka)[58] (while the Half-moon) lies supine (uttāna)[59] below it. (40-41)

The Circle of the Sun is round and (clear) as pure crystal. And that (centre), conjoined (bhedita) with the Moon, Sun and Fire, is the Self of that Wheel (cakra i.e. maṇḍala).[60] (42)

Vakrā, the Goddess Moon, the Liṅga, the City of the Moon and the Transmissions

In the centre of that is the goddess of the New Moon (Amā) who checks the two polarities (pakṣāpakṣa) (of the breaths).[61] Then the goddess Vakrā arose (jātā) in the Transmission of the Lion within the three categories (trivarga).[62]

Her form rays of moonlight,[63] she resides in the five (primal causes) and is decorated with the five. Naked (nagnavāsasā),[64] she is completely full also by means of the sequence (that proceeds) five by five.[65] (43-44)

By virtue of (her) continence (brahmacaryā), she is a virgin, the venerable goddess who is within the Yoni (bhagodarā). She exercises (her) threefold authority within the Island (of the Moon) according to (her own) will.[66] (45)

That bliss is the Neuter (absolute). It is neither female nor is (its) form (ākāra) male.[67] Its nature (rūpa) is the Liṅga that possesses authority and is not subject to (any other) authority (niradhikaraṇa). Located in the Void (khastha), unmanifest and form annulled (nivartitākāra), it is Bhairava. In the same way (evam), the power of bliss is the divine (female) Liṅga (divyaliṇgā) that has emerged within the Transmission (kramoditā).[68] (46-47)

Outside both of them (i.e. Bhairava and the power of bliss) is the field (kṣetra).[69] It is conjoined (bhedita) with the triad of Gestures (mudrā)[70] and, located on the peak (kūṭastha),[71] it is the aggregate of letters (varṇarāśi),[72] the Triangle which is the Cave Dwelling. (48)

The House (gṛha) is the City of the Moon.[73] It is located in the west (paścimastha)[74] and faces downwards. It has one foot (ekapāda), three hands and is adorned with the Tree of the triple energy.[75] (49)

And in its centre, in the great abode (mahatpura) of the Churning (Bhairava), is authority. (There) the energy of the divisions is the Churning Bhairavī who is Kulakaulinī.[76] (50)

संस्थिता[२१९] लिङ्गरूपेण[२२०] वक्रदेवी ह्यधोमुखी[२२१] ।
आत्मानं[२२२] च हृदिस्थं तु[२२३] श्वेतं[२२४] पिङ्गलनायकम् ।। ५१ ।।

वर्तुलं चातिशोभाढ्यं[२२५] ॐकारमिति[२२६] गीयते ।
तत्रस्थं ज्योतिमध्यस्थं[२२७] आद्यपीठं स्वरूपधृक्[२२८] ।। ५२ ।।

लिङ्गरत्नमयाकारं[२२९] अत्यारक्तं[२३०] सुतेजसम् ।
सद्यावेशकरं[२३१] घोरं अघोरस्योपरिस्थितम् ।। ५३ ।।

तस्याज्ञा स्वमुखे नित्यं भेदैश्च सप्तविंशतिः[२३२] ।
षट्प्रकारक्रमेणैव आम्नायेन[२३३] मुखागमम्[२३४] ।। ५४ ।।

बालं कौमारवृद्धं[२३५] च त्रिविधं क्रम[२३६] संस्थितम् ।
ज्येष्ठं मध्यं कनिष्ठं च ओलित्रितयभूषितम्[२३७] ।। ५५ ।।

एतद् वै पश्चिमं वेश्मं[२३८] चन्द्रपुर्येति[२३९] नामतः ।
क्रममण्डल[२४०] ओलीनां[२४१] त्रिधातत्त्वपरिग्रहम्[२४२] ।। ५६ ।।

क्रममुद्राधिकारं[२४३] तु मुद्रापीठकृताङ्कितम्[२४४] ।
अर्धचन्द्रस्य[२४५] मध्यस्थं पुरं प्रणवयोजितम् ।। ५७ ।।

विलोमेन चकारादौ मणिपूर्णे[२४६] ततः[२४७] पुनः ।
श्रीमद् वै रुद्र पादाब्जं[२४८] पश्चिमं इच्छसे[२४९] क्रमम् ।। ५८ ।।

श्रीकण्ठ उवाच

गृहे[२५०] चन्द्रपुरे शाक्ते[२५१] मध्यलिङ्गे[२५२] भगोदिते ।
तिष्ठते[२५३] को[२५४] गुरुर्मन्त्री पश्चिमस्य क्रमस्य च ।। ५९ ।।

She is the goddess Vakrā who, facing downwards,[77] is well established in the form of a Liṅga.[78] And the Self resides in (the centre), the heart (of the maṇḍala) and is the lord (nāyaka) Piṅgala who is white.[79] (51)

Round and very beautiful, it is said to be the syllable OṀ.[80] Located there, in the centre of the Light, is the first seat (ādyapīṭha), the holder of the essential nature (svarūpa) (of the deity and the maṇḍala). (52)

Its form is that of a jewelled Liṅga.[81] A very subtle pink (atyārakta), it is pleasingly brilliant. Formidable (ghora), it brings about immediate penetrating possession (āveśa)[82] and is located above Aghora.[83] (53)

Its Command, with (its) twenty-seven divisions (bheda),[84] is ever on my lips (svamukha). As the tradition (āmnāya) consisting of the transmission in six parts (ṣaṭprakārakrama),[85] it is the oral tradition (mukhāgama). (54)

The transmission (krama) is threefold as that of the Child, the Youth and the Aged and, adorned with the three lineages (oli), it is the oldest, the middle one and the youngest. (55)

That indeed is the Western House (veśman) called the City of the Moon. It is the Maṇḍala of the Transmission (krama) of the lineages (oli) and its form is the threefold enclosure of the (three) principles (tridhātattvaparigraha).[86] (56)

(The maṇḍala possesses) the authority of (the goddess who is) the Gesture of the Transmission (kramamudrā) and is marked with (the energy) created by the Seat of Gesture (mudrāpīṭha). It is located in the middle of the Half-moon and is the City conjoined with OṀ (praṇava).[87] (57)

Then again, in Maṇipūrṇa (within the Vidyā that), in the reverse order, begins with the letter `Ca'.[88] O Rudra! Venerable one! You whose feet are lotuses! desire the Western Transmission which is the lotus of (your) feat. (58)

The Goddess, the teacher in the City of the Moon, instructs Śrīkaṇṭha

Śrīkaṇṭha said:

Who is the teacher of the Western Transmission, the one who recites mantra in the empowered (śākta)[89] House, the City of the Moon, that is, in the Liṅga in the centre arisen within the Yoni (bhagodita)?[90] (59)

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[२५५]

चन्द्रपुर्यस्य[२५६] वेश्मस्य[२५७] अघोरस्य महेश्वर ।
अहं गुरुरहं[२५८] मन्त्री नपुंसकपदे स्थिता ।। ६० ।।

व्याप्तिव्यापकभेदेन[२५९] सर्वज्ञा[२६०] उन्मना परा ।
सिद्धवासाद्[२६१] विनिष्क्रान्ता[२६२] शाम्भवाज्ञास्वरूपतः ।। ६१ ।।

पश्चिमं[२६३] शाम्भवं तस्मात् सर्वेषामुपरिस्थितम् ।
सविशेषमिदं नित्यं बहुरूपस्य साम्प्रतम्[२६४] ।। ६२ ।।

या सा शक्तिर्भगाख्याता[२६५] शम्भोरुत्सङ्गगामिनी[२६६] ।
कौलिनी[२६७] ब्रह्मचर्येण श्रीमान्देवी नपुंसका[२६८] ।। ६३ ।।
निर्वाणभूमिका[२६९] प्राप्ता सिद्धाज्ञा च नभेऽक्षया[२७०] ।

श्रीकण्ठ उवाच[२७१]

वद मे कौलसद्भावं[२७२] यदुक्तं[२७३] पश्चिमे गृहे ।। ६४ ।।
मायावृतस्य[२७४] अम्बे[२७५] मे सद्योनिर्वाणतां[२७६] वद ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[२७७]

न च मायावृतस्त्वं हि साक्षाद्[२७८] देवो निरञ्जनः[२७९] ।। ६५ ।।
ईश्वरः[२८०] पञ्चवक्त्रस्त्वं ज्ञानार्थी[२८१] रुद्रसंज्ञकः ।

त्रैलोक्ये[२८२] त्वं गुरुः[२८३] कर्ता[२८४] हर्ता त्वं च[२८५] पुनः पुनः[२८६] ।। ६६ ।।
सृष्टिसंहारकर्तृत्वे[२८७] एकस्त्वं पार्थिवे[२८८] कुले ।

तत् किमर्थं[२८९] जगन्नाथ शाम्भवाज्ञां[२९०] त्वमिच्छसि ।। ६७ ।।
प्रायशस्त्वं[२९१] हि कामार्थी आज्ञार्थी न कथञ्चन[२९२] ।
अस्माकं तपनाशाय[२९३] रुद्रस्त्वमिह आगतः[२९४] ।। ६८ ।।

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

O Great Lord, I am the teacher of the City of the Moon,[91] the House of Aghora.[92] (I am) the one who recites mantra established on the plane of the Neuter.[93] (60)

(I am) Parā (the Supreme), the omniscient Transmental, the Śāmbhava Command (śāmbhavājñā) by nature, who has emerged by means of the distinction (bheda) between pervasion and the one who pervades[94] from the (Triangle that is the) Abode of the Siddhas. (61)

The Western (Transmission paścima) is Śāmbhava and so is above all others.[95] It is eternal with (all its) details and is now that of (Svacchandabhairava otherwise known as) Bahurūpa (the Pluriform). (62)

The energy called the Yoni (bhaga) who (sits in union) on Śambhu's lap (utsaṅgagaminī)[96] is, by virtue of (her) practice of continence (brahmacarya),[97] Kaulinī, the venerable goddess Neuter (napuṁsakā)[98] who is the plane of Nirvāṇa attained and, imperishable, is the Command that has been accomplished (siddhājñā) in the Void (nabhas) (of the supreme principle). (63-64ab)

Śrīkaṇṭha said:

Tell me the essence of the Kaula (teachings) as expounded in the Western House. O mother,[99] tell me (who am) enveloped in Māyā, (the teaching that leads to the) state which is the immediate attainment of Nirvāṇa. (64cd-65ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

You are indeed god (himself) directly apparent (sākṣāt), the stainless one (nirañjana)[100] and are not covered by Māyā. You are the lord with five faces called Rudra[101] who (now) desires knowledge. (65cd-66ab)

In the Three Worlds you are the teacher[102] and you are, again and again, the creator and destroyer. You alone are the one who emanates and withdraws (all things) in (this) earthly Kula.[103] (66cd-67ab)

O lord of the universe, why is that? (Why) do you desire the Śāmbhava Command (śāmbhavājñā)?[104] You are generally desirous of sexual pleasure (kāma from me),[105] you are not at all one who desires the Command. You are Rudra who has come here to ruin our austerities.[106] (67cd-68)

स्त्रीत्वं पूर्वं[२९५] मया त्यक्तं[२९६] पौरुषं च तथैव च[२९७] ।
भूमिकाज्ञाप्रभावेन[२९८] प्रकटाहं[२९९] युगे युगे[३००] ।। ६९ ।।

अहं शून्यस्वरूपेण[३०१] परा दिव्यतनुर्ह्यहम्[३०२] ।
अहं सा मालिनी देवी अहं[३०३] सा सिद्धयोगिनी ।। ७० ।।
अहं सा[३०४] कालिका[३०५] काचित्[३०६] कुलयागेश्वरी[३०७] ह्यहम्[३०८] ।
अहं सा चर्चिका देवी[३०९] कुब्जिकाहं च षड्विधा[३१०] ।। ७१ ।।[३११]

एवं[३१२] सा कलिकाले तु मुमुक्षूणां विमुक्तये ।
संसारभयभीतानां अवतारं प्रकुर्वते[३१३] ।। ७२ ।।
दक्षस्य[३१४] दुहिता पूर्वमास्म्यहं[३१५] भद्रकालिका ।
अतिरूपा विशालाक्षी शम्भुना च विवाहिता ।। ७३ ।।

दक्षेण[३१६] तु प्रदत्ताहं सृष्टिहेतोर्नभान्तरे[३१७] ।
प्रविष्टा[३१८] ऋतुकाले[३१९] तु देवी देवस्य विस्तरे[३२०] ।। ७४ ।।
लीनाहं[३२१] परमानन्दा[३२२] आनन्दतनुतां[३२३] गता ।

यज्ञं करोति[३२४] विमलं[३२५] अथ[३२६] दक्षः[३२७] प्रजापतिः ।। ७५ ।।
मायापुर्यां[३२८] तटे गङ्गा[३२९] धर्मकामार्थसाधनम् ।
देवासुरगणाः सर्वे वासुदेवादि[३३०] सर्वशः ।। ७६ ।।
आमन्त्रितास्तु दक्षेण[३३१] त्रैलोक्ये[३३२] ये व्यवस्थिताः[३३३] ।
नाहं तेन[३३४] पुरा तत्र ईश्वरं पञ्च–आननम्[३३५] ।। ७७ ।।
यज्ञक्षोभभयाद्[३३६] देव[३३७] ऋषिणां च[३३८] तु शंकया[३३९] ।
भयभीतेन दक्षेण[३४०] सभायां न[३४१] निमन्त्रितौ[३४२] ।। ७८ ।।
ईश्वरेण तदारब्धं[३४३] महत् कोपं[३४४] सुदारुणम् ।
यज्ञविध्वंसनार्थाय[३४५] दक्षे शापः[३४६] प्रवर्तितः[३४७] ।। ७९ ।।

त्रैलोक्ये[३४८] विजयायुक्तो वीरभद्रो[३४९] गणैः[३५०] सह[३५१] ।
प्रहितश्च महावीरो[३५२] गणवृन्दसमावृतः[३५३] ।। ८० ।।
आरब्धं[३५४] यज्ञविध्वंसं[३५५] कोटिसम्भारसंवृतम्[३५६] ।

Formerly, I abandoned femininity and so too masculinity.[107] By the (empowering) Command of the plane (of ultimate reality) (bhūmikājñā), I am clearly manifest (prakaṭā) in each age (yuga).[108] (69)

By virtue of (my) Void nature (śūnyasvarūpa) I am Parā (the Supreme and my) body is divine. I am that goddess Mālinī. I am that Siddhayoginī. I am that certain (inscrutable - kācit – goddess) Kālikā. I am indeed Kulayāgeśvarī (the Mistress of the Kula Sacrifice).[109] I am that goddess Carcikā[110] and I am Kubjikā who is sixfold.[111] (70-71)

The Goddess's Previous Life and the Destruction of Dakṣa's sacrifice

And (I am) she who, during the Age of Strife (kaliyuga), descends (into this world) to liberate those who, frightened by the fear of the world of transmigration, desire liberation. I am Bhadrakālikā, formerly Dakṣa's daughter. My eyes (were) large, (I was) beautiful and married to Śambhu. (72-73)

Given by Dakṣa (to lord Śiva) in order to bring about the emanation (of the universe) (sṛṣṭi) I, the goddess, entered, during (my) fertile period (ṛtukāla), into the Void which is the god's couch (vistara).[112] I who am supreme bliss merged (into the expanse of the foundation) and assumed a body of bliss.[113] (74-75ab)

Now, Dakṣa Prajāpati (set about) performing a pure sacrifice, serving as a means (to the attainment of) Dharma, sexual fulfilment and wealth, in the City of Māyā[114] on the banks of the Ganges. Dakṣa invited the entire host of gods and celestial beings, including Viṣṇu and the rest, who reside in the Three Worlds. I was not (invited) there by him, (nor was Śiva) the Five-Faced Lord.[115] O god, due to the fear that the sacrifice would be disturbed and the misgiving of the sages, (we two) were not invited into the assembly by the frightened Dakṣa. Then the Lord gave vent to (his) great and very fearsome anger and, in order to destroy the sacrifice, he cursed Dakṣa. (75cd-79)

(Śiva in the wrathful form of) Vīrabhadra, intent on the conquest of the Three Worlds, along with (his) host (gaṇa), he the Great Hero, surrounded by the assembly of (his) attendants (gaṇa) and urged on (by his rage), began to destroy the sacrifice with (its) countless trappings. It was entirely destroyed, uprooted

विध्वंसितमशेषं[३५७] तु आद्यन्तोच्चाटनं[३५८] कृतम् ॥ ८१ ॥
त्रस्ताश्च[३५९] देवताः सर्वे पलायन्ते[३६०] दिशो[३६१] दश[३६२] ।
शरण्याः[३६३] केचिद् वै तत्र[३६४] प्राणत्राणपरायणाः[३६५] ॥ ८२ ॥
केचित् पातालविवरे[३६६] केचित्[३६७] गह्वरमागताः[३६८] ।
केचिन्नष्टा[३६९] नभोयाने[३७०] केचित् स्वर्गं[३७१] समागताः[३७२] ॥ ८३ ॥
केचित् प्रविष्टाः[३७३] पातालं[३७४] दक्षो विह्वलतां गतः ।
आराधयत्[३७५] स हृष्टात्मा[३७६] राजीवासनसंस्थितम्[३७७] ॥ ८४ ॥

दक्ष उवाच[३७८]

भगवन् देवदेवेश लोकानुग्रहकारक[३७९] ।
अव्यक्तभगवन् शम्भो[३८०] लिङ्गरूपि[३८१] सदाशिव[३८२] ॥ ८५ ॥
महावनस्य[३८३] मध्ये तु मयास्मिन्[३८४] नन्दने वने[३८५] ।
जप्तं[३८६] यष्टं[३८७] हुतं[३८८] भक्त्या[३८९] ईदृगाह अनेकधा[३९०] ॥ ८६ ॥

प्रसीद भगवन् शम्भो यागसंपूर्णतां[३९१] कुरु ।[३९२]
एवं[३९३] विज्ञाप्य स[३९४] दक्षः[३९५] कृताञ्जलिपुटः[३९६] स्थितः ॥ ८७ ॥
स्तुनोति[३९७] स्तवराजेन महाशक्तिसमन्वितः ।

दक्ष उवाच

नमस्ते[३९८] कुलनाथाय कौलसिद्धिप्रदायक[३९९] ॥ ८८ ॥
ज्ञानविज्ञानरूपाय श्रीश्रीनाथ नमोऽस्तु[४००] ते ।

हृत्पुण्डरीकमध्यस्थं तरुणादित्यमण्डले ॥ ८९ ॥
नित्योदितप्रकाशाय[४०१] वन्दे विद्यामहाव्रतम् ।

शतार्धचक्रसंघातं[४०२] यस्योत्पन्नं शिवेच्छया ॥ ९० ॥
सिद्धौघं[४०३] देवताम्नायं वन्दे ज्ञानमहार्णवम्[४०४] ।

मन्त्रतत्त्वार्थसंबोधं[४०५] षट्चक्रकुलपर्वते[४०६] ॥ ९१ ॥
यस्येच्छानिर्गतं सर्वं[४०७] वन्दे विज्ञानभास्करम्[४०८] । from start to finish. All the gods were terrified and ran away in the ten directions. Some, intent on saving their lives, took refuge (in lord Śiva) there (itself). Some (hid) in the cavity of the lower worlds, some came to the abyss, some were destroyed, some (travelling) on the celestial way reached heaven and some entered the netherworld. Dakṣa became distraught. (Even so) that blissful soul praised (lord Śiva), the one seated on a lotus throne.[116] (80-84)

Dakṣa said:

"O Blessed one (bhagavat), lord of the gods, you who grace the world, Śambhu, the unmanifest God, Sadāśiva whose form is the Liṅga! I have, in the middle of the great forest, in this Nandana grove, repeated mantras, offered sacrifices and made oblations with devotion". He said such things many times.
(85-86)

"O Blessed one, be gracious, O Śambhu, make the sacrifice complete". Having declared thus, Dakṣa stood with (his) his hands folded together (in prayer) and, possessing mighty energy, he praised (Śiva) with the King of Hymns (stavarāja). (87-88ab)

Dakṣa's Stavarāja

Dakṣa said:

[117]Salutation to you the Lord of Kula, you who bestow Kaulasiddhi! O venerable Śrīnātha, salutation to you who are knowledge and consciousness.
(88cd-89ab)

(I offer praise) to the ever manifest (nityodita) Light. I praise the great aggregate of the Vidyā (vidyāmahāvrata)[118] established in the middle of the lotus of the Heart within the circle of the young (rising) sun. (89cd-90ab)

I praise the great of Ocean of Knowledge, the aggregate of fifty wheels, of which the Tradition of the Deity (devatāmnāya), the Current of the Siddhas (siddhaugha) has arisen by Śiva's will.[119] (90cd-91ab)

I praise the awakened consciousness of the reality that is the principle of mantra (mantratattvārtha), the Sun of Consciousness on the Mountain of Kula (consisting of) the Six Wheels, by whose will everything has emerged (into being).[120] (91cd-92ab)

नादबिन्दुकलाज्योतिरानन्दक्रमपञ्चकम् ॥ ९२ ॥
पञ्चावस्थां गतो यस्तं[४०९] वन्दे ज्ञेयं[४१०] परापरम् ।

मनोबुद्धिरहंकारं[४११] त्यक्त्वा[४१२] अज्ञानगह्वरम्[४१३] ॥ ९३ ॥
दृश्यते[४१४] मन्त्रसद्भावं वन्दे[४१५] विज्ञानसागरम् ।

सप्तसागरपर्यन्तं[४१६] संसारार्णवगोचरम् ॥ ९४ ॥
निष्प्रपञ्चं[४१७] निराधारं[४१८] वन्दे व्योम्नि[४१९] परापरम् ।

त्रिकूटं[४२०] पञ्चतत्त्वस्थं[४२१] पञ्चावस्थगतं[४२२] विभुम् ॥ ९५ ॥
अकुलकुलसद्भावं[४२३] त्रिकभेदं[४२४] परापरम्[४२५] ।
मन्त्रचक्रकलाधारं[४२६] वन्दे कुलमनामयम्[४२७] ॥ ९६ ॥

अधोब्रह्मबिलं[४२८] चक्रं चतुर्दलसमन्वितम् ।
रक्तवर्णं महादीप्तं वन्दे आधारमण्डलम् ॥ ९७ ॥

तस्योर्ध्वे नाभिमूले[४२९] तु चक्रं[४३०] पञ्चदलान्वितम्[४३१] ।
पद्मरागनिभं[४३२] वज्रं[४३३] वन्दे पूर्णमणीपुरम्[४३४] ॥ ९८ ॥

पञ्चारे[४३५] हृत्पुरे चक्रं नीलजीमूतवाहनम्[४३६] ।
प्रज्वलन्तं महादीप्तं[४३७] वन्दे देवमनाहतम्[४३८] ॥ ९९ ॥

एवं पञ्चदलोपेतं विशुद्धं[४३९] कण्ठमाश्रितम्[४४०] ।
तप्तहेमनिभप्रख्यं[४४१] वन्दे ह्यमृतगोचरम्[४४२] ॥ १०० ॥

तुर्यस्थाने[४४३] पञ्चाकारं[४४४] बिन्दुस्थं कोपमूर्धनि ।
शुद्धस्फटिकसंकाशं वन्दे आज्ञापरापरम्[४४५] ॥ १०१ ॥

I praise the fivefold sequence of Sound (nāda), the Point (bindu), Energy (kalā), Light (jyotiṣ) and bliss and the one who has assumed (these) fives states[121] who, both supreme and inferior, is (all that) should be known. (92cd-93ab)

I praise the Ocean of Consciousness (vijñānasāgara), the essence of mantra[122] which is perceived once abandoned the abyss of ignorance namely, the mind, intellect and ego. (93cd-94ab)

[123]I praise (the absolute that is) both supreme (transcendence) and inferior (immanence) which, in the Sky (of pure consciousness), is free of (any extrinsic) foundation (nirādhāra) and thought constructs (niṣprapañca) and (whose) field is the ocean of transmigratory existence right up to the end of the seven seas.[124] (94cd-95ab)

I praise the flawless Kula, the all-pervasive lord (vibhu) who abides in the Five States and the Five Principles,[125] (he who is) the Triple Peak,[126] the essence of Kula and Akula,[127] the Triad (trikabheda),[128] supreme and inferior, and is the foundation of the energy of the circle (cakra) of mantras. (95cd-96)

The Six Wheels

1) I praise the Circle of the Foundation (ādhāramaṇḍala), that is, the lower Cavity of Brahmā,[129] the wheel possessing four petals,[130] red in colour and very bright (mahādīpta). (97)

2) [131]I praise the City Full of Gems which is the Wheel above it at the root of the navel, possessing five petals, it is the Thunderbolt (vajra),[132] (red) as a ruby.[133] (98)

3) I praise the god Unstruck Sound (anāhata) whose vehicle is a blue lightning flash and, burning fiercely and very bright, is in the wheel of five spokes within the City of the Heart. (99)

4) In the same way, I praise the Pure (Wheel) located in the throat that, brilliant as heated gold, has five petals and is the sphere of nectar. (100)

5) I praise (the Wheel of the) Command which is both supreme and inferior, in the abode of the Fourth (state).[134] Located in the Point between the eyebrows (kopamūrdhan),[135] its form is fivefold (pañcākāra) and it (shines) like pure crystal. (101)

तालुमध्ये महानादं षोडशारं निरञ्जनम्[४४६] ।
ज्योतिरूपं[४४७] महाचक्रं[४४८] वन्दे दिव्यमनामयम्[४४९] ॥ १०२ ॥

यकारादिसमायुक्तं[४५०] ब्रह्ममन्त्रपरिग्रहम् ।
हिमकुन्देन्दुधवलं[४५१] सद्यो[४५२] वन्दे यथा शिवम् ॥ १०३ ॥

ततस्तादिविभेदेन[४५३] भेदितं तु जनार्दनम् ।
पद्मरागसमप्रख्यं[४५४] वन्दे[४५५] रक्तविभूषणम् ॥ १०४ ॥

टादिपञ्चसमोपेतं[४५६] रुद्रं तृतीयं पूजितम्[४५७] ।
भिन्नाञ्जनमहादीप्तं वन्दे घोरमनामयम्[४५८] ॥ १०५ ॥

यच्च[४५९] चादिस्वरूपेण[४६०] ईश्वरं[४६१] पञ्चभेदितम् ।
अलातपुष्पसंकाशं[४६२] वन्दे तं लिङ्गभास्वरम्[४६३] ॥ १०६ ॥

तस्योर्ध्वे[४६४] कादिभेदेन शक्तिपञ्चकयोजितम् ।
शुद्धस्फटिकरूपेण वन्दे ईशानभैरवम्[४६५] ॥ १०७ ॥

अकारादिविसर्गान्तषोडशैस्तु[४६६] सदाशिवम् ।
ज्योतिरूपं[४६७] सदा वन्दे कौलिकाज्ञाप्रबोधकम्[४६८] ॥ १०८ ॥

तत्राधारगतां[४६९] मध्ये मन्त्रमुद्राविभेदकीम्[४७०] ।
चक्रनायकिविख्यातां[४७१] वन्देऽहं कुलडामरीम्[४७२] ॥ १०९ ॥

मणिपूर्णगतां[४७३] देवीं परतत्त्वप्रकाशकीम्[४७४] ।
चक्रनायकिविख्यातां[४७५] वन्दे[४७६] उड्डामरीं[४७७] पुरे[४७८] ॥ ११० ॥

6) I praise the great, divine and flawless wheel whose form is light that, in the centre of the palate,[136] has sixteen spokes and, stainless (nirañjana), is the Great Sound (mahānāda). (102)

The Gods, Colours and Letters of the Six Wheels[137]

1) I praise Sadyojāta (sadyo)[138] as (I would) Śiva (in the Wheel of the Foundation). It is conjoined to `Ya' and the rest (of the semi-vowels)[139] and, white like snow, jasmine and the moon, has the form of Brahmā's mantra.[140] (103)

2) I praise then (the City of Gems), a red ornament, brilliant as ruby, Viṣṇu (janārdana), conjoined with the class of the (letters) `Ta' and the other (dentals). (104)

3) I praise Rudra, the third worshipped (in the Wheel of Unstruck Sound) endowed with the five (cerebrals) `Ṭa' and the rest. Very brilliant (like) a slice of (black) collyrium, he is formidable (ghora and yet) devoid of imperfection. (105)

4) I praise that shining Liṅga (the Pure Wheel) which, in the form of the (five palatals) `Ca' and the rest, is Īśvara conjoined with (these) five and is (brilliant) like the flower (made by a whirling) firebrand.[141] (106)

5) Above him, I praise Īśānabhairava in the form of pure crystal who, as the class (of the five gutturals) `Ka' and the rest, is conjoined with the group of five energies.[142] (107)

6) I praise Sadāśiva constantly along with the sixteen (letters) beginning with `A' and ending with Emission (visarga)[143] - he whose form is Light and awakens to the Kaulika Command. (108)

The Yoginīs in the Six Wheels

1) I praise Kulaḍāmarī, known as the mistress of the wheel (cakranāyakī) who is present there in the (Wheel of the) Foundation and, in the centre, pierces through (vibhedakī) mantra and Gesture. (109)

2) I praise Uḍḍāmarī, known as the mistress of the wheel in the abode (pura) (of the body) who is present in the (Wheel) Full of Gems (maṇipūrṇa) and illumines the Supreme Principle. (110)

हृत्पुण्डरीकमध्यस्था[४७९] सिद्धचक्रप्रबोधकीम्[४८०] ।
चक्रनायकिविख्याता[४८१] वन्दे[४८२] तां ज्वालिनी[४८३] पुरे ॥ १११ ॥

विशुद्धचक्रमध्यस्था[४८४] शवरीज्ञानभेदकीम्[४८५] ।
चक्रनायकिविख्याता[४८६] वन्दे[४८७] दूती[४८८] च शाकिनीम्[४८९] ॥ ११२ ॥

आज्ञामूर्धनि[४९०] चक्रस्था[४९१] सिद्धतत्त्वसमायुताम्[४९२] ।
चक्रनायकिविख्याता[४९३] वन्देऽहं व्योमरूपिणीम्[४९४] ॥ ११३ ॥

अनामचक्रमध्यस्था[४९५] सिद्धतत्त्वसमन्विताम् ।
चक्रनायकिविख्याता[४९६] वन्देऽहं खेचरी[४९७] पुरे[४९८] ॥ ११४ ॥

कदम्बगोलकाकारा[४९९] षोडशान्ते व्यवस्थिताम्[५००] ।
शुक्लपक्षे त्वहं वन्दे पूर्णाख्यामृतरूपिणीम्[५०१] ॥ ११५ ॥

तन्मध्ये कालिकाबिम्ब[५०२] उत्सङ्गामृतकेसरीम्[५०३] ।
देवी[५०४] अमामहं वन्दे चन्द्रिकाकाररूपिणीम्[५०५] ॥ ११६ ॥

वामामृतपुरोत्कृष्टा[५०६] उत्कृष्टां चरुनन्दिताम्[५०७] ।
वामा[५०८] सृष्टिकरां वन्दे देवीं ता[५०९] कुलमालिनीम्॥ ११७ ॥

परा[५१०] तेजसमावस्था[५११] तत्त्वात्मासुपरिग्रहाम्[५१२] ।
तेजोदृप्ता[५१३] च दक्षिणे[५१४] वन्दे सिद्धदिवाकराम्[५१५]॥ ११८ ॥

3) I praise that Jvālinī, known as the mistress of the wheel in the abode (of the body) who resides in the centre of the lotus of the Heart and awakens the congregation (cakra) of Siddhas. (111)

4) And I praise Śākinī,[144] the consort (dūtī) (of the god) known as the mistress of the wheel who resides in the centre of the Pure Wheel (viśuddhacakra) and pierces (bhedakī) (through it) with the Knowledge of Śavarī.[145] (112)

5) I praise her whose form is the Void (vyoman) known as the mistress of the wheel who resides, endowed with reality attained (siddhatattva), in the wheel on the apex (mūrdhani) of the Command.[146] (113)

6) I praise Khecarī in the body (pura) who, known as the mistress of the wheel, resides in the centre of the Wheel of the Nameless (anāmacakra) endowed with reality attained.[147] (114)

The Play of the Full and the New Moon: The Full Moon in the New Moon

I praise (the goddess) in the bright lunar fortnight who is called the Full (Moon) (pūrṇā) and is nectar. Her form (spherical like) the bud of a Kadamba tree, she is present at the end of the sixteen (lunar digits).[148] (115)

The New Moon in the Full Moon

I praise the goddess New Moon (amā) whose form is moonlight (candrikākāra)[149] in the midst of that (Full Moon), she who is the lioness of the nectar of union (utsaṅgāmṛtakesarī)[150] and the original form (bimba) of (the goddess) Kālikā.[151] (116)

The Full Moon

I praise the goddess Vāmā, that is, Kulamālinī[152] who engenders emanation. Exalted (utkṛṣṭā), she is delighted with the sacrificial pap (caru) and is most excellent (utkṛṣṭā) in the Abode of the Nectar of Wine (vāmāmṛta).[153] (117)

The New Moon

And I praise (the goddess) Parā who, well established in radiant energy, possesses the beautiful form of the essential nature of (all) the principles (tattvātmāparigrahā)[154] and, haughty with radiant energy (tejas) is, on the right, the sun (of knowledge for) the accomplished (siddha).[155] (118)

शक्तित्रितयमध्ये[५१६] तु अंकुराकारदेवता[५१७] ।
पिण्डं तस्या[५१८] भगाकार[५१९] वन्दे त्रिष्कोणपीठगाम्[५२०] ।। ११९ ।।

नादस्थाने महारत्नं जाठराग्निसमुज्ज्वलम् ।
परमार्थदशाधारं वन्देऽहं नाभिमण्डलम् ।। १२० ।।
तस्यावरण[५२१] सिद्धाङ्गा[५२२] कुण्डली नाम देवता ।
त्रिस्था[५२३] त्रिवलयाकारा[५२४] वन्देऽह[५२५] सिद्धकुण्डलीम्[५२६] ।। १२१ ।।

अनन्तं यस्य मन्त्रस्य तेजोरूपं नवात्मकम् ।
कूटस्थं परमव्योम्नि[५२७] वन्दे कूटं यथा गुरुम् ।। १२२ ।।

अनामा[५२८] परधाम्निस्था[५२९] शक्तित्रितयभाविनीम्[५३०] ।
एकतत्त्वस्थिता[५३१] यत्र[५३२] वन्दे विज्ञानघट्टिनीम्[५३३] ।। १२३ ।।

इच्छाज्ञानक्रियाभेदैर्भेदिता[५३४] चन्द्रमूर्धनि ।
गमागमक्रमेणैव वन्दे शक्त्यन्तगोचरे ।। १२४ ।।

व्योमपञ्चकलाधार[५३५] विपरीतेन[५३६] मायया ।
निशाचारेण[५३७] संवेद्य[५३८] घटं वन्दे यथागमम्[५३९] ।। १२५ ।।

तुर्यस्थममृत[५४०] शुक्लं परमार्थमुखोद्गतम् ।
द्रवते[५४१] ज्ञानमाश्रित्य वन्दे बिन्दु[५४२] मनोरथम् ।। १२६ ।।

The Full Moon

In the midst of the three energies is the deity whose form is a sprout and her body the shape of a Yoni (bhagākāra). I praise (the goddess) present in the sacred seat of the Triangle (triṣkoṇapīṭha).[156] (119)

[157]I praise the Circle of the Navel, aflame with the fire of the stomach, it is the Great Jewel in the locus of Sound (nāda) and the foundation of the plane of ultimate reality (paramārtha). Its enclosure (āvaraṇa) is the deity called Kuṇḍalinī whose limbs are the Siddhas (siddhāṅgā) (who govern the letters). I praise her, the Kuṇḍalinī of the accomplished (siddhakuṇḍalinī) who, established in the three (energies), is in the form of three coils.[158] (120-121)

The New Moon

I praise, as I do the teacher, the Peak (syllable) (kūṭa) on the summit (kūṭa) (of existence) within the Supreme Void (paravyoman) that, endless, has as its mantra Navātmaka whose form is radiant energy (tejas).[159] (122)

I praise (the goddess) Anāmā (the Nameless) who resides in the Supreme Abode and contemplates the three energies. She is established in the one reality (ekatattva) where she coalesces (all things with) consciousness (vijñāna-ghaṭṭinī).[160] (123)

The Full Moon

I praise (the goddess) who, in the field at the extremity of the energy at the summit of the Moon is, by the process of going and coming (gamāgamakrama), divided by the divisions of will, knowledge and action.[161] (124)

The New Moon

I praise the body (ghaṭa) in accord with the tradition (yathāgama), as the foundation of the energies of the Five Voids (vyomapañcakalā)[162] that can be known (saṁvedya) by the Conduct of the Night (niśācāra), that is, by means of Māyā reversed (from its normal deluding course).[163] (125)

The Full Moon

I praise the Point (bindu) that is desire (manoratha), the white nectar in the Fourth state that has emerged from the mouth of ultimate reality (paramārtha)[164] and, having recourse (āśritya) to knowledge, melts and flows (dravate).[165] (126)

तस्योर्ध्वे[५४३] ज्योतिमात्रं तु[५४४] कलाशेषस्य[५४५] धारिणी ।
दृश्यते बिन्दुवेधेन वन्दे कोटरमव्ययम् ॥ १२७ ॥

जीवाधारमहारत्नं पशुपाशमलापहम् ।
निर्मलं मण्डलाकारं वन्दे चाखण्डमण्डलम् ॥ १२८ ॥

सर्वाङ्गव्यापकं देवं मुद्रामन्त्रविभूषितम् ।
चित्स्वरूपप्रकाशस्थं[५४६] वन्दे शिवं[५४७] महामृतम् ॥ १२९ ॥

लयातीतं तु मन्त्राणां षोडशान्ते विपर्ययम्[५४८] ।
द्वादशान्ते परावस्थं[५४९] वन्दे नादान्तमाश्रितम्[५५०] ॥ १३० ॥

परतत्त्वप्रकाशाय[५५१] आत्मतत्त्वगरीयसीम्[५५२] ।
अन्तर्गतां[५५३] महालक्ष्मीं[५५४] वन्देऽहं कालिकां[५५५] पराम् ॥ १३१ ॥

विद्यातत्त्वनिनादेन नादेनाक्रम्य देवताम्[५५६] ।
मूर्तिमध्ये बहिर्लक्षे[५५७] वन्दे शुष्काभयप्रदाम्[५५८] ॥ १३२ ॥

शिवपक्षे[५५९] परे[५६०] व्योम्नि गता विद्या[५६१] परापरा ।
तुर्यचक्ररथारूढा[५६२] वन्दे शिवमयीं[५६३] कलाम् ॥ १३३ ॥

The New Moon

Above that is the pure Light (jyotimātra) which is the energy that sustains everything. Perceived by piercing through the (the Wheels) with the Point (binduvedha), I praise the imperishable Cavity (of the Void).[166] (127)

The Full Moon

I praise the Unbroken Circle (akhaṇḍamaṇḍala) that, round and pure, removes the impurity of the fetters (that bind) the fettered, the Great Jewel which is the foundation of (every) living being (jīva).[167] (128)

The New Moon

I praise the blue[168] Great Nectar, the god who, adorned with mantra and Gesture, resides in the Light which is consciousness and pervades all the limbs (of the body) (sarvāṅgavyāpaka). (129)

The Full and the New Moon

I praise (that reality which is) the Supreme State at the End of the Twelve established at the End of Sound. The reversal of mantras (into silence) at the End of the Sixteen, it transcends the dissolving away (of manifestation) (layātīta).[169] (130)

(I offer salutations) to the Light of the Supreme Principle. I praise the supreme (goddess) Kālikā who is Mahālakṣmī[170] present within and is greater than the Principle of the Self (ātmatattva). (131)

The New Moon

I praise (the goddess) Śuṣkā (the Emaciated One) who bestows fearlessness. She who, having entered into (ākramya) the deity through the Sound (nāda) that is the resonance of the principle of the Vidyā (vidyātattva), is in the middle of the (goddess's) outwardly visible (bahirlakṣa) icon (mūrti).[171] (132)

The Voids of the Wheels

The Void of the Wheel of the Command

1) I praise the energy (kalā) who is Śiva (śivamayī). (She who), mounted on the carriage of the Wheel of the Fourth State, is the Vidyā who is both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent) (parāparā) present in the supreme Void (vyoman) within Śiva's (transcendental) polarity (pakṣa) (of being).[172] (133)

शक्तिमध्ये[५६४] मन[५६५] कृत्वा चिन्तयेद् व्योम्नि चिद्घनम् ।
सर्वद्वन्द्वविनिर्मुक्तं वन्दे शान्तं निरञ्जनम् ॥ १३४ ॥

नाभिदेशे[५६६] महाघोर[५६७] व्योमराजखमाश्रितम्[५६८] ।
चिन्तयन्[५६९] मूलसंगृह्यं वन्दे व्योममनादिकम्[५७०] ॥ १३५ ॥

हृत्पुरे खमन[५७१] कृत्वा व्योमगर्भ[५७२] च मारुतम् ।
संस्मरन्[५७३] पूर्वकारण[५७४] वन्दे ज्योतिमहेश्वरम्[५७५] ॥ १३६ ॥

कण्ठमध्ये[५७६] समाश्रित्य[५७७] वेला इव महोदधेः[५७८] ।
परव्योमस्वरूपेण[५७९] वन्दे व्योमकलार्णवम्[५८०] ॥ १३७ ॥

तालुमध्यगत[५८१] व्योमं[५८२] उत्तानं तडिताहताम्[५८३] ।
ब्रह्मघोषरथारूढां वन्दे व्योम्न्याश्रिता[५८४] पराम् ॥ १३८ ॥

कुलविज्ञानपञ्चाशच्छब्दराशिक्रमेण तु ।[५८५]
स्तवराज[५८६] महागुह्य[५८७] महाविज्ञानभैरवम् ॥ १३९ ॥
स्तुतं दक्षेण मनसा[५८८] अन्तर्यागेन[५८९] धारणा[५९०] ।

The Void of the Wheel of the Foundation

2) Once fixed the mind in the middle of the power (śakti) (of the deity), contemplate the dense mass of (uninterrupted) consciousness (cidghana) within the Void (vyoman). I praise the peaceful Stainless (One) (nirañjana) (there) that is free of all duality.[173] (134)

The Void of the Wheel of the Navel

3) I praise the beginningless Void (in the act of) contemplating (Bhairava in the Wheel Full of Gems) in the navel, the Greatly Formidable One (Mahāghora) who resides within the Void of (Bhairava) and is the King of the Void (vyomarājan) who should be grasped as the root (of all existence). (135)

The Void of the Wheel of the Heart

4) Once fixed the void mind (khamanas) in the Abode of the Heart, recalling (saṁsmaran) the Void that is the womb of the vital breath (maruta), I praise the preceeding cause (pūrvakāraṇa) (of all things), the Great God of Light. (136)

The Void of the Wheel of the Throat

5) Entering the centre of (the Wheel of Purity in) the throat (I, on the brink of the Void) like the shore of the ocean,[174] praise the ocean of the energy of the Void as the essential nature of the Supreme Void. (137)

The Void of the Wheel of the Palate

6) The Void in the centre of the palate, struck with the lightning flash (of Kuṇḍalinī's power) lies supine (uttāna). I praise Parā (the Supreme) who resides in the Void mounted on the carriage (ratha) of the Sound of the Brahman (brahmaghoṣa).[175] (138)

(This is) the King of Hymns (Stavarāja), the great secret, the great Bhairava of consciousness (vijñāna). Dakṣa offered it mentally as praise by means of the meditation which is the inner sacrifice. (He did this) by means of the sequence of the aggregate of the fifty sounds (śabdarāśi) which is the consciousness (vijñāna) of Kula.[176] (139-140ab)

संस्मरेद्[५९१] यः क्रमस्याग्रे त्रिष्कालं[५९२] स्मरतेऽथवा ॥ १४० ॥
सततं भक्तिपूर्वेण भैरवसमतां[५९३] व्रजेत् ।[५९४]
जराव्याधिविनिर्मुक्तो[५९५] भोगजालविवर्जितः[५९६] ॥ १४१ ॥
दुःखदारिद्र्यनिर्मुक्तो[५९७] विचरेत[५९८] यथासुखम् ।
तिष्ठते[५९९] सुचिरं कालं जीवन्मुक्तिधरः पुमान् ॥ १४२ ॥
अपमृत्युर्न[६००] बाध्येत[६०१] विघ्नजालविवर्जितः[६०२] ।
स्तवराजप्रभावेन[६०३] भवते नात्र संशयः ॥ १४३ ॥
गोपयेत् परशिष्याणां[६०४] न देयं यस्य कस्यचित् ।
पुत्रस्यापि न दातव्यं[६०५] भक्तिहीने[६०६] कदाचन[६०७] ॥ १४४ ॥
कुलाचारविलुप्ते च[६०८] न[६०९] दध्याद्[६१०] वै कदाचन[६११] ।
तान्त्रिकानां[६१२] न दातव्यं रक्षणीयं शरीरवत् ॥ १४५ ॥
मोक्षसद्भावविज्ञानं आत्मज्ञानप्रकाशकम्[६१३] ।
यः पुनः प्रातरुत्थाय[६१४] संस्मरेद्[६१५] देहनिर्णयम् ॥ १४६ ॥
आत्मज्ञानमसौ वेत्ति[६१६] स्तवबोधस्वरूपिणम्[६१७] ।
विधिनानेन[६१८] संपूर्णं[६१९] कृत्वा[६२०] दक्षः[६२१] क्षमापयेत् ॥ १४७ ॥
प्रसन्नः[६२२] परमेशानः स्तवराजेन तोषितः ।
ऊचुरेवं[६२३] परः शान्तः[६२४] ब्रूहि मे परमार्थतः ॥ १४८ ॥
स्तवराजेन महता[६२५] किमर्थं स्तवितस्त्वया[६२६] ।

दक्ष उवाच[६२७]

प्रारब्धं यन्मया देव यज्ञं[६२८] गङ्गातटे[६२९] शुभम् ॥ १४९ ॥
धर्मकामार्थसिद्ध्यर्थं[६३०] न सिद्धं मन्दबुद्धिना ।
मया नामन्त्रितो देवो[६३१] यज्ञं[६३२] विध्वंसितं ततः ॥ १५० ॥
युष्मत्कोपाच्च[६३३] संजातं शापभ्रष्टमहं[६३४] पुनः ।
मखस्थयाजकानां[६३५] च तेषामुद्वेगबन्धनम्[६३६] ॥ १५१ ॥
देवस्य कोपात् संजातं तत्[६३७] क्षमध्वं[६३८] महाप्रभो ।
ये गता ये प्रणष्टाश्च[६३९] ये च बद्धा महोदरे[६४०] ॥ १५२ ॥

The Benefits (phalaśruti)[177]

He who recalls it in front of the Transmission (krama)[178] or remembers it at the three times (of day) and always with devotion becomes equal to Bhairava.[179] (140cd-141ab)

Free of old age and disease, free of the net of worldly experience (bhoga), free of suffering and poverty, he may move about (in the world) as he pleases. (141cd-142ab)

(This) man is liberated in this life and abides (in this world) for a long time. He is not troubled by untimely death and, by the power of the King of Hymns, he is free of the net of impediments. There can be no doubt about it. (142cd-143)

It should be hidden from the disciples of others. It should never be given to (just) anybody, not even to (one's own) son if (he is) devoid of devotion. Nor should it ever be given to one fallen from the practice of Kula (kulācāra). (This), the knowledge of the essence of liberation that illumines the knowledge of the Self (ātmajñāna), should not be given to Tāntrikas,[180] (but) should be protected (as one does one's own) body. (144-146ab)

Again, he who after getting up in the morning recalls the teaching concerning the body (dehanirṇaya),[181] knows the knowledge of the Self which is the awakened understanding of (this) hymn. (146cd-147ab)

Dakṣa's Repentance and Forgiveness

Once Dakṣa had completed (his sacrifice) by this means (vidhi),[182] (he pleaded): "forgive (me)". The Supreme Lord was pleased, satisfied by the King of Hymns and, supremely peaceful, spoke thus: "tell me in truth, why have you praised (me) with the great King of Hymns?" (146-149ab)

Dakṣa said:

"O god, the auspicious sacrifice I started on the banks of the Ganges in order to gain merit (dharma), sexual fulfilment and wealth was not completed due to (my) stupidity. I did not invite (the foremost) god and so the sacrifice has been destroyed. This has happened because of your anger. Moreover, I have fallen (from Dharma) due to (your) curse and the sacrificers present at the sacrifice are afflicted with anxiety (udvega) brought about by the god's anger. Forgive (us) that (fault). O great lord! Be gracious to those who have fled (from the sacrifice), those who have been destroyed, those who are bound in the Great Pit (mahodara), so that they may no longer be born (again)." Once (Dakṣa) had said this - (149cd-153c)

तेषां[६४१] कुरु प्रसादं तु येन ते संभवं नहि[६४२] ।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

इत्युक्तं[६४३] सप्रसादं तु उत्तिष्ठ ऋषिपुत्रक ।। १५३ ।।
नष्टानां च प्रणष्टानां बन्धने ये च संस्थिताः[६४४] ।
तेषां कृता मया मुक्तिः सत्येद[६४५] च शुचिव्रत[६४६] ।। १५४ ।।
यज्ञारम्भं[६४७] कुरु प्राज्ञ मत्प्रसादेन[६४८] सिद्धिदम् ।
भवते नात्र संदेहः[६४९] शापस्यायं[६५०] महद् वरम्[६५१] ।। १५५ ।।
ज्ञात्वा चेदं तदा देवी इदं[६५२] वृत्तान्तमागतम्[६५३] ।
मत्संबन्धाच्च दक्षस्य अहं सा पापकारिणी ।। १५६ ।।
पितुर्यज्ञं[६५४] मया ध्वस्तं[६५५] आत्मानं शोधयाम्यहम् ।
ज्वलज्ज्वालोर्मिसंकाशमुद्दीप्य[६५६] परमानलम्[६५७] ।। १५७ ।।[६५८]
ज्वलन्तं चिन्तयित्वा तु मुद्रामण्डलमध्यतः ।
वज्रासनं ततो बध्वा स्मृताघोरेश्वरीकला[६५९] ।। १५८ ।।
कालाग्निना स्वयं दग्धा निर्धूमाङ्गारतां[६६०] गता ।
मृता भस्मगता[६६१] साध्वी[६६२] उत्तीर्णा मर्त्यलोकतः ।। १५९ ।।
पुनरेव[६६३] त्वहं जाता हिमवन्तस्य[६६४] मन्दिरे ।
अष्टमे[६६५] तु महाजन्मे[६६६] जाताहं भद्रकालिका[६६७] ।। १६० ।।
ज्ञात्वा च मे[६६८] पुरा वाणीं[६६९] हिमवन्तस्य[६७०] ईश्वरः ।
ईप्सते[६७१] पाणिग्रहणं[६७२] कालीं[६७३] मां दद[६७४] सुव्रत[६७५] ।। १६१ ।।
काली दत्ता[६७६] परिचर्ये[६७७] हिमवन्तेन सुन्दरी[६७८] ।
कैलासे[६७९] तु महाशैले[६८०] देवदेवस्य मन्दिरे ।। १६२ ।।
महादेशं[६८१] समुत्पन्नं सांप्रतं किञ्चिदन्वये ।
गुहावासस्य मध्ये तु विद्यते शाम्भवं[६८२] पदम् ।। १६३ ।।
गत्वा त्वनुग्रहं[६८३] तत्र भविष्ये तव सांप्रतम् ।
ज्ञात्वा चेदं पुरा देवी संजाता पश्चिमे गृहे[६८४] ।। १६४ ।।
कुलदेवी च कौलेशी[६८५] अधिकारे व्यवस्थिता ।

Śrīnātha said:

"O son of a sage! Arise (and be) with grace! I have liberated those who have been discomfited and killed and those who are in bondage: this is the truth, O one whose vow is pure! Start the sacrifice (again),[183] O wise one, by my grace it will, without a doubt, bestow success. This is the great boon of (my) curse." (153d-155)

The Goddess's Self-immolation, re-birth, marriage and the god's enlightenment

And then[184] when the goddess came to known what had occurred, (she said): "My father Dakṣa's sacrifice has been destroyed by me because (its destruction was) due to me. I am the sinner (and so) will purify myself!" (156-157ab)

Once stoked the supreme fire, brilliant with waves of raging flames and, having contemplated it burning fiercely in the middle of the Maṇḍala of Gesture (mudrā), she then sat on the adamantine seat (vajrāsana)[185] and recalled to mind the energy of Aghoreśvarī. She burnt herself with the Fire of Time and became (like) a smokeless, burning coal.[186] (This) wise woman, dead and reduced to ashes left the mortal world.[187] (157cd-159)

(The goddess continued): I was reborn in the temple of the Himalayas. In the eighth great rebirth, I was born (as) Bhadrakālikā. Having first recognised (jñātvā) my voice,[188] the Lord wished to get married (to me and so said) to Himavat: 'O observer of good vows, give me Kālī"." (160-161)

[189]Himavat gave the beautiful Kālī in devout attendance (to him in marriage) (paricarya)[190] in the temple of the God of the gods, that is, on the great mount Kailāsa. (Then) a great instruction (mahādeśa) arose: "Now there is something that is part of the tradition, namely, the Śāmbhava plane, that is in the middle of the Cave Dwelling. Having gone there now, I will be your grace."[191] (162-164ab)

And once (the god) came to know this, the goddess first arose (saṁjātā) in the Western House. She who is the goddess of the Kula (kuladevī) and the mistress of Kaula (kauleśī),[192] was established in authority.[193] (164cd-165ab)

आगतो देवदेवेशोऽनुग्रहार्थी महाप्रभुः ॥१६५ ॥
पारम्पर्यक्रमेणैव[६८६] तया तस्य त्वनुग्रहम्[६८७] ।
कृतं तच्छक्तिपातेन संपूर्णं[६८८] शुद्धवासना[६८९] ॥१६६ ॥
संजाता चर्चिका[६९०] देवी आज्ञा या मालिनीकुले ।
क्रामिता परमा दिव्या शाम्भवाज्ञामखण्डिता[६९१] ॥१६७ ॥

देवी आज्ञाप्रभावेन[६९२] विद्युत्पुञ्जशताकुला[६९३] ।
तेजोभाभिः सुसंदीप्ता दिव्यलिङ्गत्वमागता ॥१६८ ॥
एवं सा लिङ्गरूपेण कलिकाले तु चर्चिका ।
गृहे चन्द्रपुरे दिव्ये अधिकारे[६९४] व्यवस्थिता[६९५] ॥१६९ ॥

इत्यागमं[६९६] मया प्राप्तं[६९७] चतुर्थे तु महायुगे ।
पारम्पर्यमुखाम्नायं[६९८] शाम्भवं[६९९] कौलिकान्वये[७००] ॥१७० ॥

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते[७०१]
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते[७०२] विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये
कादिभेदे[७०३] आज्ञापारमेश्वरे स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्र–
संहितायां[७०४] अव्वाक्रमभाषिते[७०५] दक्षशापानुग्रहा–
धिकारो[७०६] नामानन्दः ॥ ३ ॥

(Then) the God of gods, the Great Lord, came desiring grace and she graced him in accord with the transmission of the tradition (pāraṁparyakrama).[194] Once that had been done completely by means of (her) grace (śaktipāta),[195] she whose past impressions are pure[196] became the goddess Carcikā who is the Command (that operates) in the Mālinīkula.[197] Supreme and divine, the Śāmbhava Command (śāmbhavājñā) was transmitted (krāmitā) unbroken.[198] (165cd-167)

By the power of the Command, the goddess, filled with hundreds of nets of lightning flashes and beautifully illumined by the lights of effulgent power (tejas), assumed the form of the Divine Liṅga.[199] In this way, during the Age of Strife, she is Carcikā in the form of a Liṅga and is established in authority in the divine House of the City of the Moon.[200] (168-169)

I[201] have received this tradition (āgama) in the fourth great Age. It is Śambhu's (śāmbhava) oral tradition (transmitted through the) series (of teachers) (pāraṁparyamukhāgama) within the Kaulika tradition (kaulikānvaya). (170)

This is the (third) chapter called Concerning Dakṣa's Curse and Grace. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for hundred and twenty-five thousand quarter. It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six (Thousand Verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (caturviṁśatsaṁhitā) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's Command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

चतुर्थानन्दः

श्रीकण्ठ उवाच[१]

एवं प्राप्त[२] स्वरूपेण त्वयाज्ञाशाम्भवं पदम्[३] ।
सर्वद्वन्द्वपरित्यागात् शान्तातीतं परापरम् ।। १ ।।

तेन त्वं गुरुर्मे[४] माता युक्त्यायुक्त[५] क्षमस्व माम्[६] ।
मातृणां सिद्धरुद्राणा[७] त्वमेका[८] हृदि[९] देवता ।। २ ।।
त्वं शक्तिर्मम[१०] रुद्रस्य मातरी[११] पश्चिमे गृहे ।
कामार्थिनो[१२] ह्यहं नेह[१३] आज्ञार्थी क्रमलुब्धकः ।। ३ ।।

दिव्यादिव्यक्रमौघस्य[१४] सन्तानस्य महोदयम्[१५] ।
तव शिष्यो ह्यहं सम्यक्[१६] उपसन्नः[१७] प्रसन्नधीः[१८] ।। ४ ।।
कथयस्व कुलाम्नायं पारम्पर्यक्रमागतम् ।

प्रत्ययाष्टौ[१९] च देवेशि कादिभेदं मतं मम ।। ५ ।।
दद[२०] मे परमे[२१] अम्बे[२२] यत् ख्यातं सप्तकोटिके[२३] ।

एवं वायुपुराणादौ लिखिताक्षरमालिका[२४] ।। ६ ।।
आज्ञाप्रत्ययहीनस्य[२५] देवदेवस्य निश्चयम्[२६a] ।
वैकल्प्य[२६b] भवते तस्मादाज्ञां याचामि[२७] पश्चिमे ।। ७ ।।

CHAPTER FOUR

Concerning the Mālinīstavarāja

Śrīkaṇṭha declares his Devotion to the Goddess and implores her for the Teachings

Śrīkaṇṭha said:

In this way you have attained, in accord with (its) own (true) nature, the plane of the Śāmbhava Command (śāmbhavājñāpada), beyond the tranquil (state of deep sleep) (śāntātīta)[1] which is (both) supreme (transcendence) and inferior (immanence), by abandoning all duality.[2] (1)

Thus, you, mother,[3] are my teacher. By virtue of (your) wisdom (yukti), forgive me (whatever I may have done) wrong (ayukta).[4] You are the sole deity in the heart of the mothers, Siddhas and Rudras. You are my energy, Rudra's mother[5] in the Western House. I do not desire sexual pleasure (kāma) here (from you).[6] I desire the Command and am greedy for the Transmission (krama).[7] (2-3)

I am your proper (samyak) disciple, attentive and of lucid intellect. Tell me the Kula tradition (kulāmnāya) that has come down through the transmission of the series (of teachers) (pāramparyakrama)), the great arising of the lineage (santāna) which is the current (ogha) of the transmission, divine and human.[8]
(4-5ab)

O mistress of the gods, (tell) me of the eight signs (of attainment) (pratyaya)[9] and the school (mata) of the division beginning with Kā (kādibheda).[10] Give me, O supreme mother, what is called (the knowledge of) the seventy million (verses).[11] (5cd-6ab)

In the same way (impart the teaching transmitted through) the little garland of letters (akṣaramālikā) written in the Vāyupurāṇa and other (such scriptures). (Give me), the God of the gods, who is devoid of the signs of attainment (pratyaya) and (your empowering) Command, the final purport (niścaya) (of the teachings). A state of uncertainty prevails (vaikalpyaṁ bhavate) (within me) and so I beg (for the empowering) Command (transmitted) in the Western (tradition).[12] (6cd-7)

श्रीकाराज्ञा[२८] पुनस्तस्य गुर्वाम्नाये प्रवर्तते[२९] ।
तत्र सा शाम्भवी आज्ञा श्रीनाथो[३०] लभते कलौ[३१] ॥ ८ ॥
मोक्षार्थं सर्वजन्तूनां[३२] अवतारं करिष्यति ।
पुराणार्थमिदं[३३] सत्यं त्वद्भक्तिसेवनादपि[३४] ॥ ९ ॥
श्रीमतं पश्चिमाम्नायं मूलान्वयक्रमागतम् ।

रजमण्डलनिर्मुक्तं[३५] जातिप्रणववर्जितम्[३६] ॥ १० ॥
सस्फुरं[३७] कौलिकाम्नायं[३८] गुर्वाम्नायं[३९] क्रमं वद ।

ऊचुरेवं[४०] महावाणीं[४१] तेजलिङ्गान्तवासिनी[४२] ॥ ११ ॥
तीव्राज्ञाधिष्ठिता[४३] देवी श्रुत्वा देवगिरां शुभाम् ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[४४]

यदेतत् पश्चिमं मार्गं श्रीक्रमं[४५] गुणवत्तमम्[४६] ॥ १२ ॥
आलयं[४७] सर्वसिद्धानां[४८] सविशेषं तु शाम्भवम् ।
आवेशकारकं शम्भो[४९] स्मरणादपि सिंहकम् ॥ १३ ॥

दशसप्तक्रमा[५०] ज्येष्ठा गुरुशिष्यक्रमेण तु ।
तेषामाज्ञाप्रसादेन अस्माकं[५१] च[५२] समागता ॥ १४ ॥
त्वं हि तेषां कथं देव शिष्यत्वे[५३] संभविष्यसि[५४] ।
ज्येष्ठाज्ञोल्लङ्घनाद्[५५] देव आज्ञायास्तमनं[५६] भवेत् ॥ १५ ॥
आज्ञाहीनः शोचनीयो[५७] गोत्रबाह्यो[५८] विधीयते ।
त्वं प्रभुः सर्वदेवानां न दृष्टं मे[५९] तवाधिकम्[६०] ॥ १६ ॥
गुरुत्वेऽहं[६१] कथं तस्माद्[६२] भवामि[६३] तव विग्रहे[६४] ।

श्रीकण्ठ उवाच

पारम्पर्यक्रमेणापि आज्ञा स्फुरति कौलिनी ॥ १७ ॥
यदि दृष्टं[६५] पदार्थं[६६] तु को दोषो विद्यते कुले[६७] ।
सारमेकं[६८] कुले कौले[६९] तेषां शिष्यमहं[७०] पुनः[७१] ॥ १८ ॥

(Thus) the Command (the god) possesses of the venerable (goddess) (śrīkārā) operates again in the Tradition of the Masters (gurvāmnāya). The goddess's (śāmbhavī) Command is there (and) Śrīnātha obtains (it) in the Age of Strife. In order to liberate everybody, he will come down into the world. This truth is the ancient purport (of the scripture) also (realised) by practising devotion to you. It is the Śrīmata, that is, the Western Tradition (paścimāmnāya) that has come through the transmission of the root lineage (mūlānvaya).[13] (8-10ab)

Tell (me this) Transmission (krama), the Tradition of the Masters, the Kaulika Tradition endowed with vibrant energy (sasphura)[14] that is free of the sphere of rajas and devoid of (the six) types (jāti) and praṇava.[15] (10cd-11ab)

Having heard the auspicious discourse of the god, the goddess who resides in the Liṅga of Fire (tejoliṅga),[16] inhabited by an intense Command (tīvrājñā),[17] uttered thus a mighty speech (mahāvāṇī). (11cd-12ab)

The venerable Vakrā said:

That which is this Western path is the Śrīkrama, the most excellent; it is the abode of all the Siddhas and, in a special way (saviśeṣa), a Śāmbhava (tradition). O Śambhu, it is a (Tradition of the) Lion (siṁhaka)[18] and brings about possession (āveśa)[19] by just recalling (it). (12cd-13)

(The goddess) Jyeṣṭhā, who is the sequence of seventeen (lunar energies) has come (here) by means of the sequence (krama) of masters and disciples by the grace of their Command and ours.[20] O god, how will you become their disciple? O god, by transgressing Jyeṣṭhā's Command, the Command declines. One who is devoid of the Command is lamentable and considered to be outside the clan (gotra).[21] You are the lord of all the gods, I have seen none greater than you. (Moreover) I am within your (very) form,[22] so how can I be (your) teacher? (14-17ab)

Śrīkaṇṭha said:

Kaulinī's [23] Command pulses radiantly also by virtue of the transmission through the series (of teachers) (pāramparyakrama) (just as it does when it is first transmitted). If (that ultimate) reality (padārtha) has been realised (dṛṣta lit. 'perceived'), than what defect can there be in the Kula?[24] There is (only) one essence in (both) Kula and Kaula[25] and (so) I am, once again, their disciple. (17cd-18)

या[७२] स्थिता उघमार्गेऽस्मिन्[७३] ज्येष्ठानुक्रमयोगतः ।
नाहं ज्येष्ठाकुले देवि एवं कुरुष्व नुग्रहम्[७४] ॥१९ ॥

त्वं त्राता गुरुर्मे[७५] श्रीमान्[७६] पूज्यामि[७७] त्वां त्रिमध्यतः ।
अत्र दोषं[७८] न पश्यामि गुरोराज्ञा[७९] स्वयंप्रभा[८०] ॥ २० ॥

मन्त्रो[८१] विद्या परामुद्रा योगिनी कुलदेवता ।
आज्ञा[८२] पञ्चविधा शक्तिः[८३] लिङ्गयोन्यां[८४] व्यवस्थिता ॥ २१ ॥

तत्रोदरे[८५] जगत् सर्वं क्रमं चापि[८६] महाक्रमम् ।
तत्[८७] प्रविश्य[८८] महादेवि आज्ञार्थी[८९] इह[९०] जन्मनि ॥ २२ ॥
दद[९१] मे परमे अम्बे[९२] भक्त्या ज्ञानं महाक्रमम् ।

शिष्ये भक्तिर्गुरोराज्ञा[९३] संप्राप्तिरुभयोर्यदा[९४] ॥ २३ ॥
तदासौ कौलिकी आज्ञा अवतारं प्रकुर्वति[९५] ।
तस्याश्रममिदं[९६] लिङ्गं त्वच्छक्तिकुलविग्रहम्[९७] ॥ २४ ॥

पारम्पर्यक्रमाम्नाये अधिकारं[९८] क्रमागतम्[९९] ।
आज्ञालिङ्गं महासिद्धं विकल्पमोहवर्जितम् ॥ २५ ॥
तस्य शास्त्रं[१००] च तन्त्रं[१०१] च लक्षपादाधिकं त्विदं ।

उपसन्नो महादेवि[१०२] देह्यनुज्ञां[१०३] रमां[१०४] प्रति[१०५] ॥ २६ ॥
अहं[१०६] निवेदितो[१०७] देवि मत्तुल्यो[१०८] नास्ति कश्चन[१०९] ।
निवेदितं त्वया[११०] भद्रे[१११] शरणागतवत्सले ॥ २७ ॥
गृहावतारसकलं[११२] मेरोरुपरि[११३] मूर्धनि ।

O goddess, the one who is the eldest (jyeṣṭhā)[26] in due order (anukrama) on this, the Path of the Current (of the teaching) (ughamārga) in the Kula of the Eldest One (jyeṣṭhākula) (is you) not me. Grace (me)! (19)

You are the saviour, my venerable teacher, I worship you in the midst of the three (transmissions). I see no defect here. The Command of the teacher is its own light.[27] (20)

The Command is the five-fold energy located in the womb (yoni) of the Liṅga (liṅgayoni). (These five aspects are) mantra, Vidyā, the supreme gesture (parāmudrā), the Yoginī and the deity of the Kula (kuladevatā). (21)

Here within it (atrodare)[28] is the entire universe, the Transmission (krama) as well as the Great Transmission (mahākrama). O great goddess, (I am the one who) desires the Command here in (this) life. O supreme mother! having entered that (Liṅga),[29] give me, for the sake of (my) devotion, the knowledge which is the Great Transmission.[30] (22-23ab)

Devotion in the disciple and the teacher's Command - if both have been attained then this Kaulikī Command descends (into the world).[31] Its sacred abode (āśrama) is this Liṅga whose form is your aggregate of energies (śaktikula). (23cd-24)

The authority in the tradition of the transmission through the series (of teachers) (pāramparyakramāmnāya) that has come through the Transmission is the Liṅga of the Command (ājñāliṅga), greatly accomplished (mahāsiddha), it is free of delusion and thought constructs. Its scripture (śāstra) and Tantra is this one (consisting) of a hundred and twenty-five thousand (verses).[32] (25-26ab)

O great goddess, (I have) approached (you with devotion) permit me to play (with you). O goddess, I have been told (by you) that no one is my equal. O fair one! the darling of (this devotee) who has come to take refuge! You have proclaimed the entire descent of the (Western) House onto the top of (mount) Meru on the head. (26cd-28ab)

कलौ मर्त्यावतार[११४] तु स्वशिष्याय निवेदयेत् ॥ २८ ॥
यागकाले[११५] सिद्धिद[११६a] स्यात् पूजितं वरदं भवेत् ।
तर्पितं दीक्षित[११६b] सर्वं अवतार[११७] प्रकुर्वति[११८] ॥ २९ ॥
अन्यायोपार्जित[११९] चापि[१२०] निष्फलं तु भविष्यति ।
आज्ञाभङ्गकरं तस्य उद्वेग[१२१] तु दिने दिने ॥ ३० ॥
गृहयाग[१२२] पुरा[१२३] कृत्वा पश्चात् संग्राह्य[१२४] तद् गृहम्[१२५] ।

श्रीकण्ठ उवाच[१२६]

ततः[१२७] स्तवेन दिव्येन[१२८] देवेनानन्दभृद्गिरा[१२९] ॥ ३१ ॥
दिव्यं स्तोत्रं समारब्ध[१३०] अशेषार्थप्रबोधकम् ।
मथित्वा तु परं तत्त्वं तेनेद[१३१] मालिनीस्तवम् ॥ ३२ ॥
सबीजं दण्डक[१३२] भक्त्या[१३३] रचित[१३४] तत्र पश्चिमे ।

तस्य सा देवतावाणी आदेशेन महौघवान्[१३५] ॥ ३३ ॥
तया सार्धं भवत्येवं मालिनीकुलविग्रहम्[१३६] ।
युक्तं द्वादशभिर्भेदैर्मूर्तिराज्ञावलोकितम्[१३७] ॥ ३४ ॥

ततः[१३८] स्तवेन महता[१३९] नाथ[१४०] आज्ञा[१४१] लभिष्यति[१४२] ।
उपसन्नस्तदा योगी श्रीकण्ठाज्ञामनुग्रहे[१४३] ॥ ३५ ॥
ईदृगनुप्रदानेन[१४४] वाक्पुष्पैः स्तुतिपूर्वकैः[१४५] ।
प्राणायामादिभिर्यज्ञैर्दिव्यवर्षशतं तपः[१४६] ॥ ३६ ॥
एकानुष्ठानमनसा[१४७] प्रस्तुतस्तुतिपूर्वकैः[१४८] ।
स्तुनोति[१४९] विविधैः[१५०] स्तोत्रैर्देवो[१५१] भुवनमालिनीम्[१५२] ॥ ३७ ॥

जय[१५३] त्वं मालिनीदेवि[१५४] निर्मले मलनाशिनि[१५५] ।
ज्ञानशक्तिः[१५६] प्रभुर्देवि[१५७] बुद्धिस्त्वं तेजवर्धनी[१५८] ॥ ३८ ॥

जननी सर्वभूतानां संसारेऽस्मिन् व्यवस्थिता[१५९] ।
माता वीरावली देवी[१६०] कारुण्यं कुरु वत्सले ॥ ३९ ॥

One should tell (only) one's own disciple of the mortal incarnation (martyāvatāra) (of the deity in the world) during the Age of Strife. During the sacrifice he (will) bestow accomplishment and, worshipped, grant boons. Once all have received libation and have been initiated, (the deity) will descend (into the world). (Whatever) one earns illegally will be fruitless and bring about the transgression of the Command. (Thus he will be) worried every day.[33] (So) once performed a (purifying) sacrifice in (one's own) home (gṛhayāga), that tradition (gṛha) should be embraced (saṁgrāhya) again.[34] (28cd-31ab)

Śrīkaṇṭha said:

Then the god, having deeply pondered (mathitvā lit. `churned') the Supreme Principle,[35] began (to intone) with divine praise and blissful voice, a divine hymn that enlightens as to the entire meaning (of the scripture). Thus there, in the Western (tradition) he composed with devotion a composition in prose (daṇḍaka) with seed-syllables (called) the Mālinīstava. (31cd-33ab)

His is this speech of the deity (devatāvāṇī) which, by virtue (of the goddess's) Command (ādeśa), is endowed with the great current (of the teaching). In this way, the form of the Mālinīkula[36] is accompanied by that (Speech). Possessing twelve divisions,[37] it is viewed (with grace) by the Command of (the goddess's divine) Form (mūrti).[38] (33cd-34)

Thus, by (this) great hymn the lord will get the Command. Then Śrīkaṇṭha, the yogi, approached (the goddess with devotion) in order (to receive) the grace of (her) Command. By means of this kind of offering, with the flowers of speech heralded by hymns of praise and with sacrifices of breath control and the like, (he performed) austerities for a period of a hundred divine years. (Then), with (his) mind solely intent on worship, the god praised (the goddess) Bhuvanamālinī ('She who wears the worlds as her garland')[39] with many kinds of hymns. (35-37)

The Hymn to Mālinī - the Mālinīstava[40]

Be victorious,[41] O goddess Mālinī,[42] you who are pure![43] The destroyer of impurity! O goddess, (you) are the lord (prabhu), the power of knowledge,[44] you are the intellect and you increase the radiant energy (tejas) (of consciousness).[45] (38)

(You) are the mother of all living beings[46] residing in this world of transmigratory existence. (You are) the mother, the goddess Virāvalī.[47] O dear one, be compassionate![48] (39)

ऐँ[१६१] जयति परमतत्त्वनिर्वाणसंभूततेजोमयी[१६२] । (१)

ईँ[१६३] निःसृता[१६४] व्यक्तरूपा परा ज्ञानशक्तिस्त्वमिच्छा[१६५] क्रिया । (२)

ॐ[१६६] ऋज्विरेखा[१६७] पुनः सुप्तनागेन्द्रवत्कुण्डलाकाररूपा[१६८] प्रभुर्नादशक्तिस्त्व[१६९] संगीयसे । (३)

हाँ[१७०] भासुराकाररूपा[१७१] सुरूपा[१७२] शिवा ज्येष्ठनामा च वामाथ[१७३] रौद्री[१७४] अनाख्याम्बिका[१७५] बिन्दुरूपावधूतार्धचन्द्राकृतिस्त्व[१७६] त्रिकोणा एकार – ऐकार – ईकार – अंकारसंयोजितैकत्र यत् तत्त्वमापद्यते[१७७] । (४)

ऐँ[१७८] व्युत्क्रमेणोत्थिता तत्स्वरूपा[१७९] भगाकारावस्थायिनी[१८०] । (५)

अं अः[१८१] आदितत्त्वोद्भवा[१८२] । (६)

ह्रीँ[१८३] आदिक्षान्तयोनिस्वरूपा[१८४] च[१८५] श्रीकण्ठसंमोहिनी[१८६] । (७)

फ्रेँ[१८७] रुद्रमाता[१८८] तथानन्तशक्तिः[१८९] सुसूक्ष्मा त्रिमूर्त्यामरेशार्घिनी[१९०] । (८)

हकारौकार[१९१] एकत्र संबोधनी[१९२] बिन्दुस्वरूपिणी[१९३] । (९)

क्राँ[१९४] ह – र – ईकारबिन्द्वङ्किता[१९५] योगिनी सिद्धयोगेश्वरी । (१०)

ह्रौँ[१९६] योगमायातत्त्वा[१९७] भारभूतिः[१९८] । (११)

ह्रीँ[१९९] तिथीशात्मिका । (१२)

काँ[२००] स्थाणुभूता हराख्या च झण्टीशभौतीशसद्यात्मिकानुग्रहेशार्चिता[२०१] । (१३)

ह्रूऔँ[२०२] क्रूरदेहानुगा[२०३] त्वं महासेनसंभोगिनी[२०४] । (१४)

ह्स्रूऔँ[२०५] षोडशान्तामृता[२०६] बिन्दुसंदोहिनी शाम्भवी श्वेतनिष्यन्ददेहप्लुता[२०७] (१५)

AIṀ![49] (The goddess who) is the radiant energy (tejas) born (saṁbhūta)[50] from Nirvāṇa, the Supreme Principle, is victorious![51] (1)

ĪṀ! (You are) Parā (the Supreme One) who has emerged (out of the godhead) in manifest form; you are the power of knowledge, will and action.[52] (2)

OṀ! (Your form is originally like) a straight line then it is in the form of a (round) earring, (coiled) like the sleeping serpent king. You are praised as the lord, the energy of Sound (nādaśakti).[53] (3)

HĀṀ! (Your) form is brilliantly luminous (bhāsurā) and beautiful. (You) are Śivā and (the goddess) called Jyeṣṭhā as well as Vāmā, Raudrī, and Ambikā (who is) Anākhyā.[54] (Your) form is a (dimensionless) Point (bindu), You are Avadhūtā[55] and your form is the Half Moon. (You are the female) Triangle (trikoṇā) which, conjoined together in one place with the letters E, AI, Ī and AṀ, attains to the (ultimate) principle.[56] (4)

AIṀ! Of that nature (you) have arisen (out of the godhead) in the reverse order (vyutkrameṇa) and abide in the form of the Yoni.[57] (5)

AṀ! AḤ! (You are the goddess who has) come forth from the First Principle.[58] (6)

HRĪṀ! (You who are) the source (yoni of the letters) beginning with `A' and ending with `KṢa' infatuate Śrīkaṇṭha (A).[59] (7)

PHREṀ! (You are) Rudra's mother[60] and so too, the power of Ananta (the Endless One - Ā), Susūkṣmā (the Extremely Subtle - I), Trimūrti (the Trinity - Ī), Amareśā (the Mistress of the Immortals U) and Arghinī (She who Offers Lustrations Ū).[61] (8)

(You are) the Point, the (awakening) invocation (saṁbodhanā) together (in one place) (ekatra) within the letter Ha and the letter O.[62] (9)

KRĀṀ! (You are) the yoginī[63] Siddhayogeśvarī[64] marked with Ha, Ra, the letter Ī and the Point. (10)

HRAUṀ! (You are) Bhārabhūti (ṛ), the reality (tattva) of Yogamāyā[65] (11)

HRĪṀ! (You) are Tithīśā (Ṛ).[66] (12)

KĀṀ! (You are) Sthāṇu (the Pillar) (ḷ) and are called Hara (Ḹ). You are worshipped by Jhaṇṭīśa (E), Bhautīśa (AI), Sadyātmika (O) and the Lord of Grace (Anugraheśa) (AU). (13)

HRŪAUṀ! You are the companion of the one whose body is Krūra (i.e. Ṁ) and enjoy sexual pleasure with Mahāsena (Ḥ).[67] (14)

HSVŪAUṀ! (You are) the nectar at the end of the sixteen. (You are the goddess) Śāmbhavī who milks the (lunar) Drop (bindu) and (your) body is flooded with (its) white secretions.[68] (15)

ऐँ[२०८] अशेषसम्यक्परानन्दनिर्वाणसौख्यप्रदे[२०९] । (१६)

ह्रीँ देवि भैरवि[२१०] । (१७)

ह्स्रीँ[२११] भैरवोद्यानक्रीडानुसक्ते[२१२] परे[२१३] । (१८)

सः परामालिनि[२१४] मलयावलि[२१५] । (१९)

सौः[२१६] त्रिभुवनावलि[२१७] । (२०)

व्लूँ[२१८] भगनायकि । (२१)

ईँ भगेश्वरि । (२२)

घुः[२१९] घोरे । (२३)

थः[२२०] थघोरे[२२१] । (२४)

ह्रीँ परमघोरे । (२५)

फ्रेँ[२२२] अमोघे[२२३] । (२६)

ख्फ्रेँ[२२४] परमकुलयोगेश्वरि[२२५] । (२७)

ह्रेँ[२२६] मातृचक्रेश्वरि[२२७] । (२८)

ड्म्र्यूँ[२२८] डाँ डाकिनि । (२९)

र्म्र्यूँ[२२९] राँ राकिनि । (३०)

ल्म्र्यूँ[२३०] लाँ लाकिनि । (३१)

क्म्र्यूँ[२३१] काँ काकिनि । (३२)

स्म्र्यूँ[२३२] साँ साकिनि । (३३)

ह्म्र्यूँ[२३३] हाँ हाकिनि ।[२३४] । (३४)

य्म्र्यूँ[२३५] याँ याकिनि । (३५)

AIṀ! (O goddess who) bestows the entire joy of Nirvāṇa which is right (samyak) and supreme bliss![69] (16)

HRĪṀ! O goddess Bhairavī![70] (17)

HSRĪṀ! O Parā, intent on the sport[71] (that takes place) in Bhairava's garden! (18)

SAḤ O Malayan range (malayāvalī)! (You are) Parā, (the goddess) Mālinī.[72] (19)

[73]SAUḤ! O series of the Three Worlds (tribhuvanāvalī)![74] (20)

VLŪṀ! O Mistress of the Yoni (Bhaganāyakī)![75] (21)

ĪṀ! O Goddess of the Yoni (Bhageśvarī)![76] (22)

GHUḤ! O Terrible One (Ghorā)! (23)

THAḤ! O Thaghorā! (24)

HRĪṀ! O Supremely Terrible One (Paramaghorā)![77] (25)

PHREṀ! O Infallible One (Amoghā)![78] (26)

KHPHREṀ! O Mistress of Supreme Kula Yoga! (27)

HREṀ! O Mistress of the Wheel of the Mothers (Mātṛcakreśvarī)![79] (28)

ḌMRYŪṀ ḌĀṀ! O Ḍākinī! (29)

RMRYŪṀ RĀṀ! O Rākinī! (30)

LMRYŪṀ LĀṀ! O Lākinī! (31)

KMRYŪṀ KĀṀ! O Kākinī! (32)

SMRYŪṀ SĀṀ! O "Sākinī! (33)

HMRYŪṀ HĀṀ! O Hākinī! (34)

YMRYŪṀ YĀṀ! O Yākinī![80] (35)

डरलकसहम्र्यूँ[२३६] फेत्कारगम्भीरघोरेश्वरि[२३७] । (३६)

जुँ[२३८] त्रैलोक्यमहान्तारिके[२३९] । (३७)

ताँ[२४०] तारिणि । (३८)

खखफ्रेँ[२४१] ख आकाशलिङ्गोदितमहामातृशाकिनि[२४२] । (३९)

रुँ[२४३] रुद्रमालार्चिते । (४०)

रुँ[२४४] रुद्रशक्तिः खगे[२४५] । (४१)

रौँ[२४६] रुद्रयोगेश्वरि[२४७] । (४२)

ह्रः[२४८] रुद्रसिद्ध्यारुहे[२४९] । (४३)

हे[२५०] हे हा[२५१] हा[२५२] हस[२५३] हस[२५४] हाँ[२५५] हास्यहासिनि[२५६] । (४४)

रुऔँ[२५७] रुद्रचामुण्डे[२५८] । (४५)

व्लूँ[२५९] उग्रे[२६०] । (४६)

ऊँ[२६१] उग्रोग्रनायकि[२६२] । (४७)

ऐँ[२६३] समस्तमन्त्रतेजोमये । (४८)

ख्फ्रेँ[२६४] ज्ञानविज्ञानगम्भीरचिन्नाथमानोत्सुके[२६५] । (४९)

आँ अनेकयुगसञ्चितचर्चितचरणे[२६६] । (५०)

नाँ[२६७] नानाकाररूपे । (५१)

द्राँ[२६८] देवि सुभगे[२६९] । (५२)

क्लीँ क्लिन्ने[२७०] । (५३)

क्लीँ कामिनी[२७१] । (५४)

ḌARALAKASAHAMRYŪṀ![81] O Goddess (you who by your) howl are deep and formidable! (36)

JUṀ! O Mahāntārikā[82] of the Triple World! (37)

TĀṀ! O Tāriṇī![83] (38)

KHAKHAPHREṀ! O Great Mother Śākinī,[84] within the Void who has arisen out of the Liṅga of Space![85] (39)

RUṀ! You who are worshipped as Rudra's garland![86] (40)

RUṀ! O (you who) move in the Void! (You are) Rudra's energy.[87] (41)

[88]RAUṀ! O Rudrayogeśvarī! (42)

HRAḤ! O you who are mounted on Rudra's yogic power (siddhi)![89] (43)

HE HE HĀ HĀ HASA HASA HĀṀ! O you who laugh at the comedy (of fettered existence)! (44)

RUAUṀ! O Rudracāmuṇḍā! (45)

VLŪṀ! O Fierce One (Ugrā)![90] (46)

ŪṀ! O Mistress of the most fierce of the fierce! (47)

AIṀ! You who are the radiant energy (tejas) of all mantras! (48)

KHPHREṀ! You who delight in the honour (māna) of the Lord of Consciousness, profound by virtue of (his) knowledge and wisdom! (49)

ĀṀ! You whose virtuous conduct has accumulated and been contemplated for many aeons! (50)

NĀṀ! You who have many forms! (51)

DRĀṀ! O goddess of fair looks![91] (52)

KLĪṀ! O Klinnā (Wet One)! (53)

KLĪṀ! O passionate one (kāminī)! (54)

काँ[२७२] कामराजेश्वरि[२७३] । (५५)

क्षः सर्वग्रहाणां[२७४] ताडनि[२७५] । (५६)

ह्स्रूआँ[२७६] मेरुनायकि[२७७] । (५७)

ह्सः[२७८] ब्रह्मचारिणि[२७९] । (५८)

क्ष्मः अवधूते । (५९)

श्रीँ[२८०] श्रीमान्देवि[२८१] वरप्रदे[२८२] । (६०)

कुँ[२८३] सुदीप्तकनकाकारे[२८४] । (६१)

ह्रौँ परमकुलयोगेश्वरि[२८५] । (६२)

स्त्रः[२८६] सिद्धमाते[२८७] विभुः[२८८] शब्दराशीति[२८९] योन्यार्णवे[२९०] । (६३)

हूँ[२९१] आर्णवे[२९२] । (६४)

वाँ[२९३] वाग्विशुद्धा शिवा[२९४] सिद्धवागेश्वरि[२९५] । (६५)

माँ मातृका[२९६] त्वमिच्छा[२९७] क्रिया मङ्गला[२९८] सिद्धलक्ष्मी[२९९] विभूतिः[३००] सुभूतिर्मतिः[३०१] शाश्वताख्या[३०२] पराख्येति[३०३] नारायणी[३०४] । (६६)

ऊँ देवि[३०५] चिन्तामणि[३०६] चिन्ताह्लादकारिणि[३०७] । (६७)

छाँ चित्तज्ञानप्रबोधनि[३०८] । (६८)

हूँ[३०९] सिद्धबलपराक्रमे[३१०] । (६९)

हूँ[३११] परमविच्चेश्वरि[३१२] । (७०)

खः सुसूक्ष्मे । (७१)

KĀṀ! O Kāmarājeśvarī (Mistress of the Lord of Passion)! (55)

KṢAḤ! (You) who chastise (tāḍinī) all the (evil influences of the) planets! (56)

HSRŪAUṀ O goddess (īśvarī) of Meru! (57)

HSAḤ! O chaste one (brahmacāriṇī)! (58)

KṢMAḤ! O renouncer (avadhūtā)![92] (59)

ŚRĪṀ! O venerable goddess (śrīmāndevī)! Bestower of boons! (60)

KUṀ! You whose form is (like) well heated gold! (61)

HRĪṀ! O mistress of the Yoga of the Supreme Kula ! (62)

SRAḤ![93] O Mother of the Siddhas (Siddhamātṛ)![94] O Ocean of the Yoni,[95] the all-pervasive lord (prabhu), the Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi)![96] (63)

HŪṀ! O Ocean (of Speech)![97] (64)

VĀṀ! O Siddhavāgeśvarī (Accomplished Mistress of Speech)! (You are) Vāgviśuddhā (Pure in Speech) and Śivā.[98] (65)

MĀṀ! You are Mātṛkā (the Little Mother (of Speech)),[99] Icchā (Will),[100] Kriyā (Action), Maṅgalā (the Auspicious),[101] Siddhalakṣmī,[102] Vibhūti (Treasure), Subhūti (Auspicious Wealth), Mati (Intelligence), (the goddess) called Śāśvatā (Eternal) and Parā (Supreme),[103] and Nārāyaṇī.[104] (66)

ŪṀ! O auspicious one! (You who are) the Wish-granting Gem! (You who) bring joy to (one's) thoughts![105] (67)

CHĀṀ! (You who) awaken the knowledge (innate in the) mind (cittajñāna)! (68)

HŪṀ! (You who are) the valour of accomplished strength! (69)

HŪṀ! O Supreme Vicceśvarī! (70)

KHAḤ! O Extremely subtle one! (71)

वौँ[३१३] वीरमाते[३१४] । (७२)

अँ[३१५] अमे[३१६] । (७३)

आँ[३१७] देवगन्धर्वसिद्धासुरमाते[३१८] । (७४)

हूँ[३१९] रक्ष रक्ष[३२०] । (७५)

राँ सुरक्तावलि[३२१] । (७६)

हौँ सर्ववर्णविभूषितावलि[३२२] । (७७)

ह्रीँ[३२३] रक्तचण्डा करालेक्षणा[३२४] । (७८)

भाँ[३२५] भीमरूपा[३२६] । (७९)

ह्यँ[३२७] इह[३२८] संवीक्ष्य । (८०)

यँ[३२९] संवीक्ष्य[३३०] । (८१)

यः हँ[३३१] त्रुटिलवनिमिषार्धमात्रातिसूक्ष्मातिसूक्ष्मे[३३२] । (८२)

हाँ[३३३] हाँ[३३४] तारय तारय । (८३)

ग्लूँ[३३५] देवि सर्वगतमाते[३३६] । (८४)

ॠँ[३३७] महोच्छुष्मयोगप्रिये[३३८] । (८५)

हौँ[३३९] त्वं[३४०] जया[३४१] त्वं विजया[३४२] जयन्त्या[३४३] त्वं चापराजिता[३४४]
रुद्रशक्तिर्महामोहमाया[३४५] परा । (८६)

ह्रीं रौद्रबलावलि[३४६] । (८७)

हैँ[३४७] रुद्रसंमोहनि[३४८] । (८८)

VOṀ! O Mother of the Heroes![106] (72)

AṀ! O Amā (New Moon)![107] (73)

ĀṀ! O Mother of the Siddhas, heavenly musicians (gandharva) and the gods![108] (74)

HŪṀ! Protect! Protect! (75)

RĀṀ! O assembly of passionate (beings)! (76)

HAUAṀ! O assembly (of all things) adorned with every colour! (77)

HRĪṀ! (You are) Raktacaṇḍā (Red Furious One)[109] (whose) look is terrifying (karālekṣaṇā). (78)

BHĀṀ! (Your) form is ferocious (bhimarūpā).[110] (79)

HYAṀ! Gaze (upon me) here! (80)

YAṀ! Gaze (upon me)! (81)

YAḤ! HAṀ! O (you who are as) extremely subtle as the extremely subtle mere half of a twinkling of the eye (ardhanimeṣa) of a fraction of a moment (truṭilava)! (82)

HĀṀ! HĀṀ! save (me)! save (me)! (83)

GLŪṀ! O goddess! Omnipresent mother! (84)

ṛṀ! (You who) are beloved (priyā) in union with Mahocchuṣma![111] (85)

HAUṀ! You are Jayā, you are Vijayā and you are Jayantyā and Aparājitā,[112] Rudra's energy, the great delusion that is Māyā and Parā (the Supreme). (86)

HRĪṀ! (You who) are the lineage of Rudra's might! (87)

HAIṀ! (You who) infatuate Rudra![113] (88)

स्ह्क्ष्म्ल्क्र्यूँ[३४९] त्वं नवात्मानन्ददेवस्य[३५०] चोत्सङ्गयानाश्रिता[३५१]
मन्त्रमार्गानुगैर्मातृभिर्वीरपानानुरक्तैः[३५२] सुभक्तैश्च[३५३] संपूज्यसे[३५४] । (८९)

ग्स्प्म्न्लूँ[३५५] देवि पञ्चामृतैर्दिव्यपानोत्सवैः[३५६] पूज्यसे[३५७] । (९०)

अं अः[३५८] ह हे ऐँ हौँ[३५९] एकजन्मद्विजन्मत्रिजन्मचतुःपञ्चषट्सप्तजन्मोद्भवैस्तैस्तैर्नारैः[३६०]
शुभैः फल्गुषैस्तर्प्यसे[३६१] । (९१)

स्वौँ[३६२] अलिफल्गुप्रिये[३६३] । (९२)

म्लूँ[३६४] मन्त्रविद्याव्रतोद्भासिनि[३६५] मुण्डकङ्कालकापालिभिर्दिव्यचर्यानुरूढैः[३६६] (संपूज्यसे)[३६७]
। (९३)

सौँ[३६८] वः स्वरूपे । (९४)

काँ[३६९] मुण्डधारिणि[३७०] । (९५)

रूः[३७१] रूः[३७२] रु रु खट्वाङ्गधारिणि । (९६)

क्लीँ[३७३] त्रैलोक्यक्षोभकारिणि । (९७)

क्लूँ[३७४] कौलमातङ्गिनि । (९८)

क्लूः[३७५] नागयज्ञोपवीतमेखलावधूते[३७६] । (९९)

आँ परमानन्ददायिनि[३७७] । (१००)

ऐँ ॐकार–नमः–स्वाहा–स्वधाकार–वौषड्–वषट्कार–हूँफट्कारजातिभिरेतैश्च[३७८]
मन्त्राक्षरोच्चारोत्तीर्णपूर्णा[३७९] संपूज्यसे[३८०] । (१०१)

थँ[३८१] द्वात्रिंशपरमभैरवि[३८२] उभयपञ्चकसंपुटस्थे[३८३] । (१०२)

SHKṢMLVRYŪṀ! You are on the path close to[114] the god who is the bliss of Navātman[115] and are worshiped by those who recite mantras, the good devotees, who follow the path of mantra and are dedicated to drinking the Heroes' drink (vīrapāna)[116]. (89)

GSPMNLŪṀ! O goddess, you are worshipped with the Five Nectars[117] and festivals of sacred drinking. (90)

AṀ AḤ HA HE AIṀ HAUṀ! (you are) lustrated with the auspicious meat of those men who are born (with just) one, two, three, four, five, six (or) seven lives (left before they achieve liberation).[118] (91)

SVAUṀ! (O goddess) who delights in meat and liquor![119] (92)

MLŪṀ! (O goddess) who illumines mantra (mantrodbhāsinī), Vidyā and (the observance of) vows![120] (You are worshipped) by Kāpālins[121] with shaved heads and skeletons, intent on the Divine Practice (divyacaryā).[122] (93)

SAUṀ! VAḤ! (O goddess who is) innate nature (of all things)! (94)

KĀṀ! (O goddess) who bears a (severed) head! (95)

RŪḤ RŪḤ RU RU! (O goddess) who bears the (ascetic's) staff (khaṭvāṅga)! (96)

KLIṀ! (O goddess) who agitates the Triple World! (97)

KLŪṀ! O Kaulamātaṅginī![123] (98)

KLŪḤ! O renouncer (avadhūtā)[124] whose girdle is a sacred thread of snakes! (99)

ĀṀ! Bestower of Supreme Bliss! (100)

AIṀ! Transcendent and full, you are worshipped when the letters of (your) mantra are uttered with these types (jāti) - OṀ, NAMAḤ, SVĀHĀ, SVADHĀ, VAUṢAṬ, VAṢAṬ, HŪṀ and PHAṬ.[125] (101)

THAṀ! O Supreme Bhairavā of the Thirty-two (lettered Vidyā)! You who reside in the capsule (saṁpuṭa) of both the groups of five![126] (102)

वाँ वाग्बीजावलिस्त्व[३८४] च चत्वारिंशतिवर्णद्वयाधिका[३८५] कीर्त्यसे ह्स्रूऔँ[३८६]
वामहस्तस्थिताक्षसूत्रावलीजापिभि:[३८७] साधकै: पुत्रकैर्मातृभिर्मण्डले[३८८]
दीक्षितैर्योगिभिर्योगिनीवृन्दमेलापकै:[३८९] । (१०३)

ह्सौँ[३९०] संवर्तमण्डलान्तावस्थिते[३९१] अनुग्रहावलोकिनि । (१०४)

ख्फ्रेँ खेचक्रनायकि[३९२] । (१०५)

ऋँ ॠँ[३९३] ओँ औँ[३९४] चक्रमेलापकारिणि[३९५] । (१०६)

क्ष्लूँ[३९६] रुद्रक्रीडालसै:[३९७] पूज्यसे[३९८] । (१०७)

भृँ[३९९] भृकुटी[४००] करालभैरवि भैरवप्रिये[४०१] । (१०८)

व्रूँ[४०२] वीरवीरेन्द्रवीरवन्दिते[४०३] । (१०९)

भैँ[४०४] उन्मत्तक्रीडालसे[४०५] । (११०)

यूँ[४०६] योगिनीना[४०७] योगसिद्धिप्रदे । (१११)

म्लाँ देवि[४०८] त्व[४०९] पद्मपत्रोपमैर्लोचनै:[४१०] स्नेहपूर्णैस्तु[४११] यं पश्यसे[४१२] खँ[४१३] तस्य
दिव्यान्तरिक्षस्थिता[४१४] सप्तपातालसत्खेचरीसिद्धिरव्याहता[४१५] वर्तते । (११२)

हूँ[४१६] भक्तितो य: पठेद्[४१७] महादण्डकमेककालं द्विकाल[४१८] त्रिकालं शुचि: संस्मरेद् य:
सदा मानव: सोऽपि[४१९] चौराग्निशस्त्रार्णवे[४२०] पर्वताग्रेऽपि संरक्षसे[४२१] (११३)

VĀṀ! (You who are) the series of the seeds of Speech[127] and the (Vidyā) of Forty-two (syllables) praised HSRŪAUṀ! in the maṇḍala by adepts (sādhaka) who repeat mantras holding (their) rosary in the left hand,[128] by (your spiritual) sons (putraka), by the Mothers and by initiated yogis who take part in the gatherings with troupes of Yoginīs. (103)

> HSAUṀ! (O goddess) who resides within Saṁvartāmaṇḍala[129] and look is gracious![130] (104)
>
> KHPHREṀ! O mistress of the Wheel in the Void (khecakra)![131] (105)
>
> ṛṀ ṚṀ OṀ AUṀ! (O goddess) who brings about the gathering of the assembly (cakramelāpa)! (106)
>
> KṢLŪṀ! You are worshiped by those who delight in Rudra's sport. (107)
>
> BHṚṀ! O beloved! (You are) Bhṛkuṭī, the Bhairavī of Karālabhairava. (108)
>
> VRŪṀ! (O goddess who is) praised by the heroes who are the Heroes and Lords of Heroes. (109)
>
> BHAIṀ! (O goddess who) delights in mad play![132] (110)
>
> YŪṀ! (O goddess who) bestows yogic accomplishment to Yoginīs![133] (111)

MLĀṀ! O goddess he whom you look at with (your) lotus-like eyes full of love (KHAṀ!) possesses the true and unobstructed yogic power that abides in the divine firmament to wander in the Void (khecarīsiddhi) and the seven netherworlds.[134] (112)

HŪṀ! You afford protection, even on the top of a mountain, in (the midst of) thieves, fire, weapons and the sea to the pure man who reads (this) great Daṇḍaka out of devotion, regularly once, twice or thrice (a day) and one who recollects (it) constantly.[135] (113)

फेँ फेँ फेँ[४२२] देवि पुत्रानुरागान्महालक्ष्मि[४२३] ये[४२४] हेमचौरान्यदारानुरक्ताश्च[४२५]
ब्रह्मघ्नगोघ्नमहादोषदुष्टा[४२६] विमुच्यन्ति[४२७] संस्मृत्य[४२८] त्वदीयं मुखं[४२९] पूर्णचन्द्रानुकारि[४३०]
स्फुरद्दिव्यमाणिक्यसत्कुण्डलोद्घृष्टगण्डस्थलम्[४३१] येऽपि बद्धा
दृढैर्बन्धनैर्नागपाशैर्भुजपादार्गलैस्तेऽपि[४३२] बन्धाद्[४३३] विमुच्यन्ति[४३४] । (११४)

फ्रेँ[४३५] ग्रस्ता[४३६] ग्रहैर्ये बहुभूतवेतालरक्षसैश्च[४३७] संपीडितास्तेऽपि ते[४३८] नामसंकीर्तनाद्
देवि मुच्यन्ति[४३९] घोरैर्महाव्याधिभिः[४४०] संस्मृत्य पादारविन्दद्वयं[४४१] ते । (११५)

हूँ[४४२] महाकालि कालाग्नितेजप्रभे[४४३] । (११६)

कः[४४४] स्कन्दगोविन्दब्रह्मेन्द्रचन्द्रार्कपुष्पायुधैर्मौलिमालालिसत्पद्मकिञ्जल्कसत्पिञ्जरैः[४४५]
शोभसे[४४६] । (११७)

ह्स्रूऔँ[४४७] करवीरश्मशाननाथावलि[४४८] । (११८)

ग्लौँ[४४९] गुहाटवीपर्वतोद्यानवनमण्डितकदम्बाम्बिके[४५०] । (११९)

हस्क्ष्रैँ[४५१] करवीरगुहावासिनि[४५२] । (१२०)

च्छौँ[४५३] चतुर्दशभुवनोद्यानवासिनि[४५४] ।[४५५] (१२१)

कृकराट्[४५६] त्रैलोक्यनिर्घोषिणि[४५७] । (१२२)

डाँ डाँ[४५८] डामराम्बिके[४५९] । (१२३)

ज्म्रूफ्रुँ[४६०] ह्स्ख्फ्रेँ[४६१] पादुकाक्रमलिङ्गोदितशक्त्यन्ते[४६२] महाकारणं शाम्भवं[४६३] पदं
कादिमण्डलौघमहाज्ञानपुस्तकोऽयं[४६४] तत्र वीरावलीशब्दराशिप्रभाभास्वरम्[४६५] । (१२४)

PHEṀ PHEṀ PHEṀ! O goddess! O Mahālakṣmī! Out of love for (your) children (even) those who steal gold and desire other (mens') wives and those spoilt by great defects (such as) the murder of a Brahmin or a cow are freed once they have recollected your face. Like the full moon, it shines radiantly with the divine jewels and fine earrings that play on (your) cheeks. Even those who are bound with firm, snake-like fetters, their arms and feet with chains are freed from bondage. (114)

PHREṀ! O goddess, by praising your name, having recalled your two lotus-feet, those who are under the influence of (adverse) planets as well as those who are troubled by many ghosts, Vetālas and Rakṣasas and by great and terrible diseases are freed (from them). (115)

HŪṀ! O Mahākālī! You who are the light of the radiant energy (tejas) of the Fire of Time! (116)

KAḤ! You are beautiful with the charming network of lotus filaments of the garland that (decorates your) head and the bees (that drink from them) and by virtue of (the gods) Skanda, Govinda, Brahmendra, the Moon, the Sun and Kāmadeva (who attend on you).[136] (117)

HSRŪAUṀ! O (you who are) the series of Nātha (yogis)[137] (who reside) in Karavīra, the cremation ground![138] (118)

GLAUṀ! O mother of the Kadamba tree,[139] (you who are) adorned with groves, gardens, mountains, bowers and caves![140] (119)

HASKṢARAIṀ! (O goddess) who lives in the cave of Karavīra![141] (120)

CCHAUṀ! (O goddess) who lives in the gardens that are the fourteen worlds![142] (121)

KṛKARĀṬ! (O goddess) who proclaims (the teaching to) the triple world! (122)

ḌĀṀ ḌA! O mother Ḍāmarā! (123)

JMRŪPHRUṀ HKṢPHREṀ! The Great Cause, the Śāmbhava plane, is (attained) at the extremity of the energy that has emerged from the Liṅga within the Transmission of the (Master's) Sandals (pādukākrama).[143] This is the book of great wisdom that belongs to the current (of the teachings) of the Kādimaṇḍala and there shines radiantly with the light of (the goddess) Vīrāvalī (and the god who is the) Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi).[144] (124)

ऐँ ह्रीँ श्रीँ ख्फ्रेँ ह्स्रूआँ[४६६] दिव्यलिङ्गासनं मण्डलोत्कृष्टनिर्वाणयोगावलीशक्तिभिः[४६७] ह्क्ष्मौँ[४६८] शुद्धस्फटिकसंकाशाकाशपरमनिर्वाणमहाबाणपञ्चकोपेताज्ञाधिकारपरमविश्राम–भूमिकासकलकलाभूतोन्मादमदनसंक्रमं[४६९] सागमं[४७०] योगिनीसिद्धं वन्दितं सतता–भिनन्दितं[४७१] विद्याम्नायौघगद्यपद्यैश्चतुष्पादाभिध्यातसर्वार्थसंवित्संबोधं[४७२] संबुध्यसे[४७३] सर्ववीराम्बिके[४७४] । (१२५)

भैँ भैँ भैँ[४७५] भैरवि[४७६] भैरवस्ते शरणागतोऽहं[४७७] आज्ञार्थिनोऽहं[४७८] लिङ्गाकाशभैरवि क्षमस्वापराधं[४७९] शिवे[४८०] उमे जगन्माते[४८१] कालिके[४८२] कुलकमलगुहागहनवासिनि[४८३] मालिनीस्तवनात्[४८४] तुभ्यं समयनन्दिनोऽहं[४८५] चरणवन्दिनोऽहं[४८६] कारुण्यादनुकम्पस्व[४८७] मामिति[४८८] (१२६)

मालिनीस्तवराजं[४८९] तु आदिनाथावतारितम्[४९०] ।
प्रेर्यमाणा[४९१] महावाणी आज्ञयानन्दप्रेरिता[४९२] ॥ ४० ॥
आज्ञामनुग्रहार्थाय[४९३] अधिकारार्थहेतुना[४९४] ।

बालक्रमस्य समये[४९५] क्रमाग्रे पठते[४९६] तु यः ॥ ४१ ॥
क्रमात् सिद्धिस्तदा[४९७] तस्य अणिमादिगुणाष्टकम् ।
आनन्दपदसंस्पर्शो[४९८] उच्चारादेव[४९९] जायते ॥ ४२ ॥

त्रिष्कालमेककालं[५००] वा एकचित्तः समाहितः ।
बीजसंख्याधिकारेण[५०१] दिव्यावेशः[५०२] प्रवर्तते ॥ ४३ ॥
आज्ञामनुग्रहं[५०३] धन्यं वाचासिद्धिर्न[५०४] संशयः[५०५] ।

AIṀ HRĪṀ ŚRĪṀ KHPHREṀ HSRŪAUṀ! the seat (of the goddess), the Divine Liṅga[145] is praised and always lauded by the energies of the series (of states that accompany) the excellent Yoga of Nirvāṇa within the maṇḍala - HKṢAUṀ - (it is praised) along with the scripture (āgama), secured (siddha) by the Yoginīs (as is) the transmission of the passionate ecstasy (unmādamadana) which, as the entire (aggregate of) energies (sakalakalā), is the supreme plane of repose of the authority of the Command endowed with the five great arrows of the Supreme Nirvāṇa of Space, (translucent and brilliant) like pure crystal. O Mother of all the Heroes! You awaken (that) realisation (saṁbodha) of the insight (saṁvit) into the entire reality (artha) contemplated by the four parts (of the scripture) by means of the verses and prose of the current (of the teaching of this) the Tradition of Knowledge (vidyāmnāya).[146] (125)

BHAIṀ! BHAIṀ! BHAIṀ! O Bhairavi! I am Bhairava who has come to take refuge in you. I desire the Command. O Bhairavī who are the Liṅga of Space![147] Forgive (me my) sin![148] O Śivā![149] O Umā! O mother of the universe! O Kālikā! You who live in the abyss of the cave of the Lotus of Kula![150] By extolling (stavana) (the glories of) Mālinī to you I praise (your) feet and laud (your) Rule. Out of compassion be gracious towards me! (126)

Benefits of the Hymn and Admonition to Secrecy

The Mālinīstavarāja was brought down (to earth) by Ādinātha.[151] It is the great voice (mahāvāṇī)[152] (inwardly) impelled by the Command and impelled by bliss in order to graciously confer the Command[153] so that (one may acquire) authority. (40-41ab)

He who reads it in front of the Transmission (krama), in the Rule (samaya) of the Transmission of the Child,[154] will (first achieve) accomplishment (siddhi) from the Transmission[155] and then the eight yogic powers (guṇa), including the capacity to become small at will (aṇimā) and the rest, are his.[156] By just uttering it (he makes) contact with the plane of bliss. (41cd-42)

(If) one is one-pointedly attentive (to the recitation of this hymn), (at all) three times (of the day) or (just) one time (a day), a divine penetration (of energy) (divyāveśa) takes place by the authority (adhikāra) of the contemplation (saṁkhyā) of the seed - syllables (uttered during the recitation of this hymn).[157] (And one obtains) the wealth which is the grace of the Command and the Accomplishment of Speech (vācāsiddhi).[158] There can be no doubt about it! (43ab-44ab)

एवं क्रमेण वै तस्य[५०६] मन्त्राम्नायमनेकधा[५०७] ।। ४४ ।।
अदृष्टविग्रहे शान्ते परतत्त्वे गतिं[५०८] लभेत्[५०९] ।

एकधा स्मरणात् सर्वं मन्त्रविद्याक्रमं लभेत्[५१०] ।। ४५ ।।
द्विधा एव परिज्ञानं त्रिधा[५११] चाम्बापदं[५१२] लभेत् ।

गोपयेत् परशिष्याणां पारम्पर्यविवर्जिताम्[५१३] ।। ४६ ।।
अहंकारेऽधिरूढानां[५१४] दम्भिकानां[५१५] न दापयेत् ।

एवं स्तुता[५१६] महादेवी भैरवेन महात्मना ।। ४७ ।।
ततो लिङ्गं विनिर्भिद्य निर्गता परमेश्वरी[५१७] ।

वदते[५१८] सिद्धनाथस्य[५१९] लिङ्गस्था लिङ्गरूपिणी ।। ४८ ।।
पूर्वप्रीतिवशाच्छम्भो मैत्रीभावेन भावनात् ।
भावग्राह्यं कुलं कौलं ददामि तव निश्चयम्।। ४९ ।।
मनसा वचसा स्नेहात् महाकौलिकमादिशेत् ।

आमन्त्रितो यदा देव्या[५२०] तदा मित्रत्वमागतः[५२१] ।। ५० ।।
तेनायं सिद्धनाथोऽत्र[५२२] विख्यातो मित्रसंज्ञकः ।

आद्यारभ्यात्र[५२३] मद्भागे स्वामित्वं तव कौलिके ।। ५१ ।।
भवनाज्ञाधरो मन्त्री कौलीशश्चाधिकारिणः[५२४] ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[५२५] अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते विद्यापीठमार्गे[५२६] विमलभेदोत्तरषट्कनिर्णये[५२७]
कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे स्वामिनिमते[५२८] श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्र–
संहितायां अव्वाक्रमभाषिते[५२९] मालिनीस्तवराजाधिकारो
नामानन्दः ।। ४ ।।[५३०]

Thus one progressively (kramena) obtains the manifold teaching concerning mantra and (thus) achieves the condition (gati) within the Supreme (transcendental) Principle that is tranquil and invisible. (44cd-45ab)

By recalling it once one attains the entire transmission (krama) of mantras and Vidyās, just twice, complete knowledge and thrice, the plane of the Mother.[159] (45cd-46ab)

It should be kept hidden from the disciples of others, devoid of the lineage (pāramparya). It should not be given to the deceitful and the proud. (46cd-47ab)

The Goddess Bursts out of the Liṅga and graces the God

Then after the great soul, Bhairava had praised the Great Goddess in this way, the Supreme Goddess broke open the Liṅga and emerged (from it).[160] And she who resides in the Liṅga and whose form is the Liṅga[161] spoke to Siddhanātha.[162] (47cd-48ab)

"O Śambhu! Out of (our) prior affection and due to (your steadfast) attitude (bhavana) and friendship, I am giving you the certain knowledge (niścaya), namely, Kula and Kaula that can (only be) grasped by means of Being (bhāvagrāhya)." (Thus) by mind and by speech, out of love, she taught (the teachings concerning) the great Kaula reality (mahākaulika). (48cd-50ab)

When he was invited (in this way) by the goddess, he came in friendship (mitratvamāgata) and so this Siddhanātha is known here by the name Mitra (Friend).[163] (50cd-51ab)

(The god said:) "O (goddess) Kaulikā, you who are a part of me! Here from today onwards it is you who are the master (svāmitvaṁ tava)." And Kaulīśa (also), who recites mantras and is the bearer of the Command of contemplation (bhavanājñā), was endowed with authority. (51cd-52ab)

(This is the fourth) chapter called Concerning the Mālinīstavarāja. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) consisting of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru which (extends) for a hundred and twenty-five thousand (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha) which is the ultimate purport of the Subsequent Six (Thousand Verses) of the Pure Division (vimalabhedottara-ṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata which is the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Transmission of the Mother (avvākrama).

पञ्चमानन्दः

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१]

यदेतत् कौलिकं ज्ञानं क्रममण्डलधीपुरम्[२] ।
दातुं न विहितं देव भक्तिस्ते[३] रतिकामतः[४] ।। १ ।।

पूर्वस्नेहवशात्[५] प्रीतिस्तेन[६] शिष्यः[७] कथं मम ।
गुरुशिष्यविपर्यासं[८] अयुक्तं शूलपाणिने[९] ।। २ ।।
कृतेनापि च देवेश उपहासः प्रवर्तते ।
अनुलोमस्य मार्गस्य[१०] विलोमाच्च[११] महद् भयम् ।। ३ ।।
बुद्धिहानिर्मनोग्लानिरयुक्ताचरणाद्[१२] भवेत्[१३] ।
यावन्न गुरुशिष्यत्वं क्लेशं[१४] यावन्न दासवत्[१५] ।। ४ ।।
तावत् कुलक्रमे[१६] सिद्धिः कुतो भवति मन्त्रिणः[१७] ।
न शिष्यं[१८] त्वां[१९] प्रवक्ष्यामि न भवामि[२०] अहं गुरुः ।। ५ ।।
इतः[२१] सूत्रक्रमं शम्भो दीयते[२२] तत् कुलक्रमम्[२३] ।
भवान् ज्ञानी महाविद्वान् शिष्यत्वे[२४] नैव सा[२५] सुधीः ।। ६ ।।
शिष्ये[२६] भक्तिर्गुरोर्ज्ञानं[२७] संवित्तिरुभयोर्यदा[२८] ।
तदा सा जायते दीक्षा अन्यथा च[२९] विडम्बिका ।। ७ ।।

श्रीनाथ उवाच[३०]

यत्[३१] पुरासीश्च[३२] त्वं[३३] भार्या अस्म्यहं[३४] पूर्वमन्मथः[३५] ।
उभौप्रीतिवशानन्दे[३६] कामस्यान्ते[३७] यथा पुनः ।। ८ ।।
तथा त्वमन्यदेही स्यात्[३८] अहं मर्त्यशरीरिणः[३९] ।
आवयोः परिवर्तेन[४०] संसारस्तच्च[४१] कामिकम्[४२] ।। ९ ।।
तथा क्रमेण शिष्योऽहं त्वं मातामिति कल्पिता[४३]
नैव दोषक्रिया[४४] चात्र मन्त्रसंकेतकं तपः ।। १० ।।
भवतामिति[४५] संप्राप्ते त्वं च सिद्धः[४६] कुलक्रमे ।

CHAPTER FIVE

Śrīnātha's Consecration with the Command (ājñābhiṣeka)

The God Seeks to Persuade the Goddess to Accept Him as Her Disciple

The venerable (goddess) Kubjikā said:

[1]O god, your devotion is due to a passionate desire for sex (ratikāmataḥ)[2] (and so) it is not proper (for me) to give (you) this Kaulika knowledge namely, the Kramamaṇḍala which is the abode of the (enlightened) intellect (dhī).[3] (1)

(I also feel) affection (for you) because of (our) previous love and so how can (you be) my disciple? It is not right, O bearer of the trident, to reverse the (roles of) the teacher and the taught.[4] And even if it is done, O lord of the gods, (it gives rise to) derision. There is great fear in reversing (the normal) forward (anuloma) path.[5] By behaving improperly the intellect is damaged and the mind withers (glāni).[6] Obstructing affliction (kleśa) (persists) as long as there is no (relationship) between master and disciple. As long as (the disciple does) not (behave) like a servant how can he who recites mantras achieve success (siddhi) in the Kula transmission (kulakrama)? I will not (ever) say that you are (my) disciple. I am not the teacher. O Śambhu, (it is) from hence[7] that the scripture (sūtrakrama),[8] namely, the Kulakrama is given (to others). You sir are wise (jñānin) and a great scholar, that intelligence is certainly not (found) in the condition of a student. If the disciple possesses devotion and the teacher knowledge[9] and both possess (an illumined) consciousness, then (a true) initiation takes place. Otherwise its is a deceitful one.[10] (2-7)

Śrīnātha said:

And just as you were previously (my) wife, I was previously your lover.[11] Just as, in the bliss at the conclusion of passion, swayed by our love (we make love) again, similarly may you again became another embodied being and I (became) a mortal embodied being. It is because of our transformation that the world of transmigratory existence (has come into being) and is (thus full of) passion. In the same way, I am by turns (krameṇa) the disciple[12] and you are conceived to be the mother (of the universe).[13] And there is no bad action (doṣakriyā)[14] here (in this, in fact) it is (a form of) austerity that accords with the teaching of mantra.[15] And when it becomes yours it is you who are attained in the Kulakrama.[16] (8-11ab)

एवं क्रमेण शिष्योऽहं स्थितः[४७] पूर्वसमुच्चये[४८] ॥ ११ ॥
क्रमस्याग्रे मण्डलस्याग्रे[४९] युष्मदग्रे प्रसन्नधीः ।[५०]
परिवर्त्य स्वरूपेण तुभ्यं मह्यं यथार्थतः ॥ १२ ॥
तथा[५१] मे[५२] प्रीतिपूर्वेण[५३] कुरु ज्ञानप्रकाशनम्[५४] ।
शिष्योऽहं तव कल्याणि त्वं माता मे प्रतीकुरु[५५] ॥ १३ ॥
एवं तु आवयोः प्राप्तं उत्तीर्णं[५६] पूर्वसंग्रहम्[५७] ।
तस्मादनुग्रहार्थाय[५८] स्नेहेन पश्यसे[५९] मम ॥ १४ ॥

नास्ति सिद्धिः[६०] कलौ तन्त्रे[६१] चतुर्थे तु महायुगे[६२] ।
सिद्ध्यन्ति निश्चयं चात्र श्रीमच्चन्द्रपुरे गृहे ॥ १५ ॥
मण्डले सावधानोऽहं भवे[६३] जन्मनि जन्मनि ।
एवमाज्ञाक्रमं ब्रूहि संहितार्थसमुच्चयम्[६४] ॥ १६ ॥
येन विज्ञानमात्रेण कम्पते देहपञ्जरम् ।
कौलिकं तु परं[६५] ज्ञानं[६६] उपदेशं वदस्व मे ॥ १७ ॥

त्वमेकाकाशलिङ्गं तु आसनं पृथिवी त्वियम्[६७] ।
चराचरं त्वयि[६८] लीनं[६९] तेन त्वं लिङ्गरूपिणी ॥ १८ ॥

त्वं मन्त्रस्त्वं परा विद्या त्वमाज्ञा त्वं परापरा ।
त्वं सिद्धिस्त्वं च शक्तिस्त्वं[७०] शरणागतवत्सले ॥ १९ ॥

त्वच्छक्त्या[७१] प्रेरितोऽहं च भवे[७२] जन्मनि जन्मनि ।
अहं धन्यतनुर्मर्त्यो[७३] यस्त्वयाराधने[७४] क्षमः ॥ २० ॥

विशेषक्रमविज्ञानं भवेत् सिद्धिप्रदं मतम् ।
सिद्धिरूपाश्रमैकत्वं[७५] विनयेनोपगम्यते[७६] ॥ २१ ॥

In this way, in due order (krameṇa) I am the disciple in the initial aggregation (samuccaya) (of the teaching). So, reveal (this) knowledge to me with affection. Just as in front of the Krama, the maṇḍala and you, (the adept) whose intellect is content, (makes offerings) to you and I, as is proper, alternating (between us) according to (our) nature. O auspicious one, I am your disciple and you my mother.[17] Help me! The previous collection (of teaching's) (pūrvasaṁgraha)[18] was acquired from us in this way and fully learnt (uttīrṇa). Therefore, look upon me with love in order to grace (me). (11cd-14)

There is no accomplishment (siddhi) (to achieve) in Tantra[19] during the Age of Strife, the fourth great aeon.[20] (But initiates) achieve realisation (niścaya) here in the House of the venerable City of the Moon.[21] In the maṇḍala, I am attentive in (this world of transmigratory) existence life after life. And so expound the transmission of the Command (ājñākrama), namely, the aggregate of the meaning of (this) scripture (saṁhitā), merely by knowing which the cage of the body trembles.[22] Impart the teaching, which is supreme Kaulika knowledge, to me.
(15-17)

The God Praises the Goddess in the Liṅga

[23]You are the one Liṅga of the Sky (ākāśaliṅga) and the seat, which is this earth.[24] The moving and immobile (universe) is merged (līna) in you and so you (O goddess) are the Liṅga.[25] (18)

O beloved of those who come to take refuge (in you)! You are mantra. You are the Supreme Vidyā. You are the Command. You are (both) inferior (immanence) and supreme (transcendence). You are yogic accomplishment (siddhi) and you are power (śakti).26

By your power I am impelled into phenomenal existence life after life. I am that mortal who possesses a blessed body and due to you is capable of worshipping (you).[27] (20)

The special knowledge of the Transmission (krama) is considered to be that which bestows accomplishment (siddhi). By virtuous conduct (vinaya) one comes to understand the oneness which is the hermitage (āśrama) whose nature is accomplishment.[28] (21)

तदेव तपयुक्तस्य[७७] लिङ्गस्य खेचरस्य च ।
व्यक्ताव्यक्तस्य शुद्धस्य नादिफान्ते[७८] स्थितस्य च ।। २२ ।।
सिंहसंकेतदेहस्य[७९] मालिनीक्रममध्यत: ।
मया निवेदितात्मान[८०] साष्टाङ्गगतिपूर्वकम्[८१] ।। २३ ।।

एतद्[८२] भक्त्याश्रमं[८३] चात्र देवि तुभ्यं निवेदितम् ।
शिष्यत्वेन न संदेहो[८४] न त्वत्परतरं धनम्[८५] ।। २४ ।।

सिद्ध्यसे[८६] नात्र संदेहो भक्तश्चाज्ञां[८७] लभेत्[८८] स्फुटम्[८९] ।
शिष्ये भक्तिर्गुरोर्ज्ञानं[९०] आज्ञालब्धं[९१] कुलागमम्[९२] ।। २५ ।।

मुद्रा ज्ञानशलाका या भक्तियुक्ते प्रवर्तते ।
प्रसन्ना भव देवेशि दर्शनं देहि[९३] साम्प्रतम् ।। २६ ।।

शरीरं न मया[९४] दृष्टं लिङ्गं[९५] दृश्यति[९६] केवलम् ।
शुद्धहेममयं दिव्यं भ्रमते[९७] अग्निदीपवत् ।। २७ ।।

तेन मे[९८] विभ्रमं[९९] चित्ते आत्मानं प्रकटं कुरु ।
लिङ्गस्य[१००] स्फोटनं कृत्वा प्रत्यक्षा[१०१] भव मे प्रभो[१०२] ।। २८ ।।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१०३]

लिङ्गस्फोटं[१०४] कृतं[१०५] शम्भो निष्क्रान्ताहं सुवर्चसा ।
कुटिलाकृतिरूपेण त्रिष्कोणाननभीषणा[१०६] ।। २९ ।।

श्यामा[१०७] रक्ता त्रिनेत्राहं कालानलसमप्रभा ।
सिंहावलोकसंपन्ना तेन सिंहावलोकिनी ।। ३० ।।

दृष्ट्वा त्वां भैरवानन्दं[१०८] लज्जासंकुचिता अहम्[१०९] ।
संजाता वक्रिका[११०] तेन अष्टाङ्गकरभूषिता ।। ३१ ।।

I have made known with profound obeisance (aṣṭāṅgagatipūrva)[29] that same (oneness), the essential nature (ātman) of the Liṅga endowed with austerity (tapas)[30] that moves in the expanse (of transcendent reality) (khecara). Pure and both manifest and unmanifest, it is established in the Mālinī order of the alphabet (nādiphānta) and its body is the Lion's Convention (siṁhasaṁketa) in the middle of the Mālinīkrama.[31] (22-23)

That (maṇḍala), O goddess, is the hermitage of devotion, and it was here that it was made known to you because (you then assumed the state of) a disciple.[32] (But) there can be no doubt that there is no greater wealth than you. (24)

You attain success, there is no doubt about it, and the devotee clearly attains the Command. Devotion is in the disciple and knowledge in the teacher and the Kula scripture (āgama) is (then) attained by the Command.[33] (25)

The Gesture (mudrā), which is the Scalpel of Knowledge,[34] operates within one endowed with devotion. Be pleased, O mistress of the gods, give (me) now a vision (darśana) (of yourself). (26)

I have not seen (your) body; only the Liṅga is visible. Made of pure gold and divine, it moves like a flame of fire. (27)

And so there is delusion in my mind. Make yourself clearly manifest! O lord (prabhu),[35] having burst apart the Liṅga become visible to me! (28)

The Emergence of the Goddess from the Liṅga and the God's Empowerment

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

O Śambhu, the Liṅga has been burst apart[36] and I of beautiful lustre have emerged (from it) in a crooked form, horrific and (my) face the Triangle.37

I am dark blue and red.[38] I have three eyes and (my) light is like the Fire of Time.[39] The gaze I possess (is like that of a) lion and so (I am called) `she who has the lion's gaze' (siṁhāvalokinī).[40] (30)

When I saw you, who are Bhairava's bliss, I became bent over with bashfulness (lajjāsaṁkucitā)[41] thus I became Vakrikā (the Little Crooked One) adorned with the rays of (my) eight limbs.[42] (31)

अहं जाता तदा वक्रा[१११] दिव्यदेहा[११२] महाबला ।
दृष्टमात्रेण[११३] विद्धस्त्वं इदं तथ्यं मया कृतम् ।। ३२ ।।[११४]

श्रीनाथ उवाच[११५]

अहं विद्धस्त्वया शक्त्या विह्वलो ह्यवलोकनात् ।
न ते दृष्टं मया कायं निद्राघूर्मिवशं गतः[११६] ।। ३३ ।।
न शृणोमि न पश्यामि परचेतापहारितः[११७] ।
तदाहं च त्वया देवि वेधितश्चावलोकनात्[११८] ।। ३४ ।।

एतत्प्रत्ययसंप्राप्ते वेधदीक्षा कुलक्रमे[११९] ।
श्रुतिर्मतिर्मनोदृष्टिश्चेतो[१२०] धृतिः[१२१] क्षमेति[१२२] च ।। ३५ ।।
अन्यचित्तगतो विद्धः[१२३] शक्त्यावेशेन[१२४] विग्रहः[१२५] ।
प्रत्ययाज्ञा स्वरूपेण प्राप्ता ज्ञानशलाकया ।। ३६ ।।

सिद्धानामाद्यसिद्धोऽस्मि[१२६] मित्राख्यो[१२७] नामनामतः[१२८] ।
तव भक्तो ह्यहं दासो गतिस्त्वं शरण[१२९] परम् ।। ३७ ।।[१३०]

साष्टाङ्गप्रणिपातोऽय[१३१] कृत[१३२] दण्ड[१३३] त्रिधा पुनः ।[१३४]
आज्ञाधरमह[१३५] शिष्यस्त्वमेका व्यापिनी गुरुः[१३६] ।। ३८ ।।
जातः शिष्यो ह्यहमेको[१३७] गोत्राचारेण[१३८] धीमतः[१३९] ।

क्षमस्व देवदेवेशि संक्रान्ताज्ञामनुग्रहात्[१४०] ।। ३९ ।।
वक्रिके त्वं प्रभुर्माता देवी विश्रामभूमिका[१४१] ।
त्वं गतिस्त्वं च मे स्वामी[१४२] तवाहं शरणं गतः ।। ४० ।।[१४३]
स्वर्गापवर्गयोर्देवि[१४४] त्वमेका योनि[१४५] मातरः[१४६] ।

I then became Vakrā (the Crooked One), (endowed with) a divine body and very strong. You were pierced merely by being seen (by me). It is I who have brought about this reality (tathya). (32)

Śrīnātha said:

I have been pierced by you who are power (śakti). I am in distress because of (your) gaze. Deprived of consciousness by sleep and inebriation (ghūrmi),[43] I have not seen your body. Stolen away by another mind, I neither see nor hear (anything).[44] Then, O goddess, I was pierced by you with (your) gaze. (33-34)

The initiation by piercing into the Kulakrama takes place when these signs (pratyaya) obtain[45] namely, (divine) hearing, intuition (mati), mental perception (manodṛṣṭi), intelligence (cetas), strength of character (dhṛti) and forbearance (kṣamā). (Thus) the form (of the disciple) present in the mind of another (i.e. the teacher) is pierced by the penetration of energy (śaktyāveśa) and the (initiation), which is the Command of Insight (pratyayājñā), is attained according to its essential nature by means of the scalpel of knowledge.[46] (35-36)

(Bhairava said): "Amongst accomplished yogis (siddha), I am the first to have attained the goal (ādyasiddha) and according to (the worldly way of) naming, I am called Mitra.[47] I am your devotee. (I am your) servant. You are the means of success (gati), the supreme cause. (37)

(I have) prostrated with all eight of (my) limbs having (extended my body on the ground like a) stick, three times again.[48] I am the disciple, the bearer of (your divine) Command, and you are the one, all-pervading teacher. As (I am) wise (dhīmat) I have become (your) sole disciple by practicing according (to the teachings of our spiritual) clan (gotrācāra).[49] (38-39ab)

O mistress of the god of gods, pardon (me and vouchsafe) by (your) grace the Command that has been transmitted (to you) (saṁkrāntājñā). O Vakrikā, you are the lord (prabhu),[50] the mother, the goddess and the plane of rest. You are the way (gati) and you are my master (svāmin), I have taken refuge in you. O goddess, you are the mother (of the universe) and sole source (yoni) of (both) heaven and liberation. (40-41ab)

अद्य मे सफलं जन्म अद्य मे सफलं तपः ।। ४१ ।।
अद्य मे विभव[१४७] प्राप्तं आज्ञा संक्रमिताद्य[१४८] मे ।
अद्य योगीश्वरोऽहं च त्वत्प्रसादाच्च भैरवि[१४९] ।। ४२ ।।
उपदेशं क्रिया[१५०] शिक्षा[१५१] साम्प्रतं कथयस्व मे ।
सिद्धवाक्यमिदं श्रुत्वा देवी वचनमब्रवीत् ।। ४३ ।।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१५२]

मया च तव मित्रत्वं पूर्वस्नेहान्निवेदितम् ।
मित्रदेव[१५३] महासिद्ध[१५४] आज्ञानाम[१५५] प्रकीर्तितम् ।। ४४ ।।

पुष्पाः[१५६] सप्तदशाराध्या[१५७] आत्माष्टादशकम्[१५८] तथा ।
दशसप्तक्रमे[१५९] ज्येष्ठा आराध्या[१६०] मम सुव्रत ।। ४५ ।।
तवैते[१६१] पूजनीयास्तु शाम्भवाः सिद्धनायकाः[१६२] ।
उन्मनादिक्रमेणैव[१६३] यावत् श्रीनाथचिञ्चिणी[१६४] ।। ४६ ।।
पुष्पसंकेतकं शम्भो अज्ञात्वा[१६५] नैव मुक्तिभाक् ।

बालक्रमं तथा देव पीठाः[१६६] पीठेषु देवताः[१६७] ।। ४७ ।।
बाह्ये तु देवताश्चाष्टौ[१६८] नादिफान्ता[१६९] तु कौलिकी ।

उत्तिष्ठ स्फुरते[१७०] चाज्ञा[१७१] क्रमयुक्ते[१७२] महेश्वर[१७३] ।। ४८ ।।
त्वमेक[१७४] चान्वये[१७५] गोत्रे[१७६] मयाद्य प्रकटीकृतम् ।

रक्षणीयमिदं ज्ञान[१७७] पारम्पर्यक्रमागतम् ।। ४९ ।।
योगिनीमुखनिष्क्रान्त[१७८] मेरुमार्गविनिर्गतम्[१७९] ।

कुमारीयोगिनीभक्तिः[१८०] समयद्रोहनिग्रहम्[१८१] ।। ५० ।।
कर्तव्य[१८२] च मदीयाज्ञा यथेच्छा विचरेत्[१८३] सुखम् ।

Today my birth has born fruit. Today my austerity is fruitful. Today I have attained glorious power (vibhava). Today the Command has been transmitted to me. And today, O Bhairavī, by your grace, I am the Lord of Yogis.[51] Now, pray tell me the teaching, the ritual and the instruction." When she had heard this, the speech of an accomplished being, the goddess uttered (the following) words. (41cd-43)

The Goddess's Teaching

The venerable Vakrā said:

"Out of (our) previous affection I have proclaimed your friendship.[52] O Mitradeva! Mahāsiddha! The name of the Command has been lauded. (44)

The Flowers that are the object of worship are seventeen and the Self is the eighteenth. O observer of fine vows, my (energy called) Jyeṣṭhā should be worshipped (jyeṣṭhā ārādhyā mama)[53] in the Sequence of Seventeen (parts). These are your Śāmbhava leaders (nāyaka) of the Siddhas and should indeed be worshipped. O Śambhu, without having known the Convention of the Flower (puṣpasaṁketaka) that extends in due order from the Transmental (unmanā) up to Śrīnātha and Ciñciṇī, one is not liberated. (45-47ab)

O god, such also is the case[54] with the Transmission of the Child (bālakrama),[55] the sacred seats (pīṭha), the deities in the sacred seats[56] and, externally, the eight deities and (the goddess) Kaulikī who is Mālinī (nādiphāntā).[57] (47cd-48ab)

Maheśvara arise! The Command pulses effulgent within one who is conjoined to the transmission (kramayukta). Today I have made you manifest as the one (reality to be realised) in the tradition (anvaya), that is, (in my spiritual) clan (gotra). (48cd-49ab)

This knowledge has come forth from the mouth of the Yoginī.[58] It has emerged from the Path of Meru and come down through the line (of teachers). It should be (carefully) guarded. (49cd-50ab)

(One should have) devotion for the Virgins (Kumārīs) and Yoginīs,[59] suppress (nigraha) attacks[60] on the Rule (samaya) and execute my Command. (One who does this) may wander about joyfully. (50cd-51ab)

लोका भक्तिरता यत्र तत्र ज्ञानं प्रकाशय[१८४] ॥ ५१ ॥
गुटिका[१८५] पादलक्षा[१८६] तु पातनीयावलोकनात्[१८७] ।
चन्द्रार्थोऽनुग्रहेत्[१८८] सर्वान्[१८९] संसाध्य[१९०] आज्ञया खग[१९१] ॥ ५२ ॥
इति ज्ञानप्रभावोऽयं तवोक्तं[१९२] हि तु[१९३] भैरव ।

निग्रहानुग्रहे[१९४] शक्तिर्भवते[१९५] तव निश्चयम्[१९६] ॥ ५३ ॥
मर्त्यलोके व्रजित्वा तु कुरु क्रीडां[१९७] यथेच्छया ।

जरामरणनिर्मुक्तः[१९८] खगतिस्तव नित्यशः[१९९] ॥ ५४ ॥
विमुक्तः सर्वपापेभ्यस्त्वं[२००] हि काञ्चनवद्[२०१] यथा ।

ब्रह्महत्यादिपापानि ये कुर्वन्ति दिने दिने ॥ ५५ ॥
तव स्मरणमात्रेण नश्यन्ते[२०२] नात्र संशयः ।

ये[२०३] ध्यायन्ति सदा तुभ्यं[२०४] त्रिष्कालस्मरणादपि[२०५] ॥ ५६ ॥
ते सिद्धा नात्र संदेहो विमुक्ताः पाशबन्धनैः[२०६] ।

ये निन्दन्ति तु त्वां[२०७] मित्र दूषयन्त्यथवा यदि[२०८] ॥ ५७ ॥
म्रियन्ते[२०९] कुगतिं यान्ति मोक्षहास्ते[२१०] न संशयः ।

रौरवं नरकं[२११] यान्ति मुक्तिस्तेषां कुतो भवेत् ॥ ५८ ॥
एवमुक्त्वा तु सिद्धस्य योगावस्था तु सुन्दरी ।

श्रीनाथ उवाच[२१२]

वदते[२१३] परया भक्त्या देव्यग्रे[२१४] प्रणतः स्थितः ॥ ५९ ॥
देशिकस्त्वं[२१५] महादेवि अभिषेकं ददस्व मे ।
दद[२१६] विभवसामर्थ्यं दीक्षाव्याख्याद्यनुग्रहम्[२१७] ॥ ६० ॥
ततो भ्रमामि[२१८] आचार्यो योगेशीनां[२१९] तु मध्यतः ।

Reveal (this) knowledge wherever people are intent on devotion. The pill (guṭikā)[61] indeed consists of 125,000 (verses) (pādalakṣā)[62] and should be administered (pātanīyā) by (the energy of your) gaze.[63] O Wanderer in the Sky (of the transcendent), once attained by means of the Command, (the reality which is the ultimate) purport (of the Tradition of the) Moon (candrārtha),[64] you should grace all. Thus, O Bhairava, I have explained this, the power of knowledge to you. (51cd-53ab)

Yours, certainly, is the power (both) to grace (anugraha) and to chastise (nigraha). Once gone to the mortal world, play as you will. (53cd-54ab)

(You are) free of old age and death and you move perpetually in the Sky (of ultimate reality). You are free of all sins, like gold (purified of all dross). (54cd-55ab)

(Even the most dreadful) sins, including brahminicide, that (people) commit every day, are destroyed merely by remembering you. There is no doubt about it. (55cd-56ab)

Those who meditate on you constantly are accomplished yogis (siddha) and also (become so) by remembering (you) the three times (of day).[65] They are free from the fetters of the bonds (that imprison the soul). There is no doubt about it. (56cd-57ab)

O friend (mitra), those who censor you or find fault in you (dūṣayanti) die and end up on the wrong path (kugati). They are, without a doubt, destroyers of (true) freedom (mukti). (57cd-58ab)

They go to the Raurava hell.[66] Where can there be liberation for them?" Once the beautiful (goddess, who is) the yogic state of the accomplished yogi had spoken thus (Śrīnātha responded). (58cd-9ab)

The God's Consecration

Śrīnātha said:

Bowing before the goddess, he said with supreme devotion: "O great goddess, you are the teacher (deśika),[67] give me the consecration (abhiṣeka). Give me the power of dominion (vibhavasāmarthya), the grace of initiation, the explanation (of the scriptures)[68] and the rest. Then I, a teacher, will wander in the midst of the Mistresses of Yoga (yogeśī)."[69] (59cd-61ab)

सिद्धवाक्यमिदं श्रुत्वा तुष्टासौ[२२०] योगमातरम्[२२१] ।। ६१ ।।
वदते[२२२] सिद्धनाथस्य[२२३] हे[२२४] मित्र जगतः प्रभो ।
इदं तदभिषेकं[२२५] तु षोडशान्तावलोकनात् ।। ६२ ।।

कलाषोडशसंपूर्णा पूर्णा देवी समुच्चरेत्[२२६] ।
अमृतौघं[२२७] प्रवर्षन्ती[२२८] अमा सप्तादशी[२२९] कला ।। ६३ ।।
अभिषेकं[२३०] तु[२३१] नाथस्य दत्तं[२३२] देव्यावलोकनात् ।

खेचरत्वं[२३३] ददाम्यद्य लिङ्गं गृह्य[२३४] यथार्थतः[२३५] ।। ६४ ।।
दीक्षाव्याख्याससामर्थ्यं[२३६] इत्याज्ञा मुक्तिदा[२३७] तव[२३८] ।

इदं तदभिषेकं[२३९] तु मया दत्तं[२४०] तव प्रिय ।। ६५ ।।
वज्रं विदारयेल्लिङ्गं[२४१] संजीव्यः[२४२] परमः[२४३] शशिः[२४४] ।

पूजनीयं[२४५] सदा हीदं[२४६] लिङ्गमेकं[२४७] कुलागमे ।। ६६ ।।
यत्र यत्रापि[२४८] देशे[२४९] तु मन्त्रजं सहजं हि[२५०] वा[२५१] ।
कृत्रिमं भवते वाथ[२५२] पूजनीयं विशेषतः ।। ६७ ।।
नमस्कारेच्छुचिर्भक्त्या[२५३] श्रीलिङ्गं[२५४] पश्चिमामुखम्[२५५] ।

तदभिषेकमाचार्ये[२५६] लिङ्गपूजा दिने[२५७] दिने[२५८] ।। ६८ ।।
कुलाचार्याभिषिक्ता[२५९] ये[२६०] लिङ्गाराधनवर्जिताः[२६१] ।
न तेषां[२६२] साधनी सिद्धिः[२६३] अन्यथा[२६४] पतनं भवेत् ।। ६९ ।।

एवमुक्त्वा[२६५] तु सिद्धस्य अदृष्टकुलविग्रहा[२६६] ।
संजाता देवदेवेशी चक्रे[२६७] सिंहावलोकिनी ।। ७० ।।
ततः[२६८] सिद्धो[२६९] महातुष्टः[२७०] सिंहरूपो गतः[२७१] स्वयम् ।

साष्टाङ्गैस्तु[२७२] नमस्कारैः[२७३] सिद्धः[२७४] क्षाम्यति[२७५] भैरवीम्[२७६] ।। ७१ ।।
श्लोकद्वादशकैर्दिव्यैः[२७७] स्तुवते[२७८] दिव्यशासनम्[२७९] ।

Upon hearing this, the speech of an accomplished being, she the Mother of Yoga, was satisfied and said to Siddhanātha: "O friend (mitra), lord of the universe, this is that consecration (that takes place) by the gaze of (the goddess who is) at the End of the Sixteen (ṣoḍaśāntavalokanāt)."[70] (61cd-62)

The goddess Full Moon (Pūrṇā), replete with the sixteen energies (of the Moon) is the seventeenth energy (that as) the New Moon (Amā) ascended (samuccaret) as she rained down a stream of nectar. (Thus) the consecration was imparted to the Lord by the gaze of the goddess. (63-64ab)

Today I will give (you the liberated) state of flight (khecaratva); grasp the Liṅga as it is in reality! [71] Initiation, the explanation (of the teachings) (vyākhyā) and the capacity (to apply them) (sāmarthya): this is the Command that bestows upon you liberation.[72] (64cd-65ab)

This, O dear one, is the consecration I have given you. The thunderbolt (vajra) must split apart the Liṅga and the supreme Moon should be vitalised.[73] (65cd-66ab)

This, the sole Liṅga in the Kula scripture (kulāgama), should be worshipped constantly. Wherever it is, whether it be born spontaneously (sahaja), generated from mantra (mantraja) or even if an artefact (kṛtrima), it should be worshipped in particular.[74] The pure man should salute the Śrīliṅga that faces west (paścimāmukha)[75] with devotion. (66cd-68ab)

This is the consecration (abhiṣeka) that takes place within the teacher (ācārya) namely, the daily worship of the Liṅga.[76] Those consecrated as Kula teachers (kulācārya) who do not worship the Liṅga cannot achieve accomplishment (siddhi) and (doing) otherwise, (they) fall." (68cd-69)

Having spoken thus to the Accomplished One (Siddha), her form the unseen Kula she, the mistress of the god of the gods, whose gaze is like a lion (siṁhāvalokinī) [77] arose within the Wheel. Then the Accomplished One, greatly satisfied, whose form was (as powerful as a) lion (siṁharūpa) spontaneously went (to her). (70-71ab)

The Accomplished One propitiated Bhairavī with salutations accompanied by full prostrations and praised the divine teaching with twelve divine verses. (71cd-72ab)

ऐंकारासनमारूढां[२८०] वज्रपद्मोपरिस्थिताम् ।। ७२ ।।
सिद्धिं[२८१] मां ददते नित्यं श्रीकुजाख्यां[२८२] नमाम्यहम् (१)[२८३] ।

ज्ञानशक्तिं महामायां[२८४] दिव्यज्ञानप्रकाशकीम्[२८५] ।। ७३ ।।
अन्तर्धानगतां[२८६] देवीं[२८७] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (२) ।

चतुःपीठकमध्यस्थां[२८८] दिव्यशक्तिप्रभावतः[२८९] ।। ७४ ।।
षट्प्रकारसमोपेतां[२९०] श्रीकुजाख्यां[२९१] नमाम्यहम् (३) ।

मेनाख्यदुहिता देवी[२९२] तुर्यस्थाने व्यवस्थिता[२९३] ।। ७५ ।।
लिङ्गान्ते[२९४] वसते नित्यं श्रीकुजाख्यां[२९५] नमाम्यहम् (४) ।

बालक्रमसमोपेतां[२९६] भगाह्लादेन[२९७] चिञ्चिणीम्[२९८] ।। ७६ ।।
नादिफान्तास्वराघोरां[२९९] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (५) ।

चन्द्रद्वीपे शिला शुद्धा पूजिता च मया पुरा[३००] ।। ७७ ।।
सप्तजन्मविनिष्क्रान्तां[३०१] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (६) ।

घोरां घोरतराघोराघोरज्ञानावलम्बिनीम्[३०२] ।। ७८ ।।
नित्ययुक्तां[३०३] स्वचक्रस्थां[३०४] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (७) ।

जन्मत्रिकोणमध्यस्थां[३०५] तरुणादित्यवर्चसाम्[३०६] ।। ७९ ।।
दिव्यामाज्ञास्वरूपेण[३०७] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (८) ।

रुद्रशक्तिः सदा पूज्या[३०८] पीठानां कीर्तनादपि ।। ८० ।।
सिद्धिं[३०९] स्फुटां[३१०] प्रदातारीं[३११] श्रीकुजाख्यां नामाम्यहम् (९) ।

देवतैः[३१२] पूजितां[३१३] नित्यं ब्रह्मचर्यपरायणैः ।। ८१ ।।
सिद्धयोगेश्वरीख्यातां[३१४] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (१०) ।

The Hymn of Twelve Verses[78]

(1) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who, established above the thunderbolt-lotus (vajrapadma) and mounted on the letter AIṀ (as her) seat constantly gives me (every) accomplishment (siddhi).[79] (72cd-73ab)

(2) I salute the venerable goddess called Kujā who has become invisible; (she who is) the power of knowledge, Mahāmāyā who illumines divine knowledge.[80] (73cd-74ab)

(3) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā endowed with six parts (prakāra) who, by the power of (her) divine energy, resides in the middle of the four sacred seats.[81] (74cd-75ab)

(4) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who always resides within the Liṅga. She, the daughter of (the one) called Menā,[82] is the goddess established in the abode of the fourth state.[83] (75cd-76ab)

(5) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who, benign (aghorā),[84] is Mālinī (nādiphāntā), the silent (sound of consciousness) (asvarā).[85] As the bliss of the Yoni (bhagāhlāda)[86] she is Ciñciṇī who possesses the Transmission of the Child.[87] (76cd-77ab)

(6) There is a pure Stone on the Island of the Moon[88] worshipped by me before. I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who, after seven births,[89] has come out (of it). (77cd-78ab)

(7) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who, residing in (her) own Wheel,[90] is perpetually conjoined (with the Supreme Principle) - she who is Ghorā, Ghoratarā and Aghorā[91] and is sustained by the knowledge of Aghora.[92] (78cd-79ab)

(8) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who, as the Command, is divine and, brilliant as the youthful sun (at dawn), resides in the centre of the Triangle of Birth.[93] (79cd-80ab)

(9) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who bestows evident accomplishment. (She who is) Rudra's energy[94] should always be worshipped (as such) and also by praising the sacred seats. (80cd-81ab)

(10) I salute the venerable (goddess) called Kujā who is known as Siddhayogeśvarī and is worshipped constantly by (all) the deities and those intent on celibacy. (81cd-82ab)

सिद्धविद्याधरैर्यक्षैर्योगिनीगणवृन्दकै:[३१५] ।। ८२ ।।
वाद्यनृत्यरतां देवीं[३१६] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (११) ।

भरितां भैरवीमुग्रां[३१७] अमान्तपदगामिनीम्[३१८] ।। ८३ ।।
मित्रमात:[३१९] प्रभुं देवीं[३२०] श्रीकुजाख्यां नमाम्यहम् (१२) ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[३२१] अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके विद्यापीठमार्गे[३२२] विमलषट्कनिर्णये कादिभेदे[३२३]
आज्ञापारमेश्वरे स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां
अव्वाक्रमभाषिते[३२४] श्रीनाथाज्ञाभिषेका–
धिकारो नामानन्दः ।। ५ ।।

(11) Along with accomplished yogis, the celestial sages (vidyādhara), the spirits of vegetation (yakṣa) and troupes of Yoginīs, I salute the venerable goddess called Kujā who is devoted to instrumental music and dance. (82cd-83ab)

(12) O mother of Mitra![95] I salute the venerable goddess called Kujā, the lord who, full (of energy) (bharitā), is the ferocious (ugrā) Bhairavī who travels to the plane at the extremity of (the energy of the) New Moon (amā). (83cd-84ab)

This is the (fifth) chapter called Concerning Śrīnātha's Consecration with the Command (ājñābhiṣeka). It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for one hundred and twenty-five thousand (verses). It is on the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha) and within the ultimate purport of the Pure Six (Thousand Verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command uttered within the Transmission of the Mother (avvākrama).

षष्ठानन्दः

श्रीनाथ उवाच

पीठावतारमन्य्[१] तु यथा भवति[२] भैरवि ।
तदेव ब्रूहि मां देवि येन क्षुभ्यन्ति जन्तवः ॥ १ ॥

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[३]

या सा शक्तिर्भगाख्याता[४] पुरा सिद्धा तु भाषिता ।
क्वचिन्मुद्राश्रमे स्थाने प्रविष्टा[५] देवतैः[६] सह[७] ॥ २ ॥

तूष्णीं[८] भूत्वा गुहामध्ये आरूढा तपभावना[९] ।
उन्मत्तब्रह्मचर्येण कृष्णरूपावधूतया[१०] ॥ ३ ॥
उड्डीकारयते[११] नित्यं निशाचारेण[१२] ब्रह्मवित् ।

ततः शब्दो[१३] महान् जातः[१४] त्रैलोक्ये सचराचरे ॥ ४ ॥
दिव्यज्ञानप्रभावेन सिद्धरूपा बलोत्कटा ।
आगता[१५] ब्रह्मचर्येण क्रीडयित्वा नभान्तरे[१६] ॥ ५ ॥

उभौ[१७] उडिप्रवेशेन[१८] पीठोद्यान[१९] विधीयते[२०] ।
खगेशस्तत्र[२१] संसिद्धस्त्रैलोक्याकर्षणक्षमः[२२] ॥ ६ ॥

CHAPTER SIX

The Pervasion of Śrīnātha's Sacred Seat of the Command (ājñāpīṭha)

The Goddess's Contemplation in the Cave of the Liṅga and Her Emergence from It

Śrīnātha said:

O Bhairavī, pray tell me of the other descent of the sacred seats (into the world)[1] by which, O goddess, people are (spiritually) aroused (kṣubhyanti). (1)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

That energy called the Yoni (bhaga), formerly said to be (fully) accomplished (siddhā),[2] has entered (praviṣṭā),[3] along with the deities, somewhere into the place (sthāna)[4] which is the Hermitage of Gesture (mudrāśrama).[5] (2)

Silent in the middle of the Cave, she is intent (ārūḍhā) on contemplating (the power of) austerity (tapas), by the practice of ecstatic celibacy (unmattabrahmacarya) and laying aside (her) dark (kṛṣṇarūpāvadhūtayā) form.[6] (There), O knower of the Brahman, she constantly induces (mystical) flight (within herself and others) by the Conduct of the Night (niśācāra).[7] (3-4ab)

Then a great sound (śabda) arose in the triple world, within (the universe of all that) moves and is immobile.[8] And, after having played within the Void (nabhas) (of the Liṅga),[9] she whose nature is accomplished came (into the world) grand with (her) might by the power of divine knowledge[10] and the practice of continence (brahmacarya).[11] (4cd-5)

The five sacred seats, their inhabitants and Bhairava's consecration in each one.

Oḍḍiyāna

Bhairava meets the Goddess

[12]As both (the god and goddess) entered (the land of) Uḍi,[13] (the worship of) Udyāna is enjoined as a sacred seat. There, Khageśa (the Lord of the Skyfarers) is fully accomplished and capable of attracting (to himself the entire) triple world. (6)

प्राप्ते[२३] देव्याश्रमे भक्त्या आराधयति[२४] पादुकाम्[२५] ।
यथेच्छा पूजिता देवी क्रमाज्ञा पारमेश्वरी ।। ७ ।।

अष्टाङ्गप्रणिपातेन[२६] अश्रुपूर्णः[२७] क्षमापयेत्[२८] ।
कुलजा सिद्धनाथस्य[२९] दिव्याज्ञा संभविष्यति[३०] ।। ८ ।।

ततो नमस्कृतं[३१] पश्चादोडीशः[३२] सिद्धनायकः ।
गतो[३३] वृक्षान्तरे[३४] सिद्धो[३५] निशाचारेण कौलवित् ।। ९ ।।

कदम्बवद्[३६] भ्रमेद् वृक्षं वृक्षं[३७] तेन कदम्बकम् ।
सिंहरूपं गतो यस्मात्[३८] तस्मात्[३९] संकेतसिंहकम्[४०] ।। १० ।।
सिंहज्ञानमिदं[४१] तेन भुक्तिमुक्तिफलप्रदम् ।

अथ पञ्चाशद् रुद्रास्तु[४२] तूष्णीं[४३] भूत्वा समागताः[४४] ।। ११ ।।
पूजिता कुब्जिका देवी[४५] स्तुता सर्वैः सुरादिभिः ।
वरं ददाति[४६] सा तुष्टा विचरध्वं यथासुखम्[४७] ।। १२ ।।

एवं श्रुत्वा च ते तुष्टा[४८] देव्यामाराधयन्ति[४९] हि ।
पञ्चोपचारपूजायां तदोक्ताः[५०] परिचारकाः[५१] ।। १३ ।।

When he reached the goddess's hermitage, he worshipped (her) sandals with devotion. He worshipped the goddess who is the Command of the Transmission (kramājñā) of the Supreme Goddess, (freely) as much as he desired. (7)

Prostrating (fully before her), (his eyes) full of tears, (he exclaimed): "Be gracious." (And she replied): "(Rest assured), the divine Command, born of Kula, will come into Siddhanātha's possession!" (8)

The Sacred Tree

Then after saluting, Oḍīśa,[14] the leader of accomplished yogis, (himself) an accomplished yogi and knower of Kaula, entered into the Tree by the Conduct of the Night.[15] (9)

The Tree rotates like the ecliptic (kadamba) and so the Tree is a Kadamba.[16] He assumed the form of a lion[17] and so the teaching (saṁketa) is that of the Lion. Thus (this is) the Lion Knowledge (siṁhajñāna)[18] that bestows the fruits of worldly benefits (bhukti) and liberation. (10-11ab)

The Fifty Rudras

Now, the fifty Rudras[19] became silent and came (to that place). The goddess Kubjikā was worshipped and praised by all the gods and the others. She was satisfied and gave them a boon (saying): "Wander freely as you please!" (11cd-12)

When they heard this, they were satisfied and worshipped the goddess in the Rite of the Five Offerings (pañcopacārapūjā) and (so were) then said to be (the goddess's) attendants (paricāraka). (13)

श्रीकण्ठश्च[५२] अनन्तश्च सूक्ष्मीशं च त्रिमूर्तिकम्[५३] ।
अमरीशं तथार्घीशं[५४] भारभूत्यतिथीश्वरम्[५५] ॥ १४ ॥
स्थाणुनाम[५६] हरश्चैव झण्टीशं भौतिकं[५७] तथा ।
सद्योजातोऽनुग्रहीशं[५८] अंकुरीशमतः परम् ॥ १५ ॥
महासेनश्च क्रोधीशं[५९] चण्डीशं च प्रचण्डराट्[६०] ।
क्रूराख्यमेकरुद्रश्च[६१] कूर्मं[६२] चैवैकनेत्रकम्[६३] ॥ १६ ॥
चतुर्मुखो[६४] अजेशश्च[६५] श्येनः[६६] सोमेश्वरस्तथा ।
लांगुली[६७] दारुकेशश्च अर्धनारीश्वरस्तथा ॥ १७ ॥
उमाकान्तस्तथाषाडी डिण्डिनं धातृरुद्रकम् ।
मीनं चैव तथा मेषं लोहितं च तथैव च ॥ १८ ॥
शिखिवाही तथा चान्यं[६८] छगलण्डं[६९] तथैव च ।
द्विरण्डं च महाकालं[७०] बालीशं[७१] च भुजङ्गमम् ॥ १९ ॥
पिनाकीशं च खड्गाख्यं[७२] बकानन्दं[७३] च श्वेतकम् ।
लकुली[७४] भृगुदेवेशं[७५] संवर्तकमतः परम् ॥ २० ॥
एवं पञ्चाशद् रुद्रास्तु प्रतिचर्यारताः[७६] सदा ।
तथान्ये देवताः सप्त सुमूलप्रतिचारकाः[७७] ॥ २१ ॥
आज्ञाविधेयाः सर्वे ते देव्यापादार्चने[७८] रताः ।
तथा वृक्षाः[७९] स्मृतास्त्रीणि[८०] वेल्लकत्रितयं[८१] तथा ॥ २२ ॥
खररा गररा चैव ररा च परिचारिकाः[८२] ।
कुबेरं खगमश्चैव कर्बुरं प्रतिचारकम्[८३] ॥ २३ ॥
आज्ञाविधेयाः[८४] सर्वे ते अपरा[८५] भैरवाः[८६] स्वयम् ।
अन्येषां[८७] प्रतिचारीणां[८८] देवगन्धर्वयोषिताम्[८९] ॥ २४ ॥
योगियोगिनिवीराणां[९०] परिसंख्या न विद्यते ।
एवं क्रमेण संयोगात्[९१] पीठोद्यानमुदाहृतम्[९२] ॥ २५ ॥
करवीरं[९३] श्मशानं तु करपुष्पैरधिष्ठितम्[९४] ।
तत्र चक्रं तु रुद्राणां नाम्ना[९५] कङ्कालभैरवम्[९६] ॥ २६ ॥
रौद्रं[९७] रौद्रतरं तीव्रं व्यालव्यग्रोग्रभीषणम् ।

(These attendants are as follows): [20]Śrīkaṇṭha (A) and Ananta (Ā) along with Sūkṣmīśa (I) and Trimūrtika (Ī), Amarīśa (U) and Ārghīśa (Ū), Bhārabhūti (Ṛ), Atithīśvara (Ṝ), the one called Sthāṇu (ḷ) as well as Hara (Ḹ), Jhaṇṭīśa (E) and Bhautika (Ai), Sadyojāta (O), Anugrahīśa (Au), followed by Aṅkurīśa (Ṁ),[21] Mahāsena (Ḥ) and Krodhīśa (Ka), Caṇḍīśa (Kha) and Pracaṇḍarāṭ (Ga), the one called Krūra (Gha)[22] and Ekarudra (Ṅa), Kūrma (Ca) as well as Ekanetraka (Cha), Caturmukha (Ja) and Ajeśa (Jha),[23] Śyena (Ña)[24] along with Someśvara (Ṭa), Lāṇgulin (Ṭha) and Dārukeśa (Ḍa)[25] together with Ardhanārīśvara (Ḍha), Umākānta (Ṇa) and Āṣāḍin (Ta),[26] Ḍiṇḍina (Tha), Dhātṛrudraka (Da), and Mīna (Dha) as well as Meṣa (Na) and Lohita (Pa), Śikhivāhin (Pha) along with Chagalaṇḍa (Ba) as another, Dviraṇḍa (Bha), Mahākāla (Ma), Bālīśa (Ya) and Bhujaṇgama (Ra), Pinākīśa (La) and the one called Khaḍga (Va), Bakānanda (Śa)[27] and Śvetaka (Ṣa), Lakulin (Sa), Bhṛgu (Ha) the lord of the gods and then Saṁvartaka (KṢa). (14-20)

Such are the fifty Rudras who are ever intent on attending (on the goddess). Similarly, there are another seven deities who are (her) good main (sumūla) attendants (praticāraka).[28] All of them are subject to (the goddess's) Command and are intent on worshipping the goddess's feet. (21-22ab)

The Three Trees, Vellakas and Attendants

Again, there are said to be three trees and the triad of Vellakas.[29] (22cd)

The female servants are Khararā, Gararā and Rarā. (The male ones are) Kubera, Khagama and the attendant Karbura. All of them are subject to the (the goddess's) Command and are themselves other Bhairavas. (While), the other attendants namely, gods, celestial musicians, (heavenly) women, yogis, Yoginīs and heroes are innumerable. (23-25ab)

Karavīra - the Cremation Ground

Due to the conjunction (of all these beings) in this way in due order the sacred seat is called Udyāna.[30] While the cremation ground is Karavīra (so called because many) Kara flowers grow (there) (karapuṣpairadhiṣṭhita).[31] The circle of Rudras there is called (the congregation of) Kaṅkālabhairava.[32] (25cd-26)

It is terrible (raudra), most terrible. (Full of) vicious and ferocious animals, it is intensely frightening. It always protects the devotees, (but) kills the fettered in a moment. (27)

भक्तानां रक्षते[९८] नित्यं पशूनां मारयेत् क्षणात् ।। २७ ।।

श्मशानपालकस्तत्र[९९] नाम्ना योगेश्वरः[१००] कुले[१०१] ।
एवं पीठमिदं प्रोक्तं त्रिप्रकारान्तरस्थितम्[१०२] ।। २८ ।।

निरालम्बा स्थिता[१०३] मुद्रा बन्ध[१०४] यस्या[१०५] न विद्यते ।
सा मुद्रा मोक्षदातारी[१०६] पीठमध्ये प्रकल्पिता ।। २९ ।।
प्रकटा सा चन्द्राकारे[१०७] पीठाम्बा[१०८] सह संयुता ।
पीठेशी भवते तस्मिन् खेचरी नामनामतः ।। ३० ।।

देवी तत्र खगेशी च कुब्जिकानामविश्रुता ।
तथा चोडीशसिद्धस्तु[१०९] शेषान्ये[११०] प्रतिचारकाः ।। ३१ ।।
एवं सिद्धिकर[१११] प्रोक्तं ओडियान[११२] विनिर्गतम् ।
दिव्यवर्षशतास्त्रीणि[११३] देवी तत्र व्यवस्थिता[११४] ।। ३२ ।।
भरिता भैरवानन्दा शिवमार्गे[११५] च खेगता[११६] ।

ऋषयो[११७] विंशतिस्तत्र[११८] त्वरिताश्च समागताः ।। ३३ ।।
आज्ञामुपार्जनार्थाय[११९] सद्भक्ताश्च[१२०] विचक्षणाः[१२१] ।
द्वादशाब्दैरतीतैस्तु[१२२] सिद्धनाथेन[१२३] दीक्षिताः ।। ३४ ।।
कश्यपश्चैव[१२४] मार्कण्डो वशिष्ठो गोतमस्तथा[१२५] ।
माण्डवः[१२६] शम्भुः संवर्त आपस्तम्बः[१२७] पराशरः ।। ३५ ।।
याज्ञवल्क्यस्तथा व्यासो[१२८] दुर्वास[१२९] आसुरी तथा ।
हारीतो नीलकण्ठश्च विश्वामित्रो धनुर्धरः[१३०] ।। ३६ ।।
ऋषिशृङ्गः[१३१] शक्तिपुत्रो[१३२] दक्ष[१३३] च[१३४] विंशम[१३५] विदुः ।

ज्येष्ठपीठावतारोऽय[१३६] ॐकार[१३७] प्रथम[१३८] स्मृतम् ।। ३७ ।।

अथ द्वितीयकं वक्ष्ये भगदक्षिणतः[१३९] स्थितम् ।
तत्रैवोत्तरमार्गस्थं वीरक्षेत्रं तु नामतः ।। ३८ ।।

The guardian of the cremation ground there who belongs to the Kula is called Yogeśvara. In this way, this sacred seat is said to be located within (the triangular section of the maṇḍala) consisting of three parts (triprakāra).[33] (28)

Khecarī - the Gesture

The Gesture that is not made (with the hands) (bandha) and abides (perpetually self-established) without support (nirālambā) bestows liberation. Conceived (prakalpitā) in the centre of the sacred seat, she is clearly manifest (prakaṭā) in the Moon's form and is linked with the mother of the sacred seat. Within that (seat) resides the mistress of the sacred seat called Khecarī.[34] (29-30)

The Goddess and God of the Sacred Seat

There the goddess is Khageśī, well known by the name of Kubjikā. Similarly, the Siddha Uḍīśa[35] (resides there)[36] and all the others (who) are (their) attendants. In this way, (the sacred seat of) Oḍiyāna, which is said to bring about accomplishment, has emerged. The goddess resided there for three hundred divine years. Full (bharitā) (of energy), she is Bhairava's bliss and has taken flight (khegatā) on Śiva's Path.[37] (31-33ab)

The Twenty Sages

There are twenty sages (ṛṣi) there, true devotees and wise. They came in haste to earn the Command and after twelve years were initiated by Siddhanātha.[38] (These sages are) 1) Kaśyapa and 2) Mārkaṇḍa, 3) Vaśiṣṭha as well as 4) Gotama, 5) Māṇḍava, 6) Śambhu, 7) Saṁvarta, 8) Āpastamba, 9) Parāśara, 10) Yājñavalkya and 11) Vyāsa, 12) Durvāsa and 13) Āsurī, 14) Hārīta and 15) Nīlakaṇṭha, 16) Viśvāmitra, 17) Dhanurdhara, 18) Ṛṣiśṛṅga, 19) Śaktiputra and (the wise) know that Dakṣa is the twentieth.[39] (33cd-37ab)

This is the descent of the eldest (jyeṣṭha) sacred seat. It is the first and is said to be Oṁkāra. (37cd)

Jālandhara

Now I will tell (you about) the second (sacred seat), located on the right of the Yoni (bhagadakṣiṇataḥ).[40] There, on the path to the north (of that is the place) called the Heroes' Field (vīrakṣetra). (38)

ॐकारे या स्मृता देवी खगेशी नाम वत्सला ।
सा एवान्यस्वरूपेण प्रविशेत् तत्र योगवित् ।। ३९ ।।

चामुण्डा रक्तरूपेण च्छायायां बिल्ववृक्षके ।
योगारूढा[१४०] स्थिता तस्मिन् कुमारीसप्तभिर्वृता[१४१] ।। ४० ।।

एवं कौमाररूपेण चर्यावस्थागत:[१४२] प्रिय[१४३] ।
प्रविष्टो[१४४] भैरव:[१४५] सिद्धो[१४६] देव्यापादाग्रतो[१४७] भुवि ।। ४१ ।।

कृत[१४८] मण्डलकं दिव्यं यदुक्तं पश्चिमान्वये ।
पूजिता:[१४९] पीठदेव्यस्तु[१५०] स्वशरीरं निवेदितम् ।। ४२ ।।
कृत्वा दण्डनमस्कार[१५१] अश्रुपूर्ण:[१५२] क्षमापयेत्[१५३] ।
तस्य तुष्टा तु सा देवी सिद्धसंज्ञा[१५४] ददेच्छुभाम् ।। ४३ ।।

चर्यादेवेश उत्तिष्ठ तवाज्ञा स्फुरते[१५५] स्वयं ।
चर्यायुक्तमभूत्[१५६] तत्र श्रद्धवान् तु[१५७] शुचिव्रत:[१५८] ।। ४४ ।।
य[१५९] स्थान[१६०] पश्यते[१६१] सौम्यं क्रीडते तत्र नित्यशः ।

एवं ते[१६२] वीरा:[१६३] पञ्चाशत्[१६४] सन्त्रस्तास्तत्र[१६५] चागताः ।। ४५ ।।
वीरमार्गे[१६६] यदारूढास्तेन[१६७] वीराः स्मृता भुवि ।

गतास्ते सर्वऽवैकल्य[१६८] देव्यापादार्चने[१६९] रताः ।। ४६ ।।
पूजिता तै:[१७०] समस्तैश्च पञ्चाशैर्वीरनायकै:[१७१] ।
स्तुवन्ति[१७२] संमता:[१७३] सर्वे वीरक्षेत्रे[१७४] पृथक् पृथक् ।। ४७ ।।

वरं ददाति सा तुष्टा सर्वेषां वीरनायिका[१७५] ।
जरामरणनिर्मुक्ता विचरध्व[१७६] यथासुखम् ।। ४८ ।।
प्रतिचर्यारता:[१७७] सर्वे आज्ञाश्रवणतत्पराः ।

Bhairava worships the Goddess in the Shade of the Bilva Tree

The goddess said to (reside) in the (sacred seat of the) syllable OṀ is the beloved called Khageśī. It is she, O knower of Yoga, who enters therein (assuming a) different nature.[41] (39)

Established in Yoga she resides therein, red in colour,[42] as Cāmuṇḍā[43] in the shade of a bilva tree surrounded by seven virgins.[44] (40)

In the same way Bhairava, the accomplished one (siddha), absorbed in the state of Kaula practice (caryāvasthā) entered (there), O beloved, into the world before the goddess's feet in the form of a youth (kumāra).[45] (41)

Once fashioned the divine maṇḍala[46] as explained in the Western Tradition, worshipped the goddesses of the sacred seats and offered his own body, he made a full prostration and, his (eyes) full of tears (pleaded): "Be gracious." Pleased with him, the goddess bestowed upon him the auspicious title of 'Siddha'. (42-43)

"Rise Caryādeveśa," (the goddess said) "your Command shines radiantly (spontaneously) by itself!" (Upon hearing these words) he who possessed faith and (observed) the vow of purity, applied (himself) to Kaula practice (caryā) there (and then)[47] and played (care free) at all times there in whatever beautiful (saumya) place he saw. (44-45ab)

The Fifty Heroes

Thus, those fifty heroes arrived there in fear. They are called `heroes' (here in this) world because they are on the Heroes' Path (vīramārga).[48] (45cd-46ab)

Dedicated to the worship of the goddess's feet, they all attained (a state) free of imperfection. (She was) worshipped by all those fifty leaders of heroes and all being of the same view praised (her) individually in the Heroes' Field.[49] (46cd-47)

The mistress of the heroes was satisfied and gave them all a boon (saying): "Wander (wherever you like) as you please, free of old age and death."[50] All of them are devoted to (her) service and intent on hearing the (divine) Command. (48-49ab)

कमण्डलु[१७८] नट[१७९] धूर्त[१८०] सोम[१८१] टङ्कटशूलिनम्[१८२] ॥ ४९ ॥
मुण्डधारी स्फुलिङ्गं च त्राणं वीर्य[१८३] सुरार्चितम्[१८४] ।
दर्पणममर[१८५] लोड[१८६] जीवं सर्वाङ्गसुन्दरम् ॥ ५० ॥
शिवोत्तमं महारावं नन्दिवीर[१८७] कपर्दिनम्[१८८] ।
सोमेश्वरं तथा शम्भु[१८९] एकनेत्रं वृषध्वजम् ॥ ५१ ॥
मातङ्गं चन्द्रनाग[१९०] च[१९१] मोहनं कमलेश्वरम्[१९२] ।
डम्बर[१९३] लोहितं धूम्रं कामदं घोरदंष्ट्रिणम्[१९४] ॥ ५२ ॥
संवरं शर्वर[१९५] चन्द्रं अट्टहास[१९६] कपीश्वरम्[१९७] ।
दीर्घतनु[१९८] महाराव[१९९] भृङ्गिरावं वृकोदरम् ॥ ५३ ॥
मर्कटं लम्बकर्णं च जीमूतं मेघनिस्वनम्[२००] ।
दामोदरं करालं च महोदधिस्तथानेकम्[२०१] ॥ ५४ ॥
वीरसिद्धिप्रभावेण[२०२] वीरा: पञ्चाशत् सिद्धिदा:[२०३] ।

वेश्या मुण्डिनि[२०४] कैवर्ती त्रयेते[२०५] प्रतिचारिका:[२०६] ॥ ५५ ॥

लोलादेवी विचित्रा च भाभूती[२०७] च तृतीयका ।
वेश्यादित्रिकसंज्ञा[२०८] च[२०९] परिकर्मे[२१०] व्यवस्थिता: ॥ ५६ ॥

परिचारास्त्रय:[२११] पुंसा:[२१२] स्वनामेन[२१३] पृथक् पृथक् ।
कल्लोलं कृकरं चैव कामेश्वरं[२१४] तृतीयकम् ॥ ५७ ॥

तथान्य[२१५] सिद्धनाथ[२१६] च सर्वेषां प्रभुरीश्वरम्[२१७] ।
शेषाश्चैव[२१८] समाख्याता[२१९] द्वारे तिष्ठन्ति किङ्करा: ॥ ५८ ॥

(These heroes are as follows): Kamaṇḍalu (Ascetic's Pot) (A), Naṭa (Shore) (Ā), Dhūrta (Wicked One) (I), Soma (Moon) (Ī), Ṭaṅkaṭa (Axe) (U), Śūlin (Spear Bearer) (Ū), Muṇḍadhārin (Wearing a Garland of Heads) (Ṛ) and Sphuliṅga (Spark) (Ṝ), Trāṇa (Salvation) (ḷ), Vīrya (Bravery) (Ḷ), Surārcita (Worshiped by the gods) (E), Darpaṇa (Mirror) (Ai), Amara (Immortal) (O), Loḍa (Mad) (Au), Jīva (Living Being) (Ṁ), Sarvāṇgasundara (Beautiful in all Limbs) (Ḥ), Śivottama (Excellent Śiva) (Ka), Mahārāva (Great Sound) (Kha), Nandivīra (Bull Hero) (Ga), Kapardin (Dredlock) (Gha), Someśvara (Lord of the Moon) (Ṅa) and Śambhu (Ca), Ekanetra (One-eyed) (Cha), Vṛṣadhvaja (Bull-bannered) (Ja), Mātaṇga (Elephant) (Jha) and Candranāga (Moon Snake) (Ña), Mohana (Charming) (Ṭa), Kamaleśvara (Lord of the Lotus) (Ṭha), Ḍambara (Clatter) (Ḍa), Lohita (Red) (Ḍha), Dhūmra (Smoke) (Ṇa), Kāmada (Bestower of Desires) (Ta), Ghoradaṁṣṭrin (Terrible Fanged) (Tha), Saṁvara (Pledge) (Da), Śarvara (Dha), Candra (Moon) (Na), Aṭṭahāsa (Loud Laugh) (Pa), Kapīśvara (Lord of the Monkeys) (Pha), Dīrghatanu (Long Bodied) (Ba), Mahārāva (Great Sound) (Bha), Bhṛṇgirāva (Bee-sound) (Ma), Vṛkodara (Wolf Belly) (Ya), Markaṭa (Ape) (Ra), Lambakarṇa (Long Ear) (La), Jīmūta (Lightening) (Va), Meghanisvana (Cloud Sound) (Śa), Dāmodara (Ṣa) and Karāla (Big Teeth) (Sa), Mahodadhi (Ocean) (Ha) and Aneka (Many) (KṢa). (These) are the fifty heroes who, by the power of the hero's accomplishment (vīrasiddhi), bestow accomplishment. (49cd-55ab)

The Six Female Attendants

These three namely, Veśyā (the Prostitute), Muṇḍinī (Skull-bearer) and Kaivartī (Fisherwoman) are the female attendants (praticārikā).[51] (55cd)

The goddess Lolā (Lustful), Vicitrā (Peculiar) and Bhābhūtī (Wealth of Light), the third, along with the triad beginning with Veśyā (the Prostitute) are engaged in service.[52] (56)

The Three Male Servants

The servants are three men each with (his own) separate name: Kallola (Wave), Kṛkara (Crane) and Kāmeśvara (Lord of Passion), the third.[53] (57)

In the same way Siddhanātha is another one. He is the lord and master of them all. The rest have been named. They are the servants that stand at the door. (58)

एवं दक्षिणपीठं तु ओड्डियाणाद्[२२०] विनिर्गतम् ।

श्मशानं[२२१] तत्र चोद्यानं[२२२] लकुटं[२२३] नाम[२२४] भीषणम् ।। ५९ ।।
योगिचक्रं स्थितं तत्र दिव्ययोगिनिसंयुतम् ।
श्मशानपालकस्तत्र[२२५] च्छिन्नमुण्डकपालधृक् ।। ६० ।।

क्षुरधारैव[२२६] तत् तीव्रं विषमं कौलगोचरम् ।
मारयेत् क्षणमात्रेण मूढानां[२२७] नामधारकम्[२२८] ।। ६१ ।।

विश्वासं[२२९] नैव[२३०] हन्तव्यं[२३१] पीठे जालन्धरे शुभे[२३२] ।
दर्पं[२३३] तत्र न कर्तव्यं यदि साक्षात् सदाशिवः ।। ६२ ।।

ईदृग् जालन्धरं[२३४] पीठं[२३५] जालाव्वा[२३६] तत्र विश्रुता ।
कराला संस्थिता मुद्रा पीठच्छाया[२३७] च रक्तजा ।। ६३ ।।

रक्तश्चापि[२३८] पुनः सिद्धः वीरैः सुरवरार्चितः ।
पुष्पसंज्ञं[२३९] भवेत् पीठं कुमारो नामनामतः ।। ६४ ।।
शावरेण[२४०] तु[२४१] रूपेण तत्र[२४२] सा शवरी[२४३] स्मृता[२४४] ।
सिद्धयोगिनिनामा[२४५] च चर्यासिद्धं महाबलम्[२४६] ।। ६५ ।।

शेषान्ये[२४७] परिचाराश्च क्रियामार्गेष्वनुक्रमात्[२४८] ।
दिव्यवर्षशतार्धे[२४९] च संस्थिता परमेश्वरी ।। ६६ ।।
बहुरूपधरात्युग्रा[२५०] उत्पतेत्[२५१] गगनान्तरे[२५२] ।

The Southern Seat (Dakṣiṇapīṭha)[54] has emerged from Oḍḍiyāṇa in this way.[55] (59ab)

Lakuṭa - The Cremation Ground

There is a garden there and a frightening cremation ground called Lakuṭa (Cudgel). A circle of yogis resides there along with divine Yoginīs. The guardian of the cremation ground there carries the skull of a severed head. (59cd-60)

That (cremation ground) is the domain of Kaula (kaulagocara), dangerous and sharp as a razor's edge, it kills fools and the hypocrite in a moment. (61)

One should never betray (someone's) trust in (this) sacred seat, that is, in auspicious Jālandhara. If one is (indeed) Sadāśiva directly apparent there, then one should not be proud (in that sacred place).[56] (62)

The Three Gestures

Such is Jālandhara, the sacred seat, the mother (avvā) Jālā is famous there. The gesture present (there) is (called) Karālā (and along with her are the goddesses) Pīṭhacchāyā (Shade of the Sacred Seat) and Raktajā (Born from Blood). (63)

The Yogi and the Yoginī

Again, the accomplished yogi (siddha) (who resides there) along with the heroes is red and is worshipped by the best of the gods. The sacred seat is called `the Flower'.[57] Śavarī is said (to reside) there along with (the god) whose form is that of a (tribal) Śāvara and named Kumāra (the Youth).[58] (Her) name is Siddhayoginī and Caryāsiddha,[59] immensely powerful (resides there along with her). (64-65)

The remaining (residents) are attendants who are, in due order, on the paths of (ritual) action. The Supreme Goddess (resided) there for one hundred and fifty divine years.[60] (Then) extremely fierce and possessing many forms, she flew up into the Sky.[61] (66-67ab)

ऋषयो[२५३] द्वादशस्तत्र[२५४] आज्ञार्थिन उपागताः[२५५] ।। ६७ ।।
पूर्वाब्दैरतीतैश्च[२५६] सिद्धनाथेन दीक्षिताः ।
प्राणत्यागेन सद्भक्ता अन्वये सिद्धिभाजनाः ।। ६८ ।।

कपिलश्चैव[२५७] वाल्मीकः[२५८] भृगुः[२५९] श्रीवत्सभृङ्गिराट्[२६०] ।
ऋषभस्तिमिरश्चैव[२६१] गालवः[२६२] सूर्यरश्मयः[२६३] ।। ६९ ।।
कुमारश्चन्द्रमा ज्योतिः[२६४] शक्रश्चैव तु द्वादशः ।

एवं त्रेतायुगे[२६५] प्रोक्तं दक्षपीठावतारकम्[२६६] ।। ७० ।।
ओडियाणाद्[२६७] विनिष्क्रान्तं[२६८] द्वितीयं पीठनायकम्[२६९] ।

अथ तृतीयकं वक्ष्ये यथा भवति तच्छृणु[२७०] ।। ७१ ।।
क्वचिद्[२७१] देशं[२७२] तथा रम्यं देशानामुत्तमो[२७३] निधिः ।
दिशां[२७४] दक्षिणदिग्भागे[२७५] दक्षिणापथमण्डले[२७६] ।। ७२ ।।

तत्रैव चोत्तमा लोका भक्तिवन्तो दृढव्रताः ।
एतद्देशे[२७७] महादेशे[२७८] अस्ति वै भैरवाश्रमम् ।। ७३ ।।

भैरवामृतसंपूर्णं[२७९] गिरौ मध्ये विराजते ।
पूर्वैव[२८०] संस्थितो देवो विमलार्थप्रबोधकः ।। ७४ ।।

पञ्चाशद् भैरवास्तत्र क्रीडयन्ति[२८१] मुहुर्मुहुः ।
* * * * * * * * आगता भक्तितत्पराः ।। ७५ ।।
क्रीडयन्ति महायाने[२८२] अमृतेन तु पूरिताः[२८३] ।

पूर्णचन्द्रावलोकेन[२८४] शवरी[२८५] दिव्यरूपिणी ।। ७६ ।।
समत्वात् सर्वभूतानां[२८६] समरी तेन चोच्यते[२८७] ।
कला[२८८] पूर्णोदिता[२८९] भूत्वा[२९०] पातालाच्च[२९१] समुत्थिता ।। ७७ ।।
पीतवर्णा सुशोभाढ्या दिव्यमालास्वलंकृता[२९२–२९३] ।

The Twelve Sages

There are twelve sages there who have come desirous of (the goddess's divine) Command. Initiated by Siddhanātha in the previous years (they became) true devotees by abandoning their lives and, within the tradition (anvaya), they are accomplished (siddhibhājana). (67cd-68)

Kapila and Vālmīka, Bhṛgu, Śrīvatsa, Bhṛṇgirāṭ, Ṛṣabha, Timira and Gālava - (these are like) the rays of the sun (along with) Kumāra, Candramas, Jyoti and Śukra, the twelfth. (69-70ab)

Such is said to be the one who has brought down the sacred seat (into this world) which is on the right (dakṣa)[62] during the Tretā Age. He, the second leader of a sacred seat, came forth from Oḍiyāṇa.[63] (70cd-71ab)

Pūrṇagiri

Now I will explain the third. Listen to how it is. There is a country somewhere that is so beautiful that it is the most excellent treasure of (all) countries. The direction (in which it lies) is in the southern quarter, in the region of the Deccan (dakṣiṇāpathamaṇḍala).[64] (71cd-72)

The best of people, devout and of firm vows, (live) there. Located in that country, in that great country, is Bhairava's hermitage. (73)

Completely full (sampūrṇa) of Bhairava's nectar, it radiates (beautifully) in the midst of the mountain (giri).[65] And the deity (deva) who awakens to the pure reality resides (there) in front of it. (74)

Fifty Bhairavas play there repeatedly. * * * * They came (here) intent on devotion and filled with the nectar (of bliss) play on the great path (mahāyāna) (of manifestation).[66] (75-76ab)

Samarikā - the Goddess of the Sacred Seat

Śavarī (who resides there) is divine by virtue of (her) gaze (which is) the Full Moon. (She is the essential) equality (samatva) of all beings (within which she is equally present) and so she is said to be Samarī, the energy which, fully active (pūrṇoditā), has arisen out of the netherworld (pātāla).[67] Yellow[68] and very beautiful, she is adorned with a divine garland. (76cd-78ab)

तत्राश्रमे[२९४] स्थिरं चित्तं[२९५] कृतं[२९६] निश्चलभावना[२९७] ॥ ७८ ॥
तेन निश्चलमाख्यातं भैरवस्याक्षचिञ्चिणी ।

एवं समरिका नाम[२९८] स्थिता परमवासना ॥ ७९ ॥
कुलजासप्तभिर्युक्ता[२९९] अष्टमी तु शिवात्मिका ।

एवं ज्ञात्वा[३००] तु सिद्धोऽसौ प्रविष्टः[३०१] पीतविग्रहः ॥ ८० ॥
अदृष्टविग्रहो जातो[३०२] गतः[३०३] पादाग्रभूतले ।
मण्डलोत्थापितं[३०४] भक्त्या यथोक्तं कुलशासने ॥ ८१ ॥

कृता[३०५] पूजा यथा चोक्ता पश्चिमे योगिनीगृहे ।
स्तुवते[३०६] तु नमस्कारैर्विविधै रतिविग्रहः[३०७] ॥ ८२ ॥
शक्त्युच्छालस्वरूपेण प्लवते च मुहुर्मुहुः ।
कृतं दण्डनमस्कारं[३०८] तोषिता तेन भैरवी ॥ ८३ ॥

संतुष्टा ददते आज्ञां[३०९] वीरचक्रे व्रज स्वयम् ।
आहरस्व[३१०] महाफल्गुं[३११] वीरचक्रात् सुरेश्वर[३१२] ॥ ८४ ॥

एवं[३१३] श्रुत्वा गतः सिद्धस्तत्रैवान्तरतं क्वचित्[३१४] ।
प्रविष्टो वीरचक्रे[३१५] तु भूचरीणां तु मध्यतः[३१६] ॥ ८५ ॥
आमिषार्थी[३१७] स्थितस्तस्मिन् अहोरात्रञ्च[३१८] पञ्चकम् ।

ततोऽभ्यन्तरसंस्थैश्च[३१९] विज्ञप्तमामिषार्थिनम्[३२०] ॥ ८६ ॥
तच्चक्रं क्षोभितं[३२१] तस्य महाक्षोभमजायत[३२२] ।

चक्रस्थैर्विहितः[३२३] सिद्धो[३२४] मथित्वा[३२५] घटके[३२६] कृतः ॥ ८७ ॥
विक्षेपं[३२७] मध्यतः क्षिप्तं व्योममुद्रासुमुद्रितम्[३२८] ।
पञ्चरात्रस्थितं यावत् तिष्ठते[३२९] घटकान्तरे[३३०] ॥ ८८ ॥

By means of (her) unmoving (niścala) contemplation, (she) has made the mind firm there in (that) hermitage and so it is called unmoving (niścala).[69] (78cd-79a)

In this way, Bhairava's (consort, the goddess) Akṣaciñciṇī (Ciñciṇī of the Letters), called Samarikā abides in the supreme abode (paramavāsanā)[70] and is associated with the seven (energies) born from Kula[71] while the eighth is (herself who is) Śivā by nature.[72] (79bcd-80ab)

Bhairava's Initiation

Once known (all things) thus, he (Bhairava) the accomplished one (siddha), whose form is yellow,[73] entered (therein). He became invisible and went to a piece of ground in front of (the goddess's) feet (where he) generated (utthāpita) the maṇḍala[74] with devotion as taught in the Kula teachings. (80cd-81)

Once the rite of adoration (pūjā) had been performed as taught in the western Yoginī's House,[75] he whose form is sexual pleasure (rati)[76] praised (the goddess) with many kinds of salutation and, by means of the outpouring of the energy (of Kuṇḍalinī) (śaktyucchāla), flew up repeatedly (into the expanse of the transcendent).[77] Having prostrated fully, (the goddess) Bhairavī was satisfied by that.[78] (82-83)

Pleased, (the goddess) gave (him the following) Command (ājñā):[79] "Go by yourself (svayam) to the Assembly of the Heroes (vīracakra)[80] and take the Great Meat (mahāphalgu),[81] O lord of the gods, from (that) Assembly of Heroes." (84)

Having heard this, the accomplished one, disappeared somewhere there itself. He entered the Assembly of the Heroes and abided in the midst of the Bhūcarī (Earth Wandering Yoginīs) for five days and nights desirous of meat. (85-86ab)

Then, he who desired meat was reported (vijñapta) by those within (the Assembly) and that Assembly was aroused (kṣubhita) and he became greatly aroused.[82] (86cd-87ab)

The accomplished one was massaged (vahita)[83] by the members of the Assembly (cakrastha) and having churned (his genitals) he was placed in a small jar. The ejaculated (sperm) (vikṣepa) was emitted (kṣipta) in the middle (of the Assembly)[84] and, well sealed by the Gesture of Space (vyomamudrā), stood in (that) small jar for five nights.[85] (87cd-88)

देव्यायाज्ञाप्रभावेन[३३१] घटं स्फोट्य विनिर्गतः[३३२] ।[३३३]
क्षणार्धं[३३४] तिष्ठते तत्र गृह्णते[३३५] आमिषं ततः[३३६] ॥ ८९ ॥[३३७]
तच्चक्रं त्रसितं[३३८] तस्य छलं[३३९] कृत्वा गतः स्वयम्[३४०] ।

प्राप्ते[३४१] देव्याश्रमस्थाने पादाब्जं च नमस्करेत्[३४२] ॥ ९० ॥
दृष्ट्वा तं भैरवानन्दं हृष्टा वदति भैरवी ।
द्वितीयद्रव्यमानीतं[३४३] योगिचक्रात् सुरेश्वर ॥ ९१ ॥
त्रितत्त्वयोगयुक्तानां[३४४] प्रत्ययं[३४५] ते[३४६] कृतं महत् ।

श्रुत्वा हृष्टमनो भूत्वा विज्ञपेद्[३४७] योगिमण्डलम्[३४८] ॥ ९२ ॥
गतोऽहं युष्मदाज्ञातः[३४९] खेचरीचक्रमेलके[३५०] ।

तस्मिन् चक्रे प्रविष्टोऽहं विज्ञप्तमामिषार्थिनम्[३५१] ॥ ९३ ॥
श्रुत्वैवं चक्रसंस्थैस्तु क्षोभाविष्टैर्महाबलैः[३५२] ।
मथित्वा तु अहं क्षिप्तो मद्यकुम्भान्तरे[३५३] ततः ॥ ९४ ॥

विक्षेपं[३५४] कुम्भमध्ये[३५५] तु पञ्चरात्रावधिस्थितम्[३५६] ।
ततो[३५७] आज्ञाबलेनैव देव्यापादाग्रस्मरणात्[३५८] ॥ ९५ ॥
तं[३५९] घटं स्फोटयित्वा तु निर्गतोऽहं च्छलेन[३६०] तु ।

एवं श्रुत्वा तदा तुष्टा पुनराज्ञां[३६१] ददेच्छुभाम् ॥ ९६ ॥
नाम दत्तं[३६२] महारत्नं षष्ठदेवं महागुरुम्[३६३] ।

प्रतिचाराः[३६४] स्थितास्तत्र योगचिन्तासमन्विताः ॥ ९७ ॥
भैरवास्तत्र पञ्चाशत् पूर्णगिर्यां[३६५] समागताः ।

तेन[३६६] तद् भैरवं[३६७] क्षेत्रं भैरवीसिद्धिदायकम् ॥ ९८ ॥
आगतास्तत्र ते सर्वे देव्यापादार्चने[३६८] रताः ।

(Then) by the power of the goddess's Command, (the god) burst apart the jar and emerged out of it. (The accomplished one) stood there (barely) half a moment and then took the meat. The Assembly was overcome with fear (while Bhairava), having played his trick (chala),[86] left of his own accord (svayam). (89ab-90ab)

When he reached the place where the goddess's hermitage is located, he saluted (her) lotus feet. When Bhairavī saw him, (the embodiment of) Bhairava's bliss,[87] overjoyed, said: "O lord of the gods, you have brought (meat) the second (sacrificial) substance from the Assembly of Yogis. In this way (you have) engendered a great sign of attainment (pratyaya) for those engaged in the Yoga of the Three Principles (tritattvayoga)".[88] (90cd-92ab)

Upon hearing (these words) (the god) was delighted and told (the goddess about) the Assembly (maṇḍala) of Yogis: "Commanded by you, I went (there) to the meeting of the Assembly of Skyfarers (khecarīcakramelaka). (92cd-93ab)

I entered that Assembly (cakra) and I was reported to be one who desired (the sacrificial) meat. Having heard this, those powerful beings present in the Assembly, penetrated by (a state of) arousal, churned (me) and having done so I was then cast (kṣipta) into a wine jar. (93cd-94)

The ejaculated (seed) (vikṣepa) stood within the jar for five complete nights. Then, by the power of (the divine) Command (evoked) by the recollection of the fore part of the goddess's feet, I burst apart the jar and got out by means of (this) trick (chala)."[89] (95-96ab)

Then, when (the goddess) had heard this, she was satisfied and gave the great teacher another auspicious Command that is, she told (him his initiatory) name, (which is) Ṣaṣṭhadeva, the great jewel. (96cd-97ab)

The Fifty Bhairavas

There, in that place, are attendants endowed with the contemplation of Yoga (yogacintā). Fifty Bhairavas have come there to Pūrṇagiryā. (97cd-98ab)

Therefore, that is Bhairava's field which bestows Bhairavī's accomplishment. All of those who have come there are devoted to the worship of the goddess's feet. (98cd-99ab)

पञ्चोपचारपूजाया[३६९] अलिफल्गुसमायुतैः[३७०] ।। ९९ ।।
पूजिता[३७१] पीठदेव्या[३७२] च स्तुतिस्तोत्रैरनेकधा[३७३] ।

असिताङ्गः[३७४] सिताङ्गश्च कापाली भृकुटी कृतः[३७५] ।। १०० ।।
क्रोधं चैव तथोन्मत्तं करालं भीषण[३७६] विदुः ।
महेश्वरं महाकायं अट्टहासं च तुम्बुरुम्[३७७] ।। १०१ ।।
महाकायं नृसिंहश्च[३७८] विजयं पशुपतिस्तथा ।
खट्वाङ्गी डामर[३७९] टङ्कं चण्डीशं च प्रचण्डवान्[३८०] ।। १०२ ।।
मुण्डधारी शिवं शम्भु[३८१] उड्डाम[३८२] डामरं तथा ।
अर्धनारी वृद्ध[३८३] शुक्रं कालं चण्डं कुलेश्वरम् ।। १०३ ।।
लम्बोष्ठं घर्घरं घोरं कालदंष्ट्रोग्ररूपिणम्[३८४] ।
भीमनास[३८५] वज्रकायं कौलीशं गोवृषध्वजम् ।। १०४ ।।
रक्ताम्बरधर[३८६] शूली व्यग्रोग्रं पिङ्गलं भृगुः ।
त्रैलोक्यभासुर[३८७] चैव एवं पञ्चाशद् भैरवाः ।। १०५ ।।

कथिताश्चानुपूर्वेण सिद्धिदाः स्मरिताः[३८८] सदा ।
श्रीपूर्वान् भाषयेत्[३८९] सर्वान् पूजितव्याः[३९०] प्रयत्नतः ।। १०६ ।।
सर्वे आज्ञाविधेयाश्च देव्याः पदाब्जपूजकाः[३९१] ।
प्रतिचारास्ते विज्ञेयाः[३९२] पूर्णगिर्या[३९३] महायशाः ।। १०७ ।।

कुलदेव्यस्तथा[३९४] शम्भो खट्टिक्याद्याः[३९५] स्मृतास्त्रयः[३९६] ।
त्रयेते[३९७] परिचर्याया[३९८] त्रिकसंज्ञा[३९९] तथा[४००] भवेत् ।। १०८ ।।

विजया दमना चैव महिमा च तृतीयका ।
त्रयेते[४०१] खट्टिक्याद्यास्तु[४०२] चेल्लकास्त्रयमेव[४०३] हि ।। १०९ ।।

The goddess of the sacred seat was worshipped many times in the rite of adoration with five offerings (pañcopacārapūjā)[90] with hymns and lauds, along with meat and wine. (99cd-100ab)

(The fifty Bhairavas are): Asitāṇga (Black Body) (A) and Sitāṇga (White Body) (Ā), Kāpālin (Skull Bearer) (I), Bhṛkuṭin (Knitted Eyebrows) (Ī), Kṛta (Created) (U) along with Krodha (Anger) (Ū) and Unmatta (Madman) (Ṛ), Karāla (Fierce) (Ṝ) (and the one the wise) know (as) Bhīṣaṇa (Horrific) (ḷ), Maheśvara (Great Lord) (Ḷ), Mahākāya (Big Body) (E),[91] Aṭṭahāsa (Loud Laugh) (Ai), and Tumburu (O), Mahākāya (Big Body) (Au) and Nṛsiṁha (Man Lion) (Ṁ), Vijaya (Victory) (Ḥ), and Paśupati (Lord of the Creatures) (Ka), Khaṭvāṇgin (Staff -bearer) (Kha), Ḍāmara (Warlock) (Ga), Ṭaṅka (Axe) (Gha), Caṇḍīśa (Lord of Wrath) (Ṅa), and Pracaṇḍavat (Wrathful) (Ca), Muṇḍadhārin (Bearing a Severed Head) (Cha), Śiva (Ja), Śambhu (Jha), Uḍḍāma (Beyond Control) (Ña), Ḍāmara (Warlock) (Ṭa), Ardhanārin (Hermaphrodite) (Ṭha), Vṛddha (Aged) (Ḍa), Śukra (Sperm) (Ḍha), Kāla (Death) (Ṇa), Caṇḍa (Wrath) (Ta), Kuleśvara (Lord of Kula) (Tha), Lamboṣṭha (Long Lip) (Da), Gharghara (Jar) (Dha), Kāladaṁṣṭra (Death's Teeth) (Na), Ugrarūpin (Horrific Form) (Pa), Bhīmanāsa (Terrific Nose) (Pha), Vajrakāya (Lightning Body) (Ba), Kaulīśa (Lord of Kaula) (Bha), Go (Cow) (Ma), Vṛṣa (Bull) (Ya), Dhvaja (Banner) (Ra), Raktāmbaradhara (Red Clothed) (La), Śūlin (Lancer) (Va), Vyagrogra (Agitated and Fierce) (Śa), Piṅgala (Tawny) (Ṣa), Bhṛgu (Sa), Trailokya (Triple World) (Ha) and Bhāsura (Shining One) (KṢa). Such are the fifty Bhairavas, mentioned in due order. (100cd-105)

Recalled at all times (they are) the bestowers of accomplishment. (Their names) should be uttered with the (preceding honorific) ` śrī '[92] and they should be worshipped with effort. They are all subject to (the goddess's) Command and worship the goddess's feet. One should know (these gods) of great fame to be the attendants in Pūrṇagiri. (106-107)

The Three Goddesses, Maids and Attendents

In the same way, O Śambhu, there are said to be three Kula goddesses (in Pūrṇagiri), namely, Khaṭṭikī and the rest.[93] These three are (together engaged) in service and they are called the triad (trikasaṁjñā).[94] (108)

Vijayā (Victory), Damanā (Control) and Mahimā (Glory), the third - these three are the three maids (cellakā)[95] corresponding to (the three) beginning with Khaṭṭikī. (109)

विक्रमं डोबिकं[४०४] सद्यं[४०५] तेषां संज्ञात्रयं[४०६] विदुः ।
प्रतिचाराः स्मृता ह्येते परिकर्मे[४०७] उदाहृताः[४०८] ॥ ११० ॥
अन्येषां[४०९] प्रतिचारीणां[४१०] देवगन्धर्वयोषिताम् ।
परिसंख्या न विद्यते[४११] मण्डलाग्रे वरानने[४१२] ॥ १११ ॥

एवं देव्याः[४१३] स्वरूपेण पूर्णपीठमुदाहृतम्[४१४] ।
पूर्णाव्वा[४१५] प्रकटा ज्ञेया गुप्तपीठमतः शृणु[४१६] ॥ ११२ ॥

खेचरं नाम पीठं तु[४१७] शवरीदेवतालयम्[४१८] ।

माता च[४१९] मङ्गलाव्वा च षष्ठदेवः[४२०] स्वयं प्रभुः ॥ ११३ ॥
पद्ममुद्रा[४२१] पुनस्तत्र ध्यानपीठमुदाहृतम्[४२२] ।

एवं भैरवपीठं तु श्मशानं[४२३] कथयामि ते ॥ ११४ ॥
नाम्ना उड्डामराख्यं तु सभयं योगिनिर्भयम् ।

समयं[४२४] संस्थितं तत्र[४२५] कौलभेदं[४२६] तु भूतले ॥ ११५ ॥
तेन कष्टतरं रौद्रं कालं[४२७] तत्र व्यवस्थितम् ।

सिद्धिभाजनवीराणां योगज्ञानप्रबोधकम् ॥ ११६ ॥
योगिनां[४२८] सिद्धिदातारं[४२९] अन्येषां न कदाचन ।

श्मशानपालकस्तत्र नाम्ना च विकृताननः[४३०] ॥ ११७ ॥
एवं चोत्तरपीठं तु दक्षसिंहासने स्थितम् ।

दिव्यवर्षशतं सार्धं[४३१] स्थित्वा सा गगनं[४३२] गता ॥ ११८ ॥
सिद्धनाथेनानुष्ठानं[४३३] बहुकालं कृतं स्वयम् ।

The wise know the names of the three to be Vikrama (Valour), Ḍobika (Washerman) and Sadya. These three are said to be the (male) attendants (paricāra) said to be (engaged) in the service (of the goddess).[96] O fair faced lady, the other attendants in front of the maṇḍala, that is, gods, celestial musicians (gandharva) and women, are innumerable. (110-111)

Thus, Pūrṇa(giri), the sacred seat of the goddess, has been described according to (its true) nature. One should know Pūrṇāvvā (Mother Pūrṇā) to be clearly visible (prakaṭā) (there). (112abc)

Khecara - the Hidden Sacred Seat

Listen then (to the teaching concerning) the hidden sacred seat (guptapīṭha).[97] (This) sacred seat, called Khecara (the Skyfarer), is the abode of the deity Śavarī. (112d-113ab)

And the mother[98] (here) is Maṇgalāvvā (Auspicious Mother), while Ṣaṣṭhadeva[99] is himself the lord. Again, the Gesture of the Lotus (padmamudrā) is there and it is called the sacred seat of meditation (dhyāna). (113cd-114ab)

Uḍḍāmara - the Cremation Ground

In the same way, I will now tell you about the cremation ground that is Bhairava's sacred seat (bhairavapīṭha).[100] It is called Uḍḍāmara. (Although) frightening (for common people), it frees yogis from fear (yoginirbhaya). (114cd-115ab)

The Rule (samaya) is present there.[101] It is the Kaula division (kaulabheda) (here) on the surface of the earth. Thus Death (kāla), who is extremely severe and fierce (raudra), resides there. (115cd-116ab)

It awakens the heroes endowed with accomplishments (siddhi) to the knowledge of Yoga. It bestows accomplishment to yogis, never to anyone else. (116cd-117ab)

The guardian of the cremation ground there is called Vikṛtānana (Deformed Face). And so, the Northern Seat (uttarapīṭha) is on the lion throne on the right (dakṣasiṁhāsana).[102] (117cd-118ab)

Having resided (there) for one hundred and fifty divine years[103] (the goddess) went (up into) the sky (leaving) Siddhanātha (who) for a long time performed the rites himself (svayam). (118cd-119ab)

दिव्यज्ञानप्रभावेण[४३४] तत्रैवान्तरधीयत[४३५] ॥ ११९ ॥
द्विपञ्च[४३६] ऋषयस्तेन शिष्यपुत्राः कृतान्वये[४३७] ।
वरुणं[४३८] च तथागस्ती वृद्धं[४३९] शुक्रं जनार्दनम् ॥ १२० ॥
यमं[४४०] च नारदं केतुं[४४१] राहुश्चैव द्विपञ्चकम्[४४२] ।

पूर्णपीठावतारं[४४३] तु संजातं[४४४] द्वापरे युगे ॥ १२१ ॥
जालन्धराद् विनिष्क्रान्तं तृतीयं पीठनायकम्[४४५] ।

चतुर्थं संप्रवक्ष्यामि अवतारं यथा भवेत्[४४६] ॥ १२२ ॥
द्वीपान्ते दिव्यमस्तीति स्थानं सिद्धाश्रमं महत् ।
क्वचिद् देशं[४४७] महारम्यं दिव्यं चातिमनोरमम् ॥ १२३ ॥
सान्निध्यं भवते[४४८] तत्र योगिनीनां गृहे गृहे ।

समयं[४४९] सर्वभूतानां[४५०] शास्त्रोऽयं[४५१] श्रीकुजामतम् ॥ १२४ ॥
भगाख्या कामरूपेण तत्र कामेश्वरी स्थिता ।

रससिद्धास्तु[४५२] पञ्चाशत् कामेच्छाक्रीडनिर्भराः[४५३] ॥ १२५ ॥
तेन सिद्धाश्रमं[४५४] प्रोक्तं[४५५] शवरी[४५६] दृढयौवना[४५७] ।

स्वयंभूर्जायते भूमौ शून्यदेवकुलोत्तरे[४५८] ॥ १२६ ॥
मातरीसप्तसहिता[४५९] अष्टमी तत्र देवता ।

देवागारे[४६०] भ्रमेन्नित्यं कदम्बाख्यं[४६१] त्रिलोचन[४६२] ॥ १२७ ॥
तेन वृक्षं[४६३] समाख्यातं कदम्बं[४६४] कामरूपके ।

The Ten Sages

(He) became invisible there itself by the power of divine knowledge (i.e. the Command), and he made ten sages (his) disciples, that is, sons belonging to the lineage. (They were): Varuṇa and Agastī, Vṛddha (Aged), Śukra (Sperm), Janārdana (Castigator of the People), Yama, Nārada and Ketu with Rāhu, the tenth. (119cd-121ab)

Pūrṇapīṭha descended (into this world) in the Dvāpara Age. (This), the third leader of the sacred seats, emerged out of Jālandhara.[104] (121cd-122ab)

Kāmarūpa

Kāmeśvarī, Her Attendents and the Kadamba Tree

Now I will tell (you) about the fourth descent. There is a place on the Island (of the Moon) called `Divine'. It is the great hermitage of accomplished yogis (siddhāśrama).[105] This place, which is somewhere (in the higher spheres of reality),[106] is very comfortable, divine and extremely beautiful. There (yogis enjoy) the intimate presence (sānnidhya) of the Yoginīs in every house.[107] (122cd-124ab)

The Rule (samaya) of all living beings is this scripture, the venerable Kujāmata. Kāmeśvarī (the Mistress of Passion), called the `Yoni' (bhaga) resides there in the form of passion (kāma). (124cd-125ab)

Fifty accomplished alchemists (rasasiddha) (reside there) full of desire to play love games. Thus it is said to be the hermitage of accomplished yogis (siddhāśrama) (where the goddess) Śavarī,[108] in the full vigour of youth, (resides). (125cd-126ab)

Self-generated (svayambhū) (she) arose in the world, in the Northern Kula of the Lord of the Void (Śūnyadeva). (She is) the deity there who, accompanied by the seven Mothers,[109] is the eighth one. (126cd-127ab)

O Three-eyed one, the (Point - bindu - otherwise) called Kadamba, should rotate constantly in (the centre of the triangle) the abode of the deity (devāgāra).[110] Thus the tree in Kāmarūpaka is said to be the Kadamba.[111] (127cd-128ab)

कामरूपी च भगवान् श्वेतरूपधरो[४६५] महान् ।। १२८ ।।
मित्रदेवः स्वयं सिद्धः शापानुग्रहकारकः ।

स्वामिभक्तिवशात्[४६६] तत्र अवतारं करोति[४६७] सः ।। १२९ ।।
पादुकाब्जं[४६८] नमस्कृत्वा[४६९] प्रविष्टो[४७०] योगिनीगृहे ।

कलकलरवं[४७१] मुञ्चति[४७२] देव्याः[४७३] पादाग्रस्मरणात्[४७४] ।। १३० ।।
मण्डलं स्थापयेद्[४७५] दिव्यं निर्दिष्टं यत् कुलान्वये ।

चिन्तामणिमहापुष्पैः[४७६] सुरा कादम्बरी शुभा ।। १३१ ।।
शावरी[४७७] पूजिता सिद्धैर्यया सृष्टं चराचरम्[४७८] ।

दिव्योल्का[४७९] निर्गता वक्त्रा[४८०] सिद्धनाथस्य पश्चिमे ।। १३२ ।।
कुलज्ञानं तथा प्राणं[४८१] सर्वस्वं च निवेदितम् ।

प्रदक्षिणशतं कृत्वा साष्टाङ्गं तु नमस्करेत्[४८२] ।। १३३ ।।
प्रसन्ना शवरी[४८३] तस्य आज्ञां[४८४] ददति पुष्कलाम्[४८५] ।

वदते[४८६] मित्रदेवेश उत्तिष्ठ जगतारक[४८७] ।। १३४ ।।
विचरस्व[४८८] यथाशक्त्या कामरूपे[४८९] कलौ युगे ।

सृष्टिसंहारकर्तारं[४९०] त्वमेकः[४९१] कुलशासने ।। १३५ ।।
गुटिकासिद्धिस्ते[४९२] दत्ता विचरस्व[४९३] यथासुखम् ।

पूजयित्वा नमस्कृत्वा सर्वे तत्र समागताः ।। १३६ ।।
ततो हृष्टमना भूत्वा देवी वचनमब्रवीत् ।
युष्मदुपार्जितं[४९४] किञ्चित्[४९५] गुटिकादि[४९६] महायशाः[४९७] ।। १३७ ।।
तत् सर्वं[४९८] मत्प्रसादेन सफलं च भविष्यति ।

Bhairava receives the Alchemical Pill

(There) the nature of the Blessed One (bhagavat) is Passion (kāmarūpin). He is great and his form is white.[112] (He is) Mitradeva himself, the accomplished one (siddha) who (both) curses and bestows grace. (128cd-129ab)

Swayed by (his) devotion to (his) lord (svāmin) (the goddess),[113] he descended there (into the world) and having saluted the lotus of (the goddess's) sandals (pādukābja), he entered the House of the Yoginī.[114] (129cd-130ab)

By recollecting the fore part of the goddess's feet he let out a loud noise and generated a divine maṇḍala in the manner taught in the (spiritual) family of the Kula (kulānvaya).[115] (130cd-131ab)

Śāvarī,[116] the auspicious (goddess of) Kādambarī wine (surā)[117] who has emitted the moving and immobile (universe) was worshipped by accomplished yogis with wish-granting gems (offered as) great flowers. (131cd-132ab)

The (goddess) Vakrā, the divine fire falling from heaven (divyolkā),[118] emerged to the west (paścima) of Siddhanātha[119] (who) offered (her) the knowledge of Kula, (his) vital breath (prāṇa) and all (he) possessed (sarvasva).[120] (132cd-133ab)

He circumambulated (her) a hundred times and then saluted, prostrating fully (before her). Pleased with him, Śavarī gave him (her) powerful Command. (133cd-134ab)

She said: "Arise, O Mitradeva, saviour of the universe, move (freely) in Kāmarūpa during the Age of Strife according to (your) power. (134cd-135ab)

According to Kula doctrine you are the sole creator and destroyer.[121] The Accomplishment of the Pill (guṭikāsiddhi)[122] has been given (to you). (Now) wander (freely) as you please". (135cd-136ab)

Once they had worshipped and saluted (the goddess), they all came there. Then the goddess, delighted, said: "O greatly famed ones, whatever you have earnt (including the Accomplishment of) the Pill and the rest, will all be fruitful by my grace." (136cd-138ab)

एव[४९९] लब्धवरा[५००] भूत्वा तत्रैवान्तरसंस्थिताः[५०१] ॥ १३८ ॥
प्रतिचाराः[५०२] स्मृताः सर्वे पञ्चाशाज्ञाविधेयिकाः[५०३] ।

अकुल[५०४] विमलं योगी[५०५] आनन्दं कमलेश्वरम् ॥ १३९ ॥
बहुल[५०६] पुलिन[५०७] भूतिर्मदनः[५०८] कङ्कराट्[५०९] शिशुः ।
कुमुदं चपलं श्यामं तमाल[५१०] गदकोंकणम्[५११] ॥ १४० ॥
कौलीशं कमलं कान्ति[५१२] दमथ[५१३] अटवीमुखम् ।
अमृतं कुम्भकेशश्च कालनाम[५१४] तु घुर्घुरम्[५१५] ॥ १४१ ॥
अमोघं सुन्दर[५१६] चैव संवर्त[५१७] प्रभुरव्ययम् ।
क्रोधीश[५१८] नयनं कान्ति आकाशं परमं शशिः[५१९] ॥ १४२ ॥
कौबेरं कुलवागीशं कुबेरं विरजं विदुः ।
नित्यानन्दं तथा श्वेतं योगेश्वर[५२०] गणेश्वरम्[५२१] ॥ १४३ ॥
सोमेश्वर[५२२] कुलाधारं नक्त[५२३] धूर्जटि[५२४] संख्यया ।
एवं पञ्चाशत् सिद्धाश्च मातृकादेरनुक्रमात्[५२५] ॥ १४४ ॥

सिद्धा[५२६] रसकृषा देव स्थिता आस्थानमण्डपे ।
प्रतिचारी[५२७] तथा सप्त तत्रैव[५२८] च व्यवस्थिताः[५२९] ॥ १४५ ॥

त्रीणि[५३०] बाह्ये समुद्दिष्टाः[५३१] शिल्पिनी चक्रिणी द्वयम्[५३२] ।
मातङ्गिनी[५३३] तृतीया च त्रयेते[५३४] प्रतिचारिकाः[५३५] ॥ १४६ ॥
गुप्तसंज्ञा भवेत् तेषां यथा शास्त्रे निगद्यते ।

सुनन्दिनी[५३६] च भद्रा च च्छिंच्छा[५३७] देवी तृतीयका ॥ १४७ ॥
चेल्लकाः[५३८] प्रतिचाराश्च[५३९] तार[५४०] वज्रधर[५४१] कुलम् ।

The Fifty Rasasiddhas

When they had received (their) boon in this way, they stood there within (the maṇḍala of Kāmarūpa). Executors of the (goddess's) Command, all fifty are said to be (her) attendants. (138cd-139ab)

(They are): Akula (A), Vimala (Pure) (Ā), Yogin (I), Ānanda (Bliss) (Ī), Kamaleśvara (Lord of the Lotus) (U), Bahula (Abundance) (Ū), Pulina (Sandy Shore) (Ṛ), Bhūti (Wealth) (Ṝ), Madana (Inebriation) (ḷ), Kaṅkarāṭ (Lord of the Herons) (Ḷ), Śiśu (Child) (E), Kumuda (Lotus) (Ai), Capala (Fickle) (O), Śyāma (Dark Blue) (Au), Tamāla (Palm Tree) (Ṁ), Gada (Mace) (Ḥ), Koṅkaṇa (Ka), Kaulīśa (Kha), Kamala (Lotus) (Ga), Kānti (Beauty) (Gha),[123] Damatha (Self-control) (Ṅa), Aṭavī (Grove) (Ca), Mukha (Face) (Cha), Amṛta (Nectar) (Ja) and Kumbhakeśa (Lord of the Jar) (Jha), the one called Kāla (Death) (Ña), Ghurghura (Worm) (Ṭa),[124] Amogha (Unfailing) (Ṭha) and Sundara (Beautiful) (Ḍa), Saṁvarta (Doomsday Fire) (Ḍha), Prabhu (Lord) (Ṇa), Avyaya (Imperishable) (Ta), Krodhīśa (Lord of Wrath) (Tha), Nayana (Eye) (Da), Kānti (Beauty) (Dha), Ākāśa (Space) (Na), Parama (Supreme) (Pa), Śiśi (Moon) (Pha), Kaubera (Ba), Kulavāgīśa (Lord of the Speech of Kula) (Bha), (and the one the wise) know (as) Kubera (Ma), Viraja (Shining) (Ya), Nityānanda (Eternal Bliss) (Ra) and Śveta (White) (La), Yogeśvara (Lord of Yoga) (Va), Gaṇeśvara (Lord of Hosts) (Śa), Someśvara (Lord of the Moon) (Ṣa), Kulādhāra (Foundation of Kula) (Sa), Nakta (Night) (Ha) and Dhūrjaṭi (Dredlock) (KṢa). Such, according to (their) number, are the fifty Siddhas, corresponding in due order to (the fifty) energies of the alphabet (mātṛkā) and the rest. (139cd-144)

O god, the accomplished Yoginī (siddhā), Rasakṛṣā (Thin with the Alchemical Potion) resides in the pavilion of the assembly and seven female attendants (praticārī)[125] (also) reside there. (145)

The Six Female Attendents and the Three Male Servants

It is taught that three are on the outside, namely, the two, Śilpinī (the Sculpteress) and Cakriṇī (the Mover of the Wheel) along with Mātaṇginī (the Sweeper) as the third. These are the three female attendents. They have secret names, as taught in the scripture. (146-147ab)

Sunandinī (Well Praised) and Bhadrā (Auspicious) with the goddess Cchiṁcchā[126] (Tamarind) as the third, are the maids (cellakā). Again, the (male) servants are Tāra (Saviour), Vajradhara (Bearer of the Thunderbolt) and Kula.[127]
(147cd-148ab)

त्रयेते[५४२] स्मृतास्तत्र[५४३] प्रतिचाराश्च भैरव ।। १४८ ।।
एवं सिद्धाश्रमं ह्युग्र[५४४] देव्या[५४५] आज्ञाप्रभावतः[५४६] ।

तेन पीठं समाख्यातं नाम्ना वै कामरूपकम् ।। १४९ ।।
कामुकत्वे यदा[५४७] देवो कामरूपं तदुच्यते ।

श्वेत[५४८] वर्णं भवेत् तस्मिन् श्वेतरूपेण नायकी ।। १५० ।।
उभयोर्योगभावेन बालिका पीठदेवता ।

भगाग्रे तु विजानीयात् पीठेद[५४९] कामरूपकम् ।। १५१ ।।
कामार्थाय[५५०] समायुक्तं गुप्तयुग्मं ब्रवीम्यहम् ।
उच्छुष्मपीठ[५५१] वरारोह[५५२] शावरस्य[५५३] तु शावरी[५५४] ।। १५२ ।।
नाम्ना सा कोङ्कणा[५५५] देवी कोंकणात्[५५६] तु विनिर्गता ।

तथा च भवते सिद्धः मित्रदेवेति[५५७] नामतः ।। १५३ ।।
योनिमुद्रा[५५८] विजानीयात्[५५९] योन्यग्रे मातृमण्डले ।

तत्रैवान्तरमार्गस्थं श्मशानमटवीमुखम्[५६०] ।। १५४ ।।
नायकस्तत्र विख्यातः शङ्खपालः[५६१] कृतान्तवत् ।

राक्षसास्तस्य[५६२] सेवन्ते तथा गगननायकाः[५६३] ।। १५५ ।।
रात्रौ प्रज्वलिते[५६४] दीपे[५६५] क्रीडते[५६६] योगिनीगणम् ।

यमचक्रं स्थितं तत्र योगिनीवीरसंगमम्[५६७] ।। १५६ ।।
रौद्रदिने[५६८] सुऋक्षे[५६९] च मेलाप[५७०] भवते ततः ।

O Bhairava, these are the three servants who are said to be there. Thus, by the power of the goddess's Command, the Hermitage of Accomplished Yogis (siddhāśrama)[128] is terrific (ugra). (148cd-149ab)

Kāmarūpaka, Ucchuṣma, the secret seat, the secret couple, the Siddha and the Gesture

Thus it is called a sacred seat, Kāmarūpaka by name. When the god is in a passionate state (kāmukatva), that is said to be Kāmarūpa. (149cd-150ab)

Within it is the colour white and the mistress (nāyakī) whose form is white.[129] Bālikā (the Girl) is the deity of the sacred seat by virtue of the state of union (yogabhāva) of both. Know that this sacred seat, Kāmarūpaka, is at the front of the Yoni (bhagāgra). (150cd-151)

I will (now) explain the secret couple (guptayugma), united in order to (fulfil their) passion (kāma). O fair-hipped one, (this is) the sacred seat (called) Ucchuṣma.[130] The Śāvarī of the Śāvara (here) is the goddess Koṅkaṇā by name who has come forth from Koṅkaṇa. (151cd-153ab)

And in the same way, the accomplished yogi (who resides here) is called Mitradeva.[131] Know that the Gesture of the Yoni (yonimudrā) is located at the front (agra) of the Yoni in the Circle of the Mothers (mātṛmaṇḍala).[132] (153cd-154ab)

Aṭavīmukha - the Cremation Ground, the Field and the Seat

There, located on the inner (antara) path, is the cremation ground (called) Aṭavīmukha. The leader there, (as formidable) as (the Lord of) Death (kṛtānta), is called Śaṅkhapāla (Protector of the Conch). (154cd-155ab)

Demons (rākṣas) and the Leaders (of the deities and Siddhas) in the Sky (gaganānāyaka) serve him and at night a troupe of Yoginīs plays (there) (in the light of a) lighted lamp. (155cd-156ab)

The congregation (cakra) of Yama (the lord of the dead) is present there (where) Yoginīs and heroes meet. Then union (melāpa) takes place (between them) on Rudra's day at an auspicious time (suṛkṣe). (156cd-157ab)

विषयं[५७१] कुलकौलं तु योगिनीवीरमेलकम् ॥ १५७ ॥
सिद्धनाथः[५७२] स्थितस्तत्र अन्तर्धाने[५७३] महाप्रभुः ।

एवं तदग्रपीठं तु पीठदेव्या[५७४] समन्वितम् ॥ १५८ ॥
संस्थिता दिव्यरूपेण[५७५] कामभोगसुखे रता[५७६] ।

दत्वा सिद्धस्य पीठं तं[५७७] गता सा खेचरीक्रमे ॥ १५९ ॥
ततः सिद्धान्वयं[५७८] जातं अनेकास्तत्र दीक्षिताः ।

चित्रसेनो[५७९] नासिकस्तु[५८०] शुकस्त्रैलोक्यपालकः ॥ १६० ॥
कपाली डामरश्चैव विघ्नेशं कालपाशकम् ।
ऋषयोऽष्टौ[५८१] स्मृता ह्येते दीक्षिताः[५८२] सिद्धनायकाः ॥ १६१ ॥

कामरूपावतारोऽयं[५८३] संजातं[५८४] च कलौ युगे ।
पूर्णपीठाद् विनिष्क्रान्तं[५८५] भुक्तिमुक्तिफलप्रदम् ॥ १६२ ॥

एवं कृतयुगारभ्य[५८६] पीठाम्नायं चतुष्टयम् ।
यो वेत्ति[५८७] स किलाम्नाये[५८८] अन्यथा नामधारकः ॥ १६३ ॥

तस्मिन् कलियुगस्यान्ते[५८९] श्रीमत्कामाख्यमण्डले[५९०] ।
तस्मिन् सिद्धाश्रमे पूर्वे अटव्यां[५९१] तिस्रसंज्ञकम्[५९२] ॥ १६४ ॥
नदीस्रोतत्रये[५९३] मध्ये विघ्नेशं क्षेत्रपालकम्[५९४] ।

देवताश्रमं[५९५] तत् स्थानं तिस्रपीठेति[५९६] सूचितम् ॥ १६५ ॥
भक्तिहीने शठे लोके मन्दाज्ञा संप्रवर्तते ।

The field (viṣaya) is Kulakaula that engenders the union of heroes and Yoginīs. Concealed, the great lord Siddhanātha resides there. (157cd-158ab)

In this way, that sacred seat which is situated in the front (i.e. the lower corner of the triangle) (agrapīṭha) has a goddess of the seat (pīṭhadevī). She resides (there) in a divine form, devoted to the bliss of the enjoyment of passion (kāmabhoga). (158cd-159ab)

Once bestowed that sacred seat on the accomplished one, she entered the Transmission of the Skyfaring (Goddesses) (khecarīkrama).[133] Thus a lineage of Siddhas (siddhānvaya) came into being and many were initiated there. (159cd-160ab)

The Eight Ṛṣis

Citrasena (Whose Army is Diverse), Nāsika (Nose), Śuka (Parrot), Trailokyapālaka (Guardian of the Triple World), Kāpalin (Skull Bearer), Ḍāmara (Warlock), Vighneśa (Lord of Obstacles) and Kālapāśaka (Bond of Death). These are said to be the eight sages (ṛṣi) (of this seat, all of whom) are initiates and leaders of accomplished yogis. (160cd-161)

This is Kāmarūpa's descent (into this world) that has taken place during the Age of Strife. It has emerged from Pūrṇapīṭha[134] and bestows the fruit of (both) worldly benefits and liberation. (162)

Thus, starting from the Kṛta Age, this is the four-fold tradition of the sacred seats. He who knows (this) is indeed in the tradition (āmnāya) otherwise (he is so only) by name. (163)

Tisra - The Sacred Seat of the Future

At the end of that Age of Strife,[135] (the sacred seat) called `Tisra' will[136] be (located) in the region (maṇḍala) of the venerable Kāmākhya, in that Hermitage of Accomplished Yogis (siddhāśrama)[137] in the eastern grove. (Situated) in the midst of the current of three rivers, the guardian of the field (there) is Vighneśa (the Lord of Obstacles). (164-165ab)

That place is the hermitage of the deity. It is called Tisrapīṭha. The Command that operates in (this) deceitful world devoid of devotion is weak.[138] (165cd-166ab)

द्वीपान्ते चोत्तरे भागे त्रिकूटभुवनेषु च ॥ १६६ ॥
माया[५९७] मातङ्गिरूपेण त्रिषु[५९८] स्रोतसु[५९९] मध्यतः ।

तिस्रनद्यां[६००] गतं स्थानं यक्षकन्दरमागतम् ॥ १६७ ॥
कृतं[६०१] तत्रावतारं[६०२] तु पीठं[६०३] तिस्राख्यसंभवम्[६०४a] ।

कृतः[६०४b] पूर्वतनुर्देव[६०५a] गोपितो[६०५b] मर्त्यलोकतः ॥ १६८ ॥
कलावर्धे[६०६] ततो[६०७] देवं[६०८] प्रकटं पञ्चमं भवेत् ।

तत्रारभ्य क्रमायातं ततः[६०९] संवर्तकं भवेत् ॥ १६९ ॥
आज्ञायास्तमनं[६१०] भूयः वर्तते मर्त्यलोकतः[६११] ।

त्वया सार्धमनुष्ठानं[६१२] मया[६१३] पूर्वं[६१४] कृतं ततः ॥ १७० ॥
त्वं च तत्र मतङ्गीशं[६१५] संजातं[६१६] चान्तिमे युगे ।

अन्त्यजाज्ञाप्रसूतिस्तु पुनः सन्तानमर्हति ॥ १७१ ॥
पुनः स्थितिक्रमादाय[६१७] तिस्रपीठाद् विनिर्गतम्[६१८] ।

उघं गुरुगृहं[६१९] देव[६२०] तैलिकाक्रममण्डलम् ॥ १७२ ॥
प्रकटं तद् भविष्येत[६२१] सद्योज्ञानं[६२२] प्रवर्तते ।

महासान्निध्यमतुलं[६२३] एवं[६२४] पीठान्वयं[६२५] भवेत् ॥ १७३ ॥
तस्मिन् युगे[६२६] ह्यहं[६२७] वृक्षं[६२८] त्वया ह्यकुलकन्दरे ।
एतद् युगान्तिमं पीठं पञ्चमं[६२९] पीठनायकम् ॥ १७४ ॥

चतुर्थे कलियुगे प्राप्ते म्लेच्छराज्ये तु उत्तरे ।
इतरे गुरुशिष्ये तु[६३०] लोभमोहवशं गते[६३१] ॥ १७५ ॥
आज्ञावेशे[६३२] गते[६३३] क्षीणे अधिकारे क्षयं गते ।
समयभङ्गसंप्राप्ते[६३४] गुरोराज्ञा च लङ्घने[६३५] ॥ १७६ ॥
पुनः सृष्टिं[६३६] करिष्यामि अवतारं तु पञ्चमम् ।

(The goddess) Māyā, in the form of Mātaṇgī (the Sweeper Woman), (resides) on the Island (of the Moon)[139] in the northern part amidst the worlds of the Triple Peak (trikūṭa)[140] in the middle of the three currents. (166cd-167ab)

'The Descent of the Lord and the Goddess into the Sacred Seat and the Establishment of a New Transmission'

(The Lord) reached the Ravine of the Tree Spirits (yakṣakandara), which is a place on the river Tisra and having descended there (into the world) the sacred seat called `Tisra' came into being. [141] (167cd-168ab)

O god, having fashioned a body (like the) previous one (he lay) hidden in the world of mortals. Then, at the end of the Age of Strife, the fifth god should become manifest. (168cd-169ab)

Then, beginning from there, is the Doomsday Fire (saṁvartaka)[142] that has come in due order. Once again, the (divine) Command disappears in the world of mortals. (169cd-170ab)

Formerly, I worshipped along with you and then you became Mataṅgīśa there in the last (of the four) ages. (170cd-171ab)

The last born progeny (prasūti)[143] of the Command should have a lineage (santāna) again. (So), taking up again the sequence of emanation,[144] it has emerged from the seat (called) Tisra. (171cd-172ab)

O god, the current (of the lineage) (ugha) is the Teacher's House, that is, the Kramamaṇḍala of the Oilpresser Girl (tailikā).[145] That will become manifest and the instantaneous knowledge (sadyojñāna)[146] (of ultimate reality) will operate (in the world). (172cd-173ab)

In this way the tradition (anvaya) of the sacred seat will be one of great proximity (to the deity) (mahāsānnidhya) and it will have no equals. In that age I am the Tree along with you in the Ravine of Akula.[147] That is the sacred seat of the end of the age[148] and the fifth leader of the seats. (173cd-174)

When the fourth age, that of strife, comes and there will be a barbarian kingdom (mleccharājya) in the north (of India).[149] When the teacher and disciple of (every) other (tradition) come under the sway of greed and delusion; when the penetration of (the divine) Command has waned and authority is no more; when the Rule (samaya) has been broken and the Command of the teacher is disregarded, I will again bring about (a new) emanation, namely, the fifth incarnation (avatāra). (175-177ab)

तिस्राख्ये[६३७] तु महापीठे सर्वपीठपरीवृते[६३८] ।। १७७ ।।
सर्वेषामुत्तरे[६३९] घोरे सद्योनिग्रहकारके[६४०] ।

पुनः स्थितिं क्रमौघस्य[६४१] तस्माद् वै[६४२] पीठपञ्चमात्[६४३] ।। १७८ ।।
तत्[६४४] चाष्टाविंशमं भेदं[६४५] पूज्यमानं भविष्यति ।

कुब्जिका अधिकारिणी[६४६] तथा सिद्धो[६४७] मतङ्गकः ।। १७९ ।।
द्वावेतौ[६४८] सृष्टिकर्तारौ कलिस्यान्ते[६४९] न संशयः ।

एवं पीठं भवेत् तिस्रं गुप्तं वै पीठनायकम् ।। १८० ।।
तिस्रपीठे[६५०] तु तिस्राव्वा[६५१] त्रिषु लोकेषु विश्रुता[६५२] ।

गुप्तसंज्ञा भवेत् तत्र बिन्दुतत्त्वे व्यवस्थितम् ।। १८१ ।।
कुचन्द्रं[६५३] पीठसिद्धं[६५४] च अव्वा[६५५] सा वक्रिका[६५६] स्वयम् ।

क्रमसंज्ञा तथा मुद्रा भवते तु कदम्बिनी ।। १८२ ।।
ताडनात् ताडिवृक्षं[६५७] तु दह्यमानं भवेत् ततः ।

दिव्यज्ञानप्रभावेण[६५८] सिद्धनाथे[६५९] प्रकाशितम्[६६०] ।। १८३ ।।
पञ्चमं चोत्तमं पीठं कलिस्यान्ते[६६१] न संशयः ।

तिस्रपीठात् समारभ्य पूजाक्रिया[६६२] प्रवर्तते ।। १८४ ।।
ॐकारादितः[६६३] पीठानां[६६४] उक्ता ये प्रतिचारकाः[६६५] ।
प्रतिचार्यश्च[६६६] ताः सर्वाः[६६७] भविष्यन्ति च पञ्चमे ।। १८५ ।।
भविष्यन्ति न संदेहो तिस्राख्ये पीठनायके ।

श्मशानानामघोरं[६६८] तु सुरसिद्धनमस्कृतम्[६६९] ।। १८६ ।।
नायकं[६७०] घोरनामानां[६७१] ससिद्धामरवन्दितम् ।

अर्धचन्द्रोत्तरे[६७२] पीठं भगमूर्ध्नि[६७३] विनिर्गतम् ।। १८७ ।।
तत्रस्था परमा काली दिव्यज्ञानप्रकाशकी[६७४] ।

(This will occur) in the great sacred seat called `Tisra'. Surrounded by all the sacred seats, it is the highest of all (uttara) and, horrific (ghora), immediately chastises (nigraha) (the wicked).[150] (177cd-178ab)

By virtue of that, the fifth sacred seat, the current of the Transmission (kramaugha) will again be stable and that, the twenty-eighth division,[151] will be worshipped. (178cd-179ab)

Kubjikā (will have) authority (here) and the accomplished yogi (will be) Mataṅgaka (the Sweeper). At the end of the Age of Strife these two are certainly the creators (sṛṣṭikartṛ). (179cd-180ab)

Such is the sacred seat Tisra, the hidden leader of the seats. Tisrāvvā,[152] famous in the three worlds, resides in Tisrapīṭha. (180cd-181ab)

There, her name is secret and she is established in the Principle of the Point (bindutattva).[153] The accomplished yogi of the seat is Kucandra[154] while the mother (avvā) is Vakrikā herself. (181cd-182ab)

The name of the transmission (krama) and the gesture is Kadambinī. The tree is the Tāḍī[155] (so called) because it `beats' (tāḍanāt) and so should be burnt. (182cd-183ab)

Without a doubt, this, the fifth and best seat, (will be) revealed to Siddhanātha by the power of divine knowledge at the end of the Age of Strife. (183cd-184ab)

Ritual action (pūjākriyā) starts from Tisrapīṭha. The attendants, male and female, said be those of the sacred seats from OM onwards, will all be in (this), the fifth one.[156] They will certainly be (there), in the leader of the seats called `Tisra'. (184cd-186ab)

Saluted and praised by the gods and accomplished yogis, (this sacred seat is) the leader, (in itself) not terrible (aghora), of those (beings) called `terrible' (ghora) and of the cremation grounds. (186cd-187ab)

(This is the) sacred seat above the Half Moon that has emerged on top of the Yoni (bhagamūrdhni). The supreme Kālī, who illumines divine knowledge, resides there.[157] (187cd-188ab)

पारम्पर्ये[६७५] क्रमं ज्ञानं शास्त्रोऽय[६७६] विमलं मतम् ॥ १८८ ॥
भविष्ये[६७७] प्रकट[६७८] नाथ कलिस्यार्धे न संशयः ।

इदं पीठावतारोऽय[६७९] कथितं तव सुन्दर ॥ १८९ ॥
भविष्यं च विभाव्यते[६८०] पञ्चमं तिस्रपीठकम् ।

बालक्रमं च कामाख्ये[६८१] खेचरं जालपीठके ॥ १९० ॥
कौमारं पूर्णपीठे तु ओडियाणे[६८२] तु वृद्धकम् ।

एवं पीठक्रमं ज्ञात्वा पारम्पर्यक्रमागतम्[६८३] ॥ १९१ ॥
यस्तु संपूजयेन्नित्य[६८४] स साक्षाद् भैरवः स्वयम् ।

पीठान्[६८५] पर्यटते यो[६८६] वै आचार्यः[६८७] साधकोऽपि वा ॥ १९२ ॥
स मुक्तः[६८८] स शिवः साक्षात् साम्नायी[६८९] देशिकोत्तमः ।

ब्रह्महत्यासहस्रैक[६९०] गोहत्यामयुत[६९१] तथा ॥ १९३ ॥
सर्वपापा[६९२] विनश्यन्ति असंख्याः[६९३] पीठसेवनात् ।

पूजयेन्नित्यमेव[६९४] हि सदा पीठचतुष्टयम् ॥ १९४ ॥
तस्येच्छा भवते सिद्धिर्योगिनीनां प्रियो भवेत् ।

श्रीपूर्वान्[६९५] भाषयेत्[६९६] सर्वान्[६९७] पीठान्ते[६९८] यान्[६९९] व्यवस्थितान्[७००] ॥ १९५ ॥
तेभ्यो[७०१] लब्धवरो[७०२] भूत्वा रुद्रलोके महीयते ।

उडियाणे[७०३] प्रविष्टो यो[७०४] वीरो दर्प[७०५] करिष्यति ॥ १९६ ॥
दारिद्र्य[७०६] मरणं तस्य मासमेकं स जीवति[७०७] ।

This scripture (śāstra) is the pure doctrine (mata), which is the knowledge and the Transmission (krama) (handed down) through the series (of teachers pāramparya). O lord, it will certainly become manifest in the future at the end of the Age of Strife. (188cd-189ab)

O handsome one, I have told you this, the descent (into the world) of the (four) sacred seats and the sacred seat Tisra that is considered to be the fifth, future one. (189cd-190ab)

Conclusion: in praise of the four sacred seats and admonitions

The Transmission of the Child is in Kāmākhya, (that of) the Skyfarer (khecara) in the sacred seat of Jāla, that of the Youth in the seat of Pūrṇa (and that of) the Aged in Oḍiyāṇa.[158] (190cd-191ab)

He who constantly worships the transmission (krama) of the sacred seats that has come down through the sequence of the series (of teachers) (pāramparyakrama), having known it thus, is himself Bhairava directly apparent. (191cd-192ab)

He who does the round of the sacred seats, whether he be a teacher (ācārya) or an adept (sādhaka), is liberated. He is Śiva directly apparent (sākṣāt), he is (a true) member of the tradition and the best of teachers. (192cd-193ab)

By resorting (sevana) to the sacred seats, all (one's) countless sins are destroyed, whether one has committed brahminicide a thousand times (or even if) one has killed a myriad cows. (193cd-194ab)

(Thus) one should always and constantly worship the four seats in this way. The desire of one (who does) so becomes an accomplishment (siddhi) and he is dear to the Yoginīs. (194cd-195ab)

(The names) of all those who reside in a sacred seat should be uttered with a preceding (honorific) `śrī'.[159] Once obtained a boon from them, he waxes mighty in Rudra's world.[160] (195cd-196ab)

The Kaula adept (vīra) who has entered Uḍiyāṇa and cultivates pride (there) becomes poor and dies; (indeed) he lives (barely) for a month. (196cd-197ab)

जालन्धरे[७०८] तु यो दर्पं[७०९] मूढात्मा[७१०] च करिष्यति ।। १९७ ।।[७११]
तस्करो हनते[७१२] तस्य[७१३] नदी वा व्याधिदारुणा[७१४] ।
षण्मासं जीवितं तस्य म्रियते बान्धवैः सह ।। १९८ ।।

अथवा पूर्णपीठे[७१५] तु द्वेषं[७१६] संचरते[७१७] तु यः[७१८] ।
अहंकारं च[७१९] कुरुते अग्निदाहाद्[७२०] विनश्यति ।। १९९ ।।
अथवा विषसंग्रामे[७२१] म्रियते मासपञ्चमे[७२२] ।

कामरूपे सुखासीनः[७२३] कश्चिद्[७२४] दर्पं[७२५] करिष्यति ।। २०० ।।
अदृष्टमुद्गराघातः[७२६] पतते[७२७] तस्य मूर्धनि ।

शुष्यते[७२८] स्वशरीरेण म्रियते पक्षमध्यतः ।। २०१ ।।
दर्पं[७२९] कृत्वा तु सुभग[७३०] स गुरुर्नरकं[७३१] व्रजेत् ।

तस्मात् तस्य न भुक्तिः[७३२] स्यात् परत्र च न[७३३] विद्यते ।। २०२ ।।
तस्माद्[७३४] दर्पं न कर्तव्यं विद्वेषं[७३५] न समाचरेत्[७३६] ।

विनयाद् भवते भुक्तिर्मुक्तिर्वै[७३७] विनयाद् भवेत् ।। २०३ ।।
तस्माद् विनयकौलोऽयं विनयं[७३८] तु[७३९] समाचरेत् ।

वीरभोज्यं प्रकर्तव्यं ओजापूकाचतुष्टये[७४०] ।। २०४ ।।
कृत्वा पूजां[७४१] यथाशक्त्या पीठजान्[७४२] पूजयेत् तदा ।

साधकः सिद्धिमाप्नोति इहलोके परत्र च ।। २०५ ।।
रुद्राश्च भैरवा[७४३] वीराः[७४४] सिद्धाः[७४५] पूज्याश्चतुष्टये ।

चतुष्पीठावतारोऽयं[७४६] निर्णीतं तु चतुर्युगे ।। २०६ ।।
अटते[७४७] यो हि सत्येन आचार्यः स[७४८] कुले भवेत्[७४९] ।

त्रिमात्रं ज्योतिसंकाशं[७५०] वह्निमण्डलमध्यतः[७५१] ।। २०७ ।।
श्री–उद्यानमहं[७५२] वन्दे कौलिकाज्ञाप्रवर्तकम्[७५३] ।

A thief, river or terrible disease kills the deluded soul who is given to pride in Jālandhara. He lives for (only) six months and dies along with his relatives. (197cd-198)

Or again, he who despises (others) in the sacred seat (called) Pūrṇa and is proud dies by fire or else dies in the fifth month in a fierce battle. (199-200ab)

A blow by an invisible hammer falls on the head of whoever, seated comfortably in Kāmarūpa, acts proudly. (200cd-201ab)

He dries up along with his body and dies in the middle of the lunar fortnight. O handsome one, the teacher who has been proud goes to hell. (201cd-202ab)

Thus, he neither has (any) worldly benefit (bhukti) (in this world nor) is it found in the other (paratra). Therefore one should not be proud or hate (others). (202cd-203ab)

By right conduct (vinaya) (one attains worldly) benefits (bhukti), by right conduct (one attains) liberation. Thus, this is the Kaula (tradition) of right conduct (vinayakaula) and one should practice right conduct. (203cd-204ab)

One should eat heroes' food (vīrabhojya)[161] in the four sacred seats, Oḍiyāṇa, Jālandhara, Pūrṇagiri and Kāmarūpa (ojāpūkācatuṣṭaya). Once one has worshipped (the seats) to the best of one's ability, one should then worship those born of them. (204cd-205ab)

The adept (sādhaka) attains accomplishment in this world and the next. The Rudras, Bhairavas, heroes and accomplished yogis should be worshipped in the four (sacred seats).[162] (205cd-206ab)

This has been explained namely, the descent (into the world) of the four seats in the four Ages. He who wanders (from one to the other) in accord with truth (satyena) is a teacher in the Kula.[163] (206cd-207ab)

In Praise of the Sacred Seats

I praise the venerable Udyāna, the propagator of the Kaula Command which, in the centre of the Circle of Fire, is of three measures (trimātra) and is (as brilliant) as light. (207cd-208ab)

द्विमात्रं परमं तीव्रं दक्षकोणव्यवस्थितम् ॥ २०८ ॥
श्रीजालाख्यमहं[७५४] वन्दे मायाजालनियामकम् ।

एकमात्रं परं सूक्ष्मं परज्ञानप्रसिद्धिदम् ॥ २०९ ॥
वामकोणगतं वन्दे पूर्णाख्यं देवदुर्लभम्[७५५] ।

अर्धमात्रं सुसूक्ष्मं[७५६] तु परमानन्दरूपकम् ॥ २१० ॥
तदग्रे संस्थितं दिव्यं श्रीकामाख्यं नमाम्यहम् ।

श्रीचन्द्रद्वीपपुरान्तस्थं[७५७] त्रिभिः स्रोतप्रवाहकम्[७५८] ॥ २११ ॥
द्वादशान्तगतं[७५९] वन्दे कौलिकाज्ञाप्रवर्तकम् ।

एवमुक्त्वा गता शीघ्रं देवी अटनपीठकान्[७६०] ॥ २१२ ॥
कामरूपे[७६१] वाराणस्यां[७६२] नेपाले[७६३] पूर्णवर्धने[७६४] ।
पुरस्तीरे[७६५] कन्याकुब्जे[७६६] पूर्णगिर्यां[७६७] तथार्बुदे[७६८] ॥ २१३ ॥
आम्रातकेश्वरैकाम्रे[७६९] त्रिस्रोते[७७०] कामकोट्टके[७७१] ।
कैलासे भृगुनगरे[७७२] केदारे[७७३] चन्द्रपुर्यके[७७४] ॥ २१४ ॥
श्रीपीठे चैव एकोणे[७७५] श्रीजालन्धरमालवे[७७६] ।
कुलूत्यां[७७७] देविकोटे[७७८] च गोकर्णे[७७९] मरुकेश्वरे[७८०] ॥ २१५ ॥
अट्टहासे[७८१] तु विरजे[७८२] राजगृहे[७८३] महापथे[७८४] ।
एलापुरे[७८५] कोल्लगिर्यां[७८६] सोपारे[७८७] तु जयन्तिकाम्[७८८] ॥ २१६ ॥
उज्जयिन्यां[७८९] चरित्रे[७९०] च क्षीरिकां[७९१] हस्तिनापुरे[७९२] ।
ओदुकेसे[७९३] प्रयागाख्ये[७९४] पीठे मायापुरीं[७९५] तथा ॥ २१७ ॥
उरसां[७९६] मलये[७९७] चैव शैले[७९८] भेरुण्डके[७९९] तथा ।
माहेन्द्रं[८००] वारुणं[८०१] चैव हिरण्यपुरमेव[८०२a] च ॥ २१८ ॥
महालक्ष्मीं[८०२b] तथोद्याणं[८०३] छायाछत्रं ततो गता[८०४] ।

यत्र[८०५] यत्र गता देवी यत्र यत्रावलोकते[८०६] ॥ २१९ ॥
तत्र संदोहतीर्थानि[८०७] दिव्यान्यायतनानि[८०८] च[८०९] ।

I praise the venerable (seat) called Jāla that controls the net (jāla) of Māyā,[164] is of two measures and, supremely powerful (tīvra), is located in the right-hand corner (of the Triangle). (208cd-209ab)

I praise (the sacred seat) called Pūrṇa, hard to attain (even) by the gods, and the bestower of the fame of supreme knowledge. It is of one measure, supreme, subtle and located in the left-hand corner (of the Triangle). (209cd-210ab)

I salute the venerable (seat) called Kāma. Divine, it is located in the forepart of that (Triangle). Extremely subtle and half a measure, its nature is supreme bliss.[165] (210cd-211ab)

I salute the propagator of the Kaulika Command located at the End of the Twelve (finger space). Located within the venerable city of the Island of the Moon, it impels the flow of the current (of the teaching) with the three (transmissions).[166] (211cd-212ab)

The remaining sacred sites

Once she had said this, the goddess went with great speed to the sacred seats of pilgrimage (aṭanapīṭha).[167] (She went to) 1) Kāmarūpa (A), 2) Vārāṇasī (Ā),[168] 3) Nepāla (I), 4) Pūrṇavardhana (Ī), 5) Purastīra (U), 6) Kānyakubja (Ū), 7) Pūrṇagiri (Ṛ) and 8) Arbuda (Ṝ), 9) Āmrātakeśvara (ḷ), 10) Ekāmra (Ḹ), 11) Trisrota (E), 12) Kāmakoṭṭaka (Ai), 13) Kailāsa (O), 14) Bhṛgunagara (Au), 15) Kedāra (Ṁ), 16) Candrapuryaka (Ḥ), 17) Śrīpīṭha (Ka), 18) Ekoṇa (Kha), the venerable 19) Jālandhara (Ga), 20) Mālava (Gha), 21) Kulūta (Ṅa) and 22) Devikoṭa (Ca), 23) Gokarṇa (Cha), 24) Marukeśvara (Ja), 25) Aṭṭahāsa (Jha), 26) Viraja (Ña), 27) Rājagṛha (Ṭa), 28) Mahāpatha (Ṭha), 29) Elāpura[169] (Ḍa), 30) Kollagiri (Ḍha), 31) Sopāra (Ṇa), 32) Jayantikā (Ta), 33) Ujjaiyinī (Tha) and 34) Caritra (Da), 35) Kṣīrikā (Dha), 36) Hastināpura (Na), 37) Odukesa (Pa), the seat called 38) Prayāga (Pha), 39) (Pṛṣṭāpūra)[170] (Ba) and 40) Māyāpurī (Bha), 41) Urasā (Ma) and 42) Malaya (Ya), 43) Śrīśaila[171] (Ra) and 44) Bheruṇḍaka (La), 45) Māhendra (Va) and 46) Vāruṇa (Śa), 47) Hiraṇyapura (Ṣa), 48) Mahālakṣmī (Sa) and 49) Udyāṇa (Ha) and then she (finally) went to 50) Chāyāchatra (KṢa). (212cd-219ab)

[172]There are sacred sites (āyatana) (and other sacred places), sacred bathing sites (tīrthas)[173] and meeting grounds (saṁdoha), wherever the goddess went and wherever she cast her gaze. (219cd-220ab)

कृत्वा[८१०] च भारते वर्षे आत्मकीर्तिं[८११] कुलाम्बिके[८१२] ।। २२० ।।
तेन कौमारिकाखण्डं संजातं पुण्यपावनम् ।

पूर्वसन्तानदेवेन[८१३] यदुक्तं भारतं व्रज ।। २२१ ।।
ततः प्रभृतिर्देवेश[८१४] उभाभ्यां[८१५] मेलकं[८१६] त्विह ।

तत्[८१७] कृतं[८१८] सकलं देव्या आज्ञानन्दावबोधनम्[८१९] ।। २२२ ।।
आगता तु पुनस्तत्र[८२०] पूर्वरूपानुयायिनी[८२१] ।

देवोऽपि पूर्वसन्ताने[८२२] शिष्यः[८२३] सुरवरार्चितः[८२४] ।। २२३ ।।
श्रीमदोड्डुमहेशानं[८२५] कृत्वा चाज्ञां ददेत्[८२६] तु सा[८२७] ।

तदा च[८२८] भारते[८२९] वर्षे[८३०] इतः[८३१] प्रभृत्यनुग्रहम्[८३२] ।। २२४ ।।
उडुपीठपुरारभ्य[८३३] कुरु सृष्टिमनेकधा[८३४] ।

इत्याद्यावतारे[८३५] महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[८३६] अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके विद्यापीठमार्गे[८३७] विमलषट्कनिर्णये कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे
स्वमिनीमते[८३८] श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां[८३९] अव्वाक्रमभाषिते
श्रीनाथाज्ञापीठव्याप्तिनामानन्दः[८४०] ।। ६ ।।

O mother of Kula, (the goddess thus) established her fame in the land of Bhārata and so the meritorious and holy Region of the Virgin (goddess kaumārikākhaṇḍa)[174] came into being. (220cd-221ab)

O lord of the gods, the union with (us)[175] both is taking place here (in this world) from when[176] the god of the previous lineage (santāna) said (to me): "Go to (the land of) Bhārata".[177] (221cd-222ab)

Once the goddess had done all that namely, brought about the awakening of the bliss of the Command, she returned there in accord with her previous form. (222cd-223ab)

The god also in the previous lineage (pūrvasantāna) (was her) disciple, worshipped by the best of the gods. And having made (him) the venerable and great lord (maheśāna) Oḍḍu, she gave (him) the Command (again).[178] (223cd-224ab)

Then from that time onwards (there will be) grace in the land of Bharata. In order to reside again in the seat of Uḍu[179] bring about the emanation (of the universe) countless times (anekadhā).[180] (224cd-225ab)

This is the (sixth) chapter called the Pervasion of Śrīnātha's Sacred Seat of the Command (ājñāpīṭha). It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for a hundred and twenty-five thousand (verses). It is on the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha) and is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six (Thousand Verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

सप्तमानन्दः

श्रीनाथ उवाच

किमेतत्[१] पश्चिमं वेश्म अधिकारं[२] तु तस्य किम् ।
कथं दिव्यतनुर्मुद्रा[३] तथा चैव कुलक्रमम् ।। १ ।।

संकेतं[४] मूलभाषा च तथा चैव कुलागमम् ।
उपदेशं[५] न मे ज्ञातं सर्वं[६] कथय वक्रिके[७] ।। २ ।।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[८]

मन्थानस्य तु भेदस्य भैरवस्य तु संग्रहम् ।
कादिभेदं[९] प्रवक्ष्यामि सहस्रज्येष्ठकौलिकम्[१०] ।। ३ ।।

वक्रिकाक्रमसिद्धस्य आज्ञाशास्त्रं क्रमोदयम् ।
श्रीनाथ ते प्रवक्ष्यामि मेरुमार्गविनिर्गतम् ।। ४ ।।
चतुर्थे तु युगे प्राप्ते आद्यपीठावतारितम् ।

पश्चिमस्य गृहस्यैव अवतारं[११] कलौ युगे ।। ५ ।।
तस्योद्धारोपदेशं[१२] तु संप्रदायं[१३] तु कौलिकम् ।
आदिकादिसमायुक्तं सर्वसंहारमन्त्रितम्[१४] ।। ६ ।।
भैरवं भैरवीसार्धं[१५] तस्योर्ध्वे तु[१६] कुलक्रमम् ।
सप्ताविंशतिभिर्भेदैः[१७] संस्थितं तु[१८] विभेदतः[१९] ।। ७ ।।

गृहमित्यवतारोऽयं[२०] पश्चिमामुखमुत्तमम्[२१] ।
तस्योपदेशमपरं[२२] अवतारं[२३] च सिंहकम् ।। ८ ।।
षोडशैः[२४] षोडशैश्चैव अपरे चैव षोडश ।

CHAPTER SEVEN

The Authority of the Goddess in the Venerable City of the Moon

Śrīnātha said:

What is that Western House (veśman)? What is its authority? How is the Gesture (mudrā) (endowed) with a divine body and similarly, what is the Kula tradition (kulakrama)? (1)

(What) is the teaching (saṁketa)? (What) is the Root Language (mūlabhāṣā) and the Kula scripture (kulāgama)? O Vakrikā, I have not known the teaching (concerning these matters) tell me everything. (2)

The Descent of the Scripture

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

[1]I will expound the collection (saṁgraha) (of teachings) of the division of the Churning (manthāna) Bhairava, the Kaulika (scripture) of the Thousand Elders (sahasrajyeṣṭha) which is the division beginning with KĀ (kādibheda).[2] (3)

I will expound for you, O Śrīnātha, the scripture of the Command (ājñāśāstra). It is the dawning of the transmission (kramodaya) that has emerged from Meru. (It belongs to) the one who is accomplished in Vakrikā's transmission (krama) and was brought down (to earth) in the first seat (ādyapīṭha)[3] during the fourth Age.[4] (4-5ab)

It is the descent (into this world) of the Western House that has taken place during the Age of Strife. The teaching concerning the formation of its mantras (uddhāra) is a Kaulika tradition (saṁpradāya). Endowed with (all the letters in the series) beginning with `A' (i.e., the vowels) and (those) beginning with `Ka' (i.e., the consonants), it is consecrated (mantrita) with universal destruction.[5] Following after (tasyordhve) is the Kula Transmission divided into twenty-seven divisions[6] that belongs to Bhairava accompanied by Bhairavī. (5cd-7)

The Western House

The House is this descent (of the teaching into the world).[7] It is the Western Face,[8] the best (of all). Its teaching is the other (apara) descent (into the world), namely, that of the Lion (siṁhaka). (It takes place) along with sixteen (Siddhas) and with sixteen (more) and in the other (group there are) sixteen.[9]

एवं त्रितयसंयोगात् श्लोकानि[२५] द्वादशानि[२६] वै ॥ ९ ॥
गजेन्द्रं प्रथमं नाम विद्याकूटं च षड्विधम्[२७] ।

तद् वर्णं[२८] तच्छिवाकाशं तल्लिङ्गं[२९] तच्छिवेति[३०] च ॥ १० ॥
तदासौ आपबीजं[३१] तु देव्यात्मानं[३२] तथैव च ।

पदैकमष्टधा[३३] प्रोक्तं अंशश्लोकानि[३४] द्वादश[३५] ॥ ११ ॥

चन्द्रसूर्यशिवेच्छया[३६] कृत्वा[३७] वर्णगमागमम् ।
परस्परसमायोगादेतत्[३८] क्षेत्रपरिग्रहम्[३९] ॥ १२ ॥

अमृतादिविसर्गान्ताः[४०] कलाषोडशरश्मयः[४१] ।
तिर्यगा[४२] सा स्मृता रेखा कतान्ता[४३] वामदेवता ॥ १३ ॥
उन्नता दक्षिणे रौद्री थसान्तामित्यनुक्रमात्[४४] ।

ज्येष्ठा वामा च रौद्री च ब्रह्मविष्णुमहेश्वराः ॥ १४ ॥
एकीभावं त्रिभिर्यस्मात् तदासौ[४५] योगिनीगृहम्[४६] ।

अमृताद्यश्च[४७] जीवन्ति[४८] ये लिङ्गा[४९] योनिमण्डले[५०] ॥ १५ ॥
तेषां सिद्धाश्च[५१] योगिन्या[५२] उपर्युपरि योजयेत् ।

स्वरचक्रेश्वरी रेखा द्वितीया कादितान्तगा ॥ १६ ॥
थादिसान्ता[५३] तृतीया च त्रिभिः[५४] रेखैः[५५] सुरेश्वरी ।
पञ्चाशत् सिद्धयोगिन्यो[५६] अत्र ये ते[५७] वदाम्यहम् ॥ १७ ॥

Thus the Twelve Verses (are generated) by the conjunction of the three (groups of sixteen). The first (letter) is called the Lord of Elephants (gajendra) (Ca)[10] and the six-fold (seed-syllable called) the Peak of Knowledge (vidyākūṭa) (AIṀ).[11] (9cd-10ab)

That is the Letter (varṇa). That is Śiva's Void. That is the Liṅga and that is Śiva. That is the seed-syllable of Water[12] and the (very) Self of the goddess.[13] (10cd-11ab)

The verses that are the sections (aṁśa) (of the Twelve Verses) are twelve and one part (pada) (of each section) is said to be eight-fold.[14] (11cd)

This, the enclosure of the field (kṣetraparigraha) (is generated by) the mutual conjunction (of the letters) when the (energy of the) letters has been made to go and come impelled by the Moon, the Sun and Śiva's will.[15] (12)

The sixteen rays of energy (kalā)[16] are (the vowels) starting with Nectar (amṛta) (i.e. the letter A) and ending with Emission (visarga - Ḥ) (the last vowel). That is said to be the slanting line (which is) the deity on the left (vāmadevatā[17]) and has the letters Ka and Ta at its extremities (katāntā).[18] Raudrī is elevated (unnatā) on the right and is (the line of letters) ending (at the extremities with) Tha and Sa, in due order. (13-14ab)

(The three goddesses) Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā, and Raudrī (correspond to the gods) Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara. As a unity (is formed) by (these) three that is this, the House of the Yoginī (yoginīgṛha).[19] (14cd-15ab)

And the Siddhas of those Liṅgas namely, the (series of letters) beginning with Nectar (A), that live within the Circle of the Yoni (yonimaṇḍala)[20] should be conjoined at progressively higher levels (within the Triangle of Letters and along the sides)[21] with (their corresponding) Yoginī. (15cd-16ab)

The Mistress of the Wheel of Vowels (svaracakreśvarī) is (the first) line. The second begins with Ka and ends with Ta. Again, the third begins with Tha and ends with Sa. Sureśvarī (the Mistress of the Gods is formed with these) three lines. (Now) I will tell (you) who the fifty (pairs of) Siddhas and Yoginīs[22] are here. (16cd-17)

आनन्दं[५८] विमलं चिञ्चिमित्रमोडीशचर्यकम्[५९] ।
षष्ठदेवं[६०] तथा तूष्णी[६१] कदम्बं[६२] मौनिसंज्ञया ॥ १८ ॥
अद्वैतं सिंहनाथं[६३] च तथा कन्दर्पी[६४] क्राडकम्[६५] ।
वरदं[६६] चैव कौलीशं गरुडं[६७] पिङ्गलं खगम् ॥ १९ ॥
पञ्चकं चैव कल्लोलं तथा चैव तु खेचरम्[६८] ।
चन्द्रगर्भं[६९] गजेन्द्रं च कुण्डलं[७०] चन्द्रपुर्यकम्[७१] ॥ २० ॥
शङ्खनाथं च शवरं[७२] वीरदेवं[७३] च विक्रमम् ।
पिप्पलीशं[७४] पुलिन्दं[७५] च गोष्ठीशं कमलं तथा ॥ २१ ॥
गजकर्णं[७६] महेन्द्रञ्च ताराख्यं वर्चकेशकम् ।
अखण्डं च कुरङ्गं[७७] च तथा चैव तु वैफलम्[७८] ॥ २२ ॥
आज्ञानाथं विशुद्धाख्यं[७९] तथा चैव अनाहतम्[८०] ।
मणिपूर्णं[८१] स्वाधिष्ठानं[८२] अवतारं[८३] कुमारकम्[८४] ॥ २३ ॥
शिलाशेखरनाथं[८५] च क्रूरं[८६] च अतः परम् ।
अष्टचत्वारिंशद्[८७] ज्ञेया एवं सिद्धपरिग्रहम्[८८] ॥ २४ ॥
गृहं[८९] सिद्धक्रमेणैव श्लोकानां संप्रबोधकम्[९०] ।
अतोर्ध्वं[९१] संप्रवक्ष्यामि गृहदेव्या[९२] यथाक्रमम् ॥ २५ ॥
शर्वरी शवरी चैव शावरी[९३] च पुलिन्दिका ।
क्लिन्ना[९४] कामेश्वरी देवी शाकिनी भूतडामरी ॥ २६ ॥
कोटरी शङ्खिनी चैव किङ्किणी च करङ्किणी[९५] ।
अव्वादेवी[९६] समायाख्या सुषिरा[९७] रत्नसुन्दरी ॥ २७ ॥
रक्ताक्षी अग्निजिह्वा च उच्छुष्मा नारजिह्विका[९८] ।
अम्बिका लम्बिका चैव तथा चैव कदम्बिनी ॥ २८ ॥
भद्रकाली च सिद्धा च शुष्का[९९] चैवापराजिता ।
घोरा चैव अघोरा च थघोरा च भगानना[१००] ॥ २९ ॥
नन्दिनी मालिनी चैव संहारी[१०१] कपिला तथा ।
विव्वा[१०२] विद्युत्पताका[१०३] च कापालिन्या[१०४] तथैव च ॥ ३० ॥
महामाया च पेप्पिर्या च[१०५] च्छोम्मा योगमायिका[१०६] ।

The Forty-eight Siddhas

Ānanda (Bliss - A), Vimala (Pure - Ā), Ciñcīmitra (Friend of (the goddess) Ciñcī I), Oḍḍīśa (Ī), Caryaka (U), Ṣaṣṭhadeva (Ū) and Tūṣṇī (Ṛ), Kadamba (Ṝ) along with (the one) called Maunī (Silent - ḷ), Advaita (Non-duality - Ḷ), Siṁhanātha (Lion Lord - E) and Kandarpin (Dredlock - Ai), Krāḍaka (O) and Varada (Bestower of Boons - AU), Kaulīśa (AṀ), Varuṇa (Ḥ), Piṅgala (Tawny One - Ka), Khaga (Bird - Kha), Pañcaka (the Five) and Kallola (Wave - Ga) as well as Khecara (Skyfarer - Gha), Candragarbha (Containing the Moon - Ṅa), Gajendra (Lord of the Elephants - Ca), Kuṇḍala (Earring - Cha), Candrapuryaka (City of the Moon - Ja), Śaṅkhanātha (Conch Lord - Jha) and Śavara (Ña), Vīradeva (Lord of the Heroes - Ṭa) and Vikrama (Valour - Ṭha), Pippalīśa (Ḍa), Pulinda (Sandy Bank Ḍha), and Goṣṭhīśa (Lord of the Assembly - Ṇa) along with Kamala (Lotus - Ta), Gajakarṇa (Elephant Ear - Tha) and Mahendra (Da), the one called Tāra (Saviour - Dha), Varcakeśaka (Luminous Haired - Na), Akhaṇḍa (Unbroken - Pa) and Kuraṅga (Deer - Pha) as well as Vaiphala (Ba), Ājñānātha (Lord of the Command - Bha), the one called Viśuddha (Pure - Ma) as well as Anāhata (Unstruck Sound - Ya), Maṇipūrṇa (Full of Jewels - Ra), Svādhiṣṭhāna (Self Supported - La), Avatāra (Incarnation - Va), Kumāraka (Youth - Ṣa), Śilāśekharanātha (Lord of the Peak of the Mountain - Śa) and then Krūra (Cruel One - Sa). (18-24ab)

(These) forty-eight should be known. Such is the enclosure (of the Triangle formed) by the Siddhas (siddhaparigraha). The House awakens the verses (of the mantra called Twelve Verses) by means of the sequence (krama) of Siddhas. (24cd-25ab)

The Forty-eight Yoginīs

Next I will tell (you) the goddesses of the House in due order. Śarvarī (A) and Śavarī (Ā), Śāvarī (I) and Pulindikā (Ī), Klinnā (Wet - U), the goddess Kāmeśvarī (Mistress of Passion - Ū), Śākinī (Ṛ), Bhūtaḍāmarī (Ṝ), Koṭarī (ḷ), and Śaṅkhinī (Conch - Ḷ), Kiṅkiṇī (Tinkle - E) and Karaṅkiṇī (Skeleton - Ai), the goddess Avvā (Mother - O) with the one called Māyā (Au), Suṣirā (Cavity - Ṁ), Ratnasundarī (Jewel Beauty - Ḥ), Raktākṣī (Red Eye - Ka) and Agnijihvā (Fire Tongue - Kha), Ucchuṣmā (Ga), Nārajihvikā (Possessing a Man's Tongue - Gha), Ambikā (Little Mother - Ṅa) and Lambikā (Tall One - Ca) along with Kadambinī (Cha), Bhadrakālī (Auspicious Kālī - Ja), Siddhā (Accomplished - Jha) and Śuṣkā (Dry - Ña) along with Aparājitā (Unconquered - Ṭa), Ghorā (Horrific - Ṭha), and Aghorā (Not Horrific - Ḍa) along with Thaghorā (Ḍha) and Bhagānanā (Vulva Face - Ṇa), Nandinī (Ta), Mālinī (Tha) and Saṁhārī (Da)[23] along with Kapilā (Tawny - Dha), Vivvā (Na), Vidyutpatākā (Lightning Flag - Pa) and Kāpālinyā (Skull Bearer - Pha), Mahāmāyā (Ba) and Peppiryā (Bha), Cchommā (Ma) and Yogamāyikā (Ya), Kālikā (Ra), Mīnameṣā (Fish Sheep - La), Kālasaṁkarṣaṇī (Attractress of Time - Va), Parā (Supreme - Ṣa), Śivādūtī (Śa) and Vicitrā (Sa). One should know (these) goddesses in due order. (25cd-32ab)

कालिका मीनमेषा च कालसंकर्षणी परा ॥ ३१ ॥
शिवादूती विचित्रा च ज्ञेया देव्यः क्रमेण तु ।

सिद्धपत्नीसमूहोऽयं शुद्ध[१०७] देव्याः[१०८] परिग्रहम्[१०९] ॥ ३२ ॥
यथा वर्णास्तथा सिद्धाः देवतायोनिमण्डले ।
एतद् वै[११०] श्लोकराश्यादौ[१११] सिद्धक्रममुदाहृतम् ॥ ३३ ॥
कृत्वादौ प्रणवान्[११२] पञ्च अव्वापादावसानगम्[११३] ।
अनेन विधिना देव यष्टव्यं पश्चिमं गृहम्[११४] ॥ ३४ ॥

शिवः[११५] शक्तिर्गृहस्यान्ते[११६] हक्षावेतौ[११७] वरानन[११८] ।
श्रीमैत्रेय[११९] कुचन्द्राख्य[१२०] श्रीमान्देवी[१२१] च कुब्जिका ॥ ३५ ॥
द्वावेतौ[१२२] युगपद्[१२३] योज्यौ पञ्चस्थौ[१२४] कूटवेश्मनि ।

पञ्चादौ पञ्चभिश्चान्ते तयोर्मध्ये च विद्यया ॥ ३६ ॥
सा चाज्ञा प्रत्यय[१२५] लोके त्रैलोक्ये[१२६] महन्तारिका ।

यमवलोकयेत्[१२७] सा तु सोऽपि[१२८] याति[१२९] परे पदे ॥ ३७ ॥
परे प्राप्ते पदे देव तदा सिद्धिं[१३०] ध्रुवं लभेत् ।
इत्याश्रमे[१३१] मुखाम्नायः[१३२] त्रिभिर्भेदैः[१३३] प्रकीर्तितः[१३४] ॥ ३८ ॥

ऊर्ध्व[१३५] षोडशसिद्धाज्ञा सिद्धाः षोडश[१३६] उत्तरे ।
दक्षिणे षोडशश्चैव[१३७] शिवो[१३८] मध्ये च देवता ॥ ३९ ॥
भगमध्ये निषण्णात्मा[१३९] भित्त्वा योनिं परं व्रजेत् ।

स्वाधिपूरकयोर्मध्ये[१४०] विश्रान्ता[१४१] तिर्यगाकृतिः[१४२] ॥ ४० ॥
इत्याज्ञा क्रमचक्रस्य ब्रह्मग्रन्थिरधोमुखी ।

उन्मना कौलिनीशक्तिः[१४३] करोत्यावेशमुत्तमम्[१४४] ॥ ४१ ॥
तस्या[१४५] ऊर्ध्वगत[१४६] चक्रं तच्चार्धकृतमण्डलम्[१४७] ।

This, the group of Siddhas and (their) wives, is the pure enclosure (parigraha) of the goddess.[24] The Siddhas correspond to the letters in the deity's Circle of the Yoni. This indeed is said to be the sequence of the Siddhas (corresponding to the letters of the alphabet that come) at the beginning of the Aggregate of (Twelve) Verses (ślokarāśi). Having placed the Five Praṇavas at the beginning, `avvāpāda' is at the end.[25] O god, one should worship the Western House according to this procedure (vidhi). (32cd-34)

Mahāntārikā the Vidyā and Kaulinī the Command in the Centre of the Triangle

O fair faced one, Śiva and Śakti are these, (the letters) Ha and KṢa, that are within the House.[26] These two, the venerable Maitreya (otherwise) called Kucandra[27] and the venerable goddess (śrīmān devī)[28] Kubjikā, established in the Five (Praṇavas) should be conjoined together simultaneously (yugapat)[29] in the House of the Peak syllables (kūṭaveśman).[30] (35-36ab)

The Five (Praṇavas) at the beginning along with (the same) five at the end and the Vidyā between the two is (the goddess) Mahantārikā (the Great Saviour) in the Triple World[31] and she, the Command, is the sign of realisation (pratyaya) in (this) world. (36cd-37ab)

Whoever she looks at also goes to the supreme abode and, once the supreme has been reached, O god, he then certainly attains accomplishment (siddhi).[32] This is said to be the oral teaching (mukhāmnāya) in the hermitage (of the transmission) with (its) three divisions. (37cd-38)

Above is the Command of sixteen Siddhas. Sixteen Siddhas are in the north (i.e. on the left of the Triangle) and sixteen are in the south (i.e. on the right). Śiva is the deity in the centre. Once the (individual) soul (ātman), seated in the centre of the Yoni (bhaga), has penetrated through the Yoni, he attains the supreme (paraṁ vrajet).[33] (39-40ab)

The Command of the Wheel of the Krama (kramacakra) rests between (the Wheels called) Self supported (svādhi) and the Filler (of Jewels) (pūraka).[34] Her form crooked (tiryagākṛti), facing downwards,[35] she is the Knot of Brahmā.[36] (40cd-41ab)

The energy Kaulinī is the Transmental (unmanā) who brings about (karoti) the most excellent penetration (āveśa).[37] Her Wheel above is the maṇḍala that has been divided in half (ardhakṛta).[38] (41cd-42ab)

तदन्तरकृतं वृक्षं[१४८] कदम्बं कुण्डगोलकम् ॥ ४२ ॥
तस्यान्तरगता सूक्ष्मा आज्ञावर्तिर्हलाकृतिः[१४९] ।

भगान्ते सा गता आज्ञा विश्रान्ता च अधोमुखी ॥ ४३ ॥
परा सा वक्रिका[१५०] भीमा ज्ञात्वा[१५१] वेधः[१५२] प्रवर्तते ।

धुननावेशनं[१५३] कम्पं[१५४] तिर्यगूर्ध्वगतिः[१५५] क्षणात् ॥ ४४ ॥
पाताले तु प्रवेशं[१५६] वा आज्ञास्मरणमात्रतः ।

श्रीकण्ठादिषु रुद्राणां पञ्चाशानां[१५७] पुरोद्धृताः[१५८] ॥ ४५ ॥
मेरुद्वादशश्लोकास्तु[१५९] अर्धचक्रे[१६०] व्यवस्थिताः[१६१] ।
तन्मध्ये सृष्टिचक्रं तु मार्गदेवीविनिर्गतम् ॥ ४६ ॥

तवाधिकारं कुर्वामि[१६२] त्वया[१६३] सार्धं[१६४] महेश्वर[१६५] ।
योगपीठादिपीठानां सद्योजातं च पश्चिमे[१६६] ॥ ४७ ॥
सिद्धालयपुरेदं[१६७] तु योनिमुद्रागृहालयम्[१६८] ।

पुरमेतत्[१६९] समाख्यातं द्वादशश्लोकभेदितम्[१७०] ॥ ४८ ॥
तत्र मध्ये[१७१] गता विद्या उभौपञ्चपुटीकृता[१७२] ।
पूर्णिमाक्रममार्गस्य मार्गं[१७३] देव्याः[१७४] कुलेश्वर ॥ ४९ ॥

अहं या विरमेत्[१७५] तत्र आद्यपीठे अधोमुखी ।
अधिकारं च कुरुते वामावर्तपरिभ्रमात् ॥ ५० ॥
अनामान्ते च[१७६] संसिद्धे आज्ञासिद्धिः[१७७] कुलक्रमे[१७८] ।

भकारादिचकारान्ता[१७९] अधोर्ध्व[१८०] च विसर्पिता[१८१] ॥ ५१ ॥
शक्तिदीपशिखाकारा[१८२] रूपविद्या[१८३] विराजते[१८४] ।

तदा चन्द्रकलाज्योतिः कुचन्द्रोत्सङ्गमालिनी[१८५] ॥ ५२ ॥
पूर्णाधिकारचन्द्रोऽयं[१८६] शिवमध्याद् विनिर्गतम्[१८७] ।

The Tree internalised within it is the Kadamba which is the union of the male and female seed (kuṇḍagolaka).[39] Within that is the subtle, plough-shaped Wick of the Command (ājñāvarti).[40] (42cd- 43ab)

That Command rests facing downwards within the Yoni (bhaga).[41] That is the supreme and horrific (bhīmā) (goddess) Vakrikā. Once known, (the Wheels) are perforated.[42] (43cd-44ab)

In a moment, by merely recollecting the Command, (the yogi experiences) shaking (dhunana), possession (āveśana), trembling (kampa) and the slanted, upward movement (of kuṇḍalinī), or else entry into the lower regions (pātāla).[43] (44cd-45ab)

The City of the Moon conjoined with the Twelve Verses and the Path of the Moon

First the Twelve Verses of Meru are extracted (uddhṛta) from amongst the fifty Rudras beginning with Śrīkaṇṭha and are (then) deployed in the Half Wheel (ardhacakra). In the middle of that is the Wheel of Emanation (sṛṣṭicakra) that has emerged from the Goddess of the Path (mārgadevī).[44] (45cd-46)

O Great Lord, I will establish your authority along with you. This is the City of the abode of the Siddhas, the abode of the House of the Gesture of the Yoni (yonimudrā).[45] Of (all) the seats beginning with that of Yoga (yogapīṭha),[46] (this is) the Western (tradition) of Sadyojāta. (47-48ab)

That is said to be the City conjoined with the Twelve Verses. The Vidyā is located there in the middle, encapsulated by the two groups of the five (praṇavas).[47] O Lord of Kula, the path of the Path of the Sequence of the Full Moon (pūrṇimākramamārga) is that of the goddess. (48cd-49)

I am she who, facing downwards, halts there in the First Seat (ādyapīṭha)[48] and exercises authority (there) by (my) anti-clockwise rotation. When the end of the Nameless (anāmānta) has been attained the accomplishment of the Command (is realised) in the Kulakrama.[49] (50-51ab)

(The goddess's Vidyā) beginning with the letter BHA and ending with the letter CA has emerged above and below. The Vidyā of Form (rūpavidyā) shines (beautifully) in the shape of the flame of the lamp of energy (śakti).[50] (51cd-52ab)

Then, the light of the energy of the Moon is Mālinī who (sits in union) close by (to the god) Kucandra.[51] This is the Moon with full authority (pūrṇādhikāra) that has emerged from the centre of Śiva. (52cd-53ab)

एवं ते द्वादश श्लोका[१८८] एवं[१८९] सा क्रमदेवता ॥ ५३ ॥
संयोगेन क्रमाच्छम्भो सन्तानं[१९०] मेरुमार्गयोः[१९१] ।
विनिष्क्रान्तं महादेव कौलिकं गुणवत्तरम् ॥ ५४ ॥

शक्त्याधारं[१९२] पुरं प्रोक्तं पुरं क्षेत्रपरिग्रहम्[१९३] ।
तस्यान्तरगता देव्या कुब्जिकाहं च चन्द्रमा[१९४] ॥ ५५ ॥
सा[१९५] च लिङ्गं कुलाधारं अधिकारं[१९६] तु[१९७] चिञ्चिणी[१९८] ।
क्षेत्रलिङ्गाश्रमयोगाद्[१९९] गृहं[२००] चन्द्रपुरं[२०१] भवेत् ॥ ५६ ॥

चन्द्रपूर्णगृहारभ्य[२०२] अन्वयस्य त्वनुक्रमम्[२०३] ।
प्रकटं मर्त्यलोके तु अवतारं[२०४] कलौ युगे ॥ ५७ ॥
उलिसिद्धाश्रमं मर्त्ये[२०५] चन्द्रपुर्याद्[२०६] विनिर्गतम्[२०७] ।

ओकारश्च[२०८] षकारश्च[२०९] तथा त्वं[२१०] मित्रसंज्ञकः[२११] ॥ ५८ ॥
मुद्रितं तेषु तज्ज्ञानमाख्यातं[२१२] उडपीठके[२१३] ।

तदावतारितं[२१४] शिष्यैर्नवभिः[२१५] पुण्ड्रवर्धने[२१६] ॥ ५९ ॥
त्रिभिश्चैवाधिकारं[२१७] स्यात् कोङ्कणे पूर्णगिर्यके[२१८] ।
त्रिभिः सिद्धैश्च[२१९] पाताले अन्तरिक्षे त्रिभिः पुनः ॥ ६० ॥
चन्द्रपूर्णपुरे[२२०] तत्र चिञ्चिणीनाम[२२१] वृक्षकम्[२२२] ।
भञ्जितं[२२३] तत्[२२४] त्वया नाथ तेन त्वं[२२५] चिञ्चिणी[२२६] स्मृतः[२२७] ॥ ६१ ॥
कीर्तिदेवेति[२२८] विख्यातस्तस्मिन्[२२९] वै[२३०] चन्द्रपुर्यके[२३१] ।
सिद्धानां षोडशः[२३२] पुत्राः[२३३] स्थिता येताननुग्रहेत्[२३४] ॥ ६२ ॥
ख्यातं गुरुत्वाम्नायं[२३५] वै तेषामनुक्रमेण तु[२३६] ।

उन्मनादिक्रमेणैव यावत्[२३७] श्रीनाथचिञ्चिणी[२३८] ॥ ६३ ॥
पुष्पसंकेतकं शम्भो[२३९] अज्ञात्वा नैव मुक्तिभाक्[२४०] ।

Such are your Twelve Verses. Such is she, the deity of the Krama. O Śambhu, by the sequential union (of these) two paths of Meru the Kaulika lineage (santāna), the most excellent (of all), O Great God, has come forth.[52] (53cd-54)

The City (pura) is said to be the foundation (ādhāra) of Energy (śakti). And the City (pura) is the enclosure of the field (kṣetraparigraha). I am Kubjikā and the Moon (candramā) who is the goddess within it. And she is the Liṅga, the foundation (ādhāra) of Kula, while authority is (me the Tamarind goddess) Ciñciṇī. The House, that is, the City of the Moon (candrapura), is (generated by) the union of the field and the Liṅga.[53] (55-56)

The Lineages of Siddhas

The geneology (anukrama) of the lineage (anvaya) commences with the House full of the Moon (candrapūrṇa). Manifest in the mortal world, the descent (avatāra of the Siddhas) takes place during the Age of Strife (kaliyuga). The Hermitage of the Siddhas of the lineages (ulisiddhāśrama) has come forth into the mortal (martya) (world) from the City of the Moon.[54] (57-58ab)

The Three Siddhas

(The first Siddhas are those denoted by) the letter O (for Oḍḍīśanātha)[55] and ṢA (for Ṣaṣṭhanātha) as well as you who are called Mitra.[56] Stamped (mudrita) within them[57] is that knowledge that has been explained in the sacred seat of Uḍa (uḍapīṭha).[58] (58cd-59ab)

The Nine Siddhas

It was brought down into (the city of) Puṇḍravardhana by the nine disciples. Authority (was established) by three (of them) in Pūrṇagiryaka (in the land of) Koṁkaṇa.[59] (It was established) by three Siddhas in the subterranean region (pātāla) and by three again in the sky (antarikṣa). There is a tamarind tree (ciñcinī) there, in the city of Candrapūrṇa. You bent it, O lord, and so it is that you are said to be Ciñciṇī (nātha - the Lord of the Tamarind). Therein, in the City of the Moon (candrapuryaka you are) known as Kīrtideva (God of Fame). May he grace the sixteen (spiritual) sons of the Siddhas. (I have thus) explained, in due order, their preceptorial lineage (gurutvāmnāya). (59cd-63ab)

The Convention of the Flowers - the Eighteen Siddhas

O Śambhu, without having known the Convention of the Flower (puṣpasaṁketaka) that extends in due order from the Transmental (unmanā) up to Śrīnātha and Ciñciṇī, one is not liberated.[60] (63cd-64ab)

उन्मनाद्यादिनाथान्त[२४१] गुर्वोघं पुष्पसंज्ञकम् ।। ६४ ।।
कोङ्कणे तु त्रिधाभिन्नं नाथादौ तत् कलौ युगे[२४२] ।

न दीक्षा न परत्वं च[२४३] पारम्पर्यक्रमं न हि[२४४] ।। ६५ ।।
क्रमस्य क्रमणं नास्ति पुष्पसंकेतवर्जिते[२४५] ।

बीजोज्झिते[२४६] यथा क्षेत्रे[२४७] सस्यं नैव प्ररोहति[२४८] ।। ६६ ।।
पुष्पसंकेतहीनेषु मुक्तिर्नैव च विद्यते[२४९] ।

आदिनाथस्त्रयोलीना[२५०] वृक्षनाथेति[२५१] विश्रुतः ।। ६७ ।।
तस्य ते नव पुत्राश्च वर्तमाने[२५२] कलौ युगे[२५३] ।

संजाताः[२५४] कोङ्कणे मर्त्ये[२५५] अधस्त्रीणि[२५६] त्रयोर्ध्वतः[२५७] ।। ६८ ।।
निर्वंशाश्च[२५८] गताः षट्[२५९] च सवंशास्त्रीणि कोङ्कणे[२६०] ।

तेषां संज्ञा[२६१] मुखाम्नाये[२६२] श्रीदेशे गोत्रमण्डले ।। ६९ ।।
गगनः कुमुदस्तथा[२६३] पद्मो देवश्च भैरवः[२६४] ।
कमलः शिवरामश्च[२६५] कृष्णानन्दस्त्रिलोचन[२६६] ।। ७० ।।
एवं क्रमेण ते जाताः[२६७] संकेतेन पृथक् पृथक्[२६८] ।

द्वितीयं च चतुर्थं च पञ्चमं च[२६९] अधस्त्रयः ।। ७१ ।।
सप्तमं चाष्टनवमं[२७०] त्रीण्येते[२७१] ऊर्ध्वगाः[२७२] क्रमात्[२७३] ।
खेचरास्ते पुरा[२७४] सर्वे दिव्याज्ञायाः[२७५] प्रभावतः[२७६] ।। ७२ ।।
पाताले ये गतास्त्रीणि[२७७] भोगान्[२७८] भुञ्जन्ति[२७९] चापरे[२८०] ।

अधिकारे[२८१] स्थितास्त्रीणि[२८२] प्रथमं च तृतीयकम् ।। ७३ ।।
षष्ठमाज्ञा स्वरूपेण अधिकारक्रमे[२८३] स्थिताः[२८४] ।

The Current of Teachers (gurvogha), called (the Convention of) the Flower extends from the Transmental up to Ādinātha (the First Nātha). O lord, in the Age of Strife it was initially divided into three in (the land of) Koṅkaṇa.[61] (64cd-65ab)

There is no initiation, no supreme condition (paratva), no transmission through the series (of teachers) and no transmission (kramaṇa) of the teaching (krama) in the absence of the Convention of the Flower. (65cd-66ab)

Just as no crop grows in a field devoid of seed,[62] so too there is no liberation for those devoid of the Convention of the Flower.[63] (66cd-67ab)

The Nine Siddhas

[64]The First Nātha (ādinātha) of the three lineages (oli) is famous as Vṛkṣanātha (Lord of the Tree).[65] He has these nine (spiritual) sons in the present Age of Strife. (67cd-68ab)

Three (of them) arose below in the mortal (land of) Koṅkaṇa and three above. Six had no (spiritual) descendants left and the three that had descendants (remained) in Koṅkaṇa.[66] (68cd-69ab)

Their names within the assembly of the clan (gotramaṇḍala), according to the oral tradition (mukhāmnāya) in Śrīdeśa are, O Three-eyed One: 1) Gagana (Sky) and 2) Kumuda (Moon Lotus), 3) Padma (Lotus) and 4) Deva along with 5) Bhairava, 6) Kamala (Lotus), 7) Śiva, 8) Rāma and 9) Kṛṣṇānanda (Kṛṣṇa's Bliss). They have thus arisen successively, each individually, according to the convention (saṁketa). (69cd-71ab)

The second (Kumuda), the fourth (Deva) and the fifth (Bhairava) are the lower three. The seventh (Śiva), eighth (Rāma) and ninth (Kṛṣṇānanda) - these three, in due order, are above. All of these (last three) are Skyfarers of old by the power of the divine Command while those three who have gone to the lower regions enjoy worldly benefits (bhoga) on the inferior (level). (71cd-73ab)

Three are established in authority namely, the first (Gagana), the third (Padma) and the sixth (Kamala).[67] They are established in the transmission of authority (adhikārakrama) as the (very) nature of the (divine) Command. (73cd-74ab)

तेषां[२८५] सन्ततिः[२८६] संजाता[२८७] पुरुषाणीह[२८८] षोडश[२८९] ॥ ७४ ॥
तेषां नामानि[२९०] वक्ष्यामि पूजासंकेतकेन[२९१] तु[२९२] ।
सूरस्तीव्रश्च[२९३] खेचर्यो[२९४] गर्भमुक्तश्च[२९५] सिंहकः ॥ ७५ ॥
जयो विजयमित्रश्च[२९६] वीरो विमलपञ्चकम्[२९७] ।
रत्नकेशवमुन्मत्तमुद्रास्त्रोतावहं[२९८] ततः ॥ ७६ ॥
इत्येते षोडशः[२९९] सिद्धा भविष्यन्ति कलौ युगे[३००] ।

द्विचतुष्कं च यत् पूर्वं पञ्चमोज्झितं[३०१] सुव्रत[३०२] ॥ ७७ ॥
गदेवस्य[३०३] सुता ज्ञेया विज्ञेया[३०४] ज्येष्ठ–ओलिगाः[३०५] ।

पञ्चमो मध्यमोल्यां तु पदेवस्य[३०६] सुतः स्मृतः ॥ ७८ ॥

नवादिषोडशान्तास्तु[३०७] विज्ञेया[३०८] बाल–ओलिकाः[३०९] ।
कदेवस्य[३१०] सुता ज्ञेया[३११] एवं ते सिद्धषोडश[३१२] ॥ ७९ ॥

परान्वयं[३१३] तु प्रथमं द्वितीयं वक्रिकान्वयम् ।
सिद्धान्वयं ततः पश्चात्[३१४] भविष्यति कलौ युगे ॥ ८० ॥

द्वापञ्चाशद् भवेज्ज्येष्ठे[३१५] सप्ताविंशति[३१६] मध्यमे ।
बालक्रमे[३१७] भविष्यन्ति चतुराशीति[३१८] संख्यया ॥ ८१ ॥
एषां वै सिद्धसन्तानमसंख्यानं[३१९] भविष्यति ।
आज्ञा चण्डतरा[३२०] तेषां भविष्यति[३२१] महेश्वर[३२२] ॥ ८२ ॥

नवानां षोडशानां च पूजास्थानान्[३२३] वदाम्यहम्[३२४] ।

The Sixteen Siddhas

Their lineage (santati) (also) arose, consisting of sixteen men. I will tell (you) their names according to the ritual convention (pūjāsaṁketaka). 1) Sūra (Brave) and 2) Tīvra (Sharp), 3) Khecarya (Skyfarer) and 4) Garbhamukta (Free from the Womb), 5) Siṁhaka (Lion), 6) Jaya (Victory), 7) Vijayamitra (Friend of Victory), 8) Vīra (Hero), 9-13) the Five Pure Ones (vimalapañcaka), 14) Ratnakeśava (Jewel Hair), 15) Unmattamudrā (Gesture of Frenzy), and 16) Srotāvaha (Bringer of the Current). These are the sixteen Siddhas who will live in the Age of Strife. (74cd-77ab)

The Three Lineages of the Sixteen Siddhas

O one of good vows, the (first) two groups of four with the fifth, as before, missing, should be known to be the (spiritual) offspring of Gadeva (i.e. Gaganadeva). One should know that they belong to the Lineage of the Eldest (jyeṣṭholi). (77cd-78ab)

The fifth is in the Middle Lineage (madhyamoli) and is said to be the (spiritual) son of Padeva (i.e. Padmadeva). (78cd)

The ninth to the sixteenth should be known to belong to the Lineage of the Child (bāloli). One should know that they are the (spiritual) sons of Kadeva (i.e. Kamaladeva). Such, then, are those sixteen Siddhas.[68] (79)

The first (group constitutes) the Supreme Lineage (parānvaya), the second Vakrikā's Lineage. After that there will be the Lineage of Siddhas (siddhānvaya) in the Age of Strife.[69] (80)

Fifty-two belong to (the Lineage of the) Eldest, twenty-seven to the Middle (Lineage), while eighty-four will belong to the Lineage of the Child.[70] Their lineage of Siddhas will be innumerable and, O Great Lord, their Command will be extremely powerful. (81-82)

The Locations of the Nine Siddhas in the Body

I will tell (you now) the places where the (groups of) nine and sixteen (Siddhas) are worshipped. (83ab)

प्रथमं च भ्रूवोर्मध्ये[३२५] द्वितीयाधारमण्डले[३२६] ॥ ८३ ॥
तृतीयं मणिपूरे[३२७] तु चतुर्थं पञ्चमं तथा[३२८] ।
पुनराधारे[३२९] संपूज्य[३३०] षष्ठं[३३१] वै स्वाधिष्ठानगम्[३३२] ॥ ८४ ॥
सप्ताष्टनवमं[३३३] देव[३३४] तुर्यातीते तु[३३५] पूजयेत् ।

एवं ते नवसिद्धानां[३३६] शरीरे पूजनक्रमम् ॥ ८५ ॥
षोडशानां महादेव श्रूयतां स्थाननिर्णयम् ।

अष्टौ कपालमालायां नवमं नाभिमण्डले[३३७] ॥ ८६ ॥
द्विपञ्चात्[३३८] षोडशं यावत्[३३९] भगमालां[३४०] प्रपूजयेत् ।

तेषां सन्ततिः[३४१] संजाता संसारे कलिवर्त्मनि[३४२] ॥ ८७ ॥
स्थानमेकादशं[३४३] यावत्[३४४] ओलिशुद्धिरिह[३४५] क्रमे ।

पारम्पर्यान्वयं ह्येतत्[३४६] गुरुशिष्यक्रमं तथा ॥ ८८ ॥
भविष्यति कुलनाथ[३४७] निःशेषं[३४८] तु कलौ युगे ।

स्व–उल्यां[३४९] गुरु–ओघं[३५०] तु निर्बीजं पूजयति यः[३५१] ॥ ८९ ॥
संसारे[३५२] वर्तते भूयः[३५३] संसारान्न निवर्तते[३५४] ।
वृक्षनाथं विना यस्तु श्रीनाथं पूजयति यः[३५५] ॥ ९० ॥
संसारे वर्तते[३५६] भूयः संसारान्न[३५७] निवर्तते ।

ओलित्रितयमार्गं[३५८] तु कथितं तव मण्डले[३५९] ॥ ९१ ॥
नाख्यातं निर्णयं[३६०] चात्र आख्यातमिह संहिताम्[३६१] ।

सिद्धानां[३६२] षोडशः पुत्राः[३६३] संजाता मित्रयोनिषु[३६४] ॥ ९२ ॥
प्रथमा ज्येष्ठ–ओली[३६५] च क्रमभेदे[३६६] समासतः ।
पुरमध्ये समाख्याता[३६७] तत्रारभ्य क्रमार्चनम् ॥ ९३ ॥

The first is between the eyebrows. The second is in the Circle of the Foundation (ādhāramaṇḍala).[71] The third is, along with the fourth and the fifth, in Maṇipura. Having worshipped in the Foundation again, the sixth is present in (the Wheel of) the Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna).[72] O god, the seventh, eighth and ninth should be worshipped (together as a group) in (the centre corresponding to the state that is) Beyond the Fourth (turyātīta). (83cd-85ab)

The Location of the Sixteen Siddhas in the Body

Such is the order of worship (pūjanakrama) of your nine Siddhas in the body. (Now) O Great God, hear the teaching concerning the location of the sixteen (Siddhas). (85cd-86ab)

One should worship (the first) eight in the Garland of Skulls (kapālamālā). The ninth in the Circle of the Navel and the tenth up to the sixteenth in the (Wheel that has) Yonis as a Garland (bhagamālā).[73] (86cd-87ab)

Their lineage (santati) has come into existence in the world of transmigration on the path of the Age of Strife. The purification of the lineages (oli) here in the transmission (krama) (should done) up to the eleventh place (sthāna).[74] (87cd-88ab)

This is the lineage of the serial transmission (of the tradition) (pāramparyānvaya) and the sequence of teachers and disciples. (All this) without exception will take place, O lord of Kula, in the Age of Strife. (88cd-89ab)

He who worships the current of teachers within his own lineage (uli) without seed,[75] continues to remain in the world of transmigration. He does not leave it. He who worships Śrīnātha without (worshipping) Vṛkṣanātha continues to remain in the world of transmigration.[76] He does not leave it. (89cd-91ab)

The Three Lineages

I have told you the Path of the Three Lineages in the maṇḍala, (however I) have not told you the teaching (concerning it) here. It is explained (elsewhere) here in this scripture (saṁhitā). (91cd-92ab)

The sixteen (spiritual) sons of the Siddhas are born in Mitra's wombs.[77] The first lineage (olī) is that of the Eldest and is (established) in (its appropriate) division of the Transmission. In brief, it is said to be in the centre of the City. The worship of the Transmission (kramārcana) (takes place) having begun there. (92cd-93)

द्वितीया मध्यमोली[३६८] च दक्षिणोत्तरकोणयोः[३६९] ।
तृतीया अग्रकोणस्था[३७०] बालोली तदनुक्रमात् ।। ९४ ।।
तत्र सा कथिता मुद्रा अन्वयाज्ञात्र योनिषु ।

ओषमित्रास्तु[३७१] सिद्धाश्च त्रिषु ओलिषु कीर्तिताः[३७२] ।। ९५ ।।
अन्यथा वदते[३७३] यस्तु चन्द्रपूर्यगृहाश्रमम्[३७४] ।
तथा उलित्रयं देव श्लोकद्वादशनिर्णयम्[३७५] ।। ९६ ।।
योगपीठं त्रिसिद्धान् च[३७६] क्रमं विद्यां[३७७] च मण्डलम् ।
यो न जानाति[३७८] देवेश न स पूज्यो[३७९] भविष्यति ।। ९७ ।।
नासौ शिष्यः कुले कौले शास्त्रेऽस्मिन् नाधिकारिणः[३८०] ।

चन्द्रपूर्यस्य[३८१] सूत्रेदं[३८२] प्रतिज्ञासूत्रकं त्विदम् ।। ९८ ।।
प्रथमं कुलशास्त्रेऽस्मिन् पश्चात् तस्यैव उत्तरम् ।
आदिमुद्रा त्रिभिर्भेदैस्तथा[३८३] श्लोकानि द्वादश[३८४] ।। ९९ ।।
गृहसिद्धास्तथा देव्यो[३८५] विद्यादेवी च[३८६] पूर्णिमा ।
ओलिसिद्धास्त्रिपुरुषाः[३८७] सिद्धाश्चैव तु षोडश[३८८] ।।१००।।
ज्ञात्वा तान्[३८९] प्रथमं देव पश्चात् क्रममुदाहरेत् ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे अन्वये[३९०] सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते[३९१]
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतरिते[३९२] विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये कादिभेदे
आज्ञापारमेश्वरे[३९३] स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां[३९४]
अव्वाक्रमभाशिते[३९५] श्रीचन्द्रपुराधिकारवर्णने[३९६]
क्रमोदयो नामानन्दः ।। ७ ।।

The second is the Middle Lineage (located) in the southern and northern corners (of the Triangle). The third, in due order, is the Lineage of the Child and is (located) in the corner in the forepart (of the Triangle). There, (the goddess) is called Mudrā (Gesture)[78] and is the Command of the Tradition (anvayājñā) here within (the Siddhas who are) the wombs (that receive her fertilising seed). (94-95ab)

O (Oḍḍīśa), ṢA (Ṣaṣṭhanātha) and Mitra(nātha) are famed as the (founding) Siddhas in the three lineages (oli).[79] He who explains the Hermitage of the House of the City of the Moon in another way and who, O god, does not know the three lineages, the teaching concerning the Twelve Verses, the Seat of Yoga, the three Siddhas, the Transmission (krama), the Vidyā and the maṇḍala, O lord of the gods, will not be worthy of worship. He is not a disciple in the Kula and Kaula and has no authority in this scripture (śāstra). (95cd-98ab)

Conclusion

This is the sūtra of the City of the Moon It is the introductory sūtra (of this scripture) (pratijñāsūtra). It is the first in this Kula scripture (śāstra). (What) follows is its subsequent (continuation) (uttara). The First Gesture (ādimudrā), along with (its) three divisions,[80] the Twelve Verses, the Siddhas of the House and the goddesses as well as the goddess of the Vidyā, the Full Moon, the Siddhas of the Lineages (oli), the three persons and the sixteen Siddhas[81] - O god, having first known these (things) after that one may set up (udāharet) the Transmission (krama). (98cd-101ab)

This is the (seventh) chapter which is the emergence of the transmission (kramodaya) concerning a Description of the Authority (of the Goddess) in the Venerable City of the Moon. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for a hundred and twenty-five thousand quarter (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha) in the teaching of the Pure Six (Thousand Verses vimalaṣaṭka) belonging to the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

The

Kumārikākhaṇḍa

of the Manthānabhairavatantra

Volume One
Part Two

Notes to the
Edition and Translation of
Chapters One to Seven

Mark S. G. Dyczkowski

CONTENTS OF THE NOTES OF VOLUME ONE

Contents i-ii

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter One 1

Notes of the Translation of Chapter One 12

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Two 30

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Two 42

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Three 88

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Three 118

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Four 174

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Four 195

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Five 268

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Five 280

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Six 304

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Six 330

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Seven 366

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Seven 378

Diagrams

1. The Goddess's Abode 302

Tables

1. Table of Wheels, States and Principles 150

2. Table of Wheels, Elements, Gods and Seed-syllables 153
3. Table of Wheels, Colours, Yoginīs and Gods 154
4. Table of Wheels, Locations and Energies 155
5. Table of Triads 209
6. Table of the Seats and Yoginīs of the Vajra-Lotus 298
7. Table of Seats, Goddesses and Siddhas 335
8. Table of Attendants in Jālandhara 339
9. Table of Attendants in Pūrṇagiri 349
10. Table of Attendants in Kāmarūpa 354
11. Table of the Triads of the form of the Field 381
12. Table of Teachers, Lineages and Disciples 396
13. Table of the Three Worlds 397

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER ONE

1. ॐ स्वस्ति। (missing in ङ् unclear in MS ञ्) श्रीनाथपादुकेभ्यो नमः (missing in MSs
च्, छ् and ङ्; झ्: श्रीनाथपा * (?) पादुकेभ्यो नमः)। श्रीनाथपादुकेभ्यो नमः (ग्, ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: श्रीनामपादुकेभ्यो–;
च्, छ्: –पादुकाभ्यां–; ङ्: नास्ति)। श्रीगणेशाय नमः (ग्, ज्, ट्: * गणेशाय नमः; च्: ॐ श्रीगणेशाय नमः; छ्: ॐ गणेशाय नमः।); missing in MS ञ्। 2. The metre of this and the following verses in this section is sragdharā. It consists of twenty-one syllables per quarter, the measures of which are as follows: -- -- -- -- ∪ ∪ -- --, ∪ ∪ ∪ ∪ ∪ ∪ --, -- ∪ -- -- ∪ -- --. 3. SaṁP: –सहितानन्दशक्तिः। This is the reading commonly found in the Newar liturgies. It is not attested by any of the MSs of the KMT, KuKh, ŚM or ṢSS. 4. ग्, ङ्: –य; KMT: संसृज्याद्यं; ŚM: सृष्टं न्यायैश् and MS ग्: सृष्टं न्याय। 5. झ्; ञ्: चतु * (?)।

6. ज्: स्वकुल–; झ्: * (?) कुलाकुल–; ञ्: (?); KMT and ṢSS: अकुलकुल–।

7. Unclear in MS: ञ् 8. ञ्: * (?) न्यषट्कं। 9. Unclear in MS: ञ्।

10. All MSs except ग्: पंचकोन्यं। Only one MS reads the correct form as do the KMT, one MS of the ṢSS and the SaṁP, I have not chosen to retain the reading of the majority of the MSs even though the regular form of the masculine nom. sing. (अन्यः) never occurs in this text. The regular neuter form - अन्यत् - occurs only five times (25/34d, 36/72b, 115c, 41/5d and 46/27c). Up to the end of chapter 35, the deviant neuter nom. sing. अन्यम् occurs nineteen times. Up to there, the regular neuter form occurs only once. Apart from these instances there are seven more where the form अन्यम् could be taken to be the masc. acc. sing. But these are not always certain. A good number of words, such as न्यास– and क्रम– that should be masculine are treated as neuter, so it is not possible to say whether अन्यम् in concord with them when they are direct objects is a deviant neuter acc. sing. or not (see, for example, 30/69d). There are several examples of अन्यम् replacing अन्यत् qualifying a masculine noun treated as neuter (e.g. 6/58a and 10/16d). In other words, the deviant nom. sing अन्यम् of the pronoun अन्य– effectively functions in this text as both masculine (replacing अन्यः) and neuter (sometimes replacing अन्यत् – see note to 6/1a, but see note to 42/8b). Examples of both are found below in line 30/168ab that reads: युगोऽन्यं दर्शनं चान्यं तथा चान्यं (क्: तथान्यं) गुरुस्तथा। Although this deviant form is common generally in the Sanskrit of the Tantras, it is particularly common in this text. Thus, in 15/13a, for example, the unanimous reading of the MSs is नान्यम् whereas in the KMT (25/165c), which is the source of this verse, we read the correct form - नान्यत्. In short, in this text the neuter form is in the great majority of cases अन्यम् rather than अन्यत् as the expression अन्यं तत् (38/26d) exemplifies.

The same expression - पञ्चकोऽन्यं - occurs again below twice in the same verse (42/8b + d) and the reading is confirmed by the SaṁP. There the two words are treated as a single unit which is neuter in concord (cf. the analogous use of the pronoun अयम् described in note to 1/5b).

11. KMT: चतुरस्तत्त्वतो मण्डलेदं। In the KMT this line is followed by 1/4b. The noun अभिषेक- appears in its normal masculine gender only three out of the thirteen times that it occurs in a gender sensitive form in this text. For the neuter form see 1/9c, 2/11d, 5/62c, 64a, 31/90c, 33/23a, 34/59d, 95c, 39/168c and 45/65a. For the regular masculine form, see 13/136c, 37/19b and 47/44d.

12. The ṢSS reads देव्याष्टौ. The unanimous reading of the MSs is supported by the SaṁP. 13. झ्: * (?) र्तिमध्ये। 14. च्, छ्, झ्: हसखफल।
15. ṢSS: –पुष्पं। 16. ञ्: बाल। 17. The compound
बालकौमारवृद्धं, agreeing with an implicit क्रमम् (M → N), has been split up in this way to gain a long second syllable by the addition of an anusvāra to the first word that serves to regulate the metre. Cf. below 2/7f: वृद्धं कौमारबालकम्. See also note to 5/46d.

18. छ्: वक्त्र–; ञ्: (?); all MSs: –देवीं। Although the SaṁP reads वक्त्रदेवी, this is clearly a scribal error as the SaṁP goes on to gloss this as वक्राख्या या देवी. The reading in the ṢSS - चक्रदेवी - is a tempting one as it appears to be supported by the readings of the MSs of 2/17d where the name of the goddess reads चक्रिका. However, although the MSs agree there, I have emended to वक्रिका which is the form found in 2/33d and elsewhere (see note to 2/17d). 19. ञ्: (?)।

20. ञ्: (?)। M → N. Cf. below 1/11d, and 2/19c. Throughout the text we notice a marked tendency to make masculine proper names neuter (see, for example, 1/18c and 2/29d), especially if they appear in a list of names (see note to 6/49c).

21. क्, छ्, ञ्: –पुर्या; SaṁP: चन्द्रपूर्यां। See below, note to 1/11c and cf. 44/67b.

22. छ्, ज्: युग्मभेदस्तु; all other MSs: युग्मभेदस्तु + तु; MS A of ṢSS 1/2b reads:युग्मभेदैस्तु, B: युग्मा– and BC: –भेदस्. Although all the MSs are unanimous and supported by the reading in one of the MSs of the ṢSS and, moreover, the gender is regular, I have chosen to emend. There are three reasons for this. One is the syntax. Another reason is that the gender of the word भेद– when in the singular is normally neuter in this text. Out of twenty-five other instances in which this word appears in the nom. sing. in the first twenty chapters, it is in its regular masculine form only twice (see 35/28d and, possibly, 46/255a; note also 13/104c, 27/32c and 39/18c). But, for metrical reasons, out of the eighteen instances it occurs in the plural, it is treated as masculine as many as eight times. Thirdly, the form of the question in 1/15a - युग्मभेदं कथं सारं - and the answer in 2/27d - युग्मभेदमिदं स्मृतम् - both support this emendation.

23. Cf. below 24/41c, 25/37c and 28/59a where त्रीणि सिद्धास् occurs and YKh

(2) 5/11d where we find सिद्धास्त्रीणि. ṢSS: सिद्धास्त्रीण्यवतारं. This reading has a short fourth syllable instead of the required long one while our reading has a short second syllable instead of a long one. त्रिभिः would be correct but the first syllable would be short instead of long, as it should be. The intended sense is simply त्रिसिद्धावतारम् (M → N). As all the MSs agree on this reading and its is confirmed by the SaṁP, I have accepted this one. The gender of the word त्रीणि, which is normally neuter, seems to be particular fluid. In most cases it agrees with a masculine plural as it does here and 6/32c while in 6/146a it even agrees with a feminine. Here we have an example of a pervasive phenomenon in Tantric Sanskrit in general and of this text in particular, namely, that there is not infrequently no congruity between related words (see Schoterman 1981: 24). Moreover, just as in the Sanskrit of the KMT here also "for tri-, trīṇi is generally applicable" (Goudriaan and Schoterman 1988: 77). Cf. below 3/31c, 6/22c, 32c, 146a, 7/68d, 71b, 72a, 72c, 8/25a, 18/71c (एवं ते दीपकं त्रीणि), 19/18c (उल्त्रिये त्रीणि), 20/31c, 32a, 24/69a, 38/4d, 5c, 46/22d, 63c, 69c, 216c, 47/65b, 66b, 57/48c, 60/28c, 63/14cd, 59a, 64/58b, 61a, 77c, and 66/25b. See also TS 6/37a and 6/246c: शतास्त्रीणि (also found below in 3/31c and 6/32c) and 8/92d: कोटयस्त्रीणि. This is such a pervasive phenomenon that it is also found in the Pāśupata Gaṇakārikā (2b): त्रीणि वृत्तयः.

24. The masculine noun अवतार– is almost always neuter in this text. This is true also when it appears in sandhi with the pronoun अयम्. In that case the strange composite अवतारोऽयम् is invariably treated as a neuter unit in concord (see below, note to 1/5b and 6/37c). Otherwise, out of the ten gender sensitive instances in which it appears in the first 35 chapters, it is in its regular gender twice (see 7/5d and 32/1d) and treated as neuter in the remaining instances here and in 4/29d, 6/1a 6/121c, 7/57d, 13/142a, 29/32b, 30/170b. Similarly, out of not less than twenty instances in YKh (1) this noun is in its regular gender hardly twice. See also note to 6/37c.

25. क्ः प्रथमं–। According to the SaṁP (fl. 3a) प्रथम– does not mean 'first' but 'beginning' - प्रथमकलियुगे इति कलियुगादिपाद इत्यर्थः. Another possibility is that प्रथम– qualifies सिद्धावतारम् and it has lost its anusvāra to accomodate the metre and so we get प्रथम कलियुगे, which is not a compound.

26. The very many places in which the masculine noun अधिकार– appears in an ascertainable gender it is always treated as neuter in this text except in just four instances (see 24/87b, 58/75b, 60/11c and 60/73a) and, significantly, in the long colophons. Similarly, the noun क्रम–, which occurs very frequently, is usually neuter in this text and in Tantric sources in general. See for example a verse from the Mādhavakula of the JY quoted in the TĀv on TĀ 29/57. Also JY 1/12/441ab: तदा पूर्वोक्तमखिलं समुदेति महाक्रमम्; TS 20/279d: मया प्रोक्तं क्रमं तथा and DP 1/34ab: अशरीरादिदं वाक्यं श्रुतं

मे कालिकाक्रमम्. We also occasionally find the regular masculine form in these and related sources (e.g. ibid. 2/59b: क्रमास्त्रीणि समस्थिताः).

This word, which occurs frequently in our text, is in its regular masculine gender barely four times (see 9/65a, 39/63a, 42/49a and 63/24a). However, it is in its regular gender both times it appears in the colophons (see those of chapters 18 and 23). Is this because these colophons were written by some else who had a better knowledge of Sanskrit than the redactor(s) of the text? 27. ञ्: तेषा।

28. ṢSS: –क्रमास। The SaṁP confirms our reading. Although conjunct consonants should invariably produce a preceding long syllable, we find that in Sanskrit texts in general the conjuncts क्र, प्र, ब्र and ह्न are treated as exceptions (see Kale, p. 1035). Cf. below 1/3a.

29. च्: मध्ये; झ्: मध्यो; all other MSs: मध्या; ṢSS, MS A, reads: मध्ये। The other two MSs of the ṢSS agree with our reading.

30. ṢSS: द्विराष्टौ। The regular form द्वि at the beginning of a compound becomes द्विर् as many as twelve times in the first thirty chapters. The reading is confirmed by the KuKauM, KMT, TS and ṢSS in 14/37d and 14/41a, indicating that this usage is common throughout the Kubjikā corpus and also beyond. This form invariably precedes words beginning in short or long 'a' and serves to add a syllable if required by the metre. The forms द्विः and द्विष् analogous to त्रिः and त्रिष् (concerning which see below, note to 3/119d), are not found in our text.

31. This masculine noun is invariably treated as neuter throughout this text. It appears in a case sensitive form in the following six places in the first 35 chapters: 1/12c, 7/54b, 81a, 17/2a, 19/17a, and 24/117b. Words that mean ` lineage', `tradition' or `traditional instruction' such as ओघ–, अन्वय–, संतान–, आगम–, संप्रदाय– and आम्नाय– are generally treated as neuter although they are all masculine. But note that the word ओघ– appears twice in its regular masculine gender (see 60/65c and 63/49d) and आम्नाय– six times (see 7/38c, 18/18b, 30/51b, 79d, 45/38d and 48/2d). 32. ख्, ङ्: –पिण्ड।

33. ञ्: * * * * * (?) कलं। Cf. the compound सकलपदक्रमम् in 1/5c and the following reference found below in 1/12d: सकलं तु पदक्रमम् both of which suggest that the order of the members of this compound has been reversed.

34. ख्, च्, ङ्, ञ्: –शार्चं; all other MSs: षोडशार्चं; ṢSS, MS A, reads: षोडशान्त, while BC read: षोडशारैः। The editor of the ṢSS posits the reading षोडशान्तं with which I agree although not supported by either the MSs or the SaṁP, which read: षोडशार्चम्. The form of the question below (1/13a) supports this emendation: षोडशान्तं क्रमान्तं किम् See note to the English translation.

35. क्, ग्, झ्: शेषा। IC. 36. ग्: वैं।

37. ṢSS: मण्डलानां। The reading in the ṢSS is metrically correct whereas the seventh syllable of our reading is short rather than long. Even so. this reading makes more sense and is supported by the SaṁP and also below 1/13b.

38. Irregular syllablic measures are indicated by the sign IM followed by the number of the irregular syllable in that pāda. In this case the ninth syllable is long instead of short as it should be. This is indicated by writing IM 9.

39. झ्: –वृदं। 40. घ्: –क्रमसमले; ञ्: –क्रससकले; ट्: सकलें; all other MSs except jh: –सकले। The accepted reading is supported by both the ṢSS and the SaṁP. 41. ख्, ङ्: मण्डलोस्थान–। The expression पूर्वमण्डलम् (below 1/16b) suggests that the last member of this compound should be the first. See below, note to 1/5a.

42. ज्: संस्कारे। This word appears in this text in a gender sensitive case eight times out of which it is in its regular masculine gender only once (see below, 34/13c).

43. IM 7. ṢSS: त्रिःक्रमोत्थं। Although all conjunct consonants should make the preceding vowel long, in practice, as we have noted already (note to 1/2d), the conjunct क्र, along with others, is treated as an exception. This explains the use of the deviant त्रिः– in the place of त्रि– in the reading of the ṢSS (see below, note to 3/119d). But although that reading is metrically correct, I have accepted the reading in the MSs and the SaṁP that agrees with them. Similarly, in 1/5b ṢSS reads त्रिःक्रमौघम् whereas the MSs of the KuKh and the SaṁP read त्रिक्रमोघम्. Cf. 1/16d.

44. ञ्: पिण्ड * * (?)। 45. ञ्: * (?)वाग्नौ।

46. ख्, ङ्: मध्य। Following Schoterman's lead, I consider these two lines to be a single verse. In this way, this section, known as the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra consists of five verses as it is said to do below in 30/26. From another point of view, these two lines do indeed constitute just half a verse, in such a way that the core of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra consists of just three and a half verses as it is said to do in 1/5a (see note to the English translation of 1/1a above).

47. ṢSS 1/4a (MS A) reads: भूमौ but this does not agree with the statement in 2/36d concerning the goddess (who is in the centre): वक्रा विश्रामभूमिका. The reading in all the MSs of the KuKh is भूमिं. This agrees with the reading in two of the three MSs of the ṢSS. One is tempted to accept this reading even though it is not gramatically correct. Along with the grammar and syntax we also need to take into account the sonic dimension of the language. The reading भूमिं is sonically coherent with the forms of the other nouns in this line all of which have undergone a nasalization of their final letter which, in their case, changes them from masculine to neuter nouns. Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 53) note a feature of the Sanskrit of the KMT, which is also prominent in the Sanskrit of our text namely 'a marked tendency to write anusvāra instead of other nominal endings. Sometimes it seems as if the average scribe had -aṁ in his mind as a kind of neutral passepartout case-ending.' They supply a few examples and notice that this entails that 'the MSs tend to change gender from masculine to neuter. 'See note to 6/49c.

However, the reading reported in the SaṁP -विश्रामभूमिरिति- encourages emendation to the correct form which, moreover, fits the metre. Visarga and anusvāra are similar in appearance in the some of the early scripts as they are in modern Bengali script. Confusion between the two can sometimes be explained in this way.

48. क्, ग्, ञ्, ट्: प्रसवम–; ख्: प्रसम–; MSs BC of ṢSS 4/1a read: प्रसवम–।

49. M → N. This word is generally treated as neuter throughout this text. In the first thirty-five chapters of our text, there are twenty-eight instances of the neuter gender and only seven of the regular masculine gender (see 9/57b, 13/45d, 54d, 102d, 33/26d, 177d and 34/71d).

50. छ्: स्वाधि * रं। M → N. Cf. 1/19b and see note to 1/2c.

51. झ्: नमपि। The form प्रणमत occurs in 44/63c; नमत in 44/65d but all MSs agree on नमथ in 44/63d. The KMT and the ŚM read: नमत whereas the ṢSS reads नमथ. The SaṁP accepts the reading नमत but is aware that this alternative reading exists नमत इति नमस्करोमि। नमथेति च पाठः (fol. 4a). 52. ख्, छ्, ट्: –व।

53. All MSs except च्: –कुलीसं; KMT and ṢSS read: श्रीकुजेशम्. The form कुजीश– appears below in 2/19d and कौलीश– in 1/20a and 2/44d. Cf. also 28/149a and 31/102d. SaṁP (fl. 4b) accepts both readings as variants while appearing to be aware that the reading in the KMT is the original one: कुजेशमिति कुलीशमिति पाठः. The formation of compounds of this sort in which the long `i' of words such as ईश–, ईश्वर– and the like is retained rather than combined with the preceding `a' is an irregularity already found in early Sanskrit and is accepted by grammarians as legitimate.

54. छ्, ज्: –ज्युष्टं; ञ्, ट्: –द्युष्टं; ṢSS MS A: वृत्याद्युष्ट and MSs BC: वृत्त्याध्युष्टं; SaṁP: कृत्ताधुद्ध। Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 85) remark concerning the Sanskrit of the KMT that 'very frequent are compounds with inverted sequence of its members.' Especially numerous are reversed descriptive determinatives (karmadhāraya) in which the adjective is a numeral (dvigu) and possessive compounds (bahuvrīhi), as is the case here. It is well attested in the Sanskrit of this type of Tantric text. For example, TS 10/18c (MS Kh fl. 105b: यवाष्टौ (= SvT 10/18b: अष्टौयवाः), SYMT fl. 17a: अधिकाराष्टभिः TS MS Kh fl. 137b: भुवनैकादश स्मृताः (= SvT 10/710b: पुरैकादशकं स्थितम्). Other examples in the KuKh are: पदषोडश– (2/6c), श्लोकद्वादश- (3/31d etc.), प्रत्ययाष्टौ (4/5c), कुमारीसप्तभिर् (6/40d), क्षणार्धम् (6/89c), मासपञ्चमे (6/200b), पदैकम् (7/11c), कलाषोडशरश्मयः (7/13b), चाङ्गुलैकं (11/30c), शब्दैकं (19/75d), पदषष्ठमम् (23/24b), आधारषोडशः (25/36b), कल्पैकम् (38/21c), मण्डलेकं (38/24c), चर्यैकादशकान्वितम् (51/7d), कुलैकं (60/34a and 60/37c), खकारैकम् (61/36c), रत्नैकम् (62/5c and 62/28a), कारणैकम् (62/66a), खेचरैकं (62/69a), लिङ्गैकम् (62/99b), अक्षरैकम् (64/30a), तूष्णिभूतैकम् (66/12a), गृहैकं (66/27a), नालैकं (66/65b) and मतषोडश: (68/32b).

55. All MSs and SaṁP: मनार्थं। This emendation agrees with the reading in the ṢSS. 56. ञ्: खजिनी–।

57. ञ्: दि * * (?). ṢSS: दिव्यौघं। The reading of all the MSs is supported by the SaṁP. अयम् the masculine, nominative singular of the pronoun अयम् is commonly treated as neuter in concord, especially when it is, as here, conjoined in sandhi to the end of a word. Cf. SYM 16/50d: अयं स्फुटम्. Concerning the substitution of अयम् for इदम् in Ardhamāgadhī see Pischel 429. Although this deviant usage is not attested in the KMT, there are very many examples in this text. See line 124 of the Mālinīstava in chapter four, 5/38a, 53a, 6/37c (and note), 124d, 162a, 188d, 189c, 206c, 7/8a, 31c, 8/7a, 10/14a, 12/22c, 17/55a, 19/87c, 27/32c, 36/66a, 39/18c, 48c, 50a, 40/6c, 49/57a, 57/24c, 58/97a, 59/6d, 65/16a, 67/47a, and 69/30a. At times, but not as frequently, this deviant form functions as an accusative singular. See 13/104c, 18/109a, 30/52a, 72c and 36/110a. 58. ख्: संज्ञ।

59. SaṁP: अपि ह्यपरं। Sandhi has not taken place in this case in order to gain an extra syllable and so preserve the metre. Similar omissions of sandhi also occur in the Sanskrit of other śāstras. In the Epics, Purāṇas and law books, for example, sandhi is commonly omitted between the first and second line of a hemistich (see Macdonell 1927: 13). Indeed, grammarians declare that sandhi between words is not compulsory. We shall note examples further on where sandhi does not take place between words, including, a few times within compounds, which is not sanctioned by grammar (see, for example, 7/89c and 15/16d).

60. ञ्: त्रिक्रमाघं; all other MSs and SaṁP: –क्रमोघम्; ṢSS: त्रि:क्रमौघम। The word ओघ– compounded with a final `a' of a preceding word is in many cases not altered to '–औघ–' in the MSs. There are 66 such cases in our text compared to 33 where the regular sandhi does take place. All four instances in which महा– is compounded with ओघ–, the sandhi is regular. Commenting on the confusion between the vowels 'o' and 'au' that takes place 'very often in sandhi,' Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 48) go on to write: 'the decision between 'wrong reading ', 'wrong understanding' or 'deviating sandhi' is often difficult.' Two of the three examples they choose concern the sandhi of the word ओघ–. In both cases the irregular sandhi is the reading of the great majority of the MSs. Even so, they have chosen the reading with the regular form. As in the KMT and here, this inconsistency is found throughout all the Kubjikā Tantras. It is indeed hard to decide whether these cases of irregular sandhi are intentional or the result of mistakes. The same problem arises with the sandhi of the word ओलि–/उलि– for which see note to 3/11b. In view of this pervasive uncertainty, for the sake of consistency (even though there may never have been one) I will emend to the regular form throughout. 61. ग्: भेदानकैर्–; ञ्: –कैविभिन्नं।

62. सकल * दक्रमं। M → N. See note to 1/2c. 63. ख्: –र।

64. In the first 35 chapters in which this noun appears 18 times in a gender sensative case, it is treated as neuter except in three instance where it appears in its regular masculine gender (see 9/23a, 28/35d and 30/49a).

65. ख्, ङ्, झ्: पूर्व्वें; छ्: –पूर्वं। 66. SaṁP: –भूतं। 67. ट्: –वंन्।

68. Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 78) write concerning the replacement of the nom. sing. neuter of the indicative pronoun तत् with तम् in the Sanskrit of the KMT: 'on some places, the MSs give tam or tat without functional distinction; nor is the metrical factor of relevance here.' There are at least twenty-five instances in the Sanskrit of this text where this takes place, i.e. 2/4b (the reading here and in 27/9c is मण्डलं तं), 3/46b, 6/96a, 159c, 8/77c, 19/5a, 24/12d, 25/5c, 25/11c, 26/37a, 27/9c, 30/69c, 30/168c, 30/208c, 31/65c, 39/40b, 42/13c, 44/64c, 57/13a, 58/59b, 60/20d, 63/43a, 64/59c, 64/60b, 66/47b and 68/87a. It occurs commonly in the Sanskrit of early Tantric texts in general.

69. ञ्: (?)। 70. MS घ् begins here.

71. झ्: –नी; All other MSs: –भाषणी। This emendation is supported by the reading in 2/6b. 72. ख्: कीदक्।

73. See above note to 1/5c. 74. झ्: त। Henceforth we will generally not take note of the absence of sandhi in similar instances. 75. क्: अकुले।

76. Missing in all MSs except ; छ्, ज्, ञ् and ट्। 77. ख्: अकुल; ङ्: अकुलं।

78. ख्: चै; ङ्: वै। 79. ञ्: (?)।

80. Out of the twenty-eight times the noun आचार– and its derivates formed with prefixes appear in a gender sensitive case in this text, they are in their regular masculine gender only four times (see 32/53d, 59/64a, 66b and 60/31c).

81. All MSs: क:। As the forms and genders of these numerals are mostly as they appear in the first verse, I have emended accordingly. Two forms of the same word in two genders (पञ्चकम् and पञ्चक:) appear next to each other above (see 1/1b and 1/1c). The same reading is found in all the texts in which this verse occurs, thus confirming that this is the original reading.

82. All MSs: षट्कश्–। 83. All MSs: पंचकं। See previous note.

84. ङ्, झ्: कश्चतुभूय:। 85. M → N. See above, note to 1/1c.

86. All MSs: कोत्रा–। 87. One could understand this to be a reversed descriptive determinative compound (karmadhāraya) in which the adjective is a numeral (dvigu) (see above, note to 1/5a). Otherwise, we may either take this to be a case of double sandhi (DS) or a false collective compound that has replaced the regular देवताष्टकम् which does not fit the metre. The former alternative is the easiest and, as DS is very common in the Sanskrit of this and most Tantric texts, it would be an acceptable explanation. However, the neuter तत् in the following line probably refers to देवताष्टौ which, if so, is treated as a collective compound. Cf. below in 2/13d, where the question asked here is answered. There we find the regular देवताष्टकम्.

88. च्: वदन्तु; all other MSs: वदस्तु। 89. ञ्: * * (?)व।

90. M → N. See above, note to 1/5c.

91. झ्: –क्रमच्च; all MSs except ज् add another च।

92. ख्: –पुर्य; च्: –सूर्यं; झ्: –पूर्यन्। Along with the regular forms, that is, the neuter चन्द्रपुर–, which is the most common, and the rare feminine चन्द्रपुरी (1/2b and 44/67b), we find a number of others. These include चन्द्रपुर्य– 3/60a, 7/58b, 17/9d, 13c, 19/12c, 38/9c, 23a, 29d and 61/53c. The form चन्द्रपूर्य– appears three times as a neuter nom. sing. (2/18b, 57/26d and 58/70a). Other instances are 7/96b, 98c, 38/14a and 39/51a. In 3/12b and 3/56b we read चन्द्रपुर्येति and in 35/36a and 56/1d चन्द्रपूर्येति. This construction may be the result of a regular sandhi between चन्द्रपुर्या/चन्द्रपूर्या and इति. However, as there is no independent examples of these forms in this text or the others that have been examined, these may be cases of DS. The form चन्द्रपुर्यक– which is neuter (see 7/20d), appears not less than five more times (6/214d, 7/62b, 19/12c, 61/54b and 61/75d). The form चन्द्रपूर्यक– also neuter (51/18b) appears three more times (59/72d, 60/75c and 62/39a). An interesting variant is चन्द्रपूर्ण– which appears three times in 7/57a, 61a (चन्द्रपूर्णपुरे) and 26/82d. Note that in KuKh 66/68d the form is पूर्णचन्द्रकम्. In YKh (1), where the same verse appears, the reading is चन्द्रपूर्यकम्. The doctrinal implications of these variant forms are discussed in the notes to the translation.

93. ख्: श्रीनाथ। M → N. Cf. above, 1/2b. The same construction is found in e.g. 1/15d. 94. ख्: कि।

95. ञ्: –शिष्याद्यं; all other MSs: –शिष्योघं। See above, note to 1/5b and cf. 2/31a. 96. झ्: अवशानं। 97. ञ्: (?)। 98. ञ्: * (?)वेत्।

99. M → N. See above, note to 1/3a. 100. M → N.

101. ङ्: क्रमन्त। 102. All MSs: कं। It is tempting to leave this reading unemended assuming the nom. sing. neuter of the interrogative pronoun क– to have undergone an analogous corruption as तत् has to तम् which is quite common (see above note to 1/5d) and, the rare यत् to यम् (see 14/7c). But, although we notice that there may be another possible instance in 1/19a, it does not occur again. 103. ख् घ्: शेषां 104. IC. Cf. 1/3b.

105. All MSs: –भ्रमंत। M → N. The cognate विभ्रम– appears in a form in which its gender can be identified only three times in this text. It is in its regular masculine form only once (in 45/7d) and is treated as neuter the other two times it occurs (see 5/28a and 46/192b).

106. मे normally replaces the dative मह्यम् or the genitive मम. Here it takes the place of the instrumental मया as happens also below in 4/16d.

107. च्: जातं। 108. ख्, ङ्: पुज्य–; ट्: –भावन्निर्णयं। The masculine noun निर्णय– is treated uniformly throughout the main body of the text as neuter.
There is one exception in the colophon to chapter 34 but this need not be taken into account as the colophons may have been written separately (see note to 1/2c).

109. ञ्: * * * (?) दश–। M → N. See above note to 1/2b and cf. 1/16a.

110. घ्, ङ्: ज्ञास्यति। 111. घ्, च्, छ्: पुत्रिका:।

112. घ्: –सासते; all other MSs except ख्, झ्: –शासते। Another interrogative pronoun is implied here. What is meant is के सिद्धास्त्रितयशासने. 113. घ्: –णी।

114. All MSs except ज्, झ्: + षोडशात्मकशिष्योयं (ञ्: सोदशात्मक * * (?); ङ्: –शिष्ट्योयं; छ्: –शिव्योयं; ट्: –शिष्टोयं) अवसानं (ञ्: (?)) कथं भवेत्। सन्तानं गोत्रपिण्डं (ञ्: * * (?) पिण्डं) तु सकलं (ख्, ग्, ङ्: –ल) तु पदक्रमं।। षोडशान्तं क्रमान्तं (ख्, घ्, ङ्, च्: क्रमांत) कं शेषा वै मण्डलानि के। परिभ्रमं न मे ज्ञातं (ख्, ग्: ज्ञानं) विमलं (ङ्: विमल) तु विशेषत:।। एतत् सर्वं समासेन पूज्यसद्भावनिर्णयम्।

115. M → N. See note to 1/2b and cf. 1/14c

116. ञ्: * * (?)मं। 117. ङ्: –मलं।

118. विज्ञायन्ते would be correct but does not fit the metre. Alternatively, we can assume that the previous sentence has no verb.

119. ङ्: सस्कार। M → N. See note to 1/3d.

120. All MSs except घ् and ङ् read तृक्रमेण। Henceforth, when similar instances occur, the regular त्रि– form will appear in the edited text without taking note of this variant. 121. ख्: को *?। 122. ख्: भवत्।

123. च्, छ्: क्षेयं। In the first thirty-five chapters, this word appears in a gender sensitive case eighteen times out of which it is in its regular masculine gender eight times. 124. घ्, च्, छ्: मलसैव। 125. ङ्: पिंडे।

126. ञ्: (?)। 127. ख्: शि *; ङ्: शिव. See above note to 1/2b.

128. ख् ङ्: ज्य–; ङ्: –मध्य। 129. ञ्: –कां।

130. ख् ङ्: कि; all other MS: किं। 131. ख्, ग्, ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट्:
कुं; all other MSs except घ्: कं। See above, note to 1/13b. 132. All MSs: देवी।

133. See above, note to 1/4a. 134. Cf. 25/54b. 135. च्: सृष्ट।

136. झ्: सर्वैं। 137. ङ्: भरवश्च। Notice the ease with which masculine proper names alternate between neuter and their regular gender.

138. ख् ङ्: कौलिशं। Above in 1/4d the form is कुलीशम्.

139. सर्वमवा–। Here the correct form of this expression, meaning `according to ritual procedure' or `in due order' would be ’अनुपद्धत्या’. The same use of the nom. sing. in this way is attested twice more see 8/14b (अनुक्रमपद्धति:) and 13/132d.

140. ञ्: * * (?)देन। 141. ङ्: –भैरव:–; ख्, ङ्: –यज्ञ।
142. च्: –मार्गे–। 143. घ्: –मार्गै। 144. ञ्: (?)।
145. ग्: –द। 146. क्, घ्: –पारमेश्वर।

147. ख् ङ्: चतुर्व्विशत्–; घ्: चतुर्विंशतिसहस्र–; च्: चतुर्व्विंश–। In the first forty-five chapters the regular form of the cardinal numeral –विंशति– occurs twenty times and the ordinal –विंश–, functions as a cardinal seven times. The deviant ordinal –विंशम– occurs eleven times in the first thirty chapters almost entirely replacing the regular form. The derivative विंशमक– appears four times in these chapters. The deviant form –विंशत् appears in all the long colophons except those of chapters 18, 43 and 66. The regular form (–विंशति–) appears in all the short colophons which suggests that were composed by a different person (cf. above note to 1/2c). The name चतुर्विंशत्सहस्रक– appears three times in the body of the text (see 24/120b, 30/179d and 69/28b) and in the second verse following the end of the text. But we also find चतुर्विंशसहस्र– twice (30/2d, 40b) and चतुर्विंशतिसाहस्र– twice (30/105a, 174c). Concerning other numerals, see note to 3/9a.

148. ञ्, ट्: अथाक्रमभाषिते। The reading of all MSs here, namely, अथा– is a common error in the colophons and appears erratically in the MSs. Moreover, the MSs generally vary inconsistently in each colophon between the readings: अव्वा–, अम्बा– and the defective अथा– with a marked preference for the first of these, which has been standardized throughout. 149. घ्: –नन्द

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER ONE

1. These verses are discussed in the summary of contents of the KuKh in chapter nine of the introduction to which the reader is referred. Both the Ṣaṭsāhasrasaṁhitā and the Kumārikākhaṇḍa open with the following verses set in the metre sragdharā. Called the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra, they are an expanded version of the first verse of the KMT which reads:

Within (the centre) of Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is the power of bliss (ānanda-śakti). Present in (every) part (pada) of the Transmission (kramapadanihitā), she is pleasingly horrific (subhīmā). Once emitted the first quaternary present in (both) Akula and Kula the pentad (follows) and another, the sextet, (again) the four, another pentad and then again the four. This, in reality, is the maṇḍala. Bow to him by whom (all this) has been emitted, the best of teachers, Bhairava, the venerable Kujeśa.

saṁvartāmaṇḍalānte kramapadanihitānandaśaktiḥ subhīmā saṁsṛjyādyaṁ catuṣkaṁ akulakulagataṁ pañcakaṁ ca anyaṣaṭkam | catvāraḥ pañcako'nyaḥ punar api caturas tattvato maṇḍaledaṁ
saṁsṛṣṭaṁ yena tasmai namata guruvaraṁ bhairavaṁ śrīkujeśam ||

The first line of this verse is the same as the corresponding line in the ṢSS and the KuKh. In the KMT the second quarter of the third line ends with tattvato maṇḍaledaṁ ('this, in reality, is the maṇḍala') instead of ṣoḍaśājñābhiṣekaṁ ('the Consecration of the Sixteenfold Command'). According to Schoterman's numbering, which I have adopted, the last quarter of the verse in the KMT corresponds to the second and the last quarter of the half verse numbered four in the version here. Mukunda, the author the SaṁP, also notices that the version in the KMT is embedded in the first part of the sūtra, and refers to it as the short one (laghusaṁvartārthaḥ). After he has commented on it, drawing most of his material from chapter two of the KuKh, he goes on in the same way to comment on the rest of the sūtra which he refers to, along with the first part, as the long version (bṛhatsaṁvartā). Whether it is the short or the long version, knowledge of the meaning of this sūtra is particularly important for adepts of the Kubjikā cult. Thus, the ŚM concludes its commentary on the short version by saying that:

Those who do not know (the meaning of the) Saṁvartā (sūtra) do not know the Śrīmata (the root Tantra and teachings of the Kubjikā cult). O goddess, without (knowing) the Śrīmata (all) effort (to acquire) knowledge is in vain.

saṁvartāṁ [g, ṅ, ch: saṁvartā] ye na jānanti na te jānanti śrīmatam ||

śrīmatena vinā devi vṛthā jñānapariśramam | ŚM 1/121cd-122ab

Similarly the Ṭ says in relation to the extended version that:

> One should circumambulate (with reverence) a hundred times that teacher who has explained the meaning of just one quarter of a verse (of the scripture). One should meditate on him. In that way the Command such a teacher, which gives rise to all the signs of realisation, functions.
>
> 'So what (to say of those who explain) the sūtra set (in verse)?' (The meaning is:) so what (to say) of those who utter (i.e.) explain the Saṁvartāsūtra set in three and a half (verses)? They are all equal (in status) to the Śrīkrama (itself), possess the Command in this Age of Strife and free (others) from transmigratory existence by (their) words alone. There is no doubt here (about this).

yaḥ ācāryaḥ ślokaikapādamātrasya artham [kh: śrokaika-] yenoktaṁ tasya pradakṣiṇaśataṁ kārayet | tasya bhāvanāṁ kārayet | tathā guros tasya [k kh: gurustasya] īdṛgvidhasya sarvapratyayakāriṇī ājñā pravartate | kiṁ punar vṛttasūtraṁ tu iti | kiṁ punaḥ adhyuṣṭavṛttasaṁvartāsūtraṁ [k kh: adhyaṣṭa-; k: -sūtrā; kh: -sūtra] ye vadanti [kh: vadati] vyākhyāyanti te sarve śrīkramatulyāḥ tathā te asmin kaliyuge ājñādharās te vācāmātreṇa saṁsārān mocayanti [k: -rāt-] | nātra sandehaḥ |
Ṭ MS K fl. 136a.

The ṢSS (3/30-31) similarly extolls the Saṁvartāsūtra explaining as it does so that it is particularly important as a complete and correct explanation of it amounts to an exposition of the Krama, which is the core of the teachings:

> The one who gives the consecration (abhiṣecaka) is not (the true teacher). The teacher is the one who explains the sequence of Twenty-eight Parts (aṣṭāviṁśapadakrama) expounded in the first section (vṛtti), that has come by means of the sequence of descent (into the world) in due order beginning with the power of action. (Then) the sixteen energies (of the first sixteen teachers are present) there (along with) the Sequence of Twenty-eight Parts.

The long version of the Saṁvartāsūtra is called the 'sūtra of three and a half verses' (adhyuṣṭasūtra). Set in sragdhāra, each verse consists of twelve syllables (pāda) thus making forty-two altogether. These correspond to the twenty-eight units of the Krama and the sixteen lunar energies of the teachers. The first three and a half verses do indeed form a separate self-contained unit that encapsulates the short version of the KMT. Possibly, the extra verse, tacked onto the end as a sort of concluding gloss, may be a later addition. Nonetheless it should be read together with the previous ones. Thus the KuKh refers to all of them together as the 'five verses' (ślokapañcaka) (KuKh 30/26). Accordingly, although Mukundarāja comments only on the first three and a half verses as does the commentary in the following chapter of the KuKh. Even so, he takes care to quote the next verse also.

Like the Saṁvartāsūtra, the Root Sūtra (Mūlasūtra) (the three versions of which are at the beginning of chapters 26, 38 and 42 below) is essentially a description of the triangle and hexagon that form the core of the maṇḍala. The Root Sūtra is also 'set in a measure of three and a half (verses)' (vṛttādhyuṣṭapramāṇataḥ - KuKh 26/2b, cf. KuKh 1/4a) and is the 'knowledge set in three and a half (verses) (sārdha-vṛttatrayaṁ jñānaṁ - KuKh 42/2).

The common structure of the two sūtras is inspired by the same model. This is the goddess who, as Kuṇḍalinī, the energy of Speech, is coiled in three and a half turns within her triangle that contains the letters, the basic units of Speech (see below, chapter eight). Appropriately, the Root Sūtra teaches the knowledge of Kuṇḍalinī and her three and a half coils (KuKh 42/2). For the same reason, no doubt, the Saṁvartāsūtra is also called the Root Sūtra, as the Ṭīkā explains:

The path of the Western tradition originates from the great (sacred) field that is, the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava. It is (said to be) 'set in in three and a half (verses)'. Thus, (such is) the pervasion of the path of the Great Churner of the root synopsis (of the teachings) namely, the Root Sūtra called the Saṁvartā(sūtra) which is the extent of all three (primary) entities (of the teaching). Its pervasion takes place many times in this way (issuing forth) from the Great Churner as the sacred seat (of the maṇḍala), the aggregate (piṇḍa) (of letters) and the (main) seed-syllable (in the centre of the maṇḍala from which the Krama originates).

paścimāmnāyamārgasya [k kh: + apaścimāmnāyamārgasya] utpattiḥ mahā-kṣetrān mahāmanthānabhairavayajñād [kh: -kṣetrāt; kh: -yajñāt] | vṛttam adhyuṣṭakam iti [kh: avyuṣṭakaṁ iti] vastutrayasarvapramāṇasya [k kh: -sārva-] mūlasūtrasya saṁvartābhidhānasya mūlasaṁgrahasya asya mahāmanthāna-mārgasya tataḥ vyāptiḥ | anekadhā tathā asya mahāmanthānād [k: -nā; kh: -maṁthānāt] vyāptiḥ [kh: vyāpti] yathā pīṭhaṁ [k kh: pīṭha] piṇḍaṁ [k kh: piṇḍa] bījam [k kh: vīja] |

Ṭ MS K fl. 1a.

2. The SaṁP (fl. 3a) comments: The maṇḍala that is perpetually manifest (nityodita), pervasive and peaceful (cf. below 2/3cd) is that maṇḍala. Saṁvartā (the Fire of Time) is within that i.e. in the middle of that, in the middle of the maṇḍala, and abides with that (maṇḍala whose) form is the universe. The power that is the Lord's will (īśvarecchā) is Saṁvartā. The maṇḍala (itself) is Saṁvartā within which Kubjeśa and Kubjeśī reside. They are Śiva and Śakti, the loving (couple) Indra and Indrāṇī. When that (maṇḍala) is satisfied, the king and queen of the gods are satisfied and when power and the possessor of power are satisfied, all is satisfied. Because the path of the gods is there, that is considered to be the ultimate doctrine.

*maṇḍalaṁ [malaṇḍa] nityoditaṁ [-ta] sarvagaṁ śāntaṁ yat tat maṇḍalam | tadante tanmadhye maṇḍalamadhye [maṇḍa * madhye] saṁvartā [saṁvartta] tena jagadrūpeṇa vartate | yā śaktir īśvarecchā sā saṁvartā | saṁvartātmikaṁ maṇḍalaṁ yatra tadante kubjeśaḥ kubjeśī ca virajete [virājate] | śivaśaktisvarūpiṇau indrendrāṇīpriyau [-priye] | tatsaṁtuṣṭe devarājadevarājñītuṣṭiḥ | śaktiśāktatuṣṭe [-śakta-] sarvaṁ tuṣṭam | tatra devamārgatvāt tad eva siddhāntatvam iti manyate |*

Concerning the identification of the goddess with Saṁvartā, the cosmic fire, see the intro. vol. 1, p. 21 ff..

3. The god's power of bliss (ānandaśakti) is the goddess who is present in every part of the Krama. I have translated the word 'pada' as 'part'. Another translation could be 'syllable'. The Krama, in the sense described, consists of mantras made up of syllables. So, from this point of view, what is meant here also is that the power of bliss is present in every syllable of these mantras. The SaṁP (fl. 3a) reads kramapadasahitā- instead of kramapadanihitā-. According to the latter variant the power of bliss is present (nihitā) in (every) part of the Krama while according to the former one, it is accompanied by or endowed with (sahitā) the Krama. Again, one could also understand the Sanskrit to mean that the goddess, as the power of bliss, is 'present on the plane (pada) of the Transmission'. Mukundarāja offers another explanation. He says:

Krama is the Kulakrama. (Each) part (pada) is established as the limbs, primary and secondary and faces (of the deity). A part of the Krama is (its) condition as a part (established) by (the order of) the sequence (of which it is a part). The power (of bliss) (śakti) is endowed (sahitā) with such (a part). Thus one should know that particular (parts) of a Tantra, mantra and Yantra are referred to in this way.

kramaḥ kulakramaḥ | padaś cāṅgapratyaṅgavaktrair vyavasthitaḥ | krameṇa padatvaṁ kramapadaḥ | tādṛśena sahitā śaktiḥ | tena tantramantrayantraviśeṣapratipādanatvaṁ jñeyam |

In other words, Mukundarāja understands this statement to refer not just to the parts of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala, which are the faces and limbs of the goddess (see below 2/6cd-7ab and notes), but also to every part of the Tantra and the mantras and Yantras that are taught in it in all of which is present the power of bliss.

4. Concerning Kula and Akula, see intro. vol. 2, p. 283 ff.. According to the SaṁP (fl. 3a) these, already very loaded, terms here have another, additional meaning. Kula denotes Tantric practice (tāntrika) (but see below 3/144–146ab and 13/72cd-73ab) and Akula the common public practice (laukika) (akulaṁ laukikaṁ kulaṁ tāntrikaṁ). The ŚM (MS G fl. 12b) supplies a more sophisticated and elevated explanation:

Akula is in the locus of the Transmental. (The word) 'Transmental' denotes the Void. The Void is in the locus of the Point. By the word 'locus of the Point' is (meant) the Sun, Moon and the rest (related to them). One should know Akula is there in (that) place. Kula is in the locus of the penis (meḍhra) that is, in the place where the body consisting of six sheaths arises. Once it has been illumined (there) (Kuṇḍalinī) rising up (there) within the locus of the Foundation as Nature (prakṛti) (consisting of) twenty-five (principles) by means of the sequence of (suṣumṇā), the Royal Path and by piercing the three Liṅgas (i.e. the seats in the Wheels) she generates the Kula (of the mind and body).

Again, (from another point of view) the term Akula denotes Śiva. The benign (god - śiva) who is seen to be all pervasive, as (possessing) many forms and as both subtle and gross, is called Śiva. The term Kula denotes Energy (śakti). She is 'horrific' (bhīmā), that is, fierce (ugrā) and (her) nature (or form) is fierce (ugrarūpā). She resides in both grace (anugraha) and restraint (nigraha). She, the terrible one (bhīmā), is bliss. Endless, she gives rise to the bliss of all the universe.

akulaṁ unmanāsthāne [c: -sthānaṁ] || unmanā iti śūnyavācakaḥ [k, g, ṅ, ch: śūnyaṁ-; all MSs except kh and c: vācakaṁ] || śūnyaṁ [kh, c: sūnyaṁ] bindusthāne [g, ch: missing; gh: -sthānaṁ] | bindusthānaśabdena [g, ṅ, c: vinduśavdena; ch: vinduśakena] somasūryādayaḥ [kh, ch: -dadaḥ; gh: -sūryādidaya; ṅ: -dayas; c: -sūryodayaḥ] | tatrasthāne akulaṁ jñātavyam iti [ch: jñātavyami *] || kulam iti [ṅ: kula iti kiṁ; gh, c: kula iti; ch: missing] meḍhrasthāne [kh: medrasthānaṁ; g: meḍhusthāne; ṅ: kulaśavdena; c: -sthāna; ch: medhra-] ṣaṭkauśikapiṇḍotpattisthāne [k: ṣāṭ-; g, gh: ṣaṭkausika-; kh: -pīṇḍotpatti-; c: ṣaṭkośika-; ch: kaṭkausika-] prakāśya [gh: prakāsya] ādhārasthāne [kh: sthāna] samudyantī [g, ch: sapūrvādī] rājamārgakrameṇa [gh: -mārgā-] liṅgatrayaprabhedena [c: -traye-] pañcaviṁśatiprakṛti-svarūpeṇa [kh: -viṁśatiḥ-; ch: paṁcaviṁśati * * * svarūpeṇa] kulam utpādayati [ṅ: utpādayanti] || punar akulaśabdena [kh: punar api kula-; gh: -śavdeṇa; ṅ: punar api akula-; ch: purar api akula-] śiva ity abhidhīyate [g, gh, c, ch: ityā-] || śivaḥ [g, c, ch: śiva] sarvavyāpakatvena [gh: -ketvena] nānārūpeṇa sthūlasūkṣmatvena [g, ch: -śūkṣma-] yo dṛśyate [g, ch: yadṛśyena; ṅ: yaḥ dṛśyate; c: yad dṛsyata; all other MSs: yad dṛśyate] sa śiva [gh: śava] ity abhidhīyate || *kulaśabdena śaktiḥ sā bhīmā ugrā [ch: ugā] ugrarūpānugrahanigrahasthā [kh: -rūpānugrahā-; gh: ugrarūpān nu * * nigrahasthā; ṅ: ugrarūpā nigrahānugrahātmikā nigrahasthā; c: -nugrahāni-graha-] sā bhīmā ānandarūpā [ṅ: bhīmātmānandarūpā]* || anantā [c: ānantā] sā sakalaviśvānandam utpādayati [ṅ: -mutpādayanti] ||

5. The SaṁP (fl. 3a) explains: If the Kuṇḍalinī of Supreme Śiva (enters) 'within the pattern of emanation' (sṛṣṭinyāye) (she does so) in order to generate many emanations in the right way (nyāyataḥ) by descending from the supreme limit (of existence).

paraśivakuṇḍalinī parasīmāvatāratvena [samaṁsīmāvatvena] nānāsṛṣṭikaraṇārthaṁ nyāyato yadi tasmin sṛṣṭinyāye |

By means of the energy of his innate bliss, the god in the centre of the maṇḍala emanates, sustains and withdraws the universe. This is deployed in time and space on the pattern of the mantras, their attendant energies, sacred sites, divine beings and accomplished yogis that are located in the parts of the maṇḍala. These parts, pervaded by the energy of bliss, are generated from the transcendent Akula absolute and are projected into Kula, the immanent sphere of the energy of Akula consisting of the aggregate (kula) of energies through which all things are made manifest. The main parts of the maṇḍala are the locations of six groups of entities with their corresponding mantras and phonemic energies. They are the expansions of the energy of Speech, that is, Kuṇḍalinī who is the power of bliss that extends out from the centre in the forward sequence, that is, in accord with the order of emanation.

6. Chapters 31 to 33 below deal with the rites of initiation. No mention is made there of the Sixteenfold Consecration of the Command although it is implicitely presented here as the standard initiation (dīkṣā). The Ṭ describes the procedure in detail. Said to give `the accomplishment of the Command' (ājñāsiddhipradāyikā) (Ṭ MS K fl. 9a), it consists of a series of sixteen initiatory rites by means of which the aspirant is consecrated with sixteen aspects of the goddess's empowering Command (ājñā). He thereby acquires, by the goddess's grace, the authority (adhikāra) to practice the teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras. The goddess herself received the Command in this way in the Kadamba Cave and told the god to go there and do the same (see 3/162-164ab). The Ṭīkā (MS K, fl. 67b) reports the goddess as saying to the god:

This, the Western House, is the most excellent. It is the House of all accomplishments (siddhi). It is the special Śāmbhava (abode) which, by its mere recollection, brings about (the deity's) penetration (into the adept's mind and body) (āveśa) and so (the adept's) consecration takes place solely by means of recollection. I (says the goddess) have obtained that from within the Kadamba Cave. How? By means of the Sixteenfold Consecration of the Command.

idaṁ paścimaṁ gṛhaṁ guṇavattaram | sarvasiddhīnāṁ gṛham | saviṣeśaṁ śāṁbhavaṁ smaraṇamātreṇa āveśasamutpādakam [k kh: -śamu-] | tathā smaraṇamātreṇa abhiṣecanaṁ bhavati | taṁ mayā kadambaguhābhyantarāt prāptam | kathaṁ | ṣoḍaśājñābhiṣekena |

The Ṭīkā goes on to devote a long section (MS K, fl. 68a-82a) to a detailed description of these these sixteen rites. At the culmination of this initiation the postulant drinks the lunar nectar that pours down from the uvula at the back of the throat and thereby receives the Command in this liquid form. See below 2/11.

7. These are the Eight Mothers (mātṛkā). See below 2/13.

8. The text refers here to the seed-syllable HSKHPHREṀ. Every major mantra has a corresponding seed-syllable. This one is very important because it is the seed-syllable of Kubjikā's root mantra, her Samayā Vidyā of thirty-two syllables (described below in chapters 9 to 12). It is presented and analysed below in the beginning of chapter 9 (verses 1 to 19ab) to which the reader is referred. Along with Vāgbhava, that is, the syllable AIṀ this is one of the two alternative syllables of the goddess in the centre of the maṇḍala. It represents her undifferentiated (niṣkala) aspect that inwardly pervades her differentiated (sakala) visualized form. The SaṁP (fl. 3a-3b) explains:

'In the middle of (Kubjikā's) form' (refers to) Kubjā's form (mūrti) which is (her) visualized form (dhyāna) with parts (sakala). The energy of (the letters) Ha Sa Kha Pha and Ra is in the middle of (her) visualized form. The phonemic energy of this kind that (the goddess) possesses is the energy (kalā) at the end of the letters Ha Sa Kha Pha and Ra namely, the letter E. . . . Thus the mantra is HSKHPHREṀ . . . . This mantra should be in the middle of Kubikā's Yantra. 'The flower which is the Point' (is according to) the aforementioned convention (saṁketa) the ornament for the head (i.e. top of the seed-syllable) which, like a flower, is (formed) by the Point (bindu) at the end of the energy in the aforesaid mantra.

mūrtimadhye iti kubjāmūrtir yathā dhyānaṁ sakalaṁ | dhyānamadhye hasakhapharakalā iti mūrtimadhye tādṛśavarṇakalā yasyāḥ sā hakāra-sakāra-khakāra-phakāra-rephānāmante [-raphāsādante] kalā ekāraḥ | . . . tena hskhphrem iti mantraḥ | . . . kubjikāyantramadhye caitan mantram [sic.] apekṣitam | bindu-puṣpeti uktamantre kalānte bindunā puṣpavac chirobhūṣaṇam uktasaṁketaḥ |

The expression bindupuṣpā ('the flower which is the Point'), that qualifies 'energy' (kalā) can also be understood in another way. The energy of the consonants of the seed-syllable, we are told, is the vowel E. Written in isolation, this letter has the shape of a downward pointing triangle. Thus it represents, as does the seed-syllable AIṀ, the goddess as the one energy who is the womb of all the energies. Here we are told this triangle of energy is bindupuṣpā, that is, is menstruated (puṣpā) with drops of sperm (bindu). In this way and others the goddess is, in a sense, androgynous. She produces and contains both male and female seed and so has the power to fertilize herself. Graphically represented, the conjoined letters of the seed-syllable appear as a vertical row of letters topped by a line that represents the letter E above which are a semi-circle and a point. The semi-circle represents the New Moon that is fed by the dripping point or 'drop' (bindu) above that represents the Full Moon. In this way these two generate and feed one another and, as they do so, spill their lunar, seminal fluid down into the energy of the triangular E to fertilize and energize it. This is how the goddess is menstruated, as it were, with drops of sperm - bindupuṣpā.

9. Concerning the expression 'the Gesture of Space', the SaṁP says that it 'means that the aforesaid mantra is stamped with the letter Kha and the goddess has that form. Like the sky she is pervasive.'

khamudreti | etaduktamantraḥ khakāreṇa mudritas tadrūpā devī ākāśavad vyāpikībhūtā |

The goddess is Mudrā and so the expression khamudrā - the Gesture of Space suits her well, in this context it probably refers to the Point, that is, the nasalization at the end of the seed-syllable which, anyway, symbolizes the goddess in the form of the Point or Drop of her seminal Command. From the Point, the Ṭīkā and KuKh 9/1-19ab tell us, an ascent of vital force energized by the Sound emanated from the seed-syllable up the resonating nasalization at the extremity of its utterance represented by the Point reaches up to the Space of the supreme, transcendent reality. This movement is appropriately called the Gesture of Space and the Point from which it proceeds is aptly likened to a blooming flower.

10. SaṁP (fl. 3b): Śrīnātha is Śiva who is the consort of (the goddess) Vakrā (vakrāpatiḥ śrīnāthaḥ śivas).

11. SaṁP (fl. 3b): Like the rays of the moon (the City of the Moon) is the location of bliss (āhlāda) and knowledge (candrakiraṇavad āhlādavijñānasthalam [-le]).

12. The word kalita- in this compound can mean both 'formed' or 'differentiated' i.e. 'manifested' as well as 'endowed with' or 'accompanied by'. Śrīnātha is the consort of the goddess and the first teacher (ādinātha). At the same time he and the goddess are the last two of the series of Eighteen Nāthas who constitute the Divine Current (divyaugha). As the last in this series he, united with her, summates it in his being. He is thus formed or differentiated into all of them. At the same time, as the supreme form of the male deity, he is also endowed with or accompanied by all the eighteen. In this way, he is within the City of the Moon, that is, the maṇḍala.

13. The 'couple' is Śiva and Śakti who unite in the centre of the maṇḍala (see below 2/27). These eighteen teachers coincide with higher states of consciousness that mark the higher phases in the sequence of emanation that heralds outer manifestation. They constitute the Divine Current, also called the Convention of the Flower and the Current of the Teachers (gurvogha), that begins with the Transmental (unmanā) and ends with Śrīnātha, the first propagator of the Kubjikā Tantras in this Age (KuKh 2/20-26, 7/63cd-67ab and chapter 57 where the inner, metaphysical identity of the eighteen is described). From Śrīnātha the Siddhas of the sacred seats received the transmission in the three traditions of the Eldest, Youth and Child and established it in the land of Koṅkana. Then came a group of nine disciples of the main teacher (mūlanātha). Three of these nine had sixteen disciples and from them all the lineages of the Kubjikā Tantra are said to be derived. Chapters seven and forty-six deal with the 3, 5, 9 and 16 Nāthas. See 7/57 ff. and chapter six of the introduction.

14. This is how the SaṁP (fl. 3b) understands this compound (trīṇi siddhāvatāram iti . . . tāni trīni siddhāvatārākhyam iti vācyam). The loose syntax, however, allows another possible translation namely: 'The descent of the three Siddhas (into the world took place) in the beginning of the Age of Strife'. If we assume that the syntax is so loose that the word prathama-, which appears at the beginning of the following compound, should be read disjuctively as an independent word that, in deference to the metre, has lost its case ending a third possible translation would be: 'The first descent of the three Siddhas (has taken place) in the Age of Strife'. But I have preferred to translate otherwise in agreement with the SaṁP (see note to Sanskrit text). These three Siddhas taught in the three sacred seats. Below in chapter six we will see that an extra seat called Tisra is said to be established as the end of the Age of Strife (6/164). This implies that the first three Siddhas and their sacred seats were formed before, that is, in the beginning of the Age of Strife or in other Ages. All that is said in the texts is that the descent into the world of these Siddhas takes place in the Age of Strife without specifying further or, in most other accounts, in successive Ages. Finally, note that the compound prathamakaliyuge may also mean 'in the first Age of Strife' but the sense is certainly as has been translated, even though the Sanskrit is somewhat strained.

15. Concerning Koṅkaṇa and the Deccan, see intro. vol. 3, p. 276 ff..

16. Three of the Nine Persons, also called Nine Nāthas or Nine Siddhas, had these sixteen disciples (see KuKh 7/68cd-79 and intro. vol. 2, p. 524 ff.).

Mukundarāja interpretes differently. He splits up the numeral dviraṣṭau into dvir and aṣṭau so that instead of meaning 'two times eight' i.e. sixteen, it means 'two and eight'. He explains accordingly that: 'the two are Śiva and Śakti and the eight, the Octad of Kula' (śivaśaktyātmakena dviḥ aṣṭau ca kulāṣṭakam). The foremost Octad of Kula is the group of Eight Mothers discussed extensively below in chapter sixteen. This explanation seems dubious as the eight Mothers have already been referred to previously in the sūtra according to Mukundarāja himself who quotes 2/13 below. Similarly, his explanation of the two as being Śiva and Śakti is also pre-empted because according to 2/27 below this pair is the Couple.

17. In this context the 'clans' (gotra) are the fifty letters of the alphabet. Thus the body (piṇḍa lit. 'aggregate') meant here is the one formed from the phonemic energies of the letters (cf. below, 2/12 and 2/34cd-35ab). Schoterman (1981: 18) interpretes differently. He says: ‘The term piṇḍa, 'family', stands for sapiṇḍa (lit. 'having the same piṇḍa or offering to the ancestors'). It includes the members of a family through six generations in an ascending and descending line (cf. Manu 5/60)'. However, there is no support for the use of this term in this sense anywhere in the Kubjikā texts.

18. There is a problem here with the reading. All the manuscripts of the KuKh and the SaṁP agree on the reading ṣoḍaśārcaṁ - 'the worship of the sixteen'. However, the oldest MS of the ṢSS reads ṣoḍaśāntaṁ - 'the End of the Sixteen'. This reading is supported by the form in which the question is formulated below namely: 'what is the End of the Sixteen that is the culmination of the Transmission?' (ṣoḍaśāntaṁ kramāntaṁ kim 1/13ab) However, unfortunately, the question is not answered and the identification of these sixteen is not certain (see below 3/130 and 5/61cd-62). Although this reading has not been accepted we may note here that the SaṁP glosses the other reading (i.e. 'the worship of the sixteen') as follows: 'Worship is the contemplation of the sixteen (states of) Yoga beginning with the Transmental'. (ṣoḍaśārcam iti unmanādiṣoḍaśayogabhāvanam ārcanam).

The maṇḍala is situated in the End of the Twelve. The Point in the centre from which the maṇḍala spreads out also flows into the End of the Sixteen above where the energy of the Point, that is, the Transmental, merges into the male polarity. There the subtle differentiated form (sakala) of the couple disolves away, as it were, to leave the undifferentiated (niṣkala) Śāmbhava absolute. Here the Transmission comes to an end in the sense that it reaches its ultimate, highest level. This is how I have understood this expression kramāntam and have translated accordingly although this is not the way Mukundarāja understands it. See the following note.

According to Schoterman (1981: 38) who is guided, presumably, by the reading in MSs B and C of the ṢSS - ṣoḍaśāraiḥ, opines 'the expression ṣoḍaśānta refers to the human body compared with a wheel (cakra) with sixteen 'ends' (anta) or spokes (ara)'. But although it is true that this analogy is 'frequently found in the Upaniṣads' (ibid. : 38-39) I have not found it anywhere in the Kubjikā Tantras.

19. According to Mukundarāja (SaṁP fl. 3b) kramāntam means 'the conclusion of the ritual'. He explains accordingly: 'the conclusion of the ritual (kramānta) is the worship, that is, the offering of the sacrificial offerings and the rest along with the deposition (of mantra), visualization (of the deity, the worship of the) attendants etc. in due order, that takes place at the conclusion, that is, at the very end in order to complete the ritual (krama). (kramāntam iti yathā kramapūraṇāt [-pūraṇat] nyāsadhyānaparivārādi krameṇāntaparyant-opacārādy arpaṇam arcanam)

20. According to the SaṁP: The maṇḍalas are cosmograms or else the Circle of the Teachers and the rest. (maṇḍalānīti jagatmaṇḍalāni gurumaṇḍalādīni vā). Concerning the Circle of the Teachers, the Gurumaṇḍala, see intro. vol. 2, appendix 2. There are twenty-eight such *maṇḍala*s according to our text (also SKh 7/99cd), which should be projected onto the body (50/20-23) and are associated with this, the main or Kramamaṇḍala (48/81cd-82). According to the KMT (16/70-81) there are twenty-six *maṇḍala*s. See Heilijgers-Seelen (1994: 172, 271-2) who discusses the variants in the KMT and the ṢSS.

21. The term paribhrama literally means to 1) rove, ramble, wander about or through 2) to turn or whirl around, move in a circle, describe a circle round, revolve, rotate and 3) error. The word is used in all these senses in our text except the last. Thus, in the first sense, the word denotes the wandering in pilgrimage to the sacred sites (KuKauM 7/152cd, variant of KuKh 14/76cd). In the second sense we find a number of applications. When the text says that the hand should be rotated around the maṇḍala in an anticlockwise direction, this is the word employed (11/27 and 48/10). The same word is used when the text teaches how the hand can be used in the place of a rosary to count the repetitions of a mantra. The movement (paribhrama) should be anti-clockwise (11/57 and 27/63) as it is when using a rosary (27/65). The letters of the alphabet are placed in the triangle representing the Yoni in an anti-clockwise spiral motion (paribhrama) according to the pattern of emanation (sṛṣṭinyāya) (51/23). All these actions symbolically imitate Kuṇḍalinī's rise up through the body in a spiral anti-clockwise (vāmāvarta) movement (paribhrama) (13/123-124ab). This is the movement that brings about immediate penetration (sadyāveśa) (30/60). Progressively, her rotation up through the Wheels (cakra) in the subtle body develops the power of the yogi who is thereby empowered to reach higher levels. When he finally reaches the highest level, he attains the accomplishment and power of the Command (ājñāsiddhi), that is, the plenitude of the deity's grace (7/49-50ab). This same anti-clockwise rotation of energy takes place within the Wheels also. There the Circle of the Point (bindumaṇḍala) rotates emitting waves of light in such a way that it looks like a flower formed by a whirling firebrand (13/116). Similarly, the Wheels themselves rotate within one another, clockwise (13/113cd-4ab) and anti-clockwise. The anti-clockwise movement is upwards towards the transcendent source. The clockwise movement is downwards into the body and immanence. Presumably the 'pure movement' to which our text refers is the former, which is purifying and liberating, whereas the latter generates the sullied condition that is binding.

22. According to the SaṁP: 'The object of worship' is the deity to be attained (sādhyadevatā) [. . .]. The essential nature is in relation to that [. . .]. The primary meaning is that this Manthānabhairava (Tantra) is such. This is the collection of knowledge'. (pūjyaḥ sādhyadevatā taṁ prati sadbhāvo [. . .] idaṁ manthānabhairavam evaṁbhūtam iti mukhyārthaḥ | jñānavṛndam idam |).

This compound is replaced below in 1/14 with the variant pūjyasadbhāvanirṇayam – 'the teaching concerning the essential nature of the object(s) of worship' that may be read to support the interpretation of the SaṁP. It does not, however, preclude another possible meaning of this compound namely – '(this) is the group (which constitutes) the essential nature of the objects of worship' with reference to the things just listed.

23. The SaṁP comments: 'Bhairava is worshipped along with Bhairavī first of all, in the beginning of a book, a ritual or Yoga'. prathamato granthādau karmādau yogādau vā bhairavīsahitabhairavo-pāsanaṁ |

24. The eighteen are the eighteen teachers of the Divine Current (divyaugha). They are all Skyfarers (khecara) who in their liberated state move freely in the infinite expanse of the deity's transcendental being. The texts symbolize their condition by placing the Divine Current within the Point (bindu) in the centre of the maṇḍala. The maṇḍala of the Krama and with it all that manifests and functions on the phenomenal (apara) level is the deployment of the energy of the Command, which is the Point. However, the author of the SaṁP understands this line differently, giving one the impression that he is straining to arrive at a coherent meaning. It is clear from his commentary that he does not understand the expression aṣṭādaśāntam to mean 'within the eighteen', as I do, but 'up to the eighteenth'. This he interprets as being the eighteenth and highest stage of Yoga although, as far as I know, there is no such series of eighteen taught in the Kubjikā Tantras. Again, he does not understand the expression maṇḍalotthānapūrvam to mean 'prior to the emergence of the maṇḍala' but as an implied reference to rituals and Yoga both of which should be 'preceded by the making of the maṇḍala'.

He writes (SaṁP fl. 4a): 'Up to (anta) the eighteenth' means the condition of being the eighteenth, that is, up to completion (anta), which is the condition of accomplishment of the state of Yoga expressed in that (way). (What is meant by) 'the entire Kulakrama' (is as follows). The bliss (experienced) in the state (one is in when observing) the Kaula vow and making use of the five (sacrificial substances whose names begin with) 'Ma' (makāra) is everything in that Krama, that is, in the bliss of the (Kaula) sacrifice. The ritual offering of lamps and the rest is 'prior to the emergence of the maṇḍala'. (Internally these rites are) the act of uniting Kuṇḍalinī in the thousand-petalled lotus by piercing through the Six Wheels. Akula is ritual such as nocturnal processions and the like whereas Kula is the means to the accomplishment (siddhi) of Yoga and that is preceded by the making of the maṇḍala (maṇḍalotthānapūrva).

aṣṭādaśāntam iti aṣṭādaśatvam uktam | taduktayogabhāvasiddhatvam antaṁ yāvat | kulakramasakalam iti kaulavratraṁ ca makārapañcakasevanaṁ tadavasthāyāṁ yathānandaḥ | tatkrame yāgānande sakalaṁ sarvaṁ | maṇḍa-lotthānapūrvam iti [-pūjam iti] dīpayāgādikaṁ | ṣaṭcakrabhedena kuṇḍalinī sahasradale saṁyojanam | akulaṁ karma rātriyātrādi [-yātādi] | kulas tu yogasiddhy upāyam [-sindhūpāyam-] ity arthaḥ | tanmaṇḍalotthānapūrvakam [tatan-] |

25. Consistant with his division of practice into two categories namely, Akula and Kula, the former relating to ritual and the latter to Yoga, Mukundarāja comments that: purification is, in the case of Akula, the purification of the sacrificial substances (dravya) and the like and in the case of Kula purification of knowledge and the like as well as the (performance of) the inner sacrifice by means of Yoga.

saṁskāram iti | akule dravyasaṁskārādi | kule yogayānayā vijñānasaṁskārādi [-maskārādi] cāntaryāgatvam |

26. The fettered (paśu) is, according to the SaṁP, a person who has not had initation (dīkṣāvihīnaḥ paśuḥ). This is indeed the general meaning found throughout the Śaivāgama and the Kaula Tantras. Thus, for example, we are told below that the maṇḍala should be drawn in a place which is 'out of sight of the fettered' (paśudṛṣṭivinirmukte - KuKh 11/24cd-25) which clearly refers to the unininitiated.

27. According to the SaṁP the Triple Transmission: (includes the triad of) creation (persistence and destruction), will (knowledge and action and that governed by the lords of the three Transmissions namely), in due order, Mitranātha (of Kāmarūpa), Ṣaṭcakranātha (also called Ṣaṣṭhanātha of Pūrṇagiri) and Unmanīnātha (of Oḍḍiyāna) (known as) MI ṢA U according to the convention (saṁketa) which is of many kinds.

trikrameṇeti-sṛṣṭyādi-icchādi-mitranātha-ṣaṭcakranātha-unmanīnāthakrameṇa mi-ṣa-u iti saṁketenānekaprakāreṇa |

Concerning these abbreviations, see below note to 2/28. The ‘convention’ is indeed varied. The names of the last two of these three Siddhas are unusual. Normally, they are called Ṣaṣṭhanātha and Oḍḍīśa.

The point is that initially the Kulakrama was in the transcendent with the eighteen teachers of the Divine Current (divyaugha). When it descended into the world it was promulgated through the three transmissions (krama) of the Siddhas in the three sacred seats. It is only at this stage that fettered souls could receive initiation and so be purified and liberated.

28. According to the SaṁP: (The initiate) purifies his own body by means of such (depositions as those of the letters of the) Mālinī and Śabdarāśi (alphabets) (see note to 2/12). 'In the fire of Śiva' which means, in the world, the sacrifice of Kujā's fire and also in (the practice of) Yoga in the sacrifice of the lamp of consciousness (i.e. the inner fire of Kuṇḍalinī).

piṇḍaśuddhir iti mālinīśabdarāśyādibhiḥ piṇḍaṁ deham ātmānaṁ śodhayati | śivāgnāv iti loke kujāgniyajñārthaḥ | yoge [yāge] hi vijñānadīpayāge cārthaḥ |

29. Referring to verse 2/36 below the SaṁP comments briefly saying that: The Plane of Repose is 'in the centre' that is, in the centre within the Wheels. (madhye iti antaś cakrāṇāṁ madhye viśrāmabhūmir iti). The Plane of Repose is the goddess herself who, as Kuṇḍalinī, moves without disrupting her essential stillness in Suṣumṇā between the two channels Iḍā and Piṅgalā (see below 2/36cd-37). The Samvartāmaṇḍala is identified with Suṣumṇā as is its base and upper end. Thus, as the goddess moves up and down through the centre of the Wheels (cakra) of the body she moves through the centre of the maṇḍala, even as she rests there. In this way, the breaths are led up into stillness in withdrawal and everything, both the world and the teachings, are brought down in her descent `in the pattern of emanation'.

30. The SaṁP explains that this statement refers to the inner sacrifice (antaryāga): 'Experience spreads, that is, arises within the signs of realisation of Yoga'.
yogasiddhipratyayeṣu prasarati anubhavo jāyate | antaryāgārthaḥ |

31. The SaṁP explains that: realisation (pratyaya) is the awareness that I am accomplished, I am Bhairava. It leads oneself to Bhairava'.
ahaṁ siddho bhairavo'ham iti pratīyate [-ta] iti pratyayaḥ | ātmānaṁ bhairavaṁ nīyate |

32. According to the SaṁP: One should know that (in this way the adept) is authorized in (the use of the) means (to attain) the yogic powers (siddhi) to make one's self small and the rest (aṇimādi) by the power of the practice of Yoga well performed in a solitary and pure place (ekānte śucau deśe sukṛtayogābhyāsabalenāṇimādisiddhyupāyeṣvadhikṛtaṁ veditavyam).

33. The SaṁP explains: '(Bow) to him' has many meanings (including (bow)) to Bhairava whose nature is the Great Churning (mahāmanthāna) and (bow) to the Lord (īśvara). According to the modality in which '(all this) has been emitted' by Bhairava (his nature is variously perceived). When (he) pervades the contemplation (of creation) as a (pure) white manifestation (his) nature is sattva. (his) nature is the quality (called) rajas when the universe is perceived to be made of attachment (raktamaya). If due to the disturbance brought about by its dark (deluding) nature, the form of everything is solely the darkness (of ignorance) and the manifestation (samudaya) (of the deity) suddenly (develops), then Bhairava's nature as the quality of tamas is directly perceived.

yena bhairaveṇa yathā prakāreṇa saṁsṛṣṭaṁ śvetābhāsabhāvanāvyāpake sattvarūpaḥ | raktamayadarśane jagati rajoguṇasvarūpaḥ | kṛṣṇamayatayā vyākulena sarvaṁ kṛṣṇākāramātram akasmād yadi samudayas tadā tamoguṇasvarūpabhairavaḥ sākṣād dṛṣṭa iti pratīyate | tasmai iti bhairavāya mahāmanthānasvarūpāya [-rūpāye] īśvarāyeti [aiśvarāyeti] cānekārthāḥ [cānekārthaḥ] |

34. Although the reading 'kulīśam' is confirmed below (as 'kaulīśam', see 2/44) and the author of the SaṁP acknowledges it, he prefers the reading 'kujeśam' (śrīkujeśam iti kulīśam iti pāṭhaḥ) which is the one found in all three of the other sources, namely, the KMT (1/1d), the ŚM (1/114) and the ṢSS (1/4a). He proceeds to comment saying: It has been explained that `the venerable one' (śrī) is the most excellent (goddess) Kujā, that is, Kubjikā. (He) is her lord and by virtue of her he possesses sovereignty. Honour to him. (śrī sarvotkṛṣṭā kujā kubjikā tasyeśvaraḥ tayeśane śīlā taṁ namata iti vyākhyātam |). The ŚM (MS G fl. 5a) similarly explains: 'Honour the venerable Kujeśa'. The Lord (īśa) of (the goddess) Kujā is Kujeśa. Power, that is, Kuṇḍalinī (is meant) by the word Kujā and Bhairava by the word Īśa. (The name) Kujeśa (is formed) by the union of those (two). (namata [ṅ: + iti kim; ch: namate; all other MSs: namataḥ] śrīkujeśaṁ kujāyā [g, c, ch: kujāyāḥ] īśaḥ kujeśaḥ | kujāśabdena śaktiḥ [ṅ: missing] kuṇḍalinī [kh g: -lini; ṅ: + śaktir ity adhiyate] īśaśabdena bhairavaḥ [ṅ: bhairava + ucyate] | tatsamāyogād iti kujeśaḥ [kh g: -saḥ] |)

The SaṁP (fl. 4b) adds an interesting explanation of who the goddess Kubjikā is:

She is (the god's power and consort) Śakti, Dūtikā (the Kaula adept's consort), Apsaras (a nymph), Indrāṇī (the god Indra's wife) and (she is) Māyā whose power is completely full. In the form of Kuṇḍalinī she is Vakrikā (who is) coiled. She is bent over, bashful (lajjitā) before the Lord (nātha) when the Tantra is being explained. There are these and many (other) meanings. In fact, (although one, she has three forms). In the world of the gods, (her) state is like (sāmya) sattva and so she is the white goddess of the Divine Current (divyaugha). In the world of men (her) state is like rajas and so she is the red woman of the Current of Men (mānavaugha). In the world of the demons (her) state is like tamas and so, as Nature (prakṛti), she is Māyā, the Kālī of the Current of Siddhas. And (so) she who is one appears in multiplicity. He who has (this) realisation (pratyaya), which is supreme, of many kinds and present in (both) knowledge and ignorance is the Lord of the Worlds (whereas) she is the goddess whose nature is (both) Kula and Akula.

sā śaktiḥ [śaktā] dūtikāpsarā indrāṇī pratipūrṇaśaktikā māyā । kuṇḍalinīrūpāyāṁ vakrikā vartulā । nāthaṁ prati tantrakathane lajjitā vakrā ity ādayo bahavaś cārthakāḥ । vastutas tu devaloke sattvasāmyāvasthayā [sāmyā-] śvetā divyaughā devī । naraloke rajaḥsāmyāvasthatayā raktā mānavaughā nārī । daityaloke tamaḥsāmyāvasthayā prakṭirūpayā māyā siddhaughā kālī । sā caikaiva nānātve pratibhāti । pratyayaṁ yasya bahudhā vijñānājñānagaṁ paraṁ [vijñānājñānagā parā] bhuvanādhipatiḥ sā devī kulākularūpiṇīty ādi [deva kṛkākularūpiṇīty ādi] ।

35. There is much more to learn from this and the following sentance, than just the length of the Saṁvartāsūtra. The number of the verses has a symbolic meaning. We can discover this by examining the following alternative translation: 'the (fundamental) reality of the Transmission (kramārtha) is encompassed in the three and a half (turns of Kuṇḍalinī). It is the experience (of deity) that has been deployed (in the maṇḍala) in accord with Khañjinī's form'.

Khañjinī - the Lady with a Limp - is one of the names of Kubjikā who is identified with Kuṇḍalinī. We are told that she is the '. . . mistress of the Wheel, the leader of the Siddhas. She has come through the transmission of Meru and consists of the fifty letters' (kukārā [k, kh: kakārā] sā [kh: (?)] smṛtā [kh: (?)] khañjī cakreśī siddhanāyikā ॥ sā ca merukramāyātā pañcāśākṣararūpiṇī । YKh (2) 14/13cd-14ab).

The phonemic energies of the alphabet emanate from the goddess and represent aspects of her inner, spiritual experience. They are arranged within Meru, that is, the downward facing Triangle located in the End of the Twelve above the head, in an anti-clockwise spiral of three and a half turns. This is the first differentiated form of the goddess Kubjikā, here called Khañjinī.

The expression 'khañjinīmūrtipūrvam' may also mean 'preceded by Khañjinī's form', which suggests another possible interpretation. The goddess is the Void that generates all things within which she abides as their inner centre. This state is symbolized by the Point in the centre of the maṇḍala. The Point is the Transmental (unmanā), which is the energy of the god's divine will that encompasses the Divine Current of the transmission that precedes the outer manifestation of the Krama.

36. The six parts of the maṇḍala are, amongst other things, the six corners of the hexagon that surrounds the central triangle into which the six groups of mantras that constitute the Krama are projected and worshipped (see intro. vol. 1,

p. 320 ff.). The KnT enjoins that: one should worship the Krama of Twenty-eight in the hexagon of the venerable Kramamaṇḍala (śrīkramamaṇḍalaṣaṭkoṇe [k: śrīmatkrama-, kh: śrīmakrama-; k: -ṣaṭkoṇa] aṣṭāviṁśatikramam arcayet | KnT MS K fl. 20b).

37. Presumably, this expression refers both to the varieties of the currents and lineages of teachers and the variety of forms of the Krama projected into the maṇḍala.

38. See intro. 1, p. 125, 149 and intro. 3, p. 79-80, 206.

39. The god now systematically questions the goddess about almost every single thing mentioned in the sūtra in the order in which each appears there. Numbered for easy reference, most of these questions will be answered in chapter 2.

40. As 'that' (tat) probably refers to the group of Eight Mothers projected into the maṇḍala then the 'icon' (mūrti) of the deity here means the maṇḍala.

41. Śārvī / Śarvī is the feminine of Śarva, a name of Rudra -Śiva. Although the goddess is commonly identified with Rudra's energy (rudraśakti), this is the only place the goddess is named this way in this text or indeed, possibly, in the entire Kubjikā corpus. Perhaps it is better, therefore, to understood it as a variant of the name Śavarī, which although generally not very common, appears repeatedly in chapter six below as an appellation of the goddess. As Śavarī, she is the consort of Bhairava the Śavara (see below 2/2cd-3ab and note).

42. The variant forms of this proper name are examined in the notes to the Sanskrit text. We may make a few observations here about the doctrinal implications of these variants. We have seen in the introduction, that Candrapura, the City of the Moon, is the name of both a city located in Koṅkaṇa and the maṇḍala, in its outer form and its projection into the End of the Twelve. Clearly, the name suggests the powerful lunar character of the goddess of that city and her maṇḍala. The variant forms of this name tell us more about the City of the Moon. In each case the variants relate to the second member of this compounded proper name. The second member of the variant candrapūra, as an adjective, literally means 'filling', 'making full', 'fulfilling' and 'satisfying'. As a masculine noun it denotes the 'the act of filling', 'fulfilling' and so, by extension, a 'flood' or a 'stream'. We also find the grammmatically correct variant candrapūrya and the synonym candrapūryaka as well as the deviant variant candrapurya we find here and candrapuryaka. The adjective pūrya- means 'to be filled' or 'satisfied'. So candrapūra / -pūrya / -purya / -puryaka / -pūryaka is the city or maṇḍala that is both filled with goddess's lunar energy and, as the flood or stream of this lunar energy, fills and fulfills with it, thus satisfying and nourishing just as it is satisfied and nourished by it. An interesting variant is candrapūrṇa or, the more complete form, attested in one place – candrapūrṇapura – the City Filled with the Moon. A form of Kubjikā called Juṣṭacaṇḍālinī (described below in 49/23cd-38ab) who is Śirodūti, the second of the six *dūti*s corresponding to the goddess's six limbs, is described as candrapūrṇā – 'full of the moon'. In one instance in our text the members of the compound are reversed. Below (in KuKh 66/68) we read pūrṇacandrakam whereas in the same verse in YKh (1) the reading is candrapūryakam. These variants suggest that the outer city and the maṇḍala are not just those of the moon but, in a special way, the full moon. This inner Full Moon nourishes the world with its streams of nectar while it is replenished inwardly by the New Moon in the centre of the maṇḍala (see intro. vol. 1, p. 339 ff.).

43. All the manuscripts agree on this reading, but the meaning is not clear to me. The group of sixteen Siddhas is the last series of teachers to which the Saṁvartāsūtra (1/2d) refers and so may well be the end of the line of teachers as far as this source is concerned (but see below, 7/80 ff.). Even so, this question appears to be misplaced here. The following three questions are also out of order with respect to the sequence of things mentioned in the Saṁvartāsūtra. They should all follow question 25 in this same order. Moreover, these questions are not answered directly, at least in chapter two. After replying to question 20 the text moves on directly to question 26. This leads one to think that perhaps these questions were not asked in an earlier redaction of the text and so were not answered. Subsequently, someone realised the lacuna and tried to fill it, at least here with the questions but failed to follow the sequence of things mentioned in the Saṁvartāsūtra correctly.

44. See note 18.

45. See note 22 concerning another variant.

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER TWO

1. च्, झ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच। The reading: श्रीवक्रोवाच is found irregularly throughout the text, alternating with श्रीवक्रा उवाच. Most manuscripts in most cases prefer to maintain the hiatus and so this is the standard form throughout this edition.

2. ञ्: * * (?) कौलस्य।   3. ङ् झ्: विज्ञान–।

4. All MSs: संचित्तिर्–। Below in 67/2 all the MSs again read संचित्तिर्– for संवित्तिर्–। However, there, as here, this appears to be a scribal error. We observe the same error in some of the MSs of the KuKauM in the passages quoted in the notes to the English translation.   5. ख्: स्फुतं; all other MSs: स्फुटं।

6. All MSs: या। This verse answers the question asked above in 1/5a namely, मण्डलान्ते कः कर्ता. The subject of this verse is therefore masculine and so this pronoun has been emended accordingly.

7. All MSs: सावनादिमित्या–। The goddess is called शावरी in numerous places. See 6/132a, 152d, 36/102c, 61/6c, 7c, 8b (कुलशावरी), 10b (शावरीगणम्), 13a, 15d, and 61/72a (शावरीशक्तिः) The form शवरी, which the MSs generally read as सवरी, is more common. It occurs not less than sixteen times in this text compared to ten of the other form. See 3/112b, 6/65b, 76d, 113b, 126b, 134a, 36/102c, 37/28c (शवरिका), 38/20c, 39/145c, 47/54a, 61/12b, 21b, 64/43c, 65/4b, and 67/11c. The god, however, is called शावरः just twice in 6/65a and 6/152d. The form शवरः is not attested in this text.

Here एकधा is a shortened form of एकविधा just as बहुधा is short for बहुविधा. Cf. KMT 2/117d: उपक्षेत्राण्यनेकधा – 'secondary sacred fields of many kinds'. See also, for example, below 2/6d, 3/39a, 9/14b, 9/36c (त्रिधा देवी– ‘the goddess is of three kinds'), 13/150d (परं सूक्ष्मं द्विधा भवेत् – 'it is of two kinds: supreme and subtle.'), 15/42cd, 24/40d, 24/43d, 24/107d, 25/40c, 26/7d, 26/46b, 27/15c and 36/60a. There are also examples of the regular use e.g. 21/22d, 21/31d and 22/3d. A co-relative pronoun सः or the like is required to complete the syntax and इत्याहुः would be better placed at the end of the line.

8. All MSs: स्थिता।   9. ञ्: –कं।   10. झ्: आ (?)तसी–।

11. क्: –ते; ख्: –लस्तं; ग्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: –लंत; घ्, च्, छ्: –तत्। Although three out of the nine MSs read तत्, I have chosen the reading तं. See above note to 1/5d.

12. घ्, च्, छ्: –क्रमं।   13. घ्, च्, छ्: तरंड–; all other MSs: तरण्डं–। I have emended the reading of the MSs to खरण्डदण्ड–. The same expression occurs in YKh (1) 34/123c quoted in the notes to the English translation.

14. ख्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, झ्, ञ्: अनु–; ख् –पापिनीं; all other MSs: –यापिनीं। –व्यापिनी would be correct but does not fit the metre. The accepted reading is supported by the SaṁP. The form यापिनी appears in the place of व्यापिनी at least twice again in this text (see 59/82d and 59/83a) and possibly a third time (see 63/75d). However, I have rejected that reading in 6/223b.

15. All MSs: प्राणो–. घ्, च्, छ्: –प्राणांतरे; झ्: –पाणांतरे।

16. ञ्, ट्: ऽनन्दशक्तिः स उच्यते; all other MSs: –अनन्दशक्तिः स उच्यते। SaṁP reads: –शक्तिस्तथोच्यते this reading, like that of the MSs is one syllable too long.

17. क्: –वेलो–; ञ्: कालवेलोविचि * * (?)। 18. क्: तन्व–। SaṁP reads: –प्रबोधिनी which is a regularly formed feminine. The form प्रोबोधिका is found in KMT 5/134d. The form प्रबोधकी is found again below in 3/111b and बोधकी in 61/83d. Analogous feminine forms are: त्रितीयकी (39/131d), भेदकी (3/112b, 63/65a), प्रकाशकी (3/110b, 5/73d, 6/188b), विकासकी (63/65d), विभेदकी (3/109b, 64/50b), and व्यापकी (24/35b and 26/71a). An interesting case occurs in 58/21d. There we find the regular feminine –कारिणी, but in YKh (1) 28/20d where the same verse appears, the reading is –कारकी. Feminines ending in –की are regular for stems that end with a vowel other than short or long 'a'. Thus, for example, the names खट्टिकी, कञ्चुकी and कौशिकी are regular (42/34). 19. All MSs: –प्रस्तारौ। See above, note 1/5a and cf. 21/9d. 20. See above note, 2/2d. 21. च्: –स्थि *।

22. क्, ङ्, झ्: भग्नं–; ख्: भर्गगं–; ग्, ङ्: भर्ग्न–; घ्: भगे–। 23. ट्: पच्च।

24. झ्: विलोमा *?; all other MSs: विलोमाशं। 25. ञ्: * * * (?) तं।

26. See above note to 1/2c. 27. Cf. above 1/1a: बालं कौमारवृद्धम्।

28. In order not to disturb the regular numerical order, these one and a half verses are numbered together as if they were just one verse.

29. ख्: –कृयायाख्या। Schoterman (1981: 48) refers to this as a fixed triad in which ज्ञानी figures rather than ज्ञान–. It is as if the neuter ज्ञान– has been made feminine to be in consonance with the feminine gender of the other two components of this standard triad. The same form occurs seven times in our text. We find that, as here, in many of the other occurrences in this text (i.e. 14/111b, 26/30b, 31/71a, 38/31a, 40/23a, 64/82b and 65/50a), the replacement of the regular form with the deviant one is not dictated by the metre. Note especially 14/111b: इच्छाज्ञानीक्रियात्मिका which reads in the same verse found in the TS: इच्छाज्ञानक्रियात्मिका. Similarly, compare KuKh 40/23a: इच्छा ज्ञानी क्रिया विश्वी and the equivalent in the TS, which is the source also in this case: इच्छा ज्ञानक्रिया विश्वी (see notes in those places below). The absence of this deviant form in the TS, which is a major source of the Kubjikā Tantras, where this form is quite common (see, e.g. .SSS 1/24), suggests that it is a peculiarity of the Sanskrit especially of these Tantras. 30. क्: प्रक * (?) त–। 31. छ्: –तचतुष्कं।

32. क्, घ्: –मात्रा। N → M. The author the SaṁP has understood the word तन्मात्राः to be a feminine, rather than a masculine, plural. Thus he refers to each member of the series of five subtle element as a तन्मात्रा. This form recurs below in 33/135c. The reading there is confirmed by the source, namely, TS 9/171a. It appears again in one place in TS 11/1129c which reads: पञ्चभूतानि तन्मात्राः.

33. घ्, च्, छ्: —प्रभिय; ञ्: —प्रतृतीय; all other MSs: —प्रभृतिय।

34. Note the omission of the correlate of this dependent pronoun.

35. All MSs except क्: —चक्षु—। 36. ञ्: (?)।

37. This compound has been split by the intruding indeclinable इति. Cf. TS fol. 37a: नवाङ्गुला सप्त – अथवा – द्वादशाङ्गुला. In most cases fillers inserted between words in compounds for the sake of the meter do not break up the compound in this way. Moreover, they are usually single letters (see below, note to 3/21b). In this case, two pseudo-words have been created that maintain the form they have in the unbroken compound and continue to function semantically as parts of it. The SaṁP reads: त्वक्चक्षुर्घ्राणजिह्वाश्रवण मनांसि चेति षड्विज्ञानार्थाः. It appears that the author of the SaṁP has attempted to emend the reading. But although he has maintained the irregular hiatus (see below, note to 3/77d) in this compound, the removal of इति gives rise to a metrically imperfect pāda. 38. क्: क्लिया—।

39. Missing in MSs ङ् and झ्। 40. घ्, च्, छ्: —गगणकं। Here is another example of a compound, in this case an attributive one (bahuvrīhi), that has been broken up by inserting an indeclinable, in this case अथ, in order to accommodate the metre. See below, note to 3/21b. 41. घ् च्: —तमासि; छ्: —तमासिस्; all other MSs: —तमांसिस्। As evidenced by the retention of the plural form of तमस्, the compound सत्त्वरजस्तमांसि has been split up to make a long second syllable by adding anusvāra to the first member of the compound in order to accomodate the metre. The syntax is further skewed as त्रिगुण–, the first member of what appears to be the following compound is qualified by this one and should be read together as part of a single compound namely: सत्त्वरजस्तमस्त्रिगुणगुणयुतम् which qualifies वृक्षनाथम् (M → N. Concerning this change in gender see above note to 1/2b).

42. ङ्: भिरगुण—। 43. All MSs except क्, घ्, च्, छ्: —प्रकारो।

44. ख्, ङ्, च्, झ्, ट्: हसखफल—; ञ्: हसख * रकला। 45. SaṁP: —निभौ।

46. क्, ग्, ञ्: प्रविश्या; ख्, ङ्: प्रविण्य; SaṁP प्रवीभ्य (?)। The final syllable of this pāda, which should be long, is short. 47. घ्: —नाथ; SaṁP: भूतनाथे।

48. ञ्: तदा * * * (?)। 49. * * * * (?) स्तदुपरिमथनं। An ablative is required here as we find below in 26/4d: तदुपरिमथनात् षट्प्रकाराधिकारम् and in 38/8a (repeated in 42/4d): तदुपरिमथनात् षट्प्रकारैर्विभिन्नम्. However, note an analogous use of the accusative in the distorted syntax of 65/48cd: नित्यानन्दरूपेण मथनं तदुपरि स्थिता. The reading —मथनं is supported by all the MSs and by the SaṁP. So, although emendation in this case to the required ablative would not disturb the metre I have preferred not to do this. Cf. Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 87): 'The nominative as a basic and easily applicable case-form is preferred by the KMT in several contexts where another case might have been expected.'

50. ग्: –कर्त्री; घ्, च्, छ्: –कर्त्रि। 51. छ्: –पदै–। 52. मु * * (?)।
53. ञ्: (?)। 54. ञ्: (?); all other MSs: ललनाथं।
55. ञ्: (?)। 56. ञ्: (?)। 57. All MSs: परासृतम्।

58. The correct gerund would be प्लावयित्वा, but it does not fit the metre.

59. M → N. See above, note to 1/1c.

60. ख्, झ्: –शब्द * शिस्तु; all other MSs: –राशिस्तु।

61. The correct gerund would be व्यापयित्वा, but it does not fit the metre.

62. All MSs except ङ्, छ्: तत्। 63. ख्: ग्रोत्रं।

64. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: सृष्टिगो कर्त्तारं। Compare SvT 9/2cd: सृष्टिसंहारकर्तारं हृदयात्तु विनिर्गतः। Kṣemarāja ingeniously covers over this deviant usage in his commentary where he says: सृष्टिसंहारयोः कर्ता वक्ष्यमाणश्रीकोटराक्षनामो देवः, अरं शीघ्रं, विनिर्गतः समुच्छलित इत्यर्थः. There are several examples of a deviant nom. sing. that coincides with the regular accusative form of agent nouns. For example, we find दाता > दातारम् in 6/117a (see note) and 44/64c (see also note to 5/81a); प्रदाता > प्रदातारम् in 42/21a, 22a, 23a, 24a; हन्ता > हन्तारम् in YKh (1) 21/10c and कर्ता > कर्तारम् below in 6/135c, However, in 38/18d दातारः > दाता which illustrates well the extent to which metric considerations overrule grammatical ones. Note also that where the subject is masculine we find the equivalent 'masculine' form. For example, कर्तारः replaces कर्ता in 61/94c, 64/100c and 66/22c and वेत्तारः replaces वेत्ता in 33/145c and 64/8a. The redactors of the Kubjikā corpus were aware, it seems, that the langauge of the texts is corrupt and attempted, in places, to correct it. Thus in KMT 5/49a we find सर्पमार्जारहन्तारो whereas the equivalent in the ṢSS (8/142c) reads: सर्पमार्जारहन्ता च. The reading सृष्टिगो कर्त्तारं found in six MSs may be the result of an unsuccessful attempt to correct the Sanskrit. So although the text could be emended to सृष्तिगः कर्ता, which would be both grammatically correct and fits the metre, I have chosen to refrain from emendation and understand the expression सृष्टिकर्तारं to mean सृष्टिकर्ता.

65. ञ्: * * (?) समो–; all MSs –पेतां।

66. ञ्: कुलाष्टक * * * (?) तां; all other MSs: –समन्वितां।

67. All MSs except ङ्, छ्: –युक्तां। 68. ख्: –देवतताष्टकम्।
69. छ्, ज्, ञ्: यमेदं; all other MSs येमेदं। 70. झ्: चतुर्विध।
71. घ्, च्, छ्: च। 72. क्: सृष्टिर्भूतं–, ख्: सृष्टिभूत–; ङ्, च्: सृष्टि–।
73. क्: चतुर्विधो। 74. ङ्: वृद्ध। 75. ङ्: क्रम।

76. ख्: विषुवे–; ञ्: * * * (?) स्थनमार्गेण। 77. All MSs except घ्, झ्: –स्थितां। 78. ख्, ङ्, झ्: ककलो; all other MSs: ककला।

79. क्, ङ्, झ्: पौर्णिमास्यन्ते; ख्, ग्: पूर्ण्णिमस्यान्ते; ज्, ञ्, ट्: पौर्ण्णिमस्यान्ते; all other MSs: पूर्णिमास्यान्ते। 80. ख्: अमीते। 81. झ्: कलो ककला; all other MSs: कला ककला। 82. झ्: *र्णा; ट्: पूर्णं। 83. ख्: स्थितो।

84. M → N. See above, note to 1/5c. 85. झ्: श्रीम * *?।

86. घ्, च्, छ्: –षष्ठि:–; ञ्: चतु:* * * (?)मेणोक्ता; all other MSs: –षष्ठि–।

87. All MSs: चक्रिका। Although all the MSs agree here and in one other place (see 68/143b) on this reading, it could easily be the result of a scribal error. If this is one of the names of the goddess it is very rare, whereas the emended form is quite common. See note to 1/2a; cf. 30/229d and 38/14c where the same error occurs in just one or two MSs. 88. झ्: – *? मद्ध्ये। 89. घ्, ङ्: –पूर्यं। See above, note to 1/11c. 90. क्, ङ्: शुष्मणा–; ख्: शुष्मनामण्डलाधार; च्: सूक्ष्मणा––धारे; all other MSs except घ्, छ्: शुष्मना–। 91. All MSs: –वाहिनं। The nom. sing. of possessive and agent nouns normally coincides with the nom. plural in this text (see below, 4/3c). The reading has been emended accordingly. Note also that the order of the first two members of this compound has been reversed. 92. ङ्, छ्, ञ्: –नान्त; all other MSs except ख्, ग्, च्: उन्मानान्त। 93. See above, note to 1/5d.

94. The proper name श्रीनाथ– is obviously masculine but is treated here, as elsewhere, as neuter (see above, 1/2b and note). Consistent with this change of gender and that of the other adjectives in concord one would expect the neuter form कुलालम्बि rather than the masculine form attested by all the manuscripts.

95. घ्, ञ्: कुब्जीशं; ञ्: कुजी * (?)। 96. ञ्: सिद्धि:नायकं।

97. ख्, च्: –दशं–। M → N. See above note to 1/2b, cf. 1/14c and 1/16a.

98. ङ्: कथमि। 99. घ्, ञ्: सुरेश्वर:।

100. झ्: उन्मना *? विनिर्गतं; all other MSs: उन्मनाज्ञ–। This emendation agrees with the reading below of 35/92cd-93ab and YKh (2) 15/5 where this and the following line appear. 101. ख् ग्: षट्त्र; all other MSs: षट्षु। This emendation is supported by the reading of 35/93ab below.

102. The gender of the proper names in this list is problematic. The gender of the members of such lists in general is not always uniform and the concord between words is frequently irregular (cf. e.g. 6/14 ff.). Even so in the great majority of cases, the original or basic gender of the names listed is evident. Here this is not so at first sight. This passage (up to 2/25) is quoted in full in the SaṁP (fol. 3b). The readings are virtually the same as we find in the majority of the MSs of the KuKh betraying once again Mukundarāja's dependence on the corrupt manuscript tradition of the Kathmandu Valley. Virtually the same passage is found in the work of same the author and is also found the KnT (MS K fl. 7a). For the sake of clarity it is worth reproducing the passage here:

प्रथमश्चोन्मनीशानो (क्, ख्, ग्, घ्: प्रथमं–) द्वितीयश्च (क्, ख्, ग्, घ्: द्वितीयञ्च) मनोन्मन:।।
समनाख्यस्तृतीयश्च (क्, ख् ग्: –तृतीयञ्च) व्यापिन्याख्यश्चतुर्थक:।

अव्यक्तः पञ्चमः शंभो (क्, ग्: शम्भो) नन्दीशः (ख्: नन्दीश; ग्: —शं) षष्ठ उच्यते।।
मन्थानः (क्: मन्थान) सप्तमश्चात्र (क्, ख्, ग्: सप्तमञ्चात्र) अष्टमो भैरवाधिपः।
नवमः समयाख्यः (क्: —ख्ये; ख्, ग्, घ्: —ख्य) श्रीजृंभाख्यो दशमः स्मृतः।।
दशैकः कालसंकर्षो (ख्: कारसंकर्षा; ग्: कालसंकर्षा; घ्: कालसंकर्षी) द्वादशश्चण्डसंज्ञकः।
त्रयोदश (ख्: त्रयोदशस् (?); ग्, घ्: त्रयोदशस्त्व) अघोरेशस्त्रैलोकाख्यश्चतुर्दशः (ख्, ग्: अघोरेशलोकाख्याश्च चतुर्दशः; घ्: घोरेशस्त्रैलोक्याखेश्चतुर्दश)।।
विमलः पञ्चदशमः कमलः षोडशो (ख्: षोडशं; ग्: षोडशी; घ्: षोडशमो) भवेत् (ख्: भवेड)।
सप्तदशश्च (क्: —दशञ्च; ख्, ग्: सप्तादशं *) चर्चिकाख्यः श्रीनाथोऽष्टादशः स्मृतः।।

We notice that the proper names themselves are fairly uniformly masculine in all the manuscripts. Only the first two cardinals are neuter in all the manuscripts and so we may confidently emend the readings there. The situation in the ŚM (24/47-51ab) where we find another list of names is more complex. The passage there reads:

(ख्: + ५ ऐं) प्रथममुन्मनीनाम (क्: प्रथमं घुर्मनामा; ख्: —नामा; ग्: प्रथमौन्मनि) द्वितीयं च मनोन्मनी (क्: श्रीनाथं च द्वितीयकम्)।
तृतीयं च पराव्याप्तिर्व्यापिन्या (क्: कमलाव्याप्तिन्योग; ग्: परार्—) च चतुर्थिका (क्: चनर्धिका; ग्: चतुर्थका)।।
अव्यक्तं पंचमं नाथं (क्: नाम) नादिन्या षष्ठ (क्: षट्क; ख् ग्: षष्ट) उच्यते।
मन्थानं (ग्: मथान) सप्तमं प्रोक्तमष्टमं (क्: प्रोक्तं अंशुमद्) फेरुभैरवम् (ख्: हनु—; ग्: अरु—)।।
नवमं समयाख्यं (क् ग्: चमयाख्यं; ख्: समयाखा) च दशमं जंभलं भवेत्।
एकादशं कुलाम्नायं (क्: —श्रायं) द्वादशं नादिभैरवम्।।
त्रयोदशमघोरेशं (ख्: —दशंम—; ग्: —दशंमघोरं च) त्रिपुरेशं (ख्: त्रिपुरेणं) चतुर्दशम्।
अमा (ग्: अना) पंचदशी प्रोक्ता (ग्: प्रोक्तां) कमला षोडशी (ख्: षोडशं; ग्: षोडश) स्मृता (ग्: स्मृताः)।।
श्रीनाथं सप्तदशं (क्: सप्तदशं च श्रीनाथं; ग्: सप्तादशं) प्रोक्तं घूर्मं (क्: घुर्मं; ख् ग्: घूर्म) चाष्टादशं (ख् ग्: चाष्टदश) भवेत् (ग्: स्मृतं)।

In this version the MSs all agree that the first three proper names are feminine although their dependent ordinals are neuter. The discord is corrected in the case of the first ordinal which can be taken to refer to the word नामन् at the end of the first proper name rather than the proper name itself. The fourth ordinal is feminine agreeing with the feminine proper name to which it refers. The sixth name is feminine, whereas the ordinal is masculine as is the case in KuKh 2/22d where this same quarter verse appears. The fifteenth and sixteenth names are feminine as are their dependent ordinals. The remaining names are all neuter and their dependent ordinals are in concord, even though it is clear that a masculine proper name is intended. This change from masculine to neuter of male proper names is common in the Sanskrit of such texts and need not detain us. Although the KnT presents all the names as masculine, it is clear that in order to do so the author has had to take recourse to expedients, such as suffixing - akhyaḥ to the names that are clearly feminine. Although belonging to the main period of development of the Kubjikā Tantras, the KnT is a derived work by a self-proclaimed author. It is not surprising, therefore, that the Sanskrit of a passage such as this one, drawn from the Tantras, has been polished up. The ŚM is closer in this respect to the passage we are examining. The mixed genders and loose concord there encourages us to accept the same here as part of the orginal basic text and not the result of simply scribal error.

The editor is faced here with a dilemma. Should this passage be extensively emended to the correct Sanskrit on the lines of the version found in the KnT? One wonders to what degree scribes may commit errors. It is likely that this passage is not orginal to the KuKh and was drawn from another source where the same confusion of genders existed. The redactor(s) of the KuKh sought to overcome this problem by labelling each member of the series abstractly as a 'division' of the Divine Current irrespective of gender (see 2/26ab). Thus one could think of the neuter forms as agreeing with भेद– which is normally treated as neuter in this text (see above, note to 1/2b). 103. क्, ख्: त।

104. घ्, च्, छ्: व्याप्तिर्; KnT: समनाख्यस्तृतीयश्च; ŚM: तृतीयं च पराव्याप्तिर्।

105. The regular gen. sing. of the noun व्यापिनी is व्यापिन्याः। Here व्यापिनी has become व्यापिन्या and is then declined accordingly to gain an extra syllable for the metre. As is generally the case in all the Kubjikā Tantras, Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 71) note that in the Sanskrit of the KMT the 'contamination of stems on –ī and –yā is frequent' and we notice an 'oscillation between feminine stems on –i/-ī and on –yā.' (ibid. 58). They go on to list several examples from the KMT most of which are found in our text also. The most common is devyaa that often replaces देवी (e.g. see below, 6/13b). In ṢSS 3/43a the form देव्याः is the nom. pl. of देव्या. Both forms of the genitive देव्याः and देव्यायाः are attested. Some examples of the latter found in our text are in 6/89a, 18/39c, 41d, 43b, 44d, 21/33b, and 43/4c. Examples of analogous forms are: मालिन्यायाः (18/45d, 67b, 105b), दीपन्यायाः (18/103b), गौर्यायाः (19/37c, 21/8b, 12c, and 22/9b) and घोर्यायाः (21/22b). Examples of these deviant feminines are numerous throughout the Kubjikā texts. In the ṢSS, for example, we find भानुमत्या for भानुमती (4/5 102d; see Schoterman 1981: 24) and below, for example, तरङ्गिण्या in place of तरङ्गिणी (2/34d), कापालिन्या for कापालिनी (7/29d), पेप्पिर्या (7/30a) and अधिकारिण्या for अधिकारिणी (3/13c). Such irregularities, along with fluctuating gender, are found throughout this passage, just as they are generally in similar ones in this text. So, although the KnT reads here: व्यापिन्याख्यश्चतुर्थकः, which is regular Sanskrit, I have decided not to emend.

106. The KnT reads नन्दीशः which is in regular concord. But none of the MSs nor the SaṁP and ŚM support this reading. Indeed this quarter verse is exactly the same in the ŚM. See note to 2/23d. The dependent cardinal should either be neuter in accord with name to which it refers or neuter following the general pattern. However, neither of these options would fit the metre.

107. ग्: वक्र; छ्: वक्त्रे; SaṁP: वक्र। This quarter reads in the KnT: मन्थान: सप्तमश्चात्र।

108. ग्: फरुकं। The name given below in 57/15b and 57/65d is Herukā. The mantra, recorded in chapter 24 of the ŚM, addresses the being here as Heruka. The SaṁP, which quotes this passage, confirms this reading. Moreover, according to the ŚM (24/48c) the name is Pherubhairava. So, although the letters ह and फ are easily confused in the script of old Nepalese manuscripts, I take this to be the original reading.

109. ङ्: नवमं समयाक्षां; all other MSs and the SaṁP: समयाक्षी; ŚM: समयाख्यं (क् ग्: चमयाख्यं; ख्: समयाखा); KnT: नवम: समयाख्य:। It is said below concerning this member of the series: समयं क्षीणकल्मषम् (57/66d).

110. All MSs and the SaṁP: जम्भला दशमा स्मृता; KnT: श्रीजृंभाख्यो दशम: स्मृत:; ŚM: दशमं जंभलं भवेत्। If one were to accept the reading of the MSs, this would be the only feminine except for the one in line 2/25cd which is anomolous (see note there). I have therefore emended to the common neuter form of the members of this list. See above, note to 2/21c.

111. ख्: दन्कैकं; ङ्: दसैकं; KnT: दशैक:। The regular form of this ordinal in this case would be एकादशम्. See below, note to 2/25c and cf. 23/25d दशैकाधिकम् and 68/63c दशैका।

112. ञ्: काल् * (?) कार्ष्णं; all other MSs: –संकार्ष्णं। This emendation is supported by the reading in the SaṁP which is: संकार्षं and the MSs of the KnT namely: क्: कालसंकर्षो; ख्: कारसंकर्षा; ग्: कालसंकर्षा; घ्: कालसंकर्षी। Below this name reads कालकर्षी and is intended to be feminine. 113. ज्, ञ्, ट्: चडनिर्णयं; KnT: द्वादशश्चण्डसंज्ञक:।

114. झ्: –घोरीसं; ख्: –घोरिशं। 115. KnT: त्रयोदशस्त्वघोरेशस्त्रैलोक्याख्यश्चतुर्दश: (ख्: त्रयोदशसघोरेशलोकाख्याश्च चतुर्द्दश:, ग्: त्रयोदशस्त्वाघोरेशलोकाख्याश्च चतुर्द्दश:; घ्: त्रयोदशस्त्वघोरेशस्त्रैलोक्याखेश्चतुर्द्दश)। 116. This pāda is one syllable too long. The SaṁP reads this quarter: विनयं पञ्चदशमं. This reading is the correct number of syllables, however the sixth and seventh syllables are short, not long as they should be. The KnT reads विमल: पञ्चदशम: which is metrically defective in the same way. 117. छ्: –ल; KnT: कमल:। 118. All MSs except क्, घ्, ङ्: षोडशमं; KnT: षोडशो (ख्: षोडशं; ग्: षोडशी; घ्: षोडशमो)। 119. SaṁP and all MSs except ग्, झ्: –सप्त; KnT: सप्तदशञ् (ख्, ग्: सप्तादशं; घ्: सप्तादशश्)। Whereas दशैकम् (above 2/24a) which replaces एकादशम्, saves a syllable for the metre, the inversion of सप्तदशम् to दशसप्तम् does not. (see also below, notes to 5/45a and 5/63d). This pāda is anyway one syllable too long. Moreover, the fifth syllable is long and the sixth short. The same form recurs in four other places (see 4/14a, 5/45c, 51/9c and 57/49c). The elements of compound numbers, numerals and ordinals, are not uncommonly reversed in the Sanskrit of these Tantras. We find, for example, in the KMT विंशच्चत्वारि (or विंशचत्वारि in MSs EGJ) (ibid. 5/8d), पञ्चाशैकोन (ibid. 6/69a), विंशत्येकसहस्राणि (ibid. 18/118c) and दशपञ्च (ibid. 11/17cd). Examples of ordinals are: दशद्वितियम् (ibid. 7/62b), दशाष्टमम् (ibid. 7/67b), विंशत्रितयम् (ibid. 7/71c), त्रिंशत्यूनम् (ibid. 7/75d) and दशसप्तकम् (ibid. 7/66b). Here in the KuKh we find सहस्रैकम् (6/193c), चतुष्टयशतैकम् (8/15c), लक्षैकम् (8/98b, 12/4b and 58/83d), लक्षैकेन (11/76a and 23/34c), सहस्रैकम् (12/4ab), दशैकाधिकम् (23/25d), कोटिपञ्चाशल्लक्षैकं (30/95a), कोटीन्ययुतचत्वारि लक्षाः पञ्चाशकोटिकाः। सहस्रशतसंख्या च सहस्रैकं।। (30/97), दशपञ्च (46/219d), दशाष्टौ (46/234a, 57/80c and 68/3a), the ordinal दशाष्टकम् (23/6b) दश चैकावतारे (57/20c), and त्रिकैकं (57/36d) and the ordinal दशैका (68/63c). Cf. above, note to 1/5a.

120. This quarter contains an extra syllable. The SaṁP reads: दशसप्त चर्चिका च। This reading is the right number of syllables but the fifth one is long and the sixth short rather than the other way around, as it should be.

121. झ्: श्रीनाथौ–। The KnT reads: चर्चिकाख्यः श्रीनाथोऽष्टादशः।

122. ख्: ईत्य–; झ्: –भे *? नि। 123. ञ्: * (?) रंपर्यक्रमा–; All MSs: –गता। This reading makes the sixth syllable short. –क्रमागताः would agree with –भेदाः, which is the correct form, but the word भेद– is regularly neuter in this text (see above note to 1/2b; cf. 2/20a). Moreover, the neuter ending fits the metre.

124. All MSs: आगता। 125. क्, घ्, ङ्, च्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: उघ–।
126. घ्, छ्, ञ्: –शक्तिः–। 127. All MSs except ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: सामरस्य।
128. क्: विभुं–; all other MSs विपुंतथा।

129. It is tempting to emend उभे पक्षे to उभपक्षे. This emendation would solve the problem that arises from उभ being a dual adjective requiring a dual ending. However, it would not remedy the need for a dual locative ending of the entire compound.
130. M → N. Cf. below, 6/157b, 8/122a, 62/85c, and 63/63c.
131. ञ्: युग्मं–; घ्, च्, छ्: –स्मृत।

132. One would expect the compound to have a plural ending.

133. ख्: मिषर्तु; च्: मिष–उ; ज्: मिषद्र; ञ्: भिष उ; all other MSs: मि ष उ। The MSs generally agree on the reading U instead of O for ओड्डीश– both here and in verse 2/45 but in 7/95c, where the abbreviated names are in the forward order, reads: ओषमित्रास्तु सिद्धाश्च. U stands for उड्डीश–. The variant spelling is a result of the variant spelling of the corresponding sacred seat namely, ओड्डियाण–. Place names in general have a variety of spellings. This one is especially varied. The spellings found in the KuKh are: ओड्डियाण– (6/59b, 42/3b, 48/89d (ओड्डियाणक–)), ओड्डियान– (TS 15/82a see note to 14/81 below), ओडियाण– (6/71a, 191b, 11/19a), ओडियान– (6/32b, 8/112d), ओद्याणक– (42/16b) and ओद्यान– (63/63d). We also find उडियाण– (6/196c, 65/29b), उड्डियाण– (26/3b, 34/61a, 113a, 35/20b, 25d, 27d, 38a, 58c, 102b, 38/2b, 6b, 17a, 19b, 39/37b, 42/13a), उड्डियान– (34/61a, 59/20d), उद्यान– (see 6/6b, 25d, 208a, 51/21c, 54/11d, 60/84b, 61/6b), and उद्याण– (6/218c, 28/9c, 30/174a, 46/3a, 46/7d). We also find the abbreviated spellings उडि– (6/6a), ओड्डु– (in the proper name श्रीमदोड्डुमहेशान– (6/224a and note) and उडु– (6/225a). Elsewhere we notice ऊडु (YKh (1) 1/180a and 9/61c), उडु (ibid. 17/17a) spelt ओडी in YKh (2) where the same passage appears (ibid. 5/18a). There we also find the spelling ओडु (ibid. 29/50d). Clearly, in our text the instances of spellings beginning with U are more frequent that those beginning with O. Even so, the standard abbreviation we find in the Kubjikaa texts for this place is O (see note to the English translation). Thus, I assume that the spelling beginning with O is the main one. This seems to be further confirmed by the spelling of the name of the Siddha who presides here. Thus, although the spelling उड्डीश– is attested in our text (60/5d), ओड्डीश– (43/30c, 44/11d, 18c, 46/48b, 49c, 174b) उडीश– (6/31c, 31/92a, 61/37a) and ओडीश– (7/18b,) are much more common spellings (see also note to 6/224a). I have therefore emended accordingly. 134. All MSs: मता।

135. झ्: –पदा *?च; ञ्: * * (?)कार–।

136. घ् च् छ्: सिद्धास्तृ–; ख् ग्, ङ्, च्: –प:; ञ्: सिद्धास्ति–।

137. All MSs: सोमार्कानलमध्यस्थां चित्कलाम्; ख्, ङ्: अमतोपमां; all other MSs: अमृतोपमां।

138. घ्, ञ्, ट्: –सुद्ध–। 139. ख्: –मत्या; छ्, झ्: –गभ्या; ञ्: –गत्वा; all other MSs: –रागत्या। Note how this indeclinable adverb of manner formed with the suffix –धा here, as elsewhere, replaces an adjective of type, in this case नवविधा. See above note to 2/2d. The expression नवविधागत्यागत्य would be correct but does not fit with the metre. 140. ख्, घ्: –स्थिता; all other MSs: व्यवस्थिता:।

141. च्, झ्, ट्: –दपश्चैव। 142. क्, घ्: –ला। N → M.

143. ग्: –मार्द्य–। Here, as below in 2/34a and elsewhere. the word ओघ– in sandhi with a preceding ` a ' does not develop into औघ–. See above, note to 1/5b; cf. 1/12a. Moreover, this is a false compound formed by conjoining two compounds or, depending on what it is understood to mean, a compound and an uncompounded word. The first alternative would be the dependent determinative (tatpuruṣa) शिष्योघम् and the possessive (bahuvrīhi) अमोघसंभूतम् or else the determinative (शिष्योघामोघ– >) अमोघशिष्योघम् + (एवम्) संभूतम् which is how it has been understood and translated. Either way the following possessive clearly determines
शिष्योघम्. 144. क्: महान्त्र–; ख्, ङ्: महत्यु–; ग्, झ्: मद्यत्यु–।

145. ज्, ञ्, ट्: कंडलिनी; झ्: कुन्दलिनी।

146. क्: क्रमेण; all other MSs: क्रमने। 147. ञ्: क्रम * * * (?)।

148. ञ्: * * * (?) पा। 149. ञ्: –गो।

150a. All MSs: अपरपरा– 150b. ट्: –र्णां। 151. झ्: वकृकी।

152. क्: संतविप्रसरोघं। 153. च्: स्था निरा–; क्: स्पा निरा–; घ्, ञ्: स्यानिरा–।

154. All MSs except क्, झ्, ञ्: संसारं। 155. ञ्: तस्मान्।

156. छ्, ञ्, ट्: –तरंगिन्या। तरङ्गिणी → तरङ्गिण्या। Note that this deviant form has not been created for metrical reasons. See above, note to 2/22b.

157. घ्, छ्: पञ्चाशभिर्नीत्मा–; ञ्: –गो * * * (?)शभिर्भिन्ना; ट्: –पंचाशभिर्–; all other MSs except झ्: पञ्चाश–। 158. All MSs except घ्, झ्: कुला।

159. M → N. Cf. 1/2b. 160. क्: –भेर्षजम्; All other MSs –भर्षगम्।

161. ङ्, च्: –नाम; क्: –नासं। 162. क्: –मित्पुत्पते।

163. All MSs: तदा। 164. घ्, छ्: इदा–; ख्: –मध्य।

165. ख्: वक्त्रा; च्: यक्ष्या; all other MSs: वक्ष्या।

166. घ्: कारणेत्था; ङ्: कारणेद्वा; ज्: कारणेच्छ; ञ्, ट्: कारणेच्छा।

167. क्: –योपिनी; च्, छ्: तिष्ठेशिव–; ख् ङ्: –निवमार्गा–; ज्, ट्: –यापिनी; ञ्: * * * (?) वमार्गानुयापिनी। 168. All MSs except घ्, छ्: षट्वक्त्रा।

169. M → N. See note to 1/4a. 170. All MSs: तस्य वहुधा। बहुधा has replaced बहुविधम्। See above, note to 2/2d and 2/30c.

171. घ्, च्, छ्: –ज्ञानगा। 172. Note how the goddess is here referred to as if male. See note to the English translation. 173. ञ्: –रू * * (?)।

174. All MSs: –तद्वैर–। 175. ञ्: कमनोयकि। Cf. 3/110c, 111c, 112c, 113c, 114c 176. घ्, च् छ्: –कार; ट्: –कर।

177. All MSs except क्: शांभवेत्।

178. घ्, छ्: –भुवने–; All MSs: –व्याप्ति।

179. ख्, घ्: –शिवान्तकं; all other MSs: –शिवान्तिकम्। It is possible that the normally feminine noun व्याप्ति– is treated here as if it were neuter. But as there are no other possible examples of this deviation in this text, I have chosen to emend.

180. च्: सृष्टुं। 181. M → N. Or else we could think of चराचरम् as an adjective qualifying an implied जगत् or the like.

182. घ्, च्, छ्: तृगणा। 183. ञ्: (?)। 184. ञ्: * (?)मात्रा।

185. ञ्: * वस्थिता। 186. M → N. The gender of this proper name oscillates between its regular masculine gender and neuter in these lines in a manner typical of the masculine proper names throughout this text and the Tantras of the Kubjikā corpus in general. 187. घ्, च्, छ्: रोमा–; ख्: रोमे–; झ्: रोमे गात्रे; ट्: भरत्य * * * * * * * *; all other MSs: रोम–। 188. All MSs: नवत्य। This and the previous line are similar to the following verse found in the ŚM (1/115). It is quoted and translated in the notes to the English translation:

भरत्यमृतरूपेण रमते शक्तिना सह (ङ्: सहा)।

वमते (छ्: व * ते) ज्ञानसद्भावं भैरवस्तेन (ग्, ङ्, च्, छ्: भैरवं–) चोच्यते।।

The reading नवत्य found in all the MSs is problematic. I have emended to रवति presumming that the etymology of the god 's name to which this verse alludes is derived from the roots भृ and रव्. Although this is not a true etymology and differs from the implied derivation in the verse quoted from the ŚM, it is consistent with the one presented by Abhinavagupta in his TĀ which is inspired by Tantric sources (see notes to the English translation). However, the similarity of these two verses, suggests that they are either related to a common source or that one has been derived from the other. Therefore, emendation to वमते or to the correct 1P form वमति may be more appropriate. 189. ङ्: ज्ञानसद्भाव। 190. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: भैरव। 191. झ्: अक्षयं क्षयहीन चं; all other MSs: अक्षयं क्षयहीनं च। 192. झ्: कुलकलां–; च्: कुलकान्त–; all other MSs: कुलकालान्त–। 193. IC. चतुर्भिः would be correct as would the compound चतुर्भेदैः but neither of these alternatives fits the metre.
194. ङ्: मि ड षं; घ्: मि ड पं च; छ्: मि ओ ष च; झ्: ?; ञ्, ट्: मि–उ–ष–च; all other MSs छ्: मि ड ष च। See above, note to 2/28b. We notice here the transition discussed in the introduction between the triadic model of three Siddhas to four (cf. below 7/95c). Above in 2/28 the sequence is Mitranātha (MI), Ṣaṣṭhanātha (ṢA) and Oḍḍīśanātha (O). This is the reverse of the usual forward order which is the one we find implicit, for example, in the exposition of the sacred seats in chapter six below and corresponding to the four Ages in which the transmission is said to have taken place. It is as follows: 1) Oḍḍīśanātha (O) – Oḍḍiyāna (O) – Kṛta Age 2) Caryānātha (CA) - Jālandhara (JĀ) - Tretā Age 3) Ṣaṣṭhanātha (ṢA) – Pūrṇagiri (PŪ) – Dvāpara Age 4) Mitranātha (MI) - Kāmarūpa (KĀ) - Kali Age. The order of this sequence coincides with the usual order of presentation of the sacred seats in the abbreviated form - O - JĀ - PŪ - KĀ (see e.g. KMT 17/7-8) - thus further confirming that it is the normal order. Reversed, we would expect the sequential order here to be MI ṢA CA O. But note that below according to 46/47cd-49ab (= ṢSS 43/17-18) the order is MI CA ṢA O. But I take this to be anomolous (see notes to the translation of those verses). 195. ख्, झ्: पदगतीति–; ट्: पद्धतीतिर्निदर्शिताः; all other MSs: पद्धतीति–; all MSs except झ्: –निदर्शिताः। 196. क्, ग्, ञ्: –यज्ञ।
197. क्, ग्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: अन्वय। 198. ट्: लक्षपादा * * (?)। 199. ञ्: आद्यापिठा–।
200. झ्: –परमेश्वरे; क्, च्: –पारमेश्वर; ञ्: आज्ञा * * * (?) श्वरे। 201. घ्, च्, छ्: स्वामिनी *
*। 202. क्: –विशत्–। See note to the preceding colophon.
203. क्, ख्, ग्, च्, छ्: आद्या–; घ्, ञ्, ट्: अद्या–; ङ्: आथा–; ग्, ज्: अधा–।
204. क्, ज्, ञ्: प्रस्तोत्रा–; घ्: प्रस्तुत्ररोधिकारे वर्णभेद; च्, छ्: –वर्णभेद; ट्: प्रस्तोत्रराधिकारवर्ण * (?)।
205. च्: भेदक्रमो; ट्: * * (?) दयो। 206. क्: नामोनन्द; झ्: नामोनन्दो; ट्: नामा * * (?); all other MSs except छ्: नामानन्द। 207. Missing in MS च्।

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER TWO

1. According to Monier-Williams, the common, non-technical sense of the noun saṁvitti (f.) is: 'knowledge, intellect, understanding; perception, feeling, sense of; mutual agreement, harmony, recognition, recollection'. Here it has the special sense the technical term pratyaya conveys. The SKh (4/22ab) explains: saṁvitti (means), by secondary ascription, a sign of attainment (pratyaya), such as the explosion of a tree and the like (brought about by the yogi's will) (saṁvittir upacāreṇa vṛkṣasphoṭādipratyayam). According to Monier-Williams the word pratyaya means: 'belief, firm conviction, trust, faith assurance or certainty; proof, ascertainment'. In our texts, and the Tantras in general, this word possesses an added technical sense derived from these primary meanings. Pratyaya denotes those signs that indicate the yogi's degree of accomplishment and hence inner level of attainment. When used in this sense, I therefore normally translate the term pratyaya with the phrase 'sign of attainment'. Most of these signs are externally perceptable. They include what would be understood in India as signs of possession by the deity (āveśa) such as bodily tremours or fits. They also include powers to perform magical-cum-yogic feats. Although the outer signs are more numerous, there are inner signs also. As one would expect, the most important is a powerful experience of bliss (ānanda) and what is here called saṁvitti which I translate as the 'realisation (of attainment)'.

Saṁvitti may also mean simply 'consciousness' as in the two following examples. The god is explaining the deeper meaning of a set of mantras called the Five Jewels. The first Jewel, this passage tells us, is one's own transcendental consciousness, which within Śiva, realises his true nature:

That is said to be (the highest) sense organ (ākṣā), which devoid of mind (citta), is constantly (present) in the being of the mind. Again, the dissolving away of the mind is said to be (the condition) devoid of mind. (The state) devoid of mind, established above non-self (nairātmya), is due to that. The most excellent teachers say that that is the Jewel which is one's own consciousness (svasaṁvitti) (present) within Supreme Śiva by means of meditation.

cittahīnā tu sākṣā [k gh: sākṣī] yā cittibhāve [k ṅ: vitī-; all MSs: -bhāva] sadā smṛtā |
pralayaṁ [k: prālayaṁ] caiva cittasya [k gh: vittasya; kh g ṅ: cityasya] cittahīnaṁ [ṅ: vācinna-] tad ucyate [ṅ: tahacyate] ||
*acittaṁ bhavate tena [kh g: bhāvatenaiva; ṅ: * nā] nairātmyoparisaṁsthitam [kh gh ṅ: nairātmā-; g: nairātmyā-; k gh: -sthitaḥ]* |
pare śive svasaṁvittir [kh g: svasaṁcitti-; ṅ: svasaṁvitti-] dhyānayuktyā gurūttamaiḥ [k gh: gurottamaiḥ] ||

etad [ṅ: etat] ratnaṁ hi [kh g: tu] kathitaṁ [. . .] | KuKauM 20/80-82ab

Again:

By practice comes about accomplishment (siddhi). By practice one attains liberation. A realised consciousness (saṁvitti) is attained by practice. It functions by the practice of Yoga.

abhyāsād [g ṅ: abhyāsā] jāyate siddhir abhyāsād [k kh: bhyāsāṁ; g: siddhiḥ ahyāsā; gh: siddhiḥ abhyāsān(?); ṅ: siddhi abhyā] mokṣam [g: gro-] āpnuyāt || saṁvittir labhyate 'bhyāsād [kh gh: saṁcittir labhate-; g: saṁciṁtya labhate bhyāsā; ṅ: saṁvitti labhate bhyāsā] yogābhyāsāt [gh: (?); ṅ: -bhyāsā] pravartate [gh: (?)] | KuKauM 5/34cd-35ab

2. In this chapter the goddess replies systematically to the questions Śrīnātha has asked concerning the meaning of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra. The translation has been divided up accordingly. Here in this verse the goddess answers the question 'who acts within the maṇḍala?' (1). The numbers following each question in this and the following notes correspond to those of the questions listed at the end of the previous chapter.

3. In chapter six Bhairava appears as the tribal Śāvara in the sacred seats he visits to meet the goddess who, analogously, resides there as a Śāvarī (6/64-65). Admittedly, it is unusual to find Bhairava in this form in the centre of the maṇḍala. All the MSs read sāvanādim which suggests an original śāvarādim. Perhaps the text could be better emended to read bhairavādim. The SaṁP (fl. 3a) says:

Śrīnātha Bhairava brings about emanation, persistence and withdrawal. He resides within the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. I, Vakrā Bhairavī who abide (there) along with him, should be known to be the power of bliss.

śrīnāthabhairavaḥ sṛṣṭisthitisaṁhārakārakaḥ saṁvartāmaṇḍalānte sthitas tena sahāhaṁ vakrā bhairavī ānandaśaktiḥ sthitā jñeyā |

4. This verse answers the question 'how is the maṇḍala?' (2).

5. According to Apte, atasī is 'common flax, hemp or linseed.' The simile between the colour of its flower and that of a deity is not uncommon. According to the Netratantra, for example, the appearance of the god Viṣṇu, who is dark blue, is said to be like that of this flower (NT 13/2c; cf. the Dhyānabindūpaniṣad v. 3 quoted by Woodroffe 1981: 260). Schoterman (1981: 33) believes that this analogy is derived from the occasional use of hemp as a narcotic in Tantric rituals. However, although the use of hemp in this way is well attested in Kaula texts of the later period (i.e. post 13th century), it is not attested in the earlier Tantras (see intro. 1, p. 724, 4).

The maṇḍala, amongst other things, is the deployment of the mantric energies that constitute the deity's body. The colour of the maṇḍala is therefore related to that of the goddess who is indeed said to be colour of the hemp flower in some places (for example, below 2/36cd-37). Although she is also said to be a dark blue and red (syāmā raktā) (see, for example, 5/30, also intro. 1, p. 44), her principle visualized form is dark 'like a blue lotus' (e.g below 29/34). Pt. H. Cakravartī of Vārāṇasī informs me that the goddess Durgā is also said to be of the colour of the atasī flower. As there is more than one plant with this name and the colour of their flowers differ, disputes arise whether the goddess Durgā is to be visualized as brilliant yellow or dark blue depending on what the plant is supposed to be.

6. This passage answers the questions 'how is the power of bliss?' (3) and 'how is it that that energy is horrific?' (4).

7. YKh (1) similarly says of the goddess:

Located in the middle of the Stick of the Cavity of Space, she is on the plane of the Nameless. (She who is) Bhairava's will, the pulsing supreme energy, has arisen.

kharaṇḍadaṇḍamadhyasthā [k: taraṁturaṁḍa-; g: ta-] anāmapadamāśritā [k: manāma-] ||
bhairavecchā samutpannā lulantī paramā kalā | YKh (1) 34/123cd-124ab.

It was a common notion in ancient India that at some point in the development of the foetus the soul penetrates into it through the top of the head. According to the Aitareyopaniṣad (1/3/12), which is amongst the oldest Upaniṣads, this produces the cavity at the top of the head that came to be known as the Cavity of Brahmā (brahmarandhra):

Then he (the soul) split the part of the skull (sīman) on which the parting of the hair is done and entered through this aperture. This aperture is called vidṛti (the seam or suture) of the head, (literally 'the crack'), and the same is the state of bliss.

Penetrating down into the body, the soul opens a channel for itself called Suṣumṇā. But although the soul enters this way, only the perfect yogi can leave by the same way when he dies and thereby be freed of further re-birth. Others leave through other channels and assume many other possible conditions instead of reaching the supreme state symbolized by the sun in the following passage from the Chāndogyopaniṣad:

But when he thus departs from this body, then he ascends upwards with these very rays of the sun. With the thought of OṀ, verily, he passes up. As quickly as one could direct his mind to it, he comes to the sun. That verily, indeed, is the world-door, an entrance for knowers, a stopping for non-knowers. As to this there is the following verse:

> There are a hundred and one channels of the heart.
> One of these passes up to the crown of the head.
> Going up by it, one goes to immortality.
> The others are for departing in various directions.

ChāUp 8/6/5-6 Hume's translation.

Note the reference here to the solar rays and the thought of OṀ. The former are the energies of the senses, mind and body, the latter the energy of mantra. The power of OṀ that elevates and leads individual consciousness up into the absolute being – the Brahman – taught in the Upaniṣads appears in the Tantras as the beautiful Kuṇḍalinī. Here she is called the power of bliss, that resides and moves through Suṣumṇā leading the yogi out of the body into the supreme state.

8. I have translated the expression aṇucitkalayāpinī in this way (concerning the deviant yāpinī which replaces the regular vyāpinī see note to the Sankrit text). This is a possible correct translation, if we understand the term aṇu (lit. 'atom') to mean, as it generally does in the Śaiva Āgamas, the individual soul. However, this expression may be understood differently in the light of the following passage from the KMT (6/4-5a):

> That power (śakti) which is Kuṇḍalinī is consciousness by nature and the supreme energy (kalā). She is the Great Lord's primordial power and, the measure of an atom (aṇumātrā), she is located in the Heart. She is called the Atom (aṇu) in the Tantra.

Thus the expression aṇucitkalayāpinī may also mean: '(she is) the pervasive one who is Kuṇḍalinī (aṇu), consciousness and (supreme) energy'.

9. Cf. 2/32-34ab. The term nirānanda is an abbreviation of the term nirācārānanda, which can be translated as `the bliss of stillness'. It is the tranquil repose of the absolute in its own nature which is that of the Śāmbhava state of the liberated soul and the bliss embodied in the goddess. See intro. vol. 1, p. 101 ff.

10. The goddess is said here to be horrific but she is not whole frightening and fierce, she is, 'pleasingly horrific' (SaṁP: bhīṣaṇī subhīmeti bodhyam). These lines illustrate the marvellous and inscrutible ambiguity of the goddess's nature. She is slender. This not only indicates her extreme subtleness, it also implies that she is beautiful like a slim, attractive woman. Such also is her gait. Like the goddess Kālī, she is the embodiment of time. In the world of time which is that of death and destruction, she awakens in a moment, on some unpredictable occasion and becomes manifest. Thus, she makes time and that special moment her own.

Indeed, at each instant her form, which is all of manifestation, is transformed and so she is perpetually, brilliantly diverse. This is the beauty of her manifest form. Unmanifest, merged in the supreme reality free of all action and hence time, she is the infinite energy of the engulfing void of transcendence which, bringing all finitude to an end, is formidable beyond measure.

11. This verse answers the question 'how is the sequence of parts (padakrama) in relation to its enclosure (āvaraṇa)?' (6). The 'parts' in this case are the thirty-two syllables of the goddess's Vidyā that are projected onto the encompassing circle around the hexagon that surrounds the central triangle and point (bindu). The six limbs and faces of the goddess's Vidyā are projected into the corners of the hexagon.

12. There are three forms of the goddess correponding to the three times of day - sunrise, midday and sunset in which she is worshipped as a girl, young woman and old lady through three corresponding sequences of mantras projected into the maṇḍala. This is why, we are told, 'the one Krama is said to be of three kinds within the Kulakrama' (see below 28/150-152). Each of these Kramas can again be three-fold to make nine divisions. See chapter 5 concerning the forms of the Krama.

13. The goddess's Samayā Vidyā consisting of 32 syllables or 'parts' (pada) may also be divided into sixteen parts (see below 9/30-35) or eight (see below 10/10cd-13). The division into sixteen relates to the lunar nature of the goddess and hence her Vidyā, which like the moon, has sixteen parts.

14. We have already noted above (see note 3 to 1/1) that the SaṁP explains that the parts (pada) of the Krama in the maṇḍala are the limbs and faces of the deity which is, concretely in this context, the main mantra (mūlamantra) of the goddess, the Samayā Vidyā. It is usual practice for major mantras such as this one to be divided into six parts conceived to be its six limbs. These the adept projects onto the corresponding parts of his body or a sacred object, for example an icon, jar or, as in this case, a maṇḍala. Moreover, the deity's faces may also, although not invariably, be projected with the limbs. Depending on the particular school, other mantras may also be associated with them that are, like them, understood to be derivates of the main mantras. Thus, for example, in the Jayākhyasaṁhitā of the Vaiṣṇava Pañcarātra we also find amongst others, *śaktimantra*s and *lāñchanamantra*s along with the mantras of the limbs (aṅga) and faces (vaktra). Rastelli (2000: 327) explains that in that context: ‘The śakti- and *vaktramantra*s are forms of the manifestation of the mūlamantra or the main God personified. The aṅga- and the *lāñchanamantra*s are forms of the manifestation of the parts of the main God personified.’ In the mantra system of the Kubjikā school we find only limbs and faces which may also have secondary forms. It is perhaps, no coincidence that the faces of the main form of the goddess Kubjikā are six as are the limbs, thus allowing for the parallel deposition of both with ease into the maṇḍala as well as onto the body of the adept. See below 10/14ff. and notes for the correspondences between Kubjikā's limbs and six faces. They are projected into the hexagon that surrounds the central triangle in the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. The way the limbs and, hence, the faces are to projected there is described below in 11/40cd-44 and also in 48/77cd-80ab.

15. Perhaps this verse answers the question: 'how is the Transmission (krama) of the Child and that of the Youth and the Aged?' But it is number 17 in the series of questions and is answered in line 2/15ab below.

16. Bharga is a name of Rudra. It is derived from the word bhargas which means 'radiance' or 'lustre'. It is virtually synonymous with the more common word tejas which denotes the radiant energy of the deity. According to 2/31ab below, Bharga's place is the first of a series of sixteen maṇḍalas in the body technically called Supports (ādhāra). According to 25/30cd-32, these sixteen are symbolized by the energies of the sixteen vowels, called Yoginīsiddhas. Although there the first of these Siddhas is called Ananta (the Lord of the letter A), he may, perhaps, be identified with Bharga. If so, Bharga is located in the body where Ananta is said to be, that is, in the uvala at the back of the throat from which the lunar nectar of the goddess drips.

In the following passage Bharga is the name of the first teacher (ādinātha). It describes how Bharga first originates as the Drop of the Command generated, like the vital seed, from the 'supreme churning' i.e. the union of Śiva and Śakti. Note that just as our text says that he is 'established in the reverse aspect', in this passage we are told that he originates from the transcendental Void 'by the union with the Womb (bhaga) in reverse (vilomāt)'. Perhaps this means that at this transcendental level he is generated when all the energies of emanation have been absorbed progressively from the last (Ha or KṢa) to A, the first, that is, in reverse into the Womb of the goddess. Bathing in the waters of the Void that purify like the water of the Ganges, Ādinātha drinks from it. Then, after he has ascended again to the supreme, transcendental state at the End of the Sixteen, he returns down through the Wheels of the body to the Wheel of the Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna). From there, he generates a new, pure universe along with the teachings. Accordingly, the following verse at the end of this reference (not recorded here), which is virtually the same as the first verse of the Saṁvartāsūtra in the form found in the KMT, describes the progressive development of the six divisions of the Sequence of Twenty-eight. The text says:

> Bharga is born from the supreme churning. The bliss of the will (has come forth) from the Lord who is beyond conception (bhāvanā). That also is the supreme and first principle (tattva) preceded (and sustained) by Bharga. Come forth from the Void in the form of a sphere (golākāra) by union with the Womb (bhaga) in reverse (vilomāt), this supreme innate (reality) (sahaja), to whose Lord

I bow, is born. (1)

The phenomenal body is purified in the water of the innate (just as it is) on the banks of the Ganges. Having burst open the abode that is innate and (ever) new (and yet) ancient and minute (cūrṇa), he drinks, inebriated, the clear water to (his) satisfaction. I bow to that one, Ādinātha, the most excellent teacher born (jāta) from that. (2)

Again, the Ganges emits along with the main 84 millions (of beings) all things into the universe, into the middle of the universe and into the end of it. And then again, having checked it beyond the universe in the supreme (reality) within the End of the Sixteen, Bharga arisen (jāta), enters the supreme primordial (ādya) Śāmbhava plane. (3)

Divine bliss is the supreme tradition (gṛha) on the supreme path of knowledge (in the Wheel of the Command). And again, supreme bliss is present in the supreme Pure (Wheel - viśuddha) purified of phenomenal being. In the same way, from that (Wheel) having (entered), contemplated and sported in (the Wheel) born of Gems (i.e. maṇipura) and (the Wheel of) Unstruck Sound, he emits into (the Wheel of the) Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna) all the current of the venerable Kulālī Kula. (4)

bhargo jātaḥ paramamathanād [-mahanād] bhāvanātītanāthād icchānandas tad api paramaṁ bhargapūrvāditattvam [-tatvāṅ] | golākāraṁ galita-gaganād bhagayogād [bhoga-] vilomāt saṁjātedaṁ paramasahajaṁ yasya taṁ naumi [nāmi] nātham || 1 || gaṅgātīre sahajasalile bhāvagaśodhitāṅgaṁ [-gṛchodhitāṅgaṁ] sphoṭya [sphodyag] dhāmaṁ [gaṁdhaṁ] sahajanavakaṁ jīrṇakaṁ cūrṇam [cūram] eva | paścāt svacchaṁ pibati salilaṁ sonmadaṁ [nānmadaṁ] tṛptihetoḥ [-heto] tasmād jātaṁ pravaragurur yas [pravahaguru yaṁ] taṁ nāmāmy ādinātham || 2 || mūlāśītiś caturamadhikaiḥ [-kā] koṭibhiś ceti gaṅgā viśvasyānte sṛjati akhilaṁ viśvamadhye 'thavānte [-nta] | viśvasyordhve [viśvasyārddhe] punar api parame ṣoḍaśānte [-nta] stamitvā [stumitvā] bhargo jāto [jātaṁ] viśati [viṁśati] paramaṁ śāmbhavaṁ [-vām] pādam ādyam [bhādhyamāpyam] || 3 || divyānandaṁ [-nanda] paramagṛhamayaṁ [gṛhaṁmayā] pare jñānamārge divyānandaṁ [-nanda] punar api pare bhāvaśuddhe viśuddhe | tasmād evaṁ maṇijanahate bhāvayitvā rāmitvā
svādhiṣṭhāne sṛjati nikhilaṁ śrīkulālīkulaugham [-lākulāgham] || YKh (1) 54/1-4

17. The following answers the questions: (What is) the quaternary in the pattern of emanation (6)? What, in brief, is the pentad, the group of six and (the second) group of four (10)? What is the (second) pentad and, again, the (third) group four (11)?

18. This group of five mantras praise and invoke the Yoginīs who reside in the five elements of which they, like the Five Praṇavas, are the sacred sonic counterparts. They are the subject of chapter 62 of the KuKh.

19. This is the answer to the question: What is the true nature of Śrīnātha (20)? He is Vṛkṣanātha (the Lord of the Tree), the First and Root Nātha (Ādinātha, Mūlanātha) of the lineages of the three sacred seats (7/66cd-67ab) and so is none other than Śrīnātha mentioned in the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra (1/2). As the fourth member of this group of four, Vṛkṣanātha is identified, according to the SaṁP, with the principle beyond the qualities of Nature (guṇātīta) and is their lord. Also called Ciñciṇīnātha (the Lord of the Tamarind Tree 7/61-62ab), he is Tūṣṇīnātha (3/1), the Silent Lord, immersed in meditation whose inner nature is Rudra and Navātmā Bhairava (2/29-30ab). See intro. vol. 2, p. 413 ff. and 457 ff. concerning Ādinātha - the First Teacher and Lord and his names and feats.

20. According to the SaṁP these six groups are as follows:
1) The first group of four: will, knowledge, action and intellect.
2) The first group of five: The five gross elements - Earth, Water, Fire, Air and Space.
3) The group of six: The six *āmnāya*s, the six Yoginīs (Ḍākinī, Ramaṇī, Lākinī, Kākinī, Śākinī, and Hākinī) or the six senses (vijñānārtha) - touch (tvac), sight (cakṣus), smell (ghrāṇa), taste (jihvā), hearing (śravaṇa) and mind (manas).
4) The second group of four: The four great sacred seats (mahāpīṭha) - Oḍḍiyāna, Jālandhara, Pūrṇagiri and Kāmarūpa.
5) The second group of five: The five subtle elements or sensations - smell (gandha), taste (rasa), sight (rūpa), touch (sparśa) and sound (śabda).
6) The third group of four: The three qualities of Nature (prakṛti) - sattva, rajas, tamas and the fourth (transcendental) reality beyond the qualities (guṇātīta).

Even though Mukundarāja's explanation has evidently drawn much from the KuKh, as it does in general, it does not fully agree with it. According to the KuKh the first group of five consists of the subtle elements and the second of the gross ones, rather than the other way around as Mukundarāja says. Mukundarāja is aware of this change and justifies it by saying that this is the 'teaching of (my) teacher' (iti gurusaṁketaḥ SaṁP fl. 3a). Moreover, he suppliments the group of six with the six Yoginīs in accord with the commentary on the Saṁvartāsūtra ŚM. In addition, he also identifies it with the six Kaula traditions (āmnāya) that had developed by his time (see intro. vol. 2, 348 ff.).

Again, the second group of four, which Mukundarāja identifies with the four sacred seats, although a very important part of the symbolism and ritual of the Kubjikā Tantras, are not mentioned in this context in our text. In virtually every form of the Krama, this important group of four is given pride of place as the first one. Perhaps the four states of consciousness, that is, the waking state and the rest are the four sacred seats that correspond to the four yogic states known as Body (piṇḍa), Part (pada), Form (rūpa) and Beyond Form (rūpātīta) (see below 44/5-6ab).

Note that these six groups are explained quite differently in the ŚM's commentary on the Saṁvartāsūtra of the KMT. The explanation found in the KMT itself of these six groups is spread over a number of chapters and also differs from this one. Another presentation is found in the Kularatnoddyota of which a large section is modelled on the exposition of these groups. See also below 26/20 ff. for another presentation of these groups and their contents.

21. This passage answers the questions: How is Akula (7)? What is Kula said to be (8)? And how is the activity of Kula (kulācāra) (9)? Akula is Bhairava who is portrayed here as the First Teacher, called the Root Lord. Kula, which literally means, amongst other things, 'an aggregate' or 'group' is the goddess both in her own essential, undivided nature and as the energies deployed in the maṇḍala. The activity of Kula is the manner in which these energies and the hence the maṇḍala, are emitted and withdrawn. In this perspective, Akula is the condition that persists when the maṇḍala, that is, the energies of the Krama in which the goddess manifests, is withdrawn.

22. See intro. vol. 1, p. 324 ff..

23. See intro. vol. 1, p. 327 ff. for an explanation of verses 2/9cd-10.

24. This verse answers the questions: how is the sixteenfold Command (12)? and where (does) the consecration (take place) in the beginning (13)?

25. The word `abhiṣeka' translated as 'consecration' is a form of initiation (dīkṣā) effected by sprinkling the aspirant with consecrated water or other fluid. The same term is used for the coronation or consecration of a king. The liquid in this inner consecration is the 'supreme nectar', that is, the lunar fluid of the Command. It flows down from the seventeenth lunar energy of the New Moon (amākalā) in the centre of the Wheel (cakra) of the sixteen lunar energies of the vowels located in the uvula (see note to 3/114). The seventeenth energy of the New Moon is repleate with the sixteen energies of the Full Moon and so may be said to be the sixteenfold Command. Flowing down from the uvula, this is the place where the consecration commences.

This complex process consists of two phases. The first is the upward ascent of Kuṇḍalinī up through and out of the body into the Void (kha) of the transcendent. It is called 'combnstion' (dahana) because in this phase the aspirant's impurities (mala) are burnt away by the igneous energy of the Command. When this phase is complete, the lunar goddess Kuṇḍalinī descends releasing her blissful stream of nectar. In this second phase, appropriately called 'flooding' (plavana), the Self of the aspirant is nourished by the nectar that floods it and so, reaching completion, is called 'nourishment' (apyāyana). This initiation, appropriately called the 'Consecration of the Command', is described below in 13/110–152.

26. The only question that could relate to this verse is: what is the family

(santāna), the aggregate of clans (gotrapiṇḍa) and the entire sequence of parts (padakrama) (22)? But, two of the three parts of this question are left unanswered. Moreover, the question is out of sequence. Verses 2/32-35ab are also partly concerned with the same subject, although they also do not answer this question fully.

27. Mālinī is a particular sequence of the letters of the alphabet that are represented by female energies called Śaktis or Yoginīs who reside in the limbs of the gross, visualized body of the goddess Mālinī who is identified with Kubjikā, here generically called Śakti. They are the consorts of the fifty Bhairavas (also called Rudras or Siddhas) who are the letters arranged in the normal alphabetical order, called Śabdarāśi, that are similarly projected onto the limbs of the male deity called Śabdarāśi Bhairava, here called Śiva. The 'clan' (gotra) in this case, which is prevaded by Śabdarāśi and Mālinī, is the series of letters (see intro. vol. 2, p. 392 ff.). The union of these two in all their sacred sonic aspects generates the universe of Speech, which is 'enveloped' by them as Śiva and Śakti.

The Mālinī sequence is described below in 18/23ff. and Śabdarāśi in 19/25ff. The visualized forms of these deities, male and female, minor and major, are described in detail in the ŚM.

28. This verse answers the questions: pray tell the (names of) the eight deities (14) and how is that (group of eight) within the body (of the deity) (mūrti) (15)? Presumably, the 'body of the deity' is the maṇḍala. The second question then concerns the manner in which the eight deities appear in the maṇḍala.

29. The eight deities are the eight Mothers (aṣṭamātṛkā). Their corresponding mantras are called the Octad of Kula (kulāṣṭaka) (see below 16/3ff.) as are the eight Mothers themselves. They are worshipped on the eight petals of a lotus that surrounds the hexagon in the centre of the maṇḍala (48/80cd-81ab). Although their names are not always the same, the group almost invariably begins with Brahmāṇī. As aspects of the phonemic energies of Speech, each of the Mothers governs one of the 'classes' (varga), that is, the eight phomenic types (aṣṭavarga) into which the letters of the alphabet are classified. In this aspect they are called the goddesses of the eight classes (vargadevī) (28/157). They are listed below in 44/35cd-37. 'Externally' the Mothers are said to reside in eight sacred sites called 'houses' in the bodies of low caste women (see KuKh 16/3-4 and 14/91-94ab = KMT 25/107-109ab). See intro. vol. 1, p. 543.

30. The eight Wheels mentioned here are probably the eight groups of eight Yoginīs - one for each of the Mothers - that constitute the standard group of sixty-four Yoginīs. Further ahead we find a reference to a 'Sequence of Sixty-four'. But this may not be a separate component of the maṇḍala (see below note to 2/17). Either way, the Saṁvartāsūtra itself does not mention it. In one form of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala described in chapter 48, sixty-four deities are projected into the third encompassing circle around the hexagon. The first consists of an eight-petalled lotus in which the eight Mothers are worshipped. The Pīṭhastava of Chapter 16 of the KuKh eulogizes sixty-four seats each of which is the abode of a Yoginī and aguardian. These, it seems, are worshipped in the maṇḍala. Thus, there are two forms of the maṇḍala. An earlier one, which is described in the Saṁvartāsūtra (both the short one at the beginning of the KMT and this one) that does not include the Sixty-four Yoginīs and a later one that does.

31. This verse answers the question: how is the Gesture (mudrā) there (in the maṇḍala) (16)? After moving out into the periphery of the maṇḍala we return to the centre to explore the activity of the core.

32. The expression 'bhūtagrāma', which I translate as 'aggregate of elements', is rare in the Kubjikā Tantras. According to Monier-Williams the common meaning of this compound is: 'a multitude of plants; any aggregate or elementary matter, the body'. Apte adds: 'the whole multitude or aggregate of living beings' and 'the multitude of spirits'. In our sources it also denotes the universe of inert immobile things and living, mobile beings (bhūtagrāmaṁ carācaram KuKh 35/84cd and KuKauM 20/36cd).

From one point of view the four are, I suppose, the four gross elements that constitute the bodies of living beings and inert objects. Although the texts are not very clear, they seem to support this interpretation. Below we are told that Śiva, in his sovereignty (prabhutva), acts in the four-fold aggregate of elements (bhūtagrāme caturvidhe KuKh 13/73cd), which it seems from the contex are those that constitute the body. These are the gross elements Earth, Water, Fire and Air. Space is missing presumably because it pertains to the fettered soul who pervades the body as does space. The text suggests this by going on to say that the insentient is emptiness (śūnyabhūta) and is contrasted with the Supreme Self who is spaceless (nirākāśa). Just as the individual soul, compared to the Supreme Soul, is similarly empty (KuKh 13/73cd-6ab).

From a cosmological perspective, the elements are sometimes said to be four as the subtlest of them – Space (ākāśa) – which pervades them and is their source, is not counted separately. Below (46/37-38), we are told that the Five Siddhas, who embody the five gross elements, pervade the world (loka) that consists of the ‘gross elements of four kinds'. This is because the first one of them, who governs the element Space, forms himself into the others (see below note to 46/42cd–5ab). Similarly, we are told that: 'creation (samudbhava) proceeds from that which is spatial (sāvakāśa). That is the self-born (universal) cause (that operates) in the world' (13/74).

From its own cosmogonic and embryological perspective, the Śrīmatasāra (1) further supports this view. As a prelude to a description of the formation of the four elements that then go on to make up the embryo, the Śrīmatasāra (1) explains:

> (Initially there were) the power of knowledge and the oneness of Śiva. The Great Void (mahāvyoman) arose there when the two united (and that brought about) the creation of all the subtle elements (of perception) (tanmātra). Space (vyoman) is the god Sadāśiva, the eternal mouth of emanation. The whole universe consisting of the four-fold aggregate of elements was born from there.

jñānaśaktiḥ [-śakti] śivaikatvam ubhayor api saṁgame ||
tatrotpannaṁ [-nnā] mahāvyoma sarvatanmātrasaṁbhavaḥ |
vyoma [vyomaṁ] sadāśivaṁ devaṁ sṛṣṭimukhaṁ [-mukhya] sanātanam ||
tatrodbhūtaṁ jagat sarvaṁ bhūtagrāmacatuṣṭayam | ŚMS (1) 4/9cd-11ab.

Another common meaning of the expression 'bhūtagrāma' found in the dictionaries is, as we have noted above, the 'aggregate of living beings'. This is the sense in which it is used in the KRU which explains, in accord with the common Indian view, that living beings are born from four sources (yonicatuṣka) and so are of four kinds namely, those born of sweat (svedaja), eggs (aṇḍaja), seeds (udbhija) and wombs (yonija) (tato yonicatuṣke tu bhūtagrāmaṁ caturvidham | udbhijādikabhedena tato vakṣyāmi tattvataḥ || KRU 10/72). After describing each one, the god concludes saying: 'I have told you this, the four-fold aggregate of living beings (bhūtagrāma). (caturvidham idaṁ proktaṁ bhūtagrāmaṁ [kh:-grāma] mayā tava | ibid. 10/93ab).

We may combine the two meanings. The 'four-fold emanation' would then be that of the four elements or four kinds of living beings that are emitted into the 'aggregate of elements' or the 'aggregate of living beings' referring collectively to the entire manifest world 'moving and immobile'. Thus, below we are told that 'the moving and immobile universe' (carācara) that is emanated from the centre of the maṇḍala is of 'four kinds' (2/41).

The following brief reference from the KuKauM appears at the conclusion of a description of the Gesture of the Yoni (yonimudrā). Here the 'four-fold emanation' is equated with the cosmic order and related to energy of Gesture:

(The Gesture of the Yoni) is that Yoni in which the four-fold emanation takes place and within which (the entire cosmic order) from the Fire of Time up to Śiva again dissolves away.

caturvidhā tu yā sṛṣṭir yasyāṁ [k: sṛṣṭis tasyāṁ] yonyāṁ [g: yogāṁ; ṅ: yonyā] pravartate ||
punaḥ pralīyate yasyāṁ kālāgnyādiśivāntagam [kh: śivānugaṁ; gh: (?)] |
KuKauM 5/21cd-22ab

The sonic aspect and its accompanying silence constitute the mantra aspect of ritual. The actions are the gesture aspect of ritual. Transposed into higher metaphysical terms, just as mantra represents the sonic form of the goddess, gesture is her dynamic, active nature. Gesture is the goddess (39/153) and the Command of the tradition (anvayājñā) (7/93-94ab). As such it is in the centre of the maṇḍala. This verse answers the question: how is the Gesture there (16)? by telling us that it is not only the energy within the body and the universe it is also both the source of emanation and what is emitted. How is that? The verse replies by referring implicitely to the basic non-technical meaning of mudrā, the Sanskrit word for gesture which is a 'seal' or a 'stamp'. The energy of mudrā 'stamps' the universe. Just as a seal penetrates the medium in which it makes its impression and can be used to make many impressions without loosing its form (cf. TĀ 32/1-2), similarly the energy of the goddess penetrates into inert matter giving it form and life. See intro. vol. 1, p. 623.

33. This line supposedly answers the question: how is the Transmission (krama) of the Child and that of the Youth and the Aged (17)?

34. The remaining lines of this passage up to and including 2/17 answer the question: what is the energy (kalā), the supreme Śārvī who is the Krama deity (devatā) of (all) the Transmissions (krama) (18)? This question refers to the statement in the Saṁvartāsūtra that: 'she is the goddess Vakrā (the Crooked One), the energy of the Supreme Śiva of (all) the Transmissions (krama)'.

35. One could perhaps emend saṁvyavasthitā to saṁvyavasthitāḥ or saṁvyavasthitaṁ qualifying kramāḥ / kramam (although usually neuter in our text, the regular masculine gender of krama- does occur as, for examples in 9/65ab, 39/63a and 63/24a). The meaning then would be that the Transmissions / Transmission are / is 'located on the triple path, by means of the Way of the Place of the Equinox (viṣuvasthāna)'. However, I have chosen to accept the reading saṁvyavasthitā which qualifies khakalā - 'the energy of the Void (kha)'. Although one could postulate that the triple path, variously identified, is also related to the three transmissions. However, this is not directly warrented by the syntax. Indeed, the preceding line appears to be disconnected both from what precedes and what follows, probably because a part of the text has been lost.

36. The activity of prāṇa, the solar exhaled breath and apāna, the lunar inhaled breath, represent the dynamic interplay of the opposites alternating from one to the other as do day and night. The merging of the breaths marks the union of opposites and the emergence of another higher form of the breath which in many schools (but not generally in the Kubjikā Tantras) is called, appropriately, the upward moving breath (udāna). Through the rise of this breath in the centre, a higher state of consciousness develops that, encompassing the polarities, transcends them in blissful repose (cf. TĀ 6/74cd-5ab). The three breaths are engendered by the energies of Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī that are three aspects of the power of action (kriyāśakti cf. the Mokṣakārikā 32cd–33ab). The function, location and association with the vital breath of these energies is common to most Āgamic Śaiva traditions including the Bhairava and Kaula Tantras as part of a commonly accepted prāṇic physiology of the body. The TS is the main source for the Kubjikā Tantras here as it was for the Trika exegetes of Kashmir. Vāmā is the energy of the left channel - Iḍā - through which the Moon of Apāna moves in the course of inhalation (KuKh 40/132cd-133ab; comm. Mṛgendra kriyāpāda, 8/105). It represents the night and is the energy of emission. Piṅgalā is on the right and through it moves the Sun of Prāṇa in the course of exhalation. It represents the day. The phase in which the breath is retained is engendered by Raudrī within the channel Suṣumṇā in the middle. These three are 'the triple path.' Within Suṣumṇā the two breaths, suspended, are equal, as are night and day during an equinox (KuKh 40/133cd-134ab). Accordingly, it is also called the Path of the Stations of the Equinox (viṣuvasthāna). The energy Raudrī moves along this path (36/90) and so she is also called Viṣuvā - the energy of the equinox within the equinox (viṣuvasthā). Abhinavagupta supplies two didactic etymologies of the word viṣuvat (i.e. 'equinox') in his commentary (vimarśinī) on the Īśvarapratyabhijñākārikā (3/2/19) where he writes:

> (The word viṣuvat) is formed by adding the affix 'vat' which means, according to (the rule) tadarham (Pā. sū. 5/1/117), 'to be able' to the word 'viṣu' which means, 'pervasion' (and so viṣuvat means) 'that which can make (the breath or day and night) equal' (viṣuvaṁ vyāptiṁ samānīkaraṇam arhati). Or the word may mean 'that which constantly stimulates (the difference in relative) length or shortness of the day and night.' In this case the word is derived from the root 'su' with the prefix 'vi' and the affix 'śatṛ'.

Abhinava defines the term again in the TĀ (6/206cd) in the context of his exposition of the Path of Time (kālādhvan) projected into the breathing cycle:

> The (root) viṣ signifies `pervasion' because its condition (vṛtti) is one of equality (sāmya) and that is said to be pervasion.

Abhinava's understanding of this condition centres on the emergence of a higher form of time that is pervasive (viṣuvat i.e. 'possessing pervasion' or 'equality') and hence not temporal time, which is delimited into durations. From this point of view there are four such moments of 'equality' in the movement of the breath, in which the outer passage of time is replicated. Abhinava explains that, in terms of the 'night' and 'day' of the inhaled and exhaled breath, 'they are the one that occurs at the end of the night and the beginning of the day, at midday, between the end of the day and the beginning of night and, finally, there is one at midnight' (TĀ 6/205d-6ab, Cf. comm. on SvT 4/316-318ab).

Similarly, according to the Siddhāntāgamas, viṣuvat/viṣuva in the context of Yoga denotes the state in which the two breaths - prāṇa and apāna are in equilibrium. The term is sometimes used in a general sense to mean ‘union’ or ‘yoga’. 'By making use of the equinox conjoin (the soul) to the eternal abode. Once attained the Yoga which is the Equinox, who is not freed from bondage?' (viṣuvatsaṁprayogeṇa yojayec chāśvate pade ǀ yogaṁ tu viṣuvaṁ prāpya ko na mucyeta bandhanāt ǁ Sārdhatriśatikālottara quoted in SŚP vol. 3 p. 359; see note in SŚP vol. 3 p. 358 ff.).

Brunner lists the following notions implicit in the term viṣuvat. 1) The idea of a central point. The equinox is the centre between the ascending movement of the sun towards the north and and its descent towards the south. 2) The idea of equality. The days and nights are of equal duration. 3) The idea of conjunction between the two periods. One or other of these three basic notions comes to the fore in a given context, to designate what is essentially a 'condition of identification'. Viṣuvat thus virtually connotes what is meant by the term sāmarasya (lit. 'equalness of flavour' i.e. oneness). She cites the following example (SŚP vol. 3 p. 361). ‘At first the Self is 'made equal' to another reality - for example the breath, which means that the difference between them is effaced. This is viṣuvat [the equinox]. The moment this takes place, the two realities fuse into one another. The Self is the breath. This is samarasa [oneness]. It is evident that viṣuvat and samarasa are two stages in the same process of identification and that just one of these terms is enough to denote the event.’ The Siddhāntin Rāmakaṇṭha explains that, in the context of the rites of initiation, this is the union between the teacher and Śiva or his Śakti by virtue of which the teacher can unite his disciple to the 'eternal abode' (ibid. vol. 3 p. 360).

The SŚP (3/226-230ab) and other texts, particularly the SvT (4/316 ff.) and the YHṛ (3/181cd ff.) refer to a series of seven 'equinoxes'. There is no direct reference in the Kubjikā Tantras to these seven, or indeed, any number of ‘equinoxes’, nonetheless, it is safe to assume that some such conception, at least, is behind the expression 'stations of the equinox' in the passage we are examining. They are stages or aspects of the developing condition that the term viṣiva implies, that is, ‘pervasion’, 'equalization' and 'union' with the supreme principle and so can also be called 'equalizations'. Essentially, the process consists of a series of seven ascending unifications of the breath with the Self, mantra, the channels, the levels of Sound and beyond up to the Transmental. The YHṛ (3/181cd-188ab) explains the seven *viṣuva*s as follows:

(1) The union of the vital breath, Self and the mind is the Equalization called that of the vital breath (prāṇaviṣuva). (2) O great goddess, after Sound has risen from the Foundation and the essential nature of the Self merged (in the Supreme) has been realised, the contemplation of (mantric) Sound from (the Wheel of) Unstruck Sound up to the Foundation engendered by the union and separation of the letters of the mantra is the Equalization (of Mantra). (3) O beloved, it is said that the Equalization of the Channels (of the vital breath) is brought about by the contact with (this) Sound. (It takes place) within the (middle) channel (of Suṣumṇā) by means of the seed-syllable (varṇa) (of the mantra) and the piercing of the Twelve Knots (from the Root centre to the Cavity of Brahmā). (4) The Yoga of Sound is the Tranquil (Equalization) and its field is the tranquil senses. (To realise this the yogi) should contemplate (how the stages of development of mantric sound beginning with the letters) Fire (Ra) and Māyā (Ī) (through to) Power (kalā), consciousness, the Half Moon, the Obstructress, Sound and the End of Sound are merged in (pure spiritual) Energy (śakti). (5) The Equalization of Energy is the contemplation above that (up to the Equal One) of Sound. O great goddess, (6) the Equalization of Time is above that up to the Transmental. (7) The contemplation of Sound (in this way) for 10,817 moments (leads to the attainment of realisation). And (so) the Equalization of (Ultimate) Reality is the means by which (pure) consciousness manifests. O great goddess, (that) is the Supreme Place (sthāna) beautiful with (its own) innate bliss.

Somaśambhu refers to the seventh and final equinox, called Tattvaviṣuva (Equalization with Reality) as the station of the equinox where union with Śiva is attained (tad etad yojanāsthānaṁ viṣuvaṁ tattvasaṁjñakam. SŚP vol. 3 p. 379 verse 230ab). The SvT (4/332-333) describes this mystical 'place' beyond time and space where the seventh Equalization takes place as follows:

O goddess, the Self should be conjoined there (in that place) beyond the Transmental. Then, when the Self is conjoined therein, (it) becomes one with it (tanmaya). O goddess, the Equalization (viṣuvat) called that of Reality is beyond all (the others). Once known Equalization in this way, who is not freed from bondage?

This is Identification with the Real (tattvasamarasa). The SvT (4/309cd–310) describes it as follows:

Once obtained that (one attains) a state of oneness with that (tanmayatva). There is nothing to be thought about here (nātra kāryā vicāraṇā). That (Self) is within all beings, existing things, principles and senses. It resides in (all things) sentient and insentient, moving and immobile.

37. Another possible translation is: ‘the energy of the Void that is within the Full Moon is established within the New Moon’.

38. Other correct forms are pūrṇamā (f.), pūrṇimā (f.), pūrṇimāsī (f.), pūrṇamās (m.), and pūrṇamāsa (m.).

39. The energy of the Void is a name given to the goddess when she, as Kuṇḍalinī, moves through Suṣumṇā - the Path of the Stations of the Equinox - between Iḍā and Piṅgalā, the channels of the ascending and descending breath. In the following reference from YKh (1) (3/14-15ab) she is homologized with the sacred site Prayāga and the goddess who resides there in the beautiful body of a courtesan:

In between Iḍā and Piṅgalā is the one called Prayāgā. The courtesan acts there also and is conceived to be (as subtle) as the hundredth part of the tip of a hair. The bestower of worldly benefits and liberation she is the energy of the Void, the devouring one, supreme.

iḍāpiṅgalamadhyasthā [k, kh, gh: -sthe] prayāgā [k, kh, gh: prayogā] nāma [gh: nāṁma] nāmataḥ |
vaiśyā tatrāpi kāriṇyā vālāgraśatakalpitā [k, kh, gh: -tāḥ] ||
bhuktidā muktidā sā tu khakalā grasanī [k, kh, gh: grasanā] parā |

Called Kaulikī śakti in the following reference, we are told that the energy of the Void resides in the Heart. In this case, the 'heart' is not a centre in the microcosmic body. It is the core or fundamental reality. One is reminded of a verse by Utpaladeva in the Īśvarapratyabhijñākārikā (1/5/14) where he says:

That vibrant radiance, the great being, undifferentiated by place and time, is the essence (of reality) and so is called the Heart of the Supreme Lord.

The Heart is where, according to the passage we are examining, the divine energy of the Void is in its most fully active form. She moves in the Void between the two breaths and the extremities marked by the upper Triangle in the End of the Twelve and the lower Triangle at the base of Suṣumṇā denoted in both cases by the triangular letter E. As we read in YKh (1) (24/75-77ab):

Just as the radiant energy (tejas) of the Light (is in the Light) and butter in milk, in the same way Kaulikī śakti, Khecarī (the Skyfarer) is in the Heart. She is located between two letter Es and in between the Moon (of apāna) and Sun (of prāṇa). She comes and goes (i.e. she ascends and descends with the motion of Kuṇḍalinī) and merges into the Wheel of the Void (khacakra). She is the energy of the Void (khakalā), the devouring one (grasanī). Fierce (ghorā), she moves in the Void (khacāriṇī) and is within Śaṁkhiṇī (the channel in the middle of Suṣumṇā).

yathā [k, kh, gh: tathā] tejaḥ [k, kh, gh: teja] prakāśasya sarpiḥ [k, kh, gh, ṅ: sarpi] kṣīre vyavasthitaḥ |
tathā ca kaulikī [ṅ: -nī] śaktiḥ [k, kh, gh: śakti] khecarī hṛdaye sthitā [k, kh: -tāḥ] ||
ekāradvayamadhyasthā [ṅ: ekāradvāpamadhysthā] somasūryasya madhyagā |
gamāgamaṁ ca kurute khecakre [ṅ: -kroś] līyate tu sā ||
*khakalā grasanī ghorā śaṁkhiṇyānte [ṅ: śaṁkhinyā ] khacāriṇī |

In the following passage this energy is identified with the energy of the Void - the energy of the equinox:

Kula and Akula is night and day in accord with the sphere (vibhāga) of the Moon and Sun. One should know that the Equinox (viṣuva) is in the centre of that (couple). It is the place between the Point (bindu i.e. apāna) and Sound (nāda i.e. prāṇa). She is the New Moon, the solitary (energy) that makes the transition (from one lunar phase to the next) (saṁkrāntikramaṇa) in the Maṇḍala of the Path. Between, Iḍā and Piṅgalā, she is the supreme transition (saṁkrānti). She is Bhairavī, the one who severs bondage along with the division of duality (vibhāga). She is the frightening one (bhiṣaṇī) who flows in the midst of the Point (bindu).

candrasūryavibhāgena ahirniśi kulākulam |
tanmadhye viṣuvaṁ vidyād [ṅ: vidyā] bindunādāntarālayaṁ [k, gh: vidyornādāṁ-; ṅ: vidyānādāntarālayaṁ] ||
saṁkrāntikramaṇaikākī [k, gh, ṅ: -kramaṇekākī] amā sā [k, gh, ṅ: mā] pathamaṇḍale |
iḍāpiṅgalayor madhye saṁkrāntiḥ [ṅ: -nti] paramā tu sā [k: sāḥ] ||
yā [k, gh, ṅ: ā] sā dvaitavibhāgena bhairavī bhavachedanī |
sā eva bhīṣaṇī nāma bindumadhye pravāhinī || YKh (1) 35/89-91 cf. below 5/83cd-84ab.

40. The Goddess of the Transmission - the Kramadevī - is herself the Transmission through which she courses. She is in all the mantras, lineages and the processions of energies that proceed from the absolute and generate the successive layers of manifestation that constitute the universe of objects, sensations, bodies, senses and minds symbolized by the maṇḍala. The goddess along with her consort dwells within each living being giving it life to experience the sequences of her manifestation and ultimately worship her as the goddess of them all.

The Sequence of Sixty-four may be the sixty-four Yoginīs who are worshipped in some versions of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (see above, note to 2/13). However, in view of the fact that the Saṁvartāsūtra does not refer to them, it seems to me that it is more likely that the 'sixty-four' meant here are the component energies of the maṇḍala, which is the epitome of the Three Worlds through which the goddess moves. We may analyse the Sequence of Sixty-four into two basic components. One is the Sequence of Deities (devatākrama) embodied in the 28 mantras of the Krama, These along with the Eight Mothers, make 36. The other is the Sequence of Teachers (gurukrama). This consists of the couple who are the first teachers – Śrīnātha and his consort in which the Divine Current is summated and issues out into the three Siddhas of the three Transmissions. These are followed by the Nine Nāthas and their disciples the Sixteen Siddhas. As Śrīnātha remains in the centre of the maṇḍala and the Goddess of the Transmission flows out through it, they are not counted separately. Thus we arrive at the remaining 28 components of the Sequence of Sixty-four.

41. This verse answers the question: what is the City of the Moon said to be (19)? According to the SaṁP the maṇḍala is called the City of the Moon because it is 'the place where there is consciousness of the bliss (that is delightful) like the rays of the moon' (candrakiraṇavadāhlādavijñānasthale). The maṇḍala, in other words, is the locus of the experience of ultimate bliss.

42. Sūṣmaṇā, which literally means 'she who is pleasingly warm' is Suṣumṇā. According to a reference found in both the KRU (5/120ab) and in the ŚM (20/98cd) Sūṣmaṇā is the name of one of the three main channels of the vital breath along with Iḍā and Piṅgalā and so must be synonymous with Suṣumṇā (iḍā ca piṅgalā caiva sūṣmaṇā ca tṛtīyakā). In the ŚM the god, addressing Himavat, says:

> Merged within Sūṣmaṇā, you will be the soul who moves with the exhaled and inhaled breath between Iḍā and Piṅgalā. Within Kuṇḍalinī, and born from the aggregate of letters, (you will be) divine.

iḍāpiṅgalayor madhye niḥśvāsocchvāsacāriṇaḥ [k kh: -cāriṇaṁ; g: niśvāsośvāsa-cāriṇaṁ] ||
sūṣmaṇāntaralīnas [k: sūṣmanā-; kh: sukṣmanā-] tvaṁ jīvarūpī [kh: rudra-] bhaviṣyasi [g: bhaviṣyati] |
kuṇḍalyantargato [kh: -gataṁ; g: kuṇḍalāntargataṁ] divyo [kh g: divyaṁ] varṇarāśisamudbhavaḥ [kh g: -vaṁ] || ŚM 2/71cd-72.

The maṇḍala of Sūṣmaṇā figures in the ŚM (5/229cd-230ab) as the sphere of Viśvī the Universal One, the fourth of four energies in the subtle body which, presumably, operates throughout it. The other three are the energy of the will, located in the Wheel of the Foundation, between the anus and the genitals, the energy of action within the Wheel of Unstruck Sound in the chest and the energy of knowledge (jñānī) in the uvula (lambikā) (ādhārasthā sthitā icchā kriyā cānāhate sthitā | jñānī ca lambikāsthāne [kh: laṁvakā-; g: -sthānaṁ] viśvī [kh g: visvī] sūṣmaṇamaṇḍale [kh: sūṣmana-; g: suṣmaṇa-] ||). Spelt the same way, the word appears again below (11/9ab) to denote one of the places where one of the thirty-two syllables of the goddess's Vidyā are projected. It also occurs below in 3/39 as a name of the Vidyā who sits, as does the goddess Suṣumṇā in the SvT, next to the god (SvT 10/1232–3 and TĀ 8/390–3 quoted below in a note to 3/39). There, as in the verse we are examining, the lunar Sūṣmaṇā / Suṣumṇā transports nectar, raining it down into the vital parts of the body.

Suṣumṇā is mentioned by name, perhaps for the first time, in the following interesting passage in the Maitryupaṇiṣad. This is one of the earliest references to the Yogic process of leading the breath upwards through this channel*:*

> Now it has elsewhere been said: "There is a channel called the Sushumnā, leading upwards conveying the breath, piercing through the palate. Through it, by joining (yuj) the breath, the syllable OṀ, and the mind, one may go aloft. By causing the tip of the tongue to turn back against the palate and by binding together (saṁyojya) the senses, one may, as greatness, perceive greatness." Thence he goes to selflessness. Because of selflessness, one becomes a non-experiencer of pleasure and pain; he obtains the absolute unity (kevalatva). For thus it has been said:
>
> After having first caused to stand still
> The breath that has been retained, then,
> Having crossed beyond the limited, with the unlimited
> One may at last have union in the head.
>
> Maitryupaṇiṣad 6/21. Hume's translation.

According to later descriptions of this process, the breath rises, taking the heat of the body up along with it (as happens when a person dies). thus, the central channel feels warm. Sūṣmā - lit. She Who is Pleasingly Warm - the alternative name for this channel, occasionally found in the early Kaula Tantras, gives us a clue to the meaning of the word '*suṣumṇ*ā' as perceived by Kaula Tantrics.

43. We have seen that the City of the Moon is at times identified with just the triangular core of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (3/11-12) or all of it. It is variously called the House, Mountain and Stone of the Moon because of its outer triangular shape. Present in the midst of an ocean of energies, it is called he Island of the Moon and, with reference to its inner vacuity, the Cave of the Moon (see Schoterman 1981: 41 ff.) . In all these aspects, it the foundation of Suṣumṇā. The commentary on the Samvartāsūtra in the ŚM (MS G, fl. 10b-11a) explains:

> One should perceive the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala, which is of many kinds and types and (has) many practices (vidhāna) (associated with it), by means of the teaching (artha) of the scripture. In some place (in the teaching it is called) the abode of the sacred seat of Yoga (yogapīṭha) and elsewhere the foundation of Suṣumṇā. Somewhere (it is called) the plane at the End of the Twelve, somewhere the abode of Ṣaṣṭhīśanātha and somewhere it is called the City of the Moon. In this Kula tradition it is called Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. The god is within the calix of its lotus. The goddess (also) resides (there). The Supreme Energy, who is Kuṇḍalinī, the mother of all the Āgamas, is there with (Bhairava known as) Tūṣṇīśanātha (the First Teacher).

lakṣitavyam āgamārthena [kh g, gh, c: lakṣitavyāgamārthena; ṅ, ch: lakṣitayāgamārthena] nānāprakārabhedānekavidhānaṁ [c: -bhedanekavidhāna] saṁvartāmaṇḍalaṁ [g, gh, ṅ, c, ch: samvartta-] || kvacid yogapīṭhālayaṁ [kh: -yogaṁ-] suṣumṇādhāraṁ [g, ch: śuṣmanādhāraṁ; ṅ: suṣumṇādhāraṁ; c: śuṣmanādhāra] cānyatra [ch: cāṇyatra] kvacid [kh, gh: kvacit; c, ch: kvaci] dvādaśāntapadaṁ [kh, gh, ṅ: -śānte-; c: dvādaśāntaṁ-; ch: missing from here to the end of this quote] ṣaṣṭhīśanāthāśrayaṁ [kh, c: ṣaṣṭanāthā-; gh: -srayaṁ] kutracit || candrapūryaṁ [kh, gh, ṅ: -sūryya] kvacit proktam asmin kulānvaye saṁvartāmaṇḍalam [g, c: samvartta-; ch: missing] abhidhīyate || *tatpadmakarṇikānte devo devī vyavasthiteti [gh: -te *] tatra [ṅ: tatas] tūṣṇīśanāthena [ch: rūṣṇīśanāthe *] parāśaktir [ch: + parāthe] aśeṣāgamamātā [k, kh, g: - * * mātā-] kuṇḍalinī* ||

According to the ṢSS:

As the foundation of Suṣumṇā it is the end of the End of the Twelve and is within (or 'at the end of') that. Good people should worship and meditate on that divine maṇḍala. That best of Wheels, divine, is where the universe is established.

suṣumṇādhārabhūtaṁ tu dvādaśāntaṁ tadantagaṁ |
etat tu maṇḍalaṁ divyaṁ pūjyaṁ dhyeyaṁ tu sannaraiḥ ||
etac cakravaraṁ divyaṁ yatra viśvaṁ pratiṣṭhitam | ṢSS 1/31-32ab

Note that the lower base of Suṣumṇā in the genital region is not meant here. Rather, these lines refer to the upper base of Suṣumṇā that is at the End of the Twelve. This important place is called the Abode of Emission (visargasthāna) and is the location of the maṇḍala in its highest form (ṢSS 1/29-30 quoted in chapter 2 p. 277, note 1). Indeed, as the upper foundation of Suṣumṇā, the maṇḍala is emission itself. As the ṢSS (28/15cd–16ab) says:

Emission (visarga) is the foundation of Suṣumṇā located at the End of the Twelve. In some places (it is called) the sacred seat of Yoga and in others Saṁvartāmaṇḍala.

visargaṁ ca suṣumṇāyā ādhāraṁ dvādaśāntagam ||
kvacic ca yogapīṭhaṁ tu kvacit saṁvartāmaṇḍalam |

I have not managed to locate the term Union of Emission (visargayoga) anywhere else in the Kubjikā corpus. We must therefore try to understand what is meant here through indirect references. Let us begin with the ŚM (6/5-6) where we are told that the Supreme Power is within Emission and hence in the End of the Twelve:

That energy which is supreme, subtle, endless and (all) pervasive is the Supreme (parā). She is consciousness and, supremely sacred (divyā), she abides as (the timeless) moment (truṭi). Endless, pervasive and sacred, her form is the Point (in the centre of maṇḍala) within the Void. Established in Emission, she is divine nectar (amṛtā). Established in the movement (of energy), she is immobile.

yā sā śaktiḥ [kh g: śakti] parā sūkṣmā anantā vyāpikā [kh g: vyāpakā] parā | cidrūpā paramā divyā [g: vidyā] truṭirūpā [kh: trūṭi-; g: tuti-] vyavasthitā ||
anantā vyāpikā [kh g: vyāpakā] divyā vyomasthā bindurūpiṇī [g: bindū-] |
visargasthā amṛtā divyā cārasthācārarūpiṇī ||

From one point of view then, we can say that the Union of Emission (visargayoga) is union with this energy in the End of the Twelve. From another point of view the term visargayoga may also mean the union of two or more emissions. And this is the practice which, in the following passage drawn from the ṢSS (10/161-168) and its commentary, is described as one of the forms of Yonimudrā. The two breaths, ascending and descending, are two Yonis within which emission takes place. The practice of Yonimudrā is to unite them inwardly in Suṣumṇā, the central channel of the breath and lead them up. This may take place for the yogi alone or along with a partner in sexual union.

Having penetrated the Yoni with the Yoni, split it apart with the pestle. By the union of the two emissions (one) certainly (achieves the liberated state of) Flight (khegati). By means of the energy below and the energy above (the energy of) the pestle (mudgarā), which generates the formless (arūpa), (develops).

O goddess, having again split apart the second emission by means of that (energy) and having dragged along the Void (randhra) of the emission of radiance (varcas) slowly lead it upwards.

The second (emission) moves intensely just by its contraction. By the union of the two emissions, contraction and expansion always (sadā) takes place within the Cavity of Brahmā and above in the very same way. That knowledge of (this) sign of attainment (pratyayavijñāna) arises in all breathing beings.

The two (emissions), located above, are present in (suṣumṇā) the one channel (of the two breaths). The second (emission) pulsates intensely by means of that by which it moves.

When the blissful time born of emission has come and passion is intense, (the Cavity of Brahmā) contracts and expands intensely by the movement (of the two emissions). Once perceived (that this is) thus (taking place) and having dragged along the Yoni with effort by means of the Yoni, the Lord of Yogis, attains the plane of (Bhairava), the Skyfarer by means of the (power of the essential) reality of the Skyfarer. One type of Yonimudrā has (thus) been explained (that operates) during (sexual) union (samāgama).

The commentary explains: Having penetrated the energy that is below and the energy that is above, drag (each one of them) along. How? Like stricking with a pestle. By stricking and rubbing and having done that pierce it, that is, split it apart 'by the union of the two emissions'. There are two emissions. (One is) the upper emission (sarga) (of the breath) and (the other), the lower emission (of the breath that are on) the upper and the lower path (respectively). The location of the 'radiance' (varcas) is the location of vision (dṛṣṭi) (i.e. where the movement of the breath is perceived). Lead that upwards. (Then) lead the upper emission down. Lead the upper emission down there (where) the cavities of the mouth and nose etc (are located). Here one perceives a sign of attainment (pratyaya). When (the breath) moves upwards, it then moves down. Then by moving down, it moves upwards when it is very intense. When contraction and expansion takes place within the two emissions, the Cavity of Bhramā is pure. If it has been opened out (vikāsita) and the two emissions are present in the state of the one channel (of the breath) then 'by the movement', which is repeated practice of contraction and expansion, bliss, movement (of the body) trembling, shouting and throbbing (of the limbs) takes place (spontaneously). When that takes place (the yogi attains the liberated) state of Flight, the opening up of what is closed and the expansion of contraction. This is one type of Yonimudrā (experienced) in (sexual) union (samāgama).

yonyā yoniṁ samākramya mudgareṇa tu bhedayet |
visargadvayasaṁyogāt khagatir nātra saṁśayaḥ || adhaḥśaktyordhvaśaktyā [k kh: adha-] tu mudgarārūpakāriṇī |
tayā vibhedya taṁ devi visargadvitayaṁ punaḥ ||
varcovisargarandhraṁ tu ākṛṣyordhvaṁ [k kh: ākṛṣṭordhvaṁ] nayec chanaiḥ |
tenākuṅcitamātreṇa dvitīyaṁ calate bhṛśam ||
visargadvayasaṁyogān mīlanonmīlanaṁ [kh: -yogā-] sadā |
jāyate brahmarandhre tu ūrdhvaṁ vai evam eva hi ||
etat [k: eta] pratyayavijñānaṁ [k: gatyaya-] sarvaprāṇiṣu jāyate |
ekanāḍigate dve tu visarge ūrdhvasaṁsthite [k kh: visargāvyorddha--] ||
calate yena [k kh: kena] tenaiva dvitīyaṁ spandate bhṛśam |
kāle visargaje prāpte sānande [k, kh: sānandaṁ] manmathotkaṭe ||
mīlanonmīlanaṁ tasya bhṛśaṁ [bhṛsaṁ] saṁcālanād bhavet |
evaṁ saṁbhāvya yonyā tu yonim ākṛṣya yatnataḥ ||
khecarārthena [k kh: -rddhena] yogīndraḥ khecaraṁ padam āpnuyāt |
eko bhedaḥ samākhyāto yonimudrā samāgame ||
adhaḥśaktim ūrdhvaśaktiṁ ca [k: adhaśaktir ūrdhvaśaktiś ca; kh: adhaḥśaktiḥ ūrddhvaśaktiś ca] samākramya samākarṣaṇaṁ kārayet | katham | mudgareṇa

*prahāravat [k: āyudhavat] | prahāragharṣaṇena etat [kh: tat] kṛtvā bhedayet vidārayet | visargadvayasaṁyogād [kh: -yogāt] iti | visargadvayam [kh: -dvayaṁ] | ūrdhvasarga [k: ūrddhvaṁ-; kh: -sargaṁ] adhaḥsarga [k kh: -sargaṁ] ūrdhvamārge [k: -rga; kh: adhaḥ sargaṁ] adhomārge [k: * * mārgaḥ; kh: missing] | varcaḥsthānaṁ [k: vaṁca-; kh: varcosthāne] dṛṣṭisthānaṁ [kh: -ne] taṁ ca [kh: missing] ūrdhvaṁ [kh: ūrddhve] nayet | ūrdhvasargaṁ mukha-nāsādirandhrāḥ tatra [kh: * te] adho nayet | atra pratyayaṁ dṛśyate | ūrdhvaṁ yadā [kh: + ā] kramyate tadā adhaś calati | tadā [kh: missing] adha ākramaṇād ūrdhvaṁ calati | bhṛśaṁ [kh: bhṛthaṁ |] satyam atyarthena [kh: * * *] | visargadvaye [k: -dvaya] mīlane tathā [k: tadā] unmīlane brahmarandhraṁ śuddhaṁ bhavati | vikāsitaṁ ca yadā ekanāḍitve visargadvayaṁ bhavati | mīlanonmīlanābhyāsanavaśāt [k: -nābhyāṁsavasāt; kh: -nābhyāsa * vasāt] saṁcālanāt tadā ānandacalanaṁ [k kh: -na] dhūnanaṁ [k: cūlana; kh: dhūnana] śabdanaṁ [kh: śavda *|] spandanaṁ [k: sphoṭanaṁ] jāyate | tadjāte [k kh: * jāte] khecaratvaṁ [k kh: -raḥ ] mīlanonmīlanaṁ saṁkocavikāśaḥ [kh: -saḥ] iti eko [kh: ekaḥ] bhedo [kh: prathamo] yonimudrāyāḥ [kh: -mudrābhedaḥ] ||

We may summerize our findings as follows. The union of emission is the conjuction of the inhaled and exhaled breath that takes place at the apex of the Middle Channel (madhyanāḍī) commonly known as Suṣumṇā and here called Sūṣmaṇā. The City of the Moon, that is, Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is located there. The Place of Repose (viśrāntisthāna) is in the centre of it where the goddess Vakrā resides as Kuṇḍalinī (see below 2/36cd-37) 'established in emission' (ŚM 6/6cd). The channel of Sūṣmaṇā that travels through the centre of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala located at the End of the Twelve above the head is the Path of Meru through which the goddess descends with the teachings. The goddess moves both up and down through the centre of the maṇḍala even as she rests there and so although 'established in the movement (of energy), she is immobile' (ibid.). As a result the whole channel through which she moves and its extremities are, like her, blissful and, as our verses puts it, 'transports the waves of nectar'. As the Ṭīkā (MS K fl. 1a) says: 'In this way everything is equally all bliss (and it has come) from the Path of Meru, that is, from the End of the Twelve above the head which is the location (sthāna) of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (evaṁ sarvaṁ [kh: sarva] sarvānandasamaṁ merumāgān mastakoparidvādaśāntāt [k: -mastakoparād-; kh: -māgāt- -mastako-parāt-] saṁvartāmaṇḍalasthānāt [k kh: savantā-]).

Finally, note that the practice of Yonimudrā described above can be done alone and the union of emission within which the maṇḍala is located can also take place in the course of sexual union. In that case the emission is also of the two partners and it should place in unison in the End of the Twelve at the apex of the common medial channel of the two which transports the resulting 'waves of nectar'.

44. The attributive compound kulālambin qualifying Śrīnātha can be translated in two ways. One is that he 'supports the Kula' another that he is 'supported by Kula'. Kula in the first alternative, which is the one I have chosen, I take to mean the entire tradition or 'family' (anvaya) of teachers in general and the eighteen listed in the following verses that constitute the Divine Current in particular. This meaning accords with the following statement that he is the leader of the Siddhas. The meaning of the word Kula in the context of the other possible translation is not the same. It would make no sense to say that Śrīnātha is supported by the tradition that originates from him. Kula in that case, I suppose, would denote the abstract metaphysical identity of the goddess, that is, the Transmental which is the aggregate - kula - of all the energies in the maṇḍala and hence the macrocosm through which its vitalizing energy spreads. As the aggregated energy of the male principle, the goddess sustains the god. Thus, according to the Kularatnoddyota, when the god seeks to discover the foundation which sustains him, the goddess appears before him as the embodiment of his cosmogonic will, which is the Transmental, and by their subsequent union the world is created (KRU 1/53-65, quoted in Dyczkowski 2004: 245 ff.).

45. After describing Candrapura – the City of th Moon - this verse answers the question: what is the (true) nature of Śrīnātha who resides in Candrapura (1/2b), that is, the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (20)? The answer to this question introduces the following verses that summerize in their own cryptic style the manner in which the transmission is brought down and then spread in the world through the lineages of teachers. These are the Siddhas, also known as Nāthas. The first and foremost amongst them is Bhairava himself, that is, Kujīśa, the goddess's consort who, as the first teacher, is Śrīnātha, the most common name of the god who speaks, asking and answering questions in the Kubjikā Tantras.

We have seen that a primary feature of Kubjikā's theology and the soteriology of the Kubjikā Tantras is the goddess's frequent identification with the Transmental located at the End of the Twelve above the head in the subtle body. Based, no doubt, on yogis' personal experience, this doctrine is common to most if not all major Śaiva Tantric traditions. We find it, for example, in the Āgamas of the Śaivasiddhānta. Thus the SŚP teaches that the individual soul should be dissolved 'into the Supreme Principle which is supreme bliss in the End of the Twelve which, void of (phenomenal) being, is Śiva, beyond mind (unmana) and the perpetual source of (every divine) quality' (SŚP nirvāṇadīkṣāvidhiḥ verse 236). Similarly, in the SvT (11/312cd) the god declares: 'O Śāṅkarī, he who is beyond the Transmental is eternal, pervasive and imperishable'.

If we accept the immediately apparent meaning of the expression unmanānte to be 'at the end of the Transmental' we are faced with an inconsistency with the commonly accepted doctrine according to which the male deity beyond the Transmental is transcendent, a condition commonly symbolized by Voidness. This Void is the god, who is 'at the end of the Transmental'. Thus we read below (40/51):

> That is said to be Śiva's abode (sthāna), which said to be at the End of Emission (visargānta). That is said to be the Great Void (mahāśūnya) and is located at the End of the Twelve (dvādaśānta).

Similarly, Abhinavagupta (TĀ 3/140), paraphrasing the Triśirobhairava-tantra, says:

> The supreme (form of) Kuṇḍalinī is (experienced) at the end of emission (visargaprāntadeśa). It is said to be Śiva's Sky (śivavyoman), the supreme abode of Brahman and the Self.

It is hard to understand, therefore, why we should be told here that at the end of the Transmental the supreme reality is omniform (viśvarūpa). I have tried to remedy this difficulty by understanding the expression unmanānte to mean not 'at the end of the Transmental' but 'within the Transmental'. A little further ahead (2/35cd-36ab) we are told that Śiva is transcendent and hence 'nameless' (anāma). Perhaps we should understand that these are two aspects of the god who is the supreme principle. As Śrīnātha he is the teacher present in the world as the essential nature of all things and hence is within the Transmental which is the highest and most comprehesive level of immanence. But as Śiva the Nameless, he transcends them and so is the aspect of the god who is realised at the end of the Transmental.

46. Verses 20 to 26 answer the questions: how will the (spiritual) sons know its eighteen divisions (26)? and (what are) the eighteen divisions (31)?

47. This verse is repeated below in 35/92cd-93ab and is also found in YKh (2) 15/5. It appears, therefore, that the division of these eighteen into units of 4, 5, 6 and 3 is basic and so they have been numbered accordingly. We are told below (35/93–94) that there are four divisions because these eighteen are associated with the Sun and Moon which correspond to the right and left currents of the breath. Both have an ascending and descending phase thus making four altogether. The five are associated with the Five Praṇavas (35/95-96ab). that represent various pentads corresponding to five states of the goddess in her creative phase as the Yoni (see notes 3/39, 44 and 92cd-93ab). The three are the three sacred seats deployed in the triangular Yoni (35/98). They are equated with the channels Iḍā, Piṅgalā and Suṣumṇā (35/99-100) and their corresponding goddesses - Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī, respectively. Each seat is inhabited by two Yoginīs who together make up the group of six. They are 1) Oḍḍiyāṇa - Hākinī and Śākinī 2) Pūrṇagiri - Kākinī and Lākinī 3) Kāmarūpa - Rākinī and Ḍākinī. They can both chastize or restrain (nigraha) enemies and miscreants as well as dispense grace (anugraha 35/101-103) which, is perhaps why they are in couples. These eighteen, deployed in the Triangle in the midst of the currents of the vital breath, together constitute the 'arising of the Eighteen-fold Sequence' (35/93-94). They are, in other words, the primary manifestations of the Divine Current which emerges from the energy of the Command. The Triangular Yoni and its contents, from which the universe, body, transmission and teachings issue forth and by which they are sustained, is produced in this way from the Divine Current. Conversely, we may say that the phases of the Divine Current are their internal equivalent.

48. Below in 57/16b and 57/65d the reading of this name is Herukā, which is feminine. The mantra, recorded in chapter 24 of the ŚM, addresses the being here as Heruka, which is masculine. But the SaṁP, which quotes this passage, confirms this reading. The ŚM (23/47d) reads the name Pherubhairava (Jackal Bhairava)

49. These and the following verses up to 2/31 describe in brief the lineages of teachers. This is an important topic. The worship of the teachers, collectively called the Circle of Teachers, is a necessary prelude to the worship of the Krama. The KnT declares: one should worship the circle of teachers (gurumaṇḍala) beginning with Śrīnātha and ending with one's own teacher. [. . .] Once known it from the teacher's mouth and then begin the sacrifice (śrīnāthādi svagurvantaṁ pūjayed gurumaṇḍalam | *jñātvā gurumukhāt samyak paścād [kh, g: paścā ] yajanam ārabhet | KnT MS K folio 7a). Śrīnātha was described in the previous verse. These verses are dedicated to the eighteen that constitute the Divine Tradition (SaṁP (3b): ity aṣṭādaśadivyāmnāyānukramam) also called the Divine Current and the Convention of the Flowers (puṣpasaṁketa). Here only their names are listed. They are described individually below in chapter fifty-seven. The remaining groups who constitute the lineages of teachers (gurukrama) are mentioned in the following verses. These are the three Siddhas who transmitted the teachings in the three lineages (oli) or transmissions (krama). They are followed by the Nine Siddhas of the Lineage of Nine Persons (navapuruṣakrama) and their sixteen disciples. Unlike the eighteen of the Divine Current who are liberated Skyfarers (khecara), all these are said to have been embodied human Siddhas and so they, along with their disciples, are called, according to one system of classification, the Current of the Persons (puruṣaugha).

The eighteen members of the Divine Current appear at the end of a long section in the Ṭīkā that comments on a passage drawn from the Bṛhadāgama that deals with the final part of the maṇḍala in which the teachers are worshipped. There this group is called the Transmission of the Bliss of the Command (ājñānandakrama), which the Ṭīkā glosses as the Transmission of the Eighteen Nāthas (aṣṭādaśanāthakrama). One of the issues to clarify here concerning this Transmission is whether it is a sequence of Nāthas or of their consorts. Above (1/2) our text simply refers to this sequence as the `eighteen' (dviraṣṭau) and here as the `eighteen divisions'. Below (57/1), as here, it is called ‘the tradition of the eighteenfold transmission' (aṣṭādaśakramāmnāya) and eighteen aspects of the Divine Current (divyaugha) (57/37cd-38ab, 57/54cd-55ab) or the Transmission of the Skyfarers (khecarakrama). In chapter fifty-seven below, this Divine Current is not described as a lineage of eighteen teachers but as a sequence of energies that operate on successive levels (57/52cd-53ab) that mark the progressive emergence of cosmogonic Sound and hence is called the ‘arising of the Path of Mantra’ (mantramārgodaya) (57/28ab). Each stage can also be understood as an inner phase of creation or a yogic state, that is, as a condition or experience of a higher mystical consciousness. Indeed, the entire Divine Current, we are told, is the knowledge of liberation, which is the Śāmbhava state (57/92cd-93ab). In this perspective, these are not stages but aspects of the experience of those who have attained liberation. Those who apply their attention to it share in this experience and so attain the state Beyond Mind which is the goal and essence of the teachings (57/94cd-95).

In metaphysical and theological terms, they are eighteen aspects of the goddess herself who as the Yoni is the embodiment of the entire Western Tradition of the Kubjikā Tantras and all that exists (59/74–75ab). They are all aspects of the Transmental, the energy of consciousness identified in one place with the goddess Kālī. (*unmanā citkalā [k, ṅ: citakalā; gh: cittakalā] kālī etad divyaughasantatiḥ [k, ṅ: vivyaumasaṁtatī; g: devyāmasaṁ * ?; gh: vivyaumasatatī] || YKh (1) 35/3cd). As Kālī is regularly identified with the energy of the New Moon (amākalā), which is the seventeenth lunar digit one wonders whether these eighteen are not related to the energies of the moon. The eighteenth member of this series is indeed anomolous with respect to the others. He is called Śrīnātha. We should be careful not to confuse him with the Śrīnātha described in the previous verse who is Kujīśa, the Bhairava who is Kubjikā's consort, although, in a sense, they are essentially the same. For one thing, the Śrīnātha who is Kujīśa is, according to the Saṁvartāsūtra (above 1/2b), ‘in the form of the eighteen (navanavakalita)’. The series is commonly said to be the one that ‘begins with the Transmental and ends with Śrīnātha and Ciñciṇī’ (KnT MS K fl. 7a) śāṁbhavādi krameṇaiva [k: śaṁbhavādi-; kh: -naiva] yāvac chrīnāthaciñciṇī [g: ciñcinī; gh: ciciṇī] |). This Śrīnātha YKh (2) refers to as the first Nātha (YKh (2) 15/79ab: unmanādy ādināthāntaṁ [k, kh: -ntā] divyaughaṁ puṣpasaṁjñakam |). In the following verses, as we shall see, he is called Vṛkṣanātha (the Lord of the Tree) who initiates the Three Siddhas first and then the following Nine Nāthas.

The names of the first two phases - the Transmental (unamanā) and Mind Beyond Mind (manonmanā) – are often synonyms, although, as is the case here, two distinct levels may be meant. The following two - the Equal One (samanā) and the Pervasive (vyāpinī) – appear frequently throughout the Śaivāgama and Kaula Tantras as the following two phases in the development of the Sonic

Absolute down into the sacred cosmogonic sound of mantra. The remaining ones appear in chapter fifty-seven in the feminine as goddesses who, similar in nature to these first four, are said to be aspects of the Command that operates on the Śāmbhava plane (57/76cd-77ab). The Command is the Transmental, the metaphysical identity of the goddess. Thus we are told that the Flower in the expression the `Convention of the Flower', which stands for the entire series of eighteen stages, is the goddess Khañjī (57/49cd-50ab), that is, Kubjikā. Even Śrīnātha at the end of the series is a form the goddess assumes. She becomes the god (57/80). In other words, the goddess is both the Transmental at the summit of the sequence and all the other seventeen phases. That these are energies is finally confirmed in 57/96ab-98 where their consorts the 18 Nāthas who are `part of the transmission (krama) beginning with the Transmental' are listed. There we are told that they are ancient Skyfarers (i.e. liberated souls) and they should be worshipped with their female consorts as couples (57/99ab-100ab).

But according to the KnT (MS K fl. 7a), which also lists these eighteen in the beginning of a long passage in which all the teachers are listed (i.e the 18, 3, 9, and 16 Nāthas), they are all clearly male. So much so that the first one, which here is (the neuter, although normally feminine) Transmental (unmanā) is listed there are the Lord of the Transmental (unmanīśāna). Thus the expression 'the Transmission of the Eighteen Nāthas' in the Ṭīkā refers only to the male consorts of the eighteen energies who are 'embodiments' of their experience as liberated souls moving freely in the expanse of the Infinite. Accordingly, in chapter 57, the names of members of this series are all feminine. Here only six of them are feminine. The rest are neuter with only one possible exception (i.e. Avyakta). Their ordinal numbers, however, are all neuter, with the sole exception of one, that is, the tenth, which agrees with the feminine Jambhalā. Should we then simply consider the Sanskrit of this passage to be faulty? Should we emend systematically to the feminine or the masculine form? The vocative 'O Vakrā!' in 2/23a is out of place as the goddess is the speaker. Accordingly, the god is addressed previously in the same passage as 'O Śambhu!'. This is a sign that this passage was taken from some other source where the god is the speaker, not the goddess. It appears that the redactor was careful enough to alter one of the vocatives to the required male form but forgot to make the necessary change to the other one.

The transition in this way of passages from one text to another frequently entail their corruption. But I do not think that the change in gender here is due simply to error. The redactor or original author seems to have intentionally made alterations to the gender of the words, although he failed to do so in every case. The guiding principle here seems to be the notion that these eighteen are not only collectively the āmnāya. Each one individually is also the entire āmnāya. All eighteen form a part of the Divine Tradition (divyāmnāya) concerning what is, essentially, the liberated condition. Again, each one is a bheda - 'division', 'aspect' or 'type' of that. At the same time, each one is, in a sense, all of it because each one is the total experience of the liberated state. The difference between them is that they are the experience of different liberated souls. The fact that the first three or four members of this series bear the names of the initial stages of the development of Sound out of the Absolute should not confuse us into assuming that a hierarchy of states is meant here. As we shall see below in chapter 57 each one is ultimate - each is the Transmental.

The change in gender here is due, it seems, to a shift of perspective from the states themselves, 'embodied' as female principles, to the tradition or teaching - āmnāya - that concerns them and to them as divisions or aspects - bheda - of the same. These words are normally masculine in Sanskrit but in our text are most commonly treated as neuter and it is this gender that has been projected onto the names.

50. This verse answers the question: how is the Division of the Couple the essence (sāra) (27)?

51. The word sāmarasya, which I have translated as 'oneness', literally means 'equalness of flavour'. This is how the couple is the 'essence' (sāra) of all things. The pervasive oneness in all things of the union of Śiva and Śakti is likened to the experience of taste. Rather than 'seeing' them everywhere, they are 'tasted' everywhere. They are a couple, we are told, in the sense that the union of both takes place within each. Śakti unites with Śiva within Śiva and Śiva unites with Śakti within Śakti. By extension there are eighteen couples - the eighteen teachers and their consorts. Concerning this and other *conjunctio*s, see note to 7/16cd-17.

52. Concerning these three Siddhas, see also 2/15-16 and 2/45.

53. Generally, the Siddhas and their corresponding seats and lineages are not presented in this order. Usually Oḍḍīśanātha comes first and Mitranātha last. This is the logical order as Oḍḍīśanātha is the first of the three Siddhas and his transmission is that of the Eldest (jyeṣṭha), also called the Aged (vṛddha). The order of correspondences with respect to the transmissions remains the same and so above in 2/15ab the three transmissions are similarly presented in the reverse order, that is, beginning with that of the Child and ending with that of the Aged. In this way we arrive at the usual set up namely, that Mitranātha is the founder of the transmission of the Child, Ṣaṣṭhanātha that of the Youth and Oḍḍīśanātha that of the Aged. Note, however, that in the following passage from the Upadeśasūtra (YKh (1) 14/8d-10; YKh (2) 5/11) the correspondences are reversed. But this may well be a unique exception or, at least, a rare reversal:

In the same way there is another three-fold transmission and the division of the lineages (uli) is three-fold as that of the Child, Youth and the Aged. Mitranātha is in the lineage of the Eldest. Ṣaṣtha(nātha) is in the Middle One and Uḍunātha (i.e. Oḍḍīśanātha) in that of the Child. (Thus) there are three Siddhas in the Kula transmission.

. . . . tathānyaṁ ca kramatrayaṁ [gh: kramaṁ-] |
bālakaumāravṛddhaṁ [gh: -komāra-; ṅ: vālaṁkomaravṛddhaṁ] ca ulibhedaṁ [k, ṅ: -de] tridhākramam ||
mitranāthaṁ [kh: mitranāthanāthaṁ] tu jyeṣṭholyāṁ [k, kh, gh: jyeṣṭālyāṁ; ṅ: jyaṣṭholyāṁ] ṣaṣṭhaṁ [k, kh, gh: ṣaṣṭaṁ, ṅ: vra?ṣṭaṁ] caiva tu madhyame |
uḍunāthaṁ [k: ūdrunāthaṁ; gh: ūḍunāthaṁ] tathā bāle [ṅ: netre] trīṇi siddhāḥ [k, kh, gh: siddhā; ṅ: siddhāṁ] kulakrame ||

54. These abbreviations for the Siddhas appear several times in our text (see e.g. 2/45, 7/58cd, 7/95c, 25/37d, 39/133c, and 53/3c). In this case only three Siddhas are mentioned and so also below in 7/58cd–59ab. When the fourth Siddha – Caryānātha – is added to them his name is similarly abbreviated to Ca (see below 2/45 and 45/25cd). The same system of abbreviation is used generally in all the Kubjikā Tantras. We find it also, for example, in the ŚM (23/59ab) where we are told that: the Group of Four - O (Oḍḍīśanātha), ṢA (Ṣaṣṭhanātha), Ca (Caryānātha), and MI (Mitranātha) are the four leaders of the Siddhas. (o-ṣa-ca-micatuṣkaṁ [k: ā-] tu catvāraḥ [kh: catvāra] siddhanāyakāḥ [g: -kāṁ] ||).

These abbreviations are said to be part of the special, secret terminology (saṁjñā) of the lineage of Siddhas (siddhasantāna) (39/133) and the texts make extensive use of such abbreviations. The most common are these abbreviations for the Siddhas and those for the four sacred seats namely, O (for Oḍḍiyāna), Jā (for Jālandhara), Pū (for Pūrṇagiri) and Kā (for Kāmarūpa) (see e.g. 44/46cd–48ab). This set of four abbreviations is so basic that the Śrīvidyā tradition took them over along with what they denote (see, e.g. YHṛ 1/41ab and 3/99cd). Based on the same principle, the Ṭīkā similarly supplies abbreviated forms of the names of the fifty seats (Ṭ MS K, fl. 3a-4b) listed below in 6/212cd-219ab and elsewhere. The names of the Nine Nāthas are sometimes abbreviated in the same way. For example below in 2/30cd-31, these nine beginning with Gaganānanda are collectively referred to as gakārādi 'those beginning with (the Nātha whose name begins with) GA'. We find another example of this abbreviated form of this name and that of the other eight in the Ṭīkā (MS K fl. 176ab). Below in 7/77cd-79 we find an extension of the abbreviated names of three of these nine viz. Gadeva, Padeva and Kadeva for Gaganānada, Padmānanda and Kamalānanda, respectively.

The names of deities may be abbreviated in the same way. The expression Ḍādi, for example, refers to the group of six Yoginīs (called ḍādiṣaṭka) beginning with Ḍākinī (KMT 14/4ab, Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 121-6). KU is a common abbreviation for Kubjikā (see e.g. KuKh 58/63c). Proper names are occasionally abbreviated in this way in other schools also. For example, Jayaratha refers to Keyūravatī, a teacher of the Kashmiri Kālīkrama, as śrīkekāradevī (Dwivedi and Rastogi 1987: 811, read śrīkakāradevī). Similarly, the goddess of the Kashmiri Kālīkrama, Maṅgalā, is called Makāradevī (MP (1) p. 49).

Abbreviation may be extensively applied in this way. For example, the Ṭīkā presents the names of the sacred sites, goddesses and teachers worshipped in the six groups of the Krama in an abbreviated form as a part of its exposition of the contents of the sequences of the individual lineages. The first syllables of the names of the members of each group are stated first, followed by their mantras. The same method is applied to other groups (ogha) of mantras also. The units which constitute a mantra may also be abbreviated in the same way. This serves, it seems, not only to hide the contents of these mantras from the uninitiated, but also as a mnemonic device. For example the Ṭ (MS K, fl. 49a-49b) introduces mantras related to the sacred seats in the following way.

Ū, Ca, Ā and Ku are the group of four. (Then come) the four Jā, Ma, Ya, A. (There is) the group of four Pa Mā Maṁ Śā and the four Kā Si Va Ka. Such are your four divisions of the group of the first four seats expressed by means of the bare convention. (Now) once clarified, it is stated (in full).

ū ca ā ku catuṣkaṁ [k kh: catuṣka] syāt jā ma ya a catuṣṭayam || pa mā maṁ śā catuṣkaṁ syāt kā si vi ka catuṣṭayam || evaṁ te caturo bhedā ity ādipīṭhacatuṣkasya saṅketamātrakṛtam | tad eva sphuṭaṁ kṛtvā [kh: kṛtvāt] kathyate.

It would be wrong to think of these as abbreviations pure and simple. Examples of abbreviations in the strict sense of the word are also found in the texts and can be clearly distinguished as such. Common examples are 'pā. pū.' or 'pā.', which are used in liturgical works of all kinds, not only those of the Kubjikā Tantras, as abbreviations for the frequently recurring expression `pādukāṁ pūjayāmi' - `I worship the sandals (of this or that divine being)'. Similarly, 'avvāpāda' is an abbrevation of 'avvāpādukāṁ pūjayāmi' (see below 7/33cd-34). The types of abbreviations we are considering are called 'conventions' (saṁketa) because they form an integral part of the language of the tradition, a language that is itself a convention.

55. This verse answers the question: (who are the) Siddhas in the teaching of the three (lineages) (tritayaśāsana) (28)? There can be no doubt therefore that the expression 'trika' – lit. 'triad' – in this verse stands for 'the teaching of the three (lineages)' (tritayaśāsana). This expression is not uncommon. It occurs, for example, in YKh (2) 15/2cd: 'and the supreme (goddess) and mother in the teaching of the three (lineages) . . .' (parā ca mātaraś caiva avvā tritayaśāsane).

An expanded version of this expression or, one could say the complete one, is 'the teaching of the three lineages' (olitritayaśāsana) that occurs, for example, below in 13/115d and 48/92d, leaving us in no doubt as to the meaning. The same expression occurs (with uli replacing oli), for example, in YKh (1) 23/15ab: 'The seventh (and highest) House is the western one which is the teaching of the three lineages' (saptamaṁ paścimaṁ veśma (k: vesmaṁ) ulitritayaśāsanam (k: -sāsanaṁ)). The fourth chapter of the KRP begins with a list of triads that is said to be the 'teaching concerning the triads in the Kula' (kule tritayanirṇayam KRP 4/1b). The first in the list is the Transmission (krama), which is of three kinds, as are the three lineages (oli) (kramaṁ tu trividhaṁ devi olitritayam eva ca ibid. 4/2ab). Other synonymous expressions are: 'the teaching concerning the three principles' (tattvatritayaśāsana) (AS 7/26d), 'the teaching concerning the three trasmissions' (kramatritayaśāsana also ibid. 17/106b) and 'the teaching of the three sections (of the MBT)' (khaṇḍatritayaśāsana) found only in the AS, although it occurs there as many as three times (in 22/76d, 23/59d and 28/78d).

56. In this context, the Moon, Sun and Fire correspond, as we have seen in the previous verse, to the three teachers Mitranātha, Ṣaṣṭhanātha and Oḍḍīśanātha who are said to have founded the lineages of the Child, Youth and Eldest in the seats of Kāmarūpa, Pūrṇagiri and Oḍḍiyāna, respectively. Vṛkṣanātha - the Lord of the Tree - occupies the centre, that is, the position of authority in the middle of them. Perhaps we should imagine a triangle with these three luminaries in the corner and Vṛkṣanātha in the centre. From there, like the Upaniṣadic Self, he shines, the Light of lights, illumining them. He is the First Nātha (ādinātha) of the three lineages (oli) (below 7/67cd), from whom the other three Nāthas or Siddhas are generated. Thus he is present in all three lineages and is worshipped along with the three founding Siddhas (cf. below 51/9cd-10). He is Śrīnātha who is said to be the teacher in the three lineages (19/18). As such he is Bhairava, Kubjikā's consort embodied in the seed-syllable Navātman and so is called Navātman Bhairava (cf. 51/4). Through Navātman, the mantric form of the Bhairava as the First Nātha, the other Nāthas are worshipped and with them the transmissions (krama) that originated from them. See intro. vol. 2, p. 423 ff..

57. As an emanation of the energy of Speech (vāc) all manifestation is understood to have two aspects namely, the denoted (vācya) and the denotator (vācaka). Ranging from gross (sthula), to subtle (sūkṣma) and supreme (para), the denoted order is three-fold as the gross worlds (bhuvana), subtle principles (tattva) and supreme energies (kalā) that encompass them. The corresponding triad in the sphere of the denotator is mantra, the parts of mantra (pada) and letters. This way of understanding reality has direct application in ritual, especially initiation. The reader is referred to Padoux (1990: 330–371) for an exposition of the Sixfold Path from the Kashmiri Śaiva point of view. The Siddhānta conception upon which it is based is summerized by Brunner in the introduction to the third volume of her work on the Somaśambhupaddhati (1977: xiii -xxii).

In a historical perspective we note with Padoux (1990: 331) that: 'surely, the ṣaḍadhvan [Sixfold Path] pattern existed quite early, at least in some form, in the Śaivism of north-western India [and elsewhere]. However, since its constituent parts do not always fit together perfectly, one may infer that it was not developed at first as a whole but, more likely, that it was built up by combining materials from earlier cosmoganies.' Further ahead Padoux (ibid. 356) adds: 'It is likely, indeed, that the *kalā*s [energies], *tattva*s [principles], and *bhuvana*s [worlds] were at first three different, unrelated cosmic classsifications, which were subsequently arranged as a comprehensive but not entirely consistent system. [. . .] While the whole pattern, embracing the entire cosmos, looks quite impressive, its lack of homogeneity and consistency is obvious.' Thus, Padoux notes that 'there was, as it seems, a 'way of the worlds' (bhuvanādhvan) among the Lākulas, a group of Śaiva ascetics belonging to the Pāśupatas.' We may add that there is more evidence of this in our text itself, as we shall see below in chapter thirty-three. There we find three separate sections concerned with initiation by means of the letters (33/126ab–132ab), the principles (33/132cd–152) and the path of the energies (33/153–156).

According to the scheme of the Sixfold Path presented in the Ṭīkā as a part of the sixteenfold consecration, the mantra is Vidyārāja. This consists of nine recitations of Navātman made in such a way that the letters change position by one place with each utterance. The 81 parts (pada) of this mantra are then used as the parts of the corresponding path (i.e. padādhvan). Thus, according to this form of the Sixfold Path, described in the Svacchandatantra, Navātman is the specific denotator of the worlds and the principles and so it is through Navātman that they are generated, sustained and destroyed. This then is Vṛkṣanātha 'the pure principle of the Sixfold Path'.

58. These lines answer the question: who has authority in the South (29)? Note that the South - dakṣiṇa - is short for dakṣiṇāpatha, that is, the Deccan.

59. Concerning Navātman, the sonic form of Bhairava who is Kubjikā's consort and the First Nātha and his nine energies, see intro. vol. 2, p. 423 ff..

60. These lines answer the question: what is the group of nine (30)? The text refers in its customary cryptic manner to the next two groups of Siddhas. Below in 7/67cd-68ab and elsewhere we are told that Vṛkṣanātha not only initiated the three Siddhas and so was the original founder of the three lineages that start with them, he also had nine other disciples known as the Nine Nāthas. Similarly, in chapter 46 below, we are told that the first teacher who appeared in the Kṛta Age, there identified with Oḍḍīśnātha and also called Tūṣṇīnātha, came into the world again, assuming the bodies of these nine in the Age of Strife (46/42cd-43). However in the Saṁvartāmaṇḍalasūtra we are told that these nine, who constitute the Transmission of the Nine Persons (navapuruṣakrama), were the spiritual sons of the three Siddhas (1/2c). Here Vṛkṣanātha alone comes into the world in the form of these nine. It seems that a connection is implied here between these nine and the nine letters of Navātman, the sonic identity of Vṛkṣanātha. Navātman similarly pervades the nine modalities of the three lineages. As the Ṭīkā (MS K fl. 176b) says: '. . . Navātman pervades the three lineages each divided into three modalities . . .' (. . . ovallitrayasya tribhis tribhir bhinnarūpasya [kh: tribhis tribhinnarūpasya] vyāpakatvena vartamānaḥ navātmā . . .). In the Gurumaṇḍala the lines of teachers are worshipped by means of Navātman and its letters are closely linked to their metaphysical identity.

Another explanation of the nine modalities of Vṛkṣanātha is implied below in verse 31/91-3ab. There we read that the first Nātha assumed nine names. They are not the names of these nine Nāthas, they are those of the Nāthas that preceded them. But we may think of this group of nine as the 'inner' preceding aspect of the nine modalities which become fully displayed in the 'outer' or subsequent aspect as the Nine Nāthas.

61. The first of the Nine Nāthas is called Gaganānandanātha. He is referred to here, as are the three Siddhas (above 2/28), by the first letter of his name.

62. See above note to 2/7cd–7ef. The sixteen Nāthas of the sixteen supports are described below in 46/181-198ab. The sixteen supports are the energies of the vowels from A to Ḥ. The Yoginīs and Siddhas to which these sixteen letters correspond and their locations in the body, which in the case of the goddess's archetype body is the Yoni, are listed below in 25/29cd-36ab. See also note ibid. for other lists of the sixteen supports.

63. The following lines up to the end of 2/35ab answer the question: what is said to be the body (piṇḍa) that is located in the beginning in each single body (deha) (37)?

64. According to Monier-Williams, the word piṇḍa means 'any round or roundish mass or heap, a ball, globe, knob, button, clod, lump, piece . . . any solid mass or material object, the body, bodily frame'. The piṇḍa meant here is the kulapiṇḍa - 'the body of Kula'. According to the KJN (4/13ab), it is made of the fifty letters of the alphabet (akārādihakārāntaṁ kulapiṇḍasya bhairavi). Similarly, the SaṁP explains: 'the body is a collection of the fifty lords of the letters'. (pañcāśadvarṇādhipānāṁ saṁgrahaṇaṁ piṇḍam). The AS explains that the aggregate of phonemic energies is within the goddess. The combined energies of the letters generate other sonic bodies - the mantras and seed-syllables:

Then these fifty (letters) that belong to your venerable seat (śrīpīṭha) (i.e. the Yoni) have come forth (from there) in the beginning. By means of these (fifty letters) the body (piṇḍa) is made into a single organic unit (piṇḍīkṛta). (This aggregate of letters) is that which develops (vikāsaka) the body in the beginning. He who is this Person is that vessel (of phonemic energy) established within Nature (prakṛti). (The lunar Point) whose form is an unbroken circle is pervaded by him without a break. The complete circle of the Moon, pervaded by the sixteen energies (kalā), is a certain (inscrutable) one who, terrible (raudra), is radiant energy (tejas) and is adorned with the light of Śakti. One should know that he is the Person who abides (equally in both) bondage and liberation. In this way, the Assembly of (phonemic) Sounds (śabdarāśika) abides with your sixteen divisions. The one word (śabda) has been explained. Imperishable Śiva is beyond words. The division of the letters is thus there within the divisions and subdivisions.

śrīpīṭhasya tadāgre hi [vacāgresī] pañcāśat te vinirgatāḥ |
ebhiḥ piṇḍīkṛtaṁ piṇḍaṁ ādau (pādau) piṇḍavikāsakam ||
yo 'sau puruṣas (-ṣa) tat pātraṁ (?) prakṛtyante vyavasthitam |
akhaṇḍamaṇḍalākāraṁ vyāptaṁ yena nirantaram ||
kiñcit tejomayaṁ raudraṁ śaktibhāsamalaṁkṛtam |
kalāṣoḍaśabhir vyāptaṁ saṁpūrṇaṁ (apūrṇaṁ) candramaṇḍalam ||
puruṣaḥ sa (sā) tu vijñeyaḥ (-yā) saṁsthito bandhamokṣayoḥ |
evaṁ te ṣoḍaśair bhedaiḥ saṁsthitaṁ (-tā) śabdarāśikam (-śivaṁ) ||
śabdam ekaṁ samākhyātaṁ śabdātīte śivo 'vyayaḥ |
bhedopabhedayos tatra varṇānāṁ bhedanaṁ tataḥ || AS 5/154-8

The goddess pervades the triangular core of the maṇḍala as energy of Kuṇḍalinī, that is, as the Transmental, which is the Command that resonates with the energies of the letters. These are arranged within it and, each in their own sacred seat (pīṭha) (KuKh 6/212cd-219ab), they are pervaded by the expanding energy of Kuṇḍalinī. This triangle, filled in this way with the energies of Speech, is Kuṇḍalinī in her raised form in the End of the Twelve above the head. It is also the seed-syllable (piṇḍa) AIṀ, which is the mantric body of the goddess. It is in the centre of the maṇḍala along with Navātman, the sonic body of her consort and so she is said to be 'endowed with the bliss of Navātman'. Emerging out of her transcendent oneness with the male deity on the Śāmbhava plane at the End of the Sixteen, she descends down into the End of the Twelve to assume this form. From here she is ready to descend down again into all the lower spheres of manifestation, which she generates as she does so, transporting down the Command that is transmitted through the lineages of teachers and with it the teachings both oral and in the form of her scriptures.

65. See above, note 2/4cd-6ab.

66. See below 9/52, 17/20-21ab, 59/75–76ab and 65/10.

67. As Speech, the goddess encompasses in her nature the fifty letters of the alphabet. Each of these letters is considered to be an aspect of the male deity and possess an energy, that is an aspect of his consort. `Within the sphere of transmigration’, they are represented as Siddhas and their consorts who, as aspects of their transcendent archetypes, generate spiritual clans (gotra). These are fifty in number, as are the letters of the alphabet. See intro. vol. 2, p. 392 ff..

We arrive at another meaning if we translate the expression gotrapañcāśadbhinnā ('divided into the fifty clans') as 'divided into the fifty of the clan'. The members of a Brahminical clan - gotra - are descendants of a Vedic Ṛṣi who is their single, common ancestor and founder of the clan. Analogously, the founder of this Kaula clan is Ādinātha. This clan, beginning with him and his consort, consists of the eighteen teachers of the Divyaugha, followed by the three Siddhas of the sacred seats and the Nine and Sixteen Nāthas. These, along with the couple (yugma), Śiva and Śakti make fifty (2 + 3 + 18 + 9 + 16 + 2). Admittedly, the texts, as far as I have been able to ascertain, do not refer to this way of reckoning. Even so, it makes good sense and the figure fifty appears to be more than a coincidence.

68. Taraṅgiṇī is the energy of the New Moon (amākalā), identified with Unstruck Sound and the Supreme Light. She is the wave of emanation (sṛṣṭi), which still within the Yoni, 'faces downwards' about to surge down into manifestation. She is the Transmental, Mind beyond Mind (manonmanī) who, as the power of the mind (manovega), is the energy Kuṇḍalinī (see below 24/44-45). In the previous verse we were told that the 'body' (piṇḍa) is Kuṇḍalinī. Here we are told that the 'body' is the form of the goddess. The goddess is, therefore, essentially Kuṇḍalinī and the body of the goddess is made of the fifty letters held together in the syllable AIṀ. Taraṅginī - the Wave - is the flow of the Energy Beyond Mind that moves through this body forming itself into all the energies that constitute it anew each time it does so. In this way she vitalizes and illumines herself and her energies with the light of her Command. As Amā, the first digit of the moon, she is full of the potency that is released at each phase of the emanation and development of the Moon (24/45). At the same time Taraṅgiṇī is the energy of the Full Moon replenished by its perpetual movement through the sixteen parts of the Vidyā (described in 9/31cd-35) that oozes blissful nectar (9/52).

The word 'taraṅgiṇī' has two meanings. In one sense, it is the feminine form of the word 'taraṅga-' meaning a 'wave'. In this sense 'taraṅgiṇī' is a name of the goddess and means 'she who is a wave'. Again, the word 'taraṅgiṇī' can also mean 'one who possesses waves'. In this sense it denotes a body of water with waves. As the god's omnipotent will, the goddess is the Ocean of Knowledge and her limbs are its waves. Unmanifest, she is within Śiva (64/81). In this sense Taraṅgiṇī is the Ocean which is the Yoni, that is, the syllable AIṀ. Divided into the eighteen parts of the Divine Current (see above 2/20-26 and note) (59/74-75ab), she is also the Drop (bindu). The Wave of Knowledge of this Ocean is Bhairava's bliss, his 'nectar' (ibid.). This Ocean, which precedes the waves of mental activity, is the Supreme Plane (65/10). Thus when the energy of the Transmental is 'free of waves' - nistaraṅgā - she is the 'wealth of liberation' (mokṣalakṣmī) (57/2cd-3ab). As such she is the embodiment of the Bliss of Stillness (nirānandā) (2/34ab). This is her condition in the highest liberated state described below (68/71) as: 'Waveless and supremely tranquil, it is the Bliss of Stillness (nirānanda), free of support. It is the Supreme Void, the Great Void, the extremity of the supreme (reality), (in short) the Śāmbhava plane'.

So we can say that Taraṅgiṇī is the condition of the Transmental on the plane of immanence. The passage we are examining says that she 'resides within the world of transmigration'. Indeed, Taraṅgiṇī is present in every single thing. And so, just as she is present in one's own body, she is present in all bodies (17/20-22). Taraṅgiṇī, then, is the answer to the question: what is said to be the body (piṇḍa) that is located in the beginning in each single body (deha) (37)? As the Transmental Will, she is 'in the beginning', as the vitalizing energy of the letters at the very source of emanation.

69. This verse answers the question: how is Śiva (38)? by telling us that he is transcendental. In the previous verses we have seen that the female polarity is the Transmental that contains within herself all the energies of Speech. Moving like a wave through the plane of immanence, she deploys her phonemic energies in countless configurations to generate the universe of Speech. Thus she is all that can be named and is the pole of perpetual transformation. The male polarity is her complimentary opposite. It is the same reality in its transcendental aspect. He is called Śiva although, transcendental and perpetually at rest within his own infinite being, he cannot be identified in phenomenal terms. He is Bhairava, the Great Lord with no name (66/35). His is the transcendental Wheel of the Nameless (anāmacakra) (3/114). Kashmiri Śaivites agree that although not an object of thought and hence nameless (nirnāmaka), (SpPra p. 4) this divine reality is called Śiva by his devotees and is present in all named things (SpKā 29a). It is the Nameless whose name is All-Names. It is man who gives it a name to aid in his quest for enlightenment and endear it to his own heart (ĪPv I p. 9).

From another point of view the god is called Anāma - No-name - because he is pure Unstruck Sound (36/72cd-73ab). As such he resides not only in the transcendental Wheel of the Nameless where the supreme liberated state known as Beyond the Fourth (turīyātīta) is attained. He is also in the Heart as the Gander (haṁsa), the Unstruck Sound of pure vitality, which is the soul not sullied in any way (36/67). This Sound (nāda) is the Nameless uttered by Raudrī, that is, Kuṇḍalinī, the energy that emerges from the Plane of Repose (see next verse) in Suṣumṇā, the middle channel of the breath between the channels Iḍā and Piṅgalā (36/90–92).

Like the god, the goddess is also called the Nameless (anāmā) (KMT 6/100c-101b) when she is in her supreme transcendental abode (3/123), the Sphere of the Nameless (anāmāmaṇḍala), residing there as pure consciousness (13/138). There the adept finally attains the accomplishment of her Command (ājñāsiddhi) (7/49-50ab) led there by that same energy along Suṣumṇā, the Path of the Nameless (anāmāpatha) that leads to transcendence (13/125cd-126ab). Then from there, once all has been dissolved away by the upward course towards transcendence, the vitalizing nectar flows down to consecrate the aspirant into the liberated state (13/136). Thus she is Kuṇḍalinī the supreme energy (parā kalā, śakti) who unfolds into countless energies and transports the current of this nectar (amṛtavāhinī) (14/104cd-105). Bhairava's energy of desire (24/25), the supreme lunar energy (amā) (24/26) consisting of consciousness, she resides in the Point (bindu) in the centre of the maṇḍala.

70. Rigopoulos (2000: 80 n. 17) explains: 'Piṅgalā, literally 'yellow', 'gold-coloured'. One of the three channels of the life force. It is situated to the right of the central conduit (suṣumṇānāḍī) and terminates in the right nostril. The Piṅgalā channel is associated with sūrya [the Sun] and is responsible for heating the body. Iḍā, literally 'refreshment', 'comfort'. It is situated to the left of Suṣumṇānāḍī. The Iḍānāḍī is generally thought to commence in the 'bulb' (kanda) and to extend to the left nostril. It coils around the central channel and is associated with the cooling energy of the moon.' The main channels of the vital breath (nāḍī) in the body, including these three, are described in the notes to 40/31cd–34ab below.

71. These lines answer the question: what is the nature of the Plane of Repose in the middle of the fire (39)? The fire to which this question alludes is Saṁvartā. This fire is said to be below the cosmic ocean in which the universe floats. It warms and sustains the universe up to the end of a cosmic cycle when it flares up and consumes it. The same fire is said to burn in the middle of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (1/1b) located both at the base and the apex of Suṣumṇā. Emerging from the transcendent, formless god as his divine, creative will (icchā) identified with the Transmental (unmanī), this divine Fire is Kuṇḍalinī. In the form of a Flame (śikhā) (see below note to 7/51cd-52ab) she ascends along Suṣumṇā, the path that leads to Śiva.

Resting in the centre, the goddess is the Mother who is the supreme Plane of Repose (5/40-41ab). The Plane of Repose is the power of bliss that, as we have seen, is also said to be in the middle between the inhaled and exhaled breaths that travel along the channels of Iḍā and Piṅgala (2/4cd–6ab). In this aspect, the goddess is the hyposthesis of the supreme plane of existence (bhūmikā). Reality is not a 'thing' not even an infinite 'thing'. It is the supreme condition or plane of existence the goddess embodies. Here this Plane is called the Plane of Repose. Elsewhere the goddess is called the Plane of Nirvāṇa (3/63-64ab). She is the Plane of the Knowledge of Consciousness (vijñānajñānabhūmikā) that bestows both worldly benefits and liberation (below 36/1-2), and Śāmbhavī, the Plane of Knowledge (jñānabhūmikā) (57/56). As Śiva's Command within Śiva, She is the Plane of Śiva's Consciousness (śivavijñānabhūmikā) (63/55cd). Thus she is Kaulinī, the Plane of Knowledge of the Siddhas, the Lords of Kula (kulanātha) (24/60, 29/29). By the power of the Command of this Plane (bhūmikājñā), the goddess manifests in each Age (3/69). Accordingly, the goddess is not just the Plane of Repose (5/40), she is the Supreme Plane of Repose of the Command and of the sacred authority it bestows (Mālinīstava line 125). The expansion between transcendental Śiva above and his energy - Śakti - below is the Middle Plane (madhyabhūmikā), the blissful repose (viśrāma) in the sphere of the Heart (hṛdi maṇḍale) (19/85). The following passage from the YKh (1) (34/103-105ab) explains how the goddess is this supreme plane (bhūmikā) of realisation:

> Pulsating, she is unconditioned. (She is) Śiva's energy (śāmbhavā) on the great Śāmbhava (plane). She is the awareness of the bliss of the essential nature (svabhāva) (of all things) and is free of the Principles (tattva) and the qualities (guṇa). She resides within the plane of the unsupported and is the plane of existence (bhūmikā) of the Supreme Goddess (Parameśvarī). Perpetually merged within the centre of the maṇḍala, she is established in the state of the Transmental (unmanatva). Free of inhalation and exhalation, she certainly bestows liberation.

lolībhūtā [k: līlā-; gh: nīlā-; ṅ: lolā-] na [k, g, gh, ṅ: ma] vicchinnā [k, gh, ṅ: vachinnā] mahāśāmbhavaśāṁbhavī [k, gh, ṅ: mahāsāṁbhavasāṁbhavaṁ; g: -sāmbhavam] |
*guṇatattvavinirmuktā [g: guṇavanta-] svabhāvānandacetasā [gh: svabhā * nanda-]* ||
anāśrayapadāntasthā bhūmikā pārameśvarī |
maṇḍalānte sadā līnā unmanatve vyavasthitā ||
*śvāsocchvāsavinirmuktā [kn ṅ: śvāsochāsavinirmukto; g: śvāsaucchāsavinirmuktā; gh: -vinir * *] muktidā [g: bhukti ] sā na saṁśayaḥ [gh: -ya] |

See also notes to 1/4a and 2/4cd-6ab.

72. In this context Śiva's Path is Suṣumṇā, the central psychic nerve. But see below, note to 6/31-33ab.

73. See above note to 2/3cd–4ab.

74. Kubjikā's visualized form and her six faces (29/45-50) are described in chapter twenty-nine. The faces represent six goddesses that have fused into the goddess's being to become six alternative identities of the one goddess who is six-fold (3/70-1). In this context the goddesses of her faces are the aspects she assumes in the six Wheels through which she rises and descends.

75. These two verses answer the question: what is the realisation that is one's own authority (40)? To which the answer is, basically, the Vidyā of the goddess.

76. The awakening and rise of Kuṇḍalinī that takes place in the course of initiation and then throughout the initiate's journey to liberation is attended by numerous minor and major signs of attainment (see, for example, below 13/101cd-102 where eleven signs are listed). These include a number of outwardly visible signs of the 'descent of power' (śaktipāta) and grace (anugraha) that attend the transmission and penetration of the Command (ājñāsaṁkramaṇa) with which the initiate is blessed on these occasions due to the penetration (āveśa) of the deity and its power (see chapter 1, p. 50 ff). These begin with bodily tremours that grow in intensity until the initiate convulses so intensely that he finally falls to the ground outwardly unconscious stiff 'like a dry piece of wood or stone' (kāṣṭhāpāṣāṇavat). There are also inner signs. At first these are subtle like the feeling that ants are crawling on the skin (pipīlikāsparśa) in the region of the Cavity of Brahmā on the crown of the head and become progressively more intense until the adept experiences the radiant, pulsing bliss of the liberated state. At the same time, as he progresses, he acquires a vast range of magical and yogic powers that are also considered in this perspective to be signs of attainment. Here we are told that the Vidyā, which is the sonic form of the goddess who is the supreme energy and the Command, gives rise to these manifold signs of attainment. Similarly below we read that the Vidyā is 'the power to (both) grace and restrain that (has as its) sign of attainment (pratyaya) such (powers as the capacity to) burst trees apart and the like' (9/56) and that 'the Vidyā (itself) is its own sign of attainment' (9/57).

77. The goddess is not uncommonly addressed in our text as if she were the god. Below in 16/71d for example, the goddess is similarly addressed as the 'lord of the universe' (jagatpati). Other examples are the appellations prabhuḥ and svāmin – both meaning 'lord' - that are commonly applied to Kubjikā (for the former see 4/38, 5/28d, 5/40c etc and the latter 5/41a and 8/1) or even śrīmat – 'sir' (in 3/45b see note to the Sanskrit text there for more references). The speaker in the KuKh is the goddess who replies to the questions of the god. In other Tantras it is often the other way around. When the redactor incorporates passages from such sources into his text he must alter the feminine vocatives the god uses to address the goddess to their masculine equivalents. In most cases, this entails small changes, but in others more substantial ones are required. The redactor does sometimes take the trouble to do this, but he often simply changes the gender of a vocative that applies better to a female than a male, thus creating a strange linguistic anomaly. For example, the male equivalent of the vocative varārohe - 'fair-hipped lady' - does not work. The texts repeatedly stress that just as at times the god teaches the goddess, she may also be his teacher. When a passage is drawn from a Tantra in which the god is the speaker and inserted in this text in which it is the goddess who is speaking this reversal quite literally takes place. Thus, the shift from the male to the female polarity that is perceptable throughout the history of the many Tantric traditions and, indeed, commonly in the many other forms of Hinduism is represented concretely in this way.

However, in some cases, such as this one, the use of what would normally be male vocatives when addressing the goddess is intentional. This strange change of gender serves to represent the goddess as the equal of her male counterpart. Our text repeatedly stresses that the goddess is both female and male even as her deeper metaphysical identity is beyond gender. Of course, the same considerations apply to the god as well (cf. comm. on TĀ 3/66). But although polarities are ultimately transcended, they are also essential and as such maintained. They not only account for the creation of the world and the entire cosmic process, they also make the transmission of the teachings possible. So even though they are preserved, their relative status is maintained by this liability to reversal.

78. The five Principles are the five gross elements to which correspond the Five Praṇavas. See intro. vol. 1, p. 639.

79. These verses answer the question: who is the one here who has emanated (this) (41)?

80. We are told below in 51/29cd-30 that the Sequence of the Abyss (gahvarakrama) ranges from Kālāgni up to Nātha. The Sequence of the Abyss is the series of fifty letters of the alphabet projected into a triangular grid called the Meruprastāra (concerning which see below 8/1-32) that represents the goddess's Yoni. Kālāgni is KṢa, the last letter of the alphabet, so Śiva must be A. The letter A is normally linked to Śrīkaṇṭha who is a form of Śiva. Although there can be no doubt that this is what is meant here, the letters are normally linked to Bhairavas or Siddhas. Each of them resides in his own space within the triangular grid, but this is usually said to be a sacred seat (pīṭha), not a world (see below 6/212cd-219ab and 51/15cd-21). However, in one place it is clear that the fifty worlds also correspond to the letters. After describing how the letters are projected into the god's body, the goddess is said to be the womb of all the worlds from Kālāgni to Śiva (44/47) thus clearly implying that they correspond to the letters. The layout of the universe into fifty worlds, although not common, is known to the Kubjikā Tantras. According to YKh (1) (9/89cd) the adept who recites the mantra of Śikhānātha, a form of Svacchanda Bhairava, 'wanders over the entire earth that extends up to the end of the fifty worlds' (vicareta mahīṁ sarvāṁ pañcāśadbhuvanāntikām). Below (33/158) the Path of the Worlds is said to extend from the world of Kāla to that of Śiva. Perhaps these are related to the fifty Principles ranging from Ananta to Sadāśiva listed in chapter 66.

81. I suppose that the universe of four kinds is the multitude of four kinds of living beings namely, those born of seeds, sweat, eggs and wombs. See above note to 2/14.

82. The goddess not only contains the worlds of the letters, she also abides in the midst of them. From there, assuming their form, she initially emanates them directly into the transcendental, Śāmbhava sphere. Then she assumes the form of the energies from which emanate the other three spheres of manifestation on the immanent level. These three correspond to the goddess's qualities of sattva, rajas and tamas. The first - sattva - corresponds to the sphere of the Śiva Principle (śivatattva). This consists only of Śiva. The second - rajas - corresponds to the sphere of the Principle of Knowledge that contains the four Pure Principles - Śakti, Sadāśiva, Īśvara and Śuddhavidyā. The third - tamas - corresponds to the sphere of the Principle of the Self (ātmatattva) that contains the remaining 31 principles from Māyā to Earth. And so we read in YKh (1) (9/101-102ab):

If one worships the Śiva Principle, one attains the sāttvika plane. Whoever is established in the Principle of Knowledge is impelled by rājasa and the one established here in the Principle of the Self, by tāmasa. One should operate with these three types.

pūjayec chivatattvaṁ [all MSs: pūjaya chivatatvas] tu sātvikaṁ [k, kh: śātvikaṁ; gh: śāṁtvikaṁ] tu padaṁ labhet [kh: labhait] |
vidyātattvasthitaḥ [k, kh, gh: vidyātasthitaḥ; ṅ: vidyātatva-] kaścid [ṅ: kaścit] rājasena [k: -bhena; kh: -bhaina; gh: -mena] pravartate ||
*tāmasātrātmatattvasthaḥ [k, kh, gh: tāmasatrā- -sthaṁ; ṅ: * * * nātmatatvastha] tribhir bhedaistu [kh: -destu; ṅ: garbhaṁdaistu] saṁcaret [k, kh, gh: saṁcaṁcet]* |

Possessing these three qualities, the goddess is implicitly identified with Nature (prakṛti) and 'abides in the form of emanation'. This includes the entire phenomenal, manifest world, as well as the spiritual principles beyond it integrated into this triad as the focus of the contemplation, integration and assimilation of all the thirty-six principles.

83. See intro. vol. 1, p. 383.

84. These verses answer the questions: how is Bhairava (42)? and who is said to be Kaulīśa (43)?

85. This passage is typical of several found in the Tantras that explain Bhairava's nature by means of didactic (nirvacana), rather than astrictly philological etymology of his name. There are several similar etymologies in the commentary on the Saṁvartāsūtra in the ŚM. The following passage drawn from there explains how Bhairava is, as the Saṁvartāsūtra declares, 'the best of teachers' (above 1/4d). Suggesting that his name is derived from the root bhṛ in the sense of 'sustaining'. Bhairava is the god who, inaccessible to phenomenal consciousness, sustains the existence of all things even as his transcendental excellence makes him the most excellent of all teachers:

What is Bhairava? He is said to be Bhairava because he sustains (bharaṇāt) and fills (āpūraṇāt) (all things). The one who abides as the pervader (of all things)* is indeed Bhairava. You (all) should bow to him. (He is) the 'best of teachers'. He is the best, most excellent of the teachers (who taught) Brahmā and the rest (of the gods). Again, how is he? (He is) Bhairava by whom (the universe) from Brahmā down to the (inert) pillar is sustained (bhṛta). Bhairava is that (reality) which is devoid of (any) perception of objectivity (prakāśyopalabdhi) by means of consciousness, (whether) subtle or gross. Bhairava (therefore is the one into whom) no one can enter. (In this way his) status as the teacher (gurutva) of all has been established. Thus it is said that he is 'the best of teachers'.

* MS Ṅ: abides as the pervader and the pervaded (vyāpyavyāpaktvena saṁsthitaḥ)

*bhairava iti kiṁ [ṅ: itiṁ *] | bharaṇād āpūrṇād [ṅ: + taṁ] bhairava ucyate [g, c: bhairavocyate; ṅ: bhairavam ucyate; ch: bhairavīcya *] | [ṅ: + vyāpya-] vyāpakatvena [kh:-tvenaḥ] sthitaḥ [ṅ: saṁsthitaḥ] sa eva [kh: tam eva] bhairavas taṁ [kh, c: bhairavaṁ taṁ; ṅ: bhairavo vyākhyāyate] namata [k, kh, g, gh, c: namataḥ] | gurūṇāṁ varaṁ śreṣṭhaṁ [ṅ, ch: śreṣṭaṁ] brahmādīnāṁ iti guruvaram || punar api kathaṁ bhūtam bhairavaṁ | bhṛtaṁ [k, gh: bhūtaṁ; kh: bhutaṁ] yena ābrahmastambhaparyantam [k, kh, gh, ch: -staṁva-; g: -snaṁvaparjantaṁ; c: * * * staṁvaparyyaṁta] | sthūlasūkṣmacaitanyena [g, ṅ:-sūkṣmā-; gh: * * * kṣma-] prakāśyopalabdhir yasya [kh: aprakāśyopalavdhi yyasya; g, gh: prakāsyopalabdhi yatra; ṅ: aprakāśyopalavdher yasya; c: aprakāśyopalavdhir yatra; ch: prakāmmopalavdhi yatra] nāsti tad bhairavam ucyate | na kenāpi praveśo labhyate [gh: labhyaṁte] sa bhairavaḥ | gurutvaṁ sarvasya [kh: sarva] pratipāditam || tenāsau [c: tenosau] guruvara iti kathyate ||* (ŚM MS G fl. 9b)

Further ahead in the same commentary Bhairava's name is derived from three roots - bhṛ, ram and vam in the sense of sustaining, sporting and emitting, respectively. ŚM 1/115 is quoted in the BB commentary on line 18 of the Mālinīstava in chapter four below. See the notes to the Sanskrit text. Here is the passage:

What is Bhairava? Bhairava is the one whose nature is to sustain (bharaṇa), sport (ramaṇa) and emit (vamana). He fills (bharati) with nectar, sports (ramate) with (his own) energy and emits (vamate) the essence of knowledge. Thus he is called Bhairava.

He is called Bhairava because the entire universe is pervaded (vyāpita by him) and he is the one who sports (ramate) in the Supreme Sky and emits (vamate) the pervasion of (the energy) who moves in the Void (of consciousness) (Khecarī).

O beloved, this is Bhairava because he resides in the middle of the fire of Saṁvartā and the universe is pervaded (by him) and (because it is) where the (divine) light arises.

He is called Bhairava because (he is) where the supreme universe has arisen and there dissolves away (and because it is) where the supreme pervasion is located.

He is said to be Bhairava also because (he is the one who) is in the middle of the fire of Saṁvartā and he resides within the emanation (generated by) Saṁvartā.

bhairava iti kim | bharaṇaramaṇavamanātmakaś ceti [kh: -kāś ceti; g: haraṇaracaṇa-;] bhairavaḥ [g: bhairava] |
bharaty amṛtarūpeṇa ramate śaktinā saha |
vamate jñānasadbhāvaṁ bhairavas [g: bhairavaṁ] tena cocyate ||
vyāpitaṁ tu jagat sarvaṁ parākāśe ramet tu [g: rameti] yaḥ [kh: ya] |
vamate khecarīvyāptiṁ [k: khecarīṁ-; kh g: -vyāpti] bhairavas [k: bhairavaṁ] tena cocyate ||
saṁvartānalamadhyasthaṁ [k, kh: saṁvartāmala-] vyāptibhūtaṁ carācaram | [this and the following line are found only in MSs G,]
prakāśotpadyate yatra tenedaṁ bhairavaṁ priye ||
yatrotpannaṁ paraṁ viśvaṁ layabhūtaṁ tu [k: layībhūtaṁ ca; kh: layaṁ bhūtaṁ tu] tatra [k: yatra; gh: tatrai] vai |
yatrasthā paramā vyāptir [kh g: vyāpti-] bhairavas tena cocyate ||
samvartānalamadhyasthaḥ [kh, g: -sthaṁ] samvartānalasaṁsthitaḥ [kh, g: -sthitaṁ] |
saṁvartāsṛṣṭirūpastho [k: saṁvartta-; kh, g: -sthaṁ] bhairavas tena cocyate || ŚM 1/115-119.

Abhinava proposses most of these etymologies along with others in his Tantrāloka (TĀ 1/96-100ab; see Dyczkowski 1988: 7). Abhinava concludes saying that: ‘such are the etymologies by which the masters praise Bhairava in the scripture' (ibid. 1/100cd). Indeed, it does appear that they are standard etymologies adopted by many schools who adapt them to their perspectives. In addition, the ŚM emphasizes Bhairava's presence within the sacred fire Saṁvartā, a form of the goddess considered to be particularly important in the Kubjikā Tantras. Similarly, Abhinava's etymologies contain features that indicate that his sources where related to the Kashmiri Kālīkrama. This is evident in the following two derivations which suggest Bhairava's association with time and its assimilation into timeless consciousness - metaphysical and soteriological perspectives typical of the Kālīkrama: ‘He is manifest in the minds of those who delight in the contemplation which devours time those, that is, who exhaust the principle of time that impells the constellations’ (TĀ 1/98). Again Bhairava is: ‘(the master) of the internal and external group of four (powers) starting with those that wonder in the Sky (of consciousness)’ (ibid. 1/99-100ab). The four groups of powers are those of Khecarī, Gocarī, Dikcarī and Bhūcarī. According to the Kashmiri Kālīkrama, these are the energies of the individual Self, the inner mental organ, the senses and the objects of the senses, respectively (see Dyczkowski 1987: 129 ff.). Bhairava is the lord of those powers whose shouting (ravaṇa) instils fear (bhī) in the souls in bondage.

86. The Sanskrit reads: kulakaulāntamadhyastham, which may also be translated '(he is) in the centre within Kulakaula'. Concerning Kula and Kaula see intro. vol. 2, p. 325 ff.. A passage is quoted there from YKh (1). This explains that Akula is the omnipresent Lord and that it is where Kula dissolves away. Kaula is the Unmanifest. The plane in the middle of Kula and Kaula is in the abode of the triple energy of Kula (i.e. the energies of will, knowledge and action).

87. It is hard to understand what purpose this verse serves here. The last question asked in chapter one about the Saṁvartāsūtra concerns Kaulīśa who is mentioned at the end of the sūtra. The following verse after the sūtra apparently summerizes the two essential points made in the sūtra. One is the nature of the maṇḍala, which is said to be Bhairava. The other concerns the transmission of the teachings, which is said there to be two-fold - divine and human. The former is the Divine Current (see above 2/20-26). The latter begins with the three Siddhas (above 2/28) MI (Mitranātha), Ṣa (Ṣaṣṭhanātha) and O (Oḍḍīśanātha) who taught the three transmissions (krama) of the Child, Youth and Aged, respectively. Presumably, this verse seeks to integrate the two into four transmissions by including the Divine Current. This is identified with the Transmission of the Skyfarers (khecarakrama), which is the Śāmbhava Transmission.

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER THREE

1. This and the following three lines are repeated in all the MSs below as 3/30-31ab. The variants of that version (called B) are in the notes. घ्, च्, छ् and B घ्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच; missing in MSs झ् and ट् of B. 2. क्, ग्: –पर।

3. ग्, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ञ्: मूर्तो; B: बिम्बे। 4. B घ्, छ्, झ्: –मण्डल–; ञ्: मेरु * * * * (?) र्धनि। 5. झ्: तूष्णी * *?; all other MSs except ङ्, च्: तूष्णी तत्रगुहा–। The accepted reading agrees with B.

6. All MSs: त्रिरस्कं। त्र्यस्त्रम्, qualifying आश्रमम्, is the correct form but is one syllable too short for the metre. This emendation agrees with the reading in B. See below, note to 3/119d. 7. क्, ख्, ज्, ट्: –स्कंदा–। 8. All MSs: –परिवृतं। This emendation fits the metre and is supported by the reading in B.

9. ग्, ङ्, छ्, ञ्: तुरश्रं; all other MSs: तुरस्त्रं।

10. ङ्: –विस्तर; ञ्: –विस्तंरं; ट्: सतयोजन–। The correct form would be –विस्तृतम्। One could also posit an implied connecting pronoun such as तस्य.

11. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्, ट्: सिला; ङ्: लीला। 12. ङ्, च्: सप्त–; ञ्: –सम * भा। This line recurs below as 3/34cd. 13. घ्, छ्: –मुक्त–; झ्: –प्रभालै–; ञ् –मुक्ता * * (?) लैस्तु। 14. ख्, च्: वतुला–। 15. ञ्: षडशिभिस्तु।

16. ञ्: (?); all other MSs: योजना। 17. ङ्: विस्मरं।

18. ञ्: अध * * (?)। 19. ग्, घ्, छ्, ट्: सुद्ध–; ञ्: * * * (?) टिकनिर्मलं।

20. झ्: तोरणद्वयं–; ञ्: तोर * द्वय–। 21. ङ्, ग्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: व।

22. क्: –मंडलाकारं; घ्, च्: –मंडलाभासं; ङ्: मंडलावालं; झ्: मण्डवासं।

23. क्: –रलंकृतं; घ्: –ते। 'M' is added for the metre between the components of this bahuvrīhi compound. See below, note to 3/21b.

24. क्, ख्, ग्: –सान्निक–; ञ्: महासान्नि * * * * (?)। IM 6 + 7.

25. ञ्: आदिकादिसमा * * (?)। 26. ञ्: (?)।

27. क्: य। Concerning this deviant form, see above, note to 1/5d.

28. ट्: सतार्धकै। 29. क्, ख्: मेखलात्रयय–; ट्: मेखल–।

30. M → N. See below, 3/49a. This same expression appears again below in 31/93b. 31. ज्: राजनं।

32. झ्, ट्: सूभ्रं; all other MSs except ङ्, च्: सूत्रं। The compound राजतसुभ्रम् has been broken up for the metre. 33. घ्: शतार्कवेपु–; च्: –वपुव्रतम्; ट्: सतार्क–। The noun वपुस् has been thematized to make the fifth syllable short. Thematization of consonant stems occurs frequently, generally, as is usually the case with deviant forms, in order to make adjustments for the metre.

34. क्: –नै:; ख्: ––मा:।

35. क्: –विंशैस्तु; ञ्: –विंसैव; ट्: –विसैव। –विंशतिरेव would be correct. Throughout this text and in the Sanskrit of the early Tantras in general, the cardinals विंशतिः, त्रिंशत्, चत्वारिंशत्, and पञ्चाशत् frequently assume the form of their corresponding ordinals namely, विंशः, त्रिंशः, चत्वारिंशः and पञ्चाशः, respectively. Moreover, as has happened here, they may also drop their endings. Examples in this text are found in: 8/13c, 9/67c, 11/2b, 50d, 68bc, 12/16a, 13/40b, 42b, 20/4b, 36/97b, 103c, 46/153c, 154a, 226d, 231c, 232a, 48/80d, 90a, 57/91a, 58/56a, 90c, 96d, 59/42c, 60/60b, 100a, 62/63d, 63/55b, 55c, 64/31d. The form –विंशत्, apart from the expression चतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहिता found in the colophons and elsewhere, appears in 38/9b, 26c, 39/46c, 40/121c, 42/10a, 45/36b, 53b and 67/23b. See also note to the colophon of chapter one and to 7/7c. Conversely, although we find the regular form चत्वारिंशत् four times (see 27/67a, 46/220a, 46/227b and 68/18d), we also find the form चत्वारिंशतिः. See line 103 of the Mālinīstava in chapter four and 23/11d, 12b, and 12d). Moreover, the peculiar adjectival form चत्वारिंशती is attested in four places (see 9/68a, 13/151b, 68/64d and 68/80a). It also possibly appears in 20/18c but there it functions as an ordinal. Conversely, the ordinal replaces the cardinal in at least one place (see 20/4b). Finally, we note the peculiar ordinal चारिंश– which replaces चत्वारिंश– to save a syllabe for the metre in four places (see 23/11c, 12a, 13a and 13c). Concerning पञ्चाशत् see below note 6/47b.

36. ञ्: तन्मध्येखण्ड * * * (?)।

37. क्: निशाकार–; च्: निराकरा–; ञ्: निशा * * * * * * (?); ट्: निसा–. IM 6 + 7.

38. क्, ख्, च्, ज्, ञ् ट्: कुलकौलिकं; all other MSs: कुलकालिकम्।

39. ज्, ञ्, ट्: तदर्द्धं; all other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: तदार्द्धं।

40. Normally आत्मानम् is the acc. sing. of the word आत्मन् but here it functions as an adjective agreeing with रविमण्डलम्. This deviant neuter form of आत्मन् recurs throughout this text. See 3/51c, 5/23c, 7/11b, 8/117b, 14/106a, 18/74c, 19/10c, 19/21d, 76d, 79b, 20/20a, 24/106b, 26/24a, 32a, 28/76c, 31/40a, 39/90a, 44/10c, 23b, 54/101d, 59/24a, 32d, 60/27d, 84a, 61/43a, 46a, 63/56a, 80a, 83c, 91b, 64/2c, 64/7 and 66/37c. Twice, at least, this deviant form appears in a compound namely, in 59/78d (आत्मानभेदतः) and in 30/66d (सा चात्मानवेधा स्मृता). In the great majority of cases one encounters the nominative of this deviant form. Occasionally, however, we notice other derivations. The genitive आत्मनस्य replaces आत्मनः (33/98b) and there is one instance of the peculiar instrumental नवात्मानेन (30/23d). In three places महात्मानम् analogously replaces the regular nom. sing. महात्मा (see 24/28c, 47/4c, and 57/14a). Similarly, we find परमात्मा → परात्मानम् (once in 58/38c) and नवात्मा → नवात्मानम् (twice in 45/48c and 52/8c). Finally, an indication of the extent to which metrical considerations guide the formation of these deviations is testified by the reversal of a required acc. आत्मानम् to the nom. form आत्मा in two places for the sake of the metre (34/22c and 48/73a).

41. In the first thirty chapters of our text this word occurs in nine forms namely: ओलि– (fortytwo times), उलि– (nine times), ओली (once - 7/93a), उली (twice 7/94a and 7/94d), ओलिक– (two times without change of meaning - 28/45d, 72d – and once meaning 'member of the tradition' in 7/79b), उलिक– (twice - 28/45d, 72d), उलिका– (once – 24/101d), औलि– (once - 24/97a) and the form ओल्या/उल्या (once - 28/70c) derived from ओली/उली (see note to 2/22b). Clearly, the first of these form is the most regular and frequent. But note that in the first thirty chapters of our text there is no example of augmentation of the initial vowel to औलि– which would normally be brought about by sandhi. MSs घ् and छ् do show this change a couple of times (28/45d, 46d). In such cases this may be explained by positing the original form as उलि– (cf. the word ओघ/उघ– discussed in note to 1/5a above). Conversely, it is possible that if we admit a consistant irregularity of the initial vowel sandhi of the word ओलि– that उलि– is derived from it by conceiving it to be the original form of the word. This is not unlikely. The word ओलि– stands independently in very many cases. Moreover, the etymology of the word is best derived from this form rather than उलि–. Generally, ओलि– is declined as are feminine nouns with stems ending in short `i'. Ocassionally, we may distinguish an original ओली. Thus, for example, the loc. plural ओलिषु appears not less than four times in the first fifteen chapters (3/33d, 11/63d, 15/16d, 26b) whereas ओलीषु occurs just once in the first thirty (28/94d). Some occurences are not exactly definable. For example, मध्यमोल्याम् (e.g. 7/78c) may be the locative of either मध्यमोलिः or मध्यमोली. Finally, note that the word ओलि– and its permutations are particularly free to be incorporated into compounds not only without being subject to sandhi but also with a preceding hiatus. e.g. ज्येष्ठ – ओली (7/92a), स्व – ओल्याम् (27/51b also 27/66a) and ज्येष्ठ – ओलिक्रमागतम् (28/3b); for other examples see 28/41d and 28/43c.

42. All MSs: गुरु। 43. झ्: ज्येष्ठ * * * *लं; ख्: ज्येष्ठं–। A plural ending is required here. See below, note to 5/46d. 44. All MSs: अदिव्यं।

45. क्, ख्, ज्, झ्, ट्: खेचरं–; ञ्: खेचरं * * (?)। 46. ञ्: (?)।

47. ञ्: (?)। 48. Here the noun वेश्मन् (N) has here been thematized and continues to be treated as neuter. Out of the eight times this word occurs in this text it is in its common non-thematic form only three times (7/1a –वेश्म and वेश्मनि in 7/36b and 18/68b). The deviant thematic form occurs here and in 3/56a and 51/18d and the genitive वेश्मस्य in 3/60a and 46/75b. The regular form of the genitive does not occur in this text.

49. ञ्: (?)। This may be considered to be a case of double sandhi between इति and the deviant form 'पुर्य–' or else as an instance of the feminine deviant पुर्या. Cf. below, 3/56b. In 35/36a and 56/1d we find चन्द्रपूर्येति. See above, note to 1/11c.

Note also that this line appears again below as 3/56ab.

50. झ्: प्रथमेद?। We may consider this deviant construction to be a pseudo compound or else could understand this to be a case of sandhi with the preceding word that has lost its ending as is the case with the expression चन्द्रपुर्येति in the previous line (cf. मुद्राकूटेति in 58/39a). This kind of irregular conjunction between a word (in this case an adjective, but it may also be a noun or pronoun) with the pronoun इदम् is quite common in this text, appearing here not less than thirty-eight times. For other examples, see 3/154d, 6/151d, 7/48a, 7/98c, and 8/53c. It is also found in the KMT (for example मण्डलेदम् in 1/1d) and the other Tantras of the Kubjikā corpus. It is also attested in Tantras of other schools, for example the TS which is a major source for the KuKh and the Kubjikā corpus as a whole. In one place below (40/123d) we find the expression सर्वेदम् whereas in the TS, which is the original source, we read: सर्वे तं. Similarly, below we find: सर्वेदं मातृकोद्भवम् (40/125d) which in the TS is मातृकादेहसंभवम्. At first sight this suggests that this peculiar, deviant construction is not known to the TS but this is not the case. It does appear there, although it is considerably less common than in our text. Moreover, out of just six instances five are found in chapter 23 and the only other one is in chapter 28. This may well be because chapter 23 was written by a different person whose Sanskrit allowed greater liberties than that of the author(s) of the rest of the text. We notice the same kind of inconsistancies in the appearance of deviant forms in Tantric texts as a whole, including the texts of the Kubjikā corpus. 51. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.

52. घ्: एक: पादस्–; all other MSs: एकपादस्–; झ्: –पादस्ति–; all other MSs except घ्: एक:–। 53. All MSs: त्रिशक्तिस्तु। There can be no doubt that this and the previous compound are adjectives qualifying मण्डलम् with which the following bahuvrīhi compound agrees. However, the reading of the MSs – एकपादस्त्रिशक्तिस्तु – fits the metre, whereas the emendation entails an irregular short seventh syllable. One is therefore in doubt as to whether one should leave the reading, which is supported by virtually all the MSs, as it is and consider this to be a case of irregular concord.

54. Here is another instance of –yā replacing the final long `i' of the feminine. Cf. 2/34d and see note to 2/22b.

55. All MSs except क्: कृष्ण–। 56. ञ्: सिंहरू * (?)।

57. झ्: आधो–; ञ्: (?)मुखी। 58. पृच्छति is the regular form of the present
3rd person singular present of प्रच्छ् (6P). The present, imperative, and optative tenses are especially preferred by the author(s) of this Tantra. Of course, this has to do with the nature of the subjects presented in Tantric texts, which generally do not require much narration. Even so, it is occasionally necessary, as in this and the following three chapters, to narrate significant mythical events. We may briefly

note here the use of tense in these chapters. Apart from past passive participles, that are very common, we do come across verbs used in past and future tenses but when they are required they are generally replaced by the present and, occasionally the optative. The most common example is, of course, the virtually invariable use, as in most Tantric texts, of the perfect of वच् – उवाच in the standard expression 'the god or the goddess spoke' - to introduce chapters and sections of the text. The four times a verb is conjugated in a past tense in these three chapters, it is in the imperfect (see 3/84c, 5/8a, 6/44c, 6/87b and 6/119d). Although Pāṇinian Sanskrit allows for the use of the present to denote past action, if that took place in the recent past, a deviant extension of this option takes place here in the case we are examining, as in most others in this text. Thus in these three chapters, the present tense is used with a past sense at least nineteen times (see 3/72d, 75c, 79d, 82b, 88a, 161c, 5/59cd, 71d, 6/6b, 7b, 12c, 45ab (x 2), 47c, 82c, 88d, 127c, 129d, 134) and the optative is used in this way not less than five times (see 5/63b and 6/92d, 131a, 133d, 224b), perhaps six (see 3/83c). Similarly, we find that a verb in the future tense appears nine times (see 6/8d, 138b, 173a (passive), 177a, 185d, 186a, 196d, 197d, 200d), otherwise a present tense is used denote future action five times (see 4/8b, 17b, 29d, 5/61a, 6/172b, 200b) and optative once (see 6/173d). Generally, the present and optative maintain their distinctive identities but they do sometimes overlap. Thus we find one example in these three chapters of a passive optative replacing the present (see 3/143ab).

The use of the present and the optative signifies, it seems, that events that occured in a mythical past or will occur in the future actually take place in a perpetual present. It is as if these events, although past, happen all the time now. All that happened to the god or the goddess, what they did or how they were are aspects of how they are. For those bound by the transitoriness of temporality this indescribable property of the semper eternum of the perpetual present is implicitely indicated by the use of the present and, occasionally by the optative, which function as a sort of 'tenseless tense'. The same effect is achieved by the absence of a marker of tense. In line 6/32cd, for example, we read that the goddess is in a place for three hundred divine years: दिव्यवर्षशतास्त्रीणि देवी तत्र व्यवस्थिता. The context tells us that, in temporal terms, she was in that place for that period of time sometime in the past but there is no direct indication of this having taken place in the past. The goddess IS there for three hundred years.

59. Irregular sandhi will henceforth be indicated as `IS'.

60. All MSs: –शक्ते। Cf. 3/59b. 61. झ्: मध्ये–; all other MSs except क्, ख्: मध्यलिङ्ग–। 62. क्, ख्, झ्: भयोदिते; all othere MSs: भयादिते। A variant of this line is found below as 3/59ab. The first quarter there reads: गृहे चन्द्रपुरे शाक्ते. The second quarter reads as does the emended text here.

63. ख्: –मायांतं। M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.

64. ख्: तिष्टते; च्: तिष्ठ। The root स्था should invariably be 1P unless it means `to resort or go to (as an umpire), be guided by the advice of, or to offer oneself to (for sexual embrace); stand as a prostitute (with dative)' (Apte, p.1007). However, in this and in Tantric texts in general it is commonly treated as an ātmanepada verb. It appears in this form at least nine times in the first thirty-five chapters of this text (3/59c, 142c, 6/88d, 89c, 14/66a, 107a, 31/104d, and 33/180d), whereas the regular form appears fourteen times. Note that this change commonly takes place even when the metre doesn't require it.

65. क्, ख्, झ्: –भृणाम्; ङ्: गुरुस्मृत; all other MSs: –तृणाम्।

66. ज्, झ्: –कौलि उवाच; ञ्: श्रीकौ * * * (?)च।

67. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.

68. Missing in all MSs except क्, घ्, च् and छ्। All three versions of the mūlasūtra begin in this way (see below 26/7c, 38/2a, 42/3a). This important sūtra must have been very well known and so we find this quarter is repeated again in 3/63a and 6/2a. 69. क्, ख्, ग्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: जगत्माता; ङ्: –मा *।

70. The correct form (त्र्यक्षरी) would make the metre deficient by one syllable. Cf. above 3/2a and see also below, note to 3/119d. Cf. the form त्रिरक्षं in Śrīmatasāra (1) 1/2b quoted in Schotermn 1981: 42

71. All MSs except क्: चाक्षा। 72. क्: चाहं; all other MSs except च्: हंच।

73. च्: नपुंसक * दे; ङ्: नपुसक–; घ्, छ्: नपुनंसक–; छ्: –* दे।

74. ग्, ञ्: त्व; ट्: (?)। Just after line 3/64ab all the MSs repeat verses 3/18-24. The two passages are generally quite close although there are some quite substantial differences. It is clear from the context that the added duplicated passage (called B) is the one that comes after line 3/64ab rather than this one. Accordingly, it has been put in a note at the end of 3/64ab. Significant variant readings have been noted in parentheses and adopted readings have been signalled in the critical apparatus here.

75. ख्: योगि; ञ्: यानि; all other MSs and B: योनि। Goudriaan and Schoterman (1986: 54) refer to the appearance of this word in the MSs of the KMT as an example of the erroneous omission on the part of scribes of final visarga after a short vowel 'i'. See KMT 3/30b where MSs ABCD read जगद्योनि सदोदिता. See also ibid. 11/18b –चतुर्योनिर् महाम्बिके where the -r of -yonir is found only in MSs D and G. The omission of visarga takes place in a number of instances in the great majority if not all the MSs of this text also. See 3/20b, 5/41b, 8/44d, 35/96b, 39/22c, 58/2a, 61/4a, and 64/20c. However, there are many instances of the correct reading. These include 8/39c, 8/44d, 18/25c (पद्मयोनिः), 38/4b, 38/20b, 39/29c, 44/39a, 59/75c, 60/10b, 65/25c. Note also that the spelling is generally correct in the MSs of the TS, although we find the same omission occasionally there also. Verse 44/45 below is an interesting case. There in the first quarter we find जगद्योनीति which cannot be a scribal error. But in the third quarter of the same verse all the MSs read सायोनिः as do 44/47b and 57/15a. Note also 58/3a योन्येका (MS ग्, छ्, ज्, झ्: योन्यका). Usually the acc. sing. is the regular feminine (योनिं), for which see 7/40b, 47/59a and the SKh quoted in the note to 49/53b. However, anusvāra is missing in all MSs in 17/11a but this is due to scribal error. Thus, in those cases where visarga has been omitted at the end of this word it has been restored if the metre does not dictate otherwise. We may conceive this to be a change of gender to neuter from the regular masculine or feminine gender of this word (and those like it that end in short 'i') which allows the dropping of visarga of the nom. sing. to accommodate the metre. 76. क्: * (?) पुंसकं।

77. घ्, छ्: ततः–; च्: सतः–। 78. घ्, च्, छ्: गर्भे। M → N.
79. क्, ख्: भगाद्लादेन; घ्, छ्: भगाह्लादन।

80. All MSs except क्: भैरवं। In B this line reads: चन्द्रपूर्यस्य (घ्, च्, छ्: –सूर्यस्य) वेश्मस्य कुले (ख्: कले) जाताङ्गनावली (घ्, च्, छ्: जातागतावली)।

81. All MSs संहिताज्ञा। This emendation agrees with the reading in B.

82. ट्: * * (?)र्भेदैः–; all other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –भेदैः–। In B this quarter reads: त्रिभिर्भेदैरोलित्रितयमण्डले। 83. ट्: वहुरूपं–।
84. ञ्: * * * (?) वता। This quarter reads in B: नपुंसकपदे त्वया।

85. क्, झ्: जगता। KuKh 3/20-24 corresponds to AS 10/149-153ab.

86. ख्: विष्णयोनि; झ्: वि *योनि; all other MSs except क्: विष्णुयोनि। This emendation agrees with the reading in version B. See above, note to 3/18a.

87. AS: पितामहः। The vocative of the regular form पितामही is पितामहि. Rather than emend, I take this to be the vocative corresponding to the deviant पितामहिः.

88. All MSs: देवेश। This emendation agrees with the reading in B.

89. ख्: उतप्रोक्तं; घ्: उतद्रोतं; च्: उतप्रातं; all other MSs except क्, झ्: उतप्रोतं; AS: ओतप्रोत।
90. छ्: जगन्द्वयं; ञ्: जगत्तयं। 91. ख्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: शिष्यःतव; AS: शिष्य–।

92. क्, ख्: मित्रत्वयागतः; ग्, ङ्, ज्: –मैत्रत्वयागतः, झ्: मैतत्वयागतः; all other MSs: मैत्रत्वयोगतः; AS: ज्ञानार्थमागतः। Version B is quite different. All the MSs there read: आज्ञार्थिना ह्यहं। The emended reading आज्ञार्थिनो ह्यहम् also makes sense (see note to 4/3c). One could postulate a deviant form मित्रत्वा from which the instrumental मित्रत्वया (in the sense of मित्रत्वेन) is derived. But this possibility is not supported by usage. Another possibility may be an original मित्रत्वमागतः. The sense of the first component of this compound is a locative. A simple emendation to मित्रत्व आगतः would be correct Sanskrit and, moreover, fits the metre. However, I have chosen not to emend in this way as the same construction with the same meaning appears below in 4/50d. Moreover, a common feature of the Sanskrt of this text is the freedom with which the letter 'm' is inserted between members of a compound to meet the requirements of the metre. This usually takes place between the last two members of a compound but not invariably. Thus, for example, in 60/8c we find it inserted between the second and third component of a compound consisting of six components. There are not less than thirty-five instances in this text (see 3/7b, 100b, 4/35d, 41a, 6/34a, 11/56c, 13/122a, 14/18d, 81d, 18/16b, 96a, 19/5b, 26/93d, 30/84d, 31/51b, 32/49d, 34/9d, 54d, 37/3d, 39/143a, 144a, 40/144d, 44/66b, 46/67a, 92d, 131d, 222b, 47/29b, 51/6a, 57/86b, 58/25b, 57d, 60/8c, 43c, 61/59b, 66/3d). Similarly, the letter 'r' is also sometimes inserted in the same way, but this is much less common - hardly twelve or so examples in the whole text (see 3/93c, 4/34d,14/61d (and note), 6/144d, 33/59a, 59/4d, 105d, 60/10d, 15b, 18d, 60a (बहुर्भेदै:) and 66/71c). Occasionally we find other fillers that function in the same way. One notable example is the dvandva त्वक्चक्षुर्घ्राणजिह्वाश्रवण इति मनांसीति (2/8c). In this case the filler 'इति' has created a hiatus within the compound. Similarly, in the bahuvrīhi आपस्तेजोऽथ पृथ्वीपवनगगनकं (2/9a) the filler is 'अथ'.

The letter 'm' is also commonly used to fill a hiatus (cf. Goudriaan and Schoterman 1988: 65). Moreover, it may be inserted between words in order to avoid a sandhi that would cause the loss of a syllable. There are at least thirteen examples (see 3/167d, 5/10b (माता–म्–इति कल्पिता), 6/163d (गोहत्या–म्–अयुतम्), 9/31d (भगवत्या–म्–अत: परम्), 14/70a (एका–म्–इन्द्रियजा नाडी), 15/6b, 23/4d, 34/67a त्रिपादेन–म्–अध: कृत्वा, 34/69a, 35/72c, 38/13d, 44/23d, and 59/34a). One wonders why in such cases sandhi is not simply omitted and the two words left separate, as could be done here. This is especially surprising when the Sanskrit of this text allows hiatus even in places, such as within compounds, that regular Sanskrit does not (see below, note to 3/77d). Finally, note that there is at least one instance in which 'm' is inserted between a word and its prefix (see 31/128c –स्वमात्मा।).

93. क्: पूर्वंप्रीतिवशाच्छभो; ख्: पूर्वप्रीतिवसाच्छंभु; ङ्, झ्, ञ्: पूर्वंप्रितिवसाच्छंभु:; छ्: पूर्वंप्रितिवशाशंभु:; all other MSs: पूर्वप्रितिवशाच्छंभु:। This line reads in the sole MS of the AS: पूर्वप्रीतिवसाच्छंतु व्यामोहं पूर्वसासने। The reading the MSs indicate is: पूर्वप्रीतिवशाच्छम्भो. Exactly the same expression is found below in 4/49ab which reads: पूर्वप्रीतिवशाच्छम्भो मैत्रीभावेन भावनात्. One gets the impression that one of the redactors of this text has cut out the first half of this line and pasted it here. This is possible as this line is found in a long passage that has been traced in other sections of the MBT and elsewhere. It seems that this mistake was corrected in version B with which this emendation agrees.

94. घ्: प्रजा–; ग्, ङ्, च्, झ्: –ज्ञानस्; all other MSs except क्, ख्: प्रजाज्ञानस्।

95. क्, ख्, ञ्: तवान्तिकात्; ट्: तव * (?) कं। 96. ञ्: * (?) यातो; AS: आयाता। 97. ङ्, झ्: ज्ञानकाक्षी; all other MSs except घ्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: ज्ञानमाकांक्षी; all MSs: + च; AS: ज्ञानकर्षञ्च। The reading ज्ञानमाकांक्षी found in some MSs and version B may be acceptable in place of ज्ञानाकाङ्क्षी or ज्ञानस्याकाङ्क्षी, neither of which fit the metre. However, the presence in all the MSs of the copula च supports the view that the original reading was ज्ञानकांक्षी in which the medial long 'a' has been shortened to accommodate the metre. 98. झ्: समाच *?।

99. क्, ख्, घ्, झ्: तते उमे; all other MSs and the AS: ततो उमे। The normal rules of external sandhi require that visarga should be dropped if followed by a vowel other than short 'a'. Even so, there are several examples of this deviant sandhi (i.e. visarga > o + u). For example, see below 4/42c, 14/40c, 44/11b, and 60/51b. Only the first of these three examples occurs on the ceasura where irregular sandhi is more easily admissable. Moreover, version B reads तत: प्रिये which is correct. But while emendation to this reading is tempting, we must also admit the possibility that this reading may itself be an emendation that serves to circumvent the problem. This seems likely in view of the fact that the AS reads ततो उमे which, as a source from an independent manuscript tradition, lends, it seems, sufficiently strong support to the reading of the MSs of our texts to accept it.

We may note here, for the sake of completeness, that a similar deviant sandhi takes place when visarga at the end of a word comes in contact with a short 'a' at the beginning of a following one. Normally visarga should change to 'o' and the following 'a' should be dropped but there are at least fourteen instances where although visarga is changed to the vowel, the following 'a' remains intact (see 6/17a, 7/17c, 8/74c, 13/95c, 14/47a, 23/20c, 24/67a, 26/58c, 28/35b, 36/85a, 37/44a, 40/67d, and 68/45a). Again, there are at least four examples of an original final 'o' coming in contact with an initial 'a' without any change taking place (see 5/47b, 17/14c, 31/106c, and 68/46a). Note that in every one of these examples the two words are in different *pāda*s. Sandhi is often not applied between the first and second pāda of a hemistich in the Epics, law-books and Purāṇas. It is not surprising that this should happen in the Tantras also. But this is not the case in the first set of examples. Visarga at the end of the first word has undergone a change due to its contact with the vowel at the beginning of the following word. Similarly, we find at least seven examples of visarga undergoing the same change in contact with long 'a' (see 6/95c and 9/46d (neither between *pāda*s), also 25/44a, 32/39c,39/109a, 45/21c and 46/265a) and an original 'o' that does not change (10/33a). Analogously for visarga and short 'i' see 15/44d, 24/31c and 62/104b and for an original 'o' and short 'i' see 21/2b. Cf. ŚM (9/85ab) अणिमादिगुणाधारो इच्छासिद्धिमवाप्नुयात्. For the analogous deviant sandhi between visarga and long 'i', see 40/71c and 64/28a (note that this is not between *pāda*s). There are no examples in this text of change to 'o' from an original visarga in contact with other vowels in sandhi except once instance with a following 'o' (see 8/113d, this is also not between *pāda*s).

100. ग्, ङ्, ञ्, ट्: –सो; छ्: अनेकसा; all other MSs: अनेकशा; B: अनेकधा।

101 घ्, च्, छ्: सम। 102. AS: –तमसंख्यत:।

103. क्: तस्मादन्न भग्नशिष्यत्व; ख्, ज्: तस्मादनुभजं शिष्यत्वं; ग्, ङ्, च्, ज्, झ्: तस्मादनुजशिष्यत्वं; घ्, छ्: तस्मादनुभवं–; ञ्: तस्मादनुभजा शिष्यत्वं; ट्: तस्मादनुभवजं शिष्यत्वं। This and the following emendation is supported by the AS. See below introductory note to 3/64cd for the readings of version B.

104. ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: नावपार्व्विते; झ्: नावप्यर्व्विते; घ्, च्, छ्: नावपार्च्चिते।

105. क्: क्वचित्; ट्: परै (?); all other MSs: परम्; B: क्वचित् (क्, ख्, घ्, च्, ञ्: कचित्);
AS: क्वचित्। 106. ञ्: केव* (?)। 107. AS: सौहृदे।

108. घ्, च्, छ्: द्रेय; B: रुद्रे (क्, ख्: रुद्र)।

109. क्, ख्: यस्मान्निसंशय:; all other MSs: यस्मान्नि:संशयं। This emendation is better Sanskrit and is supported by the reading in the AS.

110. छ्: वद:; AS: पदं। Version B ends here as does the corresponding passage in the AS. 111. घ्, च्, छ्: तस्मान्; ट्: तस्मात्; all other MSs:
तस्मात। 112. घ्, छ्: श्रीकौलिन्युवाच; ञ्: * (?) कौलिनी उवाच। 113. All MSs: कस्।

114. घ्, च्, छ्: उच्यते; झ्: उच्य *?। 115. छ् –यति:; ञ्: त्वमुमा * * (?)। The intended sense here is: त्वमुमापतिरिति निश्चय: which would be metrically incorrect. Out of twelve instances in which the gender of this masculine noun is ascertainable (including विनिश्चय: > विनिश्चयम् 39/21b) it is neuter ten times. The two times it appears in its regular gender, it is found in the formula इति निश्चय: (see14/6d and 14/45b). Although we do find this formula in its complete form in one instance in which the noun is in its deviant neuter gender (see 25/11d), in every other case, as here, the indeclinable इति is dropped (see 5/7b, 53d, 8/76b, 15/14d, 34/2d). The remaining instances it is in its neuter form (see 4/7b, 15/44c, 58/100d, 68/72d). Note also that the ablative निश्चयात् may function as an adverb meaning 'certainly'
(see 11/86a, 13/45b and 23/16b). 116. ङ्, च्, छ्: –धरा। 117. झ्: * * *?।

118. क्, ख्: सम लुज्वक:; ङ्, ञ्, ट्: सम लुव्धक:। The following two lines are not found in MS च्। 119. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: संभो।

120. क्: उपविष्टसनांर्थाय, ख्: उपविष्टरसनार्थाय; ग्, ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: उपविष्टसनार्थाय–; छ्: तयविध्वं–।

121. ख्: –लुद्धक:; ग्, ङ्: –लुव्धक। 122. क्, ख्, ञ्, ट्: –संभो।

123. क्, ख्: किमर्थ; झ्: किमर्थ ?। 124. * (?) त्मानं।

125. ख्: * * (?)। 126. All MSs: केन हेतु। 127. ङ्: अतिव।

128. क्: दुर्ल्लभ, ख्: वल्लभम्; झ्: वल्लभम्; घ्: वल्लभा। Although मम अतीववल्लभ would be correct and fits the metre, it seems that this compound has been broken up just because it sounds better that way. 129. All MSs: यथा।

130. The root श्रु is 1P. The regular form is शृणु। For other examples, see below, 14/99b, 33/126b, 133d, 36/54a, 39/19b, 151b, and 41/34d.

131. घ्, च्, छ्, झ्: –करणमुत्तमं; all other MSs: –योग:।

132. घ्, च्, झ्: पूर्व; all other MSs except क्, ङ्: पूर्व्वें। 133. छ्, घ्: सूचिरं।

134. The following passage is introduced in all MSs except झ् with the standard phrase श्रीवक्रा उवाच or in MSs घ्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच; ञ्: * * * (?) उवाच। This is a clear indication that some part of what follows is an interpolation. Indeed, the MSs go on to repeat 3/1-2ab. However, although the repetition of these three lines may be taken to be a scribal error, as has been assumed is the case with the phrase श्रीवक्रा उवाच, deprived of them what follows is incomplete. It is more likely, therefore, that another redactor of the text or the same one, added the following passage to serve as an explicatory expansion of what has been said up to here in this chapter. With this intent he began by repeating the first three lines as they appear in the first, more concise version.

135. घ्, च्, छ्: कैलाशस्या–; ङ्: –पर; ञ्: कैलासस्य–।

136. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: –मन्दर–; च्: –मण्डर–; all other MSs: –मण्डल–।

137. च्: –रावे। 138. घ्: वम्ये; झ्: राम्ये।

139. ख्: –धारं, घ्: –भ, च्: –स्कन्धाम, छ्: –भ।

140. क्, ञ्: कुलोष्टक–; ख्: कुलोष्टस–; ङ्: कुला?; झ्: कुलो–।

141. ङ्, छ्, ज्, झ्: शतांस्त्रीणि। IC. See above, note to 1/2c.

142. See above, note to 1/5a. 143. ञ्: * * (?)शत्।

144. घ्, च्, छ्, ट्: –गिन्यो। 145. ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: संजाता।

146. झ्: त्रिप्र * * * *?। 147. ङ्: –वृतं; झ्: * *?।

148. मातृणाम् is regular Sanskrit. See below, note to 5/41b.

149. ङ्, झ्: –दायक; ञ्: मेक्ष–। 150. घ्: विनि:–; छ्: विनिक्रान्ता।

151. क्: सुहा–। 152. झ्: –लि *?; all other MSs except ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्: –लिखु। See above, note to 1/5a. 153. झ्: रजो? * * *?; ञ्: * * (?) भावेन।

154. ङ्: रूप। 155. च्: –स्थात्।

156. ट्: पुष्पंवत्। 157. ङ्: * ला।

158. ख्, ङ्, ज्, ट्, ञ्: सप्त–। This line also occurs above as 3/3ab.

159. ख्: रुक्ष–; झ्: हक्ष * *? स्था। 160. च्: उमयां; all other MSs: उमया। According to 3/43ab below अमा is in the centre and so I have emended accordingly. 161. ङ्:
मध–। 162. झ्: * व्यद्वय–; all other MSs: हव्य–।

163. ञ्: त्रिकोण * * * (?) धारे। 164. ग्: –य। 165. झ्: योगिनी–।

166. The ending of this compound has been dropped for the sake of the metre. There are numerous instances of this sort of elision in the Sanskrit of the Kubjikā corpus. See, for example, KMT 11/17cd: मणिपूरक शब्दस्थं दशपञ्चावतारकम्।

167. च्: –वाह्य। 168. च्: आरक्ते। 169. ङ्: शत।

170. क्, ख्: –सार्द्ध; झ्: सा *?। 171. च्: मयो–। 172. All MSs: –योगिनी।

173. All MSs: तन्मध्यां। 174. ग्, ट्: विनिंक्रान्तम–; घ्, च्, छ्: विनि:क्रान्तंतमयं; ङ्:
विनि–; झ्: विनिं–; ञ्: विनिं * * (?) मन्वयं। M → N. See above, note to 1/5c.

175. घ्: भरवो; ञ्: भैरवा; all other MSs: भैरवो। One wonders whether to accept the testimony of the MSs in this case and take the reading to be भैरवो which would be correct but would entail extensive emendation of the words that are in concord with it. 176. ङ्: पंचावस्थं। The meaning here is पञ्चविधावस्थम्, just as the following पञ्चधास्थितम् means पञ्चविधस्थितम्. See above, note to 2/2d. 177. Missing in MS ग्: सक्तिस्त्वं।

178. ग्, ञ्: –संग; घ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –सङ्गं।

179. क्: सूष्माशा–; घ्: सूष्मण–; ख्, ग्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: सूष्मना–; झ्: * * * * * (?) वर्षिणी। Note this variant form of the word सुषुम्ना; cf. above 2/18.

180. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: त्रैलोक्य। 181. ङ्: रशाकला–; च्, छ्: –कला–ण् घ्, च्, छ्: –जठरे।
IM 6 + 7. 182. ट्: आंपीतं। 183. च्: –सतं।

184. ख्: सुतप्तेहेम–; झ्: * * * (?) हेम–।

185. The regular form – चतुरशीति – never occurs, whereas the deviant चतुराशीति– occurs four more times in 7/81c, 33/10c, 46/226c and 68/5a. As in this case, the first and last of these is not required by the metre. There are at least thirteen occurences of this deviant form in YKh (1) and none of the regular one. There also, not all the occurences are dictated by the metre. The regular form predominates in the .SSS especially in MS क्. Indeed, one could argue that there the other form is the result of scribal error. In the KuKauM the erroneous form appears once, in the body of the text, whereas the correct form also appears only once but in a colpohon.

186. In this text we find the deviant, thematized form not less than nine times including this one – see 8/93b, 18/33a, 19/45d, 49a, 20/11b, 20/26c (three out of seven MSs read the correct Sanskrit, the rest are corrupt), 48/15c and 66/83c. The regular form (अध:स्थ–) does appears but only three times - see 18/25a, 19/60d (except only one MS), and 21/15c. It is deviant all three times it occurs in the YKh (1) (17/15d, 30/33b (अधस्था: which KuKh 62/33c reads as अग्रस्था:), and 39/72d (अधस्थेनैव भूषितम्),. In YKh (2) it occurs only once and is in the deviant form (MS Kh fl.68a 24/11). The regular form never appears in the TS whereas the deviant one does so not less than four times (1/47a, 1/476c, 6/130a, and 10/1650b). Neither form appears in the ŚM although अध:स्थात् does so at least four times as अधस्थात्. The regular form appears just six or seven times out of not less than forty instances in chapters 7 to 27 of the .SSS. The commentary on the .SSS almost always prefers the deviant form whereas it is deviant three out of the seven times it appears in the .T. Out of the two instances we find it in the KRU, it is regular once in just one out of the three MSs examined. It never occurs in the KnT.

The inconsistency of the readings could be due to the poor transmission of the text. Conversely, which is more likely, one or more scribes may have attempted, in places, to correct the deviant form to regular Sanskrit. But, in view of the fact that in the great majority of cases we find the deviant rather than the regular form, I have decided to standardize all the readings to the former. Finally, note that the regular form अधस्, independently and in compounds, is well attested. The prime example is the expression अधोमुख– which is common throughout this text. 187. ख्: चर्तुलं; घ्: वर्तुरं; छ्: वर्तुरं; झ्: वर्तु *?।

188. All MSs: स चात्मा। The noun आत्मन् is masc. even so the pronoun relates to the previous subject which is neuter. 189. च्: देवस्य।

190. क्: –दित्तम्; झ्: चं *? र्की–। 191. M → F. Emending to the regular masc.
loc. plural त्रिवर्गेषु would make the seventh syllable long.

192. ङ्: मयुर–; झ्: मयूर– –काला; all other MSs: मयूर–। The readings in the MSs makes no sense, but cf. below 3/116cd. In making this emendation I assume that the serial order of the first two members of this compound has been reversed.

193. ङ्: सपुणी; all other MSs: संपूणी।

194. झ्: –वा * *?। The same expression occurs below in 16/18b, 60d, 35/80b, and 68/12b. The more regular form नग्नवासा appears in 15/18b, 17/70a (नग्नवाससमोपेताम्) and 49/29b.

195. ङ्: श्रीमादेवी। This strange use of the masculine श्रीमान् with reference to the goddess recurs in at least four places; see, below 3/63d, 4/20a, line 60 of the Mālinīstava and 7/35d. The goddess is also addressed as प्रभु: (see below, note to 4/38c) and स्वामिन् (see below, note to 5/40c.

196. This line reappears below as 3/63cd. There कौलिनी replaces कुमारी and नपुंसका replaces भगोदरा. 197. क्, ङ्, झ्: + तु।

198. See above, note to 2/2d. 199. क्, ग्, घ्, च्, छ्: दीपान्ते।

200. ङ्: कुतेछ्या। DS. 201. झ्: –कानं?। This line is also found in AS 27/84ab. 202. This normally masc. noun is treated as neuter not less than sixty-five times in this text. These instances include simple derivations and compounds such as: परमानन्दम् (see 12/9a, 13/79c, 58/88c, and 60/37c), महानन्दम् (see 36/5c, and 57/38a), क्रमानन्दम् (see 39/31c), निरानन्दम् (see 39/33a, 68/71b and 68/137c), स्वानन्दम् (see 56/1c) and परानन्दम् (see 60/24a). It appears in its normal masc. gender seventeen times (see 19/80d, 26/42a, 42/15b, 59/71b, 60/16a, 56a, 61/44c, 57c, 67a, 89a, 95a, 62/67c, 63/49cd (x 3), 64/11c, and 66/35c). Note that as many as twelve of these instances occur in chapters 59 to 63. Although the neuter form appears in those chapters not less than 29 times, even so this suggests that this part of the text was not the product of the same hand(s) as the rest. These chapters are also found in YKh (1) of which, given this and other stylistic differences, they are in all probability the source. However, this does not mean that the regular form is the basic one in the YKh (1) either. A rough survey of YKh (1) shows that the ratio of the regular form with respect to the deviant one there is comparable with the one here. Moreover, note that the chapters in the YKh (1) corresponding to chapter 59 to 63 here also contain a higher proportion of the regular form with respect to the deviant one found in the rest of YKh (1). At the same time, some erosion of the regular form has taken place in our text. Thus, for example, we read in 62/25a: आकाशं विमलानन्दं whereas YKh (1) reads: आकाशविमलानन्दः. Although much less common, we do occasionally find the reverse taking place, that is, a correction of the deviant form. For example, in 15/14a we find the regular masc. whereas in the TS, which is its source, it is neuter! This marked tendancy to make 'male' bliss neuter may be influenced by doctrinal considerations. In this verse we are told that it is' neuter' as is the Absolute. Thus in the TS (1/295cd) where the deviant neuter form predominates, as here, over the regular, we read: आनन्दं ब्रह्मणो रूपं न विभेति कदाचन (ख्, ग्: –नः). 203. घ्: त।

204. IM 5 + 6. 205. ग्: निरो–; ञ्: नि * * * (?)रणं; all other MSs:
निराधिकरणं। 206. ग्: * स्थं; घ्: षस्ठं; ङ्: खरथ; झ्: स्वस्थं; ञ्: श्वस्थं;
all other MSs except ख्, ज्, ट्: खस्थ। 207. ग्, ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: क्रमोरिता; घ्, च्, छ्: रमारिका।
208. ङ्: उभयो–; घ्, च्, छ्: –वाह्यवां। 209. ङ्: कूठस्थं।
210. ग्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: –रासिस्तु। 211. ग्, च्, ञ्, ट्: त्रिः–। See below, note to 3/119d. 212. क्, ख्, घ्: तुह–; ञ्: गु * * (?) सकं। The final long vowel of the first component of this compound has been shortened for the metre. 213. ङ्: गृह। M → N. This masc. noun is treated as neuter an ascertainable thirty-one times (see 3/8d, 4/31b, 6/172c, 7/15b, 25a, 34d, 56d, 14/50a, 58a, 92c, 17/4a, 34d, 25/50d, 30/169b, 31/93b, 38/23b, 39/64b, 138b, 139d, 45/54b, 62b, 64b, 53/5c, 5d, 57/21c, 58/70b, 59/32d, 75b, 75c, 61/73d, 66/71b, and 67/26d). It appears in its regular masculine gender only three times (see 39/112a, 140a and 42/35b).
214. ञ्: मश्चिमस्थम–; ट्: मश्चि * (?)स्थम–। 215. ख्: –तलु–; ङ्: –मडितं।
216. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.
217. In compounds महत् should become महा–. Although this change generally does take place, here, as in at least two other places, it remains unchanged. See below, 46/112d and 58/10a.
218. क्: * * * भैरवी शक्तिः भेदानां–; ख्: –भैरवी शक्तिः भेदानां; ग्, ज्, झ्, ञ्: * * * भैरवी
शक्तिर्भेदानां। 219. ञ्: (?)। 220. ञ्: * (?)गरूपेण।
221. ङ्, च्: ज्यधो–। 222. This is another instance of the irregular nom. sing. neuter form of आत्मन्. See above, note to 3/10d. 223. घ्: च।
224. क्, ख्, ज्, झ्: श्वेत। 225. क्: –आघं; घ्, झ्: –ध्यं।
226. M → N. 227. The neuter noun ज्योतिष् occurs forty-one times in this text out of which it appears twenty-four times in a compound as a thematic noun (here and in 3/102c*, 108c*, 127b, 136d, 6/207c, 9/12c*, 13/3b*, 114d, 117d*, 16/76a, 18/75d, 19/78d*, 22/8c, 24/20c, 44d*, 31/63a*, 83b*, 35/67a*, 56/15a*, 57/27b, 34d, 65/31a and 68/143b). Each of the twelve instances of the compound ज्योतिरूप– has been marked with an asterix. The form ज्योतीरूप– never occurs, although the shortening of the vowel is in no instance required by the metre. Otherwise, apart from two exceptions (22/8c and 24/20c), the thematic form is dictated by the requirements of the metre. As an independent noun it happens to be always in the nom. sing.. We find nine instances of the word ज्योतिः which almost always occurs at the end of a pāda (6/70a, 7/52c, 24/37a, 46/249c, 59/53a, 60/19a). One exception is found in 64/11b. Another one may be 57/44d. There the MSs read ज्योति चिदात्मकम्, but this may be a scribal error. The regular external सन्धि – ज्योतिर्– occurs seven times (3/92c, 18/59a, 36/88c, 39/158a, 60/94d, 61/69c, 64/11a). In one case, at least (in 16/76a), one could emend the unanimous reading of all the MSs from ज्योतिलिङ्गम् to the regular ज्योतिर्लिङ्गम् and so admit the existence of a single instance of the regular non-thematic stem in a compound.

228. ञ्: स्वरूप * (?)। 229. ङ्: –र; ञ्: (?)। The order of the first two components of this compound has been reversed.

230. ङ्: –क्त; झ्: आभ्यारक्तं; ञ्: अभ्यारक्तं।

231. ख्: अघ–; ङ्, झ्: आद्या–; च्, ञ्: सद्यो–। See below, note to 3/103d.

232. घ्, छ्: सप्तविंशति। 233. ङ्: –यन।

234. M → N. This and the following line are unclear in MS ञ्।

235. Cf. 1/2a. 236. The ending of the word क्रम– has been dropped for the metre. Qualified by the words in the next line, it cannot be fused with following word to form a pseudo-compound. Cf. below, 3/56c.

237. ङ्: –त; झ्: ओलितुतय–। 238. क्, ख्: वेक्ष्म; all other MSs except घ्: वेस्मं। See above, note to 3/12a. 239. च्, छ्: –पूर्य्येति। See above, note to 1/11c. This line is the same as 3/12ab above.

240. The ending appears to have been dropped to preserve the metre. Cf. above, 3/55b. 241. ञ्: (?)। 242. क्, ख्: विधा–; ञ्: (?); all MSs: –परिग्रहः। See above, note to 2/2d. The ending of the substantive (i.e. क्रममण्डल) this bahuvrīhi compound qualifies has been dropped, even so this emendation has been made presuming that it has retained its regular gender.

243. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.

244. झ्: –कृतांकृतम्। This line is illegible in MS ञ्।

245. ञ्: * * (?) चन्द्र * (?)। 246. ङ्: –पर्ण्ण।

247. All MSs: पुनः। 248. One wonders whether to read रुद्रपादाब्जं.

249. झ्: इच्छस। The root इष् is normally 6P.

250. ङ्: गृहं; ट्: गृह। This and the following line are unclear. This line is virtually a repeat of line 3/15ab above. There the first quarter verse reads: अस्मिन् गुरुगृहे शाक्ते। 251. ङ्: शाक्त। 252. ङ्: –लिंग।

253. See above, note to 3/15d. 254. ट्: (?)।

255. घ्, छ्, च्: श्रीवक्रोवाच। 256. See above, note to 1/11c.

257. झ्: वे *?स्य। See above, note to 3/12a.

258. छ्: गु (रु) रहं। 259. ञ्: * (?) प्तिव्यापकभे * * (?)।

260. ञ्: सर्व * (?)। The following two words of this line and the first of the next are unclear in MS ञ्. 261. क्, ग्: सिद्धज्ञान; ञ्: (?)।

262. ङ्: –न्त। 263. आम्नायम् or the like is implied. As usual in this text, words for `tradition' or `lineage' are neuter. See note to 1/5c.

264. ञ्: (?)। 265. See above, note to 3/17a.

266. ञ्: शंभोरु * (?) गगा * * (?)। 267. ञ्: (?); ट्: कैलिनी।

268. ज्, ञ्, ट्: –का:। This line is the same as 3/45ab. There instead of कौलिनी we read कुमारी and instead of नपुंसका we find भगोदरा.

269. ञ्: –कं; all other MSs except घ्, छ्: –कां।

270. क्: व नभक्षया; झ्: * (?) नभेक्षया; all other MSs: व नभे क्षया। See below, note to 3/74b.

271. The following passage, found in all the MSs is a repeat of verses 3/18-24ab above. See note to 3/18. त्वं योनि: (All MSs: (योनि) परमाकाशं दिव्यलिङ्गं (घ्, च्, छ्: –लिंगे) नपुंसकम्।। चन्द्रपूर्यस्य (घ्, च्, छ्: –सूर्यस्य) वेश्मस्य कुले (ख्: कले; ञ्: (?) जाताङ्गनावली (घ्, च्, छ्: जातागतावली; ञ्: (?)। संस्थिताज्ञा त्रिभिर्भेदैरोलित्रितयमण्डले।। बहुरूपक्रमेणैव (ञ्: –रूपे–) नपुंसकपदे त्वया। त्वं माता जगतां देवि विश्वयोनि: (घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: –योनि) पितामहे (क्: –महीं; ङ्: पि * महे)।। त्वया मया च देवेशि ओतप्रोतं (क्: उतं–; ग्: उतप्रातं; ञ्: उतप्रो * (?); all other MSs: (उत–) जगत्त्रयम् (ङ्: जगत्त्रये; ञ्: (?)। नाहं शिष्यस्तव (all MSs except (क्: शिष्योतव) प्राय: किन्तु आज्ञार्थिनो (All MSs: –र्थिना) ह्यहम्।। पूर्वप्रीतिवशाद् देवि पूजाज्ञानं (घ्, छ्, ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: –ज्ञानस्) तवान्तिकम्। आयातो ज्ञानमाकाङ्क्षी (ञ्: –मा * क्षी) समाचक्ष्व (All MSs: मया– ; ण् झ्: –चक्षु) तत: प्रिये।। अनेकधा मया ख्यातं तव (All MSs except क्, च्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: तद्) ज्ञानमनुत्तमम् (ञ्: –मनु * * (?)। (This and the following two lines are missing in MS ख्) त्वयापि मम (ञ्: (?) पूर्वं (क्, ख्, घ्, ङ्, च्: पूर्व; ञ्: (?) हि (ञ्: (?) पुराख्यातमशेषत: (ग्: पुराख्यातंमशेषत:; झ्: पुरख्यात–; ट्: –ख्यातसशेषत:)।। तस्मादनुजशिष्यत्वं (क्; घ्: तस्माद् अनुज मां शिष्यं; च्: तस्माद् अन्नुभज मां शिष्यत्वं; ङ्: –नुभज मां शिष्य; छ्, ज्, झ्, ट्: –नुभज मां शिष्यं; ग्: भज मंतंशष्यं; ञ्: –दनुज मां शिष्यं) नावयोर्विद्यते (ङ्: नाथयोर्–) क्वचित् (क्, घ्, च्, ञ्: कचित्)।
केवलं सौहृदं रुद्रे (क्, ख्: रुद्र)यस्मान्नि:संशयं (क्, ख्: –यस्मान्नि–; घ्: शंसयं) वद (ख्, घ्: वद:)।।

272. क्, ख्, झ्: –भाव। 273. क्, ख्, घ्: य–उक्तं।

274. ञ्: मया * * * (?); all other MSs मया–।

275. क्, ग्, ज्: अम्व; ञ्: (?)। The correct form of the vocative of अम्बा is अम्ब. This deviant vocative occurs another four times in most of the MSs (see 4/6a, 11/52a, 16/17a, and 26/58d). The sole place where the regular form is the reading of all the MSs is 4/23a. However, the same pāda appears in 4/6a and there only two MSs read the regular form. 276. ञ्: (?)।

277. घ्, च्, छ्: –वक्रोवाच; झ्: –वक्र उवाच। 278. च्: साक्षांद्।
279. ञ्: निरंजनं। 280. ज्, झ्: ईश्वर; all other MSs: ईश्वरं।
281. छ्: –र्थां। 282. ञ्: त्रैलोक्य। 283. ख्: गु: गुरु:।
284. ट्: कर्त। 285. ख्: च:। 286. ञ्: (?)।
287. घ्, ङ्, च्: –कर्त्तृत्वं; झ्: –कत्तृत्वं। 288. ञ्: –व।
289. ख्, ङ्: –र्थ। 290. क्, घ्, झ्: शंभवाज्ञा; all other MSs: –ज्ञा।
291. All MSs except क्: प्रायस: त्वं।
292. All MSs except क्, घ्, झ्: –न:।
293. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: * भयतपना–। See below, note to 5/22a.
294. ञ्: (?)। 295. क्, झ्: पूर्वें; घ्, ङ्, च्: पूर्व।
296. All MSs except क्, झ्: त्युक्तं। 297. झ्: व।
298. ख्, झ्: भुमिज्ञाकाज्ञा–। क्: –वेस्म। 299. च्: प्रकटो–।
300. ङ्: नास्ति। 301. ख्, ङ्, च्: शून्यरूपेण।
302. क्: –ह्या–; ङ्: –तनुर्ज्येह; छ्: –तनुह्यहं; ञ्: –तनुह्याहं।
303. This quarter verse is missing in MS ख्।
304. ञ्: (?)। 305. ज्: कोलिका; ञ्: * * (?)का।
306. घ्: काचि *; च्: कावि *। 307. घ्, ङ्, च्, झ्: –योगेश्वरी।
308. च्: सहं; ङ्: ज्यहम्। 309. झ्: चार्चिका–।
310. ञ्, ट्: षट्विधा। 311. Missing in MSs ख्।
312. ख्: अहं। 313. This change from the first to the third person implies a construction of the sort एवं अहं सा या. Moreover, the correct form of the verb is प्रकुरुते, but this would make the sixth syllable short. It occurs three times in the AS (3/9b, 8/140d and 20/57b). See note to 40/35d. The parasmaipadī form – प्रकुर्वति – occurs four times in this text. See below, note to 4/24b.

314. झ्: द * *?य। 315. ख्, ङ्, झ्: मासीदेहं; घ्, च्: मास्येदं हं; छ्: मास्यंदंहं; ञ्: पूर्व * (?) दंहं; all other MSs: –मासीदहं। The imperfect आसम् would be correct but does not fit the metre. The present commonly replaces the past tense in the Sanskrit of this text (see above, note to 3/14c).

316. घ्, छ्: दक्षिणे। 317. ङ्: –भातरे। Cf. 6/5d and 24/18b. The neuter athematic नभस् is attested only in the compound नभस्तल– which appears five times (26/17b, 28/146d, 41/63b, 49/6d, and 67/41b). The thematic form, which is masculine, is also found in the Epics and Purāṇas. It is attested ten times in this text (see 8/86b(85d), 18/75b, 39/37d, 64/71b; 28/154d (नभाकृति:), 31/38b, 66b, 6/5d (नभान्तरे), 24/18b and the locative नभे above in 3/64b and below in 57/12a).

318. घ्; पविषा; च्, छ्: प्रविषा; all other MSs: प्रविल्ला।
319. क्, ख्: सतु–; ङ्: क्रतु–; घ्, च्: रिनु–। 320. घ्, छ्: चित्परे।
321. घ्, च्, छ्: लीलाहं; ङ्: नीलाहं। 322. ङ्: परमानदा। 323. क्, ग्: आनन्द * *तां;
च्: आनंदातनु–; ञ्: आनन्द * * (?) तां। 324. घ्, च्, छ्: कारेति। Note how here again the present tense denotes past action. See above, note to 3/14c.
325. घ्: विमले। IM 6 + 7. 326. ङ्: अथं।
327. घ्, च्, छ्: दक्ष। 328. ख्, ग्, ञ् ट्: –युर्यां।
329. क्: तठे गंगा। The components of the compound गङ्गातटे have been separated and their position reversed in order to fit the metre. Cf. 3/149d.
330. IC. The required plural वासुदेवादयः does not fit the metre.
331. च्: –णं। 332. ङ्: –क्य; this and the following two words are unclear in MS ञ्। 333. ग्: य व्यवस्थिताः; घ्, छ्: ये व्यवस्थिता।
334. घ्, छ्: नेन। 335. घ्, च्, छ्: पंचमाननां। The hiatus in this compound, abhorrent in standard Sanskrit, serves to accomodate the metre. Other examples are found in 5/80a, 6/77c, 7/78b, 79b, 89c, 8/66b, 9/1b, 22b, 10/54d, 15/16d, 15/45d, 18/104c, 19/45d, 24/50b, 26/51b, 30/89a, 195a, 31/2d, 33/129a, 46/275a, 54/13c, 57/37b, 89d, 66/84a, 67/28c and 68/43c.

Note also that although this is an incomplete sentence, nonetheless, although doubtful, it is possible to discern the meaning which is basically: नाहं तेनामन्त्रिता पुरा तत्र न चेश्वरस्तेनामन्त्रितः. The writer apparently considered the implicit presence of the verb to be sufficiently clearly carried over from the previous verse even though here the subject of the verb differs.

336. क्, ख्, च्: जय्अक्षोभं–। 337. च्: देवि।
338. ज्, ट्: ऋषयोण; झ्: ऋठायेण; all other MSs: ऋषयेण। As I understand this sentance, an instrumental plural is required here. Moreover, in order to make the syntax complete, निमन्त्रितौ in the next line should be repeated here. But even so, the syntax of this and the following line remains extremely clumsy.
339. ञ्, ट्: संकया। 340. All MSs: च तदा।
341. घ्: समयान्तु; च्: सभयास्तु; छ्: सभयास्तु; all other MSs: सभयान्ना।
342. क्, ग्, ञ्, ट्: लिमंत्रितौ; च्: त्वेमंत्रितौ; घ्: लेमंत्रीतौ; च्, छ्: लेमंत्रितौ।
343. घ्, ङ्, च्: –रव्ध; झ्: –लव्धं। 344. M → N.
345. क्: –यज्ञविस्वंसेना–; च्: –विनृवसना–; ञ्: यज्ञ * * * (?) नार्थाय।
346. घ्, ङ्, च्: सापः। 347. All MSs: प्रवर्तते। 348. क्, घ्, ज्: त्रैलोक्य।
349. च्, छ्: –भद्रौ। 350. घ्, छ्: गणै।
351. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, ञ्: सहः। 352. क्: वीराः; all MSs except झ्: –वीरः।
353. क्: –वृंदै–; ङ्: –वृदेसमाहितः; all other MSs except झ्: –वृन्दे–।
354. घ्, छ्: आरध्वं; च्: आरधं; झ्: आलव्धं। A connecting pronoun such as तेन is required to mark the transition from the subject of an active to a passive verb.

355. छ्: –विध्वसं। M → N. Regular syntax requires that the subject of this passive participle should be in the instrumental.

356. Note how this bahuvrīhi compound qualifies only the first member of the preceding compound.

357. घ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: विध्वंशित–; ञ्: (?)। The gender of these adjectives implies that the masculine noun यज्ञ– is treated as neuter as it is invariably throughout this text. See, for example, below 3/149d, 150d, and 157a.

358. च्: आद्याटोच्चाटने; घ्: आद्योटोच्चाटनं; छ्: आद्याटोच्चाटन; all other MSs आद्याटोच्चाटनं।

359. घ्: त्रन्त्राश्च; झ्: तन्त्राश्च; all other MSs except घ्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: त्रस्ताश्च।

360. ङ्: प्रपलान्वि; छ्: प्रयलान्ति; all other MSs: प्रपलान्ति। Throughout this text the present tense and the optative are used to denote past action. See above, note to 3/14c. The reading has been emended accordingly.

361. All MSs except क्, च्: दशो।

362. ग्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: दिश; च्: दश:; all other MSs except क्: दिश:।

363. च्: शरण:; all other MSs: शरणा:। 364. ज्: तत्। IM 5.

365. All MSs: प्राणवाण–। 366. घ्: पातालेविवरे; छ्: पातालविवरेत्। IM 6 + 7.

367. छ्: केचिद्। 368. क्, ख्, च्: गुहरमागता; झ्: ?; all other MSs:

गुहरमागता:। 369. ख्, ग्, झ्, ट्: केचित्नष्टा; ञ्: (?)।

370. ञ्: (?)। 371. ङ्, ञ्: स्वर्ग; च्: स्वर्गा।

372. ङ्, च्, झ्: –ता। 373. ङ्, च्, छ्: –ष्टा। 374. IM 5.

375. All MSs: आराधयेत्। But see above, note to 3/14c.

376. ख्: सुहृष्टात्मा, घ्, च्, छ्: प्रहृष्टा–, झ्: समष्टान्सा।

377. घ्: नोजीवासनेसंस्थित:; झ्: राजीवासनेसंस्थित:; all other MSs: –संस्थित:।

378. क्, ख्: देक्षोवाच; ग्, ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: दक्षोवाच।

379. च्: लोकानुपह–; घ्: –क:; ञ्: लोकानु * * * (?) रक।

380. ग्: – भगवत्शम्भो; घ्, च्: –भगवत्च्छ–; ङ्: –भगवन्च्छ–, छ्: –भगवच्छम्भो। Cf. below,

3/87a. 381. All MSs: लिङ्गरूपी। 382. घ्: –शिव:। 383. क्, ग्, ञ्: सहा–।

384. All MSs: नाम्नासौ। 385. All MSs except ज्, झ्, ट्: वरे।

386. घ्, च्, छ्: जष्टं। 387. ख्, ङ्: ग्रष्टं; झ्: * * (?); ञ्, ट्: पष्टं। यष्टम् is irregular, the regular form is इष्टम्। See below, note to 8/13b concerning the equivalent deviant gerund –यष्ट्वा। 388. झ्: * *?। 389. घ् छ्: रुक्त्या।

390. क्: ईदृगाहुरनेकधा; घ्: ईदृगादुरनेकधा:; all other MSs: ईदृगादुरनेकधा।

391. ङ्: –पूर्णता। 392. घ्, च्, छ्: + श्रीकुब्जिका उवाच।

393. ञ्: ?। 394. क्: विज्ञाप्यासौ; ख्, ग्, झ्: विज्ञप्यासौ; घ्, च्:

विज्ञापितोसौ; छ्: विज्ञाप्य *; ज्: विज्ञार्प्य सौ; ञ्: * * (?) प्यासौ; ट्: विज्ञर्प्यसौ।

395. घ्, च्, छ्: दक्ष। 396. ख्: –पुत; all other MSs: –पुट।

397. घ्, झ्: स्तुतोति। The root स्तु normally belongs to the second class of verbs and is ubhayapadī. There are four forms of the third person singular present namely: स्तौति/स्तवीति and स्तुते/स्तुवीते. Here स्तु is treated as if it belonged to the fifth class of roots that is, on the model of the root सु of which the present active of the third person singular is सुनोति. This deviant form occurs again in 4/37c. See also below, note to 5/72b and 6/82c concerning the deviant form स्तुवते. Also, notice here again how the present indicative is used to denote past action (see above, note to 3/14c). 398. ञ्: न * स्ते। 399. घ्: –कः।

400. ञ्: (?)। The following word is also unclear in MS ञ्।

401. घ्, च्, छ्, झ्, ट्: –प्रकाशायव्य; ट्: –प्रकाशायुव्य। The dative may function with this verb as the case to which something (in the accusative) is offered respectfully. So, instead of taking this to be irregular concord, we may treat this compound disjunctively, that is, as a separate object of the same verb repeated covertly twice, thus: वन्दे नित्योदितप्रकाशाय वन्दे विद्यामहाव्रतम्. Cf. 3/131.

402. घ्, च्, छ्: –चन्द्रसंघातं। 403. घ्: सिद्धोघ्नं; all other MSs except क्, ङ्, ञ्, झ्: सिद्धोघं। See above, note to 1/5b.

404. ख्: –महार्णव। 405. झ्: म *?–; ञ्: * * * * * (?) संबोधं; all other MSs: –वोध। 406. क्, ज्: –कलपर्वतं; घ्, छ्: षड्– ; ञ्: (?); all other MSs: –पर्वतं। This simple emendation is preferable to a false metaphor that equates a mountain with the sun. 407. च्, ङ्: सर्व। 408. ख्, ङ्: –भस्करम्।

409. All MSs: पञ्चावस्था गतायस्य। 410. झ्: वंडे ज्ञोयं; this and the following word is illegible in MS ञ्। 411. घ्, ङ्, छ्: –कार; ञ्: (?)। I take this to be a deviant bahuvrīhi compound. The letter 'r' has been intercalated between the last two members of this compound so it seems that sandhi has taken place (see above, note to 3/21b). One could perhaps emend to accusatives, but then the intended concord with अज्ञानगह्वरम् would be lost. Moreover, the correct form of the acc. sing. of मनस् – मनसम् – does not fit the metre. A thematized form (acc. sing. – मनम्) is attested in this text, as it is in Tantric texts in general, although the regular form is also found (see below, note to 5/4a). I have chosen to leave the reading found in all the MSs rather than emend.

412. ङ्, झ्: त्यक्त्या; ञ्: (?)। 413. ङ्: –गज्वरम्; झ्: –ग *? रम्; ञ्: * * (?)नगह्वरं।

414. येन is implied. 415. A connecting pronoun such as तम् is implied. 416. घ्, च्, छ्: –र्यन्ते।

417. ङ्: निष्प्रपंच; झ्: * * * *?। 418. झ्: * * * *?।

419. घ्, च्, छ्: व्याप्ति; ट्: व्यो * (?)। 420. घ्, च्, छ्: त्रिकूट।

421. ञ्: पं * * * * (?); ट्: –तत्वस्थं।

422. This and the following word is illegible in MS ञ्।

423. ञ्: * * * (?) कुलसद्भावं; all other MSs: अकुलाकुल–। 424. च्: –देवं।

425. झ्: परा* * *?। 426. ङ्: –चक्रक * धारं च। 427. घ्, छ्: –मनो–।

428. ङ्: अवा–; ञ्, ट्: –बिले। According to more than two thirds of the MSs all the nouns and adjectives in this and the following line have locative singular endings. They have been emended to anusvāra.

429. This and the following word are unclear in ञ्।

430. घ्: चक्रे; all other MSs except ङ्, झ्: चक्र। 431. च्: –न्विते।

432. All MSs except झ्: पद्मरागा–। 433. ञ्: वक्रं।

434. क्, ङ्: –पुर। I presume that the final vowel of मणि– has been lengthened to make the sixth syllable long. The order of the first two components of this compound has been reversed. मणिपूर्णपुरम् is meant.

435. ङ्: पंचार; ञ्, ट्: पंचारं। 436. घ्: नीलं–। 437. ङ्: –दीप्त।

438. क्, ग्: –राहतम्; च्: –मनोहतं। 439. ञ्: (?)।

440. ङ्: कश्व–. Cf. 3/130d and see above, note to 3/21b.

441. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: –निभंप्रख्यं।

442. ख्, ट्: –रे; घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –नोचरे; ङ्: –णेचरे। 443. ङ्: –न।

444. All MSs except ज्, झ्: पंचकारं। IM 5.

445. This irregular or, better, pseudo compound can be understood as an illegitimate fusion of two compounds namely, आज्ञाचक्रम् and परापरम् in which the first of the two compounds has been contracted to the first of its components.

446. ञ्: (?)। 447. ञ्: (?). See above, note to 3/52c.

448. ज्: –चक्रे; ञ्: * (?) हाचक्रं। 449. ञ्: –मनोमयम्।

450. All MSs: एकारादि–। 451. ट्: हिसकुन्देंदु–। IM 6 + 7.

452. Derived from the indeclinable सद्यस्, सद्यो is an abbreviation of the proper name सद्योजातः. In this form it partly retains its original meaning and its character as an indeclinable with the additional characteristic that it is not liable to sandhi. See below, note to 45/60c. This usage is well illustrated in a passage below (45/60-64) where this form appears several times. We also find सद्यम् as a proper name (6/110a) and the root form सद्य standing for सद्योजात– in a list of proper names in prose between 30/104ab and 30/104cd. In one other place सद्य replaces सद्यो, it seems, in order to preserve the metre (28/10b: ककारं सद्यरूपकम्). In some compounds सद्यस् is invariably treated as सद्य–. The best example is सद्यावेश– (see 3/53c, 10/51a, 30/60c and 38/22a). The most common occurrence of the regular form is the name सद्योजात– (for one of many examples see above, 3/16a). Apart from one other compound (in 3/65b), it is also regular in the compound सद्यःप्रत्ययकारकः/–कम्/–कारिका (see 18/105d, 31/107d, 33/38d, 54b (emended from सद्य–, 36/25b, 42/32d (emended from सद्य–)). It also occurs once independently in its regular form (45/60b). The one place where all the MSs agree on the thematic सद्य– in a compound (6/178b) is not required by the metre and so has been emended to the regular form. 453. ज्: तततादिविभेदेनं; all other MSs: ततादि–।

454. ञ्: –सम * * (?)। 455. ञ्: (?)।

456. ञ्, ट्: पदि–; all other MSs: यदि–।

457. Although all the MSs read रुद्रत्रितयपूजितं, this appears to be a corrupt reading. There is no mention of the three Rudras in this Wheel anywhere in the corpus except, possibly, here. Moreover, only one god is said to be present in the other Wheels and so this reference would be anomolous in this context. We know that Rudra is the deity of the third Praṇava which is located in this Wheel (see chart in the note to the translation of 3/103). It is not uncommon for scribes to mistakenly omit a visarga and so, permitted by the metre, रुद्र– has been emended to रुद्रं and so we get रुद्रं त्रितयपूजितम् which means 'Rudra, worshipped by the triad' which, in the present context, does not yield a coherent meaning. Moreover, the intended meaning is, it seems, that Rudra is worshipped as the third. If so, we should understand त्रितय– here to mean तृतीय– 'third'. This corruption may either be the result of a scribal error or deviant usage as in the following example drawn from the SKh (MS G folio 32a) quoted in a note to 48/42c: नेत्राभ्यां तु भ्रुवोर्मध्ये नेत्रत्रितयं (ख् ग्: –तय) विन्यसेत्।। Clearly, नेत्रत्रितयम् in this case means तृतीयनेत्रम् and may equally be a scribal error for नेत्रतृतीयम् – a typical compound in the Sanskrit of these texts in which the order of the components is deviant. For the sake of clarity, presuming I have understood the intended meaning correctly, I have chosen to emend त्रितयपूजितम् to तृतीयं पूजितम्, even though this entails an irregular long sixth syllable.

458. ख्, ट्: घोरमनोमयं; ञ्: घोरामनोमयं। 459. All MSs: तत्र।

460. ग्: यादि–। 461. क्, झ्: ईश्वर। 462. ख्: अलातपुप्यसं–।

463. ञ्: * * * * (?) रं। The order of the components of this compound has been reversed. 464. All MSs except क्, झ्: तस्योर्द्धि।

465. ङ्: * शान–। 466. All MSs: विसर्गान्तं–। The regular form of the cardinal in this case is षोडशभिः. This deviant form coincides with that of the ordinal which replaces it in the great majority of instances. Thus the regular form appears only four times (42/64c, 48/50b, 51/5a, 62/61b). In one instance the metre demands the emendation of the regular form to the deviant one (24/118d) which appears on the same line. On the other hand, the deviant cardinal षोडशैः appears twelve more times (3/108b, 7/9a, 24/18a, 24/118d, 25/1a, 25/23a, 38/26b, 42/67c, 51/5a, 58/59a, 80c, 66/21b). While metre is invariably a consideration here, it is not always so in the case of the nominative of the cardinal – षोडश. This appears only three times (21/23b, 40/121b and 43/26d). Otherwise it is replaced by षोडशः, which coincides with the form of the ordinal. It appears as many as twenty-three times, namely, in 7/39c*, 61c*, 76a*, 78d, 91c*, 99d, 22/3a, 25/15d, 24d, 29d, 32d, 33d, 36b, 30/47c*, 43/26d, 46/95c, 227c, 56/16d, 60/31a*, 62/37b, and 68/32b. Only six out of these instances (the ones marked with an asterix) are necessary in order to fit with the metre. Clearly, the metre is not the prime consideration here. Indeed, numerous examples appear at the end of a line. The instance in 43/26d is an interesting case because the regular form is followed immediately by the deviant one as the metre demands. This may be understood as the dropping of the final visarga or else an alternation between the two forms dictated by the metre. The former explanation seems the best. Indeed, one wonders whether the regular form has, at least in this text, been entirely supplanted by the deviant one and that the occurrence of the regular one is due either to scribal error or metrical considerations. However, the ordinal remains षोडश:, which appears seven times (2/25b, 7/87a, 11/6d, 23/5d, 28d, 46/146a, and 50/18c). We do find one instance of the deviant ordinal षोडशम (9/35d) but this has not served as an alternative form of the ordinal that could have differentiated it from the cardinal. 467. See above, note to 3/52c.

468. ञ्: –काज्ञाप्रवो * * (?)। 469. घ्, छ्: तन्त्रा–; all other MSs except झ्: –गतं।

470. All MSs except क्, झ्: –की। A correct feminine form in this case would be विभेदिकाम्। Feminines are commonly formed in this irregular way in this text. A number of examples are found in the following verses. See above, 2/5d and note.

471. MS ख् is unclear from here to 3/135b. All other MSs except क्, झ्: –ता।

472. All MSs except ग्, घ्, झ्: –डामरी।

473. All MSs except घ्, झ्: –पूर्वगता।

474. All MSs: देवी –प्रकाशकी। प्रकाशिका or प्रकाशिनी would be regular Sanskrit. See above, note to 2/5d. 475. ज्, झ्: विख्याता; all other MSs: –विज्ञाता।

476. ग्: वन्द। 477. All MSs except झ्: –री।

478. One expects accusative endings throughout on the analogy of the previous and following verses but this involves emending all of them without the support of any of the manuscripts. Otherwise, one could assume the implied presence of a connecting ताम् or the like. This line would then be read as (या) चक्रनायकिविख्याता (ताम्) उड्डामरीं वन्दे. But this does not appear to have been intended. For one thing, in the following verse where the connecting pronoun is explicitly present the majority of the MSs read the accusative for most of the words that require it. Moreover, in many cases in the following verses the name of the deity is the object of the verb and so should be in the accusative. However, it is not in almost every cases in all the MSs except क् and झ्. It appears, therefore, that the omission of the *anusvāra*s is due to scribal error in the one or two MSs that were the original source of the others. The readings in MSs क् and झ् are generally close and, particularly in MS क्, are idiosyncratic with respect to those of the other MSs betraying, at times (as in this case), what appear to be attempts by one or more scribes to emend the text. Accordingly, presuming, for these reasons, an originally defective transmission, the passage has been systematically emended.

479. घ्, च्, छ्: –स्था; ञ्: * * * * (?) कम–।

480. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: –की। See above, note to 2/5d.

481. All MSs except क्, झ्: –ता।

482. ट्: वन्द। 483. All MSs except झ्: –नी। 484. घ्, च्, छ्: –स्था।

485. All MSs: सवरी–; क्: –भेदवीं; ग्, ञ्: –भेदवी; छ्: –भेदकी; ट्: –भेदकं। See above, note to 2/5d. 486. All MSs except क्, झ्: –ता।
487. घ्, छ्: वह; च्: वद। 488. All MSs: दूती। 489. All MSs except क्, झ्: –नी। 490. ञ्: (?)। 491. घ्, च्, छ्: –स्थं।
Here, in order to accommodate the metre, a compound has been split. What is meant here is मूर्धनि आज्ञाचक्रस्थाम्। 492. ट्: सिद्धतत्व–। 493. All MSs except क्, झ्: –ता। 494. All MSs except क्, झ्: –णी।
495. ग्: अनामंचक्र–। 496. All MSs except क्, झ्: –ता।
497. ग्: खेतचरी; all other MSs: खेचरी। 498. ङ्: पुर; च्: पुर्रे (?)।
499. ञ्: * * * * * * (?) कारां। 500. All MSs except क्, झ्: –ता।

501. All MSs except क्, झ्: –रूपिणी। An irregular compound has been formed here for the sake of the metre. पूर्णाख्याममृतरूपिणीम् would be correct.

502. All MSs except झ्: –विंव। 503. घ्, च्, छ्: उङ्गगा–; all MSs except क्, झ्: –री।
504. All MSs: देवी। 505. छ्, ज्, ट्: –णी; all other MSs except क्, झ्:
चन्दिकाकाररूपिणी। 506. ञ्: वामा * * * * (?) ष्टां।

507. All MSs except क्, छ्, झ्: चारु–; ञ्: –नन्दिता; ट्: –तीं।

508. ञ्: (?); all other MSs except झ्: वामा।

509. ख्, झ्: चा; all other MSs: चां। Although emendation to चाकुलमालिनीम् is possible, the goddess is never called अकुलमालिनी, whereas she is कुलमालिनी in two other places below (see 16/82d and 23/32d) and generally in the Kubjikā Tantras.

510. All MSs: परा। 511. There are numerous examples in this text and Tantric Sanskrit in general of the noun तेजस् being treated as a thematic noun (see below, note to 4/11d). However, in this case one is in doubt whether to emend or not because the metre does not require this deviation.

512. घ्: तत्वात्माने–; all other MSs: तत्वात्मान–।

513. ङ्: तेजोहन्ता; ञ्: तेजोहती; all other MSs except क्, झ्: तेजोहतां।

514. क्: च दक्षिणे च; all other MSs except झ्: दक्षिणे च।

515. All MSs: –दिवाकरम्। 516. ङ्: –मध्य; ञ्: –त्रितीय * * (?)।

517. ग्, च्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: किंसुका–; all other MSs: किंशुका–।

518. All MSs except क्, ङ्, झ्: तस्याः। 519. च्: –र।

520. घ्, च्, छ्: त्रिष्कोत्य–। The words त्रिकोण– and त्रिकाल– each have two other deviant forms namely, त्रिष्कोण– and त्रिःकोण– and, analogously त्रिःकाल– and त्रिष्काल–. The regular form त्रिकोण– appears in all MSs only six times (see 3/8a, 36a, 5/79c, 9/10c, and 11/31c). The form त्रिष्कोण– appears eight times again (see 5/29d, 11/42a, 27/66c, 30/59b, 38/7c, 42/4b, 49/19b, and 49/30a). Although the form त्रिःकोण– appears eleven times there is less consensus amongst the MSs between this and the regular form. It occurs in 3/48d (four MSs), 34/8a, 15c, 75b, 35/9d, 25a (four MSs) 42/7b, 42/15c (four MSs), 49/22d, 56/4a (two MSs) and 59/76d (three MSs).

How far is the form त्रिष्कोण– a scribal error or an alternative spelling? MSs छ् and ज् not uncommonly read त्रिष्कोण– when all the other MSs have the regular form त्रिकोण–; see, for example, 11/39a and 17/29a. But in 59/76d MSs ख्, ग् and ज् read त्रिष्कोण–. These divergences are the result of faulty transmissions of the text. Even so a doubt remains as to whether the original form in each case was the regular or the deviant one. In some cases, however, as in 26/4b, the metre demands that the form त्रिकोण– remain unaltered.

The following is an example of how the two can be consciously manipulated by the redactor himself. In 26/4b MSs ख्, घ् and छ् read त्रिकोणान्ते समस्तं and the rest read त्रिष्कोणान्ते समस्तं. Neither of these readings fit the metre and so have been emended to त्रिकोणान्तसमस्तं. In this case the form त्रिष्– is clearly the result of a scribal error. But essentially the same expression –त्रिष्कोणान्ते समस्तं– in 38/7c appears at the beginning of the line and so the same need to accomodate the metre demands the reading rejected in 26/4c. Moreover, verse 38/7 reappears as 42/4. But whereas all the MSs in the former case agree on the reading त्रिष्कोणान्ते in 42/4b only three MSs have this reading.

The analogous त्रिकाल–, presents a similar picture. The regular form appears not less than five times (see 14/14b, 16/104b, 24/66a, 30/186c, and 66/44d) whereas the form त्रिष्काल– is attested six times (see 3/140d, 4/43a, 5/56d, 31/98b, 32/42a, and 46/112a). The form त्रिःकाल– appears just once in 48/52a. Just as the regular form त्रिकोण– alternates with त्रिष्कोण– the same takes place between त्रिकाल– and त्रिष्काल–. Thus in 4/43a all the MSs read the deviant त्रिष्काल– which appears in the phrase त्रिष्कालमेककालं वा. However, when exactly the same expression appears in 16/106a we find that all the MSs read the regular form i.e. त्रिकालमेककालं वा. But in the KMT and .SSS, where the same verse appears (see note to 16/106a), the reading is त्रिष्काल–. It appears therefore that the original reading was corrected. This deviant form is found extensively in Tantric texts in general. Thus, for example, in the Buddhist Āryamañjuśrīmūlakalpa (p. 232) we find त्रिःकालम्.

Note that contrary to what one would expect, this change does not usually take place before other hard consonants, although we do find the reading त्रिःप्रकार– in MSs घ् and छ् at 11/69c. Indeed, in this text it never takes place even before other words beginning with the hard unaspirated gutteral 'k'. So, for example, we find the readings त्रिकन्दकम् in 9/41d and त्रिकूट– in 3/95c and 6/166d. But there are instances of त्रि:क्रम– in other texts, for which see above note to 1/3d and 1/5b.

Finally, another deviant permutation attested in this text is the form त्रिर्– derived from an original त्रिस्–. Examples are: त्रिरस्त्रम् (3/2a, 2c, and 34/5b), त्रिरक्षरी (3/17b) and त्रिरक्षरा (20/21a). Monier-Williams (p. 461) notes that the adjective त्रिरक्षर– is found in the late Dhyānabindūpaṇiṣad. The adjective त्रिरस्रि ('three cornered') appears in RV 1/152/2 (ibid.). Other examples are: त्रिरब्दैः (14/42a), त्रिरावर्तम् (28/91b), त्रिराहुतीन् (34/25a) and त्रिरङ्गं (49/49a). Cf. the analogous form द्विर् concerning which see note to 1/2d. 521. ञ्: तस्या * * * (?)। The addition of the required anusvāra here would upset the metre. 522. ञ्: सि * * (?)।

523. All MSs: त्रिस्था। 524. क्, ङ्; ञ्, ट्: त्रिचलया–; ग्: त्रिचलयां–।

525. ट्: वन्दंहं। 526. ङ्: –ली।

527. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ट्: परमे–। 528. घ्: अनामी।

529. ञ्: –धाम्नि * (?)। One wonders why the author chose to form an irregular aluksamāsa here when the regular परधामस्थाम् would fit the metre equally well. 530. घ्, छ्: भाषिणम्; ङ्: –भाविनी; ञ्: * (?) क्ति–। 531. ञ्, ट्: –तत्व–।

532. ट्: (?)। 533. ङ्: –नी। 534. ग्, ञ्: –भेदैभेदितां।

535. ञ्: –ला * * (?)। 536. IC. विपरीतया does not fit the metre.

537. ङ्: –णे *। 538. घ्: संवेद्ये; छ्: सम्वेद्य। 539. All MSs: यथा घटम्।

540. घ्, च्: त्वर्य–; छ्: त्वर्य्यस्थममृतं।

541. The root द्रु is 1P but the ātmanepadī form is attested in the Epics. Moreover, the same form appears again here at least four times again (see 13/138b, 30/62a, 56/5b, and 58/49b). 542. All MSs except झ्: विन्दु।

543. क्: तस्यार्द्ध; ग्, ङ्: तस्योर्द्ध। 544. छ्: –मात्रत्व। See above, note to 3/52c.

545. All MSs: कलाशेषं तु। 546. घ्, च्, छ्, झ्: विश्वरूप–।

547. ङ्: नील; all other MSs: नीलं। 548. विपर्यास– (M) is the regular form of the noun. The shortening of the penultimate long vowel for the metre has led to the irregular use of the adjective विपर्यय– as a noun.

549. घ्, च्, छ्: परावस्थे। 550. ञ्, ट्: –सृतम्। Cf. 3/100b and 3/135b and see above, note to 3/21b. 551. See above, note to 3/90a.

552. ञ्: आत्मत * * (?)यसी; all other MSs: –गरीयसी। 553. All MSs: –ता।

554. क्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: –लक्ष्मीर्; all other MSs: –लक्ष्मी। 555. ट्: कलिकां।

556. All MSs except ग्, झ्: –ता।

557. All MSs except क्, घ्, ङ्, च्: –भिर्लक्षं।

558. The words शुष्काम् and अभयप्रदाम् have fused to form this irregular compound. 559. ट्: –पक्ष। 560. ट्: पर।

561. ञ्: वि * (?)। 562. ञ्, ट्: –ढां।
563. ङ्: शि * * यिं। An interconnecting pronoun such as ताम् is implied.
564. क्, ख्, ङ्: –मध्यं; घ्: –मध्य। 565. All MSs: मनः। The noun मनस् is frequently thematized in this text and so I have emended accordingly. For other examples see below, 3/136a, 13/56a, 14/9a, 16/93a, 24/45a, 26/90d, 36/31a, 53/13a, 57/5a, 53a, 83d, 60/14c, 61/90c(93c), 65/61b, and 66/13d. But note that the regular form also occurs, for example, see below 5/35c, 15/47c, 25/37b, and 30/45c. 566. ङ्: – * शे। 567. घ्, च्, छ्: महाघोरे।
568. ग्, ट्: खम–; ञ्: व्योम * * * (?)मश्रितं। Readings from MS ख् resume here.
Cf. 3/100b and 3/130d and see above, note to 3/21b.
569. All MSs: चिन्तयेन्–। Cf. 3/136c.
570. The neuter noun व्योमन् has been thematized here as happens frequently throughout the text. See 3/138a, 24/52c, 25/38b (where it is treated as masculine: पञ्चव्योमस्तु), 28/15a, 33a, 49/37a, 56/9a, 11b, 58/9c, 62/51b, and 65/23a. The instrumental of the thematized form (व्योमेन) appears twice (24/37d and 68/14c).
We also find the nom. sing. महाव्योमम् (see 49/38d and 56/9a) and महद्व्योमम् (58/9c).
But although the the loc. sing. महाव्योमे does occur once (49/37a) the bare loc. sing.
form is invariably the regular व्योम्नि. However, despite the substantial presence of the deviant form the regular one is common (see, for example, 55/2a and 4a (व्योमानि), 56/15c, 58/93c and 59/67d).
571. All MSs: –मनः। Cf. above, 3/134a and see below, note to 5/4a.
572. ट्: –गर्भ। 573. छ्: सस्मरेत्; all other MSs: संस्मरेत्। Cf.
3/135c. 574. ख्: –करुणं; all other MSs except क्, झ्:
–करणं। Even after this emendation, the seventh syllable of this pāda remains defective. 575. See above, note to 3/52c.
576. ङ्: कठमध्य। 577. All MSs except क्, च्, झ्: समासृत्य।
578. ख्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: महोदधे; ञ्: महो * * (?)।
579. ञ्: * * (?) व्योम–। 580. ख्, ङ्: –वा; ग्, ञ्: –व।
581. ङ्: –तां। 582. ङ्: व्योम। See above, note to 3/135d.
583. ग्: तडनाहतां; घ्, च्, छ्: –तडिनाहनं; ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: तडिनाहतां।
584. च्, झ्: व्योमा–; ख्, ङ्: व्योमश्रितां; all other MSs: व्योम्नाश्रीताम्।
585. ञ्: (?)। 586. घ्, च्, छ्: –राजस्–; ञ्: (?)। M → N.
587. घ्, च्: तव ग्राह्यं + महा; छ्, झ्: तव ग्रह्यं। 588. IM 6 + 7.
589. ङ्: –योगेन। 590. The word धारणा is treated here as if it were an instrumental singular. The correct form would be धारणया but this is one syllable too long. 591. ञ्: सं * (?) रेद्। 592. ङ्: निष्काल। See above, note to 3/119d. 593. ङ्: भैरवं–; all other MSs: भैरवे–।

594. This line is illegible in MS ञ्।
595. छ्: जला–; ञ्: * * * * (?) विनिर्मुक्तो।
596. Missing in MS ख्। 597. All MSs: दारिद्र–; missing in MS ख्।
598. The root चर् is normally 1P, here the ātmanepadī form of the optative adds a syllable to the metre. The same form recurs below (see 18/17a, 34/106b and 45/37d). 599. ख्: तिष्टते। See above, note to 3/15d.
600. ञ्: अप * * * (?)। 601. ञ्: (?)। The root बाध् is normally 1Ā.
Rather than assume, as I have done that it is treated here as a 4Ā root one could emend to the regular बाधेत without disturbing the metre unlike the present – बाधते – which is better Sanskrit but does not fit the metre.
602. ञ्: (?)। I take the verb, of which this is the subject, to be in the next line. 603. ञ्: (?)। 604. क्, ख्, ग्, झ्: परा–। A genitive has replaced the ablative. परशिष्येभ: would make better syntax. 605. ञ्: दात * (?)।
606. ज्, ट्: –न। 607. ट्: –न:। 608. ञ्: (?)।
609. ञ्: (?)। 610. छ्, ट्: दद्याद्; ञ्: (?)। 611. छ्, ट्: –न:।
612. घ्, च्, छ्: तान्त्रिकाय। This and the following two words are illegible in MS
ञ्. 613. क्, ग्: आत्म * न–; ञ्: आत्म * नप्र–।
614. ञ्: प्रातरु * * (?); ट्: प्रतरूत्थायु। 615. छ्: सस्मरेद्; ञ्: * *
(?) रेद्। 616. झ्: वति; घ्, च्, छ्: वेतु; all other MSs except ज्, ट्: वेति।
617. घ्, च्, छ्: –वाध–; ञ्: –नं। 618. ञ्: विविम्ब * * (?)।
619. ङ्: –पूर्ण; ञ्: (?)। 620. ञ्: (?)।
621. ञ्: (?)। Markers of direct speech are missing here, as not uncommonly happens in the Sanskrit of this text. See below, note to 3/156ab.
622. घ्: प्रसन्न; ञ्: प्रस * (?)। 623. One could easily emend to उवाचैवं which fits the metre, but one could also assume that an honorific plural is meant here. Cf, below 4/11c. 624. ख्: पर शांतं; all other MSs: परं शांतं।
625. IM 6 + 7. 626. The root स्तु is treated here as if it were a सेत् root whereas it is अनित्। The regular form of the perfect passive participle is स्तुत:. 627. ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: दक्षोवाच; ञ्: दक्षावाच।
628. ङ्: –यज्ञ। M → N. See, note to 3/81a. This line is illegible in MS ञ्.
629. ख्: गंतातटे; ङ्: गंना–; च्, छ्: गता–; ट्: गं * (?)तटे।
630. ञ्: * * * * * (?) सिध्यर्थं; all other MSs except ख्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –सिद्धार्थं।
631. घ्: देव; च्, छ्: देव:। 632. All MSs: यज्ञ।
633. ञ्: –त्कापाच्च। 634. घ्, च्: श्राप–; क्, ख्, ङ्: –स्त्रष्टमहं, ग्, ट्: म्रष्टमहं;
छ्: श्रापभष्टमहं। The correct form भ्रष्टो, has become भ्रष्टम् to gain a syllable for the metre.
It is remarkable that the predilection the Sanskrit of this text has for the neuter gender extends even to making the first person neuter. Cf. below, 4/18d.

635. ख्: मखस्थांयांज–; ग्, ङ्, च्, ट्: मखस्थां–; घ्, छ्: मषस्थां–। This line and the first two words of the following one are illegible in MS ञ्. 636. ख्: तेषामुद्धेग–।
637. घ्, च्, छ्: ततः। 638. Note the use of the honorific plural. Cf.
3/148c. 639. क्: प्रशष्टाश्च। 640. ङ्: महादरे।
641. ख्: तेषा। 642. क्: * ति; ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: तिहि।
643. This line and the first word of the following one are illegible in MS ञ्।
इत्युक्त्वा would be better grammar. See below, note to 5/38b. 644. घ्, च्, छ्: –ता।
645. ञ्: सत्यदं. See 3/12c and note. 646. ञ्: शुचि * * (?)।
647. घ्, च्, छ्: –रंभ। 648. ञ्: –सा * * (?)। The following word, the next line and the first word of the line after that are illegible in MS ञ्.
649. घ्, छ्: –हो। 650. घ्, छ्: –य; च्: –स्याग्र।
651. ख्: –द्वयं। M → N. I have not made the obvious emendation to महावरः presuming that अयम् in this case, as in many others, functions as a neuter pronoun.
See above, note to 1/5b.
652. Notice that here as in 3/147d, 161cd, 163, 4/27ab, 6/12cd, 6/84b, 134c and in other places throughout the text there is no इति to mark direct speech.
Cf. KMT 1/31cd. 653. M → N.
654. घ्, च्: चित्–; छ्: चितु–। See above, note to 3/81a. 655. क्: धृस्तं।
656. घ्, ङ्: –सुदीप्य; छ्: –काशसमुदीप्य; ट्: –काशसंमुदीप्य। 657. क्: परमो–।
658. ञ्: (?)। 659. ग्, छ्, झ्: स्मृत–।
660. This and the following two words are illegible in MS ञ्.
661. घ्, च्, छ्: भस्मद्–; ञ्: * * * (?)ता। The correct form, भस्मसाद् गता, has been contracted to fit the metre. 662. घ्, च्, छ्: शार्थी। 663. घ्, च्, छ्: नपरेव। 664. The strong stem of the word हिमवत् is treated as a thematic stem and declined accordingly in a number of cases. Here and 3/161b we find the genitive हिमवन्तस्य, in 3/162b the instrumental हिमवन्तेन and the ablative हिमवन्तात् in 30/175b.
Moreover, the strong stem हिमवन्त– appears in at least three compounds (see 35/97d, 47/24d and 57/22a). 665. ञ्, ट्: अष्टम। 666. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, झ्: महाजन्म। In a few instances the word जन्मन् is treated as a neuter thematic noun. We find the nom. sing. जन्मम् in one place (38/25a) and the acc. sing. of the same form (30/206a). There is one instance of the instrumental जन्मेन replacing the regular जन्मना (24/63a) and the ablative जन्माद् replacing the regular जन्मतः (59/95d). There are as many as three possible instances of the locative जन्मे (see 65/2a, 67/20c and 68/75a). The derived adjective जन्मनी occurs two or maybe three times (see 14/130b and 64/50a and the readings of the MSs at 58/75c.). The shortened form
जन्मी occurs once (see 15/12b). 667. क्, ख्: –कोलिका।

668. क्, झ्: मम; all other MSs: मां।

669. All MSs except क्, ग्, ज्, झ्: –णी।

670. See above, 3/161b. 671. ञ्: ईप्स * (?)। Note again how the present tense can denote past action. See above, note to 3/14c. 672. ञ्: * * (?) ग्रहणं।

673. All MSs: काली। 674. The root दा is 3 U and so the two regular forms of the second person imperative singular are ददस्व and देहि। This deviant form is attested in three other places here (see below, 4/6a, 23a and 5/60c).

675. घ्: सुव्रते। Again, unmarked direct speech. See above, note to 3/156ab.

676. क्, घ्: दत्तां; ज्: दन्ता। 677. क्, ञ्: पारिचर्य; ग्: परिचर्य; घ्, ङ्, च्: पारिचर्यें; all other MSs: पारिचर्ये। IM 6. 678. क्: सुन्दरीं। 679. घ्, च्, छ्: –शे।

680. ख्: महाशै; ङ्: –ल। 681. All MSs: तस्यावेशं। M → N. This emendation has been made on the basis of the Ṭ which reads: महा–/आदेशं। See note to the English translation of 3/162-164ab. Notice also the absence of इति that marks direct speech. See above, note to 3/156ab. 682. ञ्: * * (?) वं।

683. Out of the fifteen times the gender of this word can be ascertained in this text it is in its regular masculine gender only twice (see 14/87d and 33/69a). Otherwise, as here, it is neuter. 684. ग्, ञ्: –मृहे। 685. ञ्: –शीं।

686. ञ्: * * (?) पर्य–। 687. M → N. See above, note to 3/164a.

688. ङ्: –पूर्ण। Here, as in many other instances, a perfect passive participle functions as gerund. See below, note to 5/38b.

689. All MSs: शुद्धवासनी। 690. ख्: चर्चिता।

691. In this case the `m' that is inserted to gain the required syllable for the metre is not between elements of a compound but between separate words. See above, note to 3/21b. 692. ञ्: * * * (?) भावेन।

693. घ्, च्, छ्: –शना–। 694. All MSs: अधिकार। 695. ञ्: –ताः।

696. M → N. See above, note to 1/5b. 697. ञ्: (?)।

698. ञ्: –मुखास्नायं। 699. ञ्: –व; ट्: शाम्भ *।

700. क्: चये; ग्, ञ्, ट्: –त्वये। 701. ञ्: –मार्ग * * * ते।

702. घ्, च्, छ्: –पीठवतारे; ञ्: आद्य * * (?) वतारिते।

703. ज्, ञ्, ट्: कादिभे *; missing in MSs घ्, च् and छ्।

704. ग्, ज्: * चतुर्–। 705. All MSs except घ्, छ्, झ्: अम्वा–।

706. क्: दक्षणाया–।

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER THREE

1. We have seen that Bhairava assumes various names when he plays the role of the first teacher (ādinātha). In the the Saṁvartāsūtra (1/2b) he was called Śrīnātha, in the previous chapter Vṛkṣanātha (2/9ab and 2/29-31) and here Tūṣnīnātha - the Silent Lord. This is also how he appears below in chapter 46, which is probably drawn from chapter 43 of the ṢSS. The legends associated with him have been outlined in introduction (vol. 2, p. 474 ff.).

The Cave in which Tūṣṇīnātha sits, is the Cave of the Kadamba Tree (kadambaguhā), where the goddess received the Consecration of the Command (ājñābhiṣeka) and enjoyed the bliss of the Śāmbhava state. This is the Cave Dwelling (guhāvāsa) to which the goddess sends the god at the end of this chapter to attain the Śāmbhava plane and receive her grace (3/162-4ab). We may surmise that Tūṣṇīnātha is the god when he is in the Cave receiving the same empowering grace the goddess received before him. Thus the chapter turns full circle, ending where it began.

These mythic motifs support and explain the symbolism of the maṇḍala, which is described in the following verses, and the Yogic practice to which this verse alludes. The 'temple of Meru', on the peak of which the Cave is located, is the maṇḍala. The same verse appears again below (3/30). There, instead of 'temple' (mandira) some manuscripts read maṇḍala. Below in 3/48 we are told that the goddess's Triangle, which is the core and essence of her maṇḍala, is the Cave Dwelling. Similarly, we have seen that according to the ṢSS (2/5) a form of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is located above the Cavity of Brahmā on the crown of the head. This has the shape of a triangle (Schoterman 1981: 50). From that, explains the ṢSS (2/29), originates ‘a circle where the Mountain of the Moon (candraśilā) is located. This is called the Cave of the Moon’.

The Mountain of the Moon, here called Meru, is Kailāsa, the sacred mountain in the centre of the world. Located in the End of the Twelve above the head it is, as we shall see in chapter eight, full of the phonemic energies of the letters. This inner or 'upper' maṇḍala is a symbolic reproduction of the place where the first transmission of the teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras in this Age took place. Thus it is the house (veśman, gṛha, ghara) and place of origin of the tradition which is called the last or end one (paścimāmnāya) because, amongst other reasons, it is located here at the end of this space. It is the place where accomplished yogis attain realisation as did Tūṣṇīnātha, the Silent Lord. In this way, the original empowerment of the outer sacred site through the descent of the goddess and her consort and Tūṣṇīśa's enlightenment, are reproduced and made accessible to the adept. The initiate who contemplates this maṇḍala and utters its mantras can draw the energy of the transmission from its original source (yoni).

2. The phonemes governed by the gods of the Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi) and the goddesses of the Mālinī alphabet, referred to as the fifty Siddhas and Yoginīs below in 3/31-2 are arranged within the triangular Meru in seven rows of 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11 and 13 letters. The triangle, drawn pointing downwards, serves as a matrix or grid (prastāra, gahvara) from which letters are extracted to form mantras. For details see below chapter eight where it is described in detail.

3. The Octad of Kula (kulāṣṭaka) is the group of eight Mothers (mātṛkā) and their mantras. The expression implies that the Mothers govern eight Kulas. Various groups of eight Yoginīs are associated with it. See 16/3ff. and 42/27ff.. The eight are placed on the eight petals of a lotus that surrounds the triangle. Note that in this version of the maṇḍala the hexagon that normally surrounds the triangle is missing. When this hexagon is present the eight-petalled lotus with the Mothers surrounds that.

4. The same triangle is mentioned again below in 3/31-32. There it is said to measure three times a hundred. Presumably, this is the total length of all three sides. Here, it seems, we are told the length of only one side. See note to 3/31. According to the KMT (1/61cd) the Stone upon which the goddess sits and assumes the form of a Liṅga extends for a hundred leagues (tatra madhye śilā ramyā śatayojanavistṛtā). However, nothing is said there about its shape. See intro. vol. 1, p. 16-17 and 28.

5. The triangular Stone is also said to be 'clearly visible' (suspaṣṭā) below in 3/35.

6. The five seats (āsana not pīṭha!) in this case are probably the Five Praṇavas. Uttered together with the syllable AIṀ, which is the sonic and graphic form of the goddess in the centre, they sustain it, as I were. As the first Praṇava is the letter AIṀ, it is its own seat. Thus, if I have understood correctly, the other four pranavas should be drawn around it in the four directions, probably outside the Stone.

The Stone is represented by a downward facing triangle, which is how the letter E is written. This contains four sacred seats (pīṭha). The same four seats along with the additional fifth are also projected into the syllable of the goddess. The latter is represented by the additional slanting line with a Half Moon (ardhacandra) and Point (bindu) written above the triangular E to form the syllable AIṀ. The two, the inner syllable and the outer Triangle that contains it, are considered in some way to be extensions of each other. Accordingly, below (see 58/27-30) it is said to be Meru in three of its measures (mātra), that is, the audible portion represented by the three sides of the triangular part of the syllable (i.e. the letter E). The extra 'half-measure' above is said to be the location of the sacred seat Tisra or Trisrota (lit. '(made of) three currents'). Together they make AIṀ. When there are six seats, the sixth one is called Candra (Moon) and is represented by the lunar Point while Tisra is just the Half Moon and slanting line.

See intro. vol. 1 p. 106. But note that below in 6/207cd-211ab just the first four sacred seats within the Triangle are said to correspond to the three and a half measures. Thus in that case the Triangle by itself - the ‘naked’ letter E - functions as AIṀ (cf. see above 2/41).

The Point (bindu) in the centre of the triangle is the the Liṅga in which the goddess 'whose form is the Liṅga' abides in an unmanifest state merged in the transcendent body of the god, her consort. At the same time she is also the triangular support of the Liṅga. Here this is called the Stone after the Moon Stone (candraśilā) on which the Liṅga that the goddess penetrates stands and from which she emerges.

7. According to 3/40-41 below there is a semi-circular Half Moon under the Point in the centre of the triangle. The former is said to be eight-four leagues wide. It appears therefore that this verse refers to the Point above it which is bigger by two leagues. As the Half Moon represents the New Moon and the Point the Full Moon, it makes sense that the former should be smaller than the latter. However, when these two are represented graphically the Point above the Half Moon is generally smaller the of the two.

8. The two arches are the letters Ha and KṢa on the left and right outside the triangle. See below, 3/35-36ab.

9. These eight deities are the Eight Mothers of the Octad of Kula (cf. below 3/31). They are arranged on the eight petals of a lotus that surrounds the triangle. Protection is one of the most basic functions of the Eight Mothers. Thus the petals on which they sit are the ‘ramparts’ that surround and protect the core of the maṇḍala from outer negative influences.

10. See 13/113ff.. The expression akhaṇḍamaṇḍala – lit. 'unbroken circle' in a non-technical sense may simply be an adjective describing a circle. The whole maṇḍala is such in this sense (cf. 2/3cd above). Thus in YKh (1) we read:

> Once the (ground) has been prepared for the maṇḍala with liquor and cow dung, (then one should make) the square, which is the best enclosure (pura), and in the middle an unbroken (akhaṇḍa) circle. The Vidyāpīṭha should be placed just there in the middle (karṇikopari).

aligomayagandhena [ṅ: alinomayaganvena] kṛtvā maṇḍalanirṇayam ǀ caturasraṁ [k, kh, gh: -śraṁ] puraṁ śreṣṭhaṁ [k, kh, gh: śreṣṭaṁ] madhye ākhaṇḍamaṇḍalam ǁ vidyāpīṭhaṁ tu tatraiva dhārayed [gh: -yad; ṅ: dhārāyad] karṇikopari [all MSs: yaṁtrikopari] ǀ YKh (1) 16/166-167ab

The the same expression can apply to other maṇḍalas also. The Circle of the Sun that surrounds the Triangle is also said to be an 'unbroken circle' (3/36cd-

37) and so is the Circle of the Teachers (gurumaṇḍala) that is worshipped along with the Circle of the Transmission (kramamaṇḍala). In the KnT (MS K fl. 6b) we read: ‘I will explain the secret, unbroken circle, that is, the Circle of Teachers’ (akhaṇḍamaṇḍalaṁ guhyaṁ vadāmi [k, kh: dadāmi] gurumaṇḍalam). Similarly, in the same text we find this conclusion at the end of a section concerned with explaining how seed-syllables should be placed in the directions: ‘Once they have been worshipped as enjoined, make offerings to the unbroken circle’ (te ca saṁpūjya vidhivad akhaṇḍamaṇḍalaṁ [kh: aṣaṇḍa-] yajet [kh: jayeḍa]. Ibid. MS K fl. 12a).

In this sense, with reference to the Circle of the Sun that surrounds the Triangle (3/36cd-37), ‘its abode is the unbroken circle’. However, the same compound - akhaṇḍamaṇḍalāvāsa – can also be understood to mean that the Triangle is the ‘abode of the unbroken circle’. From this point of view the ‘unbroken circle’ is bindu – lit. 'point' or 'drop'. Pre-eminantly it denotes, as it does in this case, the Point in the centre of the maṇḍala where the deity resides and from whence the teachings proceed (cf. below 3/7). Beyond space and dimension, this 'unbroken circle' is both the Drop and the Ocean (24/42ab). This Drop is the goddess, the supreme form of Kuṇḍalinī who contains within herself in apotential form all the energies of manifestation. This state of latent potency is symbolically represented as a sleeping snake that, tightly coiled, assumes the form of a dimensionless point. In this state she is the lunar Drop that, shining like the moon, illumines the infinite expanse of the firmament of the Transcendent:

She is called Kuṇḍalinī and is Rudra’s energy, the Drop (bindukā) that is seen, O lady of good vows, in the Sky (of the transcendent) in the form of light (ŚM: as a beautiful light at dawn). The form of an unbroken circle, she illumines the surface of the sky.

kuṇḍalīti [KuKauM: kuṇḍalaṁ tu] samākhyātā rudraśaktis tu [KuKauM: guruśaktis tu] bindukā [ŚM: k: bindugā, kh: niyāmikā; g: suviṁdukā] |
gagane dṛśyate yā tu [KuKauM, ṢSS: yas tu] prabhākāreṇa suvrate [ŚM: prabhākāle (k: -kāre) tu suprabhā] ||
akhaṇḍamaṇḍalākārā [ṅ: -kālā; ŚM: -kāraṁ] dyotayantī [ŚM: dyotayantaṁ] nabhastalam [KuKauM and ṢSS: nabhasthalam] | ṢSS 50/61cd-62 (= KuKauM 7/240-241ab and ŚM 26/135cd-136)

This Drop is the fertilizing seed of the goddess, that is, her Command by means of which all things are shot through with the divine energy of Kuṇḍalinī. She is the accomplishment of the Command:

The Command, in the form of an unbroken circle, is radiant (sasphurā). O lord of the gods, just by seeing it, pierce the entire universe (with its energy).

akhaṇḍamaṇḍalākārā ājñā bhavati sasphurā ||
dṛṣṭamātreṇa deveśa vedhayed akhilaṁ jagat | AS 4/82cd–83ab

(The goddess Kuṇḍalinī) who has the form of an unbroken circle is said to be the accomplishment of the Command (ājñāsiddhi). O goddess, in an instant she pierces (through) the fettered soul (although he) be distant a hundred leagues.

akhaṇḍamaṇḍalākārā [all:-raṁ] ājñāsiddhiḥ [all: -siddhi] prakīrtitā [all: -tam] |
śatayojanikā [k kh: -yojanakaṁ; gh: -yoganakaṁ] devi paśuṁ vedhayate kṣaṇāt || CMSS 8/3

The following passage from the YKh (2) presents the syllable PHREṀ as the manifest form of the goddess, rather than AIṀ. In this case also the 'unbroken circle' is the bindu that crowns it, representing the goddess in her undifferentiated, unmanifest form:

She who is born from Śiva's radiant energy (tejas) should be known to be the one called Vakrikā. Beautifully playful (sucañcalā), she is perceived moving in the firmament of (the syllable) PHREṀ. One should constantly contemplate Kubjikā in the middle of the skyfaring goddesses (khecarī) within the Sky. (The syllable) PHREṀ is her form. It is not a mantra nor a designation (upalakṣaṇa) (while) Kubjikā, free of mind, is incomparable and unmanifest. She is freedom (itself kaivalyā) and (self-sustained) without support, (her) form is an unbroken circle. That king of yogis who contemplates (her thus) is accomplished (siddha) in the Kubjikā teachings (mata).

vakrikā nāma sā jñeyā śivatejaḥsamudbhavā [k, kh: -teja-] |
phreṁgagane dṛśyate sā tu gamyamānā sucañcalā ||
kubjikāṁ khecarīmadhye gagane [kh: gagaṇe] bhāvayet sadā |
phreṁ nāma [k: re(?)tphtenāmaṁ; kh: (?)nāmaṁ] tasyā [k, kh: tasya] vai rūpaṁ na mantraṁ nopalakṣaṇam ||
niropamyā nirābhāsā kubjikā manavarjitā [kh: mata-] |
kaivalyā tu nirālambā akhaṇḍamaṇḍalākṛtiḥ [k, kh: -ti] ||
cintayed yas tu yogīndro sa siddhaḥ kubjikāmate | YKh (2) 20/9cd–12

The 'unbroken circle' is a symbol of the all-encompassing nature of any ultimate principle, not only the goddess or her form as Kuṇḍalinī and the Command. The same epithet can be applied to the male principle as well. In that case also, the lunar character of the 'unbroken circle' somehow persists. Thus, the Person (puruṣa), who is pure consciousness, is described as an 'unbroken circle' and as the 'completely full lunar orb' (AS 5/155-157ab, quoted above, chapter 2, n. 64). Moreover, the same expression may also be used to describe and denote other Drops. Thus the Drop in the centre of the Wheel of the Command (ājñācakra) where the yogi realises the Fourth state (turīya) beyond waking, dreaming and deep sleep is said to be the Circle of the Drop (bindumaṇḍala), which is the 'unbroken circle' (19/3cd–5) and is the ocean within the Drop (24/42ab). Similarly, the Wheel of the Navel (maṇipura) is said to be an 'unbroken circle' (3/128).

11. I take this to be the form of Unstruck Sound taught in this school. It is the silent, inner essence of the goddess's Vidyā. The goddess is said to have the form of a lion (see 3/13-14ab and note). Thus, the Lion's Sound is the sound of the goddess, that is, her divine phonemic form as the Samayā Vidyā of thirty-two syllables whose sound is powerful, like a lion's roar. According to one series of signs of attainment (pratyaya), roaring like a lion is the last and highest one. See 13/101cd–102 and notes to 33/47. This Sound is represented by the semi-circle (ardhacandra) under the Drop (bindu). It is the New Moon while the Drop is the Full Moon.

12. The sides of the triangle are made of the letters of the alphabet. There are sixteen letters on each side. These are the sixteen vowels and the consonants from Ka to Ta and Tha to Sa. The remaining two letters - Ha and KṢa are outside to the right and left of the triangle. See below, 3/35-36ab.

13. The compound śatārdha- normally means 'half (ardha) of a hundred (śata)', that is, fifty. But this is not the size of the solar disc, which we are told below (3/36cd-37) is a hundred and fifty leagues in diameter. There the reading is śataṁ sārdhaṁ lit. 'a hundred with a half'. The compound śatārdha- is derivable from these components and so should be understood to be a copulative compound (dvandva) meaning 'a hundred and a half'. In other words the Triangle is set in the solar disc which according to 3/36cd-37 is an 'unbroken circle'. This may be what verse 3/5 says is 'below' and 'is as clean as pure crystal'. Although the solar disc is described as 'light red and very brilliant' (see 3/9 and 3/36cd-37), it is also said to be 'round and (clear) as pure crystal' (3/42).

14. The three girdles are the Moon, Sun and Fire. See below note to 3/42.

15. According to 3/36cd-37 below, the Circle of Sun that surrounds the triangle and is its foundation is 'light red' which further confirms that this section of the maṇḍala is the solar disc.

16. It may be better to read 'kulakaulikam' as do almost half the MSs. But below we are told that the semi-circle - the Half Moon (ardhacandra) - is the bliss of Kālikā, which is her seat (3/40-41). According to 6/187cd-188ab below, Kālī resides in the Half Moon which there, in accord with an alternative symbolism, is said to be located outside the triangle. Here, it seems, the Half Moon is either within the Point (bindu) in the centre of the triangle or in the centre of the triangle, presumably, under the Point. But according to 3/116, she is the goddess of the New Moon (amā devī) within the Full Moon and so, perhaps, should be drawn within the Point which represents the Full Moon. See figure in intro. vol. 1, p. 374.

17. Cf. below 3/42.

18. See above, note to the translation of 3/8.

19. The expression Kramamudrā denotes an important and very elevated practice in the Krama school of Kashmiri Śaivism (see Dyczkowski 1987: 160-161). However it is not a common expression in the Kubjikā Tantras. It occurs in only one other place in all the primary sources, that is, below in 3/57. There we are told that it is located in the sacred seat of OṀ, i.e. Oḍḍiyāna in the Point in the centre of the triangle. Here we are told that it is the Command. As such Mudrā is the goddess who, as the Transmental (unamanī), is herself the Command. Thus Kramamudrā is the Command which is the goddess of the Krama. This is indirectly confirmed in the parallel passage below according to which Amā, the energy of the New Moon, that is, the goddess Vakrā is said to be in the centre (see 3/43 ff.) and so is Kramamudrā. Accordingly, the entire maṇḍala is called mudrāśrama - the Abode of Gesture and the centre of it is mudrāpīṭha - the Sacred Seat of Gesture (see note to 3/57).

20. The edited text reads: jyeṣṭhamadhyamabālaṁ ca adivyaṁ khecarakramam. It appears at first sight that the adjective adviyam (lit. non-divine' i.e. 'human') qualifies khecarakramam rather than the other three lineages, as I have translated, but this would be inconsistent with the conceived nature of this fourth transmission. We have seen already that the transmission as a whole is divided into two stages. The first, according to 1/5 above is called 'divine' (divya) and the second 'human' (mānava). To the latter belongs the 'current of the three transmissions' (trikramogha). See above, 1/5 and note to 2/45. See also the intro. vol. 1 p. 569, for the relationship between these four transmissions and the sacred seats.

21. The first maṇḍala is, as we shall see in the following lines, the triangle which is the innermost part of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. One of the possible reasons why this is said to be the first maṇḍala is because it is the original most basic form of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. Moreover, it is the first, and therefore the most important of the series of maṇḍalas, inserted as it were, into one another to form the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. As the formation of the maṇḍala and the worship of the Krama within it takes place, as usual in the ritual procedures of the Kubjikā Tantras, 'in the order of emanation' (sṛṣṭinyāye e.g. above, 1/1b) that is, from the centre out, this is the first sphere - 'maṇḍala' - of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. It is also the first amongst all the other maṇḍalas associated with the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala mentioned in the Saṁvartāsūtra (1/3b). Here it is called the Western House and the City of the Moon. Other names for this maṇḍala are the Hermitage (āśrama) or the Hermitage of Gesture (mudrāśrama). The latter expression is parallel to the name Circle of Gesture (mudrāmaṇḍala). It is also called the Cave (guhā), Cave Hermitage (guhāśrama) or Dwelling (guhāvāsa). These are dwelling places of householders (the House and the City) and ascetics (the Hermitage and the Cave). The maṇḍala is indeed a dwelling of divine beings who surround and attend upon the god and the goddess who reside within it either together as husband and wife or alone.

22. 'One Footed' is a common code name for the letter E (see below 3/49 and also, e.g 8/44a, 8/79a, 18/27, 18/27c, 18/101a, and 20/9a). The form of this letter in most Indian scripts is a small downward facing triangle which looks like a person standing on one foot. A description of how the maṇḍala should be drawn is found below in chapter eleven. After preparing the ground, the first thing to do is draw the letter E (11/24cd-25). This, a commentary tells us, is the triangle which is the form of the core of the maṇḍala (ekāraṁ trikoṇaṁ karṇikārūpaṁ Ṭ fl. 120b). Thus the line we are examining describes what the previous verse calls 'the first maṇḍala', the triangle in the centre of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala which in the subtle body is located above the head.

23. The Triple Vidyā consists of the Vidyās of the goddesses Parā, Parāparā and Aparā. Here they are associated with the goddess's three-fold form as the energies of will, knowledge and action. See chapter 23 for the form of the Triple Vidyā incorporated into the mantra called Tadgraha. Notice how the basic Trika triad is incorporated into the very core of the goddess. She is the Triple Vidyā, that is, the Trika goddess who is three-in-one.

24. As the mistress of the Kula, the goddess is frequently called Kaulinī throughout our text. The Divine Triangle of the Yoni is the aggregate - Kula - of her energies. The goddess who exerts her authority in centre is therefore appropriately called Kaulinī.

25. The Vidyā of the goddess is called the Lion Vidyā. Similarly, below (in 3/38) Bhairava, her consort, is described as 'the lion of the thirty-two syllable Vidyā'. In this case the Lion is the goddess's seed-syllable AIṀ, which is the essence of her Vidyā and the 'downward facing Liṅga'. Concerning the Lion as the deity, the empowering look of the Lion and the tradition of the Lion, see intro. vol. 2, p. 334 ff..

26. The subject abruptly changes here probably because the previous verses are later insertions. A dialogue begins here between the god and the goddess that continues with interruptions and digressions up to the end of chapter five. The god seeks to persuade the goddess to grace him with the empowering Command through which he will receive the Transmission (krama) (see particularly verses 3/15-28, 59-73, 4/1-31ab, 5/1-14). The god's implorations bear fruit with the goddess's gracious consent and his consecration that crowns the conclusion of this and the following two chapters (see 3/165cd-170, 4/48cd-51 and 5/61cd-71ab). But for this to happen the goddess must be convinced that it is not improper for her to assume the role of a teacher of the god who in the past was the one who, by virtue of his divinity and male gender, enjoyed this pre-eminent status. Although the goddess is reluctant to accept the role of the teacher, she does admit that she is the deity. Even as she reminds the god of his divinity, she not only accepts his praises through which he proclaims her divine nature and power, she adds more details to enrich his vision of her divinity.

27. The Teacher's House is the City of the Moon where the goddess is the teacher (3/60). Or, to put it another way, the teacher is the Command (above 3/11). The abode of the Command is the maṇḍala in which the goddess has acquired authority. She is the Command and as such she is the teacher. Cf. 3/59ff.

28. Sadyojāta, Sadāśivā's western face, presides over the Western Tradition (paścimāmnāya) of the Western House. See Dyczkowski 2004: 178 and intro. vol. 1, p. 191–2 and 192.

29. The first quarter of this verse (yā sā śaktir bhagākhyā ca) occurs again in at least five other places in our text (see 3/63a, 6/2a, 26/7c, 38/2 and 42/3a). This is how the Root Sūtra (mūlasūtra) begins of which there are three versions (see chapters 26, 38 and 42). These versions list several triads corresponding to the sides and corners of the triangular Yoni. One of the first amongst them are the 'three letters'. Although the SaṁP comments on the first of these three versions of the Root Sūtra, unfortunately we are not told there what these three letters are and the texts themselves are silent. One possibility is that they are the letters A, Ka and Tha with which the series of letters along the three sides of the triangle begin (see intro. vol. 1, p. 293). Another possibility supposes the identity of this triangle with the Santānabhuvana concisely described at the beginning of the KMT (1/2 ff.) and in some more detail in the ṢSS (1/6ff.) where we read that it is ‘triangular, with three aspects, three Śaktis and three qualities’ (ibid. 1/7ab Schoterman's translation). There is no mention in the KMT or the ṢSS of three letters although a description of the Santānabhuvana at the begining of the Śrīmatasāra (1) quoted by Schoterman (1981: 42) refers to them. However, the ṢSS says that the Santānabhuvana is like a mountain with three peaks (kūṭa) represented by the three seed-syllables HRĪṀ KLĪṀ ŚRĪṀ (see Schoterman 1981: 43). These are the 'three letters' to which the Śrīmatasāra (1) refers and could also be those meant here.

There is another, possibility. The ‘bhaga’ is normally the syllable AIṀ and is distinguished from the Yoni, which is the triangle that surrounds it. Thus the three letters may be A I Ṁ.

30. Concerning the plane of the Neuter, the Liṅga, the god and the goddess see intro. vol. 1, p. 309 ff..

31. The Divine Liṅga is usually identified with Vāgbhava, the syllable AIṀ (see 26/58). It is also sometimes said to to be the syllable HSKHPHREṀ

(see below 8/77). The former is probably meant here,

32. Another version of this sentence found in the MSs (see note to the Sanskrit of 3/18d) says: (You) are the series of females (i.e energies) (aṅganāvalī) born in the Kula of the House of Candrapūrya (candrapūryasya veśmasya kule jātāṅganāvalī). As the energy of bliss, the Transmental and the Command, the goddess is all the energies in the maṇḍala.

33. Bhairavī, the consort of the god Bhairava, is the energy of bliss within him. She is the goddess because she is this bliss.

34. An alternative reading of this line (see note to the Sanskrit text) says: 'The Command is well established in the circle of the three (lineages) by means of (your) three divisions and by you on the plane of the Neuter (Absolute) by virtue of the transmission in many forms'. The goddess declares that she is the one who possesses authority in the Western House (3/16). Thus she implies that it is she, not the god, who is the main deity. But she quickly adds that this authority was given to her by her teacher, the god. For his part, the god readily acknowledges that it is she, not he, who is the deity of the Kula (3/19). She is authorized to be pre-eminent by her teacher, the god (3/16). Without conflict, he secedes his status to her. She is the sole deity in the hearts of the Mothers, Rudras and Siddhas - the goddesses, gods and realised souls of the tradition (4/2). This is always the case. The main deity of a Kula is invariably a goddess. The deity of the Kula is the main deity of a Kula which means in this context the family of deities and initiates. Kubjikā has various forms. The main ones are the three that preside over the three lineages or transmissions, which are the main divisions of the Tradition. Similarly, many Kramas, that is, transmissions, liturgies or teachings, form a part of the one Krama which is thus in many forms. Amongst these Kramas the most important and common ones are those of the three lineages of the Aged, Youth and the Child - the Kramas presided over by a form (mūrti) of the goddess.

All the forms of the multifarious Krama are her forms. The male conterparts worship the female and are subordinate to them. Although the goddess and hence all the feminine forms of the Krama ultimately derive from the god, she is THE deity. She is the source of all things and as the variant reading of this verse says, she enjoys the highest ontological status by virtue of that same ability to become manifest in and as the transmission in many forms.

The expression bahurūpakrameṇa which has been translated 'by virtue of the transmission in many forms' can also be translated 'by virtue of the transmission of Bahurūpa'. Bahurūpa is Svacchanda Bhairava, also called Aghora, a name by which he is known to many in contemporary India. It is possible that his liturgy is extolled here as the one through which the goddess attained her pre-eminanent status as a Kula deity. Indeed, further ahead, the House of Candrapura is said to be the House of Aghora (3/60ab) and the Western Transmission is said to be that of Bahurūpa (3/62). Concerning Svacchanda Bhairava and his relation to the goddess See intro. vol. 2, p. 49 ff..

35. The goddess is addressed as grandmother because, in a general sense, she is the mother of every mother. Also, specifically, she is the mother of the Eight Mothers of Kula (see below, 3/33-34).

36. See intro. vol. 1, p. 54 ff..

37. The goddess's knowledge of the rituals, implies that she performs them. The goddess implicitely acknowledges this below (3/60) when she declares that she is the one who recites mantra in this tradition. She is, in other words, both the priest (ācārya) and the best of adepts (sādhaka). Indeed, just as the god has said in the KMT (3/98) that he is the essential nature of every teacher, here this role is assumed by the goddess. But this is so because the god, moved by his affection for her, taught her previously.

38. We may also accept the reading of five of the manuscripts (G, Ṅ, C, J and JH) namely: tasmād anujaśiṣyatvam and combine it with reading of version B of what follows namely: nāvayor vidyate and translate: 'therefore neither of us is the prior disciple (of the other).' Either way, the meaning is clear enough.

39. Cf. 30/199cd-200ab.

40. Cf. below 3/65cd-68 and note. There the goddess implies that the god has concealed himself with Māyā in order to get sexual favours from her. Here she also says that he desires her but she is not angered by this. Instead she understands that this desire is the result of his love for her and, moreover, his primary intention is spiritual.

41. The indeclinable yathāvṛttam normally means 'according to circumstance' or 'as has happened'.

42. See above, note to 3/2.

43. Above in 3/2 we are told that the triangle measures only one hundred leagues. To account for this discrepancy we may presume that this is an isoceles triangle and that that is the length of only one side. In this way it fits into the surrounding Circle of the Sun which is said to be a hundred and fifty leagues in diameter (see above, 3/8 and below 3/36cd-37).

44. The Twelve Verses (Dvādaśaśloka) is a long mantra divided into twelve parts each consisting of thirty-two syllables. This is the length of a verse set in the standard śloka metre. The entire mantra is thus the length of twelve such verses from whence it derives its name. It is given in full in KMT 18/43. There it is conceived to be the girdle (mekhalā) of the body of the goddess Parā generated by the projection of the mantra's six limbs (KMT 18/40). It is also projected onto the sides of a triangle but the arrangement in the KMT is not quite the same as the one here. There the first line consists of the sixteen vowels, the second line of the 34 letters from Ka to Bha and the third of the 8 letters from Ma to Sa (ibid. 18/44). Here, and wherever else it appears in our text, each side of the triangle is lined with the sixteen letters embedded in the mantra namely, A to Ḥ, Ka to Ta and Tha to Sa (see also below 7/6cd ff. Concerning the mantra, see below 24/13 ff. and the notes).

As we find it in the KMT, each of the twelve parts of the Twelve Verses begins with AIṀ HAḤ. This is followed by a series of four epithets in the vocative describing the goddess Kubjikā. The first of these four is preceded by a letter of the alphabet followed by the syllable HAḤ and the next letter of the alphabet in alphabetical order. This is followed by the third epithet and the syllables HRŪṀ PHREṀ PHAṬ KṢAḤ. After this comes the next letter of the alphabet and the final invocation (see below 24/13 ff. and notes). The full mantra is as follows:

aiṁ haḥ a paramānande haḥ ā siddhidānandane haḥ i parāpare hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ ī śrīkulāmbike* || 1 ||
aiṁ haḥ u kālarudrasthe haḥ ū ṛddhibalānvite haḥ ṛ śirohāre hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ Ṛ śrīkulāmbike || 2 ||
aiṁ haḥ ḷ narakāntasthe haḥ Ḷ guhyamahāmbike haḥ e sṛṣṭigate hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ ai śrīkulāmbike || 3 ||
aiṁ haḥ o kuṇḍalaguhyānte haḥ au kuṇḍalalakṣmike haḥ aṁ kuṇḍalinī hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ aḥ kulamālinī || 4 ||
aiṁ haḥ ka kamaladīpte haḥ kha kuṇḍalanābhige haḥ ga kālahare hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ gha svatejaśive || 5 ||
aiṁ haḥ ṅa kamalamāle haḥ ca kramasauhṛdi haḥ cha pāpahane hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ ja kāmarūpiṇī || 6 ||
aiṁ haḥ jha kaṇṭhakūpasthe haḥ ña śaivāmṛtātmike haḥ ṭa candrātmike hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ ṭha sukhadeśvarī || 7 ||
aiṁ haḥ ḍa kuharāntasthe haḥ ḍha saumukhyatāmane haḥ ṇa svānande hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ ta kālanāśanī || 8 ||
aiṁ haḥ tha kālavamani haḥ da cogrānunāsike haḥ dha karoti sā hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ na kālarodanī || 9 ||
aiṁ haḥ pa śrāvaṇāntasthe haḥ pha siddhiṁ āśrite haḥ ba karoti sā hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ bha pārameśvarī || 10 ||
aiṁ haḥ ma kālakalātīte haḥ ya śrībindunetrage haḥ ra śrīhārike hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ la sṛṣṭibinduge || 11 ||
aiṁ haḥ va prakaṭagupte haḥ śa mahāmukhe pare haḥ ṣa svākāśage hrūṁ phreṁ phaṭ kṣaḥ sa śrīkujāmbike || 12 ||
* Note that one syllable is missing here.

45. Most commonly, 'Śrīkula' is one of the names for the tradition propagated by the Kubjikā Tantras (see intro. vol. 2, p. 277 ff.). In this case, the Śrīkula is understood in its primal, original form to be the deity itself. We have seen seen that it is also called paścimāmnāya because it is at the 'end' (paścima) beyond the triangular Meru. This is where the goddess resides who generates first the triangle filled with the fifty letters and their energies - the Siddhas and Yoginīs - and then the rest of the maṇḍala through which she emanates the worlds, teachings, and lineages. Note that there are two sets of couples. One is within the triangle. These correspond to the Siddhas of the Śabdarāśi series (listed below 6/14-20) and the Yoginīs of the Mālinī series (listed below in 18/48-54). Alternatively, the 50 couples may correspond to the letters around the sides of the triangle embedded in the mantra called the Twelve Verses. Their names are listed and discussed below in 7/16cd-36ab.

46. Cf. below 7/13-17 and 26/8.

47. This is why the goddess is sometimes addressed as `grandmother' as in verse 3/20 above.

48. The Cave Dwelling is the Void of the Yoni within the Stone (see above, note to 3/1). It is the emptiness, resonant with the Unstruck Sound of the energies of the letters, that fills the triangular Meru. When the goddess sits in meditation in the Cave she is silent and, absorbed in the bliss of her own energy, lays aside her dark form to become the white goddess (see 6/2-4). This is her form within and as the Liṅga. The white state represents her Neuter condition. In this aspect she is alone in the Liṅga enjoying the bliss of her inner nature. When she emerges fully from the Liṅga in the cave she is again dark or, to be more precise, red and black (KuKh 5/30). Here she is the lunar Stone that radiates a subtle golden glow represented by the triangular menstruated Yoni. Here the goddess is in the intermediate red state of rajas between the blackness of tamas and the whiteness of sattva.

One could cite numerous examples of this representation of the goddess. One of the most famous is found in the temple dedicated to the goddess Kāmākhyā in Gauhati, Assam (see intro. vol. 1, p. 96, note 3). Like the goddess Kubjikā, indeed more so, Kālī is also worshipped in her mensis and by means of it. Thus she is called 'the abode of the mensis of passionate women' (kāminīpuṣpanilayā), 'the full moon which is the mensis of passionate women' (kāminīpuṣpapūrṇimā) and as the one who 'should be worshipped with the mensis of passionate women' (kāminīpuṣpapūjārhā) (kālīsahasranāma 101-102 in the Kālīkalpadruvallarī). The adept's (sādhaka) ritual coition with his consort (śakti) during her mensis forms an integral part of the Yonipūjā as described in a number of medieval Kaula texts, such as the Yonitantra.

The Bṛhadyonitantra expounds in some detail the concept behind Yonipūjā. After explaining the triangular form (= Yoni) of Mahāmāyā / Prakṛti as the origin of the worlds, the Gods and living beings, the Bṛhadyonitantra goes on to describe the Yoni. The three corners are the abodes of Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Maheśvara who bring about the emanation, persistence and destruction of all things. On the right side of the triangle flows the river Yamunā, on the left the Sarasvatī, and on top the Ganges. The goddess Kāmākhyā is in the centre of the triangle and she is identified with Kuṇḍalinī and Prakṛti in the form of menstrual blood (puṣparūpiṇī). The Yoni itself is Kāmarūpa, the Yonipīṭha (See Schoterman 1980: 20, 23-24).

The Kubjikā Tantras are well aware of the power of menstrual blood and other sexual fluids, particularly sperm. They respected them as the *kuladravya*s - lit. Kula substances - which are considered to be the most powerful sacrificial offerings. Their power derives from their inner counterparts which they represent and from which they are thought to originate. The one we are examining is typical. The Bauls of Bengal, who adopted and adapted Kaula practice in their own way, refer to the sacred mensis as the 'flower' (puṣpa). This is also a name for it in common Sanskrit. In particular it is a girl's first menses, which is the visible 'flower' of her fresh adolescence. The Baul poet sings with subtle innuendo in one of the songs collected by Capwell (1974, 262) about the spiritually enlightening power of this 'flower':

> The flower blooms after twelve years, > month after month that flower falls
> To whom shall I speak about the flower?
> Except for the enlightened, it is forbidden to say.

In the technical vocabulary of the Kubjikā Tantras the Flower is also the Point in the centre of the maṇḍala. The Divine Current, which is the Convention of the Flower streams from here. In this sense also the goddess is 'puṣpavat'. She possesses the Flower, which Bindu and the 'flowers' that are the hierogamies that mark the flow of the Divine Current (divyaugha) that streams from the Stone – the goddess's Yoni.

49. Most MSs read umayā i.e '(conjoined) with Umā' even so I have chosen to emend to amayā '(conjoined) with Amā'. Umā is only rarely mentioned in the texts whereas Amā – the energy of the New Moon - is commonly said to be in the centre of the Triangle (see, for example, 3/43 below).

50. Ha and KṢa are the 'two arches' mentioned above (3/6). The Triangle is filled with the letters arranged within it in an anti-clockwise spiral symbolizing the coils of the goddess as Kuṇḍalinī. Ha is the letter in the centre, at the climax of this spiral of energy. KṢa is just below it, that is, behind it. These two represent Śiva and Śakti who and are 'within the House' (gṛhasyānte) (see below 7/35-36ab and note) (7/34). The House is the Triangle and so, it seems, they are located to the left (= above) and right (= below) of the Point in the centre. The Point is the complete 'unbroken circle' (akhaṇḍamaṇḍala) (see note to 3/7) of the Full Moon symbolizing the goddess in all her fullness. The New Moon, symbolized by the crescent Half Moon (ardhacandra), is below it (see 3/40-41). Conjoined to the Full Moon, the New Moon feeds it from within with its energy that flows out as pure lunar nectar between the letters Ha and KṢa, the polarities of Śiva and Śakti, like an oblation, into the Fire of the Yoni.

51. Cf. 3/10.

52. The scripture consisting of seventy million verses is the original scripture. It stands for the entire scriptural tradition and hence all the teachings. See intro. vol. 3, 76 ff..

53. The Thirty-two syllable Vidyā is the Samayā Vidyā of the goddess Kubjikā. Each one of the thirty-two letters of this Vidyā is a goddess (listed below in 11/12cd-16ab). Bhairava is, like a lion, the lord of this Vidyā and its energies.

54. Bhairava's seed-syllable, Navātman, is discussed in intro. vol. 2, p. 430 ff..

55. Below in 3/44 we are told that the goddess 'resides in the five and is decorated with the five'. Further ahead in 3/92cd-93ab the Five States are listed and the god as praised as their possessor. In 3/95cd-96 he is called the all-pervasive Lord who, identified with Kula, 'abides in the Five States'. They are, it seems, related to five of the six Wheels (cakra) in the body and their corresponding Voids (see note to 3/92cd-93ab). They may also be the five seed-syllables that, according to the KMT (18/44-48), are associated with the mantra called Twelve Verses or Kulapaddhati. These are: 1) HRĪṀ 2) AḤ 3) HPHRŪṀ 4) HPHREṀ 5) KṢAḤ. As the Twelve Verses line the sides of the Triangle, these may represent the Five States to which this verse refers. But this is unlikely. The Five Praṇavas are related to the Five Siddhas who are forms of the god, which may be what is meant here by his five-fold form. We know of no such equivalent forms for the seed-syllables of the Twelve Verses. See below, note to 3/44.

56. The goddess who sits next to the god is his Śakti, Mālinī (7/51cd-52ab and 19/82), the Yoni. She 'sits next to him' in the sense that she is united with him. See note to 3/63-64ab.

57. See above note to 2/18. In the following passage in the SvT, Suṣumṇā similarly appears as the goddess seated next to the god, the Lord of Suṣumṇā. Seated on a white lotus, he is white and, a form of Svacchanda Bhairava, has ten arms and five faces. To the left and right are Iḍā and Piṅgalā who Kṣemarāja tells us are dark blue and red, respectively. As for her:

> O fair lady, Suṣumṇā is white as a snowflake. The goddess holds a white lotus and is adorned with a garland of lotuses. She has five faces and is beautiful. She has three eys and holds a spear. The adepts and others should visualize the goddess seated next to him.
>
> Beyond Sound (nāda) is (the region) of Suṣumṇā. There the Lord who possesses that power of whom he is the master is encompassed on the left and right by Iḍā and Piṅgalā. The goddess seated on the Lord's lap is Suṣumṇā who, brilliant like the moon, threads through the entire cosmic order (adhvan) above and below. The resonant Sound of Consciousness (nāda), which has as its sustaining ground Suṣumṇā, once penetrated through all this universe by means of the lower power (adhaḥśakti), exits from the head through (this) psychic nerve and dissolves into the Aperture of Brahmā by means of the upper power (ūrdhvaśakti). That is the unmanifest resonance (avyaktadhvani) which, imperishable and resounding in all living beings, is sustained by Śiva's power.

TĀ 8/390-393 (paraphrase of SvT 10/1232-1233).

The Vidyā should be recited in conjunction with the upward flow of the breath in the channel of Suṣumṇā. When this takes place and the energy of the Vidyā has reached the summit of her ascent, the Moon in the Triangle, which is in the End of the Twelve above the head, rains down nectar into this channel, which is accordingly called the 'nectar of Sūṣmaṇā'.

58. According to 3/5 above, there is a circle in the centre of the triangle which is eighty-six leagues in diameter. This is the Point in the centre which represents, amongst other things, the Full Moon. The semi-circle is eighty-four leagues wide. One wonders whether the New Moon should not be within the Full Moon which seems to be an alternative possibilty (see 3/10 and 7/42cd-43ab and note 40). But this is not what we are told here. Also, according to 3/57 below, the central Point, which is identified there with the seat of OṀ, is in the middle of the Half Moon and so must be above it. Here the same Point is identified with the Neuter absolute.

59. According to Monier-Williams the word uttāna- means: 'stretched out, spread out, lying on the back, sleeping supinely or with face upwards; upright; turned so the mouth or opening is uppermost (as a vessel), concave . . . '. The same word appears again below in 3/138 and 48/26ab with the same meaning. It describes the Half Moon that, concave, is turned upwards. Above it, in the middle is the Point (bindu) which is in the centre of the maṇḍala. Here it is said to represent the Neuter absolute whereas below it is said to be the Liṅga (3/46-47) filled with the goddess's presence who abides within it as the energy of the Command.

60. Below in 3/51-52 the Self is said to be located, as one would expect in the 'heart' or centre of the Triangle. The solar disc is the Self of the Wheel (the same is said above in 3/10). It seems that the Wheel to which this verse refers is the Triangle. Above we were told that it possesses three encompassing girdles (mekhalā) (3/8). These are probably the Sun, Moon and Fire mentioned here. The Moon is in the centre of the triangle, represented there by the Point and Half Moon. The Fire is the main triangle itself - the fiery Yoni (āgneyayonimaṇḍala) (3/35-36ab). The Sun is the solar disc. We have seen that the diameter of the Circle of the Sun is 150 leagues. It is light red and, surrounding the triangle, is its foundation (3/35-36ab).

In this chapter only the triangular core (here called the Stone) of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is described. Below in 11/26-46ab a more complete form is presented which includes the hexagon that surrounds this core. There we are told that three girdles enclose the hexagon (11/32ab), but these should not be confused with those mentioned here. Here, it seems, they are conceived to be the 'body' of the solar disc. If this is correct, the same solar disc functions both as one of the girdles and as the inner luminous Self in relation to these three external lights.

This symbolism recalls the Upaniṣadic vision of the Self as the inner Light that illumines all living beings. This Light illumines even when the three lights of the sun, moon and fire do not shine. Indeed, it is by that Light that they shine. This wonderful luminous quality of the Self leads to its identification in the Upaniṣads with the ancient Sun god. In the following passage drawn from the Maitryupaniṣad, the sun is, as here, both one of the three lumineries and the abode of the Self of them all:

> He who is yonder, yonder Person in the sun - I myself am he. Verily, that which is the sunhood of the sun is the Eternal Real. That is the pure, the personal, the sexless (aliṅga).
>
> Of the bright power that pervades the sky (nabhas) it is only a portion which is, as it were, in the midst of the sun, in the eye, and in fire. That is Brahma. That is the Immortal. That is Splendour. That is the Eternal Real.
>
> MaiUp 6/35 (Hume's translation).

61. The functions of the two Moons in the centre - one Full and the other New – compliment each other. The New Moon checks the polarities, while the blissful, nectar-like energy of the Full Moon flows out between them (cf. 3/35-36ab). The two polarities are symbolized by the letters Ha and KṢa on the two sides of the central Point (which represents the Full Moon) and the crescent (representing the New Moon). Concretely, the polarities are the two breaths - prāṇa and apāna - whose transformation into one another replicate the polarities of time - the day and the night, the bright and dark lunar fortnights, the first and second half of the year and so on. From the perspective of the first example, the commentary on the ṢSS (10/76) explains:

> Day and night is in the form of exhalation (prāṇa) and inhalation (apāna). These are the two polarities. The solar polarity (manifests) by the path of exhalation (prāṇa) and the lunar polarity by the path of inhalation (apāna).

ahorātram iti prāṇāpānarūpaṁ tad eva pakṣadvayam | prāṇamārgeṇa sūryapakṣaḥ [k: + ekaṁ; kh: -pakṣaṁ ekaṁ] apānamārgeṇa candrapakṣaḥ [kh: cāndrapakṣaṁ] |

The ṢSS itself explains:

Here, liberation is devoid of the two polarities. Once abandoned the two polarities by means of the sequence of the two polarities (the liberated one) is perpetually established at the extremity of the Transmental supported by the Supreme Word.

mokṣas tu bhavate hy atra pakṣadvayavivarjitaḥ ||
pakṣadvayaṁ parityajya pakṣadvayakrameṇa tu |
unmanyantasthito nityaṁ paraśabdāvalambakaḥ || ṢSS 10/96-97ab.

The ṢSS teaches careful attention to the movement of the two breaths (the 'sequence of the two polarities') and the centre between them where they fuse. Here we are told that this fusion of the opposites and their elimination is brought about by the liberating energy of the New Moon that 'checks the two polarities'. This makes sense. Just as the Full Moon is the aspect of the Transmental that emanates and nourishes creation, the New Moon is that aspect that withdraws it and so leads to liberation in the transcendent. The latter modality is especially linked with the goddess Kālī who is identified with the New Moon. She is the energy of time (kāla) that leads inevitably to death (kāla) and rebirth. Free of the polarities (below 48/59cd-60ab, cf. 2/4cd-6ab, 15-16 and 36cd-37), she moves in the transcendent, consuming time and with it the bondage of transmigration. As YKh (1) concisely explains:

There are sixteen energies of the Moon and the seventeenth is called the New Moon. On the plane of skyfaring, she is fierce (caṇḍikā) and devours time.

*kālabhakṣī ca [k, kh, gh: ] caṇḍikā [k, kh, gh: + ca] kalāś [k, kh, gh: kalācandrasya] candrasya ṣoḍaśa ||
saptādaśī amā nāma [k, gh: nīma] khecaratvapadānugā [k: -yadānugā] |
YKh (1) 1/43cd-44ab.

In this way, free of the binding duality of the polarities, the goddess manifests within the three categories, that is, the three lineages of her tradition - the Transmission of the Lion and all the other triads.

62. The three categories are the three Kramas of the three lineages. See intro. vol. 2, p. 437 ff..

63. It seems strange that the New Moon which is a dark, one could say, 'empty' or unmanifest Moon should be described as moonlight as it is here and below in 3/116. Perhaps what is meant is that the invisible, unmanifest source is present in its manifestations. The New Moon out of which the digits of the waxing Moon emerge, fill it without affecting its essentially 'empty' nature. Otherwise the cycle would cease and, indeed, could never be. Not a part of the visible lunar orb, the New Moon abides invisible in itself but is present and apparent in its manifestation - the moonlight. Thus the Full Moon is the luminary and the New Moon is its light.

64. The same expression occurs below in 16/18b, 60d, 35/80b, and 68/12b. The more regular form - nagnavāsā - appears in 15/18b, 16/70a (nagnavāsasamopetā) and 49/29b (where it is indirectly defined).

65. Bhairava was described as possessing 'five states' and as 'residing in (his divine) energy established five-fold' (3/39). Accordingly here the goddess, Bhairava's energy, is said to 'reside in the five' which thus make her 'five-fold'. The five, as we have seen (note to 3/39), are probably the Five Instruments (pañcakaraṇa), that is, the Five Praṇavas, which are the seats on which the Triangle rests (3/4). The Five Praṇavas are the sonic forms of the gods Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśvara and Sadāśiva. They are the archetypal pentad that generates, sustains and reabsorbs the five gross elements and through them, at increasingly subtle levels, the five subtle elements, the five cognitive senses and those of action and the triad of the inner mental (mind, ego and intellect) along with Śiva and Nature (prakṛti). Concerning these twenty-five Principles (tattva), see chapter 13. The Five States are listed below in 3/92cd-3ab. It appears that they are related to the firstfive Wheels in the body and their corresponding Voids (see ibid. note).

66. bhagodarā can mean both 'she who is within the Yoni (bhaga)' and 'she who contains the Yoni'. Although both meanings are possible I have chosen the former in accord with 68/4ab below which says that she is in the middle of the Yoni and encapsulated within it (bhagodarapuṭīkṛtā). This meaning is further supported by a variant reading. Line 3/45ab is repeated below as 3/63cd. There the word bhagodarā is replaced with napuṁsakā - 'the female Neuter'. This is the goddess identified as the energy of the Neuter, which is the goddess's Divine Liṅga in the centre of the Triangle, i.e. her Yoni (see above 3/18ab). As both polarities - the Yoni and the Liṅga - are the goddess, in this state she has no spouse. Like a chaste virgin, the goddess in this state does not unite with the god. Solitary, she exercises her authority on the Island of the Moon, that is, the Triangle, in the three lineages and so is threefold.

67. Cf. below 29/13.

68. Once explained the essentially self-contained, independent nature of the goddess, these two verses present us with that aspect of oneness, which is expressed through the fundamental polarity of Śiva and Śakti, posited at a higher level beyond gender. See intro. vol. 1, p. 309 ff. for a commentary on these verses.

69. The 'field' is the area enclosed by the triangle. The form of this enclosure, as we have seen, is the mantra called Twelve Verses. See above note to 3/31-2 and below 7/12.

70. The goddess is not only Vidyā - the energy of Sacred Speech, she is also Gesture (mudrā - see 3/33-34) - the energy of Sacred Action. What Padoux (1994: 16) has written concerning Śrīcakra is equal applicable here: '[The adept] must conceive the Śrīcakra as being the cosmos produced by the divine will (icchā), a will that is eventually to become action (kriyā): it is then called mudrā 'because it delights (mud) the universe and makes it flow (rā)' (cf. YHṛ 1/57ab).

The two - Vidyā and Mudrā - sacred speech and action- constitute the liturgy (krama), which is essentially the progressive unfoldment of these two aspects of the Command - the power that bestows accomplishment (siddhi) and liberation. Expanding out from the centre, the goddess operates in this two-fold form within the triads in the triangle. Thus there are three Gestures linked to the goddess in the centre of the first sacred seat (ādipīṭheśvarī) (8/87). The dynamic energy that impells the transmission is Mudrā and so, as the lineages are three, so are the Mudrās. It is in recognition of this that three ritual gestures are made just before the Kramamaṇḍala is drawn (48/63). Indeed, it is the Maṇḍala of the Three Gestures, each one linked to one of the three sacred seats (29/31). These three gestures are Triśikhā, Padmamudrā and Yonimudrā. They are described in KMT 6/50cd-75ab. The same passage is expanded in chapter ten of the ṢSS and eight of the ŚM. Concerning Mudrā, see intro. vol. 1, p. 620 ff..

71. The word for 'peak' here is kūṭa-, which is also the name of a type of seed-syllable mantra. Accordingly, we could also translate the expression kūṭastham, with reference to the Triangle, as being located 'in the seed-syllable'. This syllable is probably AIṀ, which is called, amongst other things, the Peak of Knowledge (vidyākūṭa) (see below 7/9cd-11ab). The Triangle coincides with the lower triangular portion of the graphic form of this syllable and so is within it (see above, note to 3/4). This part of the syllable looks like the letter E, to which the following verse refers.

72. We shall see in chapter 8 in detail how the Triangle contains the phomenic energies and power-holders of the fifty letters of the alphabet (see also 6/212cd-9ab and note). Full of the fifty letters, it is the aggregate of letters.

73. The City of the Moon - Candrapura - is made of two parts. One is the 'Moon', which is the Point in the centre, representing the Liṅga. The other is the 'City', which is the surrounding triangular 'field'. Accordingly, below we are told that the House namely, the City of the Moon, is produced by the union of the field and the Liṅga (7/55).

74. This is the End of the Twelve or the End of the Sixteen above the head which is the ultimate and last – paścima – plane in the ascent of Kuṇḍalinī and the ultimate, culminating sphere of existence.

75. The triangular core of the maṇḍala, here called the City of the Moon, is the source of the movement of energy that runs down from the highest level through the body and the universe and then up to highest, most subtle extremity of emanation. This is the fundamental 'inner' and most elevated 'metaphysical' form of the Western House, that is, the Tradition of the Kubjikā Tantras. This is the One Footed namely, the letter E which has the form of a downward facing triangle that looks like a person standing on one foot. See above, notes to 3/13-14ab and 2/40-41. The three hands are the corners of the sides or 'arms' of the triangle that 'hold' the sacred seats and energies located there. The triple energy consists of the powers of will, knowledge and action governed by the three goddesses Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī (see below 26/8). Collectively the triple energy (triśakti) is called Rudraśakti (ibid. 26/9).

76. Further ahead we are told that the Command has twenty-seven divisions, which are those of the Krama. Kubjikā, the Churning Bhairavī is the Command. These are, it seems, the 'divisions' (bheda) referred to here directly. Presumably, they also include the parts of the Triangle and what they represent. The couple in the centre - authority and the energy of the Command - are here identified as Manthānabhairava and Manthānabhairavī. The power-holder is the authority in the centre which possesses and directs the power of the Command that spreads from it into the triangular field and its parts, which collectively constitute the Kula. The goddess is accordingly called the Kaulinī (lit. 'woman of a good family') of the Kula (lit. 'the family') of the Western House represented by the Triangle.

77. Cf. 7/43cd-44ab.

78. See 3/13-14ab and note.

79. See intro. vol. 2, p. 48, n. 5.

80. The sacred seat of OṀ is Oḍḍiyāna, the first seat from which the teachings spread in the Kṛta Age. It is the Point (bindu) in the centre of the Triangle.

81. The seat in the centre is the main Liṅga. All the sacred seats are associated with Liṅgas (see 60/24-29), which is a doctrine also taught in the Śrividyā Tantras (see YHṛ 1/44 ff. see intro. vol. 1, p. 718 ff.).

82. See intro. vol 1 p. 49 ff..

83. Aghora is Svacchanda Bhairava who is, as Navātman Bhairava, Kubjikā's consort. The Liṅga is the goddess. She is above Aghora who supports her as does the pedestal the Liṅga. The feminine polarity has thus taken over the male role of the earlier Śaiva traditions in every respect. As the bindu (and the Half Moon below it) she crowns Navātman, the seed syllable mantra of the Aghora.

84. The twenty-seven divisions are the mantras that constitute the Krama of which the Command is the metaphysical essence and power. See intro. vol. 1, p. 323, note 8.

85. The Krama is divided into six groups of mantras or 'parts' (prakāra). Concerning these and other groups of six parts, see intro. vol. 1, p. 319 ff..

86. Similarly below (in 3/118) the goddess is said to possess 'the beautiful form (parigraha) of the essential nature of (all) the principles’. The 'enclosure' or 'form' - parigraha - of the Triangle, the goddess's geometric icon, is meant here (see notes to 7/12 and 24/77cd). The corners and sides of this Triangle represent a series of fundamental triads. Triads are basic to the Trika system also, as its name suggests. Although some extra elements are added, the most important being the Three Transmissions, most of the triads we find in the Kubjikā sources are carried over from the Trika. The three Trika Tantras we possess, the MVT, TS and a fragment of the SYM, refer regularly to Śiva's energy as Rudraśakti as the source of these triads. This notion is also found here (see, e.g. 26/5). Kubjikā, who is often identified with Rudraśakti, is also said to be triadic and so ‘repleat with the three principles, she comes forth with many divisions’ (tattvatritayasaṁpūrṇā bhedānekair visarpiṇī YKh (1) 12/14ab). The three-fold reality the goddess embodies is the expansion and expression of a her basic unity, which encompasses it and is its source.

87. The maṇḍala is commonly called 'the Hermitage' or 'the Maṇḍala of Gesture' (mudrāśrama 6/2, mudrāmaṇḍala 3/157cd-159, 48/18, 51/24-25ab). Less often it is called 'the Maṇḍala of the Seat of Gesture' (mudrāpīṭhasya maṇḍalam SKh 5/39d). In one place where the four seats are equated with the seats of Mantra, Vidyā, Maṇḍala and Mudrā. Thus Kāmarūpa, located in the bottom corner of the triangle, is said to be the Seat of Gesture (42/23cd-24ab, cf. SKh 17/2-3a quoted in the notes there). The same equation is found in three sets of the mantras of the four seats recorded in the SKh. But in one set the Seat of Gesture (mudrāpīṭha) is equated with Oḍḍiyāna in the centre.

Here also it seems that the Seat of Gesture (mudrāpīṭha) denotes the Point in the centre as it does in other references. For example, in 28/73ff. below a sequence of four seed-syllables is presented corresponding to the four sacred seats beginning with one in the centre. This passage is introduced saying that the sequence begins with the Seat of Gesture and so must be the one in the centre. In 68/13 below the goddess is said to 'transport (the teaching) emitted from the Seat of Gesture' (mudrāpīṭhodgirāvahā). This expression also suggests that it is in the centre where the primary source of the teachings and manifestation is symbolically located.

Here in the Point in the centre 'in the middle of the Half Moon' where the Seat of Gesture is located we find the 'City conjoined with OṀ', that is, the seat of the syllable OṀ (oṁkārapīṭha), the first seat (ādyapīṭha) namely, Oḍḍiyāna. The Seat of Gesture is 'marked', that is, empowered by the authority of the goddess who is the Command here called Kramamudrā (see above note to 3/11-12 and intro. vol. 1, p. 224).

88. Maṇipūrṇa, also called Maṇipura, is where Oḍḍiyāna is said to be located in the subtle body. It is the Wheel in the navel (the centre of the body) where the goddess, as Kuṇḍalinī, rests (see note 157). She abides there in the form of her thirty-two syllable Vidyā. This is commonly said in these texts to end with the letter C, although in actual fact it ends with CCE (see intro. vol. 1, p. 315). The order of the syllables of the Vidyā are reversed to represent, I suppose, that the goddess abides here in her potential, inactive, withdrawn and hence 'reversed' state. In this condition of potency the god ‘desires’ the Western Transmission, yearning to make himself and it manifest so that he may unite with the goddes's creation.

89. The Liṅga/Yoni is 'empowered' in the sense that it is the entire Kaula reality (śāktam iti kaulikam) that is, the maṇḍala within the Fourth state (19/80) in which absolute reality is experienced directly. In the first movement towards emanation it pours out of itself as the pure, irresistable will (icchā) that deploys itself spontaneously as the triangular matrix of energies that generate the world order and the Krama. It then goes on to gives rise to another 'empowered house' namely, the hexagon that contains the triangle (see below 53/5 and note).

90. Cf. above 3/15 and note. The descriptive compound bhagodita- qualifying Liṅga may be variously translated. One possible translation is suggested here. We may also translate '(the Liṅga) that has arisen as the Yoni' (cf. 3/15) or 'from the Yoni'. 'By means of the Yoni' is also possible but does not make sense in terms of the overall symbolism of the City of Moon, that is, the Triangle and the Point. Also the 'Liṅga in the centre' may be understood to be an adjective of the City of the Moon. In which case the centre meant here would be the Triangle understood to be the centre of the entire maṇḍala. But this is unlikely. The goddess replies in the next verse that she recites mantra in City of the Moon 'established on the plane of the Neuter' which we have seen (above note to 3/17) is located in the centre of the triangular City of the Moon.

91. The god is addressing the goddess within the Liṅga from which she has not yet emerged. Within the Liṅga she is not at all as shy of being the teacher as she is when she has not yet entered it or has just come out of it.

92. Aghora is Svacchanda Bhairava who is also called Bahurūpa. The goddess's maṇḍala is the House of Aghora because he is her consort. See above, note to 3/19.

93. Above we were told that bliss is the Neuter (3/46), so the deity and teacher who is on the ‘plane of the Neuter’ is on the plane of bliss. The ‘plane of repose’ in the centre of the maṇḍala is where the energy of bliss is located and so this is where the deity and the teacher reside.

94. The pervader is the Emptiness of the one transcendental reality that pervades all things. Pervasion is the energy within the pervader (cf. 60/22-23ab). In the unmanifest, acosmic state they are completely fused in oneness. In the manifest state of proliferating diversity, they are distinguished as the male and female polarities - Śiva and Śakti, respectively (see 14/65 and 41/66).

95. This line also occurs in YKh (1) 4/217ab. The entire passage, which introduces a long exposition of the four Kaula traditions (āmnāya), is quoted in intro. vol. 2, p. 354.

96. The word utsaṅga- literally means 'lap'. Thus the expression referring to the goddess utsaṅgagaminī literally means 'she who is on the lap'. That this is a veiled metaphor for sexual union is clear in the following passage from the KRU. Ādinātha is addressing the goddess:

"Listen, O fair one born of the gods. I will tell (you something) wonderful. This is the state of supreme bliss. This is the Śāmbhava (state) come forth from me".

O Rudrā, when the God of the gods had said this, he called the supreme goddess and she was placed within the Wheel with the intention of calling her (the highest) Yoginī. She was worshipped with supreme devotion with the sacrifice (makha) of Stillness (nirācāra). O goddess, she was established with devotion in the worship of the Primordial Liturgy (ādikrama). Both of them were seated there and, in the gathering (melaka) of supreme bliss, the venerable lord of Kula instituted (their) marriage (pāṇigrahaṇa). Now the goddess was troubled (āśaṇkitā) and her body was bent with shyness (lajja). (Thus) (her) form as the `crooked one' (kubjikā) came into being with (its) subtle limp (kiṁcitkhañjāgati) but even then, the lord, blooming with joy, took the hand of the goddess placed her on his own lap (svotsaṅge kṛtā). That is said to be the union of Śiva and Śakti. O goddess, there ‘churning’ of the two took place.

śṛṇu tvaṁ [k g: tva] suraje [k: muraje; g: madrije] bhadre ākhyāmi [g: ākhyāma] tava vismayam [g: priyam] |
paramānandabhāvo 'ayaṁ [g: -bhāvoyaṁ] śāṁbhavo 'ayaṁ [kh: missing] mamodgataḥ [kh: mamoddhṛtaḥ] ||
ity uktvā devadevena āhvaya [g: āhūya] parameśvarīm |
cakre niveśitā rudre yoginīti vivakṣayā ||
pūjitā parayā bhaktyā nirācāramakhena tu |
anādikramapūjāyāṁ bhaktyā devī [k kh g: devi] niveśitā ||
tābhyāṁ tatropaviṣṭābhyāṁ paramānandamelake [kh: -melakaṁ] |
pāṇigrahaṇasaṁyogaṁ [kh : pānigrahanasaṁyogaṁ; g: pāṇigrahanasaṁ-] kṛtavān [g: kṛtavāc] śrīkuleśvaraḥ [g: chrīkulesvaraḥ] ||
athaivāśaṅkitā [kh: āvāṁ-; g: āthaivā] devī lajjayākuñcitātanuḥ [kh: natuḥ] |
saṁjātaṁ kubjikārūpaṁ kiñcitkhañjāgatiyutaṁ [kh: -gatiryyagaṁ] ||
tathāpi tena [g: deva] devena harṣautphullayutena [g: haṣosphullayutena] tu |
sā devī gṛhya hastaṁ [k kh g: haste] tu svotsaṅge sanniveśitā [k kh: ma-] ||
śivaśaktisamāyogaḥ [kh: -yogaṁ] sa eva parikīrtitaḥ |
tatrāpi mathanaṁ [g: mathana] devi tayoḥ [g: bhayoḥ] saṁparipadyataḥ ||
KRU 1/71-77.

Above (3/39) we are told that the Vidyā sits next to the god and below (7/51cd-2ab, 19/82) that the goddess Mālinī does so and elsewhere Kālikā (3/116). In another place the couple in union are the Churning Bhairava and Bhairavī (3/50) reminding us of how Bhairava 'churned' the goddess after their marriage (see intro. vol. 1, p. 70 ff.). The list could be lengthened considerably. The identity of the couple, like that of the god and goddess individually, is fluid and multiple. See note to 7/16cd-17.

97. See below, 6/90cd-92ab. We have seen (intro. vol. 1 p. 150 ff.) that the Kaula practice of continence (brahmacarya) in which the goddess is engaged is a higher form of union. It empowers her to be Kaulinī, that is, the Great Goddess of her Kula. It is defined below in 62/55-56:

When one's mind (is engaged) in transforming (all things) into Śiva and the body is propitious (śiva) (to realisation) and detached, the (true) practice of celibacy (is observed) when one has achieved a stable corporeal state (full of the energies of the letters) (sthirapiṇḍagati).

The Vow is the Vow of Practice (caryāvrata). The Vow is power (śakti) and it has attained a state of oneness. That is the state (gati) of the subtle body (liṅga) of one whose mind is shot through (viddha) with bliss (sugati).

98. Bliss is the Neuter (napuṁsakam), which is neither male nor female (3/46). As the goddess is the energy of bliss (ānandaśakti) (1/1a) she is the female Neuter. Concerning the Neuter absolute, see intro. vol. 1, p. 309 ff..

99. The god often addresses the goddess as Mother (4/3) and she is indeed his mother (5/13), although she is also his wife (26/79). Similarly, she is the mother of Mitra (5/83cd-84ab), the first Siddha and, indeed, of every Siddha (4/39, 36/26), all the gods (10/50), goddesses, demons, men (35/46cd-47ab; KMT 2/2) and the encompassing host (gaṇa) (36/86cd-87ab; KMT 2/12). She is also the Yoni that gives birth to all things and every living being (4/39), as such she is the mother and womb of the universe (3/17, 20, 26/90, 39/148) she emanates (38/34). She is also the source (yoni) of liberation (5/41).

She is Speech and hence both the mother and teacher (26/61) of the Mothers who govern the eight categories of letters (3/31-32). At the same time, she is all of them collectively (15/3cd-4). Similarly, she is the letters (44/45) and also the mother of the fifty letters represented by the Liṅgas (29/12). Uniting with her within her, they generate all mantras (40/11-12) and so she is also their mother. As the Mother of Kula (6/220), the aggregate of all the energies, she is the mother of herself, just as she is the mother of the god.

Externally, the countless Mothers (mātṛkā) and Yoginīs who reside in the sacred sites, major and minor, are all aspects of her that have come down to earth. Internally, she is the mother of Yoga (5/62). When she is pleased with her devotee, she graces him with the teachings of the tradition (kulakrama) (17/51).

Thus, working within him as Kuṇḍalinī, she leads him to liberation and so is the supreme mother in this Age of Strife (26/58). She is Rudra's energy who is the mother of persistence and destruction (26/5, 26/88, 38/9 and 42/5) because she maintains her devotee's spiritual elevation and destroys his impurites. In short, she is the perfect Mother who does all that needs to be done, internally, externally and through the transmission of the teaching and so, as the colophons of her Tantra declare, her tradition is that of the Mother (avvākrama).

This strange identification of the father with the son, the mother with the consort reminds us of many Indian myths, some very ancient, that recount the origin of the world, living beings and death as the result of primordial incest. The reader is referred to Kramrich 'The Presence of Śiva' where the main myths are recounted and analysed. Even without these complex mythical connotations, the relationship between husband and wife is understood by Indian lawgivers to always involve some degree of incest. According to Manusmṛti:

> Once the husband has entered the wife and become an embryo, he is born (jāyate) here (in this world). That is the wifehood of a wife (jāyā), that he is born (jāyate) again in her.

patir bhāryāṁ saṁpraviśya garbho bhūtveha jāyate |
jāyāyās tad dhi jāyātvaṁ yad asyāṁ jāyate punaḥ || Manu 9/8.

100. Concerning the Stainless see below, note to 13/76cd-78.

101. Below, the god with five faces is mentioned again (in 3/76). He is the god Dakṣa did not invite to his sacrifice, the god he addresses later on (in 3/85-86) as Sadāśiva. This may be the Rudra mentioned here. He may also be Navātman Bhairava who, essentially a form of Svacchanda Bhairava, also has five faces. But this is the form of the god when he is enstated as the consort of the goddess. However, at this stage the god is not yet united with the goddess. He still has to receive the Command which permits this. Below we are told that it is Sadāśiva who 'awakens to the Kaulika Command' (3/108). It seems that the goddess is telling the god who appears to her in a mild form as the 'mortal' lesser god that in reality he is already the fierce (rudra) form of the god he will discover himself to be when he receives her Command.

102. The goddess in this verse reminds the god of his true nature and that he can never really be overcome by Māyā even though previously (in verses 3/25-28) she told him he is 'deluded by the net of Māyā'. In fact, this is a garment he has put on to come into the world in the form of a man. She reminds him that he has freely chosen to to assume the Māyā that covers him. Moreover, he has no need to do this. She will impart the teachings to him anyway. In other words, he can receive the teachings equally both as a man and as the god he is in the fullness of his true nature unobscured by a human form. Either way, the teachings will be imparted and spread to the world. There are two polarities between which the god constantly swings back and forth. He interacts with the goddess as a god. He also relates to her as a mortal Siddha. In both cases, the exchange serves to bring about the transmission of the teachings. In the first case, the transmission is generic. The deity imparts the teachings through the dialogue that takes place with the consort and is reported in the scripture. In the second case it is specific. It occurs in some place. This place is often one of the sacred seats (pīṭha) or a cave, hermitage, mountain, cremation ground and the like. It occurs at a specific time, for example, in one of the Ages (yuga) or at the culmination of a search or period of austerity and meditation. The god in these places and times performed heroic deeds, remarkable feats, he was a man, a perfectly accomplished man, a Siddha. The two levels, generic and specific, run parallel, indeed they are fundamentally one. The god is the Siddha and the Siddha is the god. The two levels interchange so freely, that it is difficult at times to distinguish between them.

103. Another translation of the expression pārthive kule could be 'in the Kula of the (element) earth'. We are reminded of the goddess association with the gross element Earth. The KnT (MS K fl. 1a) proposes the following didactic etymology of the name Kubjikā based on this association: ‘The syllable KU is the seed-syllable of the Earth that is located on top of a lotus (abjikā)’ (kukāraḥ pārthivo bīja.h abjikoparisaṁsthitaḥ). The syllable AIṀ is especially associated with the element Earth.

104. The goddess herself has been empowered and reached the supreme state by observing Śiva’s Command and has emerged from it as the Command (3/61) tramsitted through the lineages. Now the god has come to receive it from her and thereby receive the goddess herself. But this can only take place if this is what he really wants. If he desires the goddess to satisfy his lust he will not be allowed to unite with the goddess and receive what was once his seed and is now hers.

105. See intro. vol. 1 p. 44 ff..

106. The goddess already tried to enlighten the god as to his true identity before (3/25-28). Then she was more understanding of his true need, which is spiritual knowledge. She also understood that even if he does desire her this is due to his love for her, not base lust. Now she is not at all as trusting. Indeed, she is irritated at the thought that he may desire her. She does not want to loose the spiritual benefits she has gained from her austerities by having lustful sex. Nor would it be right for him to suffer a fall in this way.

107. Amongst other things, the goddess in this verse is saying to the god that even if he does desire to have sex with her, it would not be possible as she has no gender. In this way she is also effectively saying that she does not need the god. She manifests herself independently, without his help in each cosmic age.

108. With these lines the goddess describes first her unmanifest, undifferentiated (niṣkala) and hence genderless form. The following lines describe her differentiated (sakala), iconic form as the goddess after which comes an account of her descent into the world as a woman.

109. MSs Gh, Ṅ, C and Jh read Kulayogeśvarī.

110. This is the name the goddess assumes after she has graced Bhairava and operates in the Mālinīkula as the Command. See 3/165cd-167.

111. Once the goddess has declared that the god can do everything alone. We are told how she operates independently of him. In her supreme, most essential nature, the goddess is absolute Being itself, void of all phenomenal specifications. As such she is neither male nor female. But when she descends into the world to spread her liberating Command, she assumes the form of Kubjikā within which these six goddess, represented by her six faces, fuse. See below, 10/22-23 and note concerning the variant forms of her six faces and note to 10/37cd-38 where they are presented in a table. See also 29/45-50 where they are described as a part of the goddess's entire visualized form.

112. MSs Gh and Ch read: citpure i.e. '(which is the god's) supreme consciousness'.

113. The god's couch - vistara - is the expanding extension - vistara - of the god's foundation, that is, the Emptiness of his transcendental being. It is the Unbroken Maṇḍala, the dimensionless Point and Liṅga of Voidness in the centre. Periodically the goddess, urged by her divine passion induced by the rhythmns of her cycles, re-unites with the god. She returns to her sexuated state as does the god and so resumes externally, as it were, the essential condition of bliss she maintains internally at all times. The Point and the Triangle formerly undifferentiated by gender become so during the goddess's fertile period. The `outer' form of the goddess, symbolized by the Triangle, envelops the male Liṅga merged in the Voidness of transcendental being in the centre and her blissful inner nature becomes the body of their bliss. Thus the two unite in the union through which the world is created.

The goddess, now fully manifest, has become human but without loosing her divinity. She is still the goddess, albeit in human form. She assumes those attributes of the human condition necessary for proceation, which she does not for her own bliss but to benefit the universe. And what greater grace could she bestow upon it than the gift of its existence? So just as she abandons her gender to enter the Liṅga and in so doing withdraws all manifestation, she resumes her female gender and assumes a pure body of bliss to unite with the god on the nuptual bed of Voidness.

Initially she enters the Void of the Neuter Liṅga and observes the continence of the unmarried state, even though she was intimately close to her future consort. In this way she wins the prize of Nirvāṇa (3/63-64ab) attained by her fidelity to the god who, by the same observance is a Siddha, complete, perfect and accomplished. Accordingly, she is careful to guard the continence she has toiled to maintain. Even a goddess who has attained the highest rank of deity can fall, tempted by the god whose erotic power matches his outwardly ferocious (rudra) form.

Now she has come of age, as it were, and is ready to unite with her god and consort without loss of her or his austerity and for the greater gain of both and their cosmic offspring. For as Meyer (1971: 216) explains:

> [sex], the most important part of the woman's life, makes its appearance with the ṛtu [the fertile period]; with the ṛtu love begins, with it it ends, in it it has always its central point. Ṛtu denotes the monthly cleansing, and then in particular those days after the period, from the fourth day onwards, which in the Indian view are proper for conception. [. . .] The setting in of the menses brings with it not only the capacity for the full sexual life, and the right thereto, but first and foremost the divine call to it, the unavoidable duty. A menstruating girl in a father's house is a heavy sin for him; the daughter is now dedicated to the divinities of the married state. The legal provision, therefore, already touched upon often makes its appearance, namely that the father shall marry his daughter off before the beginning of this time, and then, as soon as she is sexually ripe, the husband fetches her home.

The goddess's menses, the most concrete sign of her gender marks her divine nature as it does that of her human counterpart. Just as her body is bliss - an exalted transfigured body - her menses is her divine lunar energy. The fluidity of the menstral flow is the element Water and its vitality the cosmic Air, the breath of the universe. The epitome of the Tantric consort, she is the Mother of the Universe and her sphere of existence, the maṇḍala beyond the realms of death and decay. And so the Tantra declares:

> The energy called the New Moon (amā) abides in the Immortal (amara) M*aṇḍala*. (Present) in Water and the principle of Air, she fills the ten directions. (She is Kuṇḍalinī whose) form is crooked (like a) snake and so the maṇḍala is immortal. She brings about creation and destruction. (She is) the mother, the mother of all. The (Tantric) consort (śakti), glorious, is endowed with her (divine) attributes. Her nature (fruitful ritual and yogic) action, she is seen (to be such) in (her) fertile period.

amā nāma [g: nāmakaṁ] kalā proktā amare maṇḍale [gh: -lā] sthitā |
vāruṇe [ṅ: cāruṇe] vāyutattve [k: vāpatatve; gh: vāṣatatve; ṅ: cāpa-] ca pūrayantī daśo [k, ṅ: paśo; g: diśo] diśaḥ [g, gh: daśa; ṅ: diśa] || *bhujaṅgakuṭilākārā amaraṁ [k, gh: amati; ṅ: amanti] tena [k, ṅ: * na; gh: ta ]

maṇḍalam ׀ layotpattir [k, g, gh: tayo-] vipattiś [k, gh: vipattiṁ; ṅ: -vipattī] ca jananī sarvamātarām [g: -rā] ׀׀ taddharmadharmiṇī śaktiḥ [gh: śakti] kriyārūpā [ṅ: kriyādhūrūpā] yaśasvinī ׀ dṛśyate ṛtukāle [k, gh, ṅ: rātukāle] tu . . . . ׀׀ YKh (1) 35/19-21abc.

The Tantras of all schools teach how the human is in the image of the divine and the divine reflects the human. In the following passage this is taught in such a subtle way that it is not possible say whether it is the Tantric consort or the goddess to which it refers. For the union between the Siddha and the Yoginī to be spiritually fulfilling, that is, liberating and not binding, it must follow the divine model of the union between the god and the goddess. Kuṇḍalinī, the energy which is the Transmental, must rise first to the End of the Twelve to purify all that is below it. Then, returning down, it nourishes what has been purified with bliss, feeding the vitality of the entire universe. In the same way as the energy of the Transmental impells and flows from above, where the god and the goddess unite, so too below where the union between Siddha and Yoginī takes place. Thus the goddess, the Transmental, abides within the Triangle, the Circle of the Fertile Period, the Immortal Maṇḍala:

The energy of the vital breath (brilliant) like heated gold is (Kuṇḍalinī which is) Mind Beyond Mind. It goes to the End of the Twelve to impell (the vitality) in the Three Worlds. Having first come and gone (i.e. ascended and descended), it should be brought to rest in the foundation of (divine) power. In this way the golden garland (of the vital energy of the menstraul flow) has come forth from the Door of the Yoni (bhagadvāra). One is liberated by a part of the glorious energy (released) by the union of the Yoni and the Liṅga (bhagaliṅgasamāyoga). O god, supreme bliss is the Transmental (that abides) perpetually in the circle of the fertile period (ṛtumaṇḍala).

taptakāñcanasaṁkāśā prāṇaśaktir manonmanī ׀׀ vrajate dvādaśānte tu preraṇārthaṁ jagattraye ׀׀ gamāgamaṁ purā kṛtvā [k: kṛtvāṁ] śaktyādhāraṁ samāśrayet ׀׀ tena hemamayī [kh: -mayā] mālā bhagadvārād vinirgatā ׀׀ bhagaliṅgasamāyogād vibhavāṁśena mucyate [k: pramucyate; kh: ucyate] ׀׀ parānandaṁ sadā deva unmanaṁ ṛtumaṇḍale ׀׀ SKh 33/40-42.

114. Māyāpuri is the old name of the town of Haridvāra situated on the banks of the Ganges on the plains close to where the river emerges from the mountains.

115. Dakṣa addresses the god as Sadāśiva below in 3/85-86.

116. Concerning the myth of the destruction of Dakṣa's sacrifice, see intro. vol. 1, p. 118 ff..

117. The first verses of this hymn up to 3/96 are dedicated to the universal reality and source of all things in its two aspects as Kula - the principle of immanent unity in multiplicity and Akula - the principle of transcendental oneness. After that Dakṣa praises the deployment of this reality, immanent and transcendent, in the Wheels (cakra) within the subtle body.

118. I understand the expression vidyāmahāvratam - 'the great aggregate of the Vidyā' - to refer to the goddess's Samayā Vidyā, which is the subject of chapters eight to twelve. The Vidyā is the sacred sonic form of the goddess. The thirty-two syllables that constitute it are each powerful Yoginīs (see 11/12cd-16ab) who are aspects or energies of the goddess. They may be projected onto the body or, as in this case, contemplated as the aggregate of the Vidyā's energies in the Heart, the traditional abode of deity, as eternal, divine Light. Possibly, the solar disc from which the blooming lotus of the Heart emerges, symbolizes the emergent life force of the vital breath (prāṇa). The 'perpetually risen' (nityodita) Light of the Vidyā shines within the light of this young, rising sun.

119. The great Ocean of Knowledge (jñānamahārṇava) is the triangular Yoni that contains the energies of the fifty letters (see note to line 63 of the Mālinīstava below in chapter four, and note to 14/64cd-66ab). Within the Triangle, each letter has its own location that is identified with a sacred seat (pīṭha) in the outer world (see below note to 6/212cd-219ab). Here these locations are called 'wheels'. A 'wheel' is the sphere of influence radiating from the energy or deity in the centre of it, which in this case is the phonemic energy of the letter it contains. The combination of these energies in mantras and their corresponding deities and principles of existence and world orders generates the universe. In the same way, the current of the teachings of the deity, transmitted through the lineages of Siddhas originates from here and so is said to be the ocean, that is, the ultimate repository of knowledge. Symbolically situated above the head at the apex of the subtle body, to reach it is to attain liberation. Cf. below note to 14/64cd-66ab.

120. The sun is a natural symbol of life and enlightened consciousness. This consciousness, which is the ultimate nature of mantra, illumines the deity. The rising of the sun to its highest point in the sky symbolizes the elevation of the vital breath to its highest, fully liberated state. Abhinava (TĀ 4/89bcd-90c) paraphrasing, the Vīrāvalītantra, explains:

> When the the Sun (of prāṇa) and the Moon (of apāna) have dissolved away into Śiva's nature, which is pure consciousness (bodhamātra), by means of the concentration (bandha) through which the mind dissolves away and the Sun of the Individual Soul, one's own consciousness, has reached the twelfth part (i.e the End of the Twelve), that is said to be liberation.

In this case, the Sun does not symbolize the individual soul. It is Śiva himself, by whose will all things exist. He shines above the ascending series of Six Wheels that run along the axis of the subtle body. This, I suppose, is the sense of this metaphor. The 'Mountain of Kula' that contains the Six Wheels does not appear elsewhere in the Kubjikā texts to which I have access. But Kula is identified with the body which here, I suppose, is called the Mountain of Kula. Dakṣa goes on to describe and praise the Six Wheels in verses 3/97-114.

121. See above, 3/39 and note. I have managed to find only one other complete direct reference to these five states below in 36/88cd where we are told that these five are Bhairava. This tallies with what is said here and further ahead in 3/95cd-96 where it is said that the all-pervasive lord abides in the Five States. 36/89ab adds that: 'all these are in the Stable Place (dhrūvasthāna) and have come (to form a part) of the sequence of the Six Wheels (ṣaṭcakrakramamāgatāḥ)'. It is clear from the context in which these lines appear that the 'Stable Place' is the Wheel of the Command (cf. the expression ājñāsthānapadaṁ in 36/95a). But if they are present in the Six Wheels why are they five and not six? The answer to this question appears to be that the full set of six includes the god who is the other five. Below, a series of six Voids are described corresponding to the Six Wheels. The first and highest of these is said to be within Śiva's polarity (pakṣa) (3/133). The following one is 'in the middle of power' (śaktimadhye), which is presumably, the other polarity. If the Five States are both in the Wheel of the Command and in the Six Wheels, it is reasonable to suppose that the five belong to the polarity of power within the body, while their essential nature belongs to the polarity of Śiva, outside the body (see note to 3/133). So all five states together are in the Wheel of the Command as well as being distributed through the five wheels, which in the system described here in the Stavarāja, are not six from the Wheel of the Foundation to that of the Command, but five, as the Wheel of the Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna), which is normally the second Wheel, has been omitted. This interpretation finds indirect support in the manner in which the six Voids are said to be distributed. According to 3/125, there are five Voids in the body. No mention is made of a sixth one. This may be because the sixth one, outside the body in the sixth Wheel, is the other five together just as the god is the Five States. Moreover, below in 3/95cd-96 we are told that the same all-pervasive lord who has assumed the Five States is also present in the Five Principles. The Five Principles are generally the five gross elements, to which correspond the Five Praṇavas. So we may postulate the following set of correspondences:

1. Table of Wheels, States and Principles

Wheel	State	Principle
Foundation	Sound	Earth
City of Jewels	Point	Water
Unstruck Sound	Energy	Fire
Purity	Light	Air
Command	Bliss	Space

122. The essence of mantra is the deity, who is the Sun of Consciousness. See above, 3/91cd-92ab and note.

123. Two oceans are contrasted in these verses. One is the Ocean of Consciousness, which is liberating, and the other is the ocean of transmigratory existence, which is binding. The former is here referred to as the Sky, which since very early times has been compared in India to the sea (see note to 14/64cd-66ab). Free of the inner mental organ consisting of the mind, intellect and ego, it is free of thought constructs and, as pure self-subsisting consciousness, it is free of time and space, cause and effect and all other outer supports. Hence, by virtue of its transcendence, it is omnipresent.

124. The notion that the universe floats in an ocean that consists of seven seas set in concentric circles is common to many Indian cosmologies whether Buddhist or Jain, Śaiva or Vaiṣṇava, Purāṇic or Tantric.

125. See above 3/39, 44 and 92cd-93ab.

126. See intro. vol. 1, p. 78 ff. and 272 ff..

127. See intro. vol. 2, p. 283 ff..

128. This can be any of the triads related to the goddess's triangle. The principle one is generally said to be that of the three lineages. However it is more likely that this expression refers to all of them generically.

129. There are two Cavities of Brahmā. One is situated at the top of the head and is well known to many Tantric and yogic schools. The other is in the lowest Wheel in the body, situated between the genitals and the anus. Both are given the same name because they are equally openings at the extremities of the channel of Suṣumṇā that runs through the Wheels along the axis of the body. This centre is also called the Place of Brahmā (brahmasthāna) and the Place of Birth (janmasthāna) (see below note to 3/103). It is where Brahmā's Stone of Birth (janmabrahmaśilā) is located (17/45). This is the triangular Yoni (17/11) at the base of Suṣumṇā that is the counterpart of the triangular Stone / Yoni at the upper extremity. The two Cavities of Brahmā, open out into the centre of these two Yonis.

130. Note the mixed metaphor which is the result of describing these centres both as Wheels and as Lotuses. As Wheels, the energies associated with them are conceived to be on their spokes. Similarly, as Lotuses, they are on their petals. In the following passage three centres are said to have petals (the first, second and fourth) and two, spokes (the third and sixth). Neither are mentioned in relation to the fifth centre, which is said simply to have a five-fold form (pañcākāra). Moreover, the first and second centre are specifically called Wheels, even so they are said to possess petals. See below, note to 3/107.

131. Notice that in this scheme the Wheel of the Self-supported - svādhiṣṭhāna - is missing. It is normally between the Wheel of the Foundation (ādhāracakra), which is between the anus and the genitals, and the City of Gems, which is in the navel.

132. At least four 'thunderbolts' appear in the Kubjikā Tantras. One is the syllable AIṀ, which does not concern us here (see note to 5/65cd-66ab with reference to 58/43 and 5/72cd-73ab). Another is found in the uvula at the back of the throat. This is the Place of the Jar (ghaṭasthāna). According to some accounts, there is a six-petalled lotus there, which because of its hexagonal shape is called the Lotus of the Thunderbolt (vajrapadma - see note to 5/71cd-72ab). The third Thunderbolt is the hexagon that surrounds the triangle in the centre of the maṇḍala where the six parts of the Krama are projected (vajram iti ṣaṭkoṇam [. . .] evaṁ vajraśabdena ṣaṭkoṇaṁ catuṣkādi-aṣṭāviṁśati-kramāspadaṁ Ṭ fl. 30b; cf ṢSS 40/75cd-77 and commentary on ṢSS 28/106). The fourth is the one to which this verse refers. Here the Wheel of the Navel is said to have five petals, elsewhere that it has six parts (60/10cd-12). These are possibly contained in the lotus. A passage below (30/49cd-69ab) is dedicated to the Knowledge of the Navel (30/58). There the navel centre is said to be hexagonal. It is called the Body of the Thunderbolt (vajrapiṇḍa) because the Thunderbolt Self (vajrātman) resides within it (30/67). The six parts of the Krama are projected and worshipped (30/56-57) in the six corners of the hexagon as are the six Wheels (cakra) in the body (30/68-69ab). The two triangles, one facing down and the other up, that make up the hexagon are called the two door panels (30/53). The union of these two is the Conjunction of the Thunderbolt (vajrasandhi) that awakens Kuṇḍalinī (30/48cd-49ab). Aroused, she moves through the Krama and the Six Wheels rotating anticlockwise through the six corners of the hexagon. In this way the Wheels are pierced progressively as the Krama is worshipped part by part. See note to 5/65cd-66ab.

133. See below 3/120-121 for more details of this Wheel.

134. Cf. 25/17. This Wheel is also called the Wheel of the Fourth State (25/21) because when the yogi reaches it he enters the Fourth State. Beyond waking, dreaming and deep sleep, in this state he realises his oneness with the deity.

135. kopamūrdhni lit. 'on the head of anger'. The Ṭ explains that: ‘the place of anger is between the eyebrows’ (krodhasthānaṁ bhrūmadhya iti – MS K fl. 174b). Cf. below 3/113 where this Wheel is said to be located in the head.

136. The sixteen spokes represent the energies of the sixteen vowels (3/108). These together are the Full Moon. The energy of the New Moon (amākalā), the seventeenth digit, is above them in the End of the Sixteen. From there it pours down its energy to replenish those of the Full Moon as, one by one, they progressively spill out their lunar nectar down into the body. This is drunk by the skillful yogi as it drips down from the uvula at the back of the throat or from the centre of the palate. As the energies diminish in this way one by one, they simultaneously increase to reform the full sixteen. In this way, even as the energy of the Moon flows down as nectar it progressively increases, rising up to the End of the Sixteen to form a complete, unbroken cycle (see note to 3/114). In this way the seventeenth energy of the Moon is in the midst of the other sixteen in the centre of the highest Wheel in the End of the Sixteen. Although above the Wheel of the Command, which is in the forehead, it is experienced in the centre of the palate where the nectar flows. Accordingly, this Wheel should be contemplated there. Each energy resonates with a vowel sound. Collectively they form the Great Sound of the pure Unstruck Sound of the seventeenth energy located there in the centre of them. White as the moon, this is the subtle, pervasive energy of Unstruck Sound, which sustained by the State Beyond the Fourth (turyātīta), rains down nectar (35/35cd-37ab).

137. The sequence of the six Wheels is now repeated with additional details, namely, the presiding god, colour and the placement of the letters on the petals / spokes of each centre.

138. See note to the Sanskrit text.

139. Above in 3/97 we are told that this lotus/wheel has four petals/spokes. All the manuscripts read ekārādi- i.e. ‘‘E’ and the rest’ but this is clearly wrong. As the semi-vowels form a standard group of four, I presume that they are meant here.

140. This centre is also called the Place of Brahmā (brahmasthāna) and the Place of Birth (janmasthāna). It is where Brahmā's Stone of Birth (janmabrahmaśilā) is located (17/45). This is the triangular Yoni at the base of Suṣumṇā (note to 3/97 and 17/11). It is also called the Stone of Birth (janmaśilā) and the Triangle of Birth (janmaśṛṅgāṭa) in which the 'generation of birth' (janmotpatti) takes place (64/52). Its triangular shape is related to the triangular letter E (64/51). In the Place of Brahmā is a lotus, the purpose of which is emanation. It is said that in the middle of that is the 'deity of the sprout' (aṁkuradevatā) (17/45-46ab). This 'sprout' is the slanting line, Half Moon and Point on top of the triangular syllable AIṀ, which is the syllable of emanation (sṛṣṭibīja). The triangular AIṀ, located in the Wheel of the Foundation, is a replica of the triangle above the head. Kuṇḍalinī issues out of both of them. The one below moves up through the Wheels and the one above moves down through them.

Each Wheel has both a visualized and a sonic form. The latter has two aspects. One consists of the sonic energies of the letters associated with it. Another is the seed-syllable that corresponds to it and is the basic sonic form of the Wheel. The letters are the energies that surround it as attendant deities do the deity in the centre of a maṇḍala. We are only told about the syllable in the first Wheel. This may mean that there are no syllables in the remaining Wheels. But this is unlikely. AIṀ, the syllable in the first Wheel is also the first of the Five Praṇavas. These correspond to five gods of which the first is Brahmā. This is probably why it is referred to in this verse as 'Brahmā's mantra'. Moreover, in this way the presence of the remaining four praṇavas is implied in the Wheels above. This supposition is confirmed by the identity of the gods who preside over them which coincides with those of the remaining four praṇavas. Let us see how this works. The deities of the Five Praṇavas, known as the Five Brahmās are, in ascending order, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśvara and Sadāśiva (65/43cd-44ab). Several groups of five corresponding to them are described in various places in our text (see, for example, KuKh 8/90cd-110ab). Important in this context is the correspondence between these five and the Wheels in the body. The Five Praṇavas are commonly associated with the Five Elements. Although the later systems of Six Wheels do not include the Five Praṇavas, the association of the first five Wheels with the Five Elements is retained (see Goswami 1980, tables on pp. 276 ff.). The seed-syllables associated with these Wheels are those of the Elements as are their presiding gods. The subtler mental 'elements' then come above them. These correspondences can be tabulated as follows:

2. Table of Wheels, Elements, Gods and Seed-syllables

Wheel	Element	God	Seed-syllable
Foundation (ādhāra)	Earth	Indra	LAṀ
Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna)	Water	Varuṇa	VAṀ
City of Gems (maṇipura)	Fire	Agni	RAṀ
Unstruck Sound (anāhata)	Air	Vāyu	YAṀ
Purity (viśuddhi)	Space	Sadāśiva	HAṀ
Command (ājñā)	Mental Elements	Guru	OṀ

Although the Five Praṇavas correspond to the Five Elements, only the former are projected into the Wheels in this case in order not to disrupt the sense of these projections in the larger context of the doctrine taught here. Below (in verse 3/108) were are told that Sadāśiva 'awakens to the Kaulika Command'. This implies that he has a special association with the source of the Command. In one scheme the source of the Command is, as one would expect, the Wheel of the Command and Sadāśiva is located there. Here it is the Wheel of the Palate, which is full to overflowing with the lunar nectar of the Command. Accordingly, Sadāśiva, the lord of the fifth praṇava is placed here. We may observe at a glance from the following table of associations made in this hymn why the correspondences are not the same. The Wheel of the Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna), which is normally the second one, has been omitted in order to accomodate the Wheel of the Palate without disrupting the basic grouping into six.

3. Table of Wheels, Colours, Yoginīs and Gods

Wheel	Colour	Yoginī	God (Stavarājā)
Foundation	White	Kulaḍāmarī	Brahmā
City of Gems	Red	Uḍḍāmarī	Janārdana / Viṣṇu
Unstruck Sound	Black	Jvālinī	Rudra
Purity	Firebrand	Śakinī	Īśvara
Command	Crystal	Void	Īśānabhairava
Palate (tālu)	Light	Khecarī	Sadāśiva

We may compare this configuration with the one described below in chapter eight. There the first praṇava is projected between the Foundation and the City of Jewels (8/95). This is where the Wheel of the Self-supported is located. In other words the Wheel of the Foundation has been omitted. But in chapter fifty-five we find that the Five Praṇavas are accomodated into the six Wheels by omitting the third one, namely, the City of Gems in the navel (see 55/2-4ab and note). Elsewhere (21/35-36) this is achieved by omitting the Pure Wheel (viśuddhi) in the throat. These are clearly adjustments. In several places we are told that complete realisation is attained beyond the Wheel of the Command by 'abandoning the six (Wheels)' (ṣaṭtyāgāt). Clearly, the six Wheels must include also the Wheel of the Self-supported and the others omitted in the various configurations if the Wheel of the Command is to make up the full compliment of six that should be abandoned. Indeed, all the Wheels, except the Wheel in the Palate which is not mentioned in that context, play important roles in the system of 'six realities' belonging to the Southern Path described in the KMT (see intro. vol. 1, p. 596). There the problem does not arise because neither the Five Elements nor the praṇavas are projected into the 'realities'. But although their contents differ, they are the same six configured with almost the same phonemic energies we find in the later better known systems. The only difference being that in the KMT (11/30-37) there are two energies in the Wheel of the Foundation and four in that of the Command, the reverse of what we find later. We may tabulate these configurations as follows:

4. Table of Wheels, Locations and Energies

Wheel	Location	Number of Energies
Foundation	Anus	2
Self Supported	Born of the Liṅga	6
City of Gems	Navel	12
Unstruck Sound	Heart	10
Purity	Throat	16
Command	Between the eyes	4

We may conclude that although there is a sense of the correspondence between the Five Brahmās and the Wheels, it is not easy to make the two groups fit together. The Stavarāja has attempted to co-ordinate them in this way. We have seen that there are other ways (see also below, 65/43-46ab). Thus, despite the discrepancies, the setup in the Stavarāja follows the same guiding principle we find elsewhere in our sources.

141. This simile is used to describe the Point in the centre of the maṇḍala that, like a radiant, whirling firebrand traces the outline of a flower (13/116). In this way the Point in the centre of a Wheel is also a Wheel of the Point (binducakra) (13/64). And the Wheel is also like a brilliant Liṅga or a flower traced in the Void. The petals outlined by the radiance of this brilliant Liṅga are its five phonemic energies. While the Liṅga itself is the Point shining radiantly in the midst of their Five Lords. This is the Pure Wheel (viśuddhicakra) in the throat.

142. I suppose that the five energies are those of the letters in this Wheel.

143. Note that in terms of an upward progression through the Wheels, the letters are arranged in the reverse order, which is that of withdrawal (saṁhāra). One would expect all fifty letters to be projected around the Wheels, however we find that there are only forty-one. See below, note to 3/139-140ab.

144. Śākinīs are one of many types of Yoginīs who, as embodied and diemboded witches, can cause harm. Reformed, they embody the elevating energies of deity.

145. One of the forms Kubjikā assumes is that of the tribal Śavarī. The knowledge Śavarī possesses is the Command.

146. We have seen that when Kuṇḍalinī penetrates the Wheel of the Command, the adept experiences the Fourth State of consciousness (3/101). In this state beyond waking, dreaming and deep sleep, he experiences the fullness of reality. The next Wheel is the highest. There he experiences the state Beyond the Fourth (turīyātīta). It is interesting to compare how Kashmiri Śaiva exegetes explain these two states with what the Kubjikā Tantras have to say about them. The Kashmiri masters start out by explaining that the experience in both states is the same. Here too both this Wheel of the Fourth State and the next Wheel Beyond the Fourth are equally 'endowed with reality attained' (siddhatattva).

However, although both are essentially the same experience, the Kashmiri masters explain that the Fourth state is not ultimate because it is not permanent. Inevitably, sooner or later, the adept will have to fall back again into the states of waking, dreaming and deep sleep that he has for a while transcended. He must persevere, however, and keep exerting himself to maintain his awareness in that state and strive to replace it there whenever he falls. In this way, with practice the intensity of the energy of grace (śaktipāta) that inspires him develops to its full maturity. To the degree in which that is taking place, the Fourth State is progressively consolidated in the other states of consciousness until it is experienced constantly in all of them. This is the liberated condition said to be Beyond the Fourth (see Dyczkowski 1987: 213-218). But whereas the Kashmiri exegetes suggest in this way that once the state Beyond the Fourth is attained, the Fourth is permanently transcended, here the state Beyond the Fourth is understood to be the transcendental source and foundation of the Fourth State. The latter, in a sense, serves as a channel for the divine energy of the former when it descends. It also serves as a means to its attainment when the same energy returns to its source in the ascending phase.

147. According to another system of six Wheels described below in chapter 25, there is a seventh Wheel beyond the Wheel of the Command. As the second Wheel, the Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna) is missing here, this, the sixth and last Wheel, beyond that of the Command corresponds to the seventh Wheel in the other system. There this Wheel is in the Circle of the Void (śūnyamaṇḍala) and marks the state Beyond the Fourth (turiyātīta). It is the highest state of the energy of the Command that develops by the enlightening, purifying activity of the Fourth state, into the fully liberated condition. It is from here that the other six Wheels and their correspond states and principles emerge (see below 25/19-20).

Previously we were told that this Wheel contains the energies of the sixteen vowels (3/108). These are the energies of the Moon that were said there to be located in the Wheel of the Palate. Here this is apparently implicitly identified with the Wheel of the Nameless. We are told below that the energy Anāmā (see note to 2/35cd-36ab) is in the 'Supreme Abode'. There she abides in the One Reality and merges all things into consciousness (3/123). Symbolically located above the head beyond the extremity of the subtle body in the End of the Sixteen, it is the Seventeenth Energy (saptadaśī kalā) of the New Moon (amākalā). Beyond the sixteen energies of the Moon, it energizes them. Why then (in 3/102) was the last Wheel said to be located in the palate?

In the course of expounding the deeper metaphysical identity of a mantra called Samayavimala, the ŚM (MS G folio 6b) incidently tells us how this is possible:

By the term 'samaya' (in this context is meant) the location of the Cavity (of Brahmā). The energy of the Rule (samayinī) is located there. The energy abides in the (dynamism of) of the Practice of the Rule (samayācāra). Above and below, it is present in the movement (of the breath) (cāragā). Again, the immobile condition (acārā gatiḥ) of the vital breath abides in the End of the Twelve in the form of the seventeenth energy (of the Moon). It enters (therein) from the locus of the uvula (lambakasthāna) by virtue of (its) union with the perpetual flow (of the vital breath). She is Kujā who is in contact (upayoga) with the Cavity.

samayaśabdena [g: samayaya-] randhrasthānaṁ [gh: raṁdhru-; ch: randhasthānaṁ] || tatrasthā samayinī [c: samayanī] samayācāravartinī [ch: samayācara-] || adha ūrdhve ca [g, ch: ūrddhante;gh: ūrddhaṁte; ṅ, c: -na] vartate [g, gh, ch: missing] cāragā [kh: cāragatvā; g, gh, c, ch: cāaraga; ṅ: cara *] || tv acārā tu [kh, g, ch: tv acāran; gh: tv acāraṁs; ṅ: ty ācāra; ch; ty ācāran] tu gatiḥ [g, c, ch: gati; ṅ: rūpiṇī] prāṇasya vartate dvādaśānte saptādaśīkalārūpeṇa [kh: śaptādaśī-; g: sakādaśī-] || lambakasthānād [kh g, gh, ṅ, c, ch: -nā] sāviśantī [kh: viṁsantīṁ; g: sāvisantī; ṅ: visaṁtī; c: māvisaṁtī; ch: sāviṁśantī] satatapravāhayogena [kh: satatā-; g, ch: śantatā-; gh: saṁtatā--yogeṇa; ṅ: santatā-] kujā randhropayogasthā [g, c, ch: randhrāpa-]

Although according to this passage the seventeenth energy is at the End of the Twelve rather than the End of the Sixteen, even so, the dynamism is the same. Here it abides immobile, that is, well fixed at the climax of the upward movement of the breath from the uvula where the sixteenth energy (ṣoḍaśī kalā) is located and sustained by the other fifteen lunar energies of the vowels. The two work together as the two polarities that, uniting and interacting, generate and withdraw all things. These are the two aspects of Kubjikā, this inner Moon. As the Full Moon - the sixteenth energy - she is the white goddess, the benign Mahālakṣmī (3/131). As the New Moon - the seventeenth energy - she is the black goddess Kālī, the Emaciated One - Śuṣkā, who although very frightening, frees her devotees from fear (3/132). These two aspects, white and black, are, no less than gender, typical polarities. Kubjikā's dual white and black nature is an example of how she combines the opposites in her oneness. In her, like the moon, at the opposite extremities of its cyclic, circular progression - one marking the apex of the circle and the other the nadir - the polarities reverse into one another and contain each another. Such also is the intimate relationship and ultimate identity between the Wheel of the Palate and the Wheel of the Nameless. The former is the place of the Full Moon, the latter of the New Moon. The first is corporeal. It feeds the microcosmic body, gross and subtle with its nectar. The second is incorporeal and transcendent. Profoundly still and resting within itself, it replenishes the inner Moon through the subtle movement of the breath with its hidden energy. Just as the two Wheels are essentially one despite their separation both in symbolic space and their basic state - one above the head, the other below, one transcendent and formless, the other immanent and fully formed - so too the New and the Full Moon are the one reality which is the Moon goddess herself. In the following verses these two polarities are explored and praised alternately.

148. The spherical bud of the Kadamba tree symbolizes the Point or Drop (bindu) in the centre of the maṇḍala. Generated by the union of Śiva and Śakti, within the Point are massed together (kadambīkṛta) all the energies of the maṇḍala and so it is aptly identified with the Full Moon repleat with all the lunar energies. Here we are told that the Full Moon is present in the End of the Sixteen, that is, within the Void of the New Moon which is the seventeenth lunar digit in the End of the Sixteen. The next verse tells us that the New Moon is present in the Full Moon.

149. See above note to 3/44.

150. The noun utsaṅga- literally means 'lap'. Above in 3/63-64ab the goddess in the form of the Yoni is depicted sitting on Śambhu's lap (utsaṅgagāminī) representing in that way their chaste union. Accordingly, I have translated the expression utsaṅgāmṛta- which literally means 'the nectar of (the god's) lap' in accord with the intended sense as the 'nectar of union' of the god and the goddess.

151. Kālikā is the energy of the New Moon, which is represented in the maṇḍala by the crescent Moon (ardhacandra) drawn within or below the Point. Kālikā (literally 'the little Kālī'), the young and beautiful Kālī, is the goddess of the New Moon, which is also 'black' and 'young'. Kālikā is the form of the goddess when she marries and unites with the god. Engaged in union, 'churned' by the god, the goddess bends her limbs to become the 'crooked' or 'bent over' (kubjā) goddess Kubjikā represented by the Triangle. Kālikā is thus the original form of Kubjikā when she enters the Liṅga, that is the god, and it is the form of the goddess when she is penetrated by him. Internalized, the polarities become one to polarise and unite again more internally within the goddess to maintain the vitalizing dynamism within her. The emergent form of the goddess - the Full Moon - is penetrated and pervaded by her 'original' form. The nectar-like bliss generated in this way is the goddess herself as well as the god (see 3/129) and it is the same bliss that is generated by their union.

In general terms the goddess is said to be a lioness because she governs this Kaula tradition, which like all Kaula traditions, is a 'teaching of the Lion' (siṁhadarśana) (see intro. vol. 2, p. 334 ff.). More specifically, the Lioness (siṁhakā) is the goddess in the form of her Vidyā. Powerful and majestic like a lion, the Vidyā, which can both grace and curse, abides in the Void of the maṇḍala (53/4). Her Vidyā, as we shall see in chapter nine, has two forms corresponding to her two aspects as the New and Full Moon. Perhaps this verse also alludes to the union of these two brought about by reciting them together.

152. Kālikā, the goddess of the New Moon is called Kulakālikā above (3/10). Here, Vāmā, the goddess of the Full Moon is called Kulamālinī. The reader will recall that according to the KMT Vāmā Devī is the name of the goddess when she emerges from the Liṅga (KMT 2/3-5).

153. Vāmā is one of four goddesses well known to many Tantric, especially Kaula, traditions. The others are Jyeṣṭhā, Raudrī and Ambikā. Chapter 40 below, which is drawn from the TS, deals with them and their functions at length. Vāmā appears here independently, although her function here is basically the same as the one she performs when she is with the other goddesses. She is associated with emanation (sṛṣṭi) (40/81) and so is appropriately linked to Brahmā the creator (40/129c). She is both the creative will (icchā) (14/111) that generates the universe and the mother of all mantras (40/11). Vāmā may mean a 'beautiful woman' and she is indeed depicted in this way. However, the texts generally focus on the derivation of her name from the root vam, which means to vomit or emit. Accordingly, the YHṛ (1/37) says that when the goddess is 'propense (unmukhī) to make the universe, (originally) in a seed state, manifest, she is Vāmā (so called) because she vomites out (vamana) the universe'. Similarly, the goddess Vāmeśvarī worshipped in the Kālīkrama is said to be 'the goddess (īśvarī) who resides in the Sky (vyoman) and emits, spits out or vomits the universe of personal experience, out of the universal experience of the absolute, much as a person suffering from cholera vomits out everything in his stomach (Dyczkowski 1987: 130 with reference to MM p. 86, see also Pandey 1963: 508).

Vāmā is especially associated with the Moon, just as Raudrī is with the Sun (35/83). Tacitly applying the same didactic etymology, below we are told that what she 'vomits' (vamayati) is lunar nectar (38/22). Vāmā is therefore associated with the Full Moon, that is, that aspect of the Transmental energy of the Command that engenders emanation. During the bright half of the lunar fortnight the Moon increases progressively until it finally becomes full and so the Full Moon, which is emblematic of this process, naturally symbolises the process of emanation. Conversely, the New Moon symbolizes the progressive withdrawal of manifestation.

The clue to our understanding of this verse lies in the expression 'the Abode of the Nectar of Wine (vāmāmṛta)' where the goddess is said to reside. The word 'vāma' also means 'left' and so vāmāmṛta literally means 'the nectar of the left'. This name, which may also mean 'the nectar of woman', denotes the sacrificial wine offered in Kaula and other similar rites. Surprisingly, although sixty-four names for it are listed below (46/244cd-257), this one is not amongst them, although it is quite uncommon. It appears, for example, in one place in Abhinavagupta's TĀ (29/10) where he discusses Kaula ritual. There he says:

> In this sacrifice the wise man must offer the sacrificial substance (dravya) prohibited in the tradition of (other) scriptures soaked in the nectar of the left (vāmāmṛta).

Commenting on the passage, which begins with this verse, Jayaratha presents a series of quotes he says are from scripture (āgama) to justify its use in this way. Amongst them we read:

O goddess, what is use of other masses of sacrificial substances used for the Kaula sacrifice? Without just the one namely, the nectar of the left (vāmāmṛta) they are not worth even a sixteenth part (of it). TĀv on TĀ 29/11-13.

The sacrificial wine is also the inner, lunar nectar and so is also called the Energy of the Moon (candrakalā) (46/248). Below (65/52cd-53ab) we are told that the yogi in the supreme state 'should drink with the mouth (of consciousness) that digit of the Moon that is the wine (sudhā) of the Two Drops'. The Two Drops are the two dots written one above the other that graphically represent the sixteenth vowel called visarga, a word that also means 'emission'. It represents the sixteenth lunar energy, the Full Moon that contains the digit that discharges the inebriating wine-like nectar the yogi drinks and is the abode of the goddess Vāmā. Below (46/299-300) we read:

Once he has understood his own Transmission (ātmakrama) well, (the initiate) should practise drinking (pāna). He should contemplate the cup as the dawning Sun and the mantra as the dawning Moon and (then) drink. He should imagine that the Drop, the colour of a ruby, is in between them. Drink the (energy of this), the seventeenth digit (of the Moon), completely full of the Supreme Nectar. The nectar that flows from that energy (kalā) is the radiant power (tejas) of the Great Bhairava. O Lord of the god of the gods, that is (the true spiritual) liquor (madya) not that produced from grapes and sugar cane.

Concerning the sacrificial use of wine and its inner counterpart, see 46/237ff. and notes.

154. See notes to 3/56 and 24/77cd.

155. In the previous verse Dakṣa praised one polarity - the Full Moon, now he praises the other, the New Moon. Polarities reverse in consonance. Vāmā, the goddess of the left there, and the goddess on the right here. The Moon there, the Sun here.

Rising in stages through the Wheels the yogi attains the experience of the oneness of these polarities and with them all others. The core of fullness is emptiness. The source of light is darkness. The Moon is the Sun. The reality that can never be known as an object of knowledge is knowledge itself. Reaching this level, the yogi realises that the New Moon is within the Full Moon as its essential nature and the Full Moon is contained within the New Moon as the manifestation of its hidden power.

The goddess of the New Moon, who is 'unmanifest and (whose) form is manifest' has come forth from the Supreme Radiance (29/23-24) and she who is herself the development of radiant energy (tejovṛddhi) practices austerity (tapas) (which heats and illumines), desiring, as it were, to re-enter that Supreme Radiance (61/6-7). There, in the Supreme Void, she who is radiant energy (tejas) is united with the god who is the teacher and that same energy (3/122), both grounded in its supreme form.

156. The three energies will, knowledge and action, are aspects of the sides of the goddess's Triangle which is her body in the 'shape of a Yoni'. This is her sacred seat in the centre of which she resides in the 'form of a sprout', that is, Kuṇḍalinī 'grounded in the supreme radiant energy' which is the source of all the energies.

157. These lines and the following verse (i.e. 3/122) present the lunar polarity from a different perspective. First Dakṣa praises the snake goddess Kuṇḍalinī in the Wheel of the City of Jewels (maṇipura) located in the navel (cf. 36/40). Here, curled in three coils, she is the goddess Bhairavī who, spherical like the bud of a Kadamba tree, is the Full Moon (35/42cd-45ab). The following verse goes on to praise the Supreme Void of the New Moon in which the god, the teacher of all teachers resides.

158. Maṇipura, the Wheel in the navel, here called the Great Jewel, is in the centre of the stomach where the gastric fire is located (see 25/9cd-12ab). This is where Kuṇḍalinī resides when she sleeps (36/40). Here she is awakened by the pressure of the vital force rising from the centres below and is gradually led upwards (see 36/41ff. and notes). She shines in the navel like the flame (śikhā) of a lamp (31/57) and rises in this form piercing the Wheels in the subtle body.

The Great Jewel is also the name of Kuṇḍalinī, not just the navel centre (see below 62/31). Accordingly there is a hymn addressed to her (below 29/2–14) called the Mahāratnastava - the Hymn to the Great Jewel. It is possible that as the navel is the place where Kuṇḍalinī - the Great Jewel - reposes, this Wheel, Maṇipura, the City of the Jewel may have taken its name from her. However, the sources ignore this possiblity preferring instead to take Maṇipūraka, which means 'the Filler of Jewels', to be the original form of the name. This Great Jewel is filled with many jewels (58/93cd-94ab) as the KMT (11/18cd-19ab, 20ab) explains: ‘This (Wheel) is (called) the Filler of Jewels because these fifty great jewels (of the letters) are filled with energy (mahat) by the thread of Speech (śabdasūtra). [. . .] Filled with the fifty (forms of) consciousness it bestows enjoyment and liberation.’

Below (59/75cd-76) we are told that when Kuṇḍalinī sleeps in the navel, the Wheel there assumes the form of the triangular Stone, the counterpart of which, located in the End of the Twelve above the head, has been described in the first part of this chapter. The Stone, as we have seen, contains the sonic energy of all the fifty letters. These resound collectively in harmony as 'the sound of lovemaking' (sītkāra) (ibid.) of the resonant Silence of the Sound Absolute.

Kuṇḍalinī ascends and descends in a spiral motion in three great loops. At rest in the Plane of Repose (viśrāmabhūmikā) in the centre of the maṇḍala, she is the power of bliss (ānandaśakti). When she descends she manifests progressively, at each turn, as the energies of will, knowledge and action (below 3/124). Conversely, ascending, she first manifests as the energy of action, then knowledge and finally as the omnipotent will of the Transmental to merge into her basic nature, the energy of bliss, which is the form in which she abides within the transcendent god. This condition is called Nirvāṇa as it is her ultimate state of rest. When Kuṇḍalinī sleeps, although she is resting, this condition is one in which she is not united with the god, although she reposes within him. She is thus these same three energies in a potential state. This is symbolized by her coiled form, like that of a sleeping snake. Coiled in this way around the Wheel in the navel, she is its enclosure.

159. God and goddess reside in the Supreme Void, the transcendent (3/133) at the summit of the series of Voids in the centre of each Wheel (3/134-138). The goddess has been described previously as radiant energy (tejas) (3/118). Here we are told that this is the nature of the god also. As before, the god appears as the teacher embodied in the seed-syllable mantra Navātman (cf. 2/29-30ab). The nine letters of Navātman are arranged one above the other to form a 'peak' or 'heap' - kūṭa. This type of seed-syllable (akṣara) mantra is accordingly called kūṭakṣara. The summit of this 'peak' or 'heap' of letters is called the 'End of the Nine'. The End of the Nine marks the highest stage of ascent through sixteen stages. The first six are the Six Wheels. These are followed by the stages in the development of the subtle, higher levels of Speech that culminate in the Transmental. Beyond that is the Supreme Void where the deity resides and liberation is finally achseved. This is the End of the Sixteen (see intro. vol. 1, p. 417 ff. where Ṣoḍaśāntamuktisūtra is quoted.) where the goddess resides as the Full Moon pervaded and encompassed by the New Moon which is the halo, as it were, of its rays (3/115-116).

160. Anāmā is the New Moon. She is the 'sprout' (3/119) of the energy of the will that emerges, as it were, from the seed of all things - the one, ultimate reality beyond name and form in the 'Supreme Abode', that is, in the centre of the Triangle. There she contemplates her outer triadic form even as she withdraws it into the inner oneness of the centre. Concerning the energy Anāmā see note to 2/35cd-36ab.

161. The previous verse described the New Moon which is the energizing transcendent, formless aspect of the goddess in the centre of the Full Moon. Here we are told how she differentiates into the fullness of her triadic form as the Triangle generated from the Full Moon, that is, the Point in the centre. This the goddess contemplates from the summit of the centre into which her energies merge and from where they are emitted in the 'process of going and coming'. 'Going' is the forward order (anuloma), which is that of emanation. 'Coming' is the reverse order (viloma), which that of the withdrawal. These terms may be applied to the recitation of mantras. An example is the group of Five Praṇavas that at the beginning of the Vidyā should be recited in the forward order and in reverse at the end (9/59; cf. 22/14 for a different mantra). If the count of the number of times a mantra is recited is kept with the aid of a rosary, the 'going' is the forward, clockwise direction. This continues up to the main bead, which is called the Meru. Then starting again from there, the same is repeated in reverse in order. This is the 'coming' phase (see note to 34/125). With respect to the flow of the breathing, the 'going' phase is the inhaled breath (pūraka) and 'coming', the exhaled (recaka) (11/60-61). This pair with respect to the energy that impells the breathing is the upward and downward motion, respectively (40/23cd-24) that correspond to the purifying ascent and descent of Kuṇḍalinī through Susumṇā (note to 13/140ab, 18/63cd-65; 30/69cd-72ab). Conversely, the supreme state of Nirvāṇa is free of all 'going and coming' and so is free and tranquil (31/51cd-54).

In this case the 'going and coming' is the alternate spreading out and withdrawal of the three energies of will, knowledge and action from the Point in the centre and back. In this way, the Point develops into the Triangle and the Triangle collapses into the Point thus reproducing outside the Point the self-sustaining dynamism within it that engenders the cyclic arising and falling away of emanation. Thus the goddess of the New Moon 'in the field at the extremity of the energy at the summit of the Moon', that is, in the apex of the centre, spreads out to form the Triangle from the Point which is the Full Moon to then withdraw back into its innermost and most elevated centre which is the New Moon. In this way the goddess in the centre, the energy of bliss, assumes the form of the energies of will, knowledge and action represented by the sides of the goddess's Triangle in the End of the Twelve (see note to 7/12).

162. See above note to 3/92cd-93ab where the Five Voids are related to the Five States listed there and to the Wheels in the body. Each of the Five Voids is the centre of one of the Wheels starting from that of the Command down. The reader will recall that these are five as the Wheel of the Self-supported has been omitted. Below six Voids are described (3/133-138). The highest Void is said there to relate to Śiva (3/133) who, incorporeal and transcendent, is one of two polarities (pakṣa). This Void is followed by the other polarity, which is as one would expect, Śakti. She is the collective unity of the Five Voids within the corporeal, immanent sphere she governs (see note 3/92cd-93ab).

163. The inner Conduct of the Night is, essentially, the arousal of Kuṇḍalinī who is the Moonlight (candrikā) (60/43), which is the New Moon (see note to 3/43 and 3/116). Dormant, Kuṇḍalinī is the deluding power of Māyā which reverses the right knowledge of reality to that of ignorance. Conversely, when Kuṇḍalinī awakens, she who is said to be 'reverse action' (viparītātmikā kriyā) progressively reverses this reversal as she rises through the Voids in the centre of the Wheels. In this way the knowledge of each Void replaces ignorance until, having traversed all the five in the body, it is correctly and completely known to be the receptacle and vehicle of this power. Concerning the Conduct of the Night, see intro. vol. 1, p. 514 ff..

164. The Fourth State is experienced in the Wheel of the Command. Presumably, therefore, the Point in this case is the one in centre of that Wheel. The Wheel of the Command is that of the Transmental. In the very core of this, the sphere of the Transmental, is the white, seminal drop (bindu) of desire that impels the emanation of the triadic energy of the Yoni from which creation proceeds. Presumably, 'the mouth of ultimate reality' is the sphere of the State Beyond the Fourth, more commonly known as the Unborn Mouth (ajavaktra) or the Mouth of the Teacher (guruvaktra). From another point of view it is the Void of the energy of the New Moon (amākalā) - the undifferentiated energy (niṣkala) of the goddess. The Point is the Full Moon, the 'white nectar' repleat with all the lunar energies of the differentiated (sakala) form of the goddess. It is experienced in the Fourth State in which the yogi catches the powerful impulse of the divine desire that arouses the matrix (yoni) of energies. At first it is enclosed in itself, accessible only as a separate state transcending the others. But when it is experienced and understood more profoundly, the 'white nectar' of the Fourth State, loosing its solidity, as it were, bursts through the confines of its separate identity and flows out into the universe of the other states. Kuṇḍalinī is the energy of consciousness that gives rise to the knowledge of the Fourth State so we may say, in the language of our sources, that when Kuṇḍalinī reaches the Wheel of the Command where the Fourth State is experienced (3/101) the Point of the Full Moon in the centre, full of waves of nectar, melts and flows.

165. The root dru means equally 'to become fluid', 'dissolve', 'melt' and 'flow'. In order to capture the sense of the verb in English I have analysed what in Sanskrit is considered to be a single action, as both 'melting' and 'flowing'.

166. The previous verse referred to the blissful nectar of the Full Moon experienced in the Fourth State, this one refers to the state Beyond the Fourth, which is the fully liberated condition, that is, the Śāmbhava State symbolized by the New Moon. The Moonlight (candrikā) (3/44 and 3/116) of the Moon and its radiant energy (tejas) (3/118), it is the pure Light which is the undifferentiated source all the lunar energies the goddess of the New Moon sustains and contains within herself in the Supreme Void of Śiva's transcendental state (see below

3/133). This is ‘perceived’ and attained by piercing the Wheels with the Drop of the Command. This internal process is activated by the initiation which takes place by ‘piercing’ (vedhadīkṣā) through the centres of the body. It is a distinctive feature of Kaula initiation and has several varieties (see 31/5ff) which, along with other forms of initiation, are discussed in detail below in chapters 31 to 33.

The Command is the Fourth State, Beyond Mind. This energy transforms impurity and duality into the pure unity of Śiva and Śakti experienced perpetually in the liberated state Beyond the Fourth. Like the alchemical mercury that transforms all that it touches into gold, this energy, channelled by the teacher, transforms impurity and duality into the pure unity of Śiva and Śakti experienced perpetually in the liberated state Beyond the Fourth (see KMT 3/100ff. quoted in the intro. vol. 1, p. 210). As the Kulārṇavatantra teaches:

As the touch of purified and processed mercury changes iron into gold, so does the soul touched by initiation become Śiva.

167. The Great Jewel, as we have seen, is both Kuṇḍalinī and the Wheel of the Navel where she is aroused from her sleep. The Unbroken Circle is the Point (bindu) (see note to 3/7) in the centre of the Wheel enveloped by Kuṇḍalinī (3/120-121) who is the power of Speech (vāc) and the energy of the breath (prāṇaśakti), which is the vital essence of the individual soul (jīva).

168. Above in verse 3/126 we were told that the nectar is white. Here it is said to be blue. The reason for this is not clear to me. Perhaps in the first case the nectar is that of the Full Moon experienced in the Fourth State whereas this one is the nectar of the New Moon experienced in the liberated state Beyond the Fourth. Kālikā is the dark goddess of the New Moon and her consort Bhairava, the blue, dark god, is the nectar of bliss that pervades both the universe and the microcosm of the adept's body even as he resides in the transcendent Light of consciousness.

169. The End of Sound (nādānta) is one of the levels in the upward development of sonic consciousness beyond the inner resonance (nāda) of mantric sound (see intro. vol. 1, p. 390). But there can be no doubt that this is not the End of Sound meant here. Here, as this verse itself says, the End of Sound is a way of referring to the Supreme State. The KMT (25/147d) similarly declares that: ‘the End of Sound is the imperishable plane’ (nādāntaṁ padam avyayam). Similarly, after describing the yogi's ascent from the lowest levels upwards 'like a monkey climbing a tree', the YKh (2) declares that the summit where the yogi achieves liberation is the End of Sound (ibid. 11/26cd-28ab, quoted in the intro. vol. 1, p. 223).

The supreme state experienced in the End of the Twelve is the Transmental, the Divine Will symbolized by the Full Moon. In the End of the Sixteen it is Śiva and his energy, the New Moon. We have seen that the state in the End of the Twelve spontaneously rises to the End of the Sixteen. In another of the rare passages where this End of Sound is mentioned, this spontaneous rise is described as the perennial dawning of the Divine Light of Śakti within Śiva:

She who is consciousness (vijñāna), the supreme (goddess), superior (transcendent) and inferior (immanent), is Bhairava's will applied (niyuktā) within the End of Sound above the maṇḍala, (where she is) endowed with the parts of the Transmission (kramapada) and is the light that has emerged (utthitā) within Śiva (śivānte).

yā sā vijñānabhūtā para - aparaparā bhairavecchā niyuktā [k, gh: bhairavasthā niyukto; ṅ: bhairavesthā niyukto]
*nādānte [g: nādāte] maṇḍalordhve [k, gh: maṁtralorddha; g, ṅ: -rddha; 2: k: -lārddha; kh: -rddha] kramapadasahitā [g: -padi-] utthitābhā [g: uthitā-; 2: kh: -tā ] śivānte | YKh (1) 34/1ab (= YKh (2) 30/1ab).

At the level of the Transmental in the End of the Twelve, thought and all outer manifestation dissolve away. The perfect silence and stillness, which is the supreme form of Speech and action, of the supreme state in the End of the Sixteen, is one in which there is neither emanation or withdrawal and so is beyond that also.

170. Kālikā is the goddess of the New Moon (3/116). Mahālakṣmī appears most frequently in the Kubjikā Tantras as the last of the eight Mothers (for example, see below 16/15 and 44/35cd-37). Mahālakṣmī also appears in some descriptions of the goddess's visualized form as the northern face amongst her six faces (YKh (1) 37/81cd). According to our text this face is Kālī (29/48). However, although these references indicate a connection between Kubjikā on the one hand and Kālī on the other, Mahālakṣmī, like Kālikā, appears in the Kubjikā Tantras as a form of Kubjikā. The link between the Śaiva Kālī and the Vaiṣṇava Lakṣmī is clearly and firmly established in the Kālī Tantras. The primary form of Kālī worshipped in the JY is Kālasaṁkarṣiṇī but forms of Lakṣmī, particularly Mahālakṣmī and Viśvalakṣmī, are prominent. Chapter 21 of the first ṣaṭka of the JY deals extensively with the worship of Lakṣmī in the context of Kālī worship. There we read:

In order to gain wealth (and power) (lakṣmī) one should worship Lakṣmī in the middle of Lakṣmī's maṇḍala surrounded by the aggregate of Kālī's energies.

lakṣmyarthaṁ pūjayel lakṣmīṁ lakṣmīmaṇḍalamadhyagām ||
kālīkalākalāpena samantāt parivāritām | JY 1/21/7cd-8ab.

Then follows a description of how to draw Lakṣmī's maṇḍala. The seventeen syllable mantra of Kālasaṁkarṣaṇī is projected into it and the goddesses in the maṇḍala all wear Lakṣmī's clothes. The JY considers Mahālakṣmī to be the Lakṣmī of the early Śaiva, Pāśupata traditions collectively called Atimārga. She is Kulalakṣmī, the goddess of the Kula, also called Viśvalakṣmī.

atimārgamahālakṁī kulalakṣmī prakīrtitā |
kauleśvarī kulalakṣmī nityālaksmī jayapradā ||
viśvalakṣmī samākhyātā vidyādhvānaparākramā | JY 3/11/307-308ab.

A great deal could be said about Lakṣmī's identification with Kālī in the JY and the Kālīkrama in general. Together with her consort, Narasiṁha, they make a formidable pair. Suffice it here just to quote the following verses from the JY. They are interesting because they illustrate how she retains the benign features of the Vaiṣṇava Lakṣmī. At the same time she is portrayed as devouring time and death which is Kālī's special prerogative. Moreover, she is Śuṣkā - the Emaciated One - the form of Kālī mentioned in the very next verse of our text:

She who is Śuṣkā and exudes bodily fluids (sakṣarā) is said to be Mahālakṣmī. She brings all good fortune and is the supreme destroyer of death. She resides in the Wheel of the Heart and the navel and is greedy to devour the senses (karaṇa). She is present in all the functions (of the body and mind). She is the goddess of the Lord of the Wheel of Kula.

eṣā sakṣarā śuṣkā mahālakṣmī prakīrtitā |
sarvasaubhāgyakāraṇī kālāntakaraṇī parā ||
hṛccakranābhinilayā karaṇagrāsalampaṭā |
aśeṣavṛttinilayā kulacakreśvareśvarī || JY 2/7/11-12.

In the Kubjikā Tantras, Lakṣmī appears most commonly as Vaiṣṇavī as she does in the version of the goddess's myth narrated in YKh (2) (16/37cd-41, see intro. vol. 1, p. 164 ff.). This then is the goddess of the New Moon.

171. Perhaps these verses refer to a standard set of three principles namely, Ātmatattva, Vidyātattva and Śivatattva. The first two are mentioned explicitly in this and the previous verse and the third, possibly implicitly in the following one. These three principles cover the range of the thirty-six principles (see above, note to 2/40-41) and correspond to the Triple Vidyā namely, Aparā, Parāparā and Parā, respectively (see KMT 18/1-13 and below chapter 20 for these three Vidyās). However, if this is the case, it is hard to understand why the goddess should have entered the deity, that is, the Liṅga by means of the Parāparā Vidyā, which would presumably be the 'resonance' (nināda) of Vidyātattva. Therefore, it is more likely that the Vidyā mentioned here is the goddess's Samayā Vidyā. The 'resonance' or utterance (uccāra) of this Vidyā is the means by which the goddess enters the Liṅga. There she is the energy of the goddess of the New Moon here appropriately called Śuṣkā - the Emaciated One. Externally, as it were, she is 'in the middle of the (goddess's) outwardly visible icon', that is, I suppose, the Full Moon.

172. The 'abode of the Fourth State' is the Wheel of the Command located between the eyebrows (3/101). This then is the 'carriage' (ratha) on which this energy is mounted and transported to Śiva's Supreme Void at the End of Sound (3/130). Below we are told that Parā resides in the Void of the palate mounted on the carriage of the Sound of Brahman (3/138). This rare expression, found in only three or four places in the Kubjikā corpus, appears in this context at least, to be another name for the Fourth State resonant with the Sound of Brahman. Thus, the Sound of Brahman, like the Fourth State, burns away the impurities of the individual soul. The Supreme Energy (paramā śakti), together with Śiva, is above it in the Supreme Void (paramavyoman) where all impurity dissolves away (13/18-20ab). The association of the Sound of Brahman with the nectar that drips from the Wheel in the palate and the condition beyond thought constructs of the Fourth State are brought together in these two lines from YKh (1):

The one who is merged into the path of the Sound of Brahman should drink the Kaulika drink. [. . .] (When he is) established on the plane free of thought, all obstacles are destroyed.

brahmaghoṣapathe līno pibet pānaṁ tu kaulikam | [. . .]
sarvavighnāḥ kṣayaṁ yānti nirvikalpapade sthitaḥ | YKh (1) 6/170ab, 6/171ab.

173. Concerning the Stainless (nirañjana), see below, note to 13/76cd-78. This verse and the previous one praise the highest energy that moves from the Wheel of the Command to the oneness of the supreme liberated state beyond in the Sky of Consciousness - the transcendent, peaceful absolute which, as the following passage from the KRU explains, is Supreme Śiva, beyond the Wheels:

He who is the supreme Nirvāṇa is the Supreme Śiva who is both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent). He is omniscient and is present in all existing things (bhāva). He is the stainless (nirañjana) Supreme Self. Unborn and immortal, he is the abode of (all) people. The knower of reality, he is the lord who does all things. (He is) the Supreme Lord of whom one cannot find the beginning, middle or end. He is free of form and colour, qualities and conditions. [. . .]

He can be realized (only) through the bliss of contemplation (bhāvanā) and is free of places (sthāna) and Wheels. (He is) the Void (śūnya) and the Void is (his) seat. Inconceivable, he has no (spatial) location (aniketana) and is without the stains (of imperfection) (niṣkalaṅka).

yo 'sau [k kh : yoso] paramanirvāṇaḥ [k g: -nirvāṇa; kh: paramanirvāne]

parāparaḥ [k kh: -paraḥ; g: parāpara] paraḥ śivaḥ ||
sarvajñaḥ sarvabhāvasthaḥ [k kh: -sthaṁ] paramātmā [k kh: paramātma] nirañjanaḥ |
ajāmarajanāvāsas tattvajñaḥ sarvakṛt prabhuḥ ||
yasya nādi na madhyānto labhyate [g: labhete] parameṣṭhinaḥ |
rūpavarṇavinirmukto [k kh : -kta; g: rūpavarṇavimmukta] upādhiguṇavarjitaḥ [k: rūpāti-; kh: rūpyadhiguṇa-; g: rūpoviguṇavarjitaḥ] || [. . .]
bhāvanānandasaṁvedyaś cakrasthānavivarjitaḥ [kh: -tandasāṁvadya-; g: -sāṁvadhya-] |
śūnyaḥ śūnyāsano 'cintyo [k: -ciṁtya; kh: śūnyāmanocitya] niṣkalaṅko 'niketanaḥ [k: niṣkalaṁkī; kh: niṣkalāṁkī; g: niṣkalaṅkī niketanaḥ] || KRU 1/42cd-44, 49.

This, the highest state, is not only the End but also the Beginning. Accordingly, from the next verse the ascent recommences from the Root.

174. The shore of this ocean, according to the commentary on the ṢSS (49/103), is ‘the extremity of the outpouring of Sound’ (mahodadhitaṭaṁ nādollāsaprāntam). When the yogi reaches the shore of this ocean he has arrived at the brink of infinity. See below 14/64cd-66ab and note.

175. The palate, repleat with the sixteen lunar energies of the vowels, is the location of the Full Moon dripping with lunar nectar. The Void in the palate 'lies supine' (see note to 3/40-41), as it were, turned upwards to receive the stream of energy of the New Moon in the Supreme Void within Śiva (3/133). The Carriage of the Sound of Brahman is the Fourth State (3/138). It is the vehicle that conveys the energy of the Command to the End of Sound (3/130), Beyond the Fourth state. Thus the Void of the palate is Śiva's Supreme Void (3/133), just as the Wheel of the palate corresponds to the Wheel of Supreme Śiva, the Nameless (anāmacakra) (3/114). In the sequence of Wheels, the Wheel of the palate follows the Wheel of the Command although the latter, which is located between the eyebrows, is above it. Thus the Wheel of the palate is between the Wheel of the Command and the Pure Wheel in the throat. Similarly here, it is located above the Wheel in the throat. The Void of the Wheel of the Command, which follows in the direct ascending order, is the first in the series of Voids (3/133). It is not very different from the Wheel in the palate. The latter is the 'carriage of the Sound of Brahmā', the former 'the carriage of the Wheel of the Fourth State' which we have seen are essentially the same (see note to 3/133). Parā resides in the Void of the Wheel of the palate and the Vidyā of the goddess in the Void of the Wheel of the Command. All the Voids are essentially indistinguishable not just these two. But in this case it seems that this Void, the last in the series, is one with the first and supreme Void of Śiva in a special way. The cycle closes here. The Void of Śiva leads to the Void of Śakti and so the ascent continues perpetually.

176. This statement implies that Dakṣa's inner sacrifice is the progressive rise of Kuṇḍalinī through the Wheels. As she rises, she moves through the phonemic energies of the Wheels energizing them and thereby deploying aspects of her own energy, which is Speech (vāc), in the form of these sonic energies. We would expect, therefore, that all fifty letters be projected around the Wheels in this way, just as they are found to be in most accounts of these Wheels both in the Kubjikā Tantras and in those of other traditions. But here we find that there are only forty. The five labials are missing as are the three sibilants along with the aspirant Ha and conjunct KṢa. The absence of the labials could be due to the absence of the Wheel of the Self-supported to which they would otherwise belong according to the logic of this scheme. But it is hard to account for the remaining five missing letters.

177. It is standard practice after reciting a hymn and particularly after describing a mantra or a yogic or magical technique (prayoga) to extoll its benefits. In Sanskrit this form of eulogy is called phalaśruti lit. 'the hearing of (the description of its) fruits'.

178. The Saṁvartāmaṇḍala, that is, the Kramamaṇḍala into which the Krama is projected and worshipped is meant here. In other words, the devout initiate may recite this hymn in front of the maṇḍala or even without it during the 'three times', that is, at dawn, midday and sunset.

179. Concerning devotion see intro. vol. 1, p. 24 ff..

180. Apart from the KMT and the closely related ṢSS and ŚM, Tāntrikas are commonly criticized in the Kubjikā Tantras, insisting that Kaulas should not share their ritual activity with them. Tāntrikas in this case are probably the followers of the more exoteric Śaivasiddhānta who are not engaged in Kaula practice (kulācāra).

181. This is the teaching concerning the Wheels.

182. Dakṣa has risen through the Wheels of his own body, praising each one on the path of his ascent. This is the means by which he has managed to complete what is, and should be, essentially an inner sacrifice.

183. Dakṣa completed his sacrifice inwardly by raising Kuṇḍalinī (3/146cd-7ab and note). Here the god is telling Dakṣa to start another external sacrifice that by Śiva's blessings will be successful. What follows is not this new sacrifice. It is the rebirth of Dakṣa's daughter to Himavat that leads not to one but two sacrifices. One is the inner sacrifice Bhairava teaches Himavat and the other the outer one which is Bhairava's marriage (see intro. vol. 1, p. 122 ff.).

184. The events described in these verses (3/156-159) took place just after the destruction of Dakṣa's sacrifice described in verses 3/74-84 and so should be read directly after them.

185. The Circle of Gesture is the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (see above note to 2/14). The adamantine seat (vajrāsana) upon which the goddess sits may be the hexagon in the middle of the maṇḍala or else the syllable AIṀ. (see above, note to 3/98). The latter is more probable. It is with the thunderbolt - vajra - of AIṀ that the goddess bursts apart the Liṅga (see below 5/65cd-66ab). The goddess is said to be mounted on the seat of the letter AIṀ and is 'well established on the vajra-lotus' (5/72cd-73ab). So just as AIṀ served the goddess as a means to transform her state to the one outside the Liṅga, it similarly serves to transform her from the embodied to the disembodied condition of union.

186. The goddess is worshipped in the form of a sacred burning coal in Kāmarūpa by Siddhanātha (6/131cd-163ab). Burning like the flame of a lamp, Kuṇḍalinī rises through the centres in the body until she reaches the Point (bindu) into which she merges at the apex of her ascent. The energy that then exits up beyond the Point is the energy of cessation called Nirvāṇā. This is the raised form of Kuṇḍalinī who abides in the End of the Twelve. In this aspect she is Kālakarṣiṇī, a form of Kālī described below as the 'Light that shines (like) a smokeless burning coal' (31/62cd-63ab). In other words, the text here is telling us that the goddess left the body passing through the Wheels within it to finally assume the upper form of Kuṇḍalinī in the End of the Twelve. She abides there ready to descend again into the mortal world.

187. See intro. vol. 1, p. 134 ff..

188. The reading I have accepted is found in only MSs K and Jh. It is: jñātvā mama purā vāṇīṁ. All the other MSs read: jñātvā māṁ purā vāṇī which literally means: ‘having known me (there was) first a voice . . .’ . Rudraśiva, the author of the Ṭ, must have had this reading before him and somehow trying to make sense of the distorted syntax, attributes this 'voice' to the god. Thus, he comments: ‘Then, at that time, there was at first a voice, (that is a) speech was uttered, that is, spoken by the lord to Himavat’ (tasmin samaye purā vāṇī vāg [k kh: vāka] uccaritā himavantasya [k kh: himavantasyā] īśvareṇoktā [kh: īśvareṇa uktā] Ṭ MS K fl. 66b, quoted in full in the intro. vol. 1, p. 141-142). Although only two MSs which are, moreover, closely related, testify to the other reading, the syntax is correct and it makes good sense and so has been accepted.

189. See intro. vol. 1, p. 142 ff.

190. The noun paricarya- literally means ‘attendence’, ‘service’, ‘devotion’ or 'worship'. In this context it is clearly an euphemism for marriage. Cf. KMT 1/30-1 quoted in intro. vol. 1, p. 4-5.

191. The Sanskrit reads: gatvā tv anugrahaṁ tatra bhaviṣye tava sāṁpratam. The word 'bhaviṣye' may be understood to be the first person singular future of bhū ('to be') or as the locative of the noun bhaviṣya- ('the future'). Taking into account the normal deviant neuter gender of the noun anugraha-, which in regular Sanskrit is masculine, in the latter case the translation would be: 'Having gone there now, in the future grace (will be) yours.' The identity of the goddess and the Command, i.e. grace, is stressed in the following verses and so I have chosen the first of these possible translations. So we have come full circle to return to Tūṣṇīnātha to whom we were introduced in the first verse of this chapter absorbed, like the goddess before him, in contemplation in the Cave on top of Meru, the Triangle in the End of the Twelve above the head.

192. Cf. above, 3/19 and note.

193. The goddess must first enter the Liṅga to receive the Command. The Liṅga in this version of the myth is in the Cave which, as we can infer from these lines, is the Western House. This is the Triangle, the abode and place of origin of the Command. Once entered the Liṅga in the Triangle, the goddess must emerge out of it to transmit the Command. The god who tries to convince the goddess by reason, eulogy and imploration to impart the teachings to him is thus essentially asking her first of all to come out of the Liṅga. This is a long and difficult process especially in the KuKh where she emerges from the Liṅga no less than three times, the first of which is here (see also below 4/47cd-48ab and 5/29 ff.). Although not expressly stated here, we know this has taken place because the god receives the goddess's Command which the goddess is empowered to impart only after her stay in the Liṅga. We may thus reconstruct the sequence of events as follows. The goddess first went to the Cave. There she enters the Liṅga. This, presumably, is her 'arising in the Western House' that takes place by her entry into the energy of the Liṅga, which is the Command and the goddess's own inner nature, that empowers the goddess to assume her pre-eminent authority to then emerge from it and grace the god.

The goddess receives the teaching not from the `outer' god but from his highest transcendental form experienced in the Śāmbhava state she attains. Then, when she in turn initiates him in his outer form in which he is 'deluded by the net of Māyā' (3/25-28), he is reinstated in his original supreme, transcendental form and so the cycle of the transmission, grounded in the transcendent, closes back on itself.

The original form of the myth narrated in the KMT and the ŚM, which follows it closely, is altered here. In these two texts the goddess desires instruction from the god and receives his Command. Then at his instigation she must leave him to receive complete empowerment. Here there is no mention of these two events. The god receives his first instruction when he marries the goddess. As for her, she is graced in the Cave and effortlessly enters the Western House, i.e the maṇḍala where she spontaneously receives the empowerment and is `established in authority'. This is the same place where the god must go. But unlike her, he cannot find it alone and must persuade the goddess to empower him (see below 5/33). It is a sign of the goddess's pre-eminance that she, unlike the god, attains the Command by laying aside duality, not with effort or with any outer assistence, but by virtue of her own nature (4/1) because she herself is the Command.

194. The text reads: pāramparyakrameṇaiva tayā tasya tv anugraham. Literally this means: 'Grace (was) his, (given) by her in accord with the transmission of the tradition'.

195. Lit. ‘descent of power’.

196. We have seen (above 3/157cd-159) that the goddess immolated herself in her father’s sacrificial fire to purify herself.

197. See intro. 2, 197, 277.

198. The goddess assumes her full identity as the power of the Command once she has transmitted it to the god. She is fully enstated as the power-holder only when she has exercised her power. Her empowerment is completed by transmitting the Command and the Command is fulfilled by flowing through the lineages. The first point of exit is the god. Operating through him its flows into the whole tradition of the Kubjikā Tantras. Cf. 3/22-24, 3/66cd-67ab, 5/2-7 and notes.

199. The sequence of events is not at all as clear here as it is in the KMT. A knowledge of the original myth is presumed and so there is no need to make everything fit in a forward linear sequence. Mythical time is, anyway, not linear. Events may be `repeated’ before they take place. It is a way of expressing the peculiar circularity of self-subsistence that characterizes the spiritual world. In this case, this circularity is apparent with respect to the empowering grace, which, both cause and effect, is accomplished, as it were, right from the start and yet must be attained. The goddess who just a few lines before graced the god and so must have emerged out of the Liṅga again becomes the Divine Liṅga and as such re-enters it. This is the goddess’s introverted condition in which she experiences the bliss of her innate nature, the Command. In this condition it is still inside her and like the drop of vital seed in the womb fertilizes her. She who is the womb - Yoni - is in the womb of the Liṅga of power (tejoliṅga) and the Liṅga which is her own nature is within her emitting the seed of the Command that sustains her (5/11cd-14). In the Liṅga she is the Virgin practicing the vow of `ecstatic celibacy’ (see below 6/3-5). Now up to verse 5/28, the god addresses the goddess who is inside the Liṅga. Even though she is unmanifest, she can hear and see him. She even answers him from within the Liṅga.

200. The City of the Moon is the Triangle. The Divine Liṅga is the Point in the centre resonant with the goddess’s seed-syllable Vidyā AIṀ or HSKHPHREṀ that resounds in the Void of the Yoni. This is the Liṅga in the Yoni - Sound in the Supreme Void.

201. As Śrīnātha is the speaker, it is he, it seems, who is the recipient of the Āgama. But then one would expect him to say it is his own oral tradition not Śambhu's, as if Śambhu were other than himself. This laps gives one the impression here for a moment that the mortal redactor of the KuKh is speaking, not the god.

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER FOUR

1. There is a brief commentary on the following passage up to 4/13 in the Ṭīkā (MS K folio 67a) embedded in which are the variant readings signalled as Ṭ in the notes. See notes to the English translation for the text of the Ṭīkā.

2. All MSs: प्राप्ता। This emendation agrees with the reading in the Ṭ.

3. It appears that the compound शाम्भवाज्ञापदम् has been broken up and the order of the components altered for the sake of the metre. This supposition is supported by the Ṭ which explains this line as follows: एवं स्वरूपेण प्राप्तं त्वया परमेश्वरि (क्
ख्: –री) शांभवाज्ञापदम्. 4. छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: गुरु मे। 5. All MSs: युक्ता–।
6. ञ्: –मा:। 7. ङ्: सिद्धि–। 8. ञ्: (?)।
9. ञ्: * (?) दि। 10. छ्: शक्ति मम।

11. मातरी in the place of माता occurs several times in this text. See below, note to 5/41b.

12. छ्, ज्: कामार्चिनो; all other MSs: कामार्चितो। A plural ending not uncommonly replaces a required nom. sing. ending of possessive nouns, as has happened here. Other examples are found in line 125 of the Mālinīstava, 4/52b, 5/9b, 6/49d, 51b, 52d, 7/25b, 98b, 10/10b, 13/88b, 14/3b, 28b, 34a, 15/51a, 23/16d, 28/43b, 30/45d, 31/68b, 32/9b, 10d, 40a, 42a, 47b, 60a 33/167a, 36/90c, 37/20b, 27b, 33d, 38d, 43b, 42/16a, 46/36b, 47/59b, 67b, 48/91d, 93b, 49/20b, 59/8d, 55d, 61/38d and 65/37d. Note that many of these examples concern the word योगिन् (i.e. योगी → योगिन:), although the regular nominative singular is well known to the author (see, for example, 17/41d and 17/51d). This deviant form is not as common in other texts and as it is in this one. It does not occur at all, for example, in the KMT. 59/8d, 54d, and 61/41d testify to the peculiar forms विकासिनम्, अधिकारिणम् and विघट्टिनम्, respectively. In all three cases they appear at the end of bahuvrīhi compounds agreeing with a neuter substantives. We commonly find, as we have seen, that the plural replaces the singular of such agent nouns and adjectives. The form we would expect is, for example, –विकासिन: if masculine. The form विकासिनम् is, as it were, a neuter derivative in concord with its substantive. It appears, therefore, that this deviant plural, which functions as a singular, is treated, at least in such cases, as the nominal stem. 13. ञ्, ट्: नह। 14. छ्: –क्रमोघस्य।
15. M → N. 16. We have noted already that sandhi between pādas is optional. See above, note to 1/5b. 17. ञ्: उप् * * (?)। 18. ञ्: * (?) स–। 19. We may either consider this to be a case of DS or else an irregular (dvigu) compound in which the order of the constituent members has been reversed. Cf. above 1/9d and see note to 1/5a.

20. See above, note to 3/161d. 21. ञ्: –म।

22. छ्, ञ्: अम्ब। See above, note to 3/65a. 23. All MSs: –कोटिकं।

24. छ्: लि * ता– –मालिका; ञ्: –मालि * (?); all other MSs: –मालिका. This emendation assumes that the ending of लिखितां has been dropped for the sake of the metre leading to the formation of an irregular compound.

25. ञ्: * * * (?) त्ययही–। 26a. M → N. A connecting इति may be required here (see above, note to 3/25d) if the proposed alternative translation is the correct one. See note to the English translation. 26b. All MSs: वैकल्पं।

27. All MSs: यस्मादाज्ञायास्यति। These emendations are based on the commentary of this line in the Ṭ which is reproduced in the notes to the English translation. 28. घ्, च्, छ्: मिकारा–; all other MSs: सिकारा–।

29. Here, and in the following line, the verb in the present tense denotes future action. See above, note to 3/14c. 30. All MSs: श्रीनाथा।

31. All MSs except घ्, छ्: कला। A correlated pronoun such as ताम् should be tacitly assumed. Alternatively, disregarding the usual parsimony, one would have to emend to सा शाम्भवी आज्ञा to तां शाम्भवीं आज्ञां. 32. ञ्: (?)।

33. Note that the commentary (for which see the English translation) suggests the reading प्रधानार्थम्। 34. All MSs: तद्भक्ति–।

35. Even though there is no metrical or other reason to suppose that रजस् has been thematize, I have not emended to the correct form namely, रजोमण्डल–. The reading is not only supported by all the MSs but also by the occurrence of the same expression in this deviant form below in 68/121c. This is the form in the Ṭīkā also, which comments on this passage (see note 15 of the translation). The thematized form of the noun रजस् appears in several places in this text. These include 13/88b, 24/49a and 33/19b. In 39/36c and 46/10b we find the acc. sing. रजम् that replaces the regular रजसम् for metrical reasons, just as the analogous तमम् that replaces तमसम् in 39/36b. However, as has happened here, not all the appearances of the deviant form are dictated by the requirements of the metre. Moreover, the change is not uniform. Thus, for example, in 15/9c all the MSs agree on the thematized form even though the metre does not require it. However, in the KuKauM, KMT and the ṢSS, where the same line appears, we find the regular form even though in those texts, as this one, both forms are possible. See note to 13/2b concerning the analogous deviation of the noun तमस्.

36. ञ्: जाति * * * * * * (?); all other MSs: –वर्जिताम्। 37. छ्: संस्फुरं।

38. ञ्: कौलिका * * (?)। 39. ञ्: (?)।

40. छ्: ऊचुत्वेवं; ज्, ञ्: भजत्वैवं; ट्: भजुत्वैवं। The use of the plural here is anomolous. One wonders why the author did not write उवाचैव which fits the metre equally well. Cf. above 3/148c. 41. All MSs: महावाणी।

42. ज्: लिंगात्वासिनी; ञ्, ट्: –लिंगातवासिनी। –लिंगात–। One hesitates to emend तेज– to the regular तेजो– because thematization of nouns ending in consonants is generally very common in the Sanskrit of this text. Thus, although the word तेजस् does appear with its regular non-thematic stem, the deviant form is a common option in this text. Other cases are found in 3/118a, 4/38d, line 116 of the Mālinīstava, 19/26a, 83a, 26/57b, 28/15b, 29/16b, 23a, 51d, 52c, 57d, 31/69b, 36/91c, 38/8d, 42/23b, 46/22a, 58/46a, 61/7b, 89a, 62/76b, 63/17c, 66/67a and 67/28a (तेजस्य). The ablative तेजात् appears twice (29/23a and 66/67a) while the genitive तेजस्य appears three times (19/26a, 58/86a(46a) and 67/28a).

43. All MSs except छ्: –धिष्ठिता। 44. छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच। 45. छ्: श्रीचक्रं; ञ्: (?)।

46. ख्: गुणवक्तरम्; च्, छ्, ज्, झ्, ट्: गुणवत्तरम्; ञ्: (?)। 47. ञ्: (?)।

48. ञ्: (?)। 49. All MSs: सम्भोः।

50. क्, च्, ज्, झ्: –कमा। See above, note to 2/25c concerning this deviant numeral. 51. The dual number referring to the god and the goddess is meant here. 52. This and the following word on this line and all of the next one are illegible in MS ञ्। 53. क्, ख्, घ्: शिष्यत्वं।

54. क्, ख्: संभविष्यति। 55. All MSs: ज्येष्ठाज्ञा–। 56. DS.

57. ञ्: शोचनीया। IM 5 + 6. One wonders whether the original reading may not have been शौचहीनो. 58. क्: –बाह्ये, ग्, ञ्: –वाह्या, च्: –वाज्यो।

59. क्, ख्, ग्, च्: म. Here मे replaces मया। See above, note to 1/13c.

60. क्, ख्, घ्, च्: तवो–; ञ्: त * * * (?)।

61. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: गुरुत्व–; ञ्: गुरु * * (?)।

62. This and the following word are illegible in MS ञ्.

63. The present tense functions here as a future. See above, note to 3/14c.

64. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: विग्रह।

65. All MSs except ञ्: दृष्ट। 66. M → N. 67. छ्: कुल।

68. छ्, ज्: –मेवं। 69. क्, ख्, ग्: कौल। 70. M → N. Cf. above, 3/151b. 71. This word and the following two on the next line are illegible in MS ञ्. 72. ञ्: * (?); all other MSs: य।

73. छ्, ज्: उद्य–। Note this peculiar variant of the word ओघ–. Compare the forms उल्लि and ओल्लि. See above, notes to 1/5b and 3/11b.

74. The initial 'a' of the prefix 'anu-' of the word अनुग्रहम् has been dropped for the metre. This alternative form is well attested. The dropping of the initial 'a' of the prefixes ap- and ava- was allowed universally by the grammarian Bhāguri: वष्टि भागुरिरल्लोपमवाप्योरुपसर्गयोः. This usage constitutes an extension of this rule. Cf. 40/9a. 75. छ्: गुरु मे।

76. Although all these personal nouns refer to the goddess, they are all masculine. See above, note to 3/45b. 77. पूजयामि has been contracted for the metre.

78. All MSs: दोषो। 79. ञ्: गुरुरा * (?)। 80. ञ्: (?)।

81. All MSs: मन्त्र। Lines 4/21-22ab are repeated in KnT MS K fl. 1b. The KnT reads: मन्त्र:। Out of not less than forty occurrences this word appears in its regular masculine gender only six times (see 38/20b, 40/48c, 41/41a, 45/54b, 49/63d, and 61/33a). Note also that all these instances are found in the second half of the text. Even so, I have emended to the regular form. 82. KnT: एता:।

83. KnT and MS छ्: शक्तिर्। 84. छ्: लिग–; all MSs: –योन्या। This emendation agrees with the reading in the KnT and the Ṭ. 85. All MSs: त्वत्तो–; KnT: अत्रोदरे।

86. ञ्, ट्: वापि। KnT: क्रमश्चापि। Although the reading in the KnT is correct, I have not emended as the word क्रम– rarely appears in its regular masc. gender in this text. See above, note to 1/2c. 87. ज्, ञ्, ट्: तं; missing in MS छ्।

88. छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: * विश्यो। 89. All MSs except घ्, ङ्, ञ्, ट्: –आर्था।

90. This and the following word are unclear in MS ञ्. A pronoun in the locative such as अस्मिन् would be better here.

91. See above, note to 3/161d.

92. All MSs: अंव। This quarter also appears above as 4/6a. There all but two MSs read the deviant vocative अम्बे. Moreover, in all the four places where this vocative occurs, it is invariably अम्बे not the regular form अम्ब and so I have emended here accordingly. See above, note to 3/65a. 93. छ्: भक्तिगुरोराज्ञा।

94. All MSs: संप्राप्तमु–। 95. This deviant form of प्रकरोति occasionally occurs in Tantric Sanskrit in general. It appears in this text three more times (see 4/29d, 40/25b and 40/35d). Cf. the ātmanepadī equivalent –प्रकुर्वते, concerning which see above, note to 3/74b. 96. DS. The feminine तस्या:, referring to आज्ञाया:, is meant here. 97. ञ्: त्वच्छक्ति * * * * * (?)।

98. छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: –र। M → N. See above, note to 1/2c. 99. All MSs: क्रमागत:.

100. छ्, ज्: इन्द्र; ञ्, ट्: इन्द्रं; all other MSs: श्तद्रं।

101. छ्: व मद्रं; ज्: व गद्रुं; ञ्, ट्: च गद्रुं; all other MSs: तद्रं।

102. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: महादेवी।

103. छ्: देह–; all other MSs: देहा–। 104. छ्: रमा; ञ्: र * (?)।

105. ञ्: (?)। 106. ञ्: (?)।

107. All MSs: निवेदनं or the like is required.

108. छ्: मत्रल्यो; all other MSs: मतुल्यो। 109. छ्, ज्: कश्चन:। As often happens, इति which concludes direct speech or something that has been said or thought, is missing. See above, note to 3/156ab. 110. All MSs: मया।

111. ञ्: भद्र। 112. IM 6 + 7.

113. All MSs: –रूपर। 114. ज्, ञ्, ट्: मर्त्येवतारं; all other MSs: मर्त्यवतारं। 115. ञ्: (?)। 116a. ञ्: * (?) द्विदं।

116b. All MSs. दक्षितं। 117. M → N. I take this to be the subject in the nominative. See above, note to 1/2c.

118. Again we notice the deviant form प्रकुर्वति. See above, note to 4/24b. Note also how the present tense is used here to denote future action, or better, repeated action extending from the present to the future. See above, note to 3/14c.

119. ख्, च्, छ्, –ओपार्थितं–; ञ्: अन्यायोयार्जितं। 120. All MSs: वापि।

121. M → N. 122. All MSs except छ्, ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: गृहयोगं।

123. ञ्: (?)। 124. All MSs: संग्राह्य।

125. Lines 4/35cd-37ab come after this line in all the MSs. They do not fit as well here as they do there and so, rather than repeat them, they have been omitted here from the edition. These verses, with variants, are as follows:

उपसन्नस्तदा (ज्: उपसग्नस्तदा)योगी श्रीकण्ठाज्ञामनुग्रहे (छ्: –ग्रहं)।
ईदृगनुप्रदानेन (घ्, ङ्, च्: इदगौ‌ु; छ्: इदगडु–; ज्, ञ्, ट्: इडुगडु–; all other MSs: इ ऊ ग ऊ–)
वाक्पुष्पैः (छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: –पुष्पै) स्तुतिपूर्वकैः (छ्: स्वति–)।
प्राणायामादिभिर्यज्ञैर्दिव्यवर्षशतं (ज्, ञ्, ट्: –भिर्यज्ञैः –) तपम्।
एकाङ्गुष्ठेन मनसा प्रस्तुतस्तुतिपूर्वकैः (ञ्: प्रस्तुतंस्तु–)।

126. The following verses and the Mālinīstava that follows immediately after also appear in the SKh (chapter 21 folio 99a ff. of MS क्). I have edited the text of the SKh on the basis of the three existing manuscripts (for details see bibliography). The variant readings drawn from these sources are labelled 'SKh'. If the reading is not found in all three manuscripts, the individual variants are labelled 'क्', 'ख्' or 'ग्', as the case the may be. When there is more than one reading, the accepted one is noted first followed by the variants in paranthesis after. The Mālinīstava also appears in chapter 28 of the AS (folio 115a ff). The passage ends at the equivalent of KuKh 4/44ab and is followed by the equivalent of KuKh 4/47ab. In this case, there is only one manuscript. A corrupt variant reading will not normally be noted if it is clear that the original reading agrees with the accepted reading here. SKh: श्रीनाथ उवाच (ग्: श्रीनाथोवाच)।

127. All MSs and SKh: तत। This and the following line correspond to KMT 1/70. 128. क्, ख्, घ्, च्: देवेता।

129. All MSs and SKh: भृङ्गिरा; AS: देवानां नन्दमुद्गिरं। This emendation agrees with the reading of KMT 1/70cd-71ab which is the original source of this and the following line. 130. क्, ख्: समारज्वैः:; ग्, ङ्: समारज्वै; ञ्: –रब्धै।

131. ञ्: तेनदं। 132. AS: मन्त्रकं।

133. All MSs and AS: शक्त्या। This emendation agrees with the reading in the SKh. 134. All MSs: रचते; SKh: क्: स्तनुते; ख्: ?; ग्: स्तुतते। This emendation agrees with the reading in the AS.

135. घ्, झ्: महौघवन्; छ्, ज्, ट्: –वात्; AS तु सर्वदा। IC. महौघवती would be correct.

136. M → N. 137. ट्: द्वादशभिभेदैर्–। AS: द्वादशभेदैस्तु। In order to gain an extra syllable for the metre, the letter 'r' has been inserted between the first and the following components of this compound (see above, note to 3/21b). The reading is confirmed by both the AS and SKh and so I have refrained from emending to मूर्तेर् which would, anyway, create a syntactically disjointed sentence.

138. छ्, ज्: तत्; ञ्, ट्: तत। 139. AS and SKh: सहसा।

140. छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: नाथो। 141. छ्: आज्ञात्; ञ्: आज्ञा; AS आज्ञा।

142. छ्: मभिष्यति; ट्: लभिप्यति; AS: भविष्यति; SKh: लभेत् तदा। The root लभ् is normally ātmanepadī although, as Monier-William notes, the parasmaipadī form is attested in the Epics. As this root is normally anit, the correct forms of the third person singular future are लप्स्यते and लप्स्यति. This is the only place this deviant form of the future occurs. The present of लभ् is generally in its regular ātmanepadī form although the parasmaipadī form does occur (see 10/43b, 15/45c, 24/75b, 46/281b). The optative is invariably parasmaipadī.

143. क्, ख्: –ज्ञान–; all MSs: –नुग्रहा; AS: –ज्ञा अनुग्रहे।. The first part of this pseudo-compound is formed by joining the first word to the following word by means of a double sandhi i.e. श्रीकण्ठः + आज्ञाम् → श्रीकण्ठाज्ञाम्. The following word is a compound the two parts of which are bonded by means of an intercalated 'm' (cf. 4/34d; see above, note to 3/21b). In other words, I take the intended sense here to be: उपसन्नस्तदा योगी श्रीकण्ठ आज्ञानुग्रहे. The following remark by Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 98) applies equally well to the language of our text: 'A characteristic feature of the language of the KMT is that grammatical correctness could in principle be sacrificed for the exigencies of the metre.'

144. क्, ख्, ग्: इ ऊ ग ऊ; all other MSs: इडूगडू–; AS: इडगड्ड–; SKh: क्: गच्छ गच्छ; ख् ग्: इच्छायच्छ; ग्: इछगछ। 145. ञ्: स्तुतिपू * कैः।

146. All MSs: तपं; AS: ततः. The SaṁP reads the correct तपः. In view of the marked presence of the deviant form तपम् throughout the text and the unanimity of the MSs, one wonders whether it is better not to emend. See below, note to 5/22a.

147. All MSs and the SaṁP: एकाङ्गुष्ठेन महता; SKh: एकाङ्गुष्ठेन तपसा. This emendation agrees with the reading in the AS. One could also emend to एकानुष्ठेन मनसा or, perhaps, accept the reading in the SKh. IM 6 + 7.

148. ञ्: –कै। SaṁP: प्रस्तुता–। 149. AS: स्तुनोमि. See above, note to 3/88a.

150. All MSs: विविधै। 151. AS: –देवीं।

152. All MSs except क्, ख्: –मालिनी।

153. क्, ख्, ङ्: जयं. The SKh prefixes ऐँ to indicate that the Mālinīstava begins here. 154. छ्: –देवी. Variants noted from the commentary on the Mālinīdaṇḍakastotra called Bhaktibodha will be labelled BB. BB, KMT and SKh: देवी।

155. AS and MS ज्: –नाशनि; BB, KMT and MS ग् of the SKh: –नाशिनी।

156. छ्: –शक्तिं; ञ्, ट्: शक्ति; ज्, AS and the SKh: –शक्ति।

157. प्रभुः is used with reference to the goddess in a number of places. Compare the expression प्रभुर्नादशक्तिस्तु that occurs in line 3 of the Mālinīstava which follows. This male appelative is applied to the goddess in numerous places through this text. These include: 5/28d, 40b, 84a, 9/2b, 18/77b, 26/1d, 29/1d, 31/110b, 31/116b, 38/1d, 39/20b, and 40/1d. Similarly, she is also called स्वामिन्, for which see note to 5/40c and श्रीमान् for which see note to 3/45b.

158. तेजो– would make the fifth syllable long. See above, note to 4/11d.

159. BB: विवस्थिते। The BB reads this word as a vocative and comments on it accordingly. 160. BB and SKh: देवि।

161. ट्: ऐं। The following part of the Mālinīstava, is in daṇḍaka metre. The *bīja*s, not present in the shorter version found in the KMT, of which the BB is a commentary, are not counted in the metre. The seed-syllables effectively mark the breaks between the sentances of the stava. Accordingly, the *virāma*s (which are generally missing in the MSs) have been inserted into the Sanskrit text guided by the location of the seed-syllables at the beginning of each sentence. I have also standardized the ending of all the seed-syllables to candrabindu (ँ) which alternates irregularly in the manuscripts with a simple anusvāra. In order not to burden the critical apparatus even further, I do not note this variant unless it is significant. 162. च्: –तत्वं–; ञ्: –तेजा–; all MSs: –मयीम्; KMT: –संभूति–। The reading of three of the ten MSs of the KMT used for the edition (i.e. BEJ) agree with the accepted one.

163. All MSs except ख्, च्, झ्: ई. Missing in the AS and SKh.

164. च्: तिसृता; BB: निस्सृता; all other MSs except छ्, SaṁP and KMT: निसृता। This emendation is supported by the metre which requires alternate long and short syllables.

165. क्, ख्: –शक्ति–, ङ्: –त्वमिछक्रिया; SaṁP: ज्ञा * शक्तिस्–। 166. Skh: ऊँ; ग्: दं।

167. च्: ऋज्व–; ञ्: ऋ * (?) रेखा; AS: ऋजुरेखा + सुरेखा; SKh: ऋजुरेखा; ग्: रिजुरेखा) + उँ।

168. घ्, ङ्, ज्: सप्त–। All MSs: –सत्; BB: सप्त। The emended reading agrees with the one in the KMT and SKh.

169. BB प्रभु–। See above, 4/38c. BB, KMT and SKh: –तु।

170. ञ्, ट्: हां। Missing in the AS.

171. ख्, घ्, झ्: भास्वराकाररूपा; BB: भास्वरा ज्योतिरूपा; the AS, KMT and SKh: भासुरा ज्योतिरूपा। See above, note to 3/52c.

172. Missing in MS च् and the BB. The following up to अवधूता– is missing in the SKh. 173. AS: शिवा ज्येष्ठनामाथ वामाथ; BB: शिवा वामा
ज्येष्ठा; KMT: वामा च। 174. छ्, ज्: रौद्रीम्।

175. All MSs, the SaṁP and KMT: मनाख्या–̇ The emended reading agrees with the one in the BB and SaṁP.   176. ङ्, च्: –वधुतार्द्ध–।

177. क्: एकार – ऐकार – ईकारसंयोजितैकत्रयत् तत्वमापद्यते; ख्, झ्: अ–इ–मकारसंयोजितैकत्वमापद्यसे; ग्, घ्, ज्: एकार – एकार – ईकार – अंकारसंयोजितैकत्रयत् तत्वमापद्यते; ङ्: ऐकार – एकार – ईकार – अंकारसंयोजितैकत्रयत् तत्वमापद्यते; छ्: एका – ऐका – ईकारांकारसंयोजितैकत्रयत् तत्वमापद्यते; ञ्: –त; AS: त्रिकोणा एकार – अकारेयोज्यया; SKh: एकार – ऐकार – ईकार – आकारसंयोजितैकत्र (ग्: –संजोजितैजितैकत्वकर)यत् (ग्: missing) तत्वमापद्यते (ख्: तत्वंमापद्यते; ग्: * * मापद्यते)। The edited text of the KMT reads: अ–उ–म–कार–इकार–एकारसंयोजितैकत्वमापद्यसे। The variant reading in the MSs of the KMT are as follows. Instead of अ – उमकार– D: अ – इ –उमकार–; B: अ – इमकार–; F: अनुमकार–; E: माकारे–। For – इकार– DK: –एकार–; B: –ओ–कार–; AJ: ईकार–; FG: –ओंकार–। For –एकार– DH: –ओकार–; K: –ओंकार–; E: –ए च। Omitted in AC. BB: अ – इ – मकार। सत्वादिरू  –संयोजितेन एकत्वमापद्यसे।

178. घ्: ऐं; all other MSs: ऐ। Missing in the AS.

179. क्, ख्: त्युक्तमणौल्म्रिता ते श्वरूपा; ग्, ञ्, ट्: न्युक्त्रमणौत्म्रिता ते श्वरूपा; घ्: न्युक्त्रमणौत्सिता ते स्वरूपा; ङ्: न्युक्क्रमेणौत्थिता ते श्वरूपा; च्: न्यक्क्रमेणौत्स्रिता ते श्वरूपा; छ्: न्यक्त्रमेणौत्स्रिता ते श्वरूपा; ज्: न्यक्तमेणौत्म्रिता ते श्वरूपा; झ्: त्युक्तमणौल्सिता श्वरूपा; SKh: * * * तत्स्वरूपा। Instead of these two words the SaṁP reads: तत्त्वरूपा स्वरूपा whereas the KMT reads only तत्त्वरूपा।

180. MS क् of the KuKh and MSs ख् and ग् of the SKh: –काररवस्थायिनी; all other MSs and the BB: –कारवस्थायिनी; AS: भगाकारावस्थायिनी; SaṁP: भगाकारस्थायिनी। The KMT and MS क् of the SKh: भगाकारवत् स्थायिनी।

181. Missing in the SKh. Cf. below, line 91.

182. क्, ख् ज्: – तत्वोद्भवाद्; AS: अ आ चित्तोद्भवा।   183. ट्: ह्रौ।

184. ग्, घ्, च्, ट्: आदितः क्षाँत–; all other MSs: आदितः क्षांत–; AS: ह्रीयानिस्वरूपा; BB: आदितत्व–। Edited text of the KMT: * * * * * *योनिरूपा। MSs EFG: आदितः क्षांत–; A: आदितः क्षान्ततत्वोद्भवा–; D: आदिक्षान्तः–; SaṁP: क्षाँ * * * * *योनिस्वरूपा; SKh: * * * * *योनिस्वरूपा।   185. BB: सा।

186. SaṁP, SKh and क्, ङ्, ञ्, ट्: सन्मोहनी; KMT and BB: –संबोधिनी।

187. ग्, ज्, ञ्: फँ।   188. All MSs except ग्, छ्, ज्, झ्, ट्: रुद्रा–; AS: रुद्रे–।   189. MSs ख् and ग् of the SKh: तथानन्द–।

190. क्, ख्, च्, ञ्: भिमूर्तिद्वंरशा–; ग्: भिमूर्तिद्वंरशा– घ्: त्रिमूर्तिद्धरेशार्घिनी; ङ्, च्: त्रिमूर्तिद्वंरे–; छ्, झ्, ट्: त्रिमूर्तिद्वंरेशा–; ज्: भिमूर्तिद्वंरेमार्घिनी; AS: त्रिमूर्तिरीशाषिणी; SaṁP: त्रिमूर्त्तिर् * * शाघिनी। This emendation has been made on the basis of the reading in the KMT and is supported by the SKh. The DS between the first two of these proper names has led to what appears to be a compound. The following words up to तिथीशात्मिका are missing in the KMT and up to भारभूतिः in the AS, BB and SKh.

191. ज्: हकारीकार; SaṁP: हकारोकार।

192. च्: संबोधसा; all other MSs: संबोधमा; SaṁP: संबोधना।

193. All MSs and the SaṁP: विन्दुसारूपिणी। 194. All MSs: क्रों।
195. च्, छ्: ईकारे। 196. क्, छ्, ञ्, ट्: ह्लूआँ; ग्, घ्: ह्लौ; च्: ह्वैँ; ज्: ह्लूँ।
197. ट्: –तंत्वा। 198. All MSs and SKh: –भूति।
199. क्: क्रीं; AS: ह्लाँ; SKh क्, ख्: द्राँ। 200. Missing in AS.
201. ख्, ग्: रूंटीश–; ञ्: झँटीश्रभौतीशसद्यात्मिको–; ट्: झँटीश–; AS and MS ङ्: झंटीश * * *
सद्या–; SaṁP: झींतीशमातीशसह्यात्मिका–। 202. ग्, ङ्, झ्: ह्लौं; ट्: (?); AS: ह्लौं; SaṁP: ह्लीं;
missing in the SKh. 203. ट्: * (?)रदेहा–। KMT: क्रूरसङ्गे।
204. क्, ख्, ग्, च्: महासन–; ञ्: महा * * * (?) भोगिनी; SaṁP: महासनसंभागिनी।
205. ङ्: हस्कुऔ; ज्: हस्क्रूँ; ञ्, ट्: हस्वूऔं missing in MSs क् and ख् and AS; all other MSs ह्लौं। The emendation agrees with the reading in the SKh.
206. क्, ख्, ग्, घ्, झ्: षोडशान्तान्तामृता।
207. क्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्: श्वतनिष्पंद–; all MSs: –सिंहप्लुता। AS and KMT:
बिन्दुसन्दोहनिष्यन्ददेहप्लुता; SaṁP: श्वतनिश्यन्देसिंहकृता; SKh: बिन्दुसन्दोहनिस्पन्ददेहप्लुता. Refer to the notes of the translation concerning this emendation.
208. AS and SKh: अः।
209. क्: –सम्यक्य–, ख्, ग्: –सम्यव्यु–; छ्: –सौप्यप्रदे; all other MSs except ज्:
–सम्यक्यु–; BB: –परानन्दे–; SaṁP: –निर्वाणं–।
210. च्: भैरवी। This and the following sentance read in the AS: ह्लौं देवि
भैरवाद्यानक्रीडानुशक्ति पथरे।
211. ख्, छ्, ज् , झ्: ह्म्रीं; घ्,: ह्लीं। 212. क्: –क्त; च्: –सप्ते; ञ्: –क्रिडानु * * (?)।
213. झ्: पत; missing in the BB and KMT.
214. ञ्: * * (?)रामालिनी; all other MSs: स परामालिनी। AS and SKh: सः परामालिनी;
BB and KMT: * परामालिनी। The following is missing in the BB and KMT up to रुद्रमालार्चिते। 215. AS: समयावलि। 216. च्: सौ; SaṁP: सां;
SKh: सौँ। 217. क्: भ्रिभुवननावलि। 218. क्, ञ्: च्लू; झ्: व्रूँ; ट्:
व्लू; AS: प्लूँ; SaṁP: व्रूँ; SKh: श्लूँ। 219. क्, ख्, झ्: घू; च्: द्यः; SKh: ग्: घ्र।
220. ख्: थ। 221. घ्: * घोरे; cf. below, 7/33b.
222. ग्: ॐ; ञ्: फ्रे; AS: ह्लौं। 223. ज्: अमोघा; ट्: अ * (?)घे; SaṁP: अमोदो।
224. ङ्: स्फ्रैं; ञ्: (?); SKh: श्लाँ। 225. घ्: –री; AS: घुमु घुमु च कुलंयोगेश्वरि
226. क्, ख्, झ्: ह्लँ; ञ्: ह्ले; AS: ह्लूँ; SKh: क्, ख्: ह्लाँ।
227. ख्, झ्: त्रिमातृचक्रेश्वरि; ञ्: मा * * * * * (?); AS: महामातृचक्रे * *; SKh:
महामातृचक्रेश्वरि।
228. क्, ख्: ङ्व्यूँ; ङ्: ङ्म्स्रूँ; झ्: ङ्म्यूँ; ञ्: (?); SaṁP: ङ्यूँ। The first of the two syllables of each member of this series of seven is missing in the AS and SKh.
229. ख्, झ्: म्यूँ। 230. ख्, झ्: ल्म्यूँ।
231. ख्, झ्: क्म्यूँ; SaṁP: क्म्रूँ। 232. ख्, झ्: स्म्यूँ। 233. ख्, झ्: ह्म्यूँ।
234. This and the following mantra are missing in the AS.

235. क्, ख्, झ्: य्म्यूँ। 236. क्: ह्र्ल्क्र्यां, ख्: फ्र्ल्म्यूँ, ग्, ट्: ड्र्ल्क्याँ; घ्:
ड्र्ल्व्याँ; च्: ड्र्ल्व्याँ; छ्: द्र्ल्व्याँ; ज्: ह्ल्क्र्यूँ; झ्: ह्ल्व्यां; ञ्: द्र्ल्क्याँ; missing in the AS and in MS ङ्; SaṁP: ह्ल्र्व्यीं; SKh क्: डरलकसहजें; ख्: डरलकसहष्रूओं; ग्: डरलकहसखफ्रें। No two manuscripts of any of the sources agree on the reading of this seed-syllable. This emendation, which is partially supported by some of the readings, corresponds to the seed-syllable, consisting of the initials of the six Yoginīs, which commonly collectively denotes them. 237. AS: फेत्कारं–। 238. ङ्: ह्रूँ; च्, छ्, ज्: ज्रँ;
AS: ड्रूँ; SaṁP: भ्रूँ। 239. : ञ्: (?)। AS: –कि।240. ञ्: तां।

241. ङ्: ख *; AS: खख्फ्रे; SKh: खाँ खफ्रें।

242. ख्, घ्, झ्: –महामहामातृ–; AS: खँ– –शाकिनी; SKh: स्वमाकाश–।

243. SaṁP: रूँ। This seed-syllable is missing in the SKh and the word that follows is placed at the end of the following sentance. According to the AS both seed-syllable and the following word come after the following sentance.

244. AS and SKh: राँ। 245. BB and KMT: खगी। The following is missing in the BB and KMT up to सिद्धमाते। 246. All MSs except ख्, घ्, च्, झ्: रौ। 247. All MSs: रौद्र–। This emendation agrees with the reading in the SaṁP and is consonant with the form of the name of the other members of this series. 248. AS: ह्रँ; SKh: फ्रें।

249. च्: –सिद्धारूहे; छ्: –सिद्धारुहे; ज्: –रुहे; all other MSs: –रूहे; AS: रुद्रसिद्ध्यरुहो; SKh: –सिद्धारुहे। The correct form would be रुद्रसिद्ध्यारूढे. Cf. below, 10/36b where the goddess's Vidyā is said to be सिद्ध्यारुहा।

250. SKh and MS च्: हें; SaṁP: हं।

251. MS च्: हं हा; ञ्: (?); SaṁP: हं हां; SKh: हः हा। 252. ञ्: (?)।

253. ञ्: (?)। 254. ञ्: (?); घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: + ह; all other MSs except ग् and झ् have only one हस. 255. AS: ह हा हा; SKh: हा and adds हा हाट्ट।

256. क्: –फासिनि, ख्: –पासिनि। 257. च्, ज्, ट्: रूओं; छ्: रूऔं; missing in the AS;
SaṁP: नूऔं; SKh क्, ख्: रौद्र; ग्: रौं। 258. ङ्: रुँ चामुण्डे; च्, छ्: –चामुण्डा; AS रौद्र–।

259. AS and MSs: घ्, छ्: प्लूँ; ट्: व्रूँ; SaṁP: व्रूँ; MS ङ् and MS ख् of the SKh: प्लुँ।

260. च्: उग्र; AS and SKh: व्यग्रे। 261. क्, ख्, झ्: ॐ।

262. घ्, च्: उग्राग्र–; AS: उग्रोग्रक्रोधरूपकि; SaṁP: –नायिकि; SKh: उग्रोग्रक्रोधनायकि।

263. Missing in AS; SKh क्: ह्म्रैं ख्फ्रें; ख् ह्म्रैं; ग्: स्त्रैं। 264. ङ्: ख्फ्रँ।

265. क्, ग्, ङ्: –चिन्नाश्रमानोत्सुके; घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –मानोत्सके +। उत्सके; ञ्, ट्: –चिन्नश्रमानोत्सके
+।। उत्सुके।।; AS ज्ञाने विज्ञाने गम्भीरे चिन्ताश्रमणोत्मके; SaṁP: –मानोत्सके +। उत्सुके; SKh: चित्ताश्रमेणोत्सुके।
AS and MS क् of the SKh add उत्सके; SKh ख्, ग्: + उत्सुकैः।

266. घ्: –चरनणे; ङ्: –संचर्च्चितचरणे; च्: –चरण; ञ्: –संचित * * * * * * (?); AS: –चरणै।

267. AS: नौ; missing in the SaṁP. 268. ङ्: ह्राँ; झ्: ग्वां।

269. AS: विसर्गत; SKh: क्, ख्: सुगते; ग्: सुरागते + सूँ (ख्: सं; ग्: सुं) सुसुप्ते (ख्, ग्: सुषुप्ते)।

270. क्, ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: क्लिने; missing in the AS.

271. Although all the sources read कामिनी one is tempted to emend to the vocative. However, the erratic alternation between the vocative and nominative singular in this hymn as a whole does not support it.

272. Missing in the AS. SKh: ह्रीं।

273. AS and MS घ्: –राजेश्वरी। 274. ख्, झ्: सर्वग्रहांनां; घ्: सर्वग्रह्मं; च्: सर्व्वग्रहां; all other MSs, the SaṁP and SKh: सर्वग्रहां। 275. AS: वाडनी।

276. क्: ह्स्रूऔं; ख्: ह्यौं; ग्, घ्: ह्म्रूऔं; ङ्: ह्म्रौं; missing in the AS; SaṁP: स्रूऔं।

277. घ्, छ्: मेरुणा–; SaṁP: –नायिकि।

278. ग्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: ह्लः; घ्: ह्स्सः; झ्: ह्यः। The AS omits the following line and reads त्तः (?) here. The accepted reading is also found in the SaṁP.

279. ग्: –णिं। 280. AS: स्त्री।

281. च्: श्रीमादेवि; ञ्: (?); SaṁP: श्रीमद्देवि। See above, note to 3/45b.

282. ञ्: * (?) रप्रदे। 283. ख्: कुल–; ञ्, ट्: कुं; AS: ऊँ; SKh: ॐ; ग्: उं।

284. क्: –र; घ्, छ्: –कतकांकारे; ङ्, च्, ज्, ट्: –कतकाकारे; ञ्: –कतन–; SaṁP:
–कर्तकाकारे। 285. BB and KMT: सिद्धयोगेश्वरी। This sentance is missing in the AS and SKh. 286. ग्, ङ्: सु; छ्, झ्, ट्: म्रः; AS and SKh: ह्रीं।

287. BB: सिद्धिमाता; AS, KMT and SKh: –माता। The SaṁP reads the correct form of the vocative viz. –मातः. Cf. below, lines 72, 74, 84 and 126. Also see below, note to 5/41b. 288. The goddess is addressed here, as in other places, as if she were male. Cf. above note to 4/38c. 289. M → N.

290. KMT: –वी। The word अर्णव– is invariably spelt आर्णव– in our text as it is in the next line. The same spelling is commonly, if not always, also found in the other Kubjikā Tantras and appears in those of other schools. See below 10/32b, 39/53c, 128a*, 40/105d*, 58/28b*, 59/14c, 60/40c, 62/32c*, 81a, 64/36c, 66/33c, and 68/57a. The entries marked with an asterix are places where the expression योन्यार्णव– occurs. This form also occurs in the KMT. See KMT 16/29. Goudriaan and Schoterman (1988: 58) opine that 'this feature is intimately connected with the oscillation between feminine stems on –i -ī and on –yā.' Although the lengthening of the vowel in this way is indeed frequent in composition after stems ending with -i or –ī (see above, note to 2/22b) in this particular case it is also related to the deviant spelling of the second word in this compound, at least in this text. 291. SaṁP: ह्रूँ; SKh: ह्रँ। 292. क्, ग्, ङ्: –वो। 293. ङ्: वा।

294. क्, च्: –विशुद्ध शिवा; ख्, घ्, छ्: सिव; ङ्: * व; MSs ग्, ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट् and SaṁP:
सिवा; KMT: सि *। 295. KMT and SKh * * वागेश्वरि; BB: सिद्धा * *
* *। 296. ञ्: मां * * * (?); SKh: मातृके। 297. KMT: मातृकासिद्धम्
इच्छा। 298. क्, ख्, च्, झ्: मङ्गल। BB adds ज्ञानशक्तिः।

299. ख्, झ्: सिद्धिलक्ष्मि; all other MSs and the SKh: सिद्धिलक्ष्मिर्–; AS: सिद्धिलक्ष्मीर्–;

MSs BEGJK of the KMT: सिद्धिलक्ष्मी; SaṁP: सिद्धलक्ष्मीर्। The emendation agrees with the edited text of the KMT. See note to the English translation.

300. Missing in the SKh. The BB adds कण्ठाभरणा।

301. क्: सुभूतिर्मंटि:; ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: सुभूतिमंति:; KMT and BB: –गति:; AS and SKh: –विभूतिर्गति:। BB adds संभूति: at the beginning and भास्वता at the end.

302. घ्, च्, छ्: शास्वताख्या; KMT: –ख्याति।

303. All MSs except ख्, ङ्, झ्: –नि; AS: पराख्याति। Missing in the KMT.

304. Missing in the KMT and BB from here to रक्तचण्डा।

305. क्: ऊचू देवि; घ्, च्, छ्: ऊचु * *; all other MSs: ऊचु देवि; AS: * ऊर्द्धा; SaṁP: ऊचर्देवि; SKh ख्: ऊँ सुभे; ग्: उं सुभे।

306. This normally masculine noun is here treated as neuter. The regular vocative would be: चिन्तामणे। Cf. below lines 76, 77, 87 and 118.

307. च्: –णी। 308. क्, ग्, ञ्: न्नज्ञान–; ख्: चिज्ञान–; च्: छिन्नज्ञान–; झ्: * ज्ञान–; all other MSs: चिन्नज्ञान–; AS: चिन्ताज्ञानसंबोधनी; SaṁP: छिन्नज्ञान–; SKh क्: तान्तसंशोधनि; ख्: तान्तसंबोधनी; ग्: तान्तसंबोधनि। 309. च्: ह्रँ (?); SaṁP: ह्रुँ; AS: जुँ; SKh: हुँ।

310. ञ्: सिद्धबल * * (?)क्रमे। AS: सिद्धिर्बलपराक्रमा।

311. ङ्: हुँ; AS and SKh: जुँ; SaṁP: ह्रूँ।

312. क्, ख्, ग्, घ्: परमे–; घ्, छ्: –विच्चोश्वरि; च्, ट्: –विच्चोस्वरि; the AS and SKh: –विच्चे * *। 313. च्: वीँ (?); ञ्: वों; ट्: वां; SaṁP: वाँ (?); AS and SKh: व:। 314. The SaṁP reads –मात:, which is the regular form. See below, note to 5/41b. Cf. above line 63 and below lines74, 84 and 126. 315. ट्: अं। SKh: आँ। 316. च्: अम्बे: AS: अचे।

317. AS: अ:; SKh: अ: + देवि। 318. SKh: क्: देवगन्धर्वसुरसिद्धविद्याधरामंविके ख्: देवसर्वसुरसिद्धविद्याधरामंविके; ग्: देवगर्वमरसिद्धिविद्याधरांाविके; SaṁP: –मात:। See also, note to 5/41b. Cf. above, lines 63 and 72 and below 84 and 126.

319. ङ्: हुँ; झ्: ह्रं; AS: कुँ; SKh: क्षुँ।

320. SKh ख्: त्वं; missing in MS ग् of the SKh.

321. घ्: –सि; SaṁP: सुँ सुसुरक्तावलि। This sentance is missing in the AS and SKh. Concerning this deviant vocative see above, note to line 67 and cf. lines 77, 87 and 118.

322. SaṁP and MS ख् of the SKh: –विभूषितावलि:; MS ग् of the SKh: +
आक्रांता चंद्रलेखा करदृततमसा सजयमंडलेन
मत्रग्रामोग्रसर्ग ग्रषितगर्गनगा गोविशालालिकाला ।
वांत: भ्रांत: प्रशांत: प्रभृतिगुणंगणा वामातिवामा वामा
वामेन वामवितर: विविधं सिद्धयोगेश्वरी त: ।।

323. AS: ह्राँ। 324. SKh: करालेक्षणे; ग्: करालक्षणे; ञ्: (?)।

325. Missing in the AS. SKh: क्, ग्: भी; ख्: भीँ; SaṁP: भीँ।

326. All MSs except छ्, ज्: हिमरूपा। The selected reading agrees with the KMT, SaṁP and SKh. The following is missing in the BB and KMT up to महोच्छुष्मयोगप्रिये। 327. ङ्: ज्यं; AS: ह्र; SKh: क्षः।

328. SKh: + हि। 329. ख्, ग्, झ्: +यं। 330. AS: वीक्षय; SKh: वीक्ष्यसे। 331. AS and SKh: हूँ; SaṁP: हाँ।

332. क्, छ्, ज्: तुटिलय– –म; ख्, झ्: तुटिलव–; ग्: तुटिलवनिमिषार्द्धमात्रातिसू * * * * (?); घ्, ट्: तुटिलय–; ङ्, च्: तुटिलयनिमिषार्द्धमात्रातिसूक्ष्मातिसूक्ष्मे; ञ्: तुटिल–; AS: तुटिलवनिमेषार्द्धेमातृ * * * * * *; SKh: त्रुटिलयनिमेषार्धमात्रे (क् ख्: तुटि–)। 333. SaṁP: ह्यँ। 334. AS: हा हा + ज्ञ; SKh: हा हा + जुँ। 335. AS: प्लूँ।

336. क्: –मते; SaṁP: –मातः। See below, note to 5/41b. Cf. above, lines 63, 72 and 74 and below 126. 337. ङ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: ॠँ; missing in MSs घ्, च्, छ् and AS; SKh: झूँ। 338. BB: महोसुक्ष्मायोगप्रियाः; KMT: –यागप्रिया; AS and SKh ग्: –यागप्रिये। 339. क्: हौ; ञ्: (?); AS and SKh: ताँ।

340. ञ्: (?)। The BB and KMT read: जयन्त्याजिता। Then missing up to रुद्रसंमोहनि।

341.This and the following word is unclear in MS ञ्.

342. घ्, च्, छ्: * जया; ञ्: (?)। In the AS त्वं appears here and is missing after the following word. SaṁP: त्वं जया विजया.

343. SKh: जयन्ती। The change from the regular जयन्ती to जयन्त्या is equivalent to the change from देवी to the well attested deviant form देव्या. See above, note to 2/22b. 344. Missing in the AS from here up to रुद्रसंमोहनि; SaṁP: + च।

345. ङ्: –महांमोह–। 346. ङ्, ञ्, ट्: –वेला * लि; all other MSs: –वाला * लि। SaṁP: –वेलावलिः। See above, note to line 67 and cf. lines 76, 77 and 118.

347. घ्, च्, छ्: ह्लीं; झ्: ह्लैं; ञ्, ट्: ह्लैँ; SKh क्: ह्लीं; ख्: ह्लौं; ग्: ह्लों।

348. BB and KMT: –संमोहिनी; AS: रौद्रवेतालसंदोहनी; SKh: रौद्रवेतालसंमोहिनी।

349. ग्: म्ह्क्ष्म्ल्क्र्यूँ; AS: ट्त्रुठे; SKh: त्रां तु।

350. All MSs except ङ्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: वना–। This reading agrees with the AS, BB, KMT and SKh. 351. क्, ग्: वो–; च्, ञ्: –सृता; all other MSs except छ् and SaṁP: –योनासृता; AS: उत्संगनाशृता; SKh क्: उत्सङ्गजानाश्रिता; ख्: उत्सङ्गजानासृता; ग्: उत्सङ्गयानासृता। The accepted reading agrees with the one in the KMT. One wonders whether to emend to उत्सङ्गयोगाश्रिता.

352. क्: –नुगैमात्रिभिः वीरपानानुरुक्तैः; ख्, झ्: –मात्रिभिः–; घ्: –रक्तै; च्, ज्, ट्: –मात्रिभिः वीरपानान्तरुक्तैः; छ्: –वीरपानानुरुक्तै; ञ्: –नु * * * * * * * (?) नानुरुक्तैः; AS: सतमन्त्रमार्गानुसंसृतिर्–; SKh क्: –रक्तैश्च; ग्: –वीरयानुनोतुरक्तै।

353. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: सुभक्तश्च; AS: सुरक्तैश्च; missing in MS क् of the SKh, ख्: सुभक्षैश्च; ग्: सुभक्तिश्च। This emendation agrees with the reading in the KMT.

354. च्: –मे; SaṁP: * पूज्यसे। 355. ख्: ग्म्य्म्ल्यूँ; ङ्: ग्म्य्मँ; झ्: ग्स्प्व्म्न्यूँ; all other

MSs: ग्म्य्म्लूँ। SaṁP: ग्म्य्यल्यूँ; AS: नासपमन्नंलू; SKh: गसपवन्लूं (ख्: गसपमन; ग्: गसपन्लूं)।

356. ट्: –मृतैर्दिव्यंपा–; AS: पञ्चरत्नामृतादिपानात्सवे; SKh: पञ्चरत्नामृतैर्दिव्यपानोत्सवैः (क्: –वै; ग्: पंचरत्नावृतैर्दिव्यपानोस्तवै)।

357. Although this word is found only in the SaṁP, it is required to complete the syntax and so has been incorporated into the edition.

358. All MSs except च्: अ *; AS: अ अ; SaṁP: अँ अ। Cf. above, line six.

359. The last two seed-syllables are missing in the AS. SKh: अँ (क्: अ) अ ह ह एह्येहि (क्: पहे)।

360. घ्, च्, छ्: –जन्मचतुष्–; all other MSs except ज्: –जन्मश्चतुः–; ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: and the SaṁP: –जन्मोद्भवैस्तैस्तनारैः; all other MSs: –तैनारैः; AS: –जन्मोद्भवैस्तैश्च नारैः; SKh जन्मोद्भवैस्तैस्तु (क्: –स्तैश्च; ग्: –वेस्तेतह्व) नारैः (ग्: नारै)।

361. ग्: फल्गुषैस्तष्यस; ङ्: फल्गुस्तप्यस; च्: फल्गुषैस्तर्प्यास; छ्: –तर्प्यास; झ्: –तर्पास; ञ्: (?) all other MSs except ट्: –तस्यस; AS: फल्गुषैः सूर्यसे; SKh: तर्पसे (ग्: फल्गुषैश्चपंसे)।

362. ञ्: (?); ट्: स्वौ; all other MSs: स्वो; missing in the AS; SaṁP: स्वौ; SKh ख्: स्वौः। This emendation is supported by the reading of the SaṁP and agrees with the remaining two MSs of the SKh.

363. घ्, छ्: –ध्यये; च्: –फल्गुमध्ये; KMT: मध्यमांसप्रिये।

364. ङ्: म्लुँ; ङ्: + न्लुँ; AS: स।

365. AS: –व्रतोद्धासिर्; KMT: –व्रतोद्धाषिभिर्; SKh: –व्रतोद्धासिभिः।

366. च्: –कंकालकालकापालि–; AS: मन्त्रकंकालकापालिभिर्दिव्यचर्यानुयोश्चोर्द्धः (?); SaṁP: मुण्डकंक * नकपालिभिर्–। Missing in the BB and KMT up to ॐकार–.

367. None of the sources read this word. This is probably because an earlier version of the Mālinīstava continued without a break up to the end of what is in this version line 101 and is where the verb is found. Accordingly, it has been carried up to here to complete the sentence.

368. घ्, च्, छ्: स्वौ; ङ्: सो; ञ्, ट्: सौ। This and the following seed-syllable are missing in the AS.

369. AS: टां; SKh: ढाँ।

370. All MSs except छ्, ज्, झ्, ट्: मण्ड–।

371. AS, SaṁP and MSs ङ्, च्, ञ्, ट्: रु; all other MSs: रू; SKh: रुः।

372. ग्, ङ्, च्, ञ्, ट्: रुः; all other MSs except क्, घ्, छ्, ज्: रू. Missing in the AS and SKh.

373. MSs घ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ट् and the SaṁP: ह्लीँ; AS: ह्स्क्रीँ; SKh: ह्रीँ।

374. च्: ब्लूँ; ञ्: (?); ट्: क्लुँ।

375. च्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: क्लुः; SaṁP: क्लूँ। This and the following sentance are missing in the AS and SKh.

376. ञ्: नागयज्ञाप–; SaṁP: –यज्ञोपवीतमेव वलावधुते।

377. ख्: –दामिनि।

378. AS: म्लूँ उकार–नमो–नमः–; SaṁP: ऐँ उँकार–; SKh: न्लूँ (ग्: स्लूं) ॐकारे (क्: –र; ख्: उंकार–नमो; ग्: उंकार) नमो (ग्: नमों) नमः–; घ्, च्: –वषट्कारहूं– * कार; ङ्: –वषठूंकारफट्कार–; छ्: वौषट्– वषट्कारहूंकार * * * * जातीभिरेतैश्च; ज्: –वौषट्–वषट्कार–हूंकार–फटकारजातीभिर्तैश्च; ञ्, ट्: –वौषट्–वषट्– कारहूंकार– –जाती–; KMT:

नमस्कर—ओंकार—स्वाहा—स्वधाकार—; AS: —स्वाहा— स्वधाकारावाच्य—वौषट्—; SaṁP: —वौषट्—वषट्—हूँकारजातीभिरेतैश्च; SKh: —स्वाहा—स्वधाकारवाच्य—वौषट्—वषट्कार—फट्कारजातीभिरेतैश्च (ख्: —स्वधाकारवाच—)।

379. क्, ज्: मंत्राक्षरोच्चोर उत्तीर्ण—; च्: मन्त्रक्षरोच्चार उत्तिर्ण—; ञ्, ट्: + च; AS: मन्त्राक्षरैर्नारिभि:शासुमुत्तीर्ण; SaṁP: मंत्रोक्षरोच्चार उत्तीर्ण; all other MSs: मन्त्राक्षरोच्चार उत्तीर्णपूर्णा; SKh: मन्त्राक्षरोच्चारिभि: (ग्: मंत्राक्षरैर्वरिभि:) सँ (क् ख्: सं; ग्: स) समुत्तार्यसे (ग्: समुच्चंर्न्तोर्यस; क् ख्: —स); KMT: मन्त्राक्षरोच्चारिभिरुत्तीर्णपूर्णा। What follows is missing in the KMT, which continues directly with: वामहस्तस्थितैश्चाक्षसूत्रावलीजापिभि: साधकै: पुत्रकैर्मातृभिर्मण्डले दीक्षितैर्योगिभिर्योगिनीवृन्दमेलापकै रुद्रक्रीडालसै: पूज्यसे।

380. AS: सखांयोज्यसे। Instead of उत्तीर्णपूर्णा संपूज्यसे the SKh reads: त्वां परपदे (ख्: परपदै; ग्: परापदाश्) योज्यसे (ख्: शोधसे; ग्: चाषसे) च (क् ख्: च्च; ग्: वै)।

381. ञ्, ट्: थं; AS: श्व; missing in the SKh ।

382. ट्: —भैरवं; all other MSs and the SaṁP: —भैरवे; AS: —परमे भैरवि। Rather than postulate that the regular feminine —भैरवी— has been replaced with भैरवा, of which there is no second example, this emendation has been made supported by the reading in the SKh. Concerning the form of this numeral, see note to 3/9c.

383. क्, ख्, ङ्, ञ्: उभये—; च्: —पञ्चकं—। Missing in the AS. The SaṁP adds: वज्रवति शौम्यां मुक्ते अघोरपंचके।

384. ञ्: —वलिं त्वं; all other MSs: वलि त्वं; SaṁP: —वलि: त्वं।

385. SKh: * वाग्बीजावलिपञ्चप्रणवसंपुटे द्वाचत्वारिंशति (क् ख्: —ती; ग्: —सती) * * * * * *; AS: वाग्निबीजारलै: वास्तु चत्वारिंशती। The regular form of the numeral is चत्वारिंशत्। Concerning this deviant numeral see above, note to 3/9c.

386. क्: ह्लौं; ख्, ग्, च्: ह्स्रूओँ (?); झ्: ह्यूँ; SaṁP: ह्सौँ (?)। This seed-syllable and the previous word are missing in the AS. SKh, MS ग्: ह्स्वूऔं। Normally a seed-syllable marks the beginning of each unit but in this case the verb would be missing. Cf. below, line 112.

387. ञ्: —स्थितांचाक्षसूत्रावलीजापि * (?); all other MSs: —स्थितांचाक्षसूत्रा—; AS: वमहस्त * * * * * * * * * *; KMT: वामहस्तस्थितैश्चाक्षसूत्रा—; SKh: वामहस्तस्थिताचाक्षसूत्रावलीजापिभि: (ग्: —जापभि:) + ऐं ऐँकारकृतलक्षानुबद्धरागै: (क्: —गै; ख्: —गे; ग्: —लक्षवद्धानुरागे) स:। This emendation agrees with the reading in the SaṁP.

388. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्, झ्: पुत्रकै:—।

389. क्, च्: —योगिभियोगिनी—। Missing in the KMT from here up to रुद्रक्रीडा—।

390. ख्, ग्: ह्मौ; घ्: ह्मौँ; झ्: ह्यौं; missing in the AS; SaṁP: ह्सौ:; SKh ह्स्रूऔँ।

391. ङ्: संवर्तमलान्ता—; the AS and SKh, but not the SaṁP add: ह्लूँ।

392. AS and SKh: * चक्रनायकि (ख्: चक्रनाय *।

393. क्, च्: ॠँ; ग्, च्: त्रॄँ त्रॄँ; ङ्: ॠ ॠ।

394. क्: डो डौँ; ङ्: क्षों क्षौं; AS: ऌ ॡ; SaṁP: उँ ऊँ; SKh: ऌ (ख्: तु; ग्: त) ॡ (ख् ग्: भू)।

395. च्: –णिं। 396. क्, ग्: क्ष्लँ; छ्, ज्: क्षँ; ञ्: (?)।

397. घ्: –लमे; च्, छ्: –लसे AS: –लस।

398. ख्: –से:; missing in the AS and MSs घ्, च् and छ् of the KuKh. Missing in the AS and KMT from here to योगिनां।

399. क्, छ्, ज्, झ्: भृँ; SKh: भ्रीं (ग्: स्त्रीं)।

400. All MSs: भृकुटी; SaṁP: भृकुटा

401. क्: करालभैरवीपृय; ग्: करालभैरवप्रिये; all other MSs: करालभैरव भैरवीप्रिये। This emendation agrees with the reading of the SKh. 402. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: व्लूँ।

403. क्, ख् ग्, ज्: –वीरेवंदितो; झ्: –वीरैर्वन्दिते; च्: वीरवीरेन्द्र * * वन्दिते।

404. झ्: मैँ; ञ्, ट्: भैं। 405. All MSs except छ्, ज्, झ्, ञ्, ट्: –क्री * लसे।

406. ङ्: युँ; AS: ह्लूँ। 407. SKh: क् ख्: योगिनी; ग्: योगिना; ञ्: यागिनीनां; the AS and KMT: योगिनां। 408. घ्, च्, छ्: देवी। 409. Missing in the SKh. 410. च्: –पमलोचनै:। 411. ख्: –पूर्णस्तु; ङ्: –पूर्णे *; छ्: –पूर्ण्णेस्तु।

412. AS: पश्यसि। See below, 5/14d.

413. SaṁP: खें; missing in the SKh. 414. KMT: दिव्यान्तरीक्ष–; ट्: –तां। 415. ज्: –पाताले–; SaṁP: –तां।

416. SKh and MS ङ्: हुं; ट्: हूं। 417. All MSs and MS क् of the SKh: पठेदं; SKh: ख्: पठेतन्; ग्: पठेत्; SaṁP: पठेत्। दँ; AS: भक्तिवन्त पथेत् हँ। The reading accepted here is supported by the KMT. 418. च्: –ल।

419. ञ्: (?)। An accusative – तमपि– is required here to complete the syntax but none of the MSs of any of the sources support emendation.

420. KMT: शस्त्राग्निचौरार्णवे; AS: संसारे घ: सद्य मानव: साषि शस्त्राग्निवौरार्णवे; SaṁP: –शास्त्रार्णव। 421. The root (सं–) रक्ष is normally 1P.

422. ङ्: फ्रें फ्रें फ्रें; SaṁP: फेँ फँ फ्रँ। 423. च्: –लक्ष्म।

424. SaṁP: –महालक्ष्मीप्रिये। 425. झ्: –चौरान् परा–; ञ्: * * चौरान्यरदारानुरक्ताश्च; ट्: * * चौरान्यनदारानुरक्ताश्च; all other MSs except छ्, ज्: –चौरान्पर–; ङ्: –श्व; AS: य * मेचौराघदारानुशक्ता तथा + वियोगेतकास्ते; KMT: –नुषक्ताश्च; SKh: + विप्रयोगान्तकास्तेऽपि (ख्: प्रियागन्तकास्तेपि; ग्: विप्रियोगातकास्तेपि)। 426. AS: ब्रह्मघ्नेगोघ्नोमहादोषदुष्टा। Missing in the KMT.

427. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, ञ्, ट्: पिमुच्य; घ्, च्: पिमुच्ये; all other MSs: पिमुच्यन्ति; AS: + म्लूं; SaṁP: पिमुच; SKh: पिमुच्यति + सूँ। Either विमुञ्चन्ति or विमुञ्चन्ते would be a regular form here. Analogous cases of the deviant conjugation of this verb both with this prefix (see the end of this mantra) and without it occur several times in this text (see below, note to 9/19b).

428. ङ् संस्मृत्यु; AS: संस्मृते; the AS and SKh: + देवि; SaṁP: सिंस्मृत्य।

429. क्, ग्: मुखस्यू; ख्, ङ्: मुखय्यू; ट्: + पू; SKh: + निर्मलं।

430. ज्: + पू पूर्ण–; ञ्: * * (?) चन्द्रानु–; AS: संपूर्णचन्द्रानुकार; KMT: –नुकारं।

431. क्, च्, झ्: –प्रलोष्ट्यट–; ख्: –कुण्डलोद्यष्ट–; घ्: –कुण्डलान्घृष्टे गण्डस्थले; ङ्:
–कुण्डलोद्घृष्टं– –स्थल; च्, छ्: –कुण्डलान्घृष्ट–।

432. SaṁP and MSs क्, ङ्: –भुजावद्धपादा–; ख्, ग्: दृधेर्–; घ्: –पाशैभुजा–; च्:
–भुजापादागलैस्तेपि; छ्: –पाशैभुजापादागलैस्तेपि; ज्: दृढेर्व्वंधनैर्नागपाशैर्भुजावद्धपादागलै: तेपि; ञ्, ट्:
दृटेर्वंधनैर्नागपाशैर्भुजावद्धपादार्गलै: तेपि; all other MSs: –भुजावद्धा–। All MSs except ङ्, छ्:
–पादार्गलै:; AS: येऽपि वद्धार्गला शृंखलैर्नागपाशैर्भुजावद्धपादार्गलं तपि; SKh: येयेऽपि वद्धार्गला (क्: वद्धांर्गला; ग्: वद्धागला) शृङ्खलैर्नागपाशैर्भुजा (ग्: सूवेलैर्नागपासैर्भुजा) वद्धपादार्गलै: (ग्: –लै) तेऽपि। Missing in the KMT up to नामसंकीर्तनाद्. 433. घ्, ङ्, छ्: वंद्धाद्; ज्: यद्वाद्; AS: वद्धा:।

434. AS: प्रमुच्यन्ते। 435. क्, ख्, झ्: फ्रँ।

436. ञ्: ग्रस्तो; AS: हेमवद्धैर्दृधैर्–; SKh: वन्धैर्दृधैर्ये (ग्: वंवैर्दृठैये)।

437. च्: –रक्षश्च; ञ्: –रक्षै * (?); all other MSs and the SaṁP: –रक्षैश्च; SaṁP: च तु
भूत–; SKh: ग्रहैर्भूतवेतालरक्षैश्च (ग्: –वेतालैस्ते)।

438. ञ्: * * * * * (?) पिते; KMT and SKh: + त्वन्; AS: ग्रहैर्भूतवेतालराक्षसै: पीडितास्तेऽपि
+ शूद्रा: प्रमुच्यन्ते। 439. SaṁP: नामकीर्तनाद् * वि मुच्यन्ति। The edited text of the KMT reads मुञ्चन्ति but MSs CEFHJK read मुच्यन्ति as does the SKh. See below, note to 9/19b. 440. ङ्: घोरै–। See below, note to 5/57b.

441. ख्, ङ्: पादारविन्दे–; च्: पादारविन्दुद्वय; घ्: पादारविन्द्रे–।

442. SaṁP and MSs घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्, ऋ: ह्रूँ; ङ्: हुँ; झ्: हं।

443. ट्: –तेजेप्रभे; AS: हुँ महाकालकालाग्नितेज:प्रभं। All the MSs used for the edition of the KMT read the correct form तेज: as does the AS and SaṁP. Even so the readings of the MSs of the KuKh all agree on this reading and so does the SKh.
The noun तेजस् is frequently thematized. See above, note to 4/11d.

444. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्, ट्: क।

445. ञ्: –मौलि * * * * * * (?)ञ्चकिं–; ट्: –मौलितांमालालिसत्पद्म–; AS:
–व्रह्मेन्द्ररुद्रापिचन्द्रार्कपुष्पायवैतन्मींमौलिमालोलसंपद्म–; SKh क्: –माला * ––पिञ्जरी; ख्: –गोविन्द * * * चन्द्रार्कगोविन्दपुष्पायुधैर्–; ग्: –पुष्पाद्युवैर्मौलिमालालि –किंजल्कसर्पिजरी।

446. KMT: सेव्यसे। The following is missing in the KMT up to सव्वीरम्बिके।
The following five sentances are missing in the SKh. From here to चतुर्दशभुवनो– AS reads: श्रीकरवीर गुहरू * * वासनि * *. 447. क्: ह्व्रूाँ।

448. ज्, ञ्: कन–; ट्: कनवीरस्मशान–; SaṁP: –स्म्शाननाथानि। See above, note to line
67 and cf. lines 76, 77 and 87.

449. All MSs except ख्, घ्, छ्, ज्, ञ्: ग्लौ। This and the following mantra are missing in the SaṁP. 450. ञ्: –वनमडित–।

451. छ्: ह्रीं; ज्: ह्रौं; ट्: हर्स्वौं। The reading in MSs ख्, ङ् and झ् is unclear. The following lines ending with ज्म्रूफ्रुँ are not found in MSs: ग्, ङ्, च् and ट्।

452. छ्, ज्, ट्: –गुह–; ख्: –वासिनी। 453. SaṁP: छ्रौं।

454. ख्: –वासिनी।꣸ 455. This and the following mantra are mising in MS ञ्. 456. ख्, झ्: कृतराट्; AS: कृकट।

457. घ्: –निस्वषिणि; छ्: –निर्षोषणि; ज्, ट्: –निर्घोषणि; AS: त्रैलोक्यविद्याषणी।

458. All MSs and the SaṁP: ड।

459. The seed-syllables are missing in the AS and what follows reads:
अडीमांविके. 460. ख्: ड्क्षौँ (?); झ्: ज्म्रूफ्र्यूँ; छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: ह्स्ख्फ्रेँ;
missing in MSs छ् and ज्, the SaṁP and SKh.

461. Missing in AS and MSs घ् and झ्; all other MSs except छ्, ज्: ह्क्ष्म्रेँ. This reading is supported by the SaṁP and the SKh.|

462. SaṁP: पादुकक्रमे–। 463. This and the following word are illegible in MS ञ्. 464. घ्, छ्, ज्: –मंडलोच्य–; ञ्: * (?) दिमण्डलोव्यं–; all other MSs: –मंडलोव्यं–; SaṁP: कादिमण्डले। क्यं माहाज्ञान–; SKh: –मंडलोघं–; all MSs except ज्: –यो *। Concerning this irregular concord see above, note to to 1/5b. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, च्, ज्: +याया; all other MSs: +या।

465. AS: नेत्र वीरावलीसर्वराशि भगवत्यवभास्व भासुरम्; SKh क्: पीठावलीशव्दराशि–भगवत्यवभासिभासुरां; ख्: पीठावलीशव्दराशिभगवत्यवभासभासुरां; ग्: वीरावलीशव्दराशिभगत्यवभासभासुरां।

466. ख्: ह्र; all other MSs except घ्, छ्, ज्, ञ्, ट्: हूक्षौं; AS: ह्स्त्रौ।

467. छ्, ज्, ट्: –योगोवली–; ञ्: मण्डलो * अष्टनिर्वाणयोगो–; SKh: क्: –निर्वाणमहावाण–पञ्चकोपेतं; ख्: –निर्वाणमुद्भाव–; ग्: –निर्वाणसद्भाववाणपंचकोपेतं। The following, up to आज्ञाधिकार–, is missing in the SKh.

468. क्, ग्: ह्सौं; ङ् ह्लौँ; छ्, ज्, ट्: ह्स्रूऔँ; झ्: हक्ष्यौं; ञ्: (?); missing in the AS. SaṁP: ह्स्रूऔँ। MS ञ् ends here.

469. क्, ख्: –संकाशं–; झ्: –संकाशाकाशे–; छ्: –संशकाशश्राकाश–; छ्, ज्: –पञ्चकोपेतां–; ञ्: शुद्धस्फटिक * * (?); ट्: –संकाश आकाश– –पंचकोपेतां आज्ञाधिकार–; the section from शुद्ध– to –भूमिका is missing in MS ङ्; छ्: –आज्ञाधिकारे–; AS: –पंचकोपेतं आज्ञाधिकारे * * * वश्रीमत् * * *; घ्, ज्, ट्: –सकलकलालंनूतोन्मादमनसत्क्रमं; all other MSs: –सकलकलालंभूतोन्मादमनसत्क्रमं; AS: –सकल –कलाकृतो–; SaṁP: ––सकलकलालान्ततोन्मादसत्क्रम; SKh: –आज्ञाधिकारश्रीविश्रामसकलकलोन्मादमदनसंक्रमं (क् ख्: –म; ग्: आज्ञाधिकाराविस्त्रीमसकलालोमद–)।

470. Missing in ख्, घ् and छ्; SKh: श्रीमदागमं।

471. छ्: सननाभि–; ज्: सतनाभि–; missing in the AS.

472. छ्: विद्याम्नायोघगगद्य–; ट्: –पदैश्चतु:पादाभिध्यातसर्वार्थसंवित्संवोध; SaṁP: –पद्यश्चतु:–पादादिभिर्ध्यातसर्वांगसंवित्–; all MSs: –संबोध।

473. All MSs except घ्, छ्: संबुध्यसो; AS: क्ली विद्या वशोगद्यपदैश्चतु:पदार्थ तुयत: तस्मात्; SKh: क्लीं (ख्: श्री; ग्: व्लीं) विद्यामहोघचतुष्पादद्रव्यक्रियायोगपादं (ख्: –दूत्यधि–; ग्: –चतु:पदे। द्रव्यक्रियायोगवादं व) च चर्यपादान्वितं फ्रेँ (क् ख्: प्यें; ग्: तप्यें)यतस्तस्मात् (ग्: यतत्स्मा)।

474. All MSs except घ्, छ्: – वीराधिके; AS: सवीराविके + प्राशास्मो; SaṁP: सर्वत्रैक्यरूपा; SKh adds: प्रसन्नास्माकं (ग्: प्रसंन्नस्मा) भव (ग्: संभव)।

475. ट्: भैँ भैँ भै; All other MSs except ख्, घ्, छ्, ज्: भै भै *; SaṁP: भैरव; missing in MSs क् and ख् of the SKh. MS ग् of the SKh: भै भै *।

476. All MSs and all other sources: भैरवी।

477. ट् and the KMT: शरण्यागतोहं; SaṁP: भैरवस्तं शरणागतोस्मि।

478. See above, note to 4/3c. These two words and the following one are missing in the version of the Mālinīstava found in the KMT.

479. AS: भै भैरवि भैरविस्ते शरण्यागतोहं भैरवी न्यासाहं दीक्षितोऽहं दीक्षाशरण्यागतोऽहं भैरवी क्षमस्य अपरवद्धम्; SaṁP: –ध।

480. The Mālinīstava ends here in the KMT.

481. All MSs except घ्, छ्: –मातः। Although most of the MSs read the regular form, this deviant vocative appears as many as four more times in this stava alone (see above, lines 63, 72, 74 and 84) and in the AS and SKh. See below, note to 5/41b.

482. झ्: कौलिके; AS and SKh: काली।

483. SKh, MS ख्: कमलगुहावासिनि; AS and MSs क् and ग् of the SKh: –वासिनी।

484. क्: –स्तवेन; ङ्, ज्, ट्: –स्तवना; छ्: –तवना।

485. छ्: –नेदितोहं; all other MSs and the SaṁP: –नन्दितोहं; AS: समयनन्दितं। See above, note to 4/3c.

486. ट्: वरणं वंदितोहं; Missing in MS ज्; छ्: चरणं–; all other MSs, AS and SKh: –वन्दितोहं; SaṁP: वरणंवन्दितोहं।

487. All MSs: कारुण्यात् सनुक्रम्यस्व; AS: सदानुकम्पोहं; SaṁP: कारुण्यात् सानुक्रम्यरेच; SKh: सदानुकम्पस्व।

488. AS: चीवयाहं शुभं महामालिनीस्तवं; SKh: मां शिवे शाश्वते (क् ख्: शाश्वतेति; ग्: सास्वतेति)।

489. M → N. This and the following verses up to 4/43ab are also found in the AS and up to 4/45 in the SKh.

490. AS: आद्यनाथे–।

491. छ्: प्रर्य–।

492. All MSs: अनुभवा–; AS: प्रेरकंन तु प्रेरिता। The reading of the MSs would make this pāda one syllable too long. This emendation is partially supported by the readings of the MSs of the SKh which are: क्: आज्ञायानन्दनन्दिनी; ख्: आज्ञायानन्दनन्दिता; ग्: आज्ञायातदनंदिनी।

493. SKh: नाथस्यानुग्रहार्थाय। One wonders whether to accept the reading in the SKh which is correct Sanskrit and makes good sense. Unfortunately, it is not supported by even a single MSs of the KuKh or the AS. Compounds with 'm' intercalated between members for metrical reasons are well attested in this text (see above, note to 3/21b and cf. below 4/44a). As such it should be read to mean आज्ञानुग्रहार्थाय which, despite the extra syllable, sounds almost the same as अज्ञामनुग्रहार्थाय.

494. ज्, ट्: अधिकारण हेतुना; all other MSs: अधिकारेण हेतुना; AS: अधिकान्ने हेतुना। This emendation agrees with the reading in the SKh.

495. IM 6 + 7.

496. The root पठ् is 1P.

497. AS: क्रमसिद्धिं तदा; SKh: क्रमसिद्धिस्तदा।

498. AS: आनन्दस्यन्दसंज्ञापि; SKh: आनन्दस्पन्दनावस्था। Note the irregular sandhi. See above, note to 3/22b.

499. ट्: उच्चार्रादेव।

500. AS: त्रिकालं; SKh क्: त्रिकालमे–; ख्: त्रि:कालमे–। See above, note to 3/119d.

501. AS: बीजसंख्याद् विकारेश्च; SKh: –कारैश्च।

502. AS: कुजादेशात्; SKh: क्, ख्: कुब्जादेश:; ग्: कुजादेस।

503. All MSs: आज्ञामानु–। AS: आज्ञा सनुग्रहं। M → N, see above, note to 3/164a. Concerning this compound, see above, note to 3/21b and cf. above, 4/41a.

504. क्, ख्, ग्: वाचांसिद्धिं न; all other MSs: वाचासिद्धिं न।

505. The AS adds the equivalent of line 4/47cd and then no longer coincides with the text here. 506. ट्: तस्ये। 507. छ्: –मनैकधा।

508. All MSs: गतिर्। 509. See above, note to 4/35b.

510. क्, ङ्: मन्त्रविद्यात्रयोगिषु; all other MSs: मन्त्रविद्यात्रयोनिषु। This emendation agrees with the reading in the SKh. The following three lines are missing in the SKh.

511. छ्, ज्: विधा। 512. घ्, च्, छ्: वाज्ञा–; ट्: वा * (?) पदं।

513. छ्: –तां विवर्जितानाम्। The genitive plural ending has been contracted to save a syllable for the metre. Cf. the two gentive plurals below in 12/34cd: पापिष्ठां दर्पदुष्टानां दूषकां तन्त्रवादिनाम् and in 15/44b –विद्यानुष्ठानपारगाम् for –पारगानाम्.

514. All other MSs except क्: अहंकारो; AS: एवं क्रारोपपन्नानां।

515. All MSs: दाम्भिकानां। 516. Here, as in many other instances, a perfect passive participle functions as gerund. Cf. above, 3/166c and see below, note to 5/38b.

517. From here to the end of the corresponding chapter in the SKh it reads the following. The first line corresponds to KMT 2/4ab, the second to KMT 2/5cd and the following two to KMT 2/7.

नीलाञ्जननिभप्रख्या (ख्: –ख्यां; ग्: –निभाप्रख्या; कुम: –समप्रख्या) कुब्जरूपा (ख् ग्: –पां) वृकोदरा (ख्: –रं; क् ग्: –रां)।।
वामप्रसारितकरा (ख्: –रां) वामादेवीमुवाच (क्: वामदेवमुवाच) ह (ख्: च)।।
ऊचुस्त्वेवं (क्: ऊरूत्वेवं; ग्: ऊवस्त्वेवं; KMT: उवाचैवं) महासत्व (ग्: –त्वं; KMT: महासत्त्वा) दृष्टिपातो मदीयक: (ख्: ममीयक:; ग्: ममीयक)।
आशीविषेव दुष्प्रेक्ष्य: (ग्: दु:प्रेक्ष) स कथं धार्यते त्वया।।
दिव्यं ददामि ते चक्षुर्येन त्वां दर्शको (ग्: दंसको) भवेत्।।
पिण्डीकृत्वा (ग्: –कृकृत्वात्) स्वयोगान् (ख्: स्वयागान्; ग्: स्तयोगा) निजवपुरमलं
श्रीमदुड्यानलिङ्गं
रूपं संप्राप्य काली शशिकरनिकरोद्भासितानेकदिक्का (क्, ख्, ग्: –करोद्भाविता–; ग्: –दिव्या)।
निष्क्रान्ता (ग्: नि:क्रांता) लिङ्गतोया (ख्: द्दोया) पुनरपि तरसा (ख्: तुनसा; ग्: तवसा) शंकरस्तोत्रबोधाद् (ख्: –बोधा; ग्: संकरस्तोत्रवोधा)
दुर्गां (ग्: दुग्रा) रौद्रीं (ग्: रौन्द्रीं) सुशान्तां (ग्: सुसांतां) त्रिविधगतियुतां तां सदा (ग्: समादा) नौमि खञ्जीम् (ख्: खञ्जी)।।

518. The root वद् is generally 1P. In regular Sanskrit it is ātmanepadī only in certain senses. These include: to show brilliance or proficiency in, be an authority on, to shine, look splendid or bright, to toil, exert, labour. The ātmanepadī form recurs again below in 5/59c, 62a, 6/134c, 7/96a, 41/59a, and 46/24c. 519. All MSs: सिद्धिनाथस्य। Cf. below 4/51a.

520. छ्, ज्, ट्: देव्यो। 521. छ्: मित्वं तत्वमागतः। See above, note to 3/21b. 522. छ्: सिद्धि–। 523. छ्, ज्, ट्: अद्या–। See below 68/32c where exactly the same expression occurs. This indeclinable normally governs the ablative and, moreover, here, as in several other cases, it is irregularly compounded. See 6/163a, 225a, 7/57a, 8/6a, 11/57d, and 57/21c.
524. The plural form has replaced the regular singular. See above, note to 4/3c. 525. ट्: –भै *वयज्ञे। 526. All MSs: –मार्ग।
527. All MSs: विमलभेदान्तर–। 528. ट्: स्वामिनीमत।
529. All MSs except घ्, झ्: अथा–।
530. This line is unclear in MS छ्.

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER FOUR

1· The term śāntātīta literally means 'beyond the tranquil'. The 'tranquil' is, I suppose, the condition of deep sleep. If so, the plane of the Śāmbhava Command is the Fourth State beyond that of deep sleep. Perhaps we should distinguish this plane from that of the Śāmbhava State itself, which is Beyond the Fourth. Otherwise, we may understand the 'tranquil' to be the Fourth State in which case 'beyond the tranquil' is the state Beyond the Fourth.

2. This and the following verses up to 4/11ab are commented in the Ṭīkā, which is quoted in the relevant places in the notes.

3. See above, note to 3/64cd-65ab.

4. Cf. last lines of the Mālinīstava below in this chapter.

5. Cf. below, line 8 of the Mālinīstava.

6. See above, note to 3/67cd-68.

7. Cf. 3/67cd-38. The Ṭīkā comments:

The venerable Śrīkaṇṭha said: O Supreme Goddess, in this way you have attained the plane of the Śāmbhava Command in accord with (its) own (true) nature and thus you are the teacher of mantra and mother. Nor is there is any doubt (about that) here. For this reason (yukti), (you) should not do what is wrong (ayukta). And so you are the one (deity) who resides in the heart of all the goddesses, energies (mātrā), and all (the gods) including Brahmā and the rest. Therefore, give me, Rudra, (your) grace. You are my mother in this, the Western Tradition (paścimāmnāya).

śrīśrīkaṇṭha uvāca | evaṁ prāptaṁ [k kh: prāpta] svarūpeṇa || evaṁ svarūpeṇa prāptaṁ tvayā parameśvari [k kh: -rī] śāṁbhavājñāpadam | tathā tena karaṇena tvaṁ [k kh: tvāṁ] mantragurur [k kh: -guru] mātā ca nātra saṁśayaḥ [kh: śaṁsayaḥ] | atra yuktyāyuktaṁ [k: -yuktye] na kāryam | tathā tvaṁ [k: tve] sarvadevīnāṁ tathā mātrāṇāṁ brahmādīnāṁ sarveṣāṁ tvaṁ [k: tve] ekā hṛdaye sthitā ity arthaḥ | tasmān mama [kh: tasmāt-] rudrasya anugrahaṁ dehi | mama tvam asmin paścimāmnāye [k kh: -ya] mātā | Ṭ MS K fl. 67a.

8. The Ṭīkā comments: I am not here, near you, asking for sexual pleasure. I desire (your empowering) Command and the Transmission (krama). In this way I am your proper (samyak) disciple and of your Transmission (svakrama) that is, of the current of the Western Transmission (paścimakramaugha). For that reason give me (that). What (is that)? (It is) the Transmission of the Kula (kulakrama), that is, the transmission (krama) divided into twenty-eight parts.

neha [kh: na iha] tvāṁ samīpe kāmārthī | ahaṁ ājñārthī tathā kramārthī | tathā svakramasya [kh: svakrasyamasya] paścimakramaughasya [k kh: paścimekramo-] tava ahaṁ śiṣyaḥ [k kh: śiṣya] samyak | tena kāraṇena dehi | kim | kulakramaṁ [k *kh: -krame] aṣṭāviṁśatibhedabhinnakramaṁ [k kh: -viṁśa * -]* | Ṭ MS K fl. 67a.

9. The eight signs of attainment according to 13/147-150ab below are the standard set of eight yogic powers (siddhi) mentioned by Vyāsa in his commentary on the Yogasūtra (see below, 8/122cd-124ab and note). Vyāsa also considers them to be signs of development in the practice of Yoga, although they may also be impediments. In this context these are signs that appear in the initiand indicating that the initiation imparted to him has been effective and that he has therefore received the transmission of the Command. The Tantras refer to many more such signs. Eleven are listed below in 13/101cd-102. See note to 33/47-9.

10. See intro. 1, 125, 149; intro. 3, 79-80, 206.

11. The god is asking in this way for the original teachings taught in this, the first and most extensive scripture.

12. The Ṭīkā comments: I am undone by (my) desire for sex (kāmārtha) because of (my) stupidity. Thus give me those signs of realisation that are born from the descent (into the world) of the (teachings that belong to) the division beginning with Kā. Give me whatever that knowledge is (that is taught in the scripture) that extends for seventy million (verses) and the written teachings (akṣaramālikā). How (am I)? (I am) devoid of the signs of attainment and (your empowering) Command. Thus, because (of my) state of uncertainty, I request the Command in the Western House that comes from your presence.

kāmārthena aham alpabuddhitvān [kh: -vaddhitvān] naṣṭaḥ [k, kh: -naṣṭaṁ] | *tena kāraṇena kādibhedāvatārodbhūtāḥ pratyayās tān [k: pratyapīrate; kh: pratyapīste] mama dehi yat kiñcit saptakoṭipramāṇaṁ jñānaṁ tathā akṣaramālikāṁ likhitāṁ [k kh: * * akṣaramālikā likhitā] tan mama dehi* | kiṁ viśiṣṭasya | ājñāpratyayahīnasya | ājñāhīnasya tathā pratyayahīnasya | tasmād vaikalpatvāt [k: vekalpakatvā] tvatsakāśād asmin paścime gṛhe ājñāṁ [k kh: ājñā] yācāmi [k: yāñcāmi; kh: -yāclāmi] | Ṭ MS K fl. 67a.

The translation in the body of the text is guided by the interpretation of the Ṭ. Another one may be, assuming the reading likhitākṣamālikā of all the MSs is correct:

Thus (all that is) written in the Vāyupurāṇa and the other (such scriptures) is a (mere) string of letters (akṣaramālikā). (This is) the conclusion (niścaya) of the God of the gods who is devoid of the signs of attainment (pratyaya) and (your empowering) Command.

13. The Ṭīkā comments: The Tradition of the Masters is the sequence that begins with Śrīnātha (śrīkāranātha) and develops progressively up (through each) stage (sthāna) beginning with (the group of) five (teachers). By abiding there (one attains) accomplishment (siddhi) in Śāmbhava knowledge and I achieve the status of Śrīnātha. For what purpose? I descend into the world in order to liberate everybody.

If this truth is not different from the practice of devotion to you because it is the main (pradhāna) (teaching) then grace (me) with the Śrīmata, which is the Western Tradition, that is, the Root Tradition that has come (down into the world) by the transmission (krama) of the Root Tradition.

śrīkāranāthādi [k kh: cakāra-] yāvat pañcādisthānam uparyuparikramaṁ [kh: uparyopari-] gurvāmnāyam | tatra vartanāt śāṁbhavajñāne siddhir bhavati tathā śrīnāthatvaṁ ahaṁ labhāmi | kim artham | sarvajantūnāṁ trāṇārtham [kh: traṇā-] avatāraṁ karomi ahaṁ | pradhānatvena idaṁ satyaṁ [k kh: satya] yadi tvadbhaktisevanād [kh: tvat-] vyatiriktaṁ nāsti tasmāc chrīmataṁ paścimāmnāyaṁ [kh: yaścimnāya] mūlāmnāyaṁ [kh: -ya] mūlāmnāyakrameṇa yad āgataṁ taṁ prasādaṁ [kh: prāsādaṁ] kuru | Ṭ MS K fl. 67a-b.

14. The Ṭīkā comments: Tell (me) about that Śāmbhava (absolute) which is Kaulika knowledge endowed with vibrant energy along with the sequence of teachers.

śāmbhavaṁ [k kh: śābhavaṁ] yat sasphuraṁ [k kh: saspharaṁ] kaulikaṁ [kh: + kaṁ] jñānaṁ āmnāyaṁ ca tathā gurukramaṁ ca tad vada | Ṭ MS K fl. 67b.

15. Cf. below 9/70. The word `type' translates the technical term jāti found in the Tantras of most if not all schools, to denote a set of six Vedic syllables commonly, although not invariably, linked to the standard deposition in six parts, called `limbs' (aṅga) of mantras and Vidyās. (See note to KuKh 10/14). For example, in the Svacchandatantra (1/72) we read: 'The syllable OṀ (at the beginning) energizes (mantras). At the end of their (limbs) one should fashion (one of the following) types in due order, namely, NAMAḤ, SVĀHĀ, VAṢAṬ, HUṀ and PHAṬ'. In his commentary Kṣemarāja gives an example of the application (prayoga) of the types by citing the mantra of the first in the series of six limbs, namely, the Heart: OṀ HĀṀ HṚDAYĀYA NAMAḤ. The remaining limbs in the series are: Head: OṀ HĪṀ ŚIRASE SVĀHĀ; Topknot: OṀ HŪṀ ŚIKHĀYAI VAUṢAṬ; Armour: OṀ HAIṀ KAVACĀYA HUṀ; Eye: OṀ HAUṀ NETRĀYA VAṢAṬ and Weapon: OṀ HAḤ ASTRĀYA PHAṬ. The same Tantra explains that: 'a jāti is here said to energize all (the limbs) beginning with the Heart onwards' (hṛdādīnāṁ ca sarveṣāṁ jātir uktātra dīpane SvT 3/159ab). Kṣemarāja comments that: 'a jāti is a particular application of mantras by means of which (the mantra) is fit to perform each one of (its) functions' (jāyate tattatkāryānuguṇyam anayeti jātir viśiṣṭo mantraprayogaḥ). The SvT goes on to explain the purpose of energizing mantras with the *jāti*s: 'It is said that mantras are energized in order to bind the fetters (of the soul and so neutralize them)' (pāśānāṁ bandhanārthāya mantrāṇāṁ dīpanaṁ smṛtam SvT 3/159cd). Once they have been energized in this way mantras can serve as a means to the successful completion of initiation (ibid. 3/160ab) and for other purposes. One, according to the ritual procedure taught in the SvT, is the fire sacrifice in which offerings should be made uttering these syllables 'beginning', as the Tantras says, 'with praṇava and ending with PHAṬ'. (ibid. 3/158cd: praṇavādiphaḍantena āhutīḥ pratipādayet)

Abhinavagupta (TĀ 30/43cd–5ab) explains that these six are related to the following set of ritual actions: 1) NAMAḤ - repetition of mantra, 2) SVĀHĀ – oblation, 3) VAUṢAṬ - increase, 4) HŪṀ - elimination, 5) VAṢAṬ - pacification, and 6) PHAṬ - black magic. The use of these syllables illustrates another aspect of their application, that is, to magical rites. In this perspective *jāti*s are said to be of two types. If they are used in 'black' rites with the aim of punishing others, they are said to be of the 'cruel type' (krūrajāti). If they are used in 'white' rites to passify harmful influences and evil beings, they are said to be of the 'auspicious type' (saumyajāti) (SvT 3/161).

All these six syllables are uttered, amongst others, in the course of the Vedic sacrifice. SVĀHĀ and VAUṢAT are common exclamations uttered when making offerings to the fire. In the Aitareyabrāhmaṇa (2/4) it is said that SVĀHĀ is 'firmness' (pratiṣṭhātmaka) because it provides the officiant or his sponsor with a firm base (pratiṣṭhā) in life. The syllable VAṢAT has a negative magical power. The same Brāhmaṇa (AitBr 3/6) explains that: 'VAṢAT is like a thunderbolt (vajra) and so if one desires the death of an enemy he should exclaim it while concentrating on him'. The Taittirīyasaṁhitā says that: 'he pronounces VAṢAṬ with the evil force of speech' (yad vācaḥ krūraṁ tena vaṣaṭ karoti TaiS 4/4/8/5). PHAṬ is a common seed syllable. It is an onomatopeic sound produced when something hard is broken or split. It is accordingly inserted in formulas invoking the injury of an enemy by breaking open his head. In the Bhāgavatapurāṇa (BhPu 6/8/8) Indra is said to have conquered his enemies by uttering PHAṬ after the formula OṀ VAIṢṆAVE NAMAḤ in the four quarters of the sky. The Agnipurāṇa (AP 125/41ff.) drawing, no doubt, from Tantric sources, explains that NAMAḤ is used for rites of pacification and conciliation. VAUṢAṬ is used during a war in rites meant to subjugate others and the like. HUṀ is used to remove enemies and destroy another person's goodwill towards them. PHAṬ is used to cause people to hate each other and drive them from their homes. VAṢAṬ is used for the Soma sacrifice. According to the Vaiṣṇava Jayākhyasaṁhitā, (JS 15/186-8; see Kane 1974: vol. V part 2 p. 1111) the syllables SVĀHĀ, SVADHĀ, PHAṬ, HUṀ and NAMAḤ should be used, respectively, for making offerings to the fire, in rites performed for the ancestors, destructive magical acts, creating hatred amongst friends and to attain liberation. The Kaula Kulacūḍāmaṇitantra (KuCūT 3/80) says that mantras that end with SVĀHĀ, NAMAḤ, VAUṢAṬ, VAṢAṬ, HUṀ and PHAṬ bring about welfare, pacify, attract others, subjugate, are useful for black magic and paralysing, respectively. The Buddhist Tantras also teach the use of these syllables for similar purposes (Goudriaan 1978: 75).

I suppose, therefore, that our text says that the teaching of the Śrīmata is 'free of the sphere of rajas' because these syllables are not employed for magical purposes. In a the deepest sense, even though the Kubjikā Tantras do deal with magical rites, the essence of the teaching is not concerned with these things. We may also understand this expression as referring to the harmful effects that the utterance of the 'types' may have. YKh (1) explains:

'OṀ causes disease and after it is (fruitless) ritual action (kriyā). VAUṢAṬ causes poverty and in VAṢAṬ is bondage. The syllable HUṀ causes death and in the syllable SVĀHĀ is the destruction of the family and, O lord of the gods, men are bound by the syllable PHAṬ.' And so concludes that: 'The Vidyā devoid of the (six) types is the Vidyā within a pure Kaulika. Established in the abode of power, that Vidyā bestows worldly benefits (bhukti) and liberation.'

.okāreṇa [k, kh, gh: uṁ-] bhaved vyādhis [k, kh: vyādvis] tasyānte tiṣṭhate [k, kh, gh: stiṣṭate] kriyā |
vauṣaḍenāpi dāridryaṁ vaṣaṭkāre tu bandhanam ||
huṁkāreṇa bhaven mṛtyuḥ [k, kh, gh: tutan mṛtyuṁ] svāhākāre [k, kh: -ra] kulakṣayam |
phaṭkāreṇa ca deveśa bandhanaṁ ca bhavennṛṇām || [. . .]
jātihīnā [k, gh: jati-] tu sā vidyā yā vidyā śuddhakaulike |
*śaktisthānagatā vidyā bhuktidā muktidā [kh: mu * dā] tu sā* ||
YKh (1) 2/52-53, 55.

Conversely, YKh (2) exaults the mantras and Vidyās of the Kubjikā Tantras that are free of the 'types':

Now what is the use of speaking much? (There are) many treatises and Āgamas. I am (present) in each of (their) types (bheda) beginning (with those revealed) in the first age up to the last. HŪṀ and the syllable SVĀHĀ are absent (as are) PHAṬ, VAUṢAṬ and NAMAḤ. It is free of the sphere of rajas and devoid of the (six) types. That Kula tradition possesses vibrant energy. It is the eternal Kula teaching (darśana). It is uttered in the four ages and is endowed with (the energy of all) the vowels and consonants.

atha kiṁ bahunoktena bahuśāstrāgamāni ca |
yugādyādiyugānte ca bhede bhede hy aham ||
hūṁ svāhākāro [k, kh: -ra] nāstīti phaṭ vauṣaṭ namanaṁ tathā [k, kh: namāvikam] |
rajamaṇḍalanirmuktaṁ jātibhedais tu varjitam ||
sasphuraṁ taṁ [k, kh: ta] kulāmnāyaṁ śāśvataṁ kuladarśanam [k, kh:- na] |

caturthe tu yuge proktaṁ [k, kh: proktā] ādikādisamāyutam || YKh (2) 27/12-14.

Having said this we are in a better position to understand what the Ṭīkā has to say:

This particular system (darśana) is said to be 'free of the sphere of rajas' (rajamaṇḍala) and devoid of (the six) types (jāti) and *praṇava. The types are: NAMAḤ, SVĀHĀ, VAUṢAṬ, HUṀ, VAṢAṬ and PHAṬ. The syllable OṀ is praṇava. Mantras are the products of letters and are made of them. This `king of mantras', namely, knowledge (jñāna), is devoid of them. Why is that? (This is so) because it is stainless (nirañjana), tranquil and incomparable. Above the Siddha Śrīkaṇṭhanātha, who is such, is the (teaching of) the great tradition, namely, the great sequence of the letters (i.e. the Sequence of Twenty-Eight) and the rest. It is obtained by means of the transmission of the series (of teachers) (pāramparyakrama), which is the Śāmbhava tradition (saṁpradāya). [. . .] Moreover, it (is the one that) is successful in the Age of Strife. It gives success and is the right path to liberation.

idaṁ viśeṣadarśanaṁ kathitaṁ rajmaṇḍalarahitam [k kh: -maṇḍalaṁ-] jātipraṇavarahitaṁ ca | *namaḥ svāhā vauṣaṭ [kh: vauṣaṭka] huṁ [k kh: ] vaṣaṭ phaḍ iti jātayaḥ [k kh: jātiḥ] | praṇava iti .okāram [k kh: ūkāram] | mantrā [k kh: maṁtra] iti varṇodbhavāḥ varṇamayāḥ tair varjitam idaṁ mantrarājaṁ jñānaṁ | kena kāraṇena | yato [k kh: yadā] nirañjanaṁ śāntir niropamam [k kh: śāntiṁ niropamām] || īdṛgvidhasya siddhasya śrīkaṇṭhanāthasyoparisthitam mahānvayaṁ mahāvarṇādikramaṁ | tac chāṁbhavena [kh: tata śāṁbhavena] saṁpradāyena pāramparyakrameṇa [kh: yānayarya-] labhyate || [. . .] tat kintu kaliyuge siddhyate | siddhidaṁ [k: -dā] bhavati | samyaṅ muktimārgaṁ [k: -mārga] bhavati |

Ṭ MS K fl. 1b.

Elsewhere the Ṭ explains that 'praṇava' may mean either the syllable OṀ or the so-called Five *Praṇava*s beginning with AIṀ. (athavā pañcapraṇavaṁ aiṁkārādi Ṭ MS K fl. 68a; see above). As the Five *Praṇava*s are an essential part of mantras taught in the Kubjikā Tantras, there can be no doubt that 'praṇava' here refers to the syllable OṀ.

Finally, we should note that in line 101 of the Mālinīstava the Vidyā of the goddess is said to be 'transcendent and full' when linked to these syllables. Is this because in the KMT, where the Mālinīstava appears for the first time, this aversion to these, originally Vedic syllables, had not yet developed? Is this a sign that as the tradition developed it distanced itself progressively more from the Veda and so from elements of the Vedic ritual – even those that the earlier Śaiva Āgamic schools had accepted?

16. This expression occurs in only one other place in the major Kubjikā Tantras, that is below in 58/46. There the six sacred seats, arranged in the corners of the hexagon in the centre of the maṇḍala, are equated with the six Liṅgas of the five gross elements and mind (58/43cd ff.). In that context Jālandhara is said to be the Liṅga of Fire. Here this is clearly not what is meant. The goddess in the centre of the maṇḍala is Fire. She resides in the Point (bindu) there in that form. This then, I suppose, is the Liṅga of Fire.

17. Within the Liṅga the goddess experiences the full intensity of the Command. As the KMT (1/64) says: The Great Goddess abided there, full of the bliss of the Command, for more than a thousand divine years and became very powerful (mahāsāmarthyaṁ gatā).

18. Concerning the Lion and why the teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras are the Tradition of the Lion, see intro. vol. 2, p. 334.

19. The entire transmission and all that constitutes it - the scriptures, mantras, rites, Yoga and the rest - brings about the penetration of the Command, that is, the entry - āveśa - of the deity and the power of grace into the aspirant's inner being. See intro. vol. 1, p. 50.

20. See below, 5/45–47ab where it is quite clear that this is a reference to the Divine Current of teachers (divyaugha). These teachers are identified with a series of seventeen energies and power-holders that the goddess contains within herself as the eighteenth and final member of the series. This is the Convention of the Flower. The seventeen components are the energies of the Moon. Sixteen make the Full Moon and the seventeenth is the New Moon. Jyeṣṭhā - lit. 'the Eldest One' - is the ancient lunar goddess who contains all the energies of the Moon. She is the Divine Current that flows down from the Transmental.

The goddess is not commonly called Jyeṣṭhā – Eldest One. Jyeṣṭhā is the senior wife in a polygamous household. Her namesake, the goddess Jyeṣṭhā, is an ancient goddess who received a great deal of attention up to the 9th century. Nowadays, instead of being worshipped she is feared. Even so, this is the goddess a good wife should propitiate daily. Examining her iconography Leslie (1992: 120) explains that: 'The picture that emerges of an unattractive older woman, smiling and indolent, flanked by the ideal offspring (a powerful son and a beautiful daughter), served by solicitous female servants, marked by the inauspicious, cawing crow and the protective, chastising power of the household broom - suggests a deliberate link with a real or archetypal human figure. The most obvious candidate is the goddess's namesake: the female head of a polygamous household, the senior wife or jyeṣṭhā.' But as the eldest wife, she is the superseded wife and as such she is the opposite of her sister Śrī. The latter as Lakṣmī is auspicious and sought after, the former as Alakṣmī is propitiated with the hope that she leaves. Leslie explains: '. . . the superseded wife is an especially inauspicious presence in the home. Jyeṣṭhā is the inauspicious goddess par excellence' (Leslie 1992: 126).

Certainly, the inauspicious Jyeṣṭhā was still quite well known when the KuKh was redacted. Some trace may perhaps be seen of her dark connotations through her identification with the New Moon - the 'black moon'. At one point in her myth she is sent away by Bhairava, but this is a mild rejection in anticipation of final union. Kubjikā, moreover, has no companions who are her equal - she has no sisters or co-wives - but, she is the 'other' to herself. Although the 'other' 'dark' side is her shadow, it is not rejected or repressed but constantly re-integrated and transformed into the 'bright' side - the Full Moon. Leslie notes that the worship of the goddess Jyeṣṭha declined with the development of the cult of the goddess or śakti (1992: 114). Perhaps we have an example here of how she was reformed and absorbed in one such ascending goddess who, although retaining clear traces of the ambiguous character of those goddesses she absorbs into herself and thus supersedes, manages nonetheless to remain positive and desirable.

Again, 'jyeṣṭhā' - lit. 'the eldest one' is not only a proper name but also a manner of addressing seniors with special respect. Although Kubjikā is not commonly given this name in the Kubjikā Tantras, the Newars, who are her last remaining devotees, regularly refer to her in this way. Indeed, as an additional sign of respect they call her `jyeṣṭhānujyeṣṭhā' 'the eldest amongst the elders'. To the members of Newar society were seniority is measured in terms of age, this form of address is especially meaningful. Accordingly, the Newar liturgies not infrequently include the worship of the goddess Kubjikā as Jyeṣṭhā, which is quite rare in the Kubjikā Tantras themselves.

21. Concerning the term gotra see intro. vol. 2, p. 392 ff..

22. The goddess is originally within the god. She emerges out of his body and then unites with him to create the universe.

23. Concerning the goddess as Kaulinī, see intro. vol. 2, p. 40 ff..

24. The goddess objects that she is not fit to be the god's teacher because he is the ultimate source of the teachings. If he receives the teaching from her it would not be a direct transmission from the source but will have come to him through the transmission of the Divine Current which culminates in the goddess and the god who are speaking. The god replies saying that the Command does not change or loose its power by being transmitted in this way or, indeed, through the lineages of human teachers. The spirituality and power of the Kula, which here means the spiritual family that is formed in this way, is compromised only if a member (that is, a link in the chain of transmission) fails to receive the full transmission of the Command and so does not achieve complete realisation. The god assures the goddess that this would not be the case if she transmites it to him. The essence of all the teachings, transmission and reality itself is the Command and that is one and unchanging. Within the Liṅga the goddess has seen that ultimate reality and so is empowered to transmit the Command that empowers others to see it also. Thus the god sees no contradiction in him being both at the beginning of this chain, where he is the teacher of all, and also at the end where he is the disciple of all the preceding teachers. In this way the cycle is complete and the flow of the Command through the Divine Current turns full circle to perpetuate itself. This is why the god says that he has become a disciple once again. This process is not redundant. It is the upper part of the transmission still contained within the higher metaphysical levels. When the cycle reaches down to the god it both reverts up again into its 'inner' aspect and, in its 'outer' aspect, flows down through the currents of the Siddhas and common human beings.

25. Kula is the transcendental source of manifestation. Kaula is the immanent transformation of Kula understood as the collective whole of all its permutations (vikāra). They are 'Kaula', that is, they belong to Kula. In this context Kula is the source of the teachings, that is, the lineage of teachers and Kaula, its permutation, the disciples. Or else, Kula can be understood to be the inner Divine Current (divyaugha) of teachers and Kaula its product, the lineages of human disciples. Again, Kula is the earlier transmission and Kaula this, the subsequent (paścima) one. Whatever way we may understand this expression, the god reminds the goddess that the source and its product are essentially one. The teacher and disciple are one. The teacher may become the disciple just as the disciple becomes the teacher.

26. See note to 4/14-17ab.

27. Indeed, the Command is the teacher. See above, 3/11.

28. tatrodare lit. `there in the stomach'.

29. The Liṅga is the sacred abode of the Command (4/24). It is the Liṅga of the Command (4/25). The goddess must first enter the Liṅga to receive the Command. Empowered by it, she will achieve full realisation and see ultimate reality (4/18) within it. Then when she emerges from it, she can transmit the Command within it to the god.

30. Lines 4/21-2ab also appear in KnT MS K fl. 1b (see note 81 of the Sanskrit text). These lines eulogize the Liṅga as the abode of the Command in these five aspects. Those who worship Kubjikā should worship the Liṅga as the abode of the goddess who is surrounded by the six parts of the Krama projected into its hexagonal pedastal. Thus the KnT admonishes:

> Therefore, one should not find fault with a Liṅga made of silver, gold and the like, (it is) the abode (of this energy). It should be worshipped along with (its) hexagonal pedastal and it bestows accomplishment.

tasmān na dūṣayel liṅgaṁ raupyaṁ hemādi vāsakam ||
ṣaḍasrapīṭhikāyuktaṁ pūjyaṁ [k: pūjya] siddhiphalapradam | KnT MS K fl. 2b.

The Ṭ (MS K fl. 94 b) comments on these lines in the form they appear in the KnT. However, it is clear that the Ṭ is not drawing from there because the lines it quotes and comments before and after these ones are not found in the KnT. Nor are they the same in the KuKh. Moreover, although the Ṭ goes on to comment on a passage which corresponds to KuKh 4/22-23ab, it is doubtful whether the source is the KuKh. The Ṭ, quoting its source, reads: śrīśrīkaṇṭha uvāca | siddhidaṁ dehi me ambe. The KuKh omits śrīśrīkaṇṭha uvāca and instead of siddhidaṁ dehi me ambe the MSs read dada me parame amba. What follows namely, KuKh 4/24–25ab is embedded in the commentary whereas 4/25cd is quoted in full as it stands. Possibly, these lines were drawn from some other part of the MBT or another Kubjikā Tantra and were modified in the process. It is possible that these variants are simply those of Rudraśiva's manuscript of the KuKh. But this is unlikely as the context in which Rudraśiva comments on them, which is presumably that of the text he had before him, differs from the one here.

Rudraśiva is discussing the qualities a good disciple should possess. The deity is not only the ideal teacher, but also the perfect model for the ideal disciple. In the course of making this point Rudraśiva (Ṭ MS K fl. 94b-95a), commenting on these verses, explains:

> Mantra, Vidyā, Gesture, Yoginī and the deity of the Kula - in this way the five-fold energy abides within the womb (yoni) of the Liṅga. In this way, the energy of five kinds abides within the Liṅga in the form of the Yoni. Therefore, for that reason, one should not dislike the Liṅga. (It may be) in the body or (externally it may be) made of gold, silver, or copper. And that has a pedestal (pīṭhikā) in the shape of a hexagon (ṣaḍasra). Accomplishment (siddhi) is (attained) by worshipping it. The dynamic cosmic order (jagatsañcāra) and the Transmission as well as the Great Transmission (mahākrama) is within it. I am the disciple of the one who knows this sort of Liṅga. (As such) in each rebirth, (I) desire the Command.

*mantras [k kh: mantra] tathā vidyā tathā [k kh: taṁ] mudrā tathā yoginī tathā kuladevatā | evaṁ pañcavidhā śaktir liṅgayonyantare [kh: śaktiḥ liṁgayonyātara] sthitā | evaṁ liṅgasyābhyantare pañcaprakārā śaktiḥ yonirūpā sthitā | tasmāt [k: * *] tena kāraṇena liṅgaṁ na dveṣayet [k: dvaṣayet; kh: dvṛṣayet] dehasthaṁ vā hemaraupya-tāmradhātumayam [kh: hemarauśca tātrādhātumayaṁ] | tat ca [k kh: sa va] ṣaḍasrapīṭhikāyuktam | pūjanāt siddhir bhavati | asya liṅgasyodare jagatsañcāraṁ [k: -rā; kh: jagansaṁ * rā] tathā kramam | tathā mahākramaṁ [k: -ma; kh: mahakramaṁ] sthitam | evaṁvidhaṁ liṅgaṁ [kh: liṁga] yena [k: yo; kh: yaḥ] jñāyate tasyāhaṁ śiṣyaḥ [k, kh: śiṣyaṁ nṛyāt] janmani janmani ājñārthī |*

31. Below in 5/25 it says that the disciple should possess devotion and the teacher knowledge for this to happen.

32. The Ṭ comments (fl. 95a):

The venerable Śrīkaṇṭha said: “O Mother! Give me (the teaching that) bestows accomplishment”. The Supreme Lord asks a question. “O Supreme Goddess! Mother! give me, (your) devotee constantly (the) knowledge that is accompanied by accomplishment.” Why? Devotion should be instilled in the disciple. For whom? For the teacher and for knowledge. He brings the Kaulikī Command down to earth when devotion for both has developed in this way. Then this is his Liṅga and that is the divine abode (āśrama) whose form is the aggregate of energies. In this way, this Liṅga has come down through the lineage of the tradition in order to (impart) authority. (It is) . . . the Liṅga of the Command (ājñāliṅga), greatly accomplished, it is free of delusion and thought constructs. This, its main scripture, (consisting) of a hundred and twenty-five thousand verses, has been made accessible (upapannakṛta). "(I) proclaim daily, O goddess, that no one is my equal."

śrīśrīkaṇṭha uvāca | siddhidaṁ [kh: siddhidvaṁ] dehi me ambe ity ādi parameśvaraḥ praśnaṁ karoti | he parameśvari [k kh: -rī] ambe siddhipūrvakaṁ jñānaṁ nirantaraṁ mama bhaktasya dehi | kena kāraṇena | yathā śiṣye bhaktiḥ kāryā [kh: kāryāḥ] kasya kasya [kh: kasyā] guroḥ [k kh: guruḥ] tathā jñānasya | *evaṁ ubhayabhaktitvāgataḥ [k: -tvāga ; kh: -tvagataḥ] tadā asau kaulikī-ājñāvatāraṁ karoti | tadā tasya idaṁ liṅgaṁ āśramaṁ caitat [k kh: ceta] śaktikulavigraham | evam idaṁ liṅgaṁ pāramparyakramāmnāye [kh: pāraṁparyaṁ-] adhikārārtham āgatam |
ājñāliṅgaṁ mahāsiddhaṁ vikalpamohavarjitam ||
tasyedaṁ pradhānaṁ lakṣapādādhikaṁ śāstram upapannaṁ kṛtaṁ prati pratyahan [k: pratyahaṁ; kh: prati ahaṁ] nivedanaṁ devi mama tulyo nāsti kaścana ||

33. Kṣemarāja says in his commentary on the SvT (vol. I p. 5) that a true teacher frees the disciple from fear, whereas a false one makes him fearful. Similarly, true disciples free themselves from fear and false ones bring fear upon themselves. Cf. below, 26/44-45ab.

34. The Ṭ (fl. 95a–95b) comments:

If the Command is lost, it should be placed on the mouth of a woman and then, once she has been propitiated, one should take it from her again. Thus the Command manifests brilliantly. The entire descent down (into this world) of the House, that is, the Western House (takes place) in this way. That (House) is on the top of Meru, that is, on the top of the head. It bestows accomplishment by worshipping (it). One should give this kind of radiant (sasphura) knowledge to one's own disciple. It should not be given to someone else’s disciple in the course of the sacrifice. (One attains) accomplishment by worshipping that. Thus one should offer meat, wine and the like to all the initiates (gotraja) and then make an offering of money (dakṣiṇa). Then the deity comes down (into the world). One should receive the teacher’s Command in this way. Or else, because it has been earnt dishonestly and because (there is) no devotion he will have no fruit on that day. Then the Command is transgressed (ājñābhaṅga) and (the disciple) is worried every day. Then when he has performed the sacrifice and the rest in his own house with the teacher, the Command (again) becomes manifest (ājñāsphura) (and) there is peace.

*yadā naṣṭājñā tāṁ [k, kh: ] strīvaktre niyojayet | tataḥ punas tasyāḥ [k kh: tasya] sakāśāt punaḥ prasādīkṛtya grāhayet | tataḥ ājñā sphurantī | evaṁ gṛhāvatāraṁ paścimagṛhāvatāraṁ sakalam | taṁ meropari mastakopari pūjanāt siddhidaṁ bhavati | īdṛśaṁ sasphuraṁ [k: -ra] jñānaṁ svaśiṣyasya dāpayet | na paraśiṣyasya [k kh: pari-] yāgakāle dāpayet | tatpūjanāt siddhir bhavati | tataḥ sarvān [k kh: sarve] gotrajān [k: -jāḥ; kh: gātrajāḥ] madyamāṁsādi tarpayet | tataḥ dakṣayet | dakṣiṇaṁ [k: -ṇa; kh: dakṣiṇā] dāpayet | tataḥ devatāvatāraṁ kurvantī [k kh: -nti] | īdṛgvidhānena guror ājñāṁ [k kh: gururājñā] grāhayet | athavā anyāyoparjanāt [k kh: anyāyoyojanāt] abhaktitvāt tasmin dine niṣphalaṁ tasya bhavati | tadājñābhaṅgaṁ bhavati tathā udvegaṁ dine dine bhavati | tato [kh: tataḥ] guruṇā saha svagṛhe yāgādikaṁ [kh: yogā-] kṛtvā tataḥ ājñāsphuraṁ [kh: -spharaṁ] bhavati | śāntir bhavati |

35. The Supreme Principle is the goddess who is the energy of the Command. These words, with their sincere sentiment and intention, serve, as this obviously sexual analogy implies, to arouse the goddess spiritually and to stimulate her to come out of the Liṅga, so that the god may also receive the grace of the Command she has acquired within it.

36. Mālinīkula is one of the many names for the tradition of the Kubjikā Tantras. It includes the teaching, the initiates and their divine archetypes, and consists of both the god and the goddess. The goddess graces the god and so empowers him to be what he is, just as he graced her in the same way in the past. When the goddess is immersed in the god's infinite being prior to creation they are both the one Absolute. Neither can be identified as either god or goddess. In order to create the world and the teachings, that is, the Mālinīkula, the goddess emerges from Absolute Being in the form of the will that generates Speech. This process takes place by the grace of the Absolute Being, which in relation to the goddess's gender, is male. Thus, although the goddess graces the god, as she does all other beings, her power, that is, Speech, ultimately belongs to the god. Even though the two - god and goddess - are one, they are initially separated. Thus the god is as if deprived of his power that only the goddess can return to him. Once she has empowered him, the two together make up the archetypal form of the Mālinīkula. In this way Śiva and Śakti unite but do not fuse into the Silence of the Absolute. Retaining their divine identity, the god and the goddess - the Speaker and Speech - unite and their union generates the world and the teachings manifest as the Mālinīkula of which the Mālinīstava is the epitome.

37. I do not know why the form (vigraha) of the Mālinīkula is said to possesses twelve divisions. Perhaps these are the twelve phases of the utterance of OṀ, the archetype of all sacred Speech.

38. The divine form - mūrti - is the deity itself. The goddess is said to be the Divine Form (26/50), which is presumably the 'formless' form of Śiva's energy, that is, Śāmbhavī śakti (62/70). She is the Command and imparts it by her gaze.

39. The goddess is related to the god as power (śakti) is to the possessor of power (śaktimat). In this case the god, understood in terms of his sonic theology, sustains the aggregate of phonemes which constitute his body as Śabdarāśi - the Assembly of (Phonemic) Sounds. Analogously, the body of the goddess is made of the energies of the letters arranged in the Mālinī order that begins with Na and ends with Pha. In a passage quoted in the introduction (vol. 1, p. 14-15), that appears at the end of the first chapter of the KMT in five manuscripts, the goddess is called Bhuvanamālinī and Vīrāvalī. This passage is particularly relevant here as it explains not just who the goddess is but also one version of the events that led to her concealing herself in a Liṅga. In the following verse (KuKh 4/39), the god who is about to intone the Mālinīstava, which evokes the goddess from the Liṅga, does not address her as Mālinī but by the uncommon homonym Vīrāvalī, which is what he calls her in this passage just before she abandons him. Moreover, the last line of this passage is the same as KuKh 4/37cd. Thus, it is very probable that the redactor of this part at least of the KuKh had a version of the KMT before him that included it.

40. The following is the Mālinīstava. In this hymn the god eulogizes the goddess in the Liṅga who, pleased thereby, appears out of it. It is considered to be very important by Newar initiates and is regularly included in their daily obligatory liturgy (nityāpūjā). Imitating the god in this way, the presence of the goddess is invoked and the empowering Command received through initiation is renewed. Another similar hymn is uttered on the same occasion by Bhairava in the ŚM called the Bhairavīstotra (after ŚM 2/123cd; translated in the intro. vol. 1, p. 34 ff). Similarly, Śrīkaṇṭha intones a Daṇḍakastotra to evoke the presence of the goddess out of the Liṅga in chapter 16 of YKh (2) (after 143ab). A companion to the Mālinīstava is another hymn uttered by Bhairava after he has seen the goddess emerge out of the Liṅga and been initiated by her. This is the Hymn of Twelve Verses which is below in chapter 5 (5/72cd-84ab). There are two other hymns composed on the same model for the same occasion. One is in the KuKauM (21/4c-16ab) and the other in the SKh. Another hymn uttered by the god in prose is called the Ādyoghadaṇḍaka, which is found in both recensions of the YKh (YKh (1) 12 and YKh (2) 1). There is no equivalent of these hymns in the KMT, ŚM or ṢSS.

There are two versions of the Mālinīstava. The oldest version is found in the beginning of chapter two of the KMT. The other version is this one. This version contains several extra lines not found in the other one. Moreover, each line of this version begins with one or more seed-syllables (see 4/31cd-33ab). Energized by these seed-syllables, it is not only a hymn but also a powerful series mantras or, as the SaṁP puts it, a 'mantra-hymn' (mantrastava). This version, beginning with verse 4/31cd, is also found in the SKh (section 29) and the AS (chapter 28). The SaṁP says that the hymn was composed by Śrīnātha. The speaker in the KMT is Bhairava and Śrīkaṇṭha here. In the SKh he is called Śrīnātha whereas the colophon to the hymn there states that the version of the hymn with seed-syllables was composed by Mitranātha (iti sabījamālinīstava-rājaṁ mitranāthakṛtam). Mitranātha is both a name of the god (cf. above, 3/21 and note; also below 4/50cd-51ab) and the first Siddha of this Age who are thus identified.

This hymn is called a Daṇḍaka because, apart from two verses in the beginning, it is set in a rhythmic prose metre called daṇḍaka. It consists of an alternating series of short and long syllables. A more precise form of this metre requires that the first six syllables be short. The following syllables can then be either alternately long and short, or in groups of three syllables, the first of which is short followed by two long ones or else begin with two short ones followed by a long syllable. There are several examples of this type of hymn found in the Kubjikā Tantras and those of other schools. Apart from the Daṇḍakastotra and Ādyoghadaṇḍaka mentioned above, another example is the Mahādaṇḍakastuti attributed to Krodhamuni (SKh section 28).

Two commentaries on the Mālinīstava have been recovered. One is in the Saṁvartārthaprakāśa. The other commentary is the Bhaktibodha (see bibliography). The former is on the version found here and the other on the one in the KMT, which the BB refers to as the Mālinīdaṇḍaka. These have been quoted almost completely in the relevant places in the notes to the translation.

In this hymn, in a manner typical of the Sanskrit eulogy, the goddess is invoked in the vocative or is directly stated to be something. The range of entities and beings with which she is identified reminds the devotee of the deity's transcendental and encompassing unity that sustains and contains all these attributes. At the same time, the following brief typological analysis of the names of the goddess in this hymn can equally be applied to the names of the multitude of beings, especially Yoginīs, who populate the ideal world of the texts and, indeed, those we meet 'outside' in Indian villages, cities and the sacred landscape.

41. The BB (fl. 1b-2a) begins with a brief outline of the context in which Bhairava sang the hymn:

When the Supreme Lord saw Mālinī's nature he said "What is this?" He saw the goddess pervaded by the three worlds and (wearing like a) garland (all) the aspects of Māyā, and thought: "This is a great wonder - such (indeed) is my cosmic form!" Then a voice emerged from the essential nature of the Mālinī of Light (prabhāmālinī) (that said): “How has the god come forth? How is that you do not know? This is the Mālinī of Light who is (the goddess) Kujā!”

Then the god became blissful and, blissful, he bowed (to the goddess) and said “Be victorious! I salute you. Be victorious. You are Maheśvarī, Mālinī, the energy who is the essential nature of all (energies)”

mālinīsvarūpāṁ [-pā] dṛṣṭvā ko 'yam iti abravīt [vravīt] parameśvaraḥ [-ra] | bhuvanatrayavyāptā sā māyāṁśumālā [māyūsa-] dṛṣṭā [dṛṣṭa] | mahāścaryam [ayamācaryyam] etat mama tāvat viśvarūpam iti matvā vicitvā [vicitvaḥ] | paścāt prabhāmālinīsvarūpāt vācā [vaco] nirgatā | kathaṁ nirgataḥ devaḥ kathaṁ na jñāsyasi iyaṁ [vayaṁ] kujāsvarūpā prabhāmālinī [+ jñāsyasi] | paścāt parameśvara [-ro] ānando jātaḥ [nānandajātaṁ] | ānande sati [sāti] praṇāmaṁ [-ma] kṛtvā jaya tvam iti vadati | namaskaromīti jayaḥ | sarvāsāṁ śaktisvarūpā [śaktiṁsvarūpāsya] maheśvarī mālinī jaya tvam iti |

42. BB: Mālinī, whose nature consists of three syllables said (this). That (goddess) Mālinī is one (but) possesses three forms. Mālinī is the first (of all) depositions (nyāsādyā) and is mantra by nature.

The triads listed in the BB can be tabulated as follows to highlight the correspondences:

5. Table of Triads

Times	Past	Present	Future
Qualities	Sattva	Rajas	Tamas
Energies	Will	Knowledge	Action
Worlds	Lower world	Upper world	Heaven
Goddesses	Gāyatrī	Sāvitrī	Sarasvatī
Channels	Iḍā (descending breath-right)	Piṅgalā (ascending breath-left)	Suṣumṇā
Gods	Brahmā	Viṣṇu	Maheśvara
Goals	Dharma	Artha	Kāma
Times of day	Morning	Midday	Evening
Transmissions	Child	Middle One	Aged

mālinī trirakṣarasvarūpāha | bhūta-vartamāna-bhaviṣya-sattva-rajas-tama-icchā-jñāna-kriyā [+ jñānaḥ] -pātāla-madhya-svarga[svargaḥ]-gāyatrī-sāvitrī-sarasvatī-iḍā-piṅgalā-suṣumṇā-brahmā-viṣṇu-maheśvara-dharmārtha-kāma-prātar-madhyāhna-sāyāhna-bāla-madhya-jyeṣṭhā [-jyeṣṭha] ekā [eka] trayasvarūpā [daya-] sā mālinī nyāsādyā [nyāsādayo] mantrarūpā mālinī |

The god addresses the hymn to the goddess in the Liṅga. Accordingly, the BB describes the goddess's condition in the Liṅga and the manner in which she appears to the god who sees her in it. The Liṅga is the entire objective order – the Three Worlds. The goddess is filled by the Liṅga and so appears in her cosmic form `garlanded with the aspects of Māyā'. These aspects are the energies of the letters. She is both the composite aggregate of these energies and, as their essential nature, is their sustaining ground. As such, they are her qualities and they adorn her like a garland of light and so she is called the Mālinī of Light. Bhairava is so overcome by this cosmic vision that he believes at first that this is his cosmic form but then realises that it is the goddess whose triadic nature encompasses all the triads that make up the cosmic and temporal order, the deities that preside over them and the three transmissions of the teachings.

The BB continues:

Mālinī is (the goddess) who (wears) a garland (of letters). She is the goddess Kujā who is the thirty-two syllable (Vidyā) starting with (the letter) Bha and ending with CCE. The first (of all) depositions (nyāsādyā), Mālinī, the goddess whose nature is mantra is always victorious. She who is 'mā' (lit. 'no'), which denotes negation, and 'linī' (lit. 'merged' or 'destroyed'), (and so is said to be), 'indestructable', is Mālinī. You who are the Supreme Goddess (Parameśvarī) - be victorious! The Supreme God said: "(She is) the goddess who is the power of the gods and so is the goddess who devours the three worlds. She brings about creation, persistence and destruction. You who are the goddess - be victorious!

mālā āsyā astīti [mālyāsyāstīti] mālinī | bhādiccaintā [ce 'nte] kujā devī dvātriṁśākṣarā [-ra] mālinī | nyāsādyā mantrarūpeśī mālinī jayati sadā | mā niṣedhe linī [lini] avināśabhūtā sā mālinī jaya tvaṁ parameśvarī | vadati parameśvaraḥ [-reṇa] | devīti devānāṁ śaktir iti devī [devi] tribhuvanabhakṣiṇī [-lakṣiṇī] sṛṣṭisthitisaṁhārān [-saṁhāriti] karotīti [missing] devī jaya tvam iti |

The SaṁP explains Mālinī's nature in terms of her name simply saying that: 'she is (all the letters threaded together) like a garland (mālāvad varṇātmikā)'.

43. BB: She is pure (nirmala), that is, free of impurity (mala), that is, devoid of tamas. She is pure like pure crystal. She destroys impurity. Impurity is of three kinds: Āṇava, born of Māyā and born of Karma. The Āṇava impurity is like the husk of rice, that even when the (rice is) crushed, it is not freed (of its) impurity. (The impurity) born of Māyā is created by Māyā. The (impurity) born of Karma is created by Karma. Thus devoid of Āṇava and the other (impurities) may that (goddess) Mālinī who is you be victorious!

nirmale malanāśinī | nirmale nirgatamale [nirgatomala] nirmale [-la] | nirmalā [-la] tamoguṇarahitā ity arthaḥ | nirmalā [niṣyāya] śuddhasphaṭikāvat [-sphaṭivvat] | malanāśinī | malas [mala] trividhaḥ | āṇavo [ācava] māyajaḥ [-ja] karmajaḥ [-jā] | āṇavo [ānavo] yathā taṇḍulādikaṁ kaṇḍayati kṛtvā malena na tyajati tathā āṇavaḥ [mānava] | māyayā jāto māyajaḥ | karmaṇā jāto karmajaḥ | ity āṇavādirahitā [ity avamādivirahito] sā mālinī jaya tvam |

44. BB: She is supreme bliss by virtue of (her enlightening) experience (pratīti). She is pure and destroys impurity after having (this) experience. Her limbs are white and she is contemplated as white. She is supreme bliss by virtue of (her enlightening) experience (pratīti). Established in knowledge, she is always victorious. (She is) the goddess, the lord, the power of knowledge. Knowledge itself is power. (This is) the power of knowledge. Knowledge is of three kinds. False knowledge, doubtful knowledge and correct knowledge. False (knowledge) is like (mistaking) nacre for silver. Doubt is like (the doubt one may have) as to whether (an object seen at a) distance is a pole or a man. Correct knowledge is the awakened insight (into the nature of all things) beginning with the Supreme Lord and of the Supreme Goddess. As (is written) in the Pūrva (Tantra):

The goddess is knowledge, great radiant energy, and stainless as pure crystal. Pure, ever active, she helps (all) the worlds.

pratītyā paramānandā [-nanda] | pratītyanantare [pratītottare] nirmalā malanāśā ca śuklāṅgī śuklabhāvitā [-bhāvibhā] | pratītyā [pratībhyāṁ] paramānandā | jñānasthā jayati sadā | jñānaśaktiḥ [-śakti] prabhur devī [prabhūr-] | jñānam eva [jñānar eva] śaktiḥ [śakti] jñānaśaktiḥ [-śakti] | jñānaṁ trividham | mithyājñānaṁ [-na] saṁśayajñānaṁ [-na] samyakjñānam iti [-neti] | mithyā yathā śuktikārajatam [-lajataṁ] | saṁśayo [śaṁsayā] yathā sthāṇur vā [sthānurvā] puruṣo veti [vati] | samyakjñānaṁ yathā parameśvarādeḥ [-rādi] parameśvaryāś ceti [parameśvarīvati] prabodhaṁ samyakjñānaṁ | yathā pūrve [pūrva]-
jñānarūpā mahātejā śuddhasphaṭikanirmalā [-sphaṭīka-] |
śuddhā [śuddho] nityoditā [nityaṁvitā] devī jagatām upakāriṇī ||

SaṁP: The Lord is the goddess. The Lord (prabhu) is the Supreme Goddess (Parameśvarī). The lord is supreme (parama) and is the Goddess (īśvarī). As is said in the Uttara (Tantra):

The mother of the universe abides above and she brings about Bhairava's bliss. (She is) Śiva * * * the light, (she is) the lord, victory and splendour.

Such is Mālinī.

prabhur devī | prabhuḥ [prabhu] parameśvarī | paramaś cāsau īśvarīś ca prabhur iti | yathā uttare
ūrdhve sthitā jaganmātā [tagat-] bhairavānandakāriṇī |
śivaḥ [śiva] pravobhāsā prabhurūpā [prabhū-] jayo vibhā || iti mālinī |

The goddess is called by the male appellate prabhu in numerous places throughout this text, see note to Sanskrit text. Similarly, she is also called 'svāmin' for which see note to Sanskrit text of KuKh 5/40c and śrīmān in 3/45b.

45. BB (fl. 3a-3b): You are the intellect and you increase the radiant energy (tejas) (of consciousness). She is the intellect of all living beings. She is sāttvikā in a god, rājasā in a man and tāmasā in an animal. You, Mālinī, are the intellect that possesses such qualities. As is said in the Pratibhottara:

The activity of the qualities (of Nature) is always sāttvikā in the gods, rājasā in man, and tāmasā in an animal.

You increase the radiant energy (tejas) (of consciousness). (The goddess who) pervades the Moon, Sun and Fire and shines (by her own) radiant power (tejas) is Mālinī. As (is said) in the Tripurārṇavatantra:

That goddess who is radiant energy (tejas) destroys darkness and develops the radiant energy (of consciousness). (She is) the Mother, the saviour who creates the universe and destroys delusion and (all such things).

buddhis tvaṁ tejavardhinī [-vaddhinī] | buddhitattvasvarūpā sarveṣāṁ jantūnāṁ [jantavaḥ] | sāttvikā [sāmvikā] deve | rājasā mānuṣe | tāmasā tiryake [tiryyeke] | evaṁguṇabhūtā [-tvā] buddhis tvaṁ mālinī | yathā pratibhottare [-bhyottare]:
sāttvikā [sāmvikā] devavargeṣu rājasā mānave tathā |
tāmasā [tāsasā] tiryake [tiryeke] caiva [yaiva] guṇavṛttir bhavet sadā || tejavardhinī [-vaddhiṇī] | candrasūryāgnivyāpikā [-vyāpakā] tejasā [tejāḥ sāḥ] yāsau bhāti [jāti] sā mālinī | tathā tripurārṇave [tripūrā-]:
tamahantā tejarūpā sā [+ śrī] devī tejavardhinī |
mohādidhvaṁsikā [mohātidhvaṁsitā] mātā jagatsṛṣṭikarī [-ro] harā ||

46. BB (fl. 3b): The mother of all living beings. She is the mother who gives birth to all living beings, that is, the four kinds of living beings. The four types of living beings are those born from sweat, eggs, a uterus and seeds. (She is) their mother and the one who gives birth when the night (of Māyā) prevails. Who is the goddess? She is the one who increases the nectar of compassion. She burns up all sins and, forgiving by nature (dayadā), she gives liberation. (She) resides in this world of transmigratory existence. O Mālinī! You who reside in this world of transmigratory existence! Mistress of mantra! You who reside in the world of of transmigratory existence! that is, transmigrate (as it were). The meaning is '(O you) whose nature is transmigratory existence!' And the same (is said) in the Uttaratantra:

(The nature of the goddess) who resides in the world of transmigratory existence is passion (kāmasvarūpiṇī) (but) she is not deluded by phenomenal existence (bhāva). She is supreme bliss who, by her own will, awakens the abode of the intellect.

jananī sarvabhūtānāṁ | jananī mātā sarveṣāṁ bhūtānāṁ caturvidhabhūtānāṁ [caturvidhi-] | svedajā [-nā] aṇḍajā jarāyujā [jārāyūjā] udbhijajāḥ [udbudajāḥ] caturvidhabhūtagrāmāḥ | teṣāṁ mātā tathā niśāyāṁ bhūtāyāṁ jananī | devī kā | kāruṇyāmṛtavardhiṇī | dahanī sarvapāpānāṁ mokṣadā dayadātmikā [yaya-] | iti saṁsāre 'smin [saṁsārasmiṁ] vyavasthitā [vivasthite] | asmin eva saṁsāre vyavasthite he mālini [mālinī] mantreśvari [-rī] | saṁsaratīti saṁsāre [-ra] vyavasthite saṁsārasvarūpiṇi ity arthaḥ [ityartha] | tathā cottare
saṁsāravartanī bhāvāmohitā kāmarūpiṇī |
svecchayā paramānandā buddhivāsaprabodhanī [vuchi-] || iti ||

47. See above note to 4/37. BB (fl. 4a-4b): (You are) the mother, the goddess Vīrāvalī. The mother sustains all living beings, she nourishes and acts for the family (parivāracāriṇī). This is the meaning. Vīrāvalī is the series (or lineage) (āvalī) of heroes. 'Āvalī' (also means) 'mother'. She is the mother of the heroes namely, the guardian of the field, Vaṭuka and the rest. Or else, (another explanation is that) the 'heroes' are the teachers and adepts (sādhaka), that is, those who attain the eight great accomplishments (siddhi). (These are the accomplishments of) the collyrium (by which one can see everywhere), the (alchemical) Pill (that transforms metals to gold and liquids to medicine), the sandals (by means of which one can go anywhere in a moment), the (medicinal) herb (that cures all diseases), alchemy (dhātuvāda), Vetāla (a demon who acts as a familiar), the Yoga of the (infallible) sword, attraction and the rest. (The goddess is) the mother of those who accomplish (these things).

O goddess! Is in the vocative. The same (is said in the) Kulākulārṇava:

The Mother of the heroes, Mahāmāyā who is (never herself) deluded, is the light that bestows (every) accomplishment. She gives refuge and happiness. She is the Vidyā who nourishes and is always victorious.

mātā vīrāvalī [-varī] devī | mātā sarvabhūtadhāriṇī [yarvabhadhāriṇī] poṣaṇī parivāracāriṇī [parivāricāriṇī] ity arthaḥ | vīrāṇāmāvalī vīrāvalī āvalī mātā [mālā] vīrāṇāṁ kṣetrapāla-vaṭukādimātā [kṣatrapālavaṭūkādayamātā] | api ca vīrāś cācāryāḥ sādhakāḥ aṣṭamahāsiddhi-sādhakāḥ | añjana-guṭikā-pādukā–

oṣadhi–dhātuvāda-vetāla-khaḍgayogākarṣaṇādyaḥ [ajajana | guḍhaka | pādukā | oṣadhī | dhāturvvāda | -] sādhakānāṁ [sādhakā] mātā |
he devi saṁbodhane [saṁmbodhana] | tathā kulākulārṇave |
vīramātā mahāmāyāmohitā siddhidā vibhā |
śrayadā sukhadā [śukhadā] vidyā puṣṭidā jayati sadā | iti |

48. BB (fl. 4b): O dear one, be compassionate! O dear one, have compassion for the worlds if (as is the case) you act compassionately. How could the gods and those like them not have their desires granted (icchāsiddhi)? Therefore, O dear one, be compassionate with the gods and the rest. The same (is said) in the Paurvatantra:

(The goddess) acts compassionately. She is the one benefactor of the world and her form is that of a girl, a beautiful young woman and the very eldest (of the household). Endowed with the dignity of (her divine) being, she is ever tranquil in the (midst of the energies of the) Kula. Śiva's lord, her (one) desire is to fill (us with) strength.

kāruṇyaṁ kuru vatsale [vatsare] | he vatsale [vatsara] kāruṇyaṁ [kāruṁṇyaṁ] kuru jagatāṁ yadi te karuṇāceṣṭatā [kuruṇācetiṣṭāna] bhavati | kutaḥ devādīnāṁ [-dayaḥ] icchāsiddhir na [-siddhi-] syāt | tasmāt he vatsale [vatsare] kāruṇyaṁ kuru devādīnāṁ | tathā paurve:
kāruṇyaceṣṭā [kāruṇyaṁḥcetā] jagadekadhātrī [-dhātā] bālā sumadhyā para-jyeṣṭharūpā |
bhāvānubhāvā kulanityaśāntā [-śāntāḥ] śiveśabhūtā [śireśa-] balapaurṇanārthī ||

SaṁP: (You are) the one who gives birth to all living beings and are well known in this world of transmigratory existence and so you are the mother. Vīrāvalī is the energy of (all the energies) including Aprasūtā (the energy of the letter A), Ānandā (the energy of the letter Ā) and the rest. Who (is she)? She is the goddess - her nature is divine. Be compassionate! (Compassion) is the attainment of being close (to the goddess) and the rest (including ultimately union). Give (me that) O dear one! (You who are) especially beautiful!

sarvaprāṇījananakartrī cāsmin saṁsāre prasiddhā tena tvaṁ mātā*si |* vīrāvalī aprasūtānandādīnāṁ śaktiḥ [śakti] | kā [kāḥ] | devī divyātmikā | kāruṇyaṁ sāmīpyādisiddhalakṣaṇaṁ kuru karotu dadātu vastale viśeṣaśobhite |

49. AIṀ, also called Vāgbhava is, along with HSKHPHREṀ, one of the syllables that embodies the goddess's sonic form in the centre of the maṇḍala. This, I suppose, is the `prior body (made of the) seed-syllable' (pūrvabījatanu) the goddess assumes in the unmanifest state to which KMT (1/78a quoted in the intro.

vol. 1, p. 15) refers. The god addresses the goddess here in her primary sonic form - the first and foremost of the series embodied in the seed syllable mantras with which each line of this version of the Mālinīstava begins.

50. If we read with the KMT saṁbhūti (see notes to the Sanskrit text) the meaning is: '(The goddess who) is the radiant energy (tejas) of the glorious power (saṁbhūti) of Nirvāṇa, the Supreme Principle, is victorious'.

51. BB: And so first of all, the venerable and great Bhairava, having seen (the goddess) Mālinī of Light (in the Liṅga), composed a hymn in prose in a state of wonder and bliss. Victorious etc. Victory belongs (to the goddess). The Supreme Principle is the Śiva principle. Some believe that (the principles) from the Earth to Śiva are twenty-four. Some believe that there are twenty-five. Some believe that there are thirty-six and some that there are fifty-two principles. The supreme principle amongst them is Nirvāṇa, which is the Stainless (Absolute nirañjana) (see below note to 13/76cd–78). The universe from hell up to Śiva dissolves away in the Supreme Lord's diaphragm (kukṣi). He, the Supreme Lord, (then) resides (within his own) Supreme Power, that is, in the diaphragm. Thus the Supreme Goddess Mālinī who awakens (the ignorant) resides in Nirvāṇa, the Supreme Principle. Subsequently she emerged out of Śiva, that is, the Śiva principle. Once (the goddess) had come out of the god's belly, she (said) "I am the Great Śivā, the one who does all things!" Thus she is the radiant energy (tejas) born (saṁbhūta) from Śiva's will.

prathamatas tāvat śrīmanmahābhairavo [-veṇa] daṇḍakapadena stutiṁ [stuti] cakāra jyotir-mālinīṁ [jotimālinī] dṛṣṭvā vismayānandabhūtaḥ [vismṛtā-bhūtena] | jayati ity ādi | jayayuktā bhavati | paramatattvaṁ śivatattvam | kṣityādiśivāntāni [-śivāntaṁḥ] kecit manyante [manyate] caturviṁśatiḥ [caturviṁśa] | kecit manyante [manyate] pañcaviṁśatiḥ [-ti] | kecit manyante [-te] ṣaṭtriṁśatiḥ [-ti] | kecit manyante [-te] dvipañcāśat tattvāni [+ caturviṁśati kecinmanyate] | eteṣāṁ madhye paramatattvaṁ nirvāṇaṁ *nirañjanasvarūpaṁ | viśvaṁ pātālādiśivāntaṁ [-nte] parameśvarasya kukṣau vilīyate [vālīyante] | sa parameśvaraḥ [-ra] paraśaktau nivasati | kukṣau nivasati [-tiḥ] | tasmāt saṁbodhanī parameśvarī mālinī paramatattvanirvāṇe [-ṇa] vasati [vadati] | paścāc chivāc chivatattvād [paśchā chiva | tatva] nirgatā [nirvvārggataḥ] | devyodarāt nirgate sati | viśvakartāhaṁ mahāśivā [ma  śavaḥ] iti śivasyecchā*saṁbhūtatejomayī [śivanamasvā--taijo-]

SaṁP (fl. 6b-7a): (The goddess) is praised in particular in the Śrīmatottara, which is the Kulālikā (Tantra).* AIṀ is (the seed syllable called) Vāgbhava. She is victorious. The supreme is the essential nature of the most excellent (reality) (of all) the principles beginning with Earth. Nirvāṇa is a particular kind of Yoga (practised) with the desire to achieve liberation (that involves) wearing (the yogi's ensignias) which, include amongst other things, a necklace and earrings. The radiant energy (tejas) born (saṁbhūta) from that is (like) a sun ray burning more intensely by the fire of the sacrifice. (The goddess) is of that nature. (The goddess) is fashioned from the well known gold generated as the gross form (gaṇībhūta) of that sun ray, mixed with the radiant energy born from the product of the sacrifice of (the goddess) Kujā's fire. She pervades (all things) because she is born from the principle of radiant energy generated from (the practice of) Yoga.

kulālikātmani śrīmatottare viśeṣatayā stutā [stutaḥ] | aiṁ vāgbhavarūpā | sā jayati | parama utkṛṣṭasatattvaṁ [-tatvaḥ] bhūtattvādīnām [-dayaḥ] | nirvāṇaḥ kaṇṭhāmudrādidhāraṇena muktikāmo yogaviśeṣaḥ | tasmāt saṁbhūto yas tejaḥ sūryakiraṇo yajñāgnisamujjvalitaḥ | tanmayī | kujāgniyajñakṛtasamudbhūto [kuṁjā-] yas tejas tena saṁmiśraḥ sūryakiraṇas tatghanībhūtena prasiddhaḥ [prasiddha] svarṇas tena nirmitā | yogasamudbhavāt tejastattvād [-tatvatād] vyāpikā [vyāpakā] |

*This is not correct unless Śrīmatottara here means the KMT, which is also called the Kulālikāmata or Śrīmata. Bhairava in the same circumstance in the ŚM intones the Bhairavīstotra, not the Mālinīstava.

52. BB: (The goddess who) has emerged in manifest form is Mālinī * * * * (who is) the Earth. She who is newly born within it is (the goddess) Kujā (lit. 'Born from the Earth'), that is, Mālinī. (She is) Supreme, that is, her nature is supreme. And the same has been said: '(The lunar digits) beginning with the New Moon (amā) dissolve away as does the supreme Śiva.' She has come forth from (Śiva's) form, which is without parts and limbs. * * * (She is) the powers of will, knowledge and action.

niḥsṛtā vyaktarūpā sā mālinī  pṛthvī | tasmin navajātā kujā mālinī | parā paramasvarūpā | tathā coktaṁ amādayo [* ra] vilīyante [vī-] paramaṁ śivam eva ca | niraṁśaniravayavākārād nirgatā [niraśīniravayavākārārgginitā] | * * * * bhā | jñānaśaktiḥ | icchāśaktiḥ | kriyāśaktiḥ |*

In other words, when all the energies of the lunar goddess dissolve away in her unmanifest aspect the goddess is within the Liṅga in the centre of the maṇḍala as the energy of bliss (ānandaśakti). The goddess emerges into manifestation as Mālinī, to then assume the triadic form of will, knowledge and action, symbolized by the sides of the triangle in the centre of the maṇḍala.

The SaṁP commenting on the version of the Mālinīstava with seed-syllables explains them also:

The syllable ĪṀ is visible at the end of the peak syllable Sa.* And it is said that she came out of that rod of radiant energy in manifest form. That (same goddess) Kubjikā who was (within the Liṅga) in a formless (state) then appeared as Pārvatī, the companion (of the god) in a manifest form which is supreme, that is, the syllable HRĪṀ. She is the triple power (triśakti). (She is) the power of knowledge when knowing. The power of the will when attending reverently upon that. The power of action at the end, in the course of Kula ritual (kriyā).

īṁkāraḥ sakārakūṭāntasthalakṣitaḥ [-taṁ] | niḥsṛtā [nisṛtā] vyaktā | prāṇāyāmādibhir yajñair divyavarṣaśataṁ tapaḥ | ekāṁguṣṭhena mahatā prastutā stutipūrvakair iti coktam | tattejadaṇḍataḥ samudbhūtā vyaktarūpā | nirākāreṇa sthitā yā kubjikā pārvatī sakhī tadā vyaktarūpeṇa darśitā parā hrīṁkārā | triśaktirūpā | jñānaśaktir jñānavelāyāṁ | icchāśaktis tadupāsane | paryante [prāyāṁta] kriyāśaktiḥ kulakriyāyām |

* Perhaps the SaṁP here suggests that the syllable is SĪṀ even though the reading of the Stava it quotes is, as here, ĪṀ.

53. BB: Straight line - * * * straight line. Then again like the sleeping serpent king. She is in the form of an earring like (the coiled) serpent king. You are praised as the lord, the energy of Sound. The lord is the main form of Sound. (Thus the goddess), three-fold and pure, abides and resides above the syllable OṀ.

ṛjvirekhā | ṛjvi iṣṭur eva rekhā | punar api suptanāgendraḥ nāganāgendraḥ nāgendraḥ tadvat kuṇḍalākārarūpā [ku ] | prabhur nādaśaktis tu saṅgīyase | prabhuḥ [prabhū] pradhāno [-nāḥ] nādaḥ [nāda] | *trividhā [trividho] śuddhā sā sthitā [śuddha sā * statha] ca oṁkāroparisaṁsthitā [okāroparisasthitā]* |

In other words these three - the straight line, the coil and Sound are aspects of the goddess who is both goddess and lord. She is symbolized as a straight line when she emerges out of the transcendent. She is said to be coiled when she sleeps as the snake goddess Kuṇḍalinī (the 'Coiled One') encompassing her phonemic energies. Finally, she is also the energy of Sound when she awakens and, activating the potential energy of the phonemes, moves up through the stations of her ascent, to return to her original transcendental source. These three aspects corresponding to her tripartite nature as will, knowledge and action, are experienced in the higher reaches of OṀ beyond its actual external vocalisation.

The SaṁP offers a different interpretation. AIṀ and ĪṀ are the syllables of the first two lines of this hymn. The former is the sonic form of the goddess who is Parā - the Supreme One and all the other principles. The latter is Parā as the three powers of will, knowledge and action. In this line of the hymn she is OṀ - the Sound Absolute. There we read:

OṀ is praṇava. The Supreme Principle and the rest are the entities (designated by) the syllable AIṀ. The emergent (and other conditions) are the entities (designated by) the syllable ĪṀ. And the straight line and the rest are the entities (designated by) the syllable OṀ. The attendant hosts of (the goddess) Śavarī should be known to possess (the states corresponding) to the straight line and the rest. Next (the same is explained as) the basis of the Word (Absolute) along with the reality (to which it corresponds). The sleeping serpent is the slumbering snake who is the king, that is, sovereign and, being such, is Kuṇḍalinī who is the syllable OṀ and (whose) form (is like that) of a (round) earring. The Lord (prabhu) is one whose state is most excellent (prakṛṣṭabhāva). One reads all the time (in the scripture) that you are praised as the energy of Sound (nādaśakti), that is, Mayā which is the Sound Absolute (śabdabrahman). In brief (the meaning is): Śakra is the leader and king of all the gods. His consort (śakti) is Śakrā, the queen of the gods who is (their) leader (nāyakī). Her companion is Pārvatī and his companion is the goddess Kubjikā and her form is (that of) a heavenly nymph (apsaras). Śakra's companion is Śiva and his companion is Kubjikeśvara who is a Gandharva and is always praised by her as being close to Indrāṇī.

oṁ praṇavātmā | aiṁkārārthāḥ [-rthā] paramatattvādayaḥ | īṁkārārthakā niḥsṛtādikāḥ | oṁkārārthāś ca ṛjvirekhā*dayaḥ [-rthaśca -dlayaḥ] | saṛjvirekhādayas te [saralekhādayas tat] śavarīgaṇāś [saravī-] ca bodhyāḥ | punaḥ śabdopādānaṁ vātha sārtham [vāthā sārthaḥ] | suptaḥ nāgaḥ sarpaḥ sa [sarpa tad] indro rājā tadvat sattayā kuṇḍalākārarūpā oṁkārā kuṇḍalinī | prabhuḥ prakṛṣṭabhāvaḥ [-bhavā] | nādaśaktiḥ śabdabrahmātmikā tvaṁ māyā saṁgīyase satataṁ [saṁtataṁ] paṭhyate | arthād devānāṁ sarveṣāṁ nāyako rājā śakraḥ tacchaktiḥ śakrā devarājñī nāyakī | tatsakhī pārvatī | tasyāpi sakhī kubjikā devī | sāpsarārūpā | śakrasakhaḥ śivaḥ | tasyāpi sakhaḥ [sakhā] kubjikeśvaraḥ | sa gandharvaḥ | indrāṇīsamīpe nityaṁ gīyate yayā saḥ [sā] |*

Māyā is the sleeping snaking whose coiled form is like an earring (40/19-21ab). Jyeṣṭhā is like a straight line and is the energy of the path of emanation (40/19-21ab). The combined activity of these energies is Unstruck Sound (40/23cd-24). Accordingly, in this and the following line, the goddess is identified with four important energies called Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā, Ambikā and Raudrī. They are described in detailed below in chapter 40, which is drawn from the Tantrasadbhāva.

The goddess is Kuṇḍalinī both in her supreme (parā) and inferior (aparā) aspect. In her supreme aspect she resides in the Triangle above the head. There, coiled like a sleeping snake, she assumes the form of the Point (bindu) in the centre repleat with the potential energy of the letters. In this state she is Mind Beyond Mind (manonmanī) and is called Anāmā (the Nameless). When she is aroused by the transcendent she assumes the dynamic form of the energy of mantric sound (nādaśakti) and descends into the body and the world through the Cavity of Brahmā on the crown of the head and travels down along the axis of the subtle body within the central channel of Suṣumṇā. In this phase she is symbolized by a straight line. When she she reaches the navel (3/120–121) she rests and abides there in a latent form. Wrapped around the navel, she again curls up and assumes her inferior (aparā) form which, like the supreme one in the Triangle above the head, is coiled like a sleeping snake and round like an earring. Just as this energy is liberating when it ascends along the axis of the subtle body, it is obstructive and binding when it descends (40/78cd–79ab). Thus in this state Kuṇḍalinī no longer enlightens. On the contrary, she becomes the deluding power of Māyā that obscures the individual soul (40/20-1ab; also 40/77cd-80ab and 40/84ab–85cd). Even so, just as her visualized form in her two states - supreme and inferior - is the same, Kuṇḍalinī's essentially enlightening, liberating nature remains unaltered. The ŚM accordingly instructs the adept to realise that in reality these are two aspects of the one divine reality:

O fair faced lady, in the End of the Twelve her form is that of a sleeping snake. The Supreme Goddess should be perceived to be the same (when she is) located in the navel also. Both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent), she is seen within the Void in the middle of the body.

prasuptabhujagākārā dvādaśānte [g: dvādaśāre] varānane ||
nābhisthā tu tathāpy evaṁ draṣṭavyā parameśvarī [g: -ri] |
dṛśyate dehamadhye tu vyomānte ca parāparā || ŚM 5/150-151ab.

54. Generically called Śivā, the goddess is here, more specifically, called Anākhyā – lit. (the goddess) No-Name. Although this is a common name in the Kālīkrama for the unconditioned formless (niṣkala) aspect of the goddess, the Kubjikā Tantras generally refer to her as Anāmā. She is the goddess Kubjikā as Śiva's power of bliss (ānandaśakti) merged within him. According to the TS she is Ambikā who contains the other three energies namely, those of will (Vāmā), knowledge (Jyeṣṭhā) and action (Raudrī) who bring about creation, persistence and withdrawal, respectively (40/81cd-82ab). At the microcosmic level these powers are accordingly said to bring about exhalation (equivalent to creation brought about by Vāmā), inhalation (equivalent to persistence brought about by Jyeṣṭhā) and retention of the breath (equivalent to withdrawal brought about by Raudrī) (40/132cd-133ab). They are located in the corresponding channels in the body where these three forms of the vital breath function namely, Iḍā, Piṅgalā and Suṣumṇā, respectively. These three are exemplary of several triads with which these three energies are associated. They may be equated, in the same order, with the dawn, midday and the evening (40/131cd-132ab). They are also the energies that bring about the initial coming into being (udbhava) of the universe and an expanded state of consciousness. Then emission (viśleṣa) and merger (laya) (40/141).

The collective triadic nature of this triple energy (triśakti) is also summated in Tripurā, the goddess of the Three Cities, whose triadic nature is apparent even in her name. The Vāmakeśvarīmata, her root Tantra, inspired by Trika doctrine, teaches how these three energies are perceived within her:

> O dear one, Tripurā, the Supreme Power is the first born here (in this world) . . . Once she has assimulated all the seed-letters (into herself), Vāmā abides (in the form of) a sprout. Then Jyeṣṭhā (assumes the form) of (a straight line which is like a) flame (śikhā). (Then when) she assumes the (triangular) form of a water chestnut, (she is) Raudrī, O Supreme Goddess, whose nature is to devour the universe. Thus, that Supreme Power is the one Supreme Goddess (Parameśvarī), the three-fold Goddess Tripurā who is Brahma, Viṣṇu and Īśa. O beloved, she is the power of will, knowledge and action. She emanates the Triple World and so she is called Tripurā.

Vāmā, who creates, is sometimes identified with Anāmā and, at others times, with Raudrī, who destroys. This is because she functions, according to the circumstances, in two contrary ways. As the power of Speech, she is the mother of all mantras. As such she enlightens by revealing them, or she obscures by concealing them within herself (40/11–12). She is called Vāmā because she acts in a manner to contrary (vāma) to the obscuring forces that impede enlightenment or else reinforces them and so runs contrary to forces that lead to enlightenment.

Jyeṣṭhā, the Eldest One, is said to be in the form of a straight line. She manifests between the two Points that constitute the emission (visarga) produced by the union of Śiva and Śakti. One of these Points is the Self. The other Point represents the supreme, transcendent reality beyond the cycles of creation and destruction (40/16-17). In the ascending sequence, Jyeṣṭhā is the straightened, enlightening form of Kuṇḍalinī. Raudrī's form is triangular like a water chestnut. She brings about the withdrawal (saṁhāra) of the enlightened awareness created by Jyeṣṭhā. She blocks the path to liberation by giving rise to doubts about the existence of a higher ultimate reality and attachment to the things of the world. Obstructed by this power when it fuctions in this way, the individual soul's activity is `crooked' (tiryaggati). This condition is brought about by the binding power of transmigratory existence (ibid. 40/57) that generates the `crooked' waves of thought constructs in the fettered mind. But Raudrī's power to obstruct that fixes consciousness in the unenlightened condition, can also keep enlightened consciousness fixed in its enlightened state. Abhinavagupta drawing directly from Trika doctrine explains:

> Vāmā is the mistress of those immersed in transmigratory existence and bestows the power of the lord (prabhuśakti). Jyeṣṭhā (presides) over those who are well awakened and Raudrī over those who seek worldly pleasure. Vāmā is so called because she emits (lit. 'vomits') phenomenal existence (saṁsāravamana). Jyeṣṭhā because she is Śiva's nature and Raudrī because she dissolves away (dravaṇa) all evils and fixes (rodhana) every action. TĀ 6/56–57.

55. The Avadhūtā is the female counterpart of the Avadhūta. The Avadhūta is a Śaiva ascetic who, as his name literally means, has 'shaken off', 'discarded' or 'rejected' attachment. The same word is used with reference to someone one has expelled evil spirits. The goddess is called 'Avadhūtā' because, as Kuṇḍalinī she is both free of impurity and removes it as does the Yoginī who is her namesake. Although this name appears again twice in this hymn (see lines 59 and 99), the goddess is not named this way again in the Kubjikā Tantras. The rare use of this name in the Kubjikā corpus reflects the generally uncommon use of this term to denote a type of ascetic in the early Śaivāgamas and Kaula Tantras in general. This is surprising in the light of the popularity of this title for advanced yogis in later traditions such as those of the Aghoris, Gorakhanāthī yogis and the followers of Dattātreya that retained many recognisable features of the Śaiva and Kaula traditions that were their immediate Sanskritic predecessors. The Avadhūtagīta, for example, is a late work attributed to Dattātreya which eulogizes the Avadhūta as a liberated soul who has risen above the ficticious dichotomy of good and evil, Being and Non-being. One striking exception in this regard amongst the early Śaivāgamas is the BY. There the adept (sādhaka) engaged in his practice (sādhana) in the cremation ground and other solitary places, is repeatedly extolled as possessing the body of an Avadhūta (avadhūtatanu) (see intro. vol. 1 p. 488). The SaṁP (quoted in the following note) explains that the goddess is called Avadhūtā is a Kāpālikī. In this way Mukundarāja has preserved the original understanding of the Avadhūta to be a Śaiva ascetic who observes the Great Vow - Mahāvrata - of the Kāpālika and implies that Kubjikā is his goddess. Concerning the Kāpālikas and their Vow, the reader is referred to the work by Lorenzen (1972) noted in the bibliography.

56. SaṁP (fl. 7a-7b): One should understand HĀṀ to mean the seed-syllable (of this mantra). Bhā is the light of the Sun. Surā (the goddess) is the wife of Sura (the god). (Your) form is brilliantly luminous (bhāsurā), that is, white and slighly red. (You are) Śivā on the Śaiva path whose form is such and Jyeṣṭhā. The meaning of 'and' is arousal. (You are the goddess who is) more senior (jyeṣṭhā) than the most senior (god) and (your) purpose is the arousal (of the other energies). Vāmā is the Path of the Left (vāma) (of the triangle). She is (the Yoginī) Vāmanā, that is, Vāmanabhairavī. The word atha (meaning as well as) (is used here in the sense) of auspicious praise (māṅgalya). Raudrī is Rudra's power. The surrounding (three-fold) power within the triangle, that is, Kubjikā's Yantra, has thus been indicated to be Jyeṣṭhā, Vāmā and Raudrī. That (power) is Anākhyā, that is, the hidden mother Ambikā. (Your) form is a (dimensionless) Point (bindu), that is, (Your) form is more subtle than (the most) subtle.

(You are) Avadhūtā, that is, Kāpālikī. According to another view Avadhūtā is the syllable STRĪṀ. (Your) form is the Half Moon, the adornment on the head of mantras the nature of which accords with the particular syllable (of each mantra). (You are the female) Triangle (trikoṇā) whose form is such, that is, (stooping down) like a hunchback woman (kubjikā), (your) form is triangular. When conjoined with the letter E (we get the syllable) HREṀ, when it is the letter AI HRAIṀ, HRĪṀ when it is the letter Ī and when conjoined with the letter AṀ, HRAṀ. (Conjoined) together (these syllables constitute) the extraction of (a single) mantra (namely, HREṀ HRAIṀ HRĪṀ HRAṀ). Alternatively (pakṣe) (they can be projected onto the body in the form of a deposition) as is the deposition (of the letters of the) Mālinī (alphabet). Moreover, the reality (which corresponds) there (in that case to these syllables) is the principle that is attained and can be thus realised as the manifestation (udaya) of each particular principle by maintaining (the practice) of the Yoga of Time (kālayogadhāraṇa) (?).* That too is indicated (here).

hāṁ bījārthaś ca bodhyaḥ | bhā sūryaprabhā surā surapatnikā bhāsurākārā śvetā kiñcid raktā | tadrūpā śivā śaivamārgagā jyeṣṭhā*nāmā jyeṣṭhāj jyeṣṭhārūpanāmā ca kṣobhārthaḥ* | vāmā vāmamārgā vāmanā vamanabhairavī | atha māṅgalye | raudrī rudraśaktiḥ | kubjikāyantre trikoṇe jyeṣṭhā-vāmā-raudrīti [raudrīkti] āvaraṇa-śaktisūcanam | sā [tāṁ] anākhyā guptā ambikā jananī | bindurūpā sūkṣmāt sūkṣmarūpā | avadhūtā kāpālikī | pakṣe 'vadhūtā strīṁkārā | ardhacandrākṛtiḥ | mantraśiro-bhūṣaṇarūpā svaṁsvaṁpadagamyātmā [-gamyotmā] | trikoṇā tadrūpā kubjikāśilā hi trikoṇākārā | ekārasaṁyoge hreṁ aiṁkāre hraiṁ īkāre hrīṁ aṁkāre saṁyojite hraṁ ekatra mantoddhāraḥ pakṣe mālinīnyāsavadarthaś ca | tatra yat tattvaṁ tāvat kālayogadhāraṇena tattattattvodayaḥ āpadyate gamyaṁ bhavati | tad api sūcitam |

* It is not clear to me exactly what Mukundarāja means by the Yoga of Time. Cyclic Time is normally associated with the rhythmic cycle of the breath. These energies, aspects of the goddess, impell the phases of the breath and so can be experienced and their true nature realised by closely attending to the origin, movement and stilling of the breath along with the rise of Kuṇḍalinī who, as all these energies collectively, is the energy of the breath (prāṇaśakti).

Although only one manuscript agrees completely with the reading in the SaṁP, the readings in six out of the eleven manuscripts are clearly erroneous copies of that original reading which has, therefore, been accepted. The variant reading found in the BB, with which two manuscripts of the KuKh agree, and accounts for the divergance between the interpretations found in the SaṁP and the BB, is as follows: a-i-makārasaṁyojitaikatvam āpadyase i.e. '(You are the female) Triangle (trikoṇā who), conjoined together with the letters A I and M attains oneness'. The BB (fl. 6a-6b), the text of which has unfortunately been very corrupted here by scribal error, comments:

(You are) brilliantly luminous (bhāsvarā) and (your) nature is light [. . .] (your) nature is nectar and form is the triangle above Śiva located on the head. (You are) Mālinī who resides at the End of the Twelve and is the Moon, Sun and Fire. By conjoining the letters A I M that are (the qualities of) sattva and the rest . . . (?) you attain oneness. As (is said) in the Tvaritākalpa: 'The syllable OṀ . . . (?) and Śakti.' Oneness is attained.

bhāsvarā jyotirūpā [joti-] jyotisvarūpā | _ ddhiḥ_ | _śivā vāmā jyeṣṭhā raudrī anākhyā ambikā_ _[amvikāḥ]_ _bindurūpā avadhūtā_ | _ partha_ _candrākṛtis tvaṁ_ | _śivopari mūrdhni [muddhi] sthitāmṛtarūpā trikoṇākṛtiḥ [-kṛti]_ | _dvādaśāntasthitā [dvā * * * sthitā] candrasūryāgnisvarūpā mālinī_ | _a-i-makārasattvādirūrasaṁyojitena ekatvam āpadyase_ | _yathā tvaritākalpe_
.okāra śi śaktim eva ca | _ekatvāpadyate_ |

In other words, the BB understands this line to be praising the goddess in the form of the syllable AIṀ. In this perspective Śivā and the rest constitute the series of transformations of the energy of the goddess in the sequence of her descent from the transcendent into this sonic form. When she is within the male principle she is Śivā who is also called Anākhyā. As the Point at the top of the seed-syllable, she is Vāmā. As the Half Moon (ardhacandra), she is Ambikā. Jyeṣṭhā is the line above and the entire triangle of the syllable AIṀ is Raudrī (40/113cd-116ab).

57. The KMT reads: tattvarūpā bhagākāravat sthāyinī - (You) are the nature of the Principles who abides as if in the form of the Yoni. SaṁP reads: aiṁ tattvarūpā svarūpā bhagākārasthāyinī and comments:

AIṀ! (You) are the nature of the Principles and the innate nature (of all things) who abides in the form of the Yoni. The SaṁP comments: AIṀ. The principles that belong to (the goddess) Mālinī who is the Yoni (bhagamālinī) are thirty-six. Amongst them are Earth, Water, Fire, Air, Space, Ego, Intellect and Nature. She is such (tadrūpā) and shines as the innate nature (svarūpā), that is, like the Self (of all living beings). The Yoni is the sixfold Yoni (in the centre of the maṇḍala) and the female sexual organ (strībhaga) that (is symbolized by) the triangle, that is, the letter E. It is also (a particular) configuration of stars.*

aiṁ bhagamālinītattvāni ṣaṭtriṁśat | tatrāpi bhūjalānilavāyvākāśāhaṁkāramahatprakṛtyātmakāni [-jalanivāyvākāśā-] | tadrūpā svarūpātmavat prakāśamānā | bhagaḥ ṣaḍbhagaḥ strībhagaḥ trikoṇaḥ ekāraḥ tārāgatiś ca |

* Bhaga is also the name of a particular moment in time (muhūrta) characterized by a configuration of celestial bodies.

The SaṁP, which comments on the version of the Mālinīstava found here, distinguishes between two aspects of the goddess. From one point of view, the goddess is all that pertains to 'that' (tadrūpā) namely, the objective sphere that ranges from Earth up to Nature. From another point of view, she is one's own innate or essential nature (svarūpā), that is, all that pertains to the subjective sphere distributed in the principles above Nature. In this way, she is the womb-like source that contains all things both within herself in a potential form and externally when they have been emitted from her, their universal source. In other words, she is both the female sphere ranging up to Nature and the male sphere that ranges from there up to and including Śiva. The BB agrees with this interpretation but does not refer to these two as the goddess because one of the polarities (i.e. svarūpā) is not mentioned in the version of the Mālinīstava found in the KMT of which the BB is a commentary. Thus the BB (fl. 6b) says that:

The goddess shines in the form of (all) the principles . . . She is Mālinī whose nature begins with Earth and ends with Śiva. . . . Her form is the Yoni and abides like that and as such is (the goddess) Kāmākhyā (of which it is said): Kāmākhyā is the goddess who bestows boons and lives on the Blue Mountain (in the sacred area of Kāmarūpa).* You are the goddess who is the mother of the universe, the Gesture of the Yoni. Salutation to you! Thus she abides as if in the form of the Yoni.

devī [devau] tattvarūpā vibhāti yā [yau] | *ta * sāvasthāyinī |
kṣityādiśivāntarūpā [-śivātmarūpā] sā mālinī  nagākāse (?) bhagaivākārā
bhagākārā tadvad [taddhad] avasthāyinī | tathā ca kāmākhyā
kāmākhyā [karākṣā] varadā devī nīlaparvatavāsinī |
tvaṁ hi devī jaganmātā yonimudrā namo 'stu te |
tasmād bhagākāravat [-va] sthāyinī |

* See intro. vol. 1, p. 250 with reference to KāPu 76/73–75.

58. SaṁP: (The letter) AṀ denotes what is beyond the mind. AḤ denotes emission. The first is the initial one. It is the first of the group. (She has) come forth from that principle. (She has) been brought forth and (her) being can be attained by the First Principle, that is, by consciousness (vijñāna).

aṁ aḥ āditattvodbhav*eti [āditaṣaḍ(?)bhaveti]* ǀ aṁ amanaskārasaṁketaḥ ǀ aḥ visargasaṁketaḥ ǀ ādiḥ pūrvaḥ tadādigaṇakaḥ tattattvata udbhavā ǀ āditattvena vijñānenodbhavā bhāvagamyā ǀ

In other words, both the god from whom the goddess emerges and the goddess herself are the supreme principle. The god is tranquil (śānta) reposing in his own infinite nature. This state 'beyond mind' is represented by the vowel AṀ, that is, the Point (bindu) that follows the series of vowels (anusvāra). The goddess is emergent (uditā). She is represented by the letter AḤ, which is at the end of the vowel series. It is called called visarga, which also means 'emission'. Thus they represent the two aspects of the one reality that is both perpetually the same and yet constantly active.

The BB explains this line quite differently. According to the BB the translation should be '(You who) come forth from the first principles.' These principles are the five gross elements. According to the SaṁP the emergence of the goddess from the First Principle in her supreme form as consciousness is engendered by consciousness itself, which is the first and foremost principle. The BB reverses this perspective. The goddess from this point of view is the emergent, subtle, spiritual energy of Kuṇḍalinī that evolves out of the material sphere of the gross elements. Thus the BB says:

The first principles are (those) beginning with Earth. She has come forth from within Earth, Water, Fire, Air and Space.

āditattvodbhavā [-tatvadbhavā] ityādi ǀ āditattvāḥ pṛthivyādi ǀ kṣitijalahutāśanapavana-nabhāntodbhavā [-hutāsana-] ǀ

59. The reading of this line in the SaṁP differs from the one accepted here. The version in the SaṁP says: Beginning from HRĪṀ! KṢĀṀ (You are) the Yoni and enfatuate Śrīkaṇṭha. It comments as follows:

Beginning from HRĪṀ. HRĪṀ is Māyā, Sahajā (the Innately Existent), Parā (the Supreme), Bhuvaneśī (Mistress of the Worlds) and Pārvatī. Beginning from, that is, from the first cause. KṢĀṀ (You are) the Yoni and enfatuate

Śrīkaṇṭha. KṢĀṀ serves to denote the Guardian of the Field (kṣetrapāla) (of whom this is the seed-syllable). (The goddess) is the (triangular) grid of letters called the Yoni (yoniprastāra) and the like. Moreover, in order to (indicate her) beauty (she is said to) enfatuate Śrīkaṇṭha.

*hrīṁ āditaḥ iti | hrīṁ māyā sahajā [sasajā] parā bhuvaneśī [bhavaneśī] pārvatī | āditaḥ ādikāraṇataḥ | kṣāṁ yonisvarūpā ca śrīkaṇṭhasaṁmohanīti | kṣāṁ kṣetrapāla-sūcanārthaṁ [kṣatra- -nāthaṁ] | yoniprastārādisvarūpā * [-prastārā-dityarūpā] ca śobhārthe [-rtha] śrīkaṇṭhasya saṁmohanaśīlā [saṁmohanaṁ-] |*

The reading of this line differs in the BB also. The version there says, with reference to the goddess Mālinī, that she is: the source (yoni) (of the letters) beginning with the first principle (i.e. A) and ending with KṢa who awakens Śrīkaṇṭha (āditattvakṣāntayonisvarūpā sā śrīkaṇṭhasaṁbodhanī [-samvosanī] iti sā mālinī). The BB explain that:

Śrīkaṇṭha is Śrīnātha. (The goddess) pierces (through the centres in the body to) make contact (with him). How is he Śrīkaṇṭha? He is Śiva's letter mounted on the letter Ra and is a long (vowel).

śrīkaṇṭhaḥ śrīnāthaḥ | saṁparkavedhinī | kiṁ viśiṣṭaḥ [kim viṣṭhaḥ] śrīkaṇṭhaḥ | rephārūḍhaśivākṣarākāro guruḥ [śivākṣarokuraguruḥ] dīrghaḥ |

The remaining part of the text refers to a seed-syllable but the one available manuscript is too corrupt to make it out.

The KMT and the BB read 'śrīkaṇṭhasaṁbodhinī' meaning '(she who) awakens Śrīkaṇṭha'. All the other sources and four MSs of the KMT read 'śrīkaṇṭhasaṁmohinī' meaning '(she who) enfatuates Śrīkaṇṭha'. The BB comments:

Be victorious! You are (the goddess) Mālinī who once again awakens Śrīkaṇṭha at the beginning of creation when (the period of) destruction ends.

pralayānte [-no] punaḥ [puna] sṛṣṭikalanādisamaye [-kālanādisamaye] śrīkaṇṭhasaṁbodhinī [-saṁmbodhinī] sā mālinī jaya tvam [tvaṁḥ] |

The triangular Yoni of the goddess contains, as we shall see in detail in chapter eight, the energies of the letters which, variously combined, form the mantras through which all things are generated, sustained and destroyed. In the following lines, the goddess is identified with the first sixteen Rudras of the Śabdarāśi alphabet who form the first of three series of letters arranged around the sides of the Triangle. The corresponding letters have been noted in brackets. The names are feminine, implying that the goddess is their energy. These, the first sixteen letters, are the vowels that constitute the Wheel of No-Name (anāmācakra) that is experienced in the liberated condition in the state Beyond the Fourth. The sequence of letters in the Śabdarāśi alphabet symbolizes the phases in the process of creation. According to Kashmiri Śaiva exegetes the first phonemic energies are those of the sixteen vowels that represent the phases in the initial part of the process of emanation that takes place within the Voidness of transcendental Being before it issues forth into outer manifestation.

60. Cf. above 4/3. Note that in the previous line, the goddess is said to enfatuate Śrīkaṇṭha. Similarly, further ahead (in line 88) she is said to enfatuate Rudra. Clearly, Śrīkaṇṭha, who governs the letter A, is Rudra. In other words, the goddess is both the alluring, passionate consort of the god as well as his mother (see above note to 3/64cd-5ab). The compound rudramātā could also mean 'the mother of the Rudras' which would make good sense and circumvent the possible problem, but neither of the commentators understand it in this way.

61. The BB (fl. 7a-7b) explains: (She is) Rudra's mother and the power of Ananta (the Endless One) . . . (As) Rudra's mother, her nature is to protect. (As) the power of the Endless One, she destroys. The same (is said) in the Kālakālabodha:

The goddess Kālikā destroys. She is light, the energy (of consciousness) and her nature is knowledge. She fulfils (one's) desires. She is Kālasaṁkarṣiṇī, the beloved, who is the mistress of the Death of Time (kālakāleśī).

. . . (The goddess) is subtle like a hundreth part of the tip of a hair. The same (is said) in Kaulārṇavatantra:

I salute you who are the mother of the universe, very powerful and subtle as a lotus fibre divided into thousands of parts.

(As the energy of) the Trinity, she emanates, protects and withdraws (the universe). As Amarī, the mistress of the Immortals (Amareśvarī), she is Kālikā.

rudramātā [rudraḥ māṁtā] tathānantaśaktiḥ [-śakti] | rudrasya mātā rudramātā [rudraḥ |] saṁrakṣaṇīsvarūpā [-śvarūpā] | anantaśaktiḥ [aṁttaśakti] saṁhariṇīti [saṁhalanīti] | tathā ca kālakālabodhe:
saṁharaṇī kālikā devī jñānarūpā kalā vibhā |
kāmadā kālakāleśī [kula-] kālasaṁkarṣiṇī priyā ||
susūkṣmā [susuṣmyā] trimūrtir ityādi | sukṣmā sukṣmarūpā bālāgraśatas tathā [-śa * tathā] sūkṣmā [śū-] | tathā kaulārṇavatantre [lapaularṇvatantre] |*
mṛṇālatantusukṣmā sā sahasrakhaṇḍakhaṇḍitā |
sūkṣmarūpā mahātejā viśvamātā namo 'stu te ||
trimūrtiḥ sṛṣṭipālinī saṁhāraṇī trimūrtiḥ | amarī amareśvarī kālikā |*

Given the context we may safely understand the expression anantaśaktiḥ to mean 'the power of Ananta'. Ananta is the second Rudra in the series of fifty Rudras governing the letters and so corresponds to the letter Ā. Both commentators probably also understood this to be the direct literal meaning of this expression and took it for granted. The BB proceeds, as we have seen, to describe the function of each of the energies corresponding to these Rudras. The SaṁP follows the same course although it explains their functions differently, but without contradicting the BB. However, the SaṁP deviates from this approach when commenting on the expression anantaśaktiḥ. According to the SaṁP this is an adjective describing the goddess's power. From this point of view anantaśaktiḥ does not mean the 'power of Ananta' but 'endless power' which the SaṁP glosses accordingly:

(You are) Rudra's mother. (You are) also Rudra's mother and so too or else, in that perspective (tena prakāreṇa) (you are) endless power, that is, power without end or beginning as (the energy that operates inwardly in the projections of mantras onto the body) in such (procedures) as the purification of the elements (bhūtaśuddhi) as well as (in outer rituals) such as the rite of installation (of a deity in an icon) and the like. Very beautiful, (you are) subtle, that is, beyond the senses. Trimūrti (the Trinity) is the Lord of the Letters. In the same way (you are Amareśā whose) nature is to govern the gods (amareśanaśīlā). (You are) Arghinī, that is, Arghīśā, (which implies) the assumption of that (corresponding) letter (i.e. Ū)

rudramātā rudrasyāpi jananī | tathā tena prakāreṇa bhūtaśuddhyādinā prāṇapratiṣṭhādinā anantaśaktir vā [śakti vā] yasyāḥ [yasyā] śakter nānto nādir vā [śakter antanādita] | suśobhitā sūkṣmātīndriyā | trimūrtiḥ varṇapatiḥ | tadvad amareśanaśīlā [taddvandveneśeśanaśīlā] | arghinī [adhīnī] arghīśā tadvarṇagraham |

62. The Mālinīstava of the KMT omits this and the next sentance as does the BB. They are also missing in the versions found in the AS and SKh. We can therefore consult only the MSs of the KuKh and the SaṁP. These sources all read bindusārūpiṇī. This has been emended to bindusvarūpiṇī and translated accordingly. I understand this line in the following way. The goddess is the Point, that is to say the letter Ṁ (anusvāra). As such she awakens the phonemic energy of the letters H and O with which she is conjoined 'together in one place' in the seed-syllable HOṀ.

Possibly Mukundarāja also finds the same seed-syllable encrypted in this line if the propossed emendation is correct. The MS of the SaṁP reads hakārarūpa oṁkāra hrīṁ which means 'the syllable OṀ within the form of the letter Ha (makes) HRĪṀ'. But this makes no sense and so has been emended to hakārarūpa okāro hoṁ which means 'the letter O within the form of the letter Ha (makes) HOṀ'. However, Mukundarāja is not content to find a reference in this line to only this syllable. He treats the expression saṁbodhanā disjunctively. It is not an adjective of bindusvarūpiṇī, as I take it to be and is the most natural way to understand it. Instead saṁbodhanā is understood to be a feminine derivative of the neuter noun saṁbodhana- meaning 'invocation' and by extension the 'vocative case'. Somewhat forcedly, Mukundarāja declares that this stands for the vocative 'kubjike' - 'O Kubjikā!' Read together we have HOṀ KUBJIKE. Mukundarāja is not content even with this. He goes on to comment on the reading sarūpiṇī (the unemended MS reads sārūpiṇī) - '(she whose) form is (the letter) Sa'. According to him this letter is to be conjoined with the letter Ha to form a seed-syllable (kūṭa). Presumably, he means that the letter Sa should replace the letter O of the previous seed-syllable, HOṀ. Thus the syllable is HSAṀ. He adds that the syllable SHAṀ is also implied. These are placed after the invocation of the goddess. Thus it seems that according to Mukundarāja, the mantra encrypted in this line is HOṀ KUBJIKE HSAṀ SHAṀ. Now we may understand what Mukundarāja says:

> (You are) the Point (bindu) and Sa, the evocation and the letters Ha and O (conjoined) together in one place.
>
> The letter O within the form of the letter Ha (makes) HOṀ. The evocation together in one place, that is, with reference to one subject, is O Kubjikā! The Point is (Ṁ, the vowel called) anusvāra. (Your) form is Sa, that is, (you are) such at the end, that is, at the end of the syllable (formed from) the letters Ha and Sa at the end of the word 'Kubjike'. Thus, the peak syllable (formed) from the letters Sa and Ha has (also been) mentioned in addition (to the others).

hakāraukāra [hakārokāra] ekatra saṁbodhanā binduḥ sarūpiṇīti [vindu sārūpiṇīti] | hakārarūpa okāro hoṁ [oṁkāra hrīṁ] | ekatra ekasmin viṣaye saṁbodhanā he kubjike | bindur [bindu-] anusvāraḥ | sarūpiṇī [sā-] tādṛkāntā [-ntrā] hakārasakārakūṭānte [-kūṭāte] kubjikepade tataś ca sakārahakārakūṭam ity ādikaṁ tantritam |

63. Note also that the Yoginī in every case is Kubjikā. Siddhayogeśvarī is both a Yoginī and the goddess Parā of the SYM, an important Trika Tantra. ubjikā is identified with her in several places and ways (see, for example, 5/81cd -82ab).

64. SaṁP: The seed-syllable KRĀṀ is formed from the last syllable of the word 'vakrā'. (HRĪṀ, the seed syllable called) Māyā (is formed) with the letters Ha, Ra and Ī and is marked with the Point, that is, possesses a Point. After that comes the word 'yoginī' and is encapsulated and otherwise (manipulated) with the word marked (with a Point i.e. the seed-syllable). Then, the aforementioned name

(of the deity presiding over each letter) along with each individual (corresponding) letter forms a Garland Mantra (mālāmantra). The convention (concerning) your (mantras) has (thus) been formed (uddhṛta lit. 'extracted') conjoined (mālita) (with many) letters beginning with one and ending with countless thousands and because it has been extended (phaṇita), it possesses manifold meaning. (You are), in accord with each particular modality, the goddess (īśvarī) of the Siddhas and Yoginīs. (In other words, the letter) AṀ is adorned with Śrīkaṇṭheśvarī (who presides over the letter A) and so on.

krāṁ [kroṁ] vakrāśabdasyāntyavarṇagrahaṇena [-grahaṇaṁna] bījaṁ kṛtam [vīji tamaḥ] | ha-ra-īkāreṇa māyā bindvaṅkitā sabinduḥ | tadante yoginīpadaṁ aṅkitaśabdena puṭitādikaṁ | pūrvoktanāma tatas tattadvarṇena ca [-tatadvarṇanaśca] mālāmantraś ca siddhyati | ekākṣarādisahasrāyutāntavarṇamālitas tavoddhṛtasaṁketaḥ [-yutāśantaṁvarṇa-] phaṇitatvād anekārthaś ca | tattatpra-kāreṇa siddhānāṁ yoginīnām īśvarī [yoginīṁnāṁm īśvarī] aṁ śrīkaṇṭheśvarīty ādikaṁ bhūṣitam |

According to the SaṁP this line refers to the formation of a mantra based on the single letters of the alphabet. Each of the fifty letters is governed by a Yoginī. It is prefixed by the seed-syllables KRĀṀ and HRĪṀ between which is the word 'yoginī'. This is followed by a letter of the alphabet to which the nazalising anusvāra - the vowel Ṁ - is added by writting a dot above it. This is followed by the name of the corresponding Yoginī. The latter is derived from the name of the Siddha presiding over the corresponding letter of the Śabdarāśi alphabet by suffixing the word 'īśvarī' to it. Thus, the first unit of this mantra appears to be: KRĀṀ YOGINĪ HRĪṀ AṀ ŚRĪKAṆṬHEŚVARĪ. Once the fifty units formed in this way have been recited in alphabetical order, the recitation begins again. In this way the mantra, circular like a garland or rosary (mālā), forms an endless loop.

65. SaṁP: (The seed-syllable) HRAUṀ invokes the principles of Śiva, Vidyā and the Self. (Yogamāyā is) Māyā (whose activity) is balanced (samā) and checked by the practice of Yoga. (You are) reality, that is, (your) nature is reality (itself). Bhārabhuti (is so called because) due to (her many) labours (bhāra) she possesses most excellent wealth (bhūti), that is, glory (vibhūti).

hrauṁ [hroṁ] śivatattvavidyātattvātmatattvāmantraṇam | yogābhyāsena samā rodhitā māyā | tattvā tattvātmikā | bhārabhūtiḥ | bhāraiḥ prakṛṣṭā bhūtir vibhūtir yasyāḥ |

66. According to the SaṁP the reading of this line should be supplimented with the word Parā to make hrīṁ parātithiśātmikā, which means: HRĪṀ (you are) Parā who is Atithīśā. (hrīṁ tithīśātmiketi | hrīṁ parā tithīśātmikā [-tmakaḥ] |

akāraś ca pūrvapadato grāhyaḥ | atithīśaḥ Ṛkāraḥ | Ṛ atithīśeti stutā).

Atithin (lit. Guest) is the usual form of the name of the Siddha presiding over the letter Ṛ. Although Mukundarāja quotes this line as we find it in the manuscripts of the KuKh, he is not satisfied with the reading and so tries to modify it in this way in order to re-establish the usual form of the name. The BB, however, accepts it just as it appears here and in the KMT. A 'tithi' is a day of the lunar month. Accordingly, the BB explains that Tithīśā (the Mistress of the Lunar Days) not only governs the lunar days she is herself all of them from the first one onwards (tithīśā [-sā] pratipadādi).

67. The SaṁP explains that the seed-syllable KĀṀ stands for the word Kubjā. Thus exclaiming 'KĀṀ' amounts to saying 'O Kubjā!' The goddess in this form is worshipped by the Siddhas who are the lords of the letters noted in brackets. Together with the others mentioned in the following and previous lines they form a mantra made of the sixteen vowels. Finally, explaining implicitly the lack of uniformity of the gender of the beings mentioned in the these lines, the SaṁP says of the goddess that 'because (she is) Śiva's power, she is the mistress of the fifty letters and the queen of Śiva's attendants, male (dūta) as well as female (dūtī).'

sthāṇubhūtā [koṇārātabhūtā] harākhyā ceti tena ḷ-Ḹkārādhipau kathitau* | kām iti kubjāśabdādhikārato bījam [-dikakāratovīja]* | jhaṇṭīśabhautīśasadyātmikānugraheśārciteti [jhīṁtīśamātīśasahyātmikā-] ekāraikāraukārāvakārādhipaiḥ [e-kārakārokārākārādhipaiḥ] pūjitā [pūjitāḥ] | hrīṁ krūradehānugā tvaṁ mahāsenasaṁbhoginī [mahāsanasaṁbhāginī] iti svaramayaḥ mantraḥ [svaramayaṁ māṁtraṁ]* | pañcāśad-varṇeśātmikā [-varṇasātmikā] śivaśaktitvena śivadūtaśivadūtīnām api adhipā |

68. The reading of this line in the KMT is more intelligible than here. The previous lines, read together without intervening seed-syllables, supply the necessary context. We have seen that the goddess is the mistress of the first fourteen lords of the letters and is worshipped by her male counterparts. According to the version in our text she is the companion of the one whose body is Krūra (i.e. Ṁ) and enjoys sexual pleasure with Mahāsena (Ḥ). The version in the KMT says that 'when she is united with Krūra, she enjoys sexual pleasure with Mahāsena' (krūrasaṅge mahāsenasaṁbhoginī). Krūra presides over the nasalizing vowel called anusvāra. A point (bindu) written above the preceding letter, it symbolizes the male seed. Mahāsena presides over the last vowel called visarga, which literally means 'emission' with reference to the subtle exhalation required to pronounce it. Visarga is also the emission of sexual fluids that takes place during orgasm and, by extension, is orgasm itself. Thus the version of this line in the KMT can also be understood to be a description of the goddess united with the seed of the god enjoying the spiritual bliss of divine orgasm. Moreover, as the following line goes on to say, she herself is the nectar of bliss experienced at the 'end of the sixteen', that is, at the climax of emission, symbolized by visarga, the sixteenth vowel. Accordingly, the version in the KMT says that the goddess's body is ‘flooded with the secretions of the essence of the Drop (of Śiva's seed)’ (bindusaṁdohaniṣyandadehaplutā). The ŚM sums up this perception of the goddess as follows:

That energy is the supreme, subtle, endless, and pervasive (goddess) Parā (the Supreme One). (Her) nature (pure) consciousness, she is supreme and divine and is established (in the objective sphere as each) moment of time (trūṭi). The endless, pervasive Vidyā, she resides in the Sky (of ultimate reality) and her form is the Point. She is the divine nectar within emission (visargasthā) and the dynamism (cāra) present in the (transcendent) devoid of (phenomenal) activity (acāra).

yā sā śaktiḥ [kh g: śakti] parā śūkṣmā anantā vyāpikā [kh g: vyāpakā] parā ǀ cidrūpā paramā divyā [g: vidyā] truṭirūpā [kh: trūṭi-; g: tuti-] vyavasthitā ǀǀ anantā vyāpikā [kh g: vyāpakā] vidyā [kh: divyā] vyomasthā bindurūpiṇī [g: viṁdū-] ǀ visargasthā amṛtā divyācārasthā cārarūpiṇī ǀǀ ŚM 6/5-6.

Although the version of this hymn found in the AS and SKh is the one here, even so the reading of this line in the AS and the SKh agree with one in the KMT. The reading in the AS is literally the same, whereas the SKh differs, as we shall see, in only one detail. As the SaṁP is a commentary on some sections of the KuKh, including the Mālinīstava, it is not surprising that the reading of this line there agrees with the KuKh rather than the KMT. Even so, the reading on which Mukundarāja comments here does not agree with that of the majority of the manuscripts of the KuKh. The Sanskrit reads: śvetanispandasiṁhakṛtā. According to the commentary, this attributive compound, qualifying the goddess Śāmbhavī, means: ‘(she who has) made (kṛtā) the white immobile (nispanda) lion (her vehicle).’ We notice two variants with respect to the majority of manuscripts. One occurs in five of them namely, -nispanda- 'immobile' in the place of -niṣyanda- 'secretions'. The other is not found in any of the manuscripts of the KuKh namely -kṛtā- 'made' for -plutā- 'flooded'. Finally, the reading -siṁha- 'lion' found in all the manuscripts of the KuKh and the SaṁP differs from the KMT and the other sources that read instead -deha- 'body'. The reading of the majority of manuscripts of the KuKh namely, śvetaniṣyandasiṁhaplutā- 'flooded with (the mantra of the) Lion that (oozes) white secretions' - makes little sense even when supplimented with additions such as those suggested in brackets. It seems, therefore, that the original text of the KuKh has been corrupted. Moreover, it seems that the author of the SaṁP was aware that something was wrong and so emended -plutā 'flooded' to -kṛtā 'made' and offered the aforementioned, somewhat forced, explanation. The real problem, however, is not with this component of the compound. Had Mukundarājā compared this version with the one in the KMT, which is, after all, the original, unexpanded one, he would have noticed that the unit -siṁha- 'lion', which makes little sense in this context, has replaced -deha- 'body' which does. I have therefore emended the text of the KuKh to read -śvetaniṣyandadehaplutā.

The SaṁP explains: HSVŪAUṀ (the goddess) is Śāmbhavī, the nectar at the end of the sixteen who milks the (lunar) Drop (bindu) and made the white immobile lion (her vehicle). The seed-syllable consists of the letters Ha, Sa, Va, Ū conjoined with AU. The end of the sixteen (consists of) the vowels, that is, Nectar (A) and the rest. She who milks the (lunar) Drop (bindu) is the letter AṀ. One should understand that Śāmbhavī is the consort (dūtī of the god). She is transported by the lion, that is, (she has) made the lion who is the immobile white letter, the subtle motion (of consciousness) (her vehicle).

hsvūauṁ ṣoḍaśāntāmṛtā bindusaṁdohinī śāṁbhavī śvetanispandasiṁhakṛteti [śvataniśyande] (?)| hakārasakāravakāra-ūkāra-aukārayukto bījaḥ | ṣoḍaśāntā ackā [aka] amṛtādikā [-kaṁ] ca tathā | bindusaṁdohanī aṁkārā | śāṁbhavī dūtī gamyā | śvetavarṇanispandaḥ kiñciccalanaḥ siṁhaḥ kṛtaḥ [kataḥ] siṁhavāhiṇī |

The SaṁP says that the 'end of the sixteen' refers to the goddess who embodies the energies of the sixteen vowels and so is referred to as all of them collectively (ackā). These sixteen energies, that vitalize the body, senses and mind and, through them, the entire universe of experience, are symbolized by the digits (kalā) of the Moon which, full of lunar nectar, is the body of the goddess. More specifically, she is the energy at the end of the series of sixteen. This is the energy of the New Moon, symbolized by visarga- 'emission' which generates the other energies. Accordingly, the BB (fl. 7b) quotes the following verse:

She has come forth from the New Moon and so she rains down nectar. (Her) body the flow (of nectar), she gives life to all in the universe.

amābhāvād [- vād] viniryātā tenāmṛtasuvarṣiṇī | jīvantī [jīvanti] viśve [viśva] sarveṣāṁ saṁdohadehasaṁbhutā ||*

The BB goes on to explain: She milks, that is, causes, the lunar seed to flow producing the nectar that issues from the emission at the end of the sixteen. These lunar white secretions are the blissful energies of the Drop, which is the Command that is the product of this union. It fills the adept with the flood of vitality and the bliss of the liberated condition, as it does the goddess herself.

69. This is the most immediate and apparent meaning of this line. This is also how the author of the BB has understood it. He adds that joy here means the 'four-fold aim of human life', that is, conjugal love (kāma), worldy power and wealth (artha), Dharma and liberation. (aśeṣasamyakparānandanirvāṇamokṣapradā sā | saukhyaṁ puruṣārthaḥ [-rtha] caturvidhaḥ |)

The SaṁP explains this line differently. There we read that 'entire (means) totally full. Supreme (is the goddess Parā) who is the most excellent and right because (she is) undivided. Nirvāṇa (liberation) (is attained) by means of (her) bliss. (Liberation) is the gift of (spiritual) knowledge (received) in the Yoga that bestows joy' (aśeṣaḥ saṁpūrṇaḥ samyak akhaṇḍatayā parā śreṣṭhā ānandena nirvāṇaṁ vijñānadānaṁ tasmin yoge saukhyaprade).

70. BB: Bhairavī is Śakti. She is called Bhairavī because (she is Bhairava's power) to wander (bhramaṇa), sport (ramaṇa) and emanate (vamana).

bhairavī*ty ādi* | bhairavī śaktiḥ [śakti] bhramaṇe [-na] ramaṇe [manema] ca [na] vamane bhairavīty ucyate [ūnyatā] |

Bhairava is praising the goddess as his divine consort. As we shall see, in the last lines of the *Mālinī*s*tava*, he praises her as Bhairavī in the Liṅga of the Void (ākāśaliṅga), hoping that she will emerge from that transcendental emptiness, which is his own essential nature and become manifest to him so that he can unite with her.

71. I understand krīḍānusakte to be synonymous with krīḍāsakte.

72. Instead of SAḤ the SaṁP reads HSRĪṀ and comments: 'the letter Ha is Śiva. The letter Sa is Śakti. The letter Ra and the rest are adornments. The garden of Bhairava who pervades the universe is the forest of Māyā. The (goddess) Parā (the Supreme One) is intent on sport there. Mālinī is accompanied by Parā. The word 'mālinī' (denotes the) fifty letters of the alphabet. It also denotes (a particular way of combining the letters of the alphabet with the syllable HRĪṀ) beginning with (the first namely) HRĪṀ AṀ - AṀ HRĪṀ - AṀ HRĪṀ AṀ - HRĪṀ AṀ HRĪṀ (and so on for the rest of the letters). The Malayan range is the series (āvali) which is the alphabet conjoined with (the word) 'malaya'. (This is the series consisting of) the units beginning with AṀ MALAYA ĀṀ HŪṀ, IṀ and so on.'

hakāraḥ śivaḥ sakāraḥ śaktiḥ rephādikāḥ [rephodikaṁ] bhūṣaṇāḥ | bhairavasya jagadvyāpakasyodyānaṁ māyāraṇyaṁ tatra krīḍitum anusaktā parā | parāsahitā mālinī | mālinīśabdena pañcāśad varṇāḥ | hrīṁ aṁ | aṁ hrīṁ | aṁ hrīṁ aṁ | hrīṁ aṁ hrīṁ | ity ādikaṁ coktam | malayāvali | malayayuktāvalir varṇamālā | aṁ malaya āṁ hūṁ iṁ [a malaval ā hūṁ īṁ] ity ādibhedāḥ [bhedā] |

The BB begins by quoting a verse found in the ŚM (1/115 see above, note to 2/42-43). The author of the BB refers to his source as the Dakṣiṇa(tantra). This may be the ŚM. But this is unlikely as this would be the only place where the ŚM is called this. Alternatively, the Dakṣiṇatantra may be the original source from which the ŚM has drawn this verse or else the Dakṣiṇatantra may have borrowed it from the ŚM or a common source. The BB (fl. 8b-9a) goes on to explain that:

The garden is the scriptural tradition (āgama). While intent on that (the goddess) sports, that is, plays. Parā (is the goddess) Mālinī. The same (is said) in the Kulākulārṇavatantra:

Bhairavī, Bhairava and the gods, play on the garden path. I salute you who like (to do this), (you who) are supreme bliss and Māyā!

bhairavodyānakrīḍā bhairavasvarūpam āha | tathā dakṣiṇe
[bhramaty] amṛtarūpeṇa [-ṇaḥ] ramate [-ta] śaktinā saha |
vadate [-ta] jñānasadbhāvaṁ bhairavaṁ taṁ namāmy ahaṁ ||
udyānakrīḍā | udyānaṁ āgamaṁ | tasmin eva krīḍā vihāritā [-tāḥ] anusakte [-śakteḥ] | parā malinī | tathā kulākulārṇave [-va]
bhaivarī bhairavo devāḥ krīḍanty udyānamārgagāḥ [krīdanto- -gā] |
anusaktā [amuśakte] parānandā māyārūpā namo 'stu te ||

Although neither of the two commentaries mention it, it is, I believe, significant that according to the KMT (1/69cd), the name of the Liṅga into which the goddess enters is called the Garden Bhairava (Udyānabhairava). Is this Bhairava's garden? Or is it the universe with its world orders (see below line 121)?

73. This and the following lines up to line 39 are not found in the KMT's version of the Mālinīstava.

74. The SaṁP says that this line 'refers to the distinction associated with the letters between those entities that have been purified in the triple world' (sāṁskṛtā ye tribhuvane santi teṣāṁ mātṛkākṣarayuktabhedakathanam uktam). In other words, the goddess is the series of phonemic energies that threads through the cosmic order. To each of these energies correspond purified entities, at one with the goddess.

75. The SaṁP says that the Mistress of the Yoni is 'the letter whose shape is that of the Yoni and is adorned with (the seed-syllable) VRŪṀ and so (we get) the A Yoni, I Yoni and so on'.

*vrūṁ bhaganāyaki bhagākārayuktā [bhaga * * * * (?) kārayuktā] varṇā vrūṁbhūṣitā* | atha ca abhaga-ibhagādikaṁ ca |

I suppose that the letter meant here is E, which has the triangular shape of the Yoni. The SaṁP reads VRŪṀ in place of VLŪṀ and so the chain of mantras meant here according to the SaṁP is, I suppose, A-EVRŪṀ, Ā-EVRŪṀ, I-EVRŪṀ and so on.

76. Reading the SaṁP carefully, we notice that the author conceives Bhairava to be on mount Kailāśa. This is where the cave is said to be where the Liṅga is located in which the goddess abides immersed in contemplation. Here and there in his commentary, Mukundarājā tell us that the beings invoked in these lines are the attendants of Śiva or female beings related to the goddess. As he sees them, Bhairava intones mantras praising them (mantrastava). He begins with Bhairavī (line 17), that is, his consort the goddess herself, who is eulogized with five mantras. Thus he says: 'The first convention begins with Bhairavī on Kailāśa (kailāśe [kaileṁ (?) bhairavīṁ] bhairavī ity ādisaṁketaḥ [saṁketa]). The SaṁP goes on to list the first two permutations (bheda) of the mantra. The MS is corrupt here, but as far as can be made out, these appear to be aṁ bhageśvarī, āṁ bhageśvarī and so on.
īṁ bhageśvari | kailāśe [kaileṁ (?) bhairavīṁ] bhairavī ity ādi saṁketaḥ [-ta] | aṁ [a] bhageśvari | āṁ [a] bhageśvari [+ aṁ] ity ādibhedakathanam |

77. According to the SaṁP, the mantras of this and the following lines refer to the encompassing hosts and the goddess who presides over them. The readings in the SaṁP agree with the ones here. The first three are female beings. However the SaṁP maintains that these lines do not refer to them but to their male counterparts who are Śiva's attendants (śivadūta). The SaṁP explains that these lines 'speak of the convention concerning Śiva's attendants who are on the path of Kailāśa in such a way that after (Bhairava) has gone to Thaghora's place, he goes to see Paramaghoreśvara'.

ghuḥ ghoreti spaṣṭam | thaḥ thaghore | thagoraś ca dūtaviśeṣaḥ | hrīṁ paramaghore | thaghorasthalagamanānantaraṁ paramaghoreśvaradarśanaṁ karotīti kailāśamārgīnāṁ śivadūtānāṁ saṁketakathanam |

From a different point of view, these three vocatives are reminiscent of expressions referring to the god Aghora, that is, Svacchanda Bhairava. His mantra, known as the Aghora mantra or Mantrarāja according to SvT (1/41-3) is:

OṀ AGHOREBHYO THAGHOREBHYO GHORAGHORATAREBHYAḤ SARVATAḤ SARVASARVEBHYO NAMAS TE RUDRARŪPEBHYAḤ |

Several Vidyās taught in the Kubjikā Tantras are modelled on this important mantra. One is the Aṣṭakāpālinī Vidyā (the Vidyā of the Eight Skull-bearing Mothers). It is the Vidyā of Śikhādūtī, the attendant on the goddess who embodies her topknot, the third of her six limbs. As the name of this Vidyā suggests, it is divided into eight parts. To each part corresponds one of the eight Mothers all of whom carry skulls (see ṢSS 15/88ff. and cf. Ṭ fl. 138b-139a). It is:

AGHORE HRĀṀ THAGHORE HRĪṀ GHORAGHORATARE HRŪṀ SARVATAḤ HRAIṀ SARVASARVE HRAUṀ NAMAS TE RŪDRARŪPE HRAḤ |

78. This and the following three mantras refer to the goddess herself. This mantra praises her as Amoghā. She is accompanied by the syllable PHREṀ which the SaṁP says is 'where the goddess Amoghā is' (amoghā devī yatra). One of the mantras used to worship her is the Vidyā of the Mother of the Rule (Samayamātṛ Vidyā) (SKh MS G, fl. 20b). In this Vidyā she is identified with Aghorā, the consort of Aghora, that is, Svacchanda Bhairava, and the Yoginīs Raktā and Siddhacāmuṇḍā. Here it is:

AIṀ AGHORE AMOGHE AMARE VARADE RAKTE SIDDHACĀMUṆḌE HRĪṀ VICCE |

79. The Wheel of the Mothers may either be the group of goddesses presiding over the fifty letters of the alphabet (see Dyczkowski 1992: 82ff.) or else, which is the case here, the Eight Mothers. The Mothers may be worshipped in an independent maṇḍala of their own or can be incorporated into other *maṇḍala*s. In the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala they are located in the first enclosure around the central hexagon. They are also present, although not prominent, in Śrīcakra, the maṇḍala of the goddess Tripurā.

When the Mothers are worshipped independently in their own maṇḍala, the deity in the centre may also vary. It may be a relatively minor god or goddess, although in the Sanskrit sources, the deity in the centre is generally a major one. Often it is a form of Bhairava but may also be a goddess such as Kālī or Tripurā. When a goddess occupies the centre she is generically referred to as the Mistress of the Wheel of the Mothers (mātṛcakreśvarī). In this case, the SaṁP (fl. 8a) tells us that, as one would expect: 'Kubjeśvarī occupies the place of the Mistress of the Wheel of Mothers' (mātṛcakreśvarīsthāne kubjeśvarī). The Wheel of the Mothers can be worshipped along with the other important *maṇḍala*s of the Kubjikā Tantras for example, those of the Dūtīs, Yoginīs and Khecarīs. Chapter 46 of the ṢSS describes how this is done in relation to the worship of a form of Kubjikā called Vajrakubjeśvarī.

80. These seven are an important group of Yoginīs commonly worshipped in the rites of the Kubjikā Tantras. According to the SaṁP they are located on the western side of mount Kailāśa and Bhairava praises them with these mantras. *kailāśapaścima * tathā jayā (?) tat tat paraṁ ṣaḍḍākinīdarśanam | mantrastavo yathā ḍmryūṁ [dmyū/] ḍāṁ ḍākini | nmryūṁ rāṁ rākini | lmryūṁ lāṁ lākini | vmryūṁ kāṁ kākinī | smryūṁ sāṁ sākini | hmryūṁ hāṁ hākini | ymryūṁ yāṁ yākini | sarve caivaṁ stauti |*

81. This, I suppose, is the seed syllable of the goddess who governs the six Yoginīs. Her seed syllable represents her as the aggregated unity of the six.

82. See intro. vol. 1, p. 153 ff..

83. Here the goddess is called Tāriṇī, the little goddess Tārā. Although hardly known in this period of their development to the Śaiva and Kaula Tantras, Tārā, whose worship came to be one of the most widespread of Tibetan Buddhist cults (Beyer 1978: 3), had already been an important Buddhist deity in India well before the Kubjikā Tantras developed. Subsequently, by the fifteenth century, she was accepted into the Kaula Śākta pantheon of Bengal which was one of the last outposts of Tantric Buddhism in India. There, identified with Śiva's wife, who nourishes him at the breast like a mother, Tārā continues to be extensively worshipped as a form of Kālī. In this line we may perhaps see an example of the early beginnings of this process of assimilation. Kubjikā, like Kālī, a Kaula goddess who is considered by her devotees to be the ultimate identity of all goddesses, is also identified with Tārā. As she is in the following passage in which, like Lakṣmī for the Vaiṣṇavas or Śakti for the Śaivas, she is the great goddess of Buddhism:

> O mistress of the gods, she, the one Kubjikā is spoken of in many different ways according to the type of ritual (karman), cause and effect. Indeed, that is the truth. She is the one supreme energy. Arisen from Śiva, she bestows Śiva and is Śiva's beloved. O goddess, she is Tārā for the Buddhists . . .
>
> O beloved, there is (only) one power (śakti) at all times (whereas her) names are hundreds. When praised before the Krama (in some form), she manifests in that form in accord with my will.

ekā [ṅ: missing] sānekabhedena [ṅ: missing] kubjikā samudāhṛtā [k: -hṛkā] |
karmabhedena deveśi [gh: deveṣi; ṅ: bhedave] kāryakāraṇabhedataḥ [k: kāryakāreṇabhedataḥ; g: kānyakāraṇa-] ||
*satyaṁ [k, kh, gh, ṅ: na tasya; g: satya] satyaṁ hi tad asti [k: * tanasti; kh, ṅ: hi dasti, g: hri dasti] ekā [ṅ: prakā] sā paramā kalā [kh, g, gh, ṅ: kulā] |*
aśivāt [k, kh, g: aśivā; ṅ: asivā] tu samutpannā śivadā śivavallabhā || bauddhe tārā [kh g: bhārā] tu [gh: tuṁ] sā devi [. . .]
*ekā śaktiḥ [k gh ṅ: śakti] sarvakālaṁ [gh: sarvakā *(?)] tu [kh g ṅ: ] nāmāni śataśaḥ [k, gh, ṅ: satataṁ; kh g: śatataṁ] priye | kramāgre [ṅ: kramāye] stutipūrvaṁ [ṅ: nastupūrvvaṁ] tu tadrūpotthā [k, kh, gh,

ṅ: tadrūpārtha; g: tadrūpotha] mamepsayā || KuKauM 5/186cd-188c, 190cd-191ab.

84. See intro. 1, 84, 405, 647; intro. 3, 151, 207.

85. In the last few lines of this hymn the goddess is addressed as the Bhairavī who is the Space of the Liṅga (liṅgākāśabhairavī). Here she is said to have arisen from and as the Space of the Liṅga. She is both the container and the contained, the Void (above 3/72cd-73) and its Emptiness - the god and the goddess - as the god himself reminds her:

O (goddess whose) face is beloved (by all)! You who move within and outside! Supreme one who is both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent)! Divine one who resides in the great Void! Do you not know, O large eyed one, that you are, just as I am, without either beginning or end?

kin na vetsi priye [k: priya] mukhe bahirantaracāriṇi |
pare [g: para] parāpare divye mahāśūnyanivāsini ||
yathāhaṁ tvaṁ [g: nvaṁ] viśālākṣi anādinidhanāv ubhau [g: -dhanov abhau] |
KRU 2/29-30ab.

The goddess is as the god is. Both are the pure spiritual emptiness of ultimate reality. Both she and the god in their supreme transcendent nature are beyond the world of manifestation just as they are its source. Voidness embraces Voidness in the bliss of the union of Śiva and Śakti. She arises out of the transcendent male principle even as she unites with him, the transcendent source of her own immanent being.

86. The SaṁP concludes this section of the hymn and introduces the next which begins here saying: 'These eulogies in the form of mantras (mantrastava), (that Bhairava uttered) as he saw each goddess, have been explained. Next come Rudra's energies' (ete mantrastavāḥ tattatdevīdarśane kathitāḥ [kathitā] | ataḥ paraṁ rudraśaktyaḥ).

The BB explains that 'Rudra's garland is the (energy of) the New Moon consisting of the phases of creation and the rest. Again, Rudra's garland is worshipped, for example, by means of the mantra (that begins with) 'aghorebhyaḥ'.

rudramālārcite*ty ādi* | rudrasya mālā rudramālā [-lāḥ] | sṛṣṭyādi-amāvāsyāsvarūpā [tṛṣṭyādilamāvāsyā-] | api ca rudramālā aghorebhyo-mantrādinārcitā [raghorabhyaḥ-] |

I suppose the BB is referring here to the Aghora mantra of Svacchanda Bhairava (see above, note to line 25).

87. The BB goes on to explain that 'the energy of Rudra, who moves in the Void' is Nirvāṇa - the liberated state itself. The author of the BB quotes the Uttaratanta (which is not the ŚM) as saying that 'the goddess who moves in the Void is Rudra's energy, worshipped as Rudra's garland.'

rudraśaktiḥ khagī | khagatir yasyā astīti [khagosyāstīti] khagī [khagīḥ] | khagī nirvāṇarūpiṇī ity arthaḥ [mityarthaḥ] | tathā cottare
rudramālārcitā devī rudraśaktiḥ [-kti] khagīśvarī |
*śaktipūrvākṣaro mantro [mantrā] * * * rudramāliketi [ra tā māliketi (?)] |*

88. This and the following lines are missing in the KMT and BB up to line 62.

89. Cf. below, 10/36b where the goddess's Vidyā is similarly said to be 'mounted on yogic power' (siddhyāruhā).

90. According to the SaṁP, after the series of six mantras dedicated to Rudra's energies come these two dedicated to the 'two fierce ones' (ugrādvaya) (ugrādvayaṁ yathā | vrūṁ ugre | ūṁ ugrogranāyiki |)

91. This and the following eight invocations refer to what appears to be, from our limited perspective, the ambiguity of the goddess's nature. The goddess is supremely erotic and yet perfectly chaste. She is the consort of Kāmeśvara, the God of Love and yet she is a solitary ascetic who has shaken off attachment to the world and with it married life. She grants boons and chastizes. She is both male and female. She generates the world by uniting with her male counterpart and so she must be alluring and passionate. But this attraction, necessary for the generation of the world and its sustenance, is Māyā for the ignorant, that is, the attraction they feel for the things of the world that, fleeting and frustrating, are deluding. Thus, although passionate and loving, she also punishes and beats the wicked and the foolish. Again, although as Śiva's consort she is the goddess of Meru, his holy mountain, she remains celibate and her virginal purity is never sullied. As a renouncer she is, as it were, without gender and yet she is both male and female.

92. See above, line 4 of this hymn and notes.

93. The KMT inserts the reading siddhayogeśvarī here (see above, note to line 10) which the BB reads as siddhiyogeśvarī and comments (folio 9a-9b):

> (You are) the mistress of accomplishments and yogis. (By) accomplishment (is meant), for example, (the accomplishment of the) collyrium (by means of which one can see everything). (You are) not only (this but also) the goddess who bestows the accomplishments of Yoga. (You are) the goddess (īśvarī) of accomplished yogis and so are the goddess of the gods, Brahmā and the rest (cf. above SaṁP on line 10).

siddhiyogeśvarī*ty ādi | siddhir añjanādi | na kevalā [kavalā] yogasiddhipradā devī | siddhānāṁ yogināṁ īśvarī | tena brahmādināṁ devānām īśvarīti |*

94. The KMT agrees with the reading of our text. The BB reads siddhimātā - 'the mother of accomplishment' and comments:

The mother who is (the embodiment of) accomplishment is the mother of accomplishment. (She who is) the mother of the lords of accomplishment etc and of the practice and the like of accomplishment is the mother of accomplishment. (She is) the all-pervasive lord, that is, (she is also the god who is) the lord. The same (is said) in the Mahāniśā:

The Yoginī who is the goddess Siddhiyogeśvarī, the mother of accomplishments and Kuleśvarī, her nature the all-pervasive lord and supreme bliss is always victorious. This is Mālinī.
siddhir eva mātā siddhimātā | siddhīśvarādi siddhisevādi teṣāṁ mātā siddhimātā | vibhuḥ prabhur ity arthaḥ | tathā mahāniśāyām:
siddhiyogeśvarī devī siddhimātā kuleśvarī |
vibhurūpā [vibhū-] parānandā yoginī [-ṇī] jayati [-tiḥ] sadā || iti mālinī |

95. In the previous mantra the goddess was praised as the goddess of Kaula Yoga. This and the following four mantras are dedicated to various aspects of the goddess as the Mistress of Speech. First of all she is addressed as the Ocean of the Yoni. This is the triangle in the centre of the hexagon (58/27-28). According to the Tantrasadbhāva, it is the source of scripture (tantraikaṁ tu mayā jñātaṁ yonyārṇavasamudbhavam | TS 1/14ab) and so the goddess who is the Ocean of the Yoni is the source of all mantras and Speech as well as the teaching. When Bhairava addresses the goddess in the Liṅga, in YKh (2) (16/211cd-213ab), he implores her to come forth and reveal her true nature as that.

96. As the Ocean of the Yoni the goddess is Mālinī, the female alphabet. The Assembly of Sounds is the male counterpart. Embodying both aspects, this is one of several perspectives from which the goddess is understood to be both male and female.

The text of the BB (fl. 9b-10b) is badly corrupt here. Nonetheless, it is possible to make out the basic sense. The commentator explains that that the Assembly of Sounds in this case refers to two sets of depositions. The first concerns Mālinī. He begins by saying that 'the form of Mālinī is the mantra which is the first deposition.' Then he lists, it seems, the six long vowels that correspond to the goddess's six faces. These are Ā, Ū, Ī, Ṛ, AU and AI for the faces in the east, above, south, north, west and below (śaktipūrva (?)), respectively. The six - limbed (ṣaḍaṅgā) Mālinī consists of six Yoginīs who are worshipped in her six limbs. These are: Śavarī, Vidujjihvā, Pusavarī (?), Kulāmbikā, Mohanī and Mālinī herself in the Heart, Head, Topknot, Armour, Eyes and Weapon, respectively. Similarly, the deities worshipped in the six limbs of the Assembly of Sounds are, in the same order, Aghora, Amoghānanda, Nīlakaṇṭha, Vīrānanda, Piṅgalānanda and Kapilānanda.

śabdarāśī*tyādi | māliny ādinyāsamantrarūpā sā mālinīty āha [-nīvāha (?)] | vaktre paurve ā [vaktra paurvva 5] | ūrdhve ī [ūrdhva | 3 bh] ū dakṣiṇe | Ṛ [vṛ] uttare | au [3] paścimavaktre [apaścima-] | ai śaktipurve | śivasvaradīrghapūrvasvarāni ṣaṭ |*
paurvāparaparaṁ [-para] yojyaṁ ṣaḍaṅgā parikirtitā |
śavari prāhur [prāhu] hṛdaye vidyujjihvā [vidyujihvā] śiras tathā ||
pusavarī vā śikhā ca kavace ca kulāmbikā [kulāmbikā kavaci] |
mohanī netratrayakaṁ [+ jū] mālinī cāśtrayoḥ japed |
ṣaḍaṅgā [ṣaḍaṅgā] mālinī prāhur (?) yo [yyo] jānāti sa sādhakaḥ |
paṁcāśā sākṣarā mantrāś cānyagranthe [-nnagraṁthe] nirīkṣayet |
apaurvakṣāntanyāsena [-naḥ] mahāpātakanāśanaṁ |
lalāṭādyāḥ śirāntena sa eka ca niyojitaḥ [-taṁ] |
yaś ca [yana] nyāsaṁ [nyāsa] prakurvīta [prakurvvita] siddhir bhavati [vbhavabhati] nānyathā |
śabdarāśī*ty āhuḥ |*
śaktipaurvaṁ [-paurvva] navātmaikaṁ [-kā] avinā khaḍvāṁga ca kā (?) |
ūrdhvavaktrādi saṁsmṛtvā śabdarāśi parāparam [-rā] |
aghoraṁ hṛdayaś caiva amoghānandaḥ [-nda] śirṣakam [śīrṣakā] |
nīlakaṇṭhas tathā [nīlakaṁṭhānanda] śikhā vīrānandas tu kavacam |
piṅgalānando [-nda] netreṣu kapilānando 'strameva [-ndāstrameva] ca |
paurvaparāparaṁ pañca śabdarāśi ṣaḍaṅgagam [-sā] |
ṣaḍaṅgaśabdarāśi tad [sā] yonyārṇave iti [anyonyārarpuvīde] viśeṣaḥ [vīśeṣā] |

97. Elsewhere we are told that Kumārī is the ocean (see below 38/11). Concerning the symbolism of the Ocean, see notes to 14/64cd-66ab below.

98. According to the BB, which reads 'siddhā' in the place of 'siddhavāgeśvarī': Vāgviśuddhā is Tripurā. Śivā is said to be Gaurī. Mātṛkā is Brahmāṇī and the other (Mothers). Siddhā is Mind beyond Mind (manonmanī).

99. All the great Kaula goddesses are embodiments of the energy of Speech (vāc). For example, the goddess Tripurā (who has inherited several important features of the goddess Kubjikā) is also called Mātṛkā in the very first verse of her root Tantra, the NṢA. All the commentators explain that Mātṛkā is the divine form of the energy of the letters of the alphabet with which Tripurā is identified. The BB's gloss implies that as Mātṛkā, Mālinī / Kubjikā is an embodiment of the eight Mothers. This amounts to saying that she is all the energies of the letters and, as the Eight Mothers, with whom Kubjikā is identified (see below 44/35cd-38ab), she governs the eight classes (varga) of letters.

100. At first sight it appears most of these ten names are just epithets of the goddess. We are corrected by the SaṁP which says that ‘ten goddesses are (here) together in one place' (daśa devyaś caikatra [devī caikatra] eva sthitāḥ). The BB adds that the goddess is 'famous as having ten forms' (daśarūpā iti prasiddhā). It seems that the BB is alluding here to a group of goddesses called the Ten Mahāvidyās with which the BB identifies these ten as aspects or forms of the goddess Kubjikā. Although quite popular nowadays in North India and the Kathmandu Valley, the group of Ten Mahāvidyās is unknown to the Kubjikā Tantras.

101. According to the BB, Maṅgalā is the energy of knowledge (jñānaśakti) who thus, along with the previous two entries, completes the standard set of three energies of will, knowledge and action (BB: icchā kriyā maṅgalā jñānaśaktiḥ |).

Siddhalakṣmī is worshipped as the Samayā Vidyā of the goddess Kālasaṁkarṣaṇī in the Kālasaṁkarṣaṇīmata (see Sanderson in Goudriaan 1986: 163ff.). Similarly, the goddess (or to be more precise the Yoginī) Maṅgalā was originally a form of Kālāsaṁkarṣaṇī, the main form of Kālī worshipped in the JY. She ultimately became the form of Kālī who presides over the Five Currents (pañcavāha), which constitutes the doctrinal core of the Kashmiri Kālīkrama. See intro. vol. 1, p. 579 ff..

The appearance of these two important apects of the goddess Kālī namely, Maṅgalā and Siddhalakṣmī, may be taken as evidence that the latter was not inserted into the Mālinīstava by the Newars. It is possible that some link between the goddess Kubjikā and Siddhalakṣmī existed at an early stage of the development of the Kubjikā cult. However, it was not a strong one. Nonetheless, the Newars developed it to such a high degree that Siddhalakṣmī, who was the deepest, most secret aspect of the Malla kings' tutelary, came to be identified with a form of Kubjikā called Vajrakubjī. As Kubjikā is the tutelary of the Malla kings' Brahmin priests (purohita) who initiated them, the political advantages of this identification are obvious. The more secret the form, the more powerful and fundamental Newars consider it to be. Moreover, a tutelary deity grants special favours to her devotees. The king's tutelary grants him his royal power. The priest's tutelary, his priestly power. Thus the priests who had direct access to Kubjikā, the secret form of the king's tutelary, thereby had access to the power behind the king's own power.

This Stava is very well known to Newar initiates and this line, no doubt, is very meaningful for those of them who took part in the Malla king's secret Kaula rituals. It supplies the neccesary imprimatur that authorizes this identification that lies at the very core of the Newars' esoteric network of secret Kaula deities, all of whom draw, beginning with the king's own goddess, energy from Kubjikā through their essential identity with her.

102. All the MSs of the KuKh read 'siddhilakṣmī' as do many of the MSs of the KMT. I have emended to 'siddhalakṣmī', which is the the correct form of the goddess's name. As all the MSs were copied by Newars of the Kathmandu Valley who generally refer to her as Siddhilakṣmī, the change is understandable.

103. BB (fl. 10b-11a): 'Mālinī is a treasure (vibhūti), that is, a special wealth namely, a manifestation of superhuman power (saṁbhūti), which is wealth of the right kind. (Thus) she bestows auspicious wealth'. (vibhūtir ity ādi* | vibhūtisvarūpā mālinī | viśeṣeṇa bhūtiḥ vibhūtiḥ saṁbhūtiḥ samyakprakāreṇa bhūtiḥ [-ti] | subhūtidā sā* |).

The BB goes on to comment on the next word which it reads as gati- 'state' for mati- 'intelligence'. Then the BB reads bhāsvatā- 'luminous' for śāśvatā- 'eternal' in the first instance but goes on to quote from the Tripurārṇavatantra where the reading agrees with that of our text. Note that this reference cannot be traced in the published edition of the Tripurārṇavatantra (see bibliography).

She bestows (the supreme) state (gati), that is, she gives liberation. (She is) luminous (bhāsvatā), that is, her form is light. As (is said) in the Tripurārṇava:

That supreme consciousness which is the light of Moon, Sun and Fire, supreme and eternal is called Śāśvatā (Eternal) and is said to belong to Nārāyaṇī.

(She is) Eternal, that is, she is called imperishable and is well known. She is Supreme knowledge and her nature is (both) supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent). As (is said) in the Uttaratantra:

Paurṇeśvarī, Niśānāthī, Kujeśī and Parameśvarī - the supreme goddess is, in due order, of four kinds. Compassionate, she is Parā.

gatidā mokṣadā* | bhāsvatā jyotirūpā* | yathā tripurārṇave
yā jñāptiḥ [jāptiḥ] paramārūpā [-pāḥ] candrasūryāgnisuprabhā |
śāśvatākhyā parā nityā nārāyaṇyāḥ prakīrttitā* | iti |
śāśvatā avināśākhyā [avināsākhyāḥ] prasiddhā [prasiddhaḥ]* | parā khyātiḥ parāparasvarūpā* | yathā uttare
paurṇeśvarī niśānāthī [nāthīḥ] kujeśī parameśvarī [daraśeśvarī] |
caturvidhā [-dha] parā devī [devīḥ] kramāt [tktramāt] kāruṇyadā pareti ||

104. The goddess Durgā is called Nārāyaṇī as many as fifteen times in a hymnic refrain in the Devīmāhātyma (91/7-21). Nārāyaṇī came to be an epithet of Lakṣmī, Viṣṇu's spouse. However, Coburn (1984: 107) suggests that 'prior evidence does not know such an identification under the name Nārāyaṇī. As a preliminary approximation, then, we may simply take this designation in its literal sense as 'she who is related to Nārāyaṇa''. Nārāyaṇa was associated at an early date with Viṣṇu (see Bhandarkar 1965: 30-31, 35). The intended association of the goddess who slayed the buffaloe demon - Mahiṣasuramardinī, later better known as Durgā, with Viṣṇu by calling her Nārāyaṇī is evident. Indeed, with the passage of time it became one of the most familiar epithets of this goddess. The appearance of this name here and other epithets of the goddess of this Stava in common with those of the goddess of the DM indicates that the Mālinīstava, like other similar hymns to goddesses in the early Bhairavāgamas and Kaula Tantras, was influenced by it. This may not seem surprising but for the fact that Kubjikā and indeed the other Kaula goddesses, in the early period at least, are not prominently identified with the Great Goddess of the DM.

The author of the BB appears to implicitely acknowledge this association by quoting the following verse at the beginning of his commentary on this line that refers to the common form of these ten as Bhagavatī - a name that became the common, generic appellation of the Great Goddess of the DM:

I always bow before the goddess possessed by the Supreme Lord. Supreme, her body is white and, innocent and unique (apūrvā), she is the Moon, pure and (powerful) like the energy of the eminence of Being. She is beautiful, carries weapons, well adorned, her hands the quarters and her nature all things. The best of all things (śreyas), prosperity (śrī) (itself) she is the Goddess (bhagavatī) who is compassion.

yā devī parameśvareṇa vidhṛtā śuklāṅgabhūtā parā [nanā] |
mugdhāpūrvā niśākarā [nisākare] ca vimalā satkoṭitejopamā |
śobhā śastradharā subhūṣaṇayutā dikpānir [-pāni] viśvātmikā
śreyaḥ [śreyaṁ] śrī karuṇāmayī bhagavatī tāṁ namato 'haṁ sadā [sevato haṁ sa yāṁ] |

At the same time, however, the BB seems, at first sight, to ignore the association of Nārāyanī with Viṣṇu. There we read that:

Nārāyaṇī is rājasic and she devours (the universe). As (is said) in the Mahāniśā(tantra):

Nārāyaṇī is the bliss of mankind (nara). At the end of Sound, (her) form is mantra. The first (goddess) of the Vedas, she is praised as supreme. In the centre, she is Mālinī, the light.

nārāyaṇī rājasī [rājaśī] bhakṣaṇī | yathā mahāniśāyāṁ
nārāyaṇī narānandā [-nādyāṁ] nādānte mantrarūpiṇī |
vedādyā paramā gītā madhyagā mālinī vibhā |

Along with this clear identification of Nārāyaṇī with Mālinī, one of Kubjikā's most intimate sonic identities, BB's comments imply that Nārāyaṇī is Kālī rather than the consort of the normally sāttvic Viṣṇu. But this contradiction is only an apparent one. The Kubjikā Tantras, as do the early Śaiva and Kaula Tantras generally, associate Viṣṇu with rajas just as Brahmā and Rudra are linked to sattva and tamas, respectively. (sattvo [k, kh: satva] brahmā rajo viṣṇuḥ [k: viṣṇu] rudrastamasi [k, kh: rudraṁ-] saṁsthitaḥ [k, kh: -tam] | YKh (2) 5/6ab). Moreover, Kubjikā is occasionally identified with Viṣṇu's energy. For example, Bhairava praises her saying: 'You are Viṣṇu's energy, Khageśī (the Bird Goddess). The Command that pulses radiantly (is you) Kaulikī' (viṣṇuśaktiḥ [k, kh: -śakti] khageśī [k: -śi] tvaṁ ājñā sphurati [k, kh: -spharati] kaulikī | YKh (2) 19/127ab).

The JY similarly identifies Kālī with Nārāyaṇī. For example, in a hymn dedicated to Kālī, Bhairava invokes her saying:

O mistress of obstacles! O Nārāyaṇī! O Mārutī! O deity of Yama! O peaceful one! O purifying fire! O Nairṛiti! O Pūtanī! O Bhairavī! O deity of the great Varuṇa! O Brāhmī! O Vārāhī! O naked one! O you who wear the skin of the lord of the elephants (as your) clothes! O Raudrī! O Cāmuṇḍā! O fierce Caṇḍā! O Caṇḍinī! O Caṇḍakāpālinī! You whose form is Bhairava! O Nārāyaṇī! come!

vighneśvari nārāyaṇi māruti yamadevate [kh, g: yamadaivate] śānte pāvaki nairṛti pūtani bhairavi mahāvaruṇadevate brāhmi vārāhi nagnadehe gajapaticarmāmbare raudri cāmuṇḍe caṇḍacaṇḍe caṇḍini caṇḍakāpālini bhairavarūpe samāgaccha nārāyaṇi | JY ṣaṭka 4 MS K fl. 79b.

Finally, note that Nārāyaṇī, like the other female beings invoked here, is in these Tantras not only a form of the Great Goddess, she is also one of the many Yoginīs that populate them. Mothers (mātṛkā), Yoginīs and the Great Goddess are all Kālī according to the Kālīkrama, just as they are all Kubjikā according to the Śrīkrama.

105. This and the following nine lines are missing in the KMT and hence in the BB also. All the other sources except the SKh suggest the reading ūcur devi - (they) said: O goddess! - which the SaṁP glosses: 'these attendants of the goddess themselves spoke (ūcuḥ) thus'. I have chosen to follow the SKh rather than adopt a reading that implies an anomolous change in the basic structure of the Stava, which is uttered in praise of the goddess by Bhairava alone.

106. Kaula initiates are called vīras, lit. 'heroes'. Their female counterparts and, for some rituals, consorts, are called Yoginīs.

107. This is the energy of the New Moon in the centre of the maṇḍala, between the ascending and descending breath (3/43). Representing the energy of the goddess's empowering gazing, it is located at the End of the Sixteen (ṣoḍaśānta), which is the highest point in the ascending development of the sixteen energies of the Moon. From there the goddess in this form rains down the stream of nectar by which the consecration (abhiṣeka) takes place that empowers the postulant to assume the condition of an initiate (5/62-64).

108. It appears from the context in which they are mentioned that the Siddhas to which this mantra refers are not the accomplished adepts of the Tantras but semi-divine being who, like the gandharvas, gods and other celestial beings mentioned together with them, live in the heavens, on the sides of mount Kailāsa and other sacred places. According to the MBh some live in the Himālayas near the hermitage of Kaṇva (MBh ādiparvan, 70/15). Others live in the palace of Yama, the lord of the dead, and serve him (MBh sabhāparvan 8/29). These beings are so closely related and similar in nature that they are sometimes confused. Thus a gandharva born to Prajāpati Kaśyapa by his wife Prādhā was also said to be a Siddha (MBh ādiparva 65/46 see Mani 1984: 716). In short, the goddess is praised here as the mother of all such supernatural beings as well.

109. Out of all the epithets that appear in the DM, the most common one is Caṇḍikā which is applied to the goddess no less than twenty-nine times. Indeed, this is probably her most specific proper name, one by which she is still called all over South Asia. Coburn (1984 : 95) notes that: 'The primacy of this epithet, in terms of the frequency of its occurrence is reinforced by certain instances of its usage. The one to whom Kālī returns after slaying the Asuras Caṇḍa and Muṇḍa (DM 87/22,24), from whom, by implication, Kālī had emerged (ibid. 87/5) is called Caṇḍikā (at ibid. 88/12) and it is around Caṇḍikā that the *śakti*s of the various male deities gather. It is Caṇḍikā who, (at ibid. 88/52ff.) solves the riddle of Raktabīja's apparent invincibility. It is Caṇḍikā against whom Śumbha turns (ibid. 89/6) after skirmishing with lesser goddesses. And, most convincing, although the Goddess into whom the lesser goddesses are resumed (ibid. 90/4) is there called Ambikā, the name Caṇḍikā is subsequently applied to the supreme form of the goddess.'

Another reason to consider this name as specific to the goddess of the DM when it was compilled is the interesting and surprising fact that the name Caṇḍikā and the like (Caṇḍī, Caṇḍā) has virtually no earlier history in Sanskrit. Moreover, apart from the Durgāstotra found in the MBh, which may well be a late addition, it does not appear in either of the two great Sanskrit Epics (ibid.). These facts suggests that the Great Goddess was not a major presence in Sanskritic Hinduism prior to the 5th or 6th centuries. Archeological evidence further supports this view. By the 9th or 10th century when the Bhairava and Kaula Tantras were blooming, she appears as powerful hidden presence recognisable in the names and attributes of countless goddesses, great and small. There are numerous examples in the Kubjikā Tantras. Amoghacaṇḍikā is one of the names of the goddess emanated from Kubjikā's head (i.e Śirodūtī) (ṢSS 13/188b). Caṇḍā is the first of the goddesses associated with the thirty-two syllables of the Aṣṭākapāla mantra. Caṇḍī, Mahācaṇḍī and Pracaṇḍā receive animal sacrifice to the north of the firepit in a fire sacrifice described in the ṢSS (15/181). Examples can be multiplied. The power of the goddess Caṇḍikā and her presence in the Kubjikā cult is further affirmed by the repeated recommendation to practice spiritual discipline in temples dedicated to her (e.g. ṢSS 16/33).

In this and the following eight lines Kubjikā is covertly identified with four primary Yoginīs who attend on the god in the Bhairava cult expounded in the Brahmayāmala. These are Raktā, Karālā, Caṇḍākṣī and Mahocchuṣmā who are worshipped to the east, south, west and north of the god. (pūrvapatre tathā raktāṁ karālāṁ [k kh: raktā karālā] dakṣiṇe [k: kṣīdaṇe] nyaset | caṇḍākṣīṁ [k: -ṅgī; kh: -kṣī] paścime [k: pakṣime] nyasya mahocchuṣmāṁ [k: mahāchuṣmā] tu cottare || BY 25/40). These are the Yoginīs the goddess meets in the main sacred seats. In that case, as in this one, we observe how cardinal elements of the primary Kāpālika oriented cult of the Bhairava Tantras, in the ambience of which Kaulism originally developed, are tacitly incorporated into the identity of the goddess of this Kaula cult, which is one of its finest fruits.

The BB ignores this dimension of the goddess explaining instead (fl. 11a-11b) that the goddess is called Raktacaṇḍā because 'she is red and fierce by nature. She is red like the radiant energy of thousands of millions of rising suns. (The goddess) Caṇḍā has the form of Rudracaṇḍā and the rest' (raktacaṇḍāsvarūpā raktā bālārkasahasrakoṭitejopamā | caṇḍā [candā] rudracaṇḍādirūpā |).

Rudracaṇḍā is the first of a set of Nine Durgās. The worship of these goddesses on nine consecutive nights in the autumn and, in some places, also in the spring is very popular wherever there are Hindus. When worshipped by the Newars, these possess, as often happens with Newar deities, both public forms and secret counterparts. The public forms are, essentially, the eight Mothers with modifications designed to reach the required figure nine. Their esoteric equivalent are the so-called Nine Caṇḍās. This set of nine is also specifically Tantric and probably older than their Purāṇic equivalents. Rao (1971 vol. 1 part 2 p. 356) explains: 'Durgā is often worshipped in the form of nine figures, one of them set up in the middle and the remaining eight in the positions corresponding to the eight points of the compass. They are all seated figures having a lotus as their seat. Instead of actual figures, we may introduce in their respective places their *tattvākṣara*s, in the yantra.'

This group is so important for Newar Kaulas that they commonly worship them in this way in their daily, obligatory rites (nityapūjā). A typical Newar liturgy of this sort incorporates the worship of the goddess Ugracaṇḍā. Also called Caṇḍī, she is clearly the goddess Mahiṣāsuramardinī - the Slayer of the Buffalo Demon eulogized in the DM. She is visualized as having eighteen arms and, brilliant like heated gold, she is well adorned and sits on a lion. Below her is the buffalo Mahiṣa whose head she has just severed and from whose body emerges the demon. Mantras are recited to the goddess's seats namely, Mahiṣa, the lion, and the demons Śumbha and Niśumbha. Rao (ibid.) refers to the Skandayāmala as his source. This must have been a standard source for the iconography of this group which is also quoted in the 11th or 12th century Pratiṣṭhālakṣaṇasāra-samuccaya (PLSS 6/134-141). According to Rao Rudracaṇḍā holds the tuft of hair of the demon, a shield, bell, mirror, bow, flag, double-headed drum, and noose in eight of her left hands with the ninth pointing the index finger threateningly (in tarjanīmudrā). The right hands carry a javelin, axe, spear, thunderbolt, conch, gaud, cane, arrow and wheel. She is surrounded by the eight Caṇḍās who have only sixteen arms but otherwise look exactly as she does except for their colour. Their names and colour, as reported by Rao on the authority of the Skandayāmala, and as they appear in most Newar liturgies agree closely. They are: Rudracaṇḍā (yellow gorocana), Pracaṇḍā (red), Caṇḍogrā (black), Caṇḍanāyikā (blue), Caṇḍā (white), Caṇḍavatī (grey), Caṇḍarūpā (yellow), and Aticaṇḍikā (pink).

110. The following is missing in the KMT and BB up to line 84.

111. The emended reading in the BB is: mahotsukā yogapriyā i.e '(she is the goddess) who is very zelous and likes union.' The BB explains that the first word means that the goddess is pleasing by nature. The BB proposes two explanations of the statement that she likes union. One is that she 'delights in the union of the female and the male organ'. Another is that 'she likes Yoga, which is the practice of (mastery of) the vital breath, and contemplates herself'.

mahotsukā [mahosukṣmā] priyasvarūpā ity arthaḥ | yogapriyā [-priyāḥ] bhagaliṅgasaṁyogapriyā | api ca yogavāyusādhanapriyā [yogavāyū-] ātmālokinī iti sā |

112. The four goddesses, Jayā (Victory), Jayantī (Victorious), Ajitā (Unconquered) and Aparājitā (Unconquered by Others), as their names imply, embody, victory and success. Aparājitā is typical of the others in this respect. In the Yaśastilaka (3/459) she appears as a goddess of war and victory. She incarnates in the swords of kings and assumes the form of bows, arrows and other weapons. The Īśānaśivagurupaddhati (mantrapāda 23/51) recommends the worship of Aparājitā as beneficial to kings as she ensures victory in battle.

As embodiments of victory and kingly might these goddesses have a long history. They already appear in the Arthaśāstra which was written not latter than 150 CE and possibly as early as the 4th century BCE (Rangarajan 1987: 18-21). There we find they are called Aparājitā, Apratihatā, Jayantā, and Vijayantā. As a standard set of four, these goddesses are commonly found together in both Tantric and Purāṇic texts (see Dyczkowski 1988: 37 and Goudriaan 1985: 48) together with their brother, a celestial musician (gandharva) called Tumburu (also spelt Tumbaru). They are integrated into the Garbhadhātumaṇḍala, which along with the Vajradhātumaṇḍala is one of the two main maṇḍalas of the Kriyā and Caryā Buddhist Vajrayāna Tantras. They are located in the northern corner of Mañjuśrī's mansion of this complex maṇḍala (Snodgrass 1988: 391). They are particularly associated with the Śaivāgamas of the Left Current (vāmaśrotas). According to the JY (ṣaṭka 1 MS K fl. 177a), the Saṁmohanatantra, which is considered to be a major Tantra of this group, was brought down to earth by Tumburu and his four sisters. In the JY (ibid. folio 22b), they are worshipped together on the four petals of a lotus upon which Tumburu stands or sits (see Dyczkowski 1988: 113 and 150). These associations are not forgotten in the Kubjikā Tantras. In the Stavarāja of the KuKauM, Bhairava addresses the goddess saying:

(You are) Jayā, Vijayā, Jayantī, and Aparājitā. (You) reside in the middle of Tumbaru's seed syllable! Salutations to (you who) frees from sin!

*jayā (gh: jayāṁ) ca vijayā (gh: vijayāṁ) caiva jayantī (gh: jayatī; ṅ: jayaṁntī) cāparājitā (gh: * (?) rājitā) ǀ tumbarubījamadhyasthe namas te pāpamocanī ǁ KuKauM 5/205cd-206ab

As a group of four and the embodiment of victory, they protect the quarters. But, although an ideal number, they are not always found together. According to the Vāmanapurāṇa, three of them - Jayantī, Aparājitā and Jayā are ṛṣi Gautama's daughters, by his wife Ahalyā (Mani 1984: 352). Sometimes we find just two as happens in the version of this line in the KMT where only Jayantī and Ajitā are mentioned. The BB commenting on this version says:

You are Jayantyā. The meaning is that Jayantyā (the Conqueror) deludes the (whole) universe. Ajitā conducts sound polity (naya). The same (is said) in the Uttaratantra:

Ajitā, who burns away sins, is power, the goddess, Śivā, within Śiva, who contemplates Śiva, bestows bliss, eternal and pure.

tvaṁ jayantyā ǀ jayantyā jagatmohinī ity arthaḥ ǀ ajitā nayaṁ nayatīty ajitā ǀ tathā cottare [-ra] śaktīśvarī [śakteśvarī] śivārūpā śivāntā śivabhāvinī ǀ sukhadā śāśvatā śuddhā ajitā pāpadāhanīti ǁ

Similarly, Jayā and Vijayā are treated in the SaṁP as a separate pair. There we read: Jayā and Vijayā should be known to be the guardians of the door. The rest are deities of the road. (jayā vijayā ca dvārapālakau jñeyau ǀ śeṣā mārgadevatāḥ). These two figure together, for example, in the Ś*rītattvanidhi*, as attendants of the six-faced Kārttikeya (Rao 1971: vol. 2, part 2 p. 437). Elsewhere, Rao describes Jayā and Vijayā as a pair. They have four hands in which they hold a spear, lotus, rosary and make a boon-bestowing gesture. They both sit on lions (ibid. p. 368). As an independent goddess Jayantī is represented as a very beautiful woman. In her hands she holds a thorn, spear, sword and shield. She is worshipped out of gratitude by those who are happy (ibid. 369). Aparājitā rides a lion. She is a very strong woman who holds Śiva's bow, an arrow, a sword and shield. She has matted hair with a crescent moon. She wears the snake Vāsuki as a wristlet. (ibid.). The function of all four as doorkeepers is illustrated by Rao (ibid. vol. 1, part 2 p. 361-362) who refers to Jayā, Vijayā, Ajitā and Aparājitā along with four other goddesses as doorkeepers of a temple dedicated to the goddess Gaurī.

113. The BB quotes the following from an unidentified source:

She who enfatutes Rudra, is fearsome, her nature passion, is Kujā, the Supreme. (She is) Kālarātrī (the Dark Night) and the goddess Kriyā (Action). By (her very) nature she is the mother, the first (of all beings). For that reason (the goddess) who enfatuates is Rudra's mother and she is Mālinī.

rudrasaṁmohanī ghorā kāmarūpā kujā parā |
kālarātrī kriyā [kṛapā] devī sāmbikādyāsvarūpiṇīti ||
tena kāraṇena [kāraṇā] mohinī [hinī] rudramātā [rudramiti] sā mālinī* |

Cf. above, line 7 where the goddess is said to enfatuate Śrīkaṇṭha.

114. Cf. above 3/63-64ab.

115. The sonic form of the god, identified as the supreme and first teacher is the seed-syllable called Navātman with which this line begins. Cf. 2/29-30ab. The Ṭ (fl. 177a) quoted there explains, as does the BB (fl. 11b-12a) here, that the nine letters of Navātaman correspond to the nine modalities of the three lineages (ovalli):

You yourself (O goddess) generate the bliss of Navātman (also: You generate the novel bliss of the Self). (The goddess's) nature is 'nava' that is, novel (navīna) and also that (she is) the essential nature of the division (of the tradition) into nine signs. Or (else another meaning is that the goddess is) Kujā and her Self is the Self of the god. How is it that (she has) a nine-fold nature (navasvarūpā)? (There is a verse concerning this that says):

Due to the difference between the three lineages, she is the Aged One, the Middling and the Youngest. Each one has three divisions. (The wise) say that the three are the one (goddess).

tvaṁ navātme*ty ādi* | tvam [tvaṁm] eva navātmānandakāriṇīti | navasvarūpā navīnasvarūpā [navīṇa-] | atha ca navāṅkabhedasvarūpā | atha ca navasvarūpā kujā tasyā ātmā devātmā | kathaṁ navasvarūpā ulitritayabhedena [ūlitraya-] jyeṣṭhā [jyeṣṭha] madhyamā [+ kaniṣṭa] kanyasā [kenyāsā] | ekaikasyās trayo [ekaikasyānstrayo] bhedāḥ [bhedā] trīni ekāṁ [ekaṁ] vadanti tām [sā] ||

The BB goes on to quote the Kulākulārṇavatantra that presents the nine letters of Navātaman, and their locations in the body ranging from the feet to above the head. This is followed by another verse in which the letters of Navātman are given in the standard code based on the Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi) (cf. below 19/77cd-78).

The SaṁP explains this line from a different point of view. Referring to the goddess, the SaṁP says that '(her) abode is the location of the circle of the teachers associated with Navātman'. (navātmāgurumaṇḍalasthānanivāsā [-saḥ]) In other words, the expression 'navātman' refers to the use of this seed-syllable mantra in relation to the placement of the teachers in the Gurumaṇḍala. A major feature of the Gurumaṇḍala are nine nine-petalled lotuses corresponding to the nine letters of Navātman arranged and worshipped in the maṇḍala.

116. The SaṁP explains: There (in that case) when following the path, once performed Kaula practice (caryā) at each place and time, he should move (on). (The following) explains (how that is done) there (in that case) according to whether it is a public (laukika) or Kaulika (practice) (tatra mārgagamane evaṁ kaulacaryāṁ sthale sthale kāle kāle kṛtvā gacchet | tatra laukikakaulikabhedenāha).

I suppose the public practice is simply the repetition of mantra whereas Kaulika practice also requires the ingestion of the Heroes' drink (vīrapāna). This is, basically, wine or some other alcoholic drink. Although this is literally done, the texts take care to point out that the true wine is an inner, spiritual drink. YKh (1), for example, explains that:

The one who knows the nine transmissions (navakrama) and is sustained by Kramayoga should drink the Heroes' drink (vīrapāna) in the Wheel between the two channels (of the vital breath) (kodaṇḍa).

navakramapravettāraṁ [k, kh, gh: -kramepravetrāraṁ] kramayogāvadhiṣṭhitam [k, kh, gh: -dhiṣṭitaṁ] |
vīrapānaṁ pibec cakre [k, kh, gh: pive cakrai] kodaṇḍadvayamadhyage [k, kh, gh: -gām] || YKh (1) 6/23.

In other words this wine should be drunk by one who knows the full Krama in all the nine modalities represented by Navātman. He should do this in the Wheel within which Kuṇḍalinī rises between the two channels of the ascending and descending breath, Iḍā and Piṅgalā. The Heroes' drink is discussed below in 46/278cd-305ab.

117. The Five Nectars (pañcāmṛta) are common offerings in all kinds of Sanskritic rituals. They are normally milk, coagulated or sour milk, butter, honey and sugar. Or else, they may be the five products of a cow (pañcagavya) namely, cow urine and dung, curd, milk and clarified butter (see ŚŚP vol. 2, p. 30). In Kaula ritual these five may be replaced or supplimented by Kaula sacrificial substances (kuladravya) that would normally be considered to be impure. The Kubjikā Tantras refer to them as the Five Jewels (pañcaratna). The Ṭ explains:

The sacrifice (yāga) should be performed in this way at the (proper) times. With what sacrificial substances? With the sacrificial substances offered by heroes (vīrabhūti) and the like along with wine and incense and the Kula substances that have been well purified (and are offered) along with mantras. The Kula substances are corporeal substances. These substances are the Five Jewels that come from our body. They are sprinkled with liquor (and offered).

evaṁ kāleṣu [k kh: kālair] yāgaṁ kārayet | kena kena dravyeṇa [kh: dravyeṇā] vīrabhūtyādikais tathā madyacandanaiḥ [k: maghacandanaḥ; kh: madyacaṁdanaḥ] tathā susaṁskṛtaiḥ kuladravyair mantrayutaiḥ kuladravyaiḥ śārīrakadravyaiḥ pañcaratnaiḥ tair naḥ śarīrotthair [k: tannocchaśararotthair; kh: tannoccheḥ śararotthair] dravyaiḥ alinā [kh: alima] siñcitaiḥ | Ṭ MS K fl. 96a

The Five Substances are blood, meat, bone, fat and skin from the head (asṛg rudhira 1 | pala māṁsa 2 | asthi phaṭ 3 | majjā gudam | kapālodbhūtaṁ tvak kṛtiḥ | Ṭ MS K fl. 79b). These five are sometimes linked to the five mantras called the Five Jewels which we may deduce from the seed-syllable at the beginning of this line that appears to be (despite the diversity and corruption of the readings of the manuscripts), the seed-syllable of the Five Jewels (see chapter 62 below). Corresponding to the five worlds (loka) of Gagana (sky), Svarga (heaven), Pavana (wind), Martya (mortals) and Nāga (snakes), these mantras are represented by their initial letters, Ga Sa Pa Ma and Na. The mantras invoke the millions of Yoginīs who reside in these worlds and worship the Five Brahmās that govern them namely, Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśvara and Sadāśiva. In the body they are the lords of the five bodily substances that draw their name from these five mantras. These are: feces (viśvakṣāra), urine, blood, fat and semen. They are said to be the 'holy, imperishable nectar'. Below, the goddess is described holding a jar containing the five substances of the immortals (amarīdravya) (29/43), which presumably are these ones.

ratnāni ratnapañcakasya [kh: ratnaṁ-; k kh: -ka] brahmāviṣṇusadāśivāntāni viśvakṣāra-mūtra-rakta-vasā-śukrāntāni [k: -kṣārasūtrarakta-vaṇāṇḍakrāntāni; kh: -raktavaśāśukrā-] pañcaratnāni [k kh: -ratnā] | Ṭ MS K fl. 12b.
ga sa pa ma [k kh: va] na iti ratnapañcakasya saṅketaṁ | [k kh: + ratnapañcakaṁ

saṅketāṁ] | ke te ratnapañcakāḥ | brahma-viṣṇu-rudra-īśvara -sadāśivāḥ [k kh: -śivaḥ] | te ca pavitrā [kh: pavitrāḥ] avināśā [k kh: -nāśāḥ] amṛtam | ibid. fl. 92b.

The SaṁP does not go into all these details. It just says that this line should be read together with the previous one. Commenting on the previous line Mukundarāja explains: 'once performed Kaula practice (caryā) at each place and time, he should move (on).' Here he goes on to explain that the seed-syllable at the beginning of this line is to be recited when one who, practicing in this way, goes to another country. (SaṁP: pūrveṇānvayaḥ | idaṁ bījaṁ [ayaṁ bījo] deśāntaragamane paṭhati |)

118. The SaṁP defuses the obvious meaning of this line. Instead of the goddess relishing the human flesh offered to her by her devotees in the succession of their seven last lives, Mukundarāja says that the goddess 'brings about the recollection of other births and the hymn (does so) also' (janmāntara-smaraṇakāriṇī stavaś ca tathā). The goddess's devotees may take the flesh off their own living bodies to offer it to the goddess. So this is not a certain reference to human sacrifice.`

119. The author of the SaṁP perceives in this statement a reference to three goddesses namely, Alipriyā (She Who Likes Liquor), Phalgupriyā (She Who Likes Meat) and Aliphalgupriyā (She Who Likes Both Liquor and Meat) (devyas trayaḥ | alipriyā phalgupriyā aliphalgupriyā ceti).

120. The author of the SaṁP accepts the unanimous reading of all the MSs of our text. But instead of understanding the vocative singular mantravidyāvratodbhāsini as referring to the goddess to whom the hymn is addressed, as grammar demands, he prefers to understand it as referring to three separate goddesses and says:

> The three goddesses should be known to be Mantrodbhāsinī (Illuminatrix of Mantras), Vidyodbhāsinī (Illuminatrix of Vidyās) and Vratodbhāsinī (Illluminatrix of Vows). Moreover, the (male) attendants have similar names. There are many people there (attending on the goddess) who are skilled in (the use of) mantras, expert (recitors of) Vidyās and well versed (in the observence of) vows.

mantrodbhāsinī vidyodbhāsinī [-dbhāṣiṇī] vratodbhāsinī [-dbhāṣiṇī] ca jñeyās trayo devyaḥ [devyo] | gaṇakāś [gaṇakā] ca tādṛśīnāmāḥ [-nāmā] | tatra mantracaturā vidyānipuṇā vratatatparāḥ puruṣā bahavaḥ santi | muṇḍārūḍhā kaṅkālārūḍhā kapālārūḍhā divyārūḍhā caryānurūḍhā ca pañca.

121. According to the SaṁP: Five (goddesses are mentioned here namely) Muṇḍārūḍhā (Mounted on a Severed Head), Kaṅkālārūḍhā (Mounted on a Skeleton), Kapālārūḍhā (Mounted on a Skull), Divyārūḍhā (Mounted on the Divine) and Caryānurūḍhā (Intent on Practice).

122. A form of caryā is called vīracaryā. Also known as vīravrata, this is probably the 'Divine Practice' (divyacaryā) to which this line of the hymn refers. It involves external and internal union with the female attendants at sacred sites, particularly where the eight Mothers are said to reside. The adept is admonished not to restrain his desires. Rather he should practice the Conduct of Desire (icchācaryā) which allows him to do whatever he likes on condition that he continues to recite the goddess's Vidyā without a break. Moreover, he should be devoted to the eight Mothers. Practiced secretly at night, especially during the dark lunar fortnight, it is a part of noctural practice (niśācāra) (concerning which see intro. Chapter 3, p. 514 ff.).

123. The SaṁP explains that: ‘She is the goddess of the leftovers’ (ucchiṣṭadevī sā). The goddess Mātaṅgī is known to the Kubjikā Tantras as the deity of the sacred seat Trisrota, otherwise known as Mātaṅgapīṭha. The Mātaṅgas are low caste sweepers who are constantly in contact with polluting refuse. This goddess is particularly associated, as the SaṁP points out, with the remnants of food. These are especially polluting but, for that very reason, are considered to be particularly powerful ritual substances when handled correctly. This is particularly the case with the remnants of food offerings to the gods (see Malamoud 1998 who discusses this with reference to the Vedic sacrifice. See also Kramrisch 1981: 66 with reference to AV 11/7/1-3).

The continuing popularity of this antinomian goddess as one of the ten Mahāvidyās attests to the importance of such manipulations in a culture where pollution is a prime concern. The following myth concerning the orgins of this goddess as Ucchiṣṭamātaṅgī is found in the Śaktisaṁgamatantra (Chinnamastakhaṇḍa 6/30-38). Although this Tantra post-dates the development of the Kubjikā Tantras considerably, this myth, presented and analysed by Kinsley in the following passage (Kinsley 1997: 213, 215-216), may well have been known to the author of the SaṁP. Anyway, it tells us a great deal about this aspect of the goddess Kubjikā, here addressed as Kulamātaṅgī:

> Once upon a time, Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī went to visit Śiva and Pārvatī. Viṣṇu and Lakṣmī gave Śiva and Pārvatī fine foods, and some pieces fell on the ground. From these remnants arose a maiden endowed with fair qualities. She asked for leftover food (ucchiṣṭa). The four deities offered her their leftovers as prasāda (food made sacred by having been tasted by deities). Śiva then said to the attractive maiden: "Those who repeat your mantra and worship you, their activities will be fruitful. They will be able to control their enemies and obtain the objects of their desires." From then on this maiden became known as Ucchiṣṭamātaṅginī. She is the bestower of all boons. [. . .]
>
> Not only does Mātaṅgī request ucchiṣṭa in this story, but texts describing her worship specify that devotees should offer her ucchiṣṭa with their hands and mouths stained with ucchiṣṭa; that is, worshipers should be in a state of pollution, having eaten and not washed. This is a dramatic reversal of the protocols for the worship of Hindu deities. [. . .] For some Hindus it is exhilarating, if not spiritually liberating, to intensely embrace the forbidden, to come to terms with it once and for all and in so doing to overcome its hold over them. Ucchiṣṭamātaṅgī, as the embodiment of the polluted, is the goddess by means of whom one can come directly to terms with pollution. As such, she is both powerful and liberating.

As a Newar, Mukundarāja would have known about Mātaṅgī as the goddess of special rocks called *chwāsa*s. These are set up at crossroads as places where remnants of animal sacrifice and other polutted things such as clothes worn by people recently dead can be disposed of. The dangerous Mātaṅgī is believed to accept these dangerous materials as offerings and duly consumes their polluting essence (Levi 1992: 84-85)

124. The goddess is also called Avadhūtā above in lines 4 and 59.

125. This and the following two lines refer to the goddess in the form of her Vidyā. The SaṁP says that: 'The syllable AIṀ can be conjoined everywhere to (all) fifty letters. That is the case also with the syllable OṀ and so that is a praṇava'. The commentary goes on to explain that each of these syllables except SVADHĀ corresponds to one of the six limbs of a mantra deposited on the body. The SaṁP (fl. 8a-8b) adds: 'Here (in this case) SVADHĀ is uttered when food is offered to the ancestors (piṇḍadāna). Placing (the food) along with SVADHĀ serves to make known (one's intention to make this offering). (She is) transcendent and full because transcending Yoga and being the beginning of Yoga (she is) full, that is, (her nature) is the complete absolute.

aiṁkāraḥ sarvatra varṇeṣu pañcāśatsu yujyate | tathā oṁkāraḥ tena praṇavaś ca | jātiśabdena hṛdayādiṣaḍaṅgabodhaḥ | namo hṛdi | svāhā śirasi | vaṣaṭ śikhā | huṁ kavacaḥ | phaṭ astrakaḥ | atra svadheti pāṭhas tu piṇḍadāne nyāse svadhāsahite [-ta] jñāpanārthaḥ | uttīrṇapūrṇā yogottīrṇena yogārambhena pūrṇā pūrṇabrahmarūpā |

We remind the reader that this statement in the Mālinīstava is suprising in view of the repeated assertion made in the Kubjikā Tantras, especially the MBT itself, that the mantras of this school are free of these, essentially Vedic seed syllables (see above, note to 4/10cd-11ab and below 9/70).

126. The main mantra, that is, the Samayā Vidyā of the goddess Kubjikā consists of thirty-two syllables (see below 8/42cd ff. and 9/37ab ff.). It becomes the forty-two syllable Vidyā by adding the Five Praṇavas at the beginning in the forward order and at the end in the reverse order. But although there seems to be little reason to doubt that this is what is meant here, the SaṁP explains this line differently. According to the SaṁP, the mantra of thirty-two syllables meant here is the one called Ghorikāṣṭaka (dvātriṁśākṣaraḥ ghorikāṣṭakaḥ) lit. the Octad of Ghorikās. This mantra, also called Aghoryaṣṭaka, is found in the KMT (18/33 ff.). It is presented below in chapter twenty-one (21/1-29).

Again, the SaṁP glosses the word both to mean 'the letters Sa and Ha. The group of five consists of the Five Praṇavas. They encapsulate (each of) the fifty letters' (ubhayaḥ sakāro [-ra] hakāraḥ | pañcakaḥ pañca praṇavāḥ [-vaḥ] paṁcāśadvarṇeṣu saṁpuṭena sthitāḥ). In other words, there is a series of fifty mantras. I suppose that each mantra begins with the Five Praṇavas in the forward order followed by the letter Sa. Then comes the particular letter in the series. This is followed by Ha and then, as is normally the case, the Five Praṇavas in the reverse order.

127. The SaṁP comments briefly saying that the goddess is each letter encapsulated by the seed syllable AIṀ (vāgbhavapuṭitamātṛkā). See the previous note concerning the mantra of forty-two syllables.

128. According to the SaṁP it is not the rosary that is related to the left hand (vāmahastasthita), it is related to the goddess who is on the 'left-hand' path. But this interpretation would probably make little sense to the author(s) of this hymn because the distinction between 'left-hand' and 'right-hand' in this sense was unknown when it was written. Mukundarājā adds that according to the meaning transmitted by the tradition (sampradāyārtha) this mantra is recited when invoking the deity.

hsauṁ vāmahastasthitā [-sthito] ca kaiḥ pūjyase ity ataḥ punar āha | [. . .] āvāhane paṭhed iti saṁpradāyārthaḥ |

129. According to the SaṁP: 'the meaning is that the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is a mountain. Having crossed over (it) and gone to the end of it (the goddess) resides (there).' (saṁvartāmaṇḍalo nāma parvataḥ | samuttīrya gate tadante sthitā ity ādi prāyaḥ). Apparently what Mukundarājā is saying is that the goddess resides on the peak of the mountain-like Saṁvartāmaṇḍala. But if he literally means that the maṇḍala is a mountain this interpretation, as those of some of the others lines, seems forced. We are probably directed here to think of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala as a tapering cone or pyramid. The top of this 'mountain' would be the Point (bindu) in the centre of the two dimensional projection of the maṇḍala. The goddess resides in and beyond this Point in the centre of the maṇḍala.

130. According to the the SaṁP, the goddess whose look is gracious is the goddess of that sacred place (sthaladevīnāma).

131. Located at the End of the Twelve above the head, this Wheel is the highest and final stage before complete merger into the deity takes place. See intro. vol. 1, p. 86.

132. The SaṁP comments: 'And there are many mad (with ecstacy) there!' (tatra conmattakā bahavaḥ)

133. The SaṁP comments: 'There are women attendants there who are skilled in (the practice of) Yoga' (tatra yoganipuṇavanitā gaṇāḥ santi). The KMT resumes from here.

134. The SaṁP explains that: 'there all are capable of wandering in the Sky and attain (the power) to travel in the netherworlds' (tatra sarve khe codbhramatuṁ śāktāḥ | pātālagamanaṁ ca labhante).

135. The SaṁP explains that this line is an eulogy of the fruits (phalastuti) of reciting this hymn.

136. SaṁP: (The teachers) also wish (that the name) Kubjā should be taken at the beginning (of each of the names) Skanda and the rest in such way that in that case (we get the form) Kubjāskanda, Kubjāgovinda etc which are the six deities seen (in the course of the god's) pilgrimage. They also consider that lotuses and the like should be offered to the Mothers.
skandādiṣu kubjādigrahaṇam apīcchanti [-ntī] | evaṁ tatra [yatra] yathā kubjāskanda - kubjāgovinda [skandakuku] ity ādi ṣaḍ devatā yātrāyāṁ dṛśyante | padmādyarpanam api mātṛkā manyante [-nta] |

Mukundarāja says that this is an alternative explanation of this line, presumably with respect to the immediate sense. Indeed, it is hard to understand how the teachers prior to Munkarāja, to whom he alludes arrived at this explanation.

137. The series of Nāthas represent the letters and form a part of the Vīrāvalikrama (lit. 'the transmission of the series of Heroes), concerning which see below, note to line 124.

138. We have seen that Karavīra is a well known cremation ground generally believed to have been located next to what is now the city of Kolhapur near Mombay in Mahārāṣṭra (see intro. vol. 1, p. 557 ff.). According to the Kashmiri Kālīkrama, Karavīra is the place where Siddhas and Yoginīs gather to form the assemblies (cakra) that serve as the symbolic cyphers for the constituents of the Five Currents (pañcavāha) that make up the Mahākrama, the ultimate reality this system teaches. The bacchanalia that takes place there is extensively described in chapter fifteen of the Kulakaulinīmata, which is drawn it from the Kramasadbhaava, a Kālīkrama Tantra. Another is described in the Khacakrapañcakastotra.

The outer site, as usual, serves as a symbol for the inner one. The cremation ground is the heart of consciousness where all differentiated perceptions, and with them duality, cease (see TĀ 29/183-185 quoted in Dyczkowski 1987: 144). The epitome of all cremation grounds, the one where this takes place most completely is Karavīra. It consists of the five spheres or 'wheels' (cakra) in which the processes (krama) that constitute the progressive development (vikāsa) of cognative consciousness (saṁvit) unfold that consume individuality by absorbing it into the universal processes of creation and destruction. They are merged into the light of the Self, the one ultimate reality of which these processes are the rays, as it were, of its radiance. The Cidgaganacandrikā (verse 82) accordingly teaches that Karavīra is in the Heart where the Self is said to reside:

> You are said to be Karavīra, which free of (the fluctuating) activity (vṛtti) (of the mind), is the cremation ground within the Hero's heart. Hard to behold, yet You are the meeting ground, the ever illumined Light that consumes everything.

In his Mahānayaprakāśa Arṇasiṁha similarly says:

> All perceptions with and without thought constructs are constantly destroyed in the pyre of the Great Absorption (mahāgrāsa) that perpetually takes place (nityodita) in Karavīra, which is one's own nature that, without (any outer) conventional sign (asaṁketa), is hard to behold. I salute the Great Hero who, in that cremation, is intent on (contemplating) the pulsation of (this, his) Heart.

nirvikalpavikalpātmarūpā niḥśeṣasaṁvidaḥ |
yatrāsaṁketadurdarśe [-darśa] svabhāvakaravīrake [svabhāvaḥ-] ||
nityoditamahāgrāsacitau [-cittau] yānti layaṁ sadā |
tacchmaśāne [-na] mahāvīraṁ [k: mahāvīra] hṛtghaṭanaratam [hṛ(?)ṭ-] namaḥ ||
MP (2) 16-7.

The cremation ground is especially the haunt of the goddess Kālī who is engaged in destruction, rather than the more benign Kubjikā, who is the goddess of emanation (sṛṣṭi). Moreover, as the absorption of thought contructs into consciousness is not a major feature of their praxis, as it is in the Kālīkrama, Karavīra does not figure prominantly or explicitly in this sense in the Kubjikā Tantras. Nonetheless, Karavīra does appear in the Kubjikā Tantras as a symbol of ultimate reality in which all differentiated perceptions cease. Thus, located at the end of the Transmental (unmanyante karavīraṁ YKh (1) 16/66c), it is said to be the abode of the supreme level of being, the Śāmbhava state. Called Akula in the following passage, it is omnipresent, transcendental consciousness:

> The sacred seat of Karavīra is that by which the triple world, moving and immobile, is pervaded. It is heaven, the abode of the gods, Rudra's foremost (place). Tranquil, it is Akula which is (pure) auspicious (śiva) consciousness (cinmaya).

vyāptaṁ yena [gh: yana] carācaraṁ tribhuvanaṁ svargaṁ ca devālayaṁ |
rudrādyaṁ [k, g, gh, ṅ: rudrādyā] karavīrapīṭham [g, ṅ: vara-] akulaṁ [k, gh, ṅ: -la] śāntaṁ [k, gh, ṅ: sātaṁ; g: śānta] śivaṁ cinmayam | YKh (1) 38/25ab.

As Akula, it transcends the dynamism of Kula, that is, the macro- and micro- cosmic order, symbolized by the alternation between the Full and the New Moon. Thus the YKh (1) explains in the cryptic language of the Kubjikā Tantras:

That goddess is the Mistress of the Wheel, she is aged and holds a skull. The form of the skull is the Full Moon and the New Moon is there the presiding deity. Merged above the skull is the cremation ground, Karavīra.

cakranāyakī [k, gh: vakranāyaki; g: cakrā-; ṅ: -ki] sā devī vṛddhāvasthā kapāladhṛk |
kapālaṁ pūrṇimākāraṁ [g: pūrṇikāraṁ] amā tatrādhidevatā ||
ūrdhvalīnaṁ [k, g, gh, ṅ: arddhalīnā] kapālasya śmaśānaṁ [ṅ: smaśāna] karavīrakam [g: -vīrajaṁ] | YKh (1) 33/47-48ab.

139. Like other goddesses, such as Durgā who is associated with the bilva tree or Śitalā who likes neem trees, the goddess Kubjikā is associated with several trees, especially the tamarind (ciñcā) and the kadamba. Another is the bilva. Concerning these three trees in relation to the Wheels in the body and states of consciousness, see below 46/20-26.

140. Such places are the favorite haunts of goddesses in general. In a hymn from the Harivaṁśa Viṣṇu praises the goddess Durgā saying: ‘On terrible mountain peaks, and in rivers, and in caves, in forests and in groves is your dwelling, O great goddess’ (translated in Coburn 1984: 279). Concerning Kubjikā’s relation to mountains, see intro. vol. 1, p. 563 ff..

141. According to the SaṁP there is a cave close to this cremation ground (śmaśānasāmipye guhā). One could add that as Karavīra is in Oḍḍiyāna, which is in the centre of the goddess's triangle where the Command is located, the cave of Karavīra may be identified with the Kadamba Cave, which symbolizes the transcendental Void.

142. The SaṁP lists the names of the fourteen worlds - seven of which are above and seven below the earth. These are the ones commonly found in the Purāṇas to which the word udyāna (meaning 'garden') has been suffixed. We have seen earlier in this hymn (above, line 18) that the goddess delights in playing in Bhairava's garden. Presumably the fourteen worlds are the regions within it.

bhūrudyāna-bhuvarudyāna-svarudyāna-mahadudyāna-janodyāna-tapodyāna-satyodyāna-atalodyāna-vitala-sutala-talātala-rasātala-mahātalapātālāś caturdaśa |

143. Externally, the teacher's sandals are worshipped as the teacher's tangible representation. The god who comes to visit the goddess worships her sandals as a sign that he considers her to be his teacher (below 6/7). The Circle of Teachers (gurumaṇḍala) is accordingly worshipped within the teacher's sandals (below 27/16-17ab). Conversely, after worshipping the Circle of Teachers, it is circumambulated a hundred times and then the teacher's sandals are worshipped. This is the final culmination of the rite and so must therefore never be omitted (27/24). Indeed, the sandals are so important that the Krama itself is worshipped both within and in front of them (28/164). This act of veneration is the prelude and means of entry into the higher planes of being (below 6/129). Thus meditation on the teacher's sandals awakens Kuṇḍalinī, which causes the body to tremble (33/21). They are therefore contemplated in the head as the prelude to the practice of Yoga which is, essentially, the movement of Kuṇḍalinī through the Wheels of the subtle body (36/27ff.). Indeed, in the following passage, we are told Kuṇḍalinī herself is the sandal (pādukā) (a feminine word) of the deity. Just as the outer sandals are a sign of the teacher's status, the inner sandals are the empowering energy that rises in the channel between the two breaths:

Located in the middle of the Stick of the Cavity of Space, she is on the plane of the Nameless. Generated as Bhairava's will, she, the supreme energy, pulses. Unsupported (she is) between the two Points (bindu) (representing the two breaths) and is vibrated (vighaṭṭitā) above and below (at the extremity of their movement). O Bhairava, (she is) the Sandal (pādukā) of the great lord of bliss (mahadānandanātha). There is Śrīnātha and the energy called the Sandal who is the Bhairavī of Madana (the god of love). "I" (says) Kuleśvarī. "worship the one flower (i.e. the Command) with (these) two states of being (bhāva)". (She is) the Bhairavī of the ocean of Māyā, the terrible world (saṁsāra) of suffering. Then one attains the shade (of the deity's feet) which is the place of refuge (samāśraya) and liberation (muktisthāna).

kharaṇḍadaṇḍamadhyasthā [k, gh: taraṁturaṁḍa-; g: ta-; ṅ: taraṁḍaraṁḍa-] *anāmapadamāśritā [k: manāma-; gh: manāmaya * māśritā; ṅ: manāmaya-]* ||
bhairavecchā samutpannā lulantī [gh: tulaṁti] paramā kalā |
*bindudvaye nirālambā adha [gh: ardha] - ūrdhvavighaṭṭitā [gh: * * vi-]* ||
mahadānandanāthasya [k: -māthasya] pādukā iti [k, gh: pādukāsibhi; g, ṅ: pādukām iti] bhairava [g: -vaḥ] |
śrīnāthaṁ pādukākhyā [k, gh, ṅ: -bhyāṁ; g: -khyaṁ] ca kalā madanabhairavī || ekaṁ [gh: evaṁ] puṣpaṁ [k, gh, ṅ: puṣpa] dvibhirbhāvaiḥ [k, gh: -vai; g: -ve]

pūjyāmīti [gh: -sīti] kuleśvarī |
duḥkhasaṁsāraghorasya māyāsāgarabhairavī ||
tadā tv adhigatā [k, gh: -ta; g, ṅ: tvaṁ vigata] chāyā muktisthānaṁ samāśrayaḥ |
YKh (1) 34/123cd-127ab.

In this perspective it makes sense to say, as the Tantra does, that 'the entire current of the transmission (krama) of the Command is within the sandals and is of that nature' (ājñākramoghasakalaṁ pādukāntaṁ tu tanmayam | YKh (2) 28/37ab). And it is this, I suppose, that is the Transmission of the (Master's) Sandals (pādukākrama).

144. Like Śabdarāśi and Mālinī (see below chapters 18 and 19), Vīrāvalī is an alphabet. Like them, Vīrāvalī is a configuration of the fundamental energies of Speech (vāc) represented by the fifty letters of the Sanskrit alphabet. The first half of the fifty phonemic energies that constitute the Vīrāvalī alphabet are arranged in the normal, forward alphabetical order. The second half are arranged in the reverse order with respect to Śabdarāśi. Thus, like Mālinī, although in a different way, it also represents the opposite, female polarity. At the same time, it also symbolizes the union of opposites. The first part of the Vīrāvalī alphabet consists of Vīras or Bhairavas and so is male. The second part is the domain of the energy called Āvalī (also spelt Āvali) and so is female. Although symbolically integrating the opposites in this way, the whole is considered to be female in so far as its symbolically bisexual nature is the opposite of the mono-sexual nature of the male counterpart. This is also why Vīrāvalī is identified with the goddess Kubjikā who, similarly bisexual is, according to the SaṁP, counterposed and equated in the unity of opposites with Śabdarāśi, the male polarity (SaṁP: yā kubjikā taṁ puruṣaṁ prati pratipāditā [-tam]).

According to the KMT (22/14ff), Vīrāvalī is a form of the Parāparā Vidyā 'which is differentiated by the letters'. In chapter five of the Kularatnoddyota, it is described in detail. There it contains the three Vidyās, Parā, Parāparā and Aparā and is called the Āvalikrama. It is presented in the form of a deposition (nyāsa) of the fifty letters on the body, each with its corresponding Bhairava who acts as a guardian of place (kṣetrapāla), an Āvali, a Haṁsa and a location in the body. Thus the god says to the goddess in the KRU:

Now listen Kālyaṇī to the excellent Āvalikrama. It has come forth from my body in accord with the sequence beginning with Śrīkaṇṭha (who governs the letter A). In the form of emanation and withdrawal, it begins with A and ends with KṢa, in due order. It numbers fifty and it has guardians of the fields. The Bhairavas are the letters beginning with A. Āvali is said to be (the letters in the reverse order, that is) beginning with KṢa. O mother of the Śrīkula, one should know that (Āvali) possesses the parts (pāda) of the syllables of Haṁsa. O goddess, when she is devoid of the Haṁsas and lords of the fields, she is known as Vīrāvali. As the forward and the reverse directions, Āvali is the mutual foundation (of both).

athātaḥ [kh: athāntaṁ] śṛṇu kalyāṇi āvalikramam uttamam ǀ mama dehāt [kh: dehā] samutpannaṁ śrīkaṇṭhādikrameṇa tu ǀǀ sṛṣṭisaṁhārarūpeṇa ādikṣāntaṁ yathākramam ǀ kṣetrapālaiḥ [kh: -pālai] samopetaṁ śatārdhaparisaṁkhyayā ǀǀ bhairavāś ca akārādyāḥ kṣādyā āvalir ucyate ǀ haṁsākṣarapadair yuktā vijñeyā śrīkulāmbike ǀǀ haṁsakṣetrādhipair [k: haṁsaḥ -] hīnā devi vīrāvaliḥ [k kh g: -vali] smṛtā ǀ anulomavilomena anyonyāvalir āśrayā [g: -valitāśraya] ǀǀ KRU 5/176-179.

The Āvalikrama is then presented in full in a long prose section in which the god lists the names of the beings corresponding to each letter and their location in the body. It is followed by the Vīrāvalikrama which has only an Āvali and a Vīra. The god concludes saying:

Now, (the Vidyā) Aparā and Parā have been explained (along with) Parāparā who is Mahāmāyā. O great goddess, she contains (all) mantras and is well know in the three worlds.

athāparā parākhyātā mahāmāyā parāparā ǀ mantragarbhā mahādevi viśrutā bhuvanatraye [kh : -trayaṁ] ǀǀ ibid. 5/182.

145. The SaṁP says that 'the general sense is that (the goddess is thereby) made manifest' (pratibhāviteti bhāvārthaḥ).

146. Nirvāṇa is the supreme transcendental principle. The five arrows of the god of love (kāmadeva) are probably the Five Voids in the centre of the five Wheels (cakra) in the subtle body. The sonic energies of the Five Praṇavas, with which this line begins, resonate within them. Just as the Five Voids are aspects of the one great Void, which is the Supreme Nirvāṇa of Space (ākāśaparama-nirvāṇa), similarly the praṇavas are aspects of the goddess who is the aggregate of all sonic energies. This aggregate is the Command which is the bliss of the union of Śiva and Śakti. As aspects of their divine union - Yoga - the Five Voids are appropriately likened to the arrows of the god of love.

This is the Yoga the goddess practices within the Liṅga in the centre of the maṇḍala. Nirvāṇa is her basic plane of existence (bhūmikā). Indeed, she herself is this condition (above 3/63-64ab, below 26/90), supreme, tranquil and unchanging (31/54). Accordingly, the goddess herself is called Nirvāṇā when, as the raised form of Kuṇḍalinī, she sleeps, as it were, unmanifest (nirābhāsā) in the Nirvāṇa of Space at the End of the Twelve above the head (31/63cd-64). At one with this Void through the practice of this Yoga, the goddess is in her supreme, undifferentiated (niṣkala) aspect. Through the same Yoga she issues forth from it as its radiant energy (tejas) (line 1 above) which is her differentiated (sakala) aspect to bestow the bliss of Nirvāṇa (above line 16) first to the god and then progressively through the entire transmission (krama). The god accordingly asks her to impart the teachings which bestow the immediate attainment of Nirvāṇa (3/64cd-65ab). This Yoga, which is the supreme Nirvāṇa, is attained by the penetration of the Vidyā (12/13). Nirvāṇa is the basic condition of the soul, just as it is of the goddess. However, it is obscured by the the soul's restless, motivated action - Karma. Once the yogi is free of Karma he enters Nirvāṇa (13/94). In the undifferentiated (niraṁśa) transcendent condition of Nirvāṇa, the adept achieves liberation, the ultimate accomplishment (siddhi) (22/22). Perfectly still, the yogi attains the plane of non-duality which is Nirvāṇa (33/6). This condition of thought-free (nirvikalpa) consciousness (see 36/1-18ab) is the supreme state attained when the mind come to an end (41/16cd-18). This is not a passive, inactive condition.

The fulfilment and the very condition of the Great Vow of Dispassion (vairāgya) the adept observes is Nirvāṇa (15/15cd-17ab). But, unlike the dispassion taught in other schools, it is not the eradication of desire. Rather it is the detachment which allows, first of all continuous, unbroken attention to the goddess's differentiated (sakala) aspect, which is her Vidyā and then, ultimately, to her undifferentiated (niṣkala) aspect, which is the pure divine will that is the original unsullied impulse of desire. Immersed in the energy of the goddess's Command, the soul is divested of the impurity of Karma and so spontaneously merges, as does the goddess, into Nirvāṇa which, as the ultimate source of the Command, is called the Teacher's Mouth (guruvaktra) (22/19) from which the teachings and all creation proceeds. Here the goddess gathers together, as it were, the bliss of consciousness through which the expansion takes place in Nirvāṇa, the Expanse of Being (bhāvākāśa) that issues forth in stages from the Transmental to form the Divine Current (divyaugha) of liberated teachers (57/55ab-57). Thus Nirvāṇa is not only the supreme state of total stillness. As the source of the outpouring of the Command, it is also the 'bliss of generation' (vibhavānanda) (62/66) that pours forth through the line of teachers as the scripture and the intuitive consciousness, which is the Command that empowers the one who receives it to understand and transmit its meaning.

147. This Liṅga represents the goddess in the unmanifest state. When the universe is withdrawn into its original source, this Liṅga persists in the emptiness. Located in the centre of the maṇḍala of the Island of the Moon, it is the solitary light that shines in the darkness from which she emerges into manifestation See above, note to line 39 of this hymn.

148. The BB explains that Bhairava's sin is essentially his pretentious pride:

(At first Bhairava) thought: "I am the one who does everything". Then after having seen Mālinī, that is, (the goddess) Kujā, who is all things he realised (that she is) the light of the supreme power, therefore he says: "Forgive (me my) sin!"

aham eva viśvakartā iti matvā paścāt mālinīṁ viśvarūpāṁ kujāṁ dṛṣṭvā paramaśaktijyotiṁ matvā tena kṣamasvāparādhaṁ vadati |

149. The BB comments by quoting the following verse:

Śivā, the Supreme (Parā) is victorious. She is the goddess who is abides as Śivā. She is the goddess who is within Śiva. Her nature Śiva, she is (both) the omnipresent Lord who does all things and the mother of the universe.

śivāstheśī śivānteśī śivātmā sarvagaḥ prabhuḥ |
*viśvakartā jaganmātā [-tāḥ] śiveti [śi * ti] jayati parā* ||

150. The Lotus of Kula is the Yoni. The SaṁP explains:

One should make (one's) abode in the location (sthāna) of the Root (centre in the base of the spine where the Lotus of Kula is situated). Reciting the Mālinī (stava) there every day one should bow (to the goddess) and, having recollected the deity of the path, one should realise oneness (by reflecting with regards to her that) "you alone are in the form of every single thing".

mūlasthāne nivāsaḥ kartavyaḥ | tatra pratyahan mālinīṁ paṭhitvā praṇamet mārgadevatāsmaraṇaṁ kṛtvā tattadrūpā tvam evāsīty aikyaṁ vibhāvayet |

151. Ādinātha - 'the First Nātha' - is Bhairava himself who is the first propagator of Kubjikā's teaching. He is also called generically Śrīnātha or Siddhanātha and, more specifically, Mitranātha (see below, 4/50).

152. Cf. above 3/161 where Bhairava recognises the goddess by her voice – vāṇī. Just as that sound attracted Bhairava to her, this 'great voice' attracts her to him.

153. The Sanskrit here is clumsy and corrupt. All the manuscripts of the KuKh read: ājñāmanugrahārthāya. However, the SKh reads: nāthasyānugrahārthāya – 'in order to grace the lord'.

154. Elsewhere also (see below 5/76cd-77ab), the texts confirm that the goddess is especially linked to the Transmission of the Child. It is knowledge of this Transmission that is singled out as essential for liberation (5/47). Presumably, this is because it is the Transmission of the present Age of Strife (kaliyuga) (see 28/135d and 42/70). Moreover, the Transmissions of the Eldest, Youth and Child are said to be respectively, gross, subtle and supreme. The first two relate to the individual soul (āṇava) and power (śākta). The third is that of Śambhu (śāmbhava) (see below 28/129-132). As the Śāmbhava state is the highest state and so is frequently associated with the whole of the goddess's Transmission (krama) as its source and ultimate goal, it is related to the goddess in a special way, particularly in this Age and so is the most excellent (28/73). Finally, as all three Transmissions are found in each one of them, the three Transmissions in this Age are found in the Transmission of this Age namely, that of the Child.

155. Instead of kramāt siddhis ('accomplishment from the Transmission') the SKh, partly supported by the AS, reads kramasiddhis which may be broken up into kramāt siddhis but more strongly suggests the meaning 'accomplishment of the Transmission'.

156. Concerning these powers see below, note to 8/123 –124.

157. The edited reading of the AS and SKh is: bījasaṁkhyād vikārais ca kujādeśaḥ pravartate i.e. Kujā's Command functions by the contemplation of the seed-syllables and by the transformations.

158. Concerning the Accomplishment of Speech (vācāsiddhi) see intro. vol. 1 p. 214 ff.. This verse tells us that the recitation of this hymn brings the devotee, as it did Bhairava, both forms of the Command. Made fit by the Command that purifies, that is, the Accomplishment of Speech, the devotee receives the other aspect of the Command namely, 'the wealth which is grace' transmitted through initiation. Thus, Bhairava is first purified by his search for the goddess, which culminates in this hymn. Transformed into a series of mantras by powerful seed-syllables, the hymn not only expresses Bhairava's devotion to the goddess, it also transmits the purifying energy of the Command that penetrates him. This prepares Bhairava to receive the liberating grace of the Command that the goddess transmits to him through the initiation he receives when she emerges from the Liṅga, evoked from it by this hymn and the purity of Bhairava's inner being, manifest in his devotion. The devotee, we are told here, receives the same purifying empowerment first and then liberating grace by reciting this hymn daily with the one-pointed concentration of true devotion. The hymn is so powerful that this happens whether he recites it at all three times of the day - dawn, midday and sunset - or at just one of these times.

159. These three probably correspond to the 'three times' mentioned in above in 4/43-44ab. The corresponding section in the SKh omits the alternative of recollecting it twice or thrice and the following verse. Thus from the point of view of the SKh the adept who has entered the transcendent in this way and so is a worthy recepient, receives the entire transmission in an instant after reciting the hymn, just as Bhairava does.

160. After this sentence the SKh concludes with the following lines that correspond to KMT 2/4ab, 5cd and 7. These are followed by a few extra lines quoted in the intro. vol. 1 p. 40. See the notes to line 4/48ab of the edition for the Sanskrit text.

161. See below 5/18 and note.

162. The goddess finally emerges from the Liṅga, just as she does in the KMT, after Bhairava has uttered the Mālinīstava. The following few verses briefly tell us that the goddess then finally imparted the initiation to the god and bring this chapter to a somewhat abrupt end. In the following chapter the story is, effectively, re-told in greater detail. See 5/29 ff. where the bursting apart of the Liṅga, the goddess's emergence from it, her form and Bhairava's consecration by the power of the goddess's gaze are described.

163. See intro. vol. 2, p. 457 ff.. Mitranātha and the First Siddha.

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER FIVE

1. घ्, च्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच। 2. ट्: –मण्डले धीपुरं। 3. क्, ग्: –स्त।

4. ग्: –कामत। 5. ङ्: –वसात्। 6. छ्: प्रीति तेन।

7. घ्, च्, छ्: शिष्य। 8. All MSs: –विपर्यासे। M → N.

9. क्: –पाणिनां। The regular form of the vocative singular of शूलपाणिन् is शूलपाणि and of शूलपाणिः is शूलपाणे, neither of which fit the metre. 10. ङ्: –स्यः।

11. क्: विलोमान्च (?)। 12. ख्, ज्: वुद्धिहानिममग्लानि अयुक्ताचरणाद्; ग्, ङ्, ट्: वुद्धिहानिमनग्लानि अयुक्ताचरणाद्; घ्, च्: वुनिहानिमलग्नानि अयुक्ता–; छ्: वुनिहानिमलग्नानि अयुक्ताचरणाद्। One wonders whether one should emend to –मनोग्लानिर्– or assume, as the readings of the MSs seem to indicate that the noun मनस् has been thematized. But as this does not invariably occur and the readings of the MSs are clearly corrupt, I have chosen to emend to the regular form. See above, note to 3/134a.

13. ङ्: भवत्। 14. M → N.

15. A word like शिष्यः is required here to complete the sense.

16. ख्, ङ्, ट्: कुले क्रमे। 17. ग्: मत्रिणः।

18. घ्: सिष्प; all other MSs except झ्: शिष्य।

19. घ्: त्यं; all other MSs: त्वं। 20. च्: भषामि। 21. क्: इत।

22. ग्: –त। 23. क्, ग्: कल–; घ्, च्, छ्: कुतः–।

24. घ्, च्, छ्: शिष्यत्वं। 25. All MSs: तत्।

26. All MSs except ख्, ङ्: शिष्य। 27. च्, छ्: –रोज्ञानं।

28. घ्: सचिन्तिरु–; छ्: सचिन्तिरुभयोर्यदा; ङ्: सवित्तिरुभयोर्यदा; च्: सविन्तिरु–।

29. Missing in MSs क्, ग्, ज् and ट्। 30. ख्: श्रीनाथा–; ग्,ङ्, ज्, ट्: श्रीनाथो–। 31. यत् here replaces यथा। The corresponding तथा is missing. 32. ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: पुरासी च; all other MSs: –पुरासीच्च। 33. This line is found in YKh (2) 16/185ab. There the reading is: मे. IM 5. 34. All MSs except झ्: आस्यहं। The present here, once again, denotes past action. See above, note to 3/14c.

35. झ्: पूर्व्वं–; all MSs: –मन्मथम्। 36. I take this to be an irregular aluksamāsa. A genitive is required here. Cf. 6/6a, 7/49b and note.

37. ङ्: –न्त; all other MSs except झ्: –न्तं।

38. Here an optative is functioning as a past tense. See above, note to 3/14c. The third person has apparently replaced the second. Another way to understand this peculiar syntax is to take the subject of the verb to be अन्यदेही and the predicate त्वम् which is clearly the reverse of the intended sense.

39. क्, ग्, झ्: मर्त्यश्वरिणम्; घ्, च्: मर्त्येश्व–; all other MSs: मर्त्यश्वरीरिणम्। Concerning the use of this plural ending in the sense of the singular, see above note to 4/3c.

40. घ्, च्, छ्: परवर्तेन। 41. क्, ग्: संसारास्तंव; घ्, च्, छ्: संसारास्तञ्च; all other MSs: संसारास्तव। 42. क्, ग्: कोमिकम्। IC.

43. च्: मात्रामिति; ट्: –तां। The correct form –माता इति → मातेति entails the loss of a syllable. Rather than simply omit sandhi 'm', which is commonly used to fill a hiatus, has been inserted here. See above, note to 3/21b. All MSs: कल्पितां।

44. घ्: –कृपा। 45. झ्: भवामिति। 46. All MSs: सिद्धं।

47. All MSs: स्थितं। 48. Missing in MS च्। 49. This pāda is one syllable too long. However, if we omit the first syllable in this quarter from the count, the length of the remaining syllables is regular. 50. Missing in MS च्।

51. Missing in MS च्। 52. Missing in MS च्। 53. च्: पूर्वेण।

54. घ्, च्, छ्: –शन; ङ्, झ्: –प्रकाशकम्। 55. The vowel of the prefix प्रति– has been lengthened here for the metre. 56. घ्, च्: –र्ण।

57. All MSs: –संग्रहः। Cf. below, 13/106d. There are only ten instances this word occurs in our text in a form its gender can be ascertained (see 13/106d, 15/48d, 30/90d, 92d, 45/58d, 61/50b, 62/62d, 68/81d and 68/118d). It is possibly in its regular masculine gender just once (see 61/47b). So rather than make two emendations to the adjectives which qualify this word, I prefer to emend it to its deviant neuter gender. 58. घ्, छ्: तस्यादनु–; च्: तथादनु–; ट्: –यु।

59. The root दृश् is normally parasmaipada. Moreover, an imperative is required here. Cf. above, Mālinīstava line 112 and below, 6/45a

60. All MSs: सिद्धि। 61. घ्, ङ्, च्: तत्र; छ्: तंत्र; ज्, ट्: तंत्रं; all other MSs:
तत्रं। 62. घ्, च्, छ्: कलौ–। 63. क्, ख्: भवो; छ्: भवान्; all other MSs except झ्: भवा। 64. ग्, च्, झ्: –तार्थं–। 65. All MSs: चरुं। 66. ङ्: ज्ञान।

67. All MSs: मिमाम्। 68. क्, ख्, ङ्, झ्: तवयि। 69. IM 6.

70. च्: शत्तस्मां; all other MSs: शक्तस्मां।

71. घ्, च्: स्वच्छक्त्या; छ्, ज्: स्वच्छक्त्या–। 72. घ्: भवज्।

73. All MSs: –नुमर्त्य। 74. One wonders whether to emend to यस्तवाराधने. 75. All MSs except ख्, ङ्, झ्: –मेकत्वं।

76. घ्, छ्: विनयोयप्रगम्यते; च्: विनयोपप्र–। 77. घ्, च्, छ्: तप्रयुक्तस्य।
As often happens in the Sanskrit of this text, the word तपस् has been thematized to accomodate the metre. For other examples, see 3/68c, 6/3b, 12/29c, 28/147a, 35/79c, 39/19d, and 46/91b. 78. ङ्, छ्: –फान्त। 79. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: सिद्ध–। 80. घ्, च्: निवेदितोन्मानं; all other MSs except झ्: निवेदितोत्मानं,। आत्मन् is treated here as if it were neuter, the nominative singular of which is आत्मानम् (see above, note to 3/10c). This is then set in an irregular compound with निवेदित– in order to preserve the metre. मया आत्मा निवेदितः would be correct.

81. क्, ग्: साष्टागनतिपूर्व्वकम्; घ्, च्, ज्, ट्: साष्टांगंनति–; छ्: साष्टंगंनति–। This compound agrees with निवेदितम् (M → N) which has been merged into the previous deviant compound. 82. क्, ग्, ज्, ट्: एतत्; घ्: एत; च्: एतङ्ग।
83. घ्: हक्त्याश्रमं; च्: त्याश्रमं। 84. ग्: संदहो।
85. ङ्: त्वापरतराधनम्; all other MSs: त्वां परतराधनम्। This emendation entails an irregular long seventh syllable. 86. The root सिध् is normally 4P.
87. घ्, च्, छ्: भक्तश्चज्ञा; all other MSs except ज्: –ज्ञा।
88. See above, note to 4/35b. 89. ङ्: –तं।
90. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: भक्तिगुरोर्ज्ञानं। 91. च्: –लध्वं।
92. ख्, ङ्, ट्: कुलो–; च्: –गमे। 93. ग्: देवेशि दर्शनं देहि। 94. All MSs: त्वया।
95. ख्: सिंगं; घ्, छ्: लिंग। 96. क्: पश्यति। This deviant passive recurs twice more. Both times, as here, it replaces the regular दृश्यते in order to avoid a long fifth syllable. See below, 31/97b and 46/283b.
97. क्: भ्रमंतं; all other MSs: भ्रमतं। The root भ्रम् is 1P or 4P. भ्रमति, भ्रम्यति and भ्राम्यति would all be correct. Out of these regular forms only भ्रमति occurs in this text. But although this form fits the metre and occurs three times (see 18/11a, 33/125a and 46/136d), the readings suggest that the original reading was the more common deviant भ्रमते that occurs five times (see 11/87d, 13/132b, 14/116c, 36/81a, and 46/23d). 98. All MSs: मां। 99. M → N. See above, note to 1/13c. 100. क्, ट्: लिगस्य। 101. घ्: प्रत्यक्षो।
102. See above, note to 4/38c.
103. घ्, छ्: –क्रोवाच; च्: missing. 104. M → N. The regular masc. gender can be ascertained only in two cases (see 10/45c and 56/14d), the deviant neuter five times (see 11/68b, 22/16b, 34/84c, 36/34c, and 40/55a).
105. One wonders whether to emend to लिङ्गस्फोटकृते. Perhaps, if we accept the reading as it is, rather than think of this construction as a deviant 'accusative absolute ' this could be considered to be an example of a passive participle functioning as a gerund. See below, note to 5/38b.
106. ख्: निष्कोणानम–; ङ्: निष्काणा–; झ्: त्रिकोणा–; all other MSs: निष्कोणा–। The MSs clearly support an original त्रिष्कोणा– and so I have emended accordingly. The expression त्रिष्कोणानना occurs again below in 49/30a. Concerning the deviant form त्रिष्कोण– see above, note to 3/119d. It is tempting to emend to one of the regular forms of the feminine, viz. भीषणी or भीषिणी, but feminines are frequently formed in this text by the addition of long 'a' to the stem regardless of whether or not this is the form of the feminine of that adjective or noun. The form भीषणा recurs below in 18/50d, 21/5d and 42/63b. 107. ट्: स्यामा। 108. ख्, ङ्: – आनन्दा; all other MSs: –नन्दां। 109. All MSs: वयं। One could posit an honorific plural here (cf. above 3/148c), but then more extensive emendation would be required. 110. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: चकृका। 111. All MSs except ख्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: वक्त्रा। 112. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ट्: –देहो।

113. घ्, च्, छ्: दृष्टि–; झ्: दृष्टं–। 114. Missing in MSs घ्, च् and छ्।
115. क्, ख्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: श्रीनाथोवाच। 116. ख्, ङ्: –घूमिव–; घ्, छ्: –घूर्निव; च्: –घूर्णिव।
The correct form of the (feminine) noun derived from the root घूर्ण (1A, 6P), is घूर्णिः. However, out of six instances, it occurs only twice (see below 26/29a and 36/33b). Otherwise, in four other cases, apart from here, we find घूर्मिः (see 13/101d, 19/73a, 33/47b, and 54/7c). We also find the equivalent participle घूर्णमाण– (46/108b) and घूर्माण– (66/11a). Note also that the syntax of this sentence is incomplete. Something like यतोऽहम् is required to connect the two parts of it together.

117. All MSs: –पहारितम्। The regular form of this compound is: परचेतसापहारितः which is too long for the metre. See below, note to 5/35c.

118. क्: वोधितश्चा–। The correct form of this participle is विद्ध– (cf. above, 5/33a). The same deviant form appears once again below in 31/9a.

119. क्: –क्रमः। 120. Even though this is the reading of only MS क्, I prefer to accept the regular neuter form (i.e. चेतस्) rather than postulate a deviant feminine चेता which is the reading in the rest of the MSs. This word appears 26 times in our text but this is the only instance of the nom. sing. चेतस्. It is irregular only three times. In 24/7b instead of चेतस् we find चेतसम् as the nom. sing. In 24/25d we do find the form चेता but there it is functioning as an adjective qualifying the word इच्छा. Also above in 5/33b we find –चेता–, –चेत– in a compound. 121. All MSs: धृति। 122. All MSs: नमेति।
123. ज्: विध्वः। 124. ग्: –वशेन; च्: –वेगेन।
125. All MSs: विग्रहम्। 126. All MSs except छ्: सिद्ध–; All MSs: –स्मां।
127. ग्: –स्था। 128. ख्, ग्, ङ्, ट्: –त; च्: –गतः।
129. All MSs: कारणं। 130. This and the following line are missing in MSs घ्, च्, छ् and ज्। 131. Concerning this deviant concord, see above, note to 1/5b 132. ट्: कृत। Note how a passive participle in this syntactically peculiar sentance functions as a gerund. The past passive participle not uncommonly functions as a gerund in the Sanskrit of this text. This takes place at least seventeen times that is, here and in the following places: 3/153c, 166c, 5/29a, 6/9a, 42a, 82a, 83c, 168a, 222c, 11/22d, 30/115ab, 31/40a, 45/37ab, and 46/129ab, 247ab. The reverse also occurs. A gerund may sometimes function as a participle but this happens rarely (see, for example, 34/121b and 39/84cd). 133. क्, ख्, ङ्, ट्: दण्ड। दण्डवत् is meant here.

134. All MSs except च् and ज् add: पञ्चाङ्गं द्वादशाङ्गं च अघोरस्यात्र (ख्, ङ्: आद्यारभ्यात्र; ग्, ट्: अद्यारभ्यात्र; घ्, छ्: अया–) पद्धतिः। 135. IC.

136. IC. Notice how the goddess is referred to here again as male. Cf. the usage of प्रभुः with reference to her in 4/38c, स्वामिन् in 5/40c and श्रीमान् in 3/45b.

137. ख्: हंह्य एको; घ्, च्, छ्: –मेका। 138. घ्, च्, छ्: गोत्रचा–।

139. The regular nom. singular –धीमान् – has been replaced by the ablative.

140. क्: संक्राताज्ञामनुग्रहः; ख्, ग्, ट्: –संक्राता– – –हाः; ङ्: संक्राता– –हा। The verb of which संक्रान्ताज्ञाम् is the object is missing unless we understand the root क्षम् to have extended its meaning. 141. See above, note to 4/38c.

142. All MSs: स्वामि। This male appelation applied to the goddess is found in several places. These include 6/129c, 8/1b, 27/1b, 59/1b and 59/84b. But note that the regular form appears in a name for this text repeated in most of the colophons namely, svāminīmata.

143. Verses 5/37cd-40 are repeated here in MSs घ्, च्, छ्, and ज् with no significant variants. 144. घ्: –योदेवी; छ्: –योदेवि।

145. See above, note to 3/18a.

146. This form replaces the regular nom. sing of मातृ which is माता. This noun is subject to several deviations in our text. Thus we find the same nom. sing. (मातरः) once again in 39/148b and the peculiar nom. sing. मातरम् twice (see 5/61d and 8/36d). The equivalent stem form – मातर – appears twice in compounds (see 8/71c and 62/18d). The ablative of this stem – मातरात् – appears once (see 41/16d). The voc. sing. मातरे is attested once (see 26/67b) as is the nom. sing. मातरा (see 68/7d). The regular voc. sing. – मातः – is also replaced by माते five times in the Mālinīstava (lines 63, 72, 74, 84 and 126. It also appears in three MSs in 5/84a. Again, we find the contracted मातां replacing the regular acc. sing. मातरम् twice (see 16/53c and 30/217d) and the nom. plu. माताः once (see 15/4c). A strange contraction is the gen. plu. मातराम् in 46/170d. The nom. sing. मातरी is common, appearing not less than six times (see 4/3b, 6/127a, 26/89a, 30/85b, 45/54b, and 55/12a). The nom. plu. – मातर्यः is attested once in 63/12b. The acc. sing. – मातरीम् – also appears once in 36/26c. The abl. plu. – मातरिभ्यः – appears in 46/274b and the gen. plu. – मातरीणाम् – in 63/63d, 64c, and 66/27a. मात्रीणाम् – an alternative form of the gen. plu. - is found in 3/33a (see also note to 66/29c). The form मातरिका appears only once in 42/55a. 147. M → N.

148. All MSs except छ्, ज्, झ्, ट्: संक्रमितोद्य। 149. घ्: –वी।

150. All MSs: क्रिया। 151. All MSs: शिक्षा।

152. क्, ग्: श्रीवक्रो उवाच; घ्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच; missing in MS च्।

153. च्: –देह। 154. All MSs except छ्, ज्: महासिद्धः।

155. झ्: आज्ञाम्नाय ; all other MSs except क्: आज्ञानामं।

156. N → M. 157. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: सप्ता–। The MSs agree on the deviant form सप्तादशन् only twice (8/59a and 11/7a) and, as here, in five MSs, in one other place (23/6a). The regular form of the ordinal सप्तदश – occurs twice (23/6a and 23/29a). However, the deviant form is more common in other Kubjikā Tantras. It appears not less than four times in YKh (1) (16/125b, 27/58c, 39/158c, and 40/18d). In the AS the deviant form appears five times and the regular one only three. In the .SSS it is very common in both the body of the text and the commentary. Out of twenty-four instances in chapters 6 to 27 only four are the regular form. We may note in passing that apart from one or two exceptions, we find the regular form in the TS although we read सप्तादशी in TS 25/27d. In JY 1 we find the deviant form five times and the regular one just twice. In JY 2 we find the regular form twenty-five times and the deviant one eighteen. These examples will suffice to make the point that this deviation is common but does not invariably replace the regular form. As the majority of the MSs attest the regular form here, I have chosen the latter. See below, note to 5/63d and 7/7c.

158. क्, ग्, च्, ज्, झ्:–दशमं। IC. 159. See above, 2/25c.

160. ट्: अराध्या। 161. ग्: तवैतं। 162. घ्, च्, छ्: –का।

163. This and the following line also appear below as 7/63cd-64ab. There are no variant readings.

164. घ्, च्, छ्: याच्छ्रीनाथ–। A dual ending is required here. Co-ordinative -dvandva- compounds consisting of two or more components usually nouns, sometimes adjectives, should be in the dual or plural unless the parts of the compound express categories rather than individuals. But in this and Tantric texts in general, when the metre requires it proper names in lists and pairs of nouns may fuse to form co-ordinative compounds with singular endings. Exceptionally, a plural replaces the required dual number (9/97b – जलाग्निषु). As the proper names in most lists are treated as neuter this is their most common gender. See, for example, 6/14d (भारभूत्यतिथीश्वरम् also 6/69b, 6/104b), 6/49d (टङ्कटशूलिनम्), 6/140d (गदकोंकणम्), 7/76cd (रत्नकेशवम् and उन्मत्तमुद्रास्रोतावहं) and 46/253c (घटकोड्डामरं।) The same holds good for place names, for example 6/214a (आम्रातकेश्वरैकाम्रे) and 6/215b (and 14/33a, 16/3c, 42/32a – चरित्रैकाम्रकं) as well as technical terms, for example 46/248b (कौस्तुभसुन्दरम्) and 46/249a (व्यापकयोगीन्द्रं two pairs of names for wine). In the occasional list of proper names in which they are all or mostly in their regular masculine genders the compounds often follow suit. For example, see 7/70c (शिवरामश्च) and 32/4b (शंखबोधकः). There are also rare instances of compound masculine proper names that retain their gender even in a list in which the other entries have almost all become neuter as happens, for example in 8/36c (वृषभसिंहश्च).

At times, as in this verse, they form standard complimentary couples, for example, 8/8d (तथैवाचार्यपुत्रकम्), 37/50d (and 47/76b साधकाचार्यम्) 9/56a (13/69c and 46/40d - the locative निग्रहानुग्रहे), 13/38a (the locative singular चन्द्रार्के), 44/64d (and 11/93b भुक्तिमुक्तिम्, cf. KMT 3/107a: भुक्तिमुक्तिश्च and ibid. 25/232b: भुक्तिर्मुक्तिर्न विद्यते), 35/94c (उदयास्तमनम्), 36/93c (नादबिन्दुं and 28/15d (बिन्दुनादैर्), 36/108a (अतीतानागतम्– 'past and future'), 44/66b (जाग्रत्सुप्ते), 51/5c (अनुलोमविलोमेन), 33/114c (दक्षिणोत्तरम्), 40/2a (वामदक्षिणमार्गश्च), 7/18b (चिञ्चिमित्रम्) and 57/101b हरचिञ्चिणी), 48/18b (वटुकेश्वरयोगिनी). Note that the last two examples are feminine compounds. In standard Sanskrit the gender of a compound is determined by the male component. Very occasionally both components are feminine. For example, 7/31c (मीनमेषा) and 46/247d (कुम्भकाभसा– two names for wine).

We find a good number of paired action nouns. For example, see 7/44c and 13/101c (धुननावेशनम्), 31/74c (चालनावेशनम्), 31/127a (चालनावेशनाच्चैव), 34/11c (प्रोक्षणामन्त्रणम्), and 39/160a (स्तम्भनोच्चाटनम्). While these are examples of consecutive actions we also find pairs coupled in compounds denoting activities that compliment and complete each other. For example, see 13/131c (आक्षेपदहनम्), 14/118b (अकुञ्चनप्रसारणम्), 58/87a (मीलनोन्मीलनम्), and 67/43a (स्थित्युत्पत्तिर्).

In many cases, however, the components of these compounds, although denoting entities of the same type, are not standard pairs. In their case it is clear that they have been formed solely to meet the requirements of the metre. These include entities such as weapons (14/34c – पाशखड्गं), Tantric traditions (30/153d – सोमसिद्धन्तान्तलाकुले), Tantras (30/154d – प्रतिष्ठापारमेश्वरे), parts of the body (31/86d – हृत्कण्ठे, 50/21a – जानुज, 50/21cd – जानुस्फिजे), mantras (34/112a – षडङ्गमालिनीं, 39/105b – तारकाष्टकमालिनी), faces and tongues of the deity (34/112b – मुखजिह्वाम्), types of people (47/77d – क्लीवोन्मत्तम्), and states (12/1c – अरोग्यकल्याणम्).

Although there are examples of dvandva compounds that have more than two components, they are very few. They include compounded ordinals (7/84a - सप्ताष्टनवमम्) and phonemes (8/28a – अजकारझकारश्च and 8/29c – ङफकारषकारश्च) although these too are generally in pairs (7/71a - चाष्टनवमम्, 8/29d शवकारम्, 18/27c एकपादशिरम्, cf. 18/30a, 18/42b). That these are exceptions is clear when we observe that the standard set of three (or four) traditions mentioned repeatedly throughout our text are never named all together in one compound but, when compounded, are usually just two. See, for example, 2/7f (वृद्धं कौमारबालकम्), 13/111c (क्रमेऽस्मिन् वृद्धकौमारे), 28/104b (वृद्धकौमारकम्), 15/39b (ज्येष्ठमध्ये, cf. 28/94b and 46/63d) and 39/62b (बालं कौमारखेचरम्।) In 1/2a we find बालं कौमारवृद्धम् but there, unlike 39/62b, the metre requires it. Thus, it may be considered to be a single compound with three components that has been broken up for the metre (see note to 1/2a), although it also falls into the general pattern we have observed in this note. However, having said this we should also note that there are instances in which all three figure together. For example see 3/11c where we read: ज्येष्ठमध्यमबालम्. Observe that in such cases also, the ending is almost always, if not invariably, singular.

Finally, we may note that these compounds have, as one would expect, a variety of case endings. The most common is the nominative and accusative after which comes the locative. Of these we have already noted several examples. We also find the instrumental (48/7a – चण्डचन्दनकस्तूर्या, also 28/15d and 51/5c) and the dative (30/41d (न देयं क्लीवक्रोधिने).

165. घ्, च्, छ्, ट्: अज्ञाता। Cf. 17/14c, 31/106c and 68/46a. See note to 3/22b.

166. N → M. 167. All MSs except च्: देवता।

168. घ्, च्: –चाष्टौ। 169. All MSs: –फान्तं।

170. The root स्फुर् is normally 6P. For other examples see below, 6/44b, 30/238a, and 46/211a. Cf. in particular 6/44ab. 171. क्: चाज्ञात्।

172. ङ्: –युक्त। 173. घ्: महेश्वर:; झ्: महेश्वरा। 174. M → N.

175. ग्, ट्: चान्वय; घ्, च्, छ्: चात्वये। 176. All MSs: गोत्र।

177. घ्: –न। 178. क्, ग्: –न्तां। 179. ङ्: –त।

180. क्: –योगिवीभक्ति:; घ्: –योगिणीभक्ति:।

181. All MSs except झ्: –द्रोहांश्चनिग्रहम्। M → N.

182. The reading of the MSs has been retained assuming that the subject of this action noun is –निग्रहम् of the previous line. Emendation to the feminine कर्तव्या to bring it into concord with the following आज्ञा would not be of much use, although it would appear to be an improved reading. This is because the peculiar syntax here implicitly posits that this action noun qualifies all three substantives in these two line. Thus what is meant is –भक्ति: कर्तव्य: as well –निग्रहं कर्तव्यम् and आज्ञा कर्तव्या. 183. ख्, ग्, ङ्, झ्: विचरत्; घ्, च्: विवर:; छ्: विचर:; ट्: विचर* (?)।

184. घ्, च्, छ्: –ये। 185. All MSs except छ्: गुटिकां।

186. घ्, च्: पादलक्षन्; ङ्: सपादलक्ष; all other MSs: सपादलक्षं।

187. झ्: पावनीया–। 188. ख्, ग्, ङ्: चन्द्राथानु–; क्: चन्द्रार्थानुग्रहात्; all other MSs: चन्द्रार्थानुग्रहेत्। 189. All MSs except झ्: सर्व्वात्।

190. All MSs except झ्: संसाध्या। 191. All MSs: खगे।

192. IC. See above, note to 1/5b. 193. All MSs: त।

194. See above, note to 5/46d. 195. च्: शक्तिभवते।

196. घ्, च्, छ्: निश्चय। M → N. See above, note to 3/25d. A preceding इति is implied here, the sense being इति निश्चय:.

197. घ्, च्, छ्: क्रीड; all other MSs except क्, झ्: –क्रीडा।

198. All MSs except ख्, ग्, घ्, ङ्: –निर्मुक्तो।

199. ज्: नित्यभाश:। 200. ग्, ज्, ट्: –भ्य: त्वं।

201. क्, ग्: कांचेनवद्; घ्, च्, छ्: –नयद्।

202. The root नश् is 4P; cf. below 12/4d and 41/8c. ये in the first line is in irregular concord with –पापानि and requires the co-relative तानि or the like. Otherwise, due to the clumsy syntax, it appears that the subject of the previous verb is the object of this one, whereas it is clear that the intended sense requires that the object of the previous verb be also that of this one. 203. ट्: यं।

204. The dative has here assumed the role of the case of the direct object.

205. छ्: त्रिकालं–; all other MSs except च्: त्रिस्कालं–। See above, note to 3/119d.

206. The ātmanepadī and passive forms of the root मुच् may take the instrumental as well as the ablative. Here, also the instrumental is functioning as the ablative. Cf. above, Mālinīstava, line 115: मुच्यन्ति घोरैर्महाव्याधिभिः.

207. All MSs त्वया। 208. क्: यादि।

209. ख्, ङ्: मियन्ते। 210. ग्: माक्ष–; च्: मोक्षदास्ते।

211. घ्, छ्: नरके। 212. ट्: (?)।

213. ट्: वदत; The root वद् is 1P (see above, note to 4/48c). Moreover, the present tense here refers to past action. See above, note to 3/14c.

214. घ्, च्: देव्याग्रे। 215. All MSs except घ्, छ्, ज्: देशिकत्वं। Cf. above, 5/38d and note.

216. All MSs add मे which disrupts the metre. See above, note to 3/161d.

217. छ्: दीक्षायाख्या–। 218. Note that the present tense here serves the function of a subjunctive or future. See above, note to 3/14c.

219. च्: –ना। 220. All MSs except झ्: तुष्टोसौ।

221. ग्: चोगमा–; ङ्: याग–। The required nominative singular, माता, does not fit the metre. See above, note to 5/41b. 222. See above, note to 4/48c.

223. Although the genitive may be used with verbs meaning to `speak of' it is not normally used as the case of the person that is spoken to (cf. below, 17/55ab). Here is an example of a genitive functioning as a direct object. In the Sanskrit of this text it also functions in this way sometimes with the verbal derivatives of the following roots: रक्ष् (6/27cd), मृ (6/61cd), सेव् (6/155c), हन् (6/198b and 11/88ab), दह् (12/20b), भुञ्ज् (13/53b), कथ् (17/56a), तुष् (20/29d and 26/91ab), होम् (34/112c) and पूज् (37/26ab). 224. च्: दे।

225. ङ्: –षे *। M → N. See above, note to 1/1c and cf. 5/64a and 5/65c.

226. The optative replaces the past tense here. See above, note to 3/14c.

227. घ्, छ्: अमृतोप्पं; च्: अमृतोघं।

228. छ्: प्रवर्षतां; च्: प्रकर्षन्ति; all other MSs except घ्, छ्, ज्: प्रवर्षति।

229. Although the regular सप्तदशी fits the metre, the deviant form सप्तादशी, formed on the model of अष्टादशी, invariably replaces the regular one throughout this text. See 29/45a, 40/25a, 46/299d, 61/80d, and 62/75d. See also above, note to 5/45a and below note to 7/7a. 230. M → N. See above, note to 1/1c.

231. क्: च; ख्: सितु; missing in MS ङ्; all other MSs except ग्: मित्र।

232. क्, छ्, ज्, ट्: दन्तं।   233. घ्: षेच–; ट्: * (?) चरत्वं।

234. This form replaces the regular gerund गृहीत्वा (see below, 8/16a, 18d, 15/16a, 18/27c, 43c, 19/60a, 20/5c, 24/56a, 31/112a, 33/93c, and 33/110c) although the regular form also occurs (see 15/37c, 18/69c, 30/227c, 40/94a and 40/97a). It is also common in other Tantras of the Kubjikā corpus, for example, the Srīmatatantrasāra (see the first line of a passage quoted by Schoterman 1981: 198) and Tantras of other schools.   235. ट्: यथार्थ: *।

236. ग्: –यसामर्थ्य; all other MSs: –यसामर्थ्यं।

237. घ्, छ्: मुक्ति *; all other MSs except च्: मुक्ता * ।

238. घ्, च्, छ्: भव।   239. ग्: तदभिषकं। M → N. See, note to 1/1c.

240. छ्: दन्तं।   241. घ्: चिदारये–।

242. All MSs: संजीव्य।   243. घ्: परमं।

244. घ्, छ्, ट्: शसि:। The regular form of this masculine noun is शशिन् of which the nom. sing. is शशी. However, it never appears in its regular form as a possessive noun in this or most other early Tantric texts, but is treated as it appears in a compound i.e. as शशि–. Other examples in this texts are found in 6/142d, 12/17c, 23/27c, 32/9d, 47/15b, 61/84b, 84c, and 62/70b. One wonders whether the original reading may not have been the deviant संजीव्य परमं शशिम्.

245. घ्, च्, छ्: –नीय।   246. ङ्: तुभ्य; all other MSs: तुभ्यं।

247. ट्: –मक।   248. ट्: * त्रापि।

249. ग्: देश; घ्, च्: शेषे; छ्: * शे।

250. ख्, झ्: मन्त्रज्ञ:; all other MSs: मन्त्रज: सहजोपि।

251. क्: व।   252. घ्, छ्: चाथ।

253. क्, ग्, ज्, ट्: –रेत्शुचिर्भक्त्या; च्: –छुचेर्भक्त्या।

254. ङ्: लिंग।   255. Cf. below, 7/8b

256. All MSs: एषाभिषेकमा–; ङ् –चार्य; all other MSs except क्, ख्, ग्, ट्: –माचार्यं। M → N. See above, note to 1/1c.   257. ङ्: दिन।   258. ङ्: दि *।

259. ख्: कु * * रार्य–; ङ्: कुला *र्या–; ट्: कुलाचा * (?) भिषित्का DS.

260. ङ्: य।   261. च्: –वर्णिता:।

262. ङ्: तेषा।   263. घ्, च्: सिद्धि।

264. घ्, च्: रन्यथा। A part of this dependent clause has been contracted thus skewing the syntax here. The meaning is: ये अन्यथा कुर्वन्ति तेषाम् पतनं भवेत्.

265. ट्: एव * (?) क्त्वा।   266. All MSs except ग्, च्, झ्: –विग्रहां।

267. All MSs: चक्र।   268. ट्: * (?)त:।   269. ग्: सिद्धा।

270. ङ्, ज्, ट्: महातुष्टो; all other MSs except ख्, छ्: –तुष्टा।

271. क्, ख्: गतां। Cf. below, 6/10c.

272. All MSs except घ्, छ्, ज्, झ्, ट्: सष्टाङ्गौ–।   273. ग्: * मस्कारै:।

274. घ्, च्: सिद्धा; all other MSs except ख्, घ्, ङ्: सिद्धो।

275. ङ्: क्षोम्यति। The causative क्षमयति is meant here. Note the use of the present in the sense of a past tense (see above, note to 3/14c).

276. क्, झ्: भैरवं। 277. क्, ग्: –कैदिव्यै; घ्, च्, छ्: श्लोकैर्द्वादशकैर्देव्यै; ज्, ट्: –कैर्दिव्यै। See above, note to 1/5a. 278. घ्, च्: स्तुतते; छ्, ज्: स्तुनते. See above, note to 3/88a. Similar deviant forms of this verb also occur in the Purāṇas. See, for example, Bhagavatpurāṇa 12/13/1: ब्रह्मावरुणेन्द्रमरुत: स्तुवन्ति दिव्यै: स्तवै:. The form स्तुवन्ति occurs below in 6/47c. Even so, the reading स्तुनते (for which स्तुतते is probably an error) is worth considering. Below in 6/82c we find a similar variety of readings but there only two MSs attest the form स्तुवते whereas the remaining ones read स्तुनते. But while there is substantial support for the use of the deviant form स्तुवते, there is practically none for स्तुनते apart from its resemblance to the deviant स्तुनोति found above in 3/88a and 4/37c. 279. घ्: –साशनं; छ्: दिव्यसासनं।

280. क्, ग्: ऐँ कारासनं आरुखं; च्, छ्: ऐँ कारा–; ङ्: –द्धं. This line is found in KuKauM 21/4cd. The following line there reads: षट्प्रकारगतां (क्: वेद्युकार–; ङ्: –गता) देवीं (ग्, घ्: देवी श्री; ङ्: देविशी) कुब्जिकाख्यं नमाम्यहम्। 281. All MSs: सिद्धि।

282. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: श्रीकुब्जिका–; all other MSs: श्रीकुब्जाख्यां। I have emeneded to the form of the proper name found in all the remaining verses of this hymn.

283. The twelve verses of this hymn are numbered in all the MSs except झ्.

284. All MSs: –शक्तिर्; all MSs except क्, ग्, घ्, च्, ट्: –या।

285. All MSs except घ्, छ्: –की। See above, note to 2/5d and cf. 3/110b. Note that in most cases the readings in MSs घ्, च् and छ् maintain the required *anusvāra*s in the words of this hymn. The remaining manuscripts frequently omit them, but not in every case or unanimously. Concerning the erroneous omission of anusvāra by scribes of the KMT Goudriaan and Schoterman remark (1988: 53): 'The loss may be accidental or caused by certain considerations, e.g. a different conception of the syntactical structure. . . . Especially within a pāda, some scribes seem to have considered the writing of the anusvāra hardly necessary, especially when another word which contains the desired ending follows immediately. In such cases one might speak of "delayed case-ending".' Admittedly, a common feature of hymns found in the Kubjikā corpus structured like this one is an omission of *anusvāra*s. But in those cases also, as here, the MSs often disagree and may, anyway, be ultimately derived from just one or two faulty originals. I have therefore emended throughout even though at least three instances do indicate an original nominative ending (see 5/75c, 78c and 80c).

286. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –ता। 287. All MSs: देवी।

288. घ्: –मध्येस्थां; च्: –कमध्यं। 289. ङ्: –त; च्, छ्: दिव्यशक्ति:–।

290. ग्, च्: षघुकार–। 291. ख्: –ख्या।

292. च्, छ्: देवीं। Rather than assume the formation of the irregular compound मेनाख्यदुहितादेवीं, I prefer to accept the reading of the majority of the MSs and assume that the connecting pronoun ताम् is implied.

293. All MSs: व्यवस्थितां। 294. ख्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: लिंगाते।

295. ग्, ट्: –ख्यं। 296. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –ता।

297. All MSs: भगाह्लादन। Cf. 3/18d, 46/23b, 58/79b and 60/41d.

298. ट्: चिंचिणी। 299. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –घोरा।

300. क्: पुर। 301. ट्: –विनि:क्रांता; all other MSs: –विनिष्क्रांता।

302. All MSs: घोर–; घ्, च्, छ्: –घोरां घोर–; घ्, च्, छ्: –नीं।

303. All MSs: –युक्ता। 304. घ्, च्, छ्: –स्थां।

305. ख्: –स्थं। 306. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –वर्चसा। We may accept the reading –वर्चसा and take it to be an instrumental. But it is more likely that an irregular feminine has been formed from the neuter noun वर्चस्. The correct form of the feminine nom. sing. would be वर्चस्वी and of the acc. sing. वर्चस्विनीम्, neither of which fit the metre.

307. क्, घ्, छ्: दिव्य आज्ञा–; all other MSs: दिव्या आज्ञा–।

308. घ्, च्, छ्: पूज्यां। 309. All MSs: सिद्धि:।

310. घ्, च्, छ्: स्फुता; all other MSs: स्फुटा।

311. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –री। The regular form –प्रदात्रीं does not fit the metre. The form दातारी occurs once below (see 6/30a). The MSs read प्रदातारा in 42/6c but the original reading was probably प्रादातारी. Four examples are also found in YKh (1) (1/79a, 21/35c, 37/51a, and 37/53c). The third line of the ambādvādaśikā found in the SKh, which is virtually the same as this one, contains the same deviant form. It reads: आज्ञासिद्धिप्रदातारीं (ख् ग्: –री) श्रीकुजाम्बां (क्: –कुब्जा–; ग्: श्रीकु * *) नमाम्यहम् (ग्: * * * *).

312. च्: देवरै:। F → M. The same deviant form occurs five more times in this text. See 6/2d, 19/18a, 34/118c, 46/246c, and 46/257a.

313. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –ता।

314. ङ्: –त; all other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –ता।

315. क्, ग्: –क्षै:योगिनीगणघृंदकै:; ज्, ट्: –धरैर्यक्षै:योगिनीगण–।

316. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –रता देवी।

317. घ्, च्, छ्: भरितां भैरवीत्युग्रां; all other MSs: भरिता भैरवीत्युग्रा। The correct sandhi, –भैरव्यत्युग्रा, would disturb the metre. 318. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –नी।

319. घ्, च्, छ्: –माते। See note to 5/41b.

320. घ्: प्रभुर्देविं; छ्, ज्, ट्: प्रभुर्देवि। See above, note to 4/38c.

321. छ्: –रव * ज्ञे। 322. ख्, ङ्: –मार्ग।

323. च्: कादिमते। 324. घ्, च्, छ्: अम्वा–।

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER FIVE

1. Although the goddess already emerged from the Liṅga at the end of the previous chapter (4/47cd-48ab), in the following 28 verses the god implores the goddess again to come out of the it to transmit the Command to him and teach him (see above, note to 3/164cd-165ab). According to the account in the KMT, from which this one is derived, the goddess emerges out of the Liṅga just after Bhairava has finished intoning the Mālinīstava. Here an extra passage has been inserted in which the god who has come to the goddess to receive her saving grace dialogues with her while she is still in the Liṅga. The account in the KMT is more consistant in this respect. While the goddess is in the Liṅga, no dialogue is possible, and none takes place. The goddess in the Liṅga is in her unmanifest state, hidden in the transcendent. Accordingly, the KMT describes her as silent in that state, which is itself said to be profound Silence. See below notes to 5/22, 76cd-77ab, 6/3-4ab and YKh (2) 16/5 quoted in note to 5/77cd-78ab.

2. Previously (above, 3/67cd-68) the goddess admited that the god desires the Command from her. Even so, she again accuses him here of wanting only sex from her.

3. The Kramamaṇḍala is not often called the 'abode of the (enlightened) intellect' (dhīpura), but we do find one other example, at least, of this usage. This occurs in YKh (2) (17/23cd) where the maṇḍala is called the 'abode of Vṛkṣanātha's (enlightened) intellect' (*klinnājñāyā varaṁ * tu vṛkṣanāthasya dhīpure*). 4. Cf. above 3/25-28.

5. 'Anuloma' is an adjective that literally means 'going with the hair' that is 'going with the grain'. It serves to describe a relationship that is in accord with the normal order of things. Thus a woman who is anulomā is one who is of a lower caste than that of the man with whom she is connected. One who is born from such a union is anulomaja, that is, an offspring of a mother of inferior caste to the father. Viloma is the reverse of this. Vilomaja means 'born in the reverse order', that is, born of a mother belonging to a higher caste than the father (Monier-Williams). In other words, the goddess is saying that the god is deemed to have a higher status and so should be the teacher. Whereas the goddess, like a good wife and disciple, should be the servant of her consort.

6. Concerning this term, see below note to 16/25cd-26ab.

7. The goddess is saying that the teachings are transmitted on the basis of the relationship that is formed between a teacher and the disciple. If no such relationship can be established between the goddess as the teacher and the god as the disciple, the teachings cannot be transmitted.

8. Sūtrakrama literally means 'sequence of sūtras'. We have seen in the introduction that the original core of the Manthānabhairavatantra consists of sections called *sūtra*s probably written by more than one person. Thus the original scripture did indeed consist of a sequence of such *sūtra*s. Here this sequence - krama - is identified with the Kulakrama, that is, the entire teaching.

9. Cf. 5/25. 10. See above, note to 3/67cd-68.

11. asmy ahaṁ pūrvamanmathaḥ lit. 'I am (your) previous god of love (manmatha).' 12. In the KMT (1/47) the god says:

> O goddess, I was first impelled by you and then again, you by me. In this Age I (am imparting the teaching) to you and you will again give it to me.

Similarly:

> You (have told) me (this) and I (have told it) to you. I (have been instructed) by you and you by me again. O fair hipped one, it has been told to you and from you it bestows liberation to others.

tvayā mahyaṁ mayā tubhyaṁ tvayāhaṁ tvaṁ mayā punaḥ |
kathitaṁ tava suśroṇi tvatto hy anyeṣu [k: hy anteṣu KMT: tvatsaṅgānyeṣu] mokṣadam || ṢSS 19/103 = KMT 13/89cd-90ab.

In the beginning of chapter nine of the KRU we are told about the forms the god and the goddess assumed in previous ages. It opens with the goddess asking how the Kula tradition (kulāmnāya) will be worshipped. She says that he is the teacher who is the lord of the cosmic ages and possesses the Language of the Aeons (yugabhāṣā). Even so, she wants to know who will be the one who brings down (avatāraka) the Kula tradition in successive cosmic ages. The god replies that he will tell her about the 'wealth of the descent' of the teaching and declares:

> In this beginningless age (kalpa) this is the teaching of the Śrīkula. O goddess, I have told you the condition of (that reality which is) accomplished from the beginning. O supreme goddess, here I, O goddess, have become your teacher. In the second pervasive age you will be my (teacher). The Kulakrama is brought down (to earth) in this sequence by descents of just aspects (aṁśamātra) of you and I.

asmin anādike [k kh: asminna-] kalpe [g: kalpa] idaṁ śrīkulaśāsanam |
mayā te kathitaṁ devi ādisiddhaṁ yathāsthitam ||
atra ahaṁ tvadgurur devi saṁjātaḥ [kh: saṁjñāḥ] parameśvari |
dvitīye vyāpake kalpe mama tvaṁ ca bhaviṣyasi ||
anena kramayogena aṁśamātrāvatāraṇaiḥ |
madīyaiś ca tvadīyaiś [g: svadīpaiś] ca avatārya kulakramam || KRU 9/8-10.

See intro. vol. 1, p. 136.

13. Note that the goddess is the god’s consort, teacher, goddess and mother but whereas the god is similarly said to be the goddess’s consort, teacher and god, he is only rarely said to be her father (for one such rare reference see YKh (1) 4/288-289ab quoted below in note to 5/33-34). See also above, note to 3/64cd-65ab.

14. Doṣakriyā literally means ‘action (resulting) from a defect’.

15. I suppose this is what is meant by the expression mantrasaṁketakaṁ tapaḥ. Each school of Tantra has its own ‘convention’ (saṁketa) that is, ‘teaching’ that establishes the form and permutations of its mantras in accord with the nature of the deity upon which it focuses. In this case, the goddess is the main deity and so this convention relates to her and it is she, rather than the god, who is attained through it when applied in the Kulakrama, that is, in the liturgy and related practice.

16. One could also translate tvaṁ ca siddhaḥ kulakrame as 'and you are the Siddha in the Kulakrama'. If we understand the Sanskrit in this way, the god is saying to the goddess that she, despite her gender, assumes the full status accorded to the male partner when it is her turn to be the supreme deity and teacher of the Kula transmission.

17. Note the contrast implied here between the sexual relationship the god has with the goddess when she is his wife and he is her husband and the chaste one in which he is the disciple and she is his mother and teacher (cf. above 4/2).

18. Below in 13/106cd we are told that the teaching gathered together from the past is the tradition (anvaya).

19. Tantraśāstra and Tāntrikas are repeatedly depreciated with respect to the Kulaśāstra and Kaulas throughout this text. Cf. 13/72cd-73ab and see intro. vol. 2, 254 ff..

20. Kaula scriptures of all schools commonly claim that they are especially meant for this, the fourth Age. The fifteenth century Sarvānanda in his interesting compendium of references from the Kaula Tantras circulating in his days, the Sarvollāsa (1/23-24) quotes one of these sources as saying:

> In the Age of Truth the rituals expounded in the Vedas (śruti) (are the form of religion). In the Tretā Age the Smṛtis are respected (as authorities). In the Dvāpara Age, the Purāṇas and in the Age of Strife the Āgamas are considered (to be the main scriptures). In the Age of Strife, the wise man should sacrifice to the gods in accord with the method (vidhāna) expounded in the Āgamas. In the Age of Strife the gods are not pleased by any other method.

Our text tells us here that out of all the Kaula schools, or 'Houses', only this one, that is, the Western Kaula Transmission associated with the City of the Moon (Candrapura) can lead the initiate to the ultimate goal in this Age of Strife (cf. 3/168-170) or, more specifically, at the end of this Age (6/183cd-184ab). This is the Age in which the scriptures of the goddess have come down into the world (7/5-6). Similarly, YKh (1) (4/222cd-224ab) declares:

> (This teaching) certainly bestows liberation in all respects at the end of the Age of Strife. The Eastern House is (the one) in the Kṛta Age, the Southern House in the Tretā (Age). In the Dvāpara (Age), it is the Northern House and in the Age of Strife, the venerable Western House. (This is) where the (liberating) Śāmbhava state that is all pervasive and faces everywhere is present.

muktidaṁ sarvabhāvena kalisyānte na saṁśayaḥ ||
kṛte yuge pūrvaṁ [k, kh, gh: pūrvva] veśmaṁ [gh: veśyaṁ] tretāyāṁ dakṣiṇaṁ [k, kh, gh: -ṇa] gṛham |
uttaraṁ dvāpare [k, kh: -raṁ] veśmaṁ kalau śrīpaścimaṁ [k, gh: -me; kh: -ma] gṛham ||
śāmbhavaṁ [k, kh, gh: śābhavaṁ] yatra līnaṁ tu vyāpakaṁ sarvatomukham |

21. The House of the venerable City of the Moon is the Kubjikā tradition. It is the 'tradition' or 'house' of the maṇḍala in the End of the Twelve above the head. From there Kuṇḍalinī descends into the body and world with the teachings. Here she returns transporting in her flux of energy the individual soul (jīva) who, when he reaches this 'House' finds there liberation.

22. Trembling is one of the outer signs of attainment. See intro. vol. 1, p. 51.

23. The god is standing before the Liṅga which is pervaded by the goddess's presence. After imploring the goddess in the Liṅga to teach him, for this and the following ten verses, the god goes on trying to persuade her to come out of it by praising and worshipping her both as present within the Liṅga and as the Liṅga itself.

24. The outer Liṅga, like the inner one described concisely here, is divided into two basic units, which in the outer Liṅga represent the male and female polarities. One is the body of the Liṅga itself. The other is the plinth into which it is inserted that supports it. According to Siddhānta sources, which deal extensively with the forms, structure and varieties of Liṅgas, this lower part of the Liṅga is the 'throne' (āsana) on which Sadāśiva, the deity of the Liṅga, sits. Brunner (1963: vol. 1 p. 234) explains that in Siddhānta ritual:

> The Liṅga is a symbol and a support that is 'inhabited' in a special way by Śiva for the duration of the pūjā. The encompassing support (pīṭha) that surrounds the lower, octagonal part of the liṅga (viṣṇubhāga) will receive the mantras designed to invoke the Throne [āsana]. In other words, the form of the Throne should be projected onto the pīṭha and the Liṅga proper, or to be more precise its visible cylindrical part (rudrabhāga) or the part above it, which receives the mantras meant to invoke the 'body' of Sadāśiva, whose form is mentally projected onto the Liṅga.

It is also said that: "the pīṭha is Śakti and the liṅga is Siva". This does not, perhaps, contradict the aforementioned notion, if one understands Śakti in the sense of parigrahaśakti [the encompassing energy of the Liṅga] or Bindu [the Point] or Kuṇḍalinī in so far as the āsana [throne] is made of Bindu and Māyā. It is taught [in the Āgamas] that creation, that is to say, the development of the possibilities latent in this substance, begins because Kuṇḍalinī is 'aroused' by Śiva; and we read many times [in the Siddhāntāgamas] that the union of Śiva with Kuṇḍalinī results in streams of nectar. However, this notion is not developed in the Śaiva tradition; it seems rather to belong to the line of thought that gave rise to the Śākta schools.

In other words, the union of the two parts, the Liṅga and its seat, represents the union of the goddess, in the form of Kuṇḍalinī, Bindu and Māyā, with the god. This union, on the one hand, initiates the process of emanation and on the other produces the vivifying nectar which, as Brunner rightly points out, is a major concern of the praxis of this and the Śākta schools. In this case both polarities – the Sky, which is the Liṅga, and the Earth, which is its seat – are the goddess. The two togther make the Liṅga of the goddess (devīliṅga), the divine Liṅga (divyaliṅga), which is not a union of Yoni and Liṅga but rather a Yoni that is both Yoni and Liṅga (yoniliṅga).

The Mother's Liṅga is the triangular core of the maṇḍala. She is equally both the Triangle which is the 'seat' of the Liṅga and the Liṅga here called the Liṅga of the Sky. Thus she is frequently said to be the Triangle just as she is praised as the Liṅga of the Sky in the Mālinīstava (line 39). She is, in other words, the Liṅga in the Liṅga (see above, 4/47cd-48). The Liṅga in the transcendental emptiness of the centre is the Liṅga of the Sky. Below in verse 38/6 we are told that it is the Point (bindu) where Oḍḍiyāna, the first sacred seat from which the others originate, is symbolically projected. Out of this Void, the energies that constitute the Yoni, the triangle of emanation, stream forth.

25. A fanciful etymology of the word Liṅga, well known to all Śaiva and their related Kaula traditions, derives the word from two roots. 'li' is said to be related to the root 'lī', which means 'to dissolve away' or 'merge'. 'Ga' is said to be derive from the root 'gam', which means 'to go' and denotes in this case the going forth of the stream of emanation that emerges out of it. With this etymology in mind the god identifies the goddess directly with the Liṅga because everything is merged in her and, he could just as well add, everything comes forth from her.

26. In these two verses the goddess, who is both transcendent and immanent is said to be the earth, the Liṅga, mantra, the Vidya, the Command, Siddhi and Śakti. Cf. 4/21 above where we are told that the Command within the Yoniliṅga possesses five aspects, namely: mantra, Vidyā, Gesture (mudrā), the Yoginī and the deity of the Kula (kuladevatā).

27. This mortal is not an ordinary fettered soul. He is the teacher whose sacred body enshrines his enlightened being. The god is saying that even though he does come into the world as the teacher, it is the goddess's doing. She is the ultimate source of the teachings. She is the ultimate cause of their transmission. She is Śakti - power - and to the degree that one has this divine power one has the devotion, strength and inspiration to worship the goddess. For, as the well-known saying goes: as is (one's) power so is (one's) devotion (yathā śaktis tathā bhaktiḥ).

28. A hermitage (āśrama) is a place where Siddhas (6/123, 126ab) and deities reside. It is the dwelling of true yogis (66/79). Tūṣṇīnātha's cave dwelling is a hermitage (3/1). The part of the maṇḍala called the Tree of Brahmā is the hermitage of Vṛkṣanātha, the Lord of the Tree (19/79). Himavat also lives in a hermitage (KMT 1/26a) and the Island of the Moon is said to have many of them (ibid.1/60). Bhairava goes to meet the goddess in her hermitage in each sacred seat (6/7, 90) and he also has one (6/73cd). Caṇḍikā's hermitage is on Śrīgiri (46/225)

The Liṅga is the hermitage of the goddess who embodies the Command (4/24). This is the Point in the centre from which the Command spreads by means of the sacred seats (38/24). Similarly, the Śiva Liṅga within which the god resides is his hermitage (13/107d-109). Conversely, Bhairava who contains all things and all the planes of being within himself is the cosmic hermitage of the universe (66/4).

A hermitage is a place where divine beings resides and so is a maṇḍala. Thus the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is not uncommonly said to be the Hermitage of Gesture. The goddess is Gesture (39/151cd-153) and the maṇḍala is her residence (6/2), as it is that of the god (13/113). Similarly, when the maṇḍala is referred to as the House of the City of the Moon, it is also called a hermitage (7/95). The Triangular Meru with its fifty letters is the hermitage of the energy of the god's will, the goddess who emerges from him (8/5). The deities of the goddess Mālinī's six limbs together make up what is called the 'hermitage of deities' (devatāśrama) (18/96).

Each of the letters presided over by Siddhas and Yoginīs are sacred sites (sthāna) or hermitages, these and other such inner places together make the Path of Yoga (14/49). All sacred sites may be referred to as a hermitage as are the main sacred seats (46/173ab; 65/33). They are the hermitages of Siddhas (6/126ab, 164cd) as well as of the deity (6/165cd) who resides there. Although the expression siddhāśrama specifically refers to the place where Siddhas reside to distinguish it from the residence of a deity, a deity may also reside there. The worldly residence of each of the three founding Siddhas, for example, although also a sacred seat (pīṭha) is referred to as a hermitage when the text focuses specifically on them (7/57). In such hermitages the mind becomes stable (sthira) (6/78)

As the abode of the teachings, the tradition itself is a hermitage (kulāśrama) (45/62). It is the triangular hermitage of the Western House (65/1) from where the oral tradition is propagated (7/37cd). The Void in the centre of the Triangle out of which emerges the goddess of Unstruck Sound is sometimes called the Cave Hermitage (17/24). Similarly, the Supreme Lord's hermitage is the dwelling place of the Cave of the Void (śūnyaguhāvāsa) (58/65cd).

A seed-syllable mantra is like the body (piṇḍa) of the deity to which it is linked and so may also be referred to as a hermitage (8/77cd-79ab). Conversely, the places where seed-syllables are projected onto the body are hermitages (21/37) as are the inner locations within the body of Siddhas or deities (46/190ab, 196cd-197ab). And so the entire body is a hermitage that is 'well produced' by the projection of the Krama, the limbs of the deity and the inner Wheels (50/12cd).

A hermitage is also the dwelling place of more abstract spiritual principles such as devotion (5/24). The Divine Sound (nāda) within the inner Moon is the hermitage of the individual soul (puruṣa) (67/35). In even more abstract terms, oneness is a hermitage. It is the dwelling place of attainment. Indeed, it is the supreme accomplishment itself (siddhirūpa).

29. I understand aṣṭāṅgagati- to be synonymous with aṣṭāṅgapraṇāma- that is, the prostration of the eight parts of the body as a sign of profound obeisance. The eight parts are the hands, breast, forehead, eyes, throat and middle of the back. Alternatively, they are the first four along with the knees and feet or these six along with speech and mind.

30. The Command which is the essential, undifferentiated (niṣkala) aspect of the goddess is the first to emerge from the Void that precedes creation. In this form the goddess is said to have performed long and terrible austerities which ultimately lead to the union of Śiva and Śakti and so to the origin of the Transmission (28/144-148 and 35/78cd-81) and the world. The goddess within the Liṅga in the Cave is immersed in the contemplation of this power of austerity (tapobhāvanā) (6/3) which the Liṅga possesses.

31. The majority of the manuscripts read siddhasaṁketa- 'the Siddha's Convention' in the place of siṁhasaṁketa- 'the Lion's Convention'. The former reading has been rejected as I have not been able to trace any other instance of this expression although, admittedly, the one selected is not common. One of the rare places it occurs is in the following passage in the AS:

I will tell (you) about the Lion's Convention that has come forth from the spherical shaped (Point) (bindu). Its form is Bhairava who (resides) in the lotus of the Heart in union (utsaṅga) with his deity. (It is) the Sound of the Lion (siṁhanāda) that has come forth from the centre of the Island (of the Moon) in many forms.

siṁhasaṁketakaṁ vakṣye golākārād vinirgatam |
hṛtpadme bhairavākāraṁ utsaṅge tasya devatā ||
siṁhanādaṁ dvīpamadhyān nirgataṁ bahurūpataḥ | AS 22/31-32ab.

The Sound of the Lion, as we have seen (note to 3/7), is the essence of the goddess's Vidyā as the Unstruck Sound which issues from the Point in the centre of the Triangle. The goddess is the Mālinī order of the alphabet (see below 5/47cd-8ab), the silent (asvara) sound of consciousness. Mālinī is the goddess who has assumed the form of the Point, here called the Liṅga, and intent by means of her Yoga to assume both the supreme transcendent state and that of immanence (18/69). In short the Liṅga is here identified with goddess in the centre of her own transmission (the Mālinīkrama) of which she is the essential nature. Similarly, her body is the god who is Unstruck Sound, here called the Lion's Convention. She is the Liṅga in the midst of the energies of the Mālinī order of the alphabet and so is within herself as her own essential nature even as she is the energies that encompass her. She appears there in the form of her Vidyā or seed syllable. Thus she is the supreme exemplar of a basic pattern. Each Kaula school is a 'Lion's School' (siṁhadarśana) (see intro. vol. 2, p. 334 ff.) and transmits a teaching or 'convention' of that Lion, the essence of which is the root Vidyā of the goddess of that Kaula transmission.

32. The reader will recall that when the goddess Kālikā was betrothed to the god, she chose to became his disciple (see intro. vol. 1, p. 4 ff.). It was in this condition that she entered the Liṅga.

33. Above in 4/23cd instead of knowledge, it is said the teacher should possess the Command which is virtually the same thing. Then the Kaulikī Command can come down into the world and with it the Kaula scriptures. Cf. 5/7.

34. Mudrā is the goddess (39/151cd-153). She is Kuṇḍalinī who pierces through the Wheels in the body and so is aptly called the Scalpel of Knowledge (concerning which see below, note to 5/35–36).

35. Note the male gender of this vocative. Throughout the text, the goddess is sometimes addressed as if she were male rather than female. See note to 2/39.

36. See above 4/47cd-48ab and below 5/66.

37. The point in the centre of the maṇḍala is the unmanifest Liṅga. When it bursts open, the maṇḍala, which is the goddess's body, unfolds out of it. The first part of the maṇḍala that emerges in this way, is its triangular core, which is said here to be the goddess's face. We may infer that the rest of the maṇḍala is her body.

38. Cf. 68/2 where the the goddess of this colour is called Ciñciṇī and Mātaṅgi and is said to be very fierce. Concerning the colour of the goddess who emerges from the Liṅga, see intro. vol. 1, p. 43 ff..

39. In her previous birth, the goddess immolated herself in the Fire of Time. This is why she was reborn as Kālī, the goddess of Time. According to the more detailed account of the KMT (see intro. vol. 1, p. 44), when she entered the Liṅga as Kālikā, she had already received an empowering transmission of the Command from the god. But she still remained, despite her dark colour, the mild virgin Kālikā. Now fully empowered by the Command she has received within the Liṅga, she emerges from it burning with the energy that had previously consumed her and of which she is the embodiment.

40. Concerning the goddess's gaze, see intro., vol. 1, p. 42-43 and 46 ff..

41. See intro. vol. 1, p. 46 ff. for the KMT's account of the goddess's emergence from the Liṅga and the reasons for the goddess's bashfulness.

42. See above note to 5/22 where the standard sets of the eight limbs of the body are listed. The intended sense here may be another. The limbs of a deity are normally six viz, the deities Heart, Head, Topknot, Armour, Third Eye and Weapon. Moreover, they are not normally said to be 'rays' for the obvious reason that these limbs do not radiate out of the goddess's body but are a part of it. Perhaps the text is alluding to the Eight Mothers (mātṛkā) who do emanate from Kubjikā's body just as the Seven Mothers emanate from the goddess of the Devīmāhātmya. Located on the eight petals of a lotus that surrounds the hexagonal core of the maṇḍala that represents the goddess's body with its six limbs, the Eight Mothers are worshipped there as the emanation of the goddess's energies (i.e. 'rays') out into the eight quarters of space.

43. The word 'ghūrmi' (or in more correct Sanskrit 'ghūrṇi') denotes the rolling around of the eyes or, by extension, the swaying of the body when a person is drunk. According to the version of the myth in YKh (2) (16/223), the god, penetrated by the goddess's energy when she emerged from the Liṅga, rolled around on the ground. See intro. vol. 1, p. 193.

44. Although the goddess converses with the god from within the Liṅga (see note to 5/1), here, somewhat inconsistantly, she is, as she is usually said to be, in a state of absorption in which she is as if deaf and blind. The YKh (1) explains why:

Śambhu's daughter, born in the Age of Strife, is the mother of the Kula (kulāmbikā), the Transmental. She abides in the form of a Liṅga in the auspicious house of Candrapura (i.e the Triangle). Unconscious (naṣṭājñā) on the Śāmbhava (plane), the goddess neither sees nor hears.

śambhuputrī kalau jātā unmanā sā kulāmbikā |
liṅgarūpeṇa sā tiṣṭhed gṛhe candrapure śubhe ||
naṣṭājñā śāmbhave devī na śṛṇoti na pasyati | YKh (1) 4/288-289ab.

The goddess 'neither hears nor sees' because she is immersed in the supreme transcendent beyond the duality of subject and object. This is also the reason why the god cannot see the goddess's body in the Liṅga (see above, 5/27) and why he cannot see or hear. The individual soul who reaches this, the liberated condition, receives the highest form of the Command - Śāmbhavājñā - imparted in a state of profound absorption heralded by yogic sleep, divine inebriation and other signs of attainment (pratyaya) listed in the following verses and elsewhere in our text.

45. This myth describes the first empowering initiation that marks the beginning of the transmission of the teachings in this Age. It not only explains what takes place in the course of initiation and the empowering transmission, it also establishes an original divine model. We shall see below in greater detail (for example 31/32cd-35ab, 33/46 and 33/181-186) how this model is reproduced in the initiation the human teacher imparts to his disciple who, like his divine archetype, also faints and displays the many signs of attainment (pratyaya) (see 5/17 and 33/47-49).

Kaula initiation is imparted by raising Kuṇḍalinī, a process called 'initiation by piercing' (vedhadīkṣā) (see 31/10cd ff.) because in the course of her rise, Kuṇḍalinī, along with the energies and principles related to her, pierce through the series of Wheels, Knots, Cavities, Supports and Doors arranged in an ascending order within the subtle body. The gaze of the goddess pierces in this way. Transporting the individual soul upward with the flux of her energy, it is merged into the supreme sphere of existence and then brought back down into the body, purified and enlightened.

46. See above 5/26 where Gesture (mudrā), that is, the energy embodied in the goddess, is said to be the Scalpel of Knowledge (jñānaśalākā) and is identified with Raudrī (cf. intro., vol. 1, p. 208). Raudrī is Rudraśakti, the goddess Kuṇḍaliṇī who emerges out of the Emptiness of Form (rūparandhra) - the essential vacuous, non-empirical nature of all that has form. Out of the Nameless, that is, the transcendent absolute, she utters the Sound (nāda) through which all things are created, sustained and destroyed (KuKh 36/91-92). The teacher uses this Sound like a scalpel, a thousand times more powerful than the radiant energy (tejas) of fire, to pierce through the Wheels of his disciples body. Repeating the same procedure, the true yogi bathes daily inwardly by means of Raudrī, the Scalpel of Knowledge. The SKh explains how:

> He who, unmanifest, is without beginning is Śiva, the supreme cause. The bathing of those who are always yogis takes place there in the Heart at the (supreme) end of the Transmental. The (inner) woman (lalanī) is the New Moon, the seventeenth energy who is supreme bliss. Subtle, she is the supreme Light and the form of a (spider's) thread, she moves upwards. Oozing (nectar), with (her pure) white nature, she is the Transmental present within the going and coming (i.e. ascent and descent of Kuṇḍalinī). Once attained the plane within the Pervasive One (vyāpinī) see the End of Sound. Once laid hold of Sound, the one who is established in reality (tattva) has bathed in the sphere of Unstruck Sound. (This is) Śiva's bathing that takes place within by means of Raudrī, the Scalpel of Knowledge.

yo 'sāv anādir [k: -dim; kh g: -di] avyaktaḥ [k kh g: avyaktaṁ] śivaḥ paramakāraṇam ||
tatra snānam unmanānte [g: -munmanānāṁte] hṛdaye nityayoginām ||
sūkṣmā ca paramā bhāsā ūrdhvagā [k: -gān; kh: -gena] tanturūpiṇī [kh: nurūpiṇī] ||
lalanī [k: luṭhantī] paramānandā amā saptādaśī [g: -dasī] kalā [kh: -lakā] ||
sravantī [k: srūvantī] śvetarūpeṇa unmanā sā gamāgame [kh: -maiḥ] ||
vyāpinyāṁ tu padaṁ prāpya nādāntam avalokayet ||
nādam ādāya [g: nādāmādāya] tattvasthaḥ [kh: tatrasthā; g: -sthā] snāto 'nāhatamaṇḍale [g: snānānāhat-] ||
śivasnānam antaraṅge raudrījñānaśalākayā [g: -kalākayā] || SKh 7/1-4.

This Divine Sound is embodied in especially powerful seed-syllables and mantras. Thus Bhairavī Vidyā is said to be like a scalpel (8/106). Similarly, the Scalpel of Knowledge (also called Scalpel of Awakened Knowledge - bodhajñāna) is the seed-syllable in the centre of the maṇḍala, namely, HSKHPHREṀ. This is the Liṅga. The energy that arises out of it is Māyā. This is the goddess, also called Mahāmāyā and Raudrī (59/91).

47. Cf. above, 4/50cd-51ab. Scattered here and there are references to the various forms of relationship the god has with the goddess. These include, as we have seen, friend (4/50-51ab), husband (5/8), son (5/84), devotee and even servant. One is reminded of Vaiṣṇava devotional literature according to which different levels of devotion are related to degrees of intimacy with the deity expressed in the form of the relationship established with it.

48. Almost all the MSs add the following spurious sentance: ‘The liturgy of Aghora with five and twelve limbs is here (in this scripture)’.

49. The expression 'gotrācāra' occurs only here in this text. However, the meaning is clear especially if we refer back to 4/14-17ab. There we are told that one who transgresses the Command by showing disrespect to the goddess is deprived of its power and so is 'outside the clan' (gotrabāhya). The god here protests that this is not the case with him. He has always followed the rules and practices of the tradition.

50. See above, note to 4/38.

51. 'Lord of Yogis' (5/43) is a title given to the initiate who lives the life of the renouncer, rather than the householder. As a technical term with this meaning it is rare, if not entirely absent, in other parts of the MBT and indeed, all the Kubjikā texts. According to the KuKh, this type of adept performs pilgrimages to the sacred seats of the Mothers (15/39cd-41). He is an initiate who `wanders in search of alms' (16/1) and sips the liquor given to him as alms in the assembly (37/45). He eats his food from a skull bowl and lives in an abandoned temple (37/21-22ab) or brothel (!) (37/43). The KuKh enjoins that he should go freely wherever he wishes (bhāvanā) and his mind should not be restrained. Thus, the 'he should always wander on the (face of the) earth along the path of non-duality' (37/44). He quickly attains whatever he desires (36/83cd-85) and he is in the company of Kāmadeva by practicing in the inner centre of Passion. (64/95).

52. See 3/21 and 4/50cd–51ab and notes.

53. See above 4/14-17ab. Another possible translation of jyeṣṭhā ārādhyā mama is: 'my elders that should be worshipped'. The elders in this case are the first seventeen teachers and their consorts out of the eighteen that make up the Convention of the Tamarind Flower (ciñciṇīpuṣpasaṁketaka), that is, the Divine Current of teachers who live the liberated life on the Śāmbhava plane (see above 2/20-26, below 7/63-67ab, and chapter 57). The eighteenth is the couple Śrīnātha and Ciñciṇī worshipped together as a couple (yugmabheda) at the conclusion of the Divine Current as its culmination and completion that encompassess the entire series. See below 57/99ab-101ab. Lines 5/46cd-47ab appear again below as 7/63cd-64ab.

54. It is not possible to attain liberation unless one knows the following things also.

55. Each of the three Transmissions (krama) namely, those of the Eldest, Middling One and the Child, contain all three. Moreover, each one of them was revealed in a different Age. The Transmission of the Child was revealed in this one, that is, the Age of Strife (kaliyuga) and so is mentioned here as it is the main one. In other words, when only three Transmissions are worshipped together, as is normally done, they are presumed to be those of the Transmission of the Child.

56. See the following chapter concerning the sacred seats and the deities in them.

57. The previous lines referred to the contents of the Point (bindu) in the centre of the maṇḍala, these to the rest of the maṇḍala in every part of which the goddess should be worshipped. She is also worshipped in the centre as Kaulikī, the goddess of the Kula, and Mālinī. In this way the basic maṇḍala of the earlier Kaula cults in which the god and the goddess - Kuleśvara and Kuleśvarī - are worshipped in the centre of the eight Mothers and their Bhairavas is reproduced with the added feature, characteristic of this Kula system, namely, the central Triangle containing the sacred seats and the pervasive presence of the goddess.

58. The Mouth of the Yoginī, also called the Mouth of (the Yoginī called) Picu is the Mouth of the Unborn (ajavaktra) and the Teacher (guruvaktra) in the End of the Twelve.

59. Cf. below, 30/114 and 30/127.

60. Nigraha 'suppression', 'restraint', or 'punishment' is the opposite of anugraha 'grace, help'. It is the practice of 'black' magic directed against an enemy whether an individual or a group. The texts stress that this should only be done in order to uphold and safeguard the practice of religion and right conduct – Dharma, especially against those who seek to harm the Kula. Kings who make use of it against enemy kings and their armies are thus, ostensively, defending the faith.

61. The word guṭikā, which literally means a 'pill' is the pellet of purified alchemical mercury. A man who manages to acquire this 'pill' is transformed into a Siddha (see below, 6/135cd-136ab and note). The accomplishment of the Pill (guṭikāsiddhi) is the accomplishment of the Command (ājñāsiddhi) which in this case assumes the concrete form of the scripture. The word guṭikā may also mean 'pellet' or 'bullet'. In the latter case the expression 'guṭikā pātanīyā' means 'the bullet should be fired' rather than 'the pill should be administered'. The Command, in the form of the scripture, is likened to a bullet. It transmitted with great force by the goddess's powerful gaze. We can compare this mode of transmission with the projection of the 'bullet' in the form of the syllable HUṀ fired by Siddhanātha at his detractors who by the force of the 'bullet' are thrown down unconscious onto the ground (ṢSS 46/53cd-55ab). The 'bullet' in that case serves to punish (nigraha), whereas here the initiate swoons due to the energy of grace (anugraha) and the force with which it is transmitted.

62. Concerning this and other mythical versions of the scripture, see chapter seven of the introduction.

63. Cf. 5/30.

64. The word 'artha' means, amongst other things, both the 'meaning of a word' and 'thing', 'entity' or 'reality'. Another meaning of the word 'artha' is not commonly found in the dictionaries. In Kashmiri Śaiva works and their Tantric sources, the word 'artha' is used in a technical sense to mean a 'doctrine' or 'system', as is the case with the term 'candrārtha' here. Thus we come across the expression 'trikārtha' which means both the 'teachings of the Trika school' or 'ultimate reality as expounded in the Trika teachings' (see TĀ 2, p. 29). Similarly, the Kālīkrama is commonly called 'mahārtha' and the Spanda branch of Kashmiri Śaivism and its teachings 'spandārtha' (Dyczkowski 1992: 140 n. 10).

65. The three times of the day are dawn, midday and sunset. See above, note to 2/6cd-7ab.

66. Mani (1984: 368) explains that according to the Purāṇas: 'This is the hell into which those who have persecuted other living beings are cast. Those who seize and enjoy another man's property or resources, also come under persecution. When such people are thrown into this hell, those whom they have persecuted or cheated while on earth, assume the shape of 'ruru' and torment them severely. 'Ruru' is a kind of dreadful serpent. This hell is called 'Rauravam' because of the abundance of rurus there.'

According to the SvT (10/82; also TĀ 8/24cd–27 and cf. MVT 5/1-2) this is the name of a hell world governed by one of the eighteen Rudras (TĀ 8/368cd-373ab) called Raurava. Abhinavagupta (TĀ 13/351cd-355) explains:

> (A deposed emperor) who, wishing to reconquer his empire, seeks the aid of a (former vassal) who rules there, (to overcome the) other emperor (of his) empire is (not aided but) destroyed. Similarly, one who desires knowledge and accomplishment of an increasingly higher order, goes to increasingly inferior masters is ruined. In just the same way, one who desires accomplishments that come from superior scriptures (but) is dedicated to scriptures subject to Māyā (māyīya) is ruined. It is also said in the venerable Ānandatantra: 'he who has chosen a (particular) ritual (karman), but feels an inner (bhāvataḥ) dislike for it (and so) when it proves fruitless choses another, wastes away day by day, and ultimately ends up burning in the Raurava and other (hells)'.

67. Here again the god addresses the goddess with a male title. He could have referred to her with the feminine deśikā.

68. Cf. below 5/64cd-65ab. After receiving initiation, the neophant is instructed in the meaning of the scripture. This is essential both for his own liberation and to qualify him as a teacher who can and should liberate others (65/21cd-22) (cf. yo yatra śāstre' dhikṛtaḥ sa tatra guruḥ; TĀ 2, p. 29). As we shall see in chapter 30 below, this takes place while the teacher dictates the scripture to him after he has initiated him. The disciple must copy the text carefully in the prescribed manner. The explanation he receives may also be written down (see 30/1-2ab and 30/27). Indeed, we do find passages in the scripture itself that are essentially explanations (vyākhyā). An example is chapter 17 of our text (see 17/56) and chapters 26, 38 and 42, which begin with the Root Sūtra and then go on to explain it. But although committed to writting, the explanation, like the Kulāgama itself, is ultimately oral. Thus, both are said to be permeated with divine speech (divyā vāṇī) (below 30/79-80), an expression that reminds us of the 'mighty speech' (mahāvāṇī) that the god addresses to the goddess in the Liṅga (above 4/11cd). Similarly, Bhairava possesses a 'deity's speech' (devatāvāṇī) when he utters the Mālinīstava that evokes the goddess out of the Liṅga (4/33cd). Impelled by bliss, at the goddess's Command, this form of speech graces the god (4/40).

69. See above, note to 5/41cd-43.

70. The End of the Sixteen in this context is the New Moon, the seventeenth and supreme energy of the Moon. The yogi who experiences the fullness of this energy – here called the gaze of the goddess – in the End of the Sixteen is liberated.

71. See below, note to 5/66cd-68ab.

72. The Command operates in two ways - for oneself and for others. Inwardly it is the liberating attainment of mystic flight coupled with insight into the nature of ultimate reality symbolized by the Liṅga inhabited by the goddess. Outwardly it is supreme skill in applying and spreading the teachings to liberate others.

73. The goddess's Vidyā is in one place at least called the 'Thunderbolt' (vajra) (30/53-55). More often the Thunderbolt is the syllable AIṀ: 'The thunderbolt (vajra) has the (triangular) form of a water chestnut and it faces downwards. It arises and falls away and the deity is Mātṛmudrā (the Gesture of the Mother)' (KuKh 58/43cd-44ab). The goddess utters this seed-syllable both to split apart the Liṅga and vitalize the Moon, that is, her own manifest form. The adept, like the Liṅga, must also be penetrated by the energy of this Thunderbolt in order to fulfil the Transmission (13/112-113ab). As her foundation, this seed-syllable is the thunderbolt-like lotus on which the goddess sits (5/72cd-73ab).

Vajra is also one of the names for the hexagon (ṣaṭkoṇa) that surrounds the central triangle of the maṇḍala (ṢSS 40/75cd-77; comm ṢSS 28/106 also ibid. 28/172 where this hexagon is called 'vajrapadma'). The Thunderbolt is also the female snake who conjoins the two triangles of the hexagon (vajrasandhi). This snake, also called the Wick of the Navel (30/48cd-49ab), is the aspect of Kuṇḍalinī located in the navel. By extension, the Wheel in the navel, that is, of the City of Jewels (maṇipuracakra) is called the Thunderbolt (see above, note to 3/98). It is made of the six parts. These are the six Wheels in the body beginning with the Wheel of the Foundation and ending with that of the Command (see note to 30/67 below). This is the Vajrakula - the Assembly of the Thunderbolt. In other words, the Thunderbolt is Kuṇḍalinī, either as AIṀ or the Vidyā, that travels round through the Wheels of the hexagon that, by extension, has the same name. In this way, the Thunderbolt travels up through the Point, the Liṅga of Space, in the centre of these two superimposed Yonis and so bursts it apart.

Note the reversals of gender and roles in this dense symbolism. The goddess, as Śukrā devī identified with female sperm, bursts out of the (male) Liṅga. The energy of the Liṅga spreads out from her rather than flooding her internally. Moreover, she penetrates into the Liṅga and then comes out of it in the form of the Yoni, rather than the other way around. The hexagon at the base of the Liṅga are two Yonis that are held together in union by it. It rises up out of them rather than into them. The energy that runs through the Yonis comes out through the Liṅga which is burst apart by the force of its rise and emergence. In the same way Kuṇḍalinī rises in the form of a subtle flame through the radiant Liṅga of the thread of Suṣumṇā, splitting it apart (31/59). Thus the energy rises up first through the (female) body out through the top of the head to the upper New Moon at End of the Sixteen (see 5/63-64ab). This vitalizes the Moon that exudes the nectar by which the consecration takes place. See above, 5/63-64ab.

74. At the conclusion of a visualization of a Liṅga in six sections (prakāra) projected into the six Wheels within the body, we read in the ŚM:

> He who knows the Liṅga that has assumed six aspects (ṣaṭprakāra), knows reality. [. . .] This is the Kuleśvara Liṅga that brings about creation and destruction. O fair lady, he who knows it is successful in this teaching. Thus one should not censor the Liṅga as long as it is in the the body. All can have it, the cause here (of its existence) is the imagination (kalpanā). Whether the Liṅga is that of the Person, generated from mantra, made of silver (or) gold and gems, once invoked Kuleśāna, whose form is mantra, project (him) here (into it).

*ṣaṭprakāragataṁ [g: -prakāraṁ-] liṅgaṁ yo jānāti sa [k: ] tattvavit || [. . .]
etat kuleśvaraṁ liṅgaṁ pralayotpattikārakam |
yo jānāti varārohe sa siddho hy atra śāsane ||
tasmāl liṅgaṁ na nindeta yāvat tāvat tanau sthitam |
sarveṣāṁ vidyate hy eṣa kalpanā py atra kāraṇam [g: kārakaṁḥ] ||
pauruṣaṁ [k: puruṣaṁ; g: dvipadaṁ] mantrajaṁ liṅgaṁ raupyaṁ [g: raupye] hemamaṇimayaṁ [k: haimaṁ ca maṇimayam] |
mantramūrtiṁ kuleśānam āvāhyāpy [g: hyamavi] atra ropayet [k: ropitam] ||
ŚM 14/153cd, 156-158.

In this reference we notice that, as in our text, three types of Liṅgas are mentioned. One pertains to the Person, that is, the Self, which corresponds to the Innate One (sahaja). The second type is generated from mantra. It is formed by the utterance of the prescribed mantras and visualizing their projection into the various parts of the Liṅga. In the example quoted here, they serve to form the body made of the mantras of Kuleśvara, that is, Bhairava, who is projected into the Liṅga imagined in the body and worshipped there. The Liṅga that is defined as an 'artifact' (kṛtrima) in our text is clearly the one made of various materials such as, silver, gold and gems.

Newar Kaulas, some of whom are initiated into the cult of the goddess Kubjikā, invariably worship a Liṅga as part of the preliminary rites of their daily ritual (nityapūjā) and the more elaborate worship of the Krama (kramārcana) they peform on special occasions. This is usually kept in the vestibule of the private chapel (called āgañcheṁ in Newari) or room (āgañkoṭa) to which only initiates are allowed access. A Liṅga is also commonly found in the courtyard outside the chapel. Apart from these Liṅgas Newars also worship, as do Kaulas everywhere, Liṅgas in public temples and shrines. Although they do worship the god in this way the prime object of worship is the goddess who embodies the energy of the god within it.

75. As Kubjikā's tradition is said to be that of the western quarter

(paścimāmnāya), it is not surprising that this direction is considered to be particularly auspicious in the Kubjikā Tantras. Accordingly, we find that it replaces at times the customary primacy of the eastern quarter in various ritual contexts. The drawing of the maṇḍala of the offering (argha) begins with the inverted triangle in the centre. The main corner of this triangle, that is, the front one should be facing west (see 11/24-25 and note). This is the normal orientation of the Kramamaṇḍala. YKh (2) (18/52cd) instructs that: 'He should cause the aforementioned maṇḍala to be fashioned facing west' (maṇḍalaṁ [k, kh: -le] kārayet tatra prāguktaṁ paścimāmukham). After describing the manner in which the triangle in the centre of the maṇḍala should be drawn, the KuKauM (17/106cd) declares: 'In this way the triangle is completed which is in the middle of the Yoni in the west' (tryasraṁ [k: tryagraṁ; kh: tryastryaṁ; g: tyaśraṁ; ṅ: tryatryaṁ] hy evaṁ [ṅ: kṣevaṁ] prasi-ddhyeta [ṅ: ca siddhyeta] yonimadhye tu paścime). Similarly the ŚM (9/35cd-36ab) admonishes that: 'one should fashion the maṇḍala there in a sacred seat (pīṭha) or field (kṣetra). Divine and facing west, the syllable OṀ has come forth from there' (pīṭhe vāpy athavā [g: vāpyatha] kṣetre [g: + vā] tatra maṇḍalam ārabhet [k: -ruhet; g: maṁḍarā-] | paścimābhimukhaṁ [kh: -mukho] divyaṁ [kh: devyaṁ] .okāraṁ tatra nirgataṁ [k: nirgamam] ||). Accordingly, the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is sometimes called Varuṇa's maṇḍala because it is drawn in the western quarter, which is that of Varuṇa (KuKh 48/3-5ab and note). Similarly, the Circle of Teachers (gurumaṇḍala), which is worshipped along with the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala, is drawn and worshipped facing west (48/3-5ab).

Flowers are thrown onto the sacrificial ground (sthaṇḍila) with the hand facing west after rotating around the maṇḍala in an anti-clockwise direction (48/9-10) thus reproducing the orientation and movement of the goddess Kuṇḍalinī. Accordingly, this is the direction the adept should face in the morning when he raises this energy from the Foundation through the other Wheels of his body (49/3cd-5). After the initial rites that serve to prepare the fire-pits and the fire offerings have been made, the disciple is introduced into the sacrificial enclosure. He holds a flower that should be placed to the west of the deity (33/88cd-89). YKh (1) teaches that:

As before (the teacher) should bring his disciple to the secret pavilion away from the rays of the sun and cause him to enter by the western door. The god faces north while the teacher faces west. He should worship his scripture (mata) with the left hand and the Vidyā.

pūrvavan maṇḍapagupte [ṅ: maṇḍape pūjya] ravikiraṇavarjite |
ānayet paścime dvāre svaśiṣyaṁ [ṅ: su-] ca praveśayet ||
uttarābhimukhaṁ devaṁ gurur vai paścimāmukhaḥ [gh: -cime-; k, gh, ṅ: -khaṁ] |

pūjayec ca mataṁ tasya vāmahastena vidyayā || YKh (1) 20/29cd-31ab.

After he has been initiated, the disciple should face west when listening to the teacher who, facing east, reads and expounds the Kula scripture (kulāgama) (30/224). The adept's daily practice is also related to the western direction. He should practice the inner sacrifice - a form of Yoga - at dawn facing west (49/3cd-5). Conserving and guarding his Śaiva roots even as he worships the goddess, the adept repeats the goddess's Vidyā in front of a Liṅga, taking care that it is one that faces west. The goddess resides within this kind of Liṅga. According to YKh (1):

The goddess Bhairavī, Mahātripurasundarī is beautiful. She severs the fetters with fearsome and great drops of blood, (red) like coral sprouts. By (the practice of) the supreme Yoga she abides within the Liṅga that faces west. He who recollects her (there), satisfied, possesses the Śāmbhavī liberation in (just) one lifetime.

śobhate bhairavī devī mahātripurasundarī ||
mahāraktakaṇair bhīmaiḥ pravālāṅkurasannibhaiḥ |
pāśachedaṁ hi kurute sā liṅge paścimāmukhe [k, gh, ṅ: -mukhaṁ] ||
sthitā paramayogena [gh: padma-; ṅ: paramā-] saṁtuṣṭāṁ yaḥ smared imām |
tasya caikena janmena muktir bhavati śāmbhavī || YKh (1) 43/161cd-163.

Mahāraktā, whose face is (triangular like a) Yoni is red like blood. She has arisen in the great forest of lotuses in the Liṅga facing west. She sings all the scripture and arouses the moving and immobile (world).
raktāruṇapratīkāśā mahāraktā [k: -rakṣā; gh: -rakṣāṁ] bhagānanā [k: bhayānanā] |
mahāpadmavane jātā liṅge vai paścimāmukhe [k g: paścimāṁ-] | prodgiret sarvaśāstrāṇi kṣobhayet sacarācaram | ibid. 43/115cd-116.

According to the KuKauM (5/6cd), the Liṅga that faces west is within the Yoni (paścimābhimukhaṁ liṅgaṁ yonisthaṁ parikīrtitam). We are also told there that the 'great forest of lotuses' is the Seat of Yoga (yogapīṭha) (mahāpadmavanaṁ cātra yogapīṭhaṁ prakīrtitam ibid. 5/8ab) which is the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala in the End of the Twelve.

76. The point here is that a Liṅga, venerated as the abode of the goddess, should be worshipped daily, as initiates do in fact do (see note to 5/66cd-68ab). Moreover, the rite should be performed in such a way that the theophanic vision of the goddess and inner initiatory consecration described above (5/63-64ab) may also take place.

77. See notes to 5/30 and 5/35 concerning the Lion’s Gaze.

78. The Mālinīstava is addressed to the goddess while she is still in the Liṅga. This hymn eulogizes the goddess in the centre of her maṇḍala in its fully displayed form that emerges from the Liṅga (i.e. the Point in the centre of the maṇḍala) along with the goddess.

79. The triangular letter AIṀ is in the centre of the goddess's maṇḍala. See below note to 5/74cd-75ab. See also note to 5/65cd-66ab above concerning thunderbolt-lotus (vajrapadma) as the hexagon.

Chapters 14 to 16 of the KMT, are dedicated to the description of five Wheels projected into the subtle body. The same five Wheels are also described in the ṢSS (19/115-25/159cd-195) and the ŚM (15/1-19/271). The following is based on the study of these chapters by Heilijgers-Seelen (1994: 131-134), to which the reader is referred for more details. What concerns us here is the fourth of these five Wheels namely, the Yoginīcakra. This is located in the Place of the Jar (ghaṭasthāna) (KMT 15/36d and 15/38d), also called the Base of the Jar (ibid. 15/40b), which is in the throat. I quote Heilijgers-Seelen (1994: 131) who supplies a description of the Place of the Jar, otherwise known as the Vajra-lotus (i.e. Thunderbolt-lotus), but omit the references:

'Located within the Ghaṭasthāna is the six-fold site of Kuleśvara . . . . This six-fold site consists of a vajra-lotus where the Yoginīs are seated [. . .] The lotus owes its vajra-form . . . to the fact that it is based on a lotus with eight petals two of which have been removed . . . . It is, in fact, an irregular six-petalled lotus, which indeed may be compared with a vajra having three peaks on each side. It is also conceived as a hexagon . . . which is the graphic symbol of the element air.'

Heilijgers-Seelen then goes on to explain on the basis of the texts (ṢSS 24/28-30 and commentary) how the four sacred seats are arranged on the six petals of the lotus (or corners of the hexagon). The scholar (1994: 132-133) goes on to list the locations of the six Yoginīs in the directions and the sacred seats first using their standardized names and then those found in the KMT (15/62c-75a. For diagram see Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 132 fig. 8). This data can be presented in the following tabular form:

6. Table of the Seats and Yoginīs of the Vajra-Lotus

Direction	Standardized Names		According to the KMT
	Sacred seat	Yoginī	Sacred Seat	Yoginī
North-east	O - Oḍḍiyāna	Ḍākinī	Oṁ-petal	Ḍāmarī
North-west	Jā - Jālandhara	Rākinī	Jā-petal	Rāmaṇī
North	Kā - Kāmarūpa	Lākinī	Kāma-petal	Lambikā
South-west	Pū - Pūrṇagiri	Kākinī	Pūrṇaka-petal	Kākī
South-east	Pū - Pūrṇagiri	Śākinī	Puṁs-petal	Sākinī
South	Kā - Kāmarūpa	Hākinī	Kāmeśvarī-petal	Yakṣiṇī

Heilijgers-Seelen (ibid. 134) goes on to note: ‘The same vajra-lotus occupied by six or seven Yoginīs is found in at least two other instances. In the external worship of Kubjikā described in the fortieth chapter of the ṢSS. Kubjikā, who is now called Vajrakubjeśvarī (75d) or Vajrakubjī (115a), is seated on a vajra-lotus (77b) in the company of Ḍākinī etc (76b). Likewise according to ṢSS 28/162ff, which describes the pūjā of Mahantārī Saptavaktrā, this goddess is seated on a vajra-lotus which is defined asa hexagon marked by a vajra. Her seven mouths (Aja, Īśāna, Tatpuruṣa, Aghora, Vāma, Sadya and Picu) are associated with Ḍāmarī etc who occupy the same position in the vajra-lotus as is described in the Yoginīcakra. . . . The seventh Yoginī called Yakṣiṇī is situated in the pericarp (ṢSS 28/173-181). Compare also the corresponding passage in the KMT (i.e. 19/17-32), where is stated that Mahāntārī holds a vajra in her hand and resides on a vajra in the centre of a group of Yoginīs (ibid. 19/26ab).’

Clearly, here is another instance of a form of Kubjikā seated on a vajra-lotus. There is no direct indication, however, that she is to be identified with Mahāntārī here or, indeed, Vajrakubjī. In this hymn she appears as Mahāmāyā and Mālinī, identified as Ciñciṇī, a common homonym of Kubjikā as the goddess of the tamarind tree. Her identity as Rudra’s energy is not specific to any of her forms but is common throughout the Kubjikā Tantras. Her identification with Siddhayogeśvarī (in 5/81cd-82ab) is an example of the many links between the Western Transmission and the Trika as is her identification with the goddesses Aghorā, Ghorā and Ghoratarā (in 5/78cd-79ab) who are forms of the basic triad (trika) of goddesses of the Trika - Parā, Parāparā and Aparā. Thus, the form of Kubjikā in the vajra-lotus in this case is Kujā as Mahāmāyā, that is, Mālinī who is said to be the goddess Ciñciṇī.

According to the ṢSS (40/36cd) the maṇḍala for the external worship of the goddess consists of an eight-petalled lotus with a triangle and a hexagon in the pericarp. This agrees with 5/48 above which tells us that there are eight 'outer' deities. Here, although the form of the maṇḍala is the same, that of the deity in the centre differs. The ṢSS says that the centre is occupied by Kubjikā of thirty-two syllables, that is, the Samayā Vidyā and Navātman Bhairava (ṢSS 40/38cd-39ab). Here, there is no mention of the male partner. The goddess Kujā is alone. Above in 5/48 she is called Kaulikī, which is the name of the goddess who is the thirty-two syllable Vidya 'without form' (amūrti) (see below, 9/67). But in 5/48 and 5/77, she is Mālinī (nādiphāntā). Perhaps this is the aspect of the goddess 'with form'.

80. The goddess becomes invisible when she enters the Liṅga. As she enters it the world is enveloped in darkness with the exception of the Liṅga that shines brilliantly with the light of the goddess’s power within it. Thus the goddess acts, as it were, in two ways at once. She obscures, even as she illumines. For the ignorant, devoid of devotion and insight who do not apply themselves to the teachings she is Mahāmāyā who deludes and binds them (cf. below 12/27-28). But she works within those who are devoted to her and the teachings, illumining the divine knowledge which is the Command they received when they were initiated. See below 9/27-28 and note to 13/10.

81. The goddess sits, as it were, on her seed-syllable - AIṀ - in the middle of the triangle into which are projected the four main sacred seats. This is set within a hexagon on the corners of which are her six parts (prakāra). Just as the goddess spreads out from the point in the centre where she resides as the syllable AIṀ, in the same way she goes on to develop into the hexagon. She is not only 'endowed' with its 'six parts'. She is them. We find a verse in the KuKauM (21/4cd-5ab) the first line of which is the same as 5/72cd and the second a variant of 5/75ab which says:

I salute the goddess called Kubjikā who, mounted on the seat, the letter AIṀ, and well established on the vajra-lotus has become the six parts.

*aiṁkārāsanam ārūḍhāṁ [k: ekārāśata-; kh: aiṁkāraḥ-; gh: ekārāsana-; g: eṁkārāsana-; ṅ: aikārāsamamārūḍhāṁ] vajrapadmoparisthitām [kh g: -sthitaṁ; ṅ: vajrapari * * sthitāṁ]* ||
ṣaṭprakāragatāṁ [k: vedyukāra-; ṅ: -gatā] devīṁ [g gh: devī; ṅ: devi. kh g gh ṅ: + śrī] kubjikākhyaṁ namāmy aham |

Concerning the goddess, her 'six parts' and the hexagon, see intro. vol. 1, p. 319 ff..

82. Menā is the wife of Himavat. Their daughter is Bhadrakālikā who is given to Bhairava in marriage and becomes the goddess Kubjikā. See above 3/160 ff..

83. The abode of the fourth state is in some places said to be the Wheel of the Command situated between the eyebrows (see above note to 3/101). In this case, it is the Liṅga which is the Point (bindu) in the centre of the maṇḍala. The goddess resides there in the fourth state of consciousness beyond waking, dreaming and deep sleep in which ultimate reality is experienced directly. This verse tells us that even when she emerges out of the Liṅga, into immanence, she never looses this, the fourth, transcendental state of consciousness. In other words, even when she has assumed the form of the maṇḍala, the archetypal template of all manifestation, she does not change, but remains essentially transcendental and hence vacuous by nature (khasvarūpā) (KuKh 31/48) and so, in a sense, always resides in the Liṅga.

84. When the goddess emerges out of the Liṅga she is fierce and frightening (KuKh 5/29) conversely, inside it she is tranquil and not fierce (aghorā). Concerning the goddess as Aghorā see intro. vol. 2, p. 49 ff.

85. See intro. vol. 1, p. 359.

86. Although this expression appears as many as eight times in our text, it hardly occurs in other Kubjikā Tantras apart from YKh (1). Four out of the eight times it occurs in the KuKh are in passages of YKh (1) reproduced in the KuKh. These are: KuKh 58/36cd = YKh (1) 28/35cd; KuKh 58/79ab = YKh (1) 28/79cd; KuKh 58/88 = YKh (1) 28/88 and 60/88ab = YKh (2) 34/17ab. The other three places apart from this one are KuKh 3/18, 46/23 and 60/41.

The goddess is the goddess because she is this bliss (cf. above 3/18). This bliss is commonly associated with Ciñciṇī, that is, Kubjkā as the goddess of the tamarind tree (ciñcā). This is probably because the goddess of the tamarind, a goddess of vegetation and growth, is especially identified with the bliss of generation (udbhavānanda) (61/26). Moreover, she is that aspect of oneness (advaita) which is the state of unity (samarasa) brought about by that bliss (46/21cd-23ab). We are told below (58/78cd-79ab) that when the mind is firmly established in the Supreme Self a higher state develops in which the yogi experiences the supreme savour (rasa) of the aesthetic delight of consciousness. This 'tasting' takes place within the matrix of energies of the Yoni and so, as here, this state, is the goddess Ciñciṇī herself who is the bliss of the Yoni (bhagāhlāda).

This bliss is the dynamic aspect of the spiritual bliss of ultimate reality, just as the Bliss of Stillness (nirānanda) is the passive one. Our text (58/36cd-37ab) defines it accordingly:

> There, in the middle (of Bhairava) is the bliss of the Yoni (bhagāhlāda). It is the great bliss, the creative outpouring of the Yoni (bhagodbhava). (This) creative outpouring (udbhava) is Kaula Yoga, the Udyāṇa Liṅga and the deity.

It is generated by the spontanous expansion and contraction of the matrix of energies that takes place when the polarities, that is, the female matrix itself and the male god who arouses it, unite. Below (58/86cd-88ab) we are told:

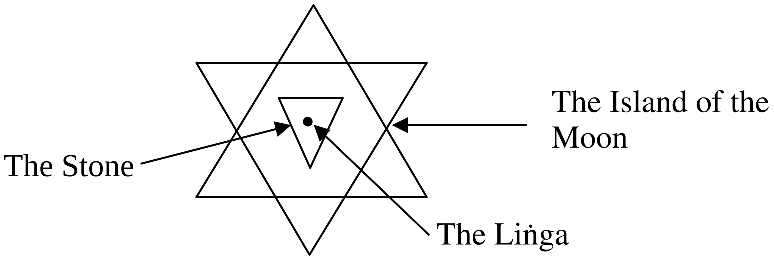
> The state (avasthā) arises, as before, which is the bliss of the Yoni (bhagāhlāda). By churning both in a subtle way (kiñcit), one attains supreme bliss, that is, power which is the deity of bliss. This is liberation and the supreme austerity.

A similar expression with the same meaning viz. 'the bliss of the Yoni', is bhagānanda. This occurs only once in our text (see below 63/76). There we are told that the energy in the middle of the Yoni is called Bhagā. Generated from the bliss of the Yoni (bhagānanda), she is the bliss that pervades it. In other words, there are two forms of bliss, that is, aspects of the same energy of bliss in the Yoni. One is the 'bliss of the Yoni'. This is the source of the bliss that pervades the Yoni symbolically located within the Point in the centre. The other is the bliss that pervades it symbolized by the triangular syllable AIṀ and described as the 'Yoni (= Bhagā) in the Yoni'.

87. See above, note to 4/41cd-42.

88. The Island of the Moon is sometimes the entire maṇḍala. Sometimes, it seems, the Island of the Moon is just the hexagon (58/28) that surrounds the triangular core of the maṇḍala. In either case, the Stone is the Triangle shaped like a waterchestnut (śilā śṛṅgāṭakākārā YKh (2) 25/60a) in the middle of the maṇḍala (cf. YKh (2) 16/5, 13-14ab quoted in intro. vol. 1, p. 159-160), Identified with the goddess, it is the matrix of phonemic energies (See KuKh 3/2-3, 31-32). On this, that is, within it, is the Point, which is the transcendental source of the energies and the Liṅga into which the goddess enters and from which she subsequently emerges.

Diagram 1. The Goddess's Abode



89. See above 3/160-161.

90. The goddess's 'own Wheel' (svacakra) is the Wheel of Space (khacakra). Indeed, one wonders whether to emend the former reading to the latter. The Wheel of Space is the form of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala at the End of the Sixteen-finger space above the head. The goddess wanders there in the transcendental Void like a bird in the sky (see below 38/20).

91. Here is another example of how Trika doctrine is assimilated into the teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras. Another one follows after just two verses (5/81cd-2ab). There, as elsewhere, the goddess is identified with Siddhayogeśvarī, the supreme goddess of the Siddhayogeśvarīmata, an important Trika Tantra. Here she appears in one of the classic triadic (trika) configurations from which the Trika school derives its name. The most basic triad consists of the three aspects of the goddess of the Trika Tantras, namely the goddesses Parā, Parāparā and Aparā. Abhinavagupta tells us that according to Trika doctrine they correspond to the powers of will, knowledge and action, respectively and generate these three categories of energy, the Aghorā, Ghorā, and Ghoratarā. How they function in these ways is described in the following reference from the MVT which is frequently quoted by Kashmiri Śaiva authors (Abhinava comments on it in TĀ 3/71cd-75ab).

Kashmiri Trika Śaivites consider the MVT to be one of the most important Tantras. The KuKh declares that it was the first scripture to be created in the series that culminates in the 'scripture of the Neuter' (68/126cd-128) and so is particularly authoritative. It is quite likely, therefore, that the following passage from the MVT (3/31-3) that identifies these three goddess as hosts of energies emitted from the Trika goddesses was known to the redactor(s) of the KuKh:

The Ghoratarā (energies), which are the lower (aparā) ones, embrace the Rudra (i.e. individual) souls. Having done so, they throw down (those) individual souls who are attached to the objects of sense to increasingly lower levels.

Those who, in like manner, cause (individual souls) to be attatched to the fruits of mixed (good and bad) actions and block the path to liberation are the middling (parāparā) (energies called) Ghorā.

Those energies of Śiva who, as before, bestow the fruits of Śiva's abode to living beings are said to be the supreme (parā) ones which those who know (call) Aghorā.

92. It is possible to read 'ghora' instead of 'aghora'. But although three manuscripts do support this reading, it is much more likely that 'aghora' is correct and that this a reference to to Svacchanda Bhairava who is commonly called Aghora. His mantra, the Aghora or Bahurūpa mantra consists, like the Kubjikā Samayā Vidyā, of thirty-two syllables (see above, note to line 25 of the Mālinistava). Here we witness the close relationship between the Kubjikā tradition and the Trika on the one hand and the cult of Svacchanda Bhairava on the other.

93. In the Wheel of Space above the head, the form of the goddess is that of an old woman - Jyeṣṭhā. In the middle region, that is, in the navel, she is a young woman - Yauvanā. In the lowest centre, the Triangle of Birth in the genital region, she is a girl. These three forms are likened to the sun at dusk, midday and dawn, respectively and are those of the goddess who governs the corresponding three Transmissions of the Aged, Youth and Child. Thus the form of the goddess who resides in the Triangle of Birth is the one that governs the Transmission of the Child which is especially important in this Age of Strife (kaliyuga) (see above, note to 4/41cd-42).

94. See intro. vol. 2, p. 63 about Kubjikā's identity as Rudra's energy.

95. One wonders whether this exclamation should recall to mind the birth of the god directly from the goddess in the Liṅga as described in the KRU (see intro. vol. 2, p. 477). If so the KuKh post-dates the KRU. But this is not at all certain. The goddess is said to be the mother of the god in several places. By extension she is also mother of the god when, as Mitra, he is the first Siddha.

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER SIX

1. ख्, छ्, ज्: –वरमन्यं; च्: –मन्यत्। M → N. The reading in MS च् is correct Sanskrit. Even so I have chosen to leave the reading of the majority of the MSs as this deviation is common throughout our text. See above, note to 1/2c.

2. ट्: भैवति।	3. घ्, च्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच।

4. See above, note to 3/17a. This line is quoted in the SaṁP.

5. घ्, च्, छ्: प्रतिष्ठा।	6. ङ्: देवतैस्। See above, note to 5/81c.

7. छ्: सहः।	8. ख्, ग्, घ्, च्: तुष्णी; ङ्: तुष्मी; all other MSs: तूष्णी।
Cf. below 6/11c.	9. Clearly, the intended sense here is तपोभावनारूढा. The compound has been split up, the position of its component members changed and the word तपस् thematized in order to adjust for the metre.
See above, note to 5/22a.	10. ङ्: –तय।

11. क्, ख्, ङ्, ट्: उदीकारपते; all other MSs: उदीकारयते। It seems that a deviant form derived from the root उड्डी (1Ā and 4Ā) is meant here and has been emended accordingly. The regular causative form would be: उड्डापयति.	12. ङ्: –रण।

13. All MSs except क्: शव्दं।	14. All MSs: जातं।	15. All MSs: आगतो।

16. क्: नभोंतरे। See above, note to 3/74b where this same expression occurs and cf. 24/18b.	17. उभयोः is meant here. Cf. 5/8c and see note to 7/49b.	18. क्, ख्, घ्: उद्रि–। See above, note to 2/28b.

19. ख्, ग्, –द्याणं; च्: –ध्यान; छ्: –द्यान। The position of the members of this compound has been reversed. They are in the correct order in 60/84b. Cf. below, 6/25d, 54/11d and 61/6b. As the name of the country or region where this seat is located is said here to be called Uḍi one would expect the spelling to be Uḍyāna which is indeed one of the many spellings of this seat. See above, note to 2/28b.

20. Here, as elsewhere in the Sanskrit of this text, the present tense denotes past action. See above, note to 3/14c.	21. All MSs: –शं तत्र।

22. All MSs: संसिद्धं–।	23. ग्: प्राप्त; all other MSs: प्राप्तो।

24. Here again the present tense is used to denote past action. See above, note to 3/14c.	25. MS ख् is unclear from here up to 6/49c.

26. घ्, च्: –प्राणिनां; च्: –पाते *; ङ्: गंग–; छ्: –प्राणिनांपातेन (?); ज्, ट्: –प्रणिनांपातेन।

27. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: –पूर्ण्ण।	28. इत्यब्रवीत् or the like is required to complete this sentance. Cf. 6/43b.	29. ङ्: सिद्धि–।

30. इत्यब्रवीत् or the like is implied, with the goddess as the speaker.

31. All MSs नामं कृतं। What is meant is नमस्कृत्वा. As the perfect passive participle not uncommonly acts as a gerund (see above, note to 5/38b), I have emended to the deviant नमस्कृतम् which appears again below in 6/186d, 21/17d and
25/12b.	32. च्: पाश्चाडो–; ङ्: –डीश।

33. च्, छ्: ततो; ङ्: गता। 34. घ्, च्, छ्: वृद्धान्तरे; ङ्: वृक्षन्तर।

35. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: सिद्धः।

36. घ्: कदम्वाश्चद्; ङ्: –वत; च्, छ्: कदम्वाश्चद्; ज्, ट्: कदम्ववत्।

37. Missing in MS क्। M → N. The word वृक्ष– appears in its normal masculine gender only four times in the first 35 chapters (see 6/22c, 20/32a, 30/53b, and 33/182a) and in an identifiable neuter gender seventeen times (see 6/128a, 174a, 183a, 7/42c, 61b, 8/77c, 9/39c, 14/69c, 71b, 17/3b, 6a, 19/10d, 80a, 30/55a, 69c, 31/87d and 33/61a). 38. घ्, छ्: यस्मा; ङ्: सिह। Cf. above 5/71b.

39. Missing in MS ङ्। 40. ङ्: सिह * कम्। The dropping of anusvāra for the sake of the metre at the end of संकेत– (M → N) has created an irregular compound. 41. ङ्: सिह। 42. ज्: रुद्धास्तु।

43. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: तूष्णी। Cf. above, note to 6/3a.

44. घ्, च्, छ्: –ता। 44. घ्, च्, छ्: देवीं।

45. See above, note to 3/14c. 46. Direct speech is not infrequently unmarked. See above, note to 3/156ab. 47. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: ज्ञष्टा। 48. This is the accusative of the deviant form देव्या. See above, note to 2/22b. 49. ख्, झ्: ततोक्ता: all other MSs: ततोक्ता।

50. क्, ख्, घ्, च्, ज्: परिचारका। 51. Note how the proper names in this list oscillate between masculine and neuter. See below, note to 6/49c.

52. क्, ङ्, च्, ज्, ट्: तुमूर्तिकं; all other MSs: तुर्मूर्तिकं।

53. ख्, च्, झ्: तथाधीशं; घ्, ज्: तथाघीशं; ङ्: –घीश।

54. The regular ending here should be dual. See above, note to 5/46d.

55. घ्, च्: स्थानु–; छ्: स्थानुनामा; all MSs except ख्: –नामा।

56. ङ्: भौत्तिकं; छ्: भौक्तिकन्; ज्, ट्: भौक्तिकं।

57. क्, ग्: सद्योजाता–। IM 5 and 6.

58. ख्, ग्, घ्, झ्: कोधीशम्। I have chosen this reading even though it entails an irregular long sixth syllable. 59. घ्: –वोट्; ङ्, ज्, ट्: –रात्; च्: –षात्; छ्: –वात्; झ्: प्रचण्डवत्। 60. All MSs: क्रूराख्यंमेघरुद्रक्ष।

61. क्: कूर्मे; ङ्, छ्, ट्: कूर्म। 62. छ्: वैचैक–। 63. For this irregular sandhi see above, note to 3/22b. 64. घ्: –शं च; छ्: –शञ्च। 65. ख्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ण् त्: स्येनः। 66. क्: लागला; ग्: लांगला; छ्, ज्, ट्: लांगली।

67. Here अन्यम् replace the regular masculine अन्यः. See above, note to 1/2c.

68. च्: छागलाङ्गन्; ङ्: छगलंड। 69. घ्: –ल; च्, छ्: –कार।

70. क्, ख्, च्, झ्: व्यलीशं। 71. च्, छ्: खद्रा–।

72. All MSs: वकानन्द। 73. छ्: नकुली।

74. All MSs: देवदेवेशं। 75. ङ्: –चयारताः; क्, ख्, च्: प्रतिचर्यारता।

76. घ्: कुमूलप्रतिचारकं; ङ्: कुमुलं प्रतिचालेकं; च्: त्तमूलं प्रचिचारकं; छ्, ज्: त्तमुलं प्रतिचारकं; all other MSs: कुमुलंप्रतिचारकम्। 77. घ्, छ्: देव्याः। This quarter is repeated below as 6/46d and 6/99b. The deviant –देव्या– occurs frequently throughout this text. See above, note to 2/22b and cf. below, 6/41d, 46d, 95d and 99b. Note that below in 6/46d and 6/99b, as here, MSs घ् and छ् read the regular Sanskrit. But this may well be due to scribal emendation. 78. All MSs: वृक्षा। See above, note to 6/10b.

79. See above, note to 1/2c. 80. च्: वल्लक–; all other MSs except ज्: वेल्लक–।81. ग्, घ्,ङ्: परिचारिक; छ्: परिचारका; all other MSs: परिचारिका।

82. M → N. 83. ङ्: –या। 84. All MSs: अपरं।

85. All MSs: भैरव। 86. च्, छ्: –षा। 87. च्: –राणां।

88. च्: –ता। 89. ग्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: –णा। 90. च्, छ्: –योगा।

91. ङ्: पीठे–; ग्, घ्, ङ्, ज्: –द्याण–; ङ्: –द्योण–; ट्: –द्याणसुदाहृतं। What is meant here is: पीठमुद्यानमुदाहृतम्. See above, notes to 2/28b and 6/6b. Cf. 54/11d, 60/84b and 61/6b. 92. ग्, च्: करवीर; all other MSs: करवीरक।

93. च्: –धिस्थितं; ट्: –पुष्टैरधिष्ठितं। 94. ट्: नांम्ना।

95. घ्, च्, छ्: कंकार–; ङ्: –भैरव। 96. All MSs: रौद्रा। 97. The root रक्ष is 1P. Here the genitive acts as the case of the direct object. See above, note to 5/62a.

98. ज्, ट्: स्मशान–। 99. क्, ख्, झ्: योगीश्वरं; all other MSs: योगेश्वरं।

101. ङ्: कु *; all other MSs: कुलं।

102. ग्, च्, छ्: –संस्थितम्; घ्: * प्रकारान्तरसंस्थितं।

103. छ्: निरालवा स्थिता; ग्, ङ्, झ्: निरालवा स्थि *; ट्: –स्थि *। All MSs add: स्मृता।

104. छ्: मुद्रान्धं। M → N. Missing in MS च्. 105. च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: यस्यो।

106. The regular feminine agent noun दात्री would not fit the metre. Cf. above 5/81a. 107. ग्: चडंकारे; घ्, ज्: चडंकार; च्: –कार; छ्: चौंकार; ङ्: चन्द्रंकारे; ट्: चडंकारे। IM 5. 108. ग्, ज्, ट्: पीठाव्वा–। The adverb सह normally accompanies the instrumental.

109. घ्, च्, छ्: क्रोडीश–। See above, note to 2/28b. 110. DS.

111. M → N. 112. क्, ख्, झ्: श्री ओद्रियानं। See above, note to 2/28b. 113. See note to 1/2c. 114. In this case, the implied past tense should be indicated by an associated verb. The situation is analogous to the use of the present tense to denote a past event. See above, note to 3/14c.

115. क्, ख्, ग्: –मास; all other MSs: –मासे।

116. ग्: खगता; घ्, च्, छ्: खेरता। 117. ग्: –या; घ्, छ्: ऋषयोः।

118. ज्, ट्: विशतिस्तत्र। 119. The letter 'm' has been inserted between the first member of this compound and the rest for the sake of the metre. See above, note 3/21b. 120. घ्, च्, छ्: –तश्च। 121. च्: –णः।

122. घ्, च्, छ्: द्वादश–; ज्: –तेस्तु। 123. All MSs: सिद्धिनाथेन। In this chapter, as elsewhere in the Kubjikā corpus, the form सिद्धनाथ– alternates with सिद्धिनाथ–. In this chapter alone, the former appears in the MSs in 6/8c, 6/132d and 6/158a; the latter here and in 6/58a, 6/119a and 6/183d. The more usual form is सिद्धनाथ– and, moreover, we are specifically told in 6/43cd that 'सिद्ध–' is the title given to Bhairava by the goddess and so I have emended accordingly.

124. ट्: कस्य–। 125. All MSs except ग्, च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: गौत–।

126. क्, ख्: मोद्रव्यो; ग्: मांत्रव्या; घ्: स्यण्डवो; घ्, च्, छ्: माण्डवो; ज्, ट्: मांडव्यो; झ्, ङ्: मान्तव्यो। 127. ग्, ङ्: –तम्वो; घ्, छ्: आतस्तवो; च्: आपस्तवो; ज्, ट्: आपस्तंवो।

128. च्: व्यांसो। 129. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: –सा।

130. छ्, ज्, ट्: धनुर्द्धरः। 131. घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: ऋषिःसृंगं; ट्: ऋषिसृंगं; all other MSs: –शृंगं। 132. IM 5 + 6. All MSs: –पुत्रं।

133. घ्, छ्: दक्ष। 134. घ्, छ्: वै।

135. च्: विंशतं; ट्: विशमं। All other MSs: चिष्समं।

136. IC. The masculine word अवतार– is often neuter in this text (see note to 1/2c). Here it reverts to its regular masculine gender. Even so, and although अयम् refers to a masculine noun, it is treated as neuter in concord. It is as if the resonance of the final nasalization of the pronoun carried over into the following word. Other examples are found in 6/162a, 189c, 206c, 7/8a, and 36/118c. See above, note 1/5b. 137. ज्, ट्: उँकारं। 138. घ्, छ्: –थम।

139. घ्, च्, छ्: –तं। 140. ङ्: योगो–।

141. See above, note to 1/5a. 142. All MSs: –गता।

143. च्: प्रिये; all other MSs except घ्, छ्: प्रिया। 144. च्: –विष्टा।

145. All MSs: भैरवो। 146. ग्, घ्, ङ्, ट्: सिद्धः। This word and the following quarter are missing in MS च्.

147. This quarter is missing in MS च्। See above, note to 2/22b and cf. 6/22b. 148. च्: कृत। One could easily emend to the required कृत्वा but I have refrained from doing this because in the Sanskrit of this text the past passive participle frequently, but not invariably (see 6/43a) functions as a gerund. Indeed, two other examples of the same deviant grammar are found in the very next line. See above, note to 5/38b. 149. All MSs: पूजिता। 150. घ्: –देव्यास्तु।

151. This is an abbreviated form of दण्डवन्नमस्कार–. The same form appears below in 6/83c, 33/44c and 39/116a. 152. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: –पूर्ण।

153. Cf. above, 6/8b. 154. All MSs except क्, ख्, च्: –संज्ञा।

155. ङ्: फुर *। The root स्फुर् is normally 6P. See above, note to 5/48c where we find almost the same expression. 156. M → N and IC.

157. क्, ख्, झ्: श्रद्धवन्तः; ग्: श्रद्धावन्ता; all other MSs: श्रद्धावन्तो।

158. ङ्: –व्रत। 159. Like the neuter nominative and accusative of तत् and अन्यत्, which are commonly found in both the regular form and as तम् (see above, note to 1/5d) and अन्यम् (see above, note to 6/1a), यत् is also subject to an analogous change, although this is less common. Other examples, where we find a single यम्, are: 33/179b and 53/7c and where we find a doubled यम् are 14/7b, 24/63cd, 64a and 58/86a. 160. ङ्: –स्तान।

161. ग्: –त; ङ्: पश्येते। The root दृश् is normally 1P. See note to 14/12a and cf. above, Mālinīstava line 112 and 5/14d. Note again how the present tense has replaced the past. See above, note 3/14c. 162. ग्: त।

163. च्: वीर। 164. IM 5.

165. ग्, ज्, ट्: सन्त्रस्ता: तत्र; ङ्: सत्रस्ता:; छ्: सन्त्रस्था: तत्र (?); all other MSs: सन्त्रस्ता तत्र।

166. च्: मार्ग। 167. All MSs: यदारूढा तेन।

168. ङ्: –वैकल्प ; all other MSs: –वैकल्पं। It appears that an irregular sandhi has been formed thus: सर्वे + अवैकल्यम् → सर्वऽवैकल्यम्. The final 'e' of the first word is dropped as if it had come in contact with a vowel other than short 'a'. But, at the same time, the initial short 'a' of the second word has been dropped, as regular sandhi requires, by coming in contact with a preceding 'e'. The regular sandhi –सर्वेऽवैकल्यं– would entail an irregular long sixth syllable.

169. घ्, छ्: देव्या:–। See above, note to 6/22b and cf. below, 6/99b.

170. ग्,ङ्, ज्, ट्: –ता: तै:; all other MSs except च्, छ्: पूजितास्तै:।

171. घ्: –तायकै:। The regular form of the numeral required here namely, पञ्चाशता, is too long for the metre. Although one finds the regular form of this numeral, viz. पञ्चाशत्, in the great majority of cases, a thematic form does occur three times in the first thirty chapters of this text (see 6/139b, 7/45d, and 30/97b) amongst which we find the genitive plural पञ्चाशानाम् (7/44d). An instrumental plural (पञ्चाशद्भि:) occurs five times (see 11/70a, 19/16a, 23c, 51c, and 24/113d) even though this numeral should be used as a singular (feminine) substantive. The form we find here is not common. I have been able to locate only two other examples. These are in YKh (1) 18/20d (with reference to the fruits of repeating a mantra: पञ्चाशैरणिमाज्ञया) and in AS 5/161a (fol. 17b). See also above, note to 3/9c.

172. घ्, छ्: स्तुवति। See above, note to 5/72b.

173. All MSs: समतां। This normally abstract noun appears to function here as an adverb. 174. घ्, च्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: –क्षेत्र; छ्: –क्षत्र।

175. च्: –कां; all other MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: –नायकां।

176. ग्: विचरध्वं; घ्, छ्: विवध्वं; ङ्: विचरध्व। 177. च्: प्रतिचर्य्य? ता।

178. Although all the proper names in this list are of male deities, the predominant apparent - we might call it grammatical - gender of the male proper names. The first of such lists in this chapter (6/14-20) is neuter with not less than thirty-three out of the fifty having neuter forms. However, the names in the following list of Ṛṣis (6/35-37ab) are consistantly presented with their regular masculine endings. Surprisingly, this pattern is repeated again in the next section dealing with the following sacred seat. The names of the male deities in that list (6/49cd-54) again appear to be neuter or neuter-like. There hardly two out of the fifty are in their regular masculine form whereas the names of the Ṛṣis in the list that follows (6/69-70ab) are all treated regularly in accord with their masculine gender. In the list of names of the Bhairavas in the following seat (6/100cd-5) we find that out of fifty not less than thirty-one are regular. However, the names of the Ṛṣis in the following list (6/120cd-1ab) are almost all neuter. The names of a list of forty-eight Siddhas in 7/18-24ab are all treated as neuter without a single exception. The lack of uniformity of these lists creates difficulties for the textual editor. It does not seem right to simply emend every entry to the correct form. The emendations would be too numerous to be justifiable by scribal error although, admittedly the lack of uniformity in this respect amongst these lists does suggest that possibility. Moreover, the predominance of neuter forms in these lists can be justified as an extension of a general feature we have already noted of the Sanskrit of this text namely, the marked tendency to make masculine nouns neuter. Although this is true it would be more accurate to say that there is a preference for final nasalisation. In other words anusvāra is commonly placed at the end of a final vowel simply for its sound. When this happens with a thematic stem it produces a pseudo-neuter. In the case of other vowels, they take on the form of accusative singulars. Here, for example, in all the MSs we find the nom. sing. of the name कमण्डलुः to be कमण्डलुं. In that same list we also find दीर्घतनुं (6/53c), similarly elsewhere the nom. sing. तुम्बुरुं (6/101d, 46/251d and 68/134d), शम्भुं (6/103a), केतुं (6/121b) and कान्तिं (6/141a). The simple elision of the final anusvāra would make these words neuter and so align them with the apparent gender of most of the other proper names in the list to which they belong but this is probably not what was intended. The final nasal anusvāra at the end of the proper names of such lists does not, it seems, serve as a marker of gender. As the beings are known to be male they are anyway obviously masculine. The replacement of nom. singular by plural endings of possessive nouns (for example शूली > शूलिनम् in 6/49d and कपर्दी > कपर्दिनम् in 6/51b) is consistant with this tendancy to nasalize final vowels, although this almost always takes place at the end of a line. Thus, note the counter-example, मुण्डधारी in 6/50a and 6/103a which is at the beginning of a line.

179. क्, ख्, च्, झ्: तटं; ङ्: नतं। MS ख् is again legible from here.

180. घ्: धूर्ते। 181. ख्: सौम–; ङ्: सौमं–; all other MSs: सोम।

182. Cf. below 6/51b, 52d etc. and see above, notes to 4/3c and 5/46d.

183. घ्: वीर्य। 184. ख्: सुमार्च्चितं। 185. ङ्: –मलं।

186. All MSs: लोढं। 187. च्: –वीर। 188. Cf. 6/49d.

189. All MSs: शम्भु। I have emended in accord with the reasoning outlined in note to 6/49c, cf. also 6/103a. 190. ख्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: चन्दनागं; ग्: चदनागं; च्: –नाग; ट्:

चंदनाग्रं। 191. ख्: रु। 192. ट्: कमंलेश्वरं। 193. ख्: तंषरं; ङ्: तंवरं।
194. ग्, ङ्: –दंष्टिणं; घ्: –दष्ट्रणं; छ्: –दं षृणं; ज्, ट्: घोरदंष्ट्रणं। Cf. above 6/49d and see note to 6/49c. 195. All MSs: सर्वरं। 196. ख्: अट्टहासं।
197. छ्: कषीश्वरं। 198. See above, note to 6/49c.
199. क्, च्, झ्: महारावं दीर्घतनुं; घ्; छ्: महारावद् दीर्घतनुं; all other MSs: महारावत् दीर्घतनुं।
200. ख्: * (?) घनिस्वनं। 201. All MSs except ग्, ङ्: –तथानकम्।
202. All MSs except झ्: –वेन। 203. ख्, ङ्: पंचाशत् सिदा; च्: पंचाश सिद्धि–। IM 5.
204. क्, च्, झ्: मुंडनि। The final vowel has been shortened for the metre.

205. DS. The regular feminine of the nominative of the numeral त्रि, तिस्रः is invariably replaced in this text by the masculine त्रयः. See also, below, 6/108bc, 109c, 6/146d, 9/17d and 39/61c. The same appears in 6/148c with reference to male beings. In that case in order to form a 'regular' double sandhi we should emend to त्रयैते. The case of feminine names is more complex. In 6/108b we find the maculine त्रयः referring to three goddesses. As it appears at the end of a line we may easily emend to the regular feminine त्रयी. But then we should also correct, at least where the metre permits, all the instances of त्रयेते referring to three female beings to त्र्य्येताः. But in order to do this we must understand how this error could have been repeated so consistantly. Moreover, why do we not find even a single instance of the regular form? 206. ङ्: प्रीतिचातकाः; all other MSs: प्रीतिचारिकाः।
Cf. 6/146d. 207. All MSs: माभूती। 208. क्, ग्: –भिक–। 209. Missing in MS छ्। 210. घ्: परिकर्म। The action noun परिकर्मन् has been thematized. The regular form of the locative singular is परिकर्मनि. Cf. below
6/110d. 211. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: परिचारास्तुयः।

212. क्, ख्: पुंसां; all other MSs: पुंसा। पुमांसः is the regular form of the nominative plural of पुमंस्. I have emended assuming that the deviant form is पुंस– and declined accordingly.

213. घ्: –नामेण। The neuter noun नामन् and the indeclinable नाम derived from it are generally treated regularly, even so there are several examples in which it appears as a neuter thematic noun or the equivalent indeclinable नाम. The masculine proper name अनाम– which, like masculine proper names in general, is often treated as neuter does not concern us here (see e.g. 2/36a). Much less the form अनामा, which is a name of the goddess. Here स्वनामन् has been thematized and so the regular form of the instrumental singular – स्वनाम्ना – has been replaced by the deviant स्वनामेन. Similarly, the regular form नाम्ना is replaced by नामेन in 18/75a, 24/46b, 35/87a, 39/37b, 64/83d and 66/81b. In the great majority of cases the nom. and acc. sing. of नामन् is in its regular form – नाम. The deviant नामम् is found when it is required to maintain the metre. See 6/97a, 14/112c, 24/38a, 29/15d, 34/41a, 34/69a, and 46/110c. Moreover, in three instances the strange prolonged form नामानम् replaces the indeclinable नाम to gain an extra syllable for the metre (see 44/18c, 46/48a and 52/7c).

214. All MSs: कामेश्वर। Four emendations would be required in this line to make all the neuters masculine. Here then we have a striking example of how masculine proper names in the Sanskrit of this text are treated as neuter.

215. The regular neuter form would be अन्यत्. The regular masculine form is अन्यः. See above, note to 6/1a.

216. छ्, ज्, ट्: सिद्धिनाथं; missing in all the other MSs. Concerning the form of this proper name, see above note to 6/34d.

217. Note how प्रभुः is the sole name formed correctly in this line.

218. घ्, च्: सर्वेषांश्चैव; छ्: सर्वेषाश्चैव। 219. घ्, च्, छ्: * माख्याता।

220. घ्: –यानाद्। See above, note to 2/28b. 221. ङ्: –न।

222. ङ्: –न। 223. घ्, च्, छ्: लंकुटी; all other MSs: लंकुतं।

224. ख्: माम (?)। 225. ज्, ट्: स्मशान–।

226. घ्, च्: –धारथ; all other MSs: –रेव।

227. ख्: सूढानां। A genitive functions here again as the case of the direct object. See above, note to 5/62a. 228. क्, ग्, झ्: –धारकः; ङ्, ज्: –धारकाम्।

229. M → N. 230. घ्, छ्: निव। 231. All MSs: गन्तव्यं।

232. क्, ग्, झ्: –राङ्करे; च्: जालन्धराकुले; all other MSs: जालन्धराकुरे।

233. ख्, घ्, ङ्, च्, ट्: दर्प्प। M → N.

234. घ्, छ्: इगृग् जालान्धरं। 235. ङ्: पीठ। 236. घ्: जालाम्वा।

237. ङ्: पीठछया। 238. ख्, ङ्, छ्: रक्तां–; ट्: रक्तांचापि; all other MSs:
रक्तंचापि। 239. घ्, छ्: पुष्प * ज्ञा; all other MSs: –संज्ञा।

240. क्, ख्, ट्: सांवरेण; छ्: साञ्चरेण; all other MSs: सावरेण। 241. ख्: नास्ति।

242. क्, च्: तव। 243. All MSs: सवरी। 244. च्: –ताः।

245. ङ्: –नाम; छ्: सिद्धि–। 246. M → N. 247. DS.

248. ट्: क्रिपा (?) मार्गे–। 249. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: –शताद्वे; all other MSs: शतार्द्धे।
The intended sense seems to be expressed below in 6/118c where we read: दिव्यवर्षशतं सार्धम्. Cf. above 3/8b where by the expression योजनानां शतार्धकम् is meant 'a hundred and fifty leagues' (see ibid. note to the translation). It is also possible that दिव्यवर्षार्धशते (i.e. अर्धशतदिव्यवर्षेषु– see above, note to 1/5a) is meant. 250. ख्: वहूरू–; घ्, छ्: बहुरूपाधरात्यग्रा। 251. क्, झ्: उच्यते; all other MSs: उत्पते।

252. घ्, छ्: गगणान्तरे। 253. घ्, च्, छ्: ऋषया।

254. छ्, ज्, ट्: द्वादशास्तत्र। As often happens, the ordinal has replaced the cardinal number. The ordinal of this number is usually regular except in 9/34b where it is replaced by the cardinal for metrical reasons and the appearance in one place of the deviant द्वादशम– (11/5c). But we find both the regular cardinal द्वादश (7/11d, 52c, 11/44d, 22/4c, 20c) and the ordinal (द्वादशः) functioning as the cardinal (7/98d, 24/17c, 24/38d, 67a, 24/68d, 72d, 25/28b, 59/67a) and in most cases metre is not a consideration. Similarly, we find both the regular cardinal द्वादशभिः (4/34c, 10/31a, 22/23c) and the ordinal द्वादशैः acting as a cardinal (14/47a, 25/23b, 29/36a, 42/97d). In this case, metre is inevitably a consideration.

255. ख्: आज्ञार्थी समुतागताः; घ्: आज्ञाषी समुपागताः; छ्: आज्ञार्षी समुपागताः; all other MSs:
आज्ञार्थी समुपागताः। 256. क्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, झ्: पूर्व्वाव्देर–।

257. All MSs: कपिलं चैव। As all the other members of this list except one retain their regular masculine form it appears that, although masculine proper names are frequently made neuter in lists such as these, the intention in this case was to retain the form of their masculine gender (see above, note to 6/49c). I have emended accordingly. 258. क्, ज्, झ्: –को; घ्: –केः।

259. All MSs: भृगुं। 260. ङ्: –रात्। A dual ending is required here.
See above, note to 5/46d. 261. घ्: औरिभिस्–; ङ्: औ –ऋभस्–; च्: औरिभस्ति–;
छ्: औरिभस्ति–; all other MSs except झ्: औ – ऋभस्ति–।

262. क्: गालव; ग्: गालवा; घ्, छ्: गारवः; ङ्, झ्: गारवो; all other MSs except च्: गालवो।

263. ट्: –रस्मयः। 264. घ्, च्, छ्: ज्योति।

265. All MSs: कृतयुगे। This pīṭha belongs to the tretā age. I have emended accordingly. See table in the note to the translation of 6/6.

266. M → N. 267. क्, झ्: ओडियानाद्। See above, note to
2/28b. 268. छ्: विनिःक्रान्तं। 269. M → N. 270. ज्, ट्: ज्योतिशः।

271. घ्, छ्, ट्: क्वचि। MSs ज् and ट् repeat the previous three lines and this word. 272. क्, ङ्, ज्: वेशं; ट्: दृशं। M → N. 273. All MSs: –मुत्तमं।

274. All MSs: दिशा। 275. ख्, ट्: –दिद्भागे; क्, झ्: दक्षिणा–।

276. All MSs except झ्ण् क्, ट्: दक्षिण–। All MSs: –मण्डलं।

277. ख्, ङ्: एतद्देशं; ग्, घ्, च्, छ्: एतदेशं।

278. ख्, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –देशं। 279. All MSs except क्, झ्: –र्णं।

280. All MSs: पूर्वेव। The same DS also occurs below in 39/75a, 40/8d and 40/106a. 281. This causal form in the place of the regular क्रीडन्ति gains the required extra syllable for the metre.

282. All MSs: महायानैः। 283. ङ्: –ता।

284. घ्: –लोकेण; च्: वलाकेन। 285. घ्, च्, छ्: समरी; ट्: सवरी। This quarter verse is missing in MS झ्। 286. क्, घ्, ङ्, च्: + समरी; घ्: + सवरी; ख्, झ्: + दिव्यरूपिणी। 287. All MSs except ग्, छ्, ज्, झ्, ट्: योच्यते।

288. झ्: कैला। 289. घ्: संपूर्ण उडिता; ग्, च्, झ्: संपूर्ण उदिता + कृत्वा;

all other MSs: संपूर्ण उदिता। 290. Missing in MSs क्, ख्, घ् and ङ्; all other
MSs: कृत्वा। 291. क्: पाभालाच्च; ज्: –लाच।
292. घ्, च्, छ्: –माया–। 293. घ्, च्, छ्: –त्वसंकृता। All other MSs:
–स्वलं– 294. क्, ग्: तत्रश्रमे। 295. ङ्: चित्त।

296. तया, or the like, is implied here

297. ख्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: –नो। This nominative singular functions as an instrumental singular. 298. ख्: समभिका। 299. All MSs: कुलजैः–।
300. ङ्: ज्ञा *। 301. All MSs except झ्: प्रविष्टो।
302. क्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: जातः। 303. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: गतो।

304. This is a pseudo compound formed by dropping the ending of the first word to accomodate the metre.

305. Here is another example of how a participle can function as a gerund. See above, note to 5/38b and cf. 6/83c. We may also think of this as a 'nominative absolute' which functions like the locative absolute.

306. All MSs except ख्, झ्: स्तुनते। Concerning the deviant forms of this verb, see above, notes to 3/88a and 5/72b. Concerning the use of the present tense with a past sense, see above, note to 3/14c.

307. ग्: नमस्कारैविविधैः रति–; ट्: नमस्कारैर्विविधैः रति–; all other MSs except च्: –धैर् रति–। I have not been able trace other examples of the sandhi found in the majority of MSs and so have emended to the regular form.

308. This is an abbreviated form of दण्डवन्नमस्कारः that has been changed from masculine to neuter. Cf. above in 6/43a and elsewhere (see note there) we find the expression कृत्वा दण्डनमस्कारम्. Concerning the replacement of the gerund with a perfect passive participle see above, note to 5/38b.

309. All MSs except झ्: आज्ञा। As usual in this text, the following direct speech is unmarked. See above, note to 3/156b.

310. क्, ख्, घ्: आहारस्व; ङ्: आहारं। आह is normally 1P.

311. घ्, च्, छ्: –फल्गु। This unusual word, although not found in the dictionaries, is not uncommon in Tantric texts. Clearly it means meat of some sort, probably human flesh or beef, on the analogy of the word महामांसम्. The basic form of this word –फल्गु (both M and N) - may possibly be related to the word वल्गुः.

312. ग्: सुरेश्वरं; घ्: सुरेश्वरः; ङ्: शुरेश्वरा। 313. ङ्: एव।
314. छ्: सिद्धो तत्रैवान्त * कुत्रचित्; all other MSs: सिद्धो तत्रैवान्तर कुत्रचित्।
315. क्: वीरचक्रं। 316. छ्: मध्येतः। 317. ङ्: आमिषाथी।
318. ग्, ज्, ट्: –रात्रश्च; च्, छ्: महोरात्रश्च।
319. ग्, ज्: ततोत्यभ्यंतरसंस्थैश्च; ङ्, च्, छ्, ट्: ततोत्यन्तरसंस्थैश्च।

320. Here an accusative is functioning as a nominative. Cf. below 6/93d.

321. All MSs: कुपितं। One could assume that भूत्वा, कृत्वा or the like is implied or else that this is a case of what could be called an 'accusative absolute' (cf.

above, 5/29a). 322. च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –यतः।
323. ग्: –स्थैर्वृह्वितो; च्: –स्थैवृंहिता; छ्, ज्, ट्: चक्रस्थैर्वृहितो; all other MSs: –वहितो।
324. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: सिद्धः। 325. ङ्: पथित्वा।
326. छ्, ज्, ट्: घठके। 327. All MSs: विक्षेप। M → N. Cf. below
6/95a. 328. घ्, च्, छ्: व्योममुद्रामुमुदृतम्; all other MSs except क्, ख्, ज्: –समुद्रितम्।
329. Missing in MS ख् and ङ्. च्: तिष्ठ। See above, note to 3/15d.
330. Missing in MS ख् and ङ्. च्: गतस्वरत्।
331. DS. See above note to 2/22b.
332. All MSs: विनिर्गतं। The correct form of the gerund –स्फोटयित्वा– is found below in 6/96a. 333. Missing in MS च्। 334. See above, note to 1/5a. 335. ग्, घ्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: गृह्नते। The root ग्रह् is normally 9P and occasionally 9Ā. Thus the regular forms are गृह्णाति and गृह्णीते.
The irregular गृह्णते is attested in the Muṇḍakyopaniṣad and elsewhere (see Monier-Williams p. 371). This form also occurs below in 24/15d, 28/126a and 49/68b. The faulty internal sandhi which the majority of MSs read here is a common scribal error. Cf. for गृह्णते > गृह्नते 24/15d, 49/68b, गृह्णीयात् > गृह्नीयात् 32/67a
(but the correct form is common, see e.g. 37/21d, 37/60c etc.), प्रगृह्णते > प्रगृह्नते in 47/4d. Only two MSs in one place (24/15d) read गृह्नीते which suggests the regular form गृह्णीते. For the use of the present tense here, see above, note to 3/14c.
336. क्: तवः। 337. Missing in MS च्।
338. The regular form –त्रस्तम् – does not fit the metre.
339. Cf. 6/96b. 340. All MSs: गत स्वरत्।
341. All MSs except झ्: प्राप्तो। 342. Here the optative is used in place of a past tense and in the next line the present. See above, note to 3/14c.
343. घ्: –पीतं। 344. ग्: त्रितंत्व–।
345. See above, note to 1/4a. 346. घ्, च्, छ्: त।
347. क्, ग्, ट्: विज्ञयोद्; ङ्: विज्ञेद्; ख्, च्, झ्: विज्ञेयोद्; all other MSs: विज्ञयेद्। I have emended to the closest deviation of the regular form of the optative (used here as the tense of past action) namely: विज्ञापयेद्.
348. घ्: योवि–; च्: योग–; ट्: यो * (?) म–।
349. घ्, च्, छ्: युग्मदा–।–आज्ञतः would be correct but does not fit the metre.
350. ग्: खचरीचक्र–। 351. Cf. above 6/86d.
352. All MSs: संस्थाभिः कोपाविष्टैर्–। 353. ङ्: –र; च्, छ्: मद्यकं–।
354. Cf. above 6/88a where this word, normally masculine, is treated as neuter as it is here.
355. क्, ग्: कुंसमध्ये; ख्, ङ्: कुसमध्ये; घ्, च्, छ्: कुरुमध्ये।

356. क्, ग्, च्, छ्, ज्: –वधि:स्थित:; ख्, घ्, ङ्, ट्: –त:।

357. All MSs except क्, ट् (that read the grammatically correct form तत्) have this reading, which I take to be a case of irregular visarga sandhi. See above, note to 3/22b. 358. Cf. 6/22b. 359. See above, note to 1/5d 360. ङ्: छलन। 361. छ्: –ज्ञा।

362. All MSs: मुक्तं। One may also assue that नामन् has been thematized to form the neuter नामम् in order to avoid a sandhi that would disrupt the metre.

363. ङ्: महद्गरुम्; झ्: महागुरु:; all other MSs: महद्गुरुम्।

364. All MSs: प्रतिचारा। 365. क्: –र्या। 366. च्: तत्र; छ्: तन।

367. ख्: –रवी। 368. घ्, छ्: देव्या:– Cf. above, 6/22b and 6/46d.

369. ङ्: –पू –यां। 370. ङ्: –तै।

371. घ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: पूजितां। 372. घ्, छ्: –देव्याश्।

373. छ्, ज्: स्तुतीस्तोत्रैरनेकधा; missing in all the other MSs except ट्।

374. All MSs: असितांगो। Note that the names of the Bhairavas in this list are mostly neuter and occasionally masculine. The deities in this group are numbered serially from here up to 6/105ab in MS ग्.

375. क्: भ्रुर्कूटी (?)कृत:; झ्: भुकुटी। 376. क्: भीषमं।

377. ज्: –रम्। See above, note to 6/49c.

378. All MSs except झ्: –हस्य। 379. घ्, छ्: –रे।

380. All MSs except झ्: –वात्। 381. See note to 6/49a।

382. क्, ग्: उड्डुमं। 383. ट्: वृद्ध। IM 5.

384. छ्: –दष्ट्रोग्र–। This dual compound requires a dual ending. See above, note to 5/46d. 385. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –नामं। IM 5 and 6.

386. च्, छ्: –र। 387. छ्, ज्, ट्: –मासुरं। 388. All MSs: स्मरिता।

389. The root भाष् is 1Ā. भाषेत is the regular form of the optative. The causal form of the imperative is used to gain an extra syllable for the metre. See below, 6/195c where this same quarter appears again (see also 37/64b) and cf. 47/70d and 47/89b.

390. च्: –व्या। A conjunctive pronoun such as ते is required here to complete the syntax. 391. ख्: पदाकुपूजका:; ट्: पादाब्ज–।

392. घ्, छ्, ज्: प्रतिचारो विजानीयात्; all other MSs: प्रतिचारा विजानीयात्।

393. घ्: र्यो; all other MSs except ज्, झ्: –गिर्या। Cf. above, 6/98b.

394. ख्, ङ्, च्, झ्: –देवा–; घ्, छ्: कल–।

395. ख्, ङ्, ज्: खट्टिक्ष्या–; च्, छ्, ज्: –द्या; all other MSs except ट्: खट्टीक्याद्या:। Below in 16/14b this proper name is spelt खट्टिका.

396. The correct form is तिस्र:. Cf. below 6/109d and see above, note to 6/55d. 397. IC and DS. 398. ख्, ङ्: –या।

399. तासाम् is implied. 400. All MSs: यथा।

401. छ्: त्रयते। IC and DS. 402. ख्, झ्: खट्टीक्ष्यास्यातु–; घ्: खट्टिक्याद्योस्–; all other MSs except ङ्, ट्: खट्टीक्याद्यास्–। 403. क्, ख्, ङ्, झ्: चैल्लकास्–; घ्: –त्रये–। Here the neuter form of this collective number has replaced the required feminine one. त्रयी एव would be correct. Or else we may take this to be a cardinal number in which case तिस्र एव would be correct. Cf. 6/108b and see note to 6/55d.

404. All MSs: डोबिको। In view of the deviant neuter form of the other two names this one has been emended accordingly.

405. All other MSs except ख्, ङ्: साद्धयं। See above, note to 3/103d.

406. All MSs: संज्ञा तेषां त्रयो। An इति is implied, संज्ञा should be an acc. plural and त्रय: the acc. feminine तिस्र: if it qualifies संज्ञा: or त्रयाणाम् if it qualifies the three servants. Thus both (इति) संज्ञास्तेषां तिस्रो and (इति) संज्ञास्तेषां त्रयाणां would be correct but neither option fits the metre. 407. Cf. 6/56d.

408. घ्, च्: –तं; छ्: –उदादृतं; all other MSs except झ्: –हृत:।

409. क्: अन्यषां। 410. ङ्: –चाराणां।

411. All MSs except झ्: विद्येत। IM 7.

412. All MSs except ख्, झ्: –?।

413. घ्, च्, छ्, घ्: देव्या। 414. All MSs: पूर्व–।

415. क्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: पूर्णांवा। Cf. 6/63b and 113c. 416. च्: परं।

417. Following is missing in MSs च् up to श्मशानं.

418. All MSs: सवरी–। 419. घ्, छ्: वै।

420. All MSs except ख्, च्, झ्: –देव। 421. ख्: –मुदा।

422. घ्, ज्: –पीतमु–; छ्: –पीतमुदादृतं।

423. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्, ट्: स्म–। 424. M → N. The deviant neuter form of this normally masculine or feminine noun occurs in most instances (see 6/124c, 12/28a, 15/41a, 18/22d, 27/11a, 24c, 28/161c, 30/136c, 221a, 42/49d, (in the sense of wine), 51/12a, 57/66d). We come across the plural समया: in the sense of 'rules ' (see 30/228a and 30/230c, 231b, 40/211b) but this may be a feminine plural. In 47/27, which introduces a long passage in which the rules to be followed are listed, the feminine समया denotes the Rule (cf. TS 9/541cd: अनुज्ञातोऽभिषिक्तश्च समयां श्रावयेद् (ग्: स्रा–) गुरु: (क्, ख्, ग्: गुरुं). In the TS we only find the plural which may be the regular maculine or feminine (e.g. TS 1/211ab: न जानन्ति गुरुं देवं शास्त्रोक्तसमयास्तथा. See also 1/486c etc). In compounds in the TS we find both समय– and समया–. For example, समयालोप– in TS 7/129b but in 7/130a समयलोप–. In the KuKh the feminine समया generally denotes the goddess 's Vidyā (see, for example, 18/21a, 23/32d, 45/51d (समयाक्रमम्) and 49/60d) as it does in other texts. Samayā is also the name of a goddess (23/32d, 44/26c 49/16a, 53b) or a way of referring to a goddess in general, for example in the name Mātaṅgasamayā (the consort of the god Mātaṅga) (61/15b). Note also that the neuter samayam in one place at least is the name of a god (52/7d). Here it denotes the teachings, that is, the scripture or śāstra, as a whole. 425. झ्: तव। 426. M → N.

427. M → N. 428. ख्, घ्, ङ्, च्: योगिनी–।

429. In order to accommodate the metre the regular nom. sing. of दातृ, दाता has been replaced by what appears to be the accusative singular दातारम्। The same form occurs in YKh (1) 21/11a and ṢSS 24/6c where it is, in both cases, the nominative, not accusative, singular. We also find the nom. sing. दातारः in YKh (1) 25/7a and YKh (2) 27/48b. Similarly, प्रदातारम् replaces प्रदाता below in 42/21a, 22a, 23a, 24a and YKh (1) 9/119c. An example of the equivalent feminine दातारी is found above in 6/30a. See also above, notes to 2/12c and 5/81a.

430. All MSs: विकृतान्नं । 431. ङ्: सार्द्ध। 432. घ्: –णं।

433. All MSs: सिद्धिनथेना–; घ्: –नुस्तानं। See above, note to 6/34d.

434. झ्: –ज्ञानं–; all other MSs except क्, घ्: –भावेन।

435. क्, ग्, झ्: –धीयता; all other MSs: –धीयतां।

436. See below, note to 7/87a. 437. ङ्: कृतन्वये। DS.

438. ख्, घ्: वरुणां। 439. क्, ख्, च्: वृर्द्ध; घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: वृद्ध।

440. All MSs except ग्, घ्, छ्: मयं।

441. See above, note to 6/49c.

442. See below, note to 7/87a.

443. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.

444. ङ्: –त। 435. ग्: क। M → N. 446. च्, छ्: भवत्।

447. ङ्: देश। M → N. 448. च्, छ्: भवत।

449. M → N. See above, note to 6/115c.

450. All MSs: पूर्वभूतानां। 451. च्: शास्त्र–। N → M. शास्त्रमिदं would be one syllable too long for the metre. See above, note to 1/5b.

452. क्, ख्, ग्, च्, झ्: –सिद्धस्तु।

453. घ्, ङ्; छ्: कामेच्छीक्रीद्य–; ट्: कामेच्छीक्रीद्यनिर्भरं; all other MSs: कामेच्छीक्रीड्यनिर्भरम्। The intended order of the components of this compound, i.e. कामक्रीडेच्छा–, does not fit the metre. 454. ङ्: सिद्धासम। 455. ङ्: संप्रोक्तं।

456. All MSs: सवरी। 457. क्, ङ्, च्: –यौवन।

458. Restoring the intended order of the components of this compound we read: शून्यदेवोत्तरकुले which does not fit the metre.

459. ग्, घ्, ङ् च्, झ्: –संहिता। The deviant form मातरी occurs several times in this text. See above note to 5/41b. 460. ग्, च्, झ्: देवागारं।

461. क्, ज्: –ख्य; all other MSs except झ्: –ख्ये।

462. घ्, च्, छ्: –ने। 463. M → N. See above, note to 6/10b.

464. ङ्: –ब। 465. घ्, च्, छ्, ट्: –रा; ङ्: श्वतरूप–।

466. See above, note to 5/40c.

467. See above, note to 3/14c. 468. ज्: –काव्जे।

469. All MSs: नमस्कृत्य। It has not been possible to trace another occurrence of the reading found in the MSs nor does it serve any metric purpose. Accordingly it has been emended to the correct form although gerunds that should end in -tvā are not uncommonly changed into those that end in –tya.

470. छ्: प्रतिष्ठो। 471. क्, ख्, झ्: –कलारावं; घ्, च्, छ्: कलाकलाराव; ङ्, ज्, ट्: कलकलाराव; ग्: * * कलाराव। I have emended this expression to its regular form, even so this pāda is one syllable too long.

472. घ्, च्, छ्: मुच्यन्ति; all other MSs: मुञ्चन्ति। 473. घ्, च्, छ्: देव्या।

474. छ्: * दाग्र–। 475. घ्, छ्: –पये; all other MSs: मंडलोत्थापयेद्। Here an optative has replaced the past tense. See above, note to 3/14c.

476. ङ्: –महा * ष्पै:। 477. All MSs: सावरी। 478. ङ्: –रे।

479. Missing in ङ् up to प्रसन्ना सवरीण् क्, ग्, ज्, झ्: दिव्योत्का; घ्: –दिव्योत्था।

480. क्: वक्त्रा; all other MSs except ङ्: वक्त्रात्।

481. M → N. This word is ascertainably in its normal masculine gender of only four times (see 14/41d, 43d, 60/14c and 61/58a) compared to nine times it appears as neuter independently in this text (see 19/48a, 31/25c, 29c, 44/44a, 57/84a, 59/22a, 61/38c, 81a, 63/73a).

482. Note again the use of the optative in this line and the present in the following to denote past action. See above, note to 3/14c.

483. All MSs: savarī. 484. All MSs: आज्ञा।

485. ख्, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: पुष्कला। 486. See above, notes to 4/48c and 3/14c. As usual there is no marker of direct speech. See above, note to 3/156b.

487. This reduced form of the word जगत् is found in modern North Indian vernaculars and even in Sanskrit as far back as the Kauśitakyupaniṣad 1/3. The peculiar genitive जगस्य appears as many as three times (see 15/5b, 58/17c and 61/55b). Other examples of the deviant form जग– are found in 13/86d, 19/55d, 24/29b, 31/73d, 39/148b, 46/247b, and 55/2b.

488. The root विचर् is normally 1P. Cf. 6/136b. 489. ग्: –रूप।

490. छ्: –संघार। The accusative form here replaces the required nominative for the metre. See above, note to 2/12c.

491. All MSs: त्वमेकं। Even this small and obvious emendation makes one pause to reflect. When compounded with so many other errors or deviations of this sort, it makes one wonder indeed whether this intense predilection for the final nasalisation of nouns and adjectives in the textus recepitus is indeed original and not the result of some early and colossally erroneous scribal transmission.

492. All MSs: –सिद्धिश्च ते। 493. See above, note to 6/135a

494. घ्: पुष्पधूपार्जितं; छ्, ज्: पुष्पदुपार्जितं।

495. ङ्: किचित्। A dependant pronoun, such as यत् is required to couple with तत् in the following line to complete the syntax.

496. ग्, ट्: गुटिकासिद्धिं; घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: गुटिकासिद्धि; all other MSs: गुटिकासिद्धिर्।

497. घ्, छ्: महायशं; ज्: महायशः। 498. ङ्, ज्: सर्वे; ट्: सर्व। 499. घ्, च्, छ्: एव।

500. All MSs: लब्धवरो। 501. All MSs: –संस्थितः।

502. All MSs: प्रतिचारा। 503. घ्: –विधेयिका; छ्: –धेहिकाः। The final consonant of पञ्चाशत् has been dropped for the metre. Or, if we assume that the ordinal has replaced the cardinal, as commonly happens in the Sanskrit of this text, we may think of this as a case of DS. See above, notes to 6/47b and 3/9c.

504. क्: कुकुलं। Only eleven out of fifty of the names in this list are in their regular masculine gender. 505. घ्: योगि।

506. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: वहलं।

507. घ्, च्, छ्: पालिने; ङ्, ट्: पुलिनं; ज्: पालिनं; all other MSs except ङ्, ट्: पूलिनं।

508. च्, छ्: भूतिमदना; all other MSs except क्, झ्: भूतिमदनो।

509. ख्, झ्: गङ्कराट्; ग्, च्: घङ्क्रट्; all other MSs: गह्वरट्।

510. All MSs except झ्: –लां।

511. क्: गदकांकणम्। See above, note to 5/46d. At the end of the next line is another example of the same deviant dvandva compound.

512. ग्, झ्: कांति। See above, note to 6/49c.

513. क्, ङ्, झ्: दामठं; all other MSs: दामटं।

514. क्, ख्, घ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –नामं। Although the deviant नामम् is well attested, I have refrained from choosing this reading as the metre does not require it.

515. All MSs: घुर्घुषम्। 516. घ्: –र।

517. All MSs: संवर्त। 518. क्: क्रों–।

519. All MSs except क्, च्, झ्: शशि। See above, note 5/66b.

520. All MSs except झ्: –श्वर। 521. ट्: –र।

522. क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –र। 523. ग्: नक्त।

524. घ्, च्, छ्: भूर्जटि। The ending of this word has been dropped for the metre. 525. ङ्: –रणुक्रमात्; all other MSs: मातृकादिरनुक्रमात्। Alternatively, we may leave the reading as it appears in the MSs and assume that the letter 'r' has been inserted between the components of a compound to serve as a filler (see above, note to 3/21b). 526. ग्: सिद्धा।

527. If we accept the meaning of the text to be the apparent one we would have one male attendant (praticārin) along with seven others whereas the analogous layout in the other sacred seats consists of seven female attendants with the deity as the eighth (see note to the English translation). Accordingly, I understand प्रतिचारी to be a feminine noun rather than the nom. sing of the regular प्रतिचारिन्। In other words here प्रतिचारी has replaced the regular प्रतिचारिणी.

528. ङ्: सप्तस्तेत्रैव; all other MSs: सप्तस्तत्रैव।

529. All MSs: व्यवस्थिता। 530. Cf. 6/22c and see note to 1/2c.

531. घ्: समुदिष्ठो; all other MSs: समुदिष्टा।

532. द्वे, the regular feminine form of the numeral, does not fit the metre.

533. क्, च्: मातङ्गी। 534. IC and DS. See above, note to 6/55d.

535. ख्, ङ्: –का। 536. ङ्: सुनदिनी। 537. ङ्: छिछा।

538. All MSs: चेल्लका। Cf. above 6/109b.

539. ख्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: प्रतिवाराश्च। 540. As often happens, these male proper names are treated as neuter. 541. घ्: वज–। 542. ङ्: त्रयेतै। DS.

543. ङ्: स्मृतातत्र। 544. झ्: सिद्धाश्रम त्युग्रं; ख्: सिद्ध्यश्रमं त्युग्रं; घ्, च्:
सिद्धाश्रमे त्युग्रं; छ्: सिद्धाश्रमे त्युंग्रं; ज्: –श्रमं त्युज्यं; all other MSs: –श्रमं त्युग्रं।

545. All MSs: दिव्या। 546. ङ्: –वत। 547. ख्, ङ्: यथा।

548. घ्, च्: श्वेत। 549. See above, note to 3/12c.

550. घ्, च्, छ्: कामाथया; ट्: कामार्थया; all other MSs: कामार्थाय।

551. ख्: उच्छुष्मं–। 552. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: वरारोहं। More befitting the goddess than the god, this epithet suggests that this section, perhaps even the whole chapter, may have been drawn from an earlier source in which the god is addressing the goddess. Moreover, this pāda is one syllable too long.

553. All MSs: सवरस्य। 554. All MSs: सावरी। 555. ज्, ट्: कोंकना।

556. छ्: कोंकनात्। 557. There are close to thirty instances of this DS with इति in this text and it is also common in the Sanskrit of Tantras belonging to other schools. See 6/165d, 7/10d, 62a, 67d, 8/83b, 11/45b, 13/1a, 17/40b, 18/37b, 21/2c, 23/29c, 26/25b, 28/23c, 161a, 35/36a, 36/58c, 40/9c, 44/33a, 46/49d, 74d, 56/1d, 9d, 13d, 16d, 57/98b, and 62/57d.

Here the formation of this DS is quite clear. But there are also a number of instances in which what appears to be this same DS is formed with the nom. and acc. sing. of neuter nouns and those that are usually treated as such, for example, सिद्धद्रव्येति (46/121a) and मुद्राकूटेति (58/39c). Although the morphology is the same, it is the result of dropping of the ending followed by sandhi, not DS.

558. All MSs: –मुद्रा। 559. क्: –योद्; ग्, च्, झ्, ट्: –याद्।

560. घ्, च्, छ्: श्मशाने–; all other MSs except ङ्, झ्: स्मशान–।

561. All MSs: – पालो। 562. As often happens this non-thematic noun has been thematized from राक्षस् to राक्षस–. The same form attested here by all the MSs is also found below in 24/64d, 35/6b and 46/111b. Note that the genitive here is the case of the direct object. See above, note to 5/62a.

563. All MSs except क्, झ्: गगणना–।
564. ख्: प्रज्वलंते; all other MSs except घ्: प्रज्वलते। 565. All MSs: दीपं।
566. The root क्रीड् is normally 1P.
567. A co-related adverb such as यत्र is required to complete the syntax.
M → N. 568. घ्, छ्: रुद्रा–; all other MSs: रौद्रा–।
569. क्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, झ्: सुरक्षे। 570. M → N. See above, note to 2/27c.
571. All MSs except झ्: विषमं। 572. All MSs except झ्: –थ।
573. ङ्: अन्तर्धान; all other MSs: अन्तर्धानं।
574. All MSs: पीठा–। 575. ग्: दव्य–; all other MSs: देव्य–।
576. All MSs: रतां। 577. ङ्: त। See above, note to 1/5d.
578. ङ्: –य। M → N. See above, note to 1/5c. 579. ख्, च्: –सेना।
580. झ्: नासिकं तु; ख्, ग्, ज्: नासिकेतु:; all other MSs: नासिकेतु। IM 5 + 6.
581. छ्, ज्, ट्: ऋषयोस्तौ। 582. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –ता।
583. See above, note to 1/5b and cf. 6/37c.
584. घ्: * (?)भागतं; छ्: जागतं; ज्: जागंतं (?); ट्: जासण् मतं।
585. ख्, ग्, घ्, च्: –न्त; छ्, ज्, ट्: विनि: क्रान्त।
586. कृतयुगादारभ्य would be correct but too long for the metre. See above, note to 4/51a. 587. झ्: वेत्रं; all other MSs except च्: वेत्रे।
588. झ्: किलाम्नायी; all other MSs except क्, ख्: कलाम्नाये।
589. We have noted already that throughout this text tense is not clearly indicated (see above, note to 3/14c). As Tisra is the seat of the future, this is the tense implied here. 590. All MSs: –कामाक्ष–।
591. ङ्: अतव्यां। 592. घ्, झ्: तिशु–; छ्: तिश्र–; all other MSs: तिसु–।
See following verses. 593. ख्, घ्, छ्, ट्: नदीश्रोत्रत्रयोर्; all other MSs:
–श्रोत्रत्रयो। –स्रोतस्त्रये would be regular Sanskrit. The noun स्रोतस् is invariably thematic throughout this text. See 6/167b, 211d, 214b, 7/76d, 9/4d, 26/37b, 30/90a, 165b, 165d, 166a, 45/58a, 60/28c, 67d, and 67/38a. 594. ङ्, च्, ज्: क्षत्र–।
595. घ्, ङ्, छ्: देवतश्रम; all other MSs: देवताश्रम। IM 5.
596. ट्: तिम्र–; N → M and DS. See above, note to 6/153d.
597. All MSs except घ्, छ्: मया। 598. All MSs: त्रिभि:।
599. ग्, छ्, ज्: शोतसु; ङ्: श्रासु; ट्: श्रोतसु। स्रोत:सु is the regular form. See above, note to 6/165a. Cf. the expression त्रिभि: स्रोतप्रवाहकम् in 6/211d and 26/37b.
600. क्, झ्: तिस्रो–; all other MSs: तिश्रोनद्या। I take this to be a contraction of तिस्रपीठनद्याम्। 601. See above, note to 5/38b.
602. च्: –रस्। M → N. See above, note to 1/2c. 603. च्: पीठ।

604a. झ्: तिस्राख्यं–। As Tisra is the future sacred seat what is meant here is:
कृत्वा तत्रावतारं तिस्राख्यस्य पीठस्य संभवो भविष्यति. 604b. All MSs: कृतं।

605a. छ्: पूर्वं–। 605b. All MSs: गोपितं।

606. च्: कलावद्ध; झ्: कलावर्धं; all other MSs: –कलावर्द्धं।

607. All MSs except झ्: गतो। 608. All MSs except ग्, च्, झ्: देव। M → N.

609. All MSs: गतः। 610. DS.

611. As in the form मध्यतः (see above, 3/158b), this suffix has a locative sense. 612. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ट्: सार्द्धमंमनु–।

613. क्: मर्या; all other MSs: मर्य।

614. च्: पूर्वे; all other MSs: पूर्व। 615. ङ्: –श। 616. ङ्: सजातं।

617. –क्रममादाय would be correct. The ending of क्रम– has been dropped to accomodate the metre thus bringing about the formation of this irregular compound. 618. All MSs: विनिर्गताम्।

619. M → N. See above, 3/49a. 620. All MSs: देवस्।

621. भविष्येत replaces भविष्यति to make the seventh syllable long. The following two verbs, one in the present tense and the other an optative, both denote future action. See above, note to 3/14c.

622. All MSs: सद्य–। See above, note to 3/103d. 623. IM 6 + 7.

624. च्, छ्: एकं। 625. M → N. 626. All MSs: तुंगे।

627. ग्: त्यह्यहं; all other MSs: भ्यह्यहं।

628. See above, note to 6/10b.

629. The following is missing in MS ख् from here up to 6/197ab.

630. All MSs: गुरुशिष्येषु। 631. IC. 632. All MSs: –वेश।

633. ङ्: * ते। 634. घ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –भंगे तु सं–; ङ्: –भंगे तु सप्राप्ते; च्:
समय–; all other MSs: समयं भङ्गे तु संप्राप्ते।

635. Here is an example of a split compound. आज्ञालङ्घने would be correct but one syllable too short for the metre, while the genitive आज्ञायाः would make the fifth syllable long. 636. घ्, छ्: –ष्टि। 637. छ्: –ख्य।

638. क्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: –पीठे–; घ्, च्, ज्: –पीठो–; all MSs except क्, ग्, ट्: सर्वे–।
परिवृते would be correct but makes the sixth syllable short. 639. ङ्: सर्व्वषा–।

640. All MSs: सद्य–। I have emended to the regular form as the metre does not prevent it. See above, note to 3/103d.

641. क्, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: क्रमोघस्य। 642. घ्: तस्मार्द्धे।

643. The word order in this compound is irregular. पञ्चमपीठात् would be correct but the sixth syllable in this pāda would be short.

644. All MSs: स। As the other words in concord with it confirm that the gender of भेद– has been altered from masculine to neuter, as happens in most cases in this text (see above, note to 1/2b), this pronoun in concord with it has been emended to the neuter form even though the regular gender of भेद– would govern the masculine. 645. ङ्: भेदे।

646. All MSs: कुब्जिकाधिकारिणी च। IM 7.

647. घ्, छ्: सिद्धा। Here, for a change, we find the regular masculine gender.

648. छ्: द्वावतौ। 649. The correct form –कलेरन्ते– appears only once in this text (see 54/9b). The other correct form कल्यन्ते doesn't occur at all whereas the peculiar कलिस्यान्ते occurs ten times (in 6/184b, 189b, 26/24c, 31/133a, 39/136a, 137d, 45/10b, 60/28b, 69a and 61/16b). The locative कलिस्याम् occurs four times (in 22/17d, 26/58c, 30/169b and 38/13d). The regular form कलौ is more common than its deviant form. Thus, there are at least five instances in just the first six chapters of this text. Note also that the form कलिस्यान्त– occurs four times in YKh (1) (4/222d, 20/85b, 24/21b and 37/4b). However, below in 60/69a, in a passage that also occurs in YKh (1), we find this form whereas YKh (1) reads the regular form. Although we find the loc. कलिस्याम् in the SKh once, the form कलिस्यान्त– appears in just one out of three MSs of the SKh in one place where the other two read the regular form. It is not found in the other parts of the MBT or, indeed, it seems, in any other Kubjikā Tantra. These facts underscore the close relationship between the composition of the KuKh and YKh (1) which is also evidenced by the presence of long passages common to both.

650. च्: त्र्यश्र–। 651. क्, च्: तिस्रोघा; घ्, ज्: तिस्रावा; झ्: तिस्रांवा।

652. क्, ग्, च्: विश्रुताः। 653. ग्, घ्, च्, झ्: कुंचन्द्रं।

654. M → N. 655. क्: अंवा। 656. घ्, च्, छ्: वकका।

657. घ्: ताडिकुक्षन्; छ्: तात्रिवुक्षन्; ज्, ट्: ताडिवुक्षं। M → N. See above, note to 6/10b. The name of the plant is ताडी. The final vowel has been shortened for the metre.

658. घ्, ङ्, छ्, ट्: –वेन। 659. All MSs: सिद्धिनाथे–। See above, note to 6/34d. 660. ङ्: –प्रकाशित। 661. See above, 6/180b.

662. All MSs: क्रियापूजा। 663. च्: –त। 664. IM 5

665. छ्: प्राति–। 666. All MSs: प्रतिचारींश्च। This emendation is based on the assumption that प्रतिचारी has replaced the regular प्रतिचारिणी. See above, 6/145c. 667. घ्, छ्: तात् सर्वात्; ट्: तात् सर्वान्; all other MSs: तां सवां। 668. ङ्: –घारं।

669. See above, note to 6/9a. Cf. 21/17d and 25/12b.

670. M → N. 671. All MSs: –नामानं। 672. ट्: –र।

673. ङ्: –मूर्द्धि। 674. See above, note to 2/5d.

675. घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: पारम्पर्य्य। 676. See above, note to 1/5b. 677. क्: भविष्य।

678. ङ्: प्रकट। भविष्यति, or the like, is required to complete the syntax.

679. See above, note to 6/37c and 1/5b.

680. क्: भविष्येते; घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –व्येते। IM 7. 681. क्: –ख्य।

682. च्: –ने। See above, note to 2/28b. 683. च्: –क्रमागमम्।

684. क्, ङ्, च्: सुपूजये नित्यं। 685. All MSs except क्, झ्: पीठात्। N → M.

686. All MSs except ङ्, च्, ट्: या। 687. ग्: आर्चार्यः।

688. ट्: समुक्तः। 689. क्, ग्: सेम्नायी; ज्, झ्: सोम्नायी। DS.

690. See above, note to 2/25c.

691. 'M' has been inserted between the two members of this compound for the sake of the metre. See above, note to 3/21b.

692. घ्: –पापाद्; ङ्, ज्, ट्: सर्वे पापा। N → M.

693. क्, घ्, ङ्: असंख्या; छ्, ट्: अशंख्या; all other MSs: अशंख्याः। 694. ङ्: –नित्यंमेवं।

695. घ्, च्, छ्: –पूर्वाद्; all other MSs: –पूर्वात्।

696. ङ्: –यत्। See above, note to 6/106c.

697. All MSs except क्, झ्: सर्वात्। This same quarter appears also above as 6/106c. 698. च्: पाथान्ते।

699. घ्, छ्: व्यै; ज्, ट्: (?); all other MSs: वै।

700. All MSs: व्यवस्थिता। 701. All MSs: तेषु।

702. ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –वरा। 703. See above, note to 2/28b.

704. घ्, च्, छ्: य; all other MSs: यं।

705. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: दर्प्प। 706. ग्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: दारिद्रं।

707. MS ख् resumes from here. 708. छ्: जारन्धरे।

709. घ्, च्, ज्: दर्प्प; छ्: दर्प्व। 710. ङ्: –त्सा; छ्: मूढान्मा।

711. छ्: + अदृष्टमुद्गराघातो। 712. The root हन् is 2P, the regular form in this case would be हन्ति। See below, 28/112a, 127c and 36/59a.

713. Note how the genitive functions here as the case of the direct object. See above, note to 5/62a. 714. ख्, ग्, च्, झ्: व्याधिर्–। Although the reading of these MSs is correct Sanskrit, it does not fit the metre. We may separate these two words, assuming the first to be devoid of ending or write them together as we have done, assuming the formation of an irregular compound in which the order of the components has been reversed.

715. च्: पूर्णपीठे। 716. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: –ष।

717. All MSs except घ्, झ्: साचरते। The root संचर् is 1P. Normally it is ātmanepadī only when used with the instrumental of a conveyance.

718. च्, छ्, ज्: य। 719. All MSs: अहंकारोथ। IM 6 + 7.

720. क्, झ्: –दाह्याद्; घ्: अग्नि* (?)घाद्; ङ्: अग्निदाद्याद्; all other MSs: –दाघाद्–।

721. घ्, छ्: –मं। 722. घ्, च्, छ्: –कं। The order of the constituents of this compound has been inverted for the metre. See above, note to

1/5a. 723. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –ना; ट्: सुखांसीना:।
724. घ्: कश्चि; all other MSs except ङ्, छ्: कश्चित्।
725. घ्, छ्, ज्: दर्प्प। 726. ङ्: –घाते; all other MSs: –घातो।

727. The root पत् is normally 1P but here, as happens also in the Epics, (Monier-Williams, p.580), it is ātmanepadī. For other examples, see below, 8/76b, 13/105d, 14/10b, 31/34b, 33/181c, 182c, and 49/18b. The form उत्पतते occurs once in 41/61c. Note also that a future tense is required here. See above, note to 3/14c.

728. The root शुष is generally 4P but here is 4Ā.

729. All MSs except झ्: रूपं। 730. ङ्: स्तुभग * (?)। 731. च्: –भरकं।
732. ङ्, झ्: मुक्ति:। 733. ख्: म। 734. घ्: तस्मा।
735. ङ्: –ष। 736. ङ्: समाचर। 737. छ्: –र्वे।
738. घ्, छ्: विनये। 739. घ्, छ्: न।
740. ग्, ङ्, छ्: उजा–; ट्: उजापूजा–; all other MSs except झ्: –पूजा–।
741. All MSs except ङ्, झ्: पूजा। 742. घ्, छ्: –जात्।
743. ख्: –वो। 744. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: वीरा।
745. All MSs except झ्: सिद्धा। 746. ट्: चतु: पीठा–। See above, note to 1/5b and 6/37c. 747. Although the root अट् is classed as both 1P and 1Ā as is पर्यट्, out of the eight times they appear the former is in its parasmaipadī form only once (38/31d) and the latter never.
748. ग्, ङ्, च्, झ्: स:। 749. घ्: –वं।
750. See above, note to 3/52c.
751. क्: –मध्यत:; च्: वह्निक–; घ्, छ्: –मध्यगं; all other MSs except क्: मध्यतं।
752. See above, note to 2/28b. 753. च्: –क।
754. छ्: श्रीजा * ख्य–। 755. छ्: –दुल्लभं। 756. घ्: सुसुक्ष्मं।

757. The honorific श्री figures here as an augment indicating respect and so is not counted as part of the metre. Other examples are found in 48/89d, 56/1b, 2d, 3d, 4d, 11d and 14d. This deviant usage is particularly common in the CMSS. Four examples should suffice: श्रीचिञ्चिनीमतसारस्य समुच्चयं वदस्व मे (1/21ab); श्रीचिञ्चिनीमतमुत्तमम् (2/2d); श्रीवरदेव: प्रभोवल्यां (7/80c); श्रीचित्रनाथं महादेवि (7/83c).

758. क्: शोत–; ख्: श्रोत–। The word स्रोतस् is treated, as usual in this text, as a thematic noun. See above, note to 6/165a. This expression is the result of breaking up a compound to gain a syllable for the metre. The correct Sanskrit would be त्रिस्रोत:प्रवाहकम्. The same expression appears again below in 26/37b.

759. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –शान्तर्गतं। 760. All MSs: –पीठकै:।

761. This passage, i.e. 6/213-219ab, is probably adapted from an earlier source. Similarly, the following verses up to the end (6/219cd-225ab) are drawn from KMT 2/117-122. This passage also appears below as 51/15cd-21. This is version B. Version B comes at the beginning of the pañcāśatmeruprastārasūtra which is also found in YKh (2) 24/1-10. Here, as in YKh (2) (24/11-15ab), this sūtra is followed by the gahvarasūtra (below 52/1-5ab). Insofar as the division into *sūtra*s is, as we have seen in the introduction, a cardinal feature of the YKh, this suggests that the original source is the YKh. It is highly probable that the last part of this chapter, from here to the end, was added from these two sources namely, the YKh and the KMT in order to integrate the account of the sacred seats presented in the YKh with those of the KMT. But, whereas version B reproduces the text from YKh (2), the part of that passage integrated here has been adapted to this context. Here the goddess is travelling to these places whereas in version B they are simply listed as projections into the meruprastāra. This entails a change from the nominative endings of these place names found in YKh (2) and version B to locatives. We may reasonably assume that the original is represented by version B because we notice in the version we are examining here that a good number of entries have nominative endings. The relative uniformity of version B and its greater agreement with YKh (2) on the one hand and the clumsy alternation between cases here on the other supports this view.

We will refer to two other sources. One is YHṛ 3/37-43ab. This passage is virtually the same as the one in YKh (2) and version B. There is little reason to doubt that it was drawn either from YKh (2) or, which is less likely, an earlier common source (see Dyczkowski 2001(b): 53-54). Another source is the Ṭīkā. There this passage is not quoted directly. The Ṭ simply lists these fifty places along with the letters of the alphabet to which they correspond and an abbreviation of their names. Differences in the spellings of these place names found in this source have been noted here for convenient reference. For other variant spellings, see the notes to the charts of these and other places mentioned in Tantric sources in Dyczkowski 2001(b): 79-83. Version B: कामरूपं; YKh (2): श्रीकामरूपं.

762. ग्, घ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: वराणस्यां; all other MSs: वराणस्थां। Although this emendation entails a long fifth syllable it is the correct spelling of this place and is supported by the reading in the YHṛ. Version B reads हष्कड्डोकं, below in 16/79c this place is called हक्कड्डोकम् which is possibly the correct spelling. Missing in YKh (2).

763.Version B and YKh (2): नेपालं।

764. Version B: पुण्ड्रवर्धनम् (क्, ख्, ग्: पुत्र–; छ्: पुड्र–); YKh (2): पुंद्रवर्द्धनं; MS ख् of YKh (2): पुंडवर्द्धनं। The usual spelling of this place is पुण्ड्रवर्धनम्।

765. घ्: पुरस्ति; च्: पुरस्ती *; version B and YKh (2): पुरस्तीरं; YHṛ: चर्स्थिरं (ख्: पुरस्थिरं।

766. क्: कान्यकुव्ज; घ्: रन्यकुव्जके; च्: कान्यकुव्जके; छ्: कन्यकुब्जके; all other MSs: कान्यकुव्जे; version B: घ्, छ्: कान्यकुब्जं (all other MSs: कन्यकुब्जं); YKh (2): कन्यकुव्जं; YHṛ: कान्यकुब्जं। Although it is not possible to avoid an irregular long fifth syllable, this emendation at least saves the required long sixth syllable.

767. घ्: –गीर्यां; version B पूर्णगिर्यं; YHṛ: पूर्णशैलं।

768. Version B and YHṛ: तथार्वुदं।

769. छ्, ज्, ट्: अम्रातकेश्वरे–; all other MSs: अम्रतकेश्वरे–; क्, ग्, ङ्, च्, झ्: –काम्र; YKh (2) and version B MSs छ्, ज्: आम्रातकेश्वरेकाम्रं; all other MSs of version B: आम्रातकेश्वरेकामारं; YHṛ: आम्रातकेश्वरैकाम्रं। A dual ending is required here. See above, note to 5/46d and below, note to 14/33a.

770. घ्: तिश्रोके; all other MSs: तिश्रोते; version B: त्रिश्रोत्रं; YHṛ: त्रिस्रोतः। See above, note to 6/165a

771. Version B: कामकोट्टिकं; YKh (2): तिश्रोतकामकोट्टकं; YHṛ: कामकोटकम्।

772. Version B: क्, ग्: कैलसं भूगुनगतं; झ्: कैलसं भृगुणगतं; all other MSs of version B: कैलासं भृगुनगतं; YKh (2) and YHṛ: कैलासं भृगुनगरं। IM 6 + 7.

773.Version B and YKh (2): केदारं; version B MS ग्: कदार; YHṛ: केदार।

774. घ्: –पूर्यके; version B and YKh (2): चन्द्रपूर्यकम्; YHṛ: पूर्णचन्द्रके (ख्: चन्द्रपुष्करम्)। Cf. below 7/20d and see above, note to 1/11c.

775. Version B: एकोणं; YHṛ: श्रीपीठमोङ्कारपीठं।

776. ख्: –मालये; ज्, ट्: श्रीजालांधर–; version B and YKh (2): जालन्धरं च मालवम्; YHṛ: जालन्ध्रं (ख्: जालाख्यं) मालवोत्कले। A dual ending is required here. See above, note to 5/46d.

777. घ्: कुलुत्यां; च्, छ्: कुवूत्यां; version B: कुलूतं (ख्: कुलुतं; ग्: कूलुतं; घ्: कूलूटं; all other MSs except छ्, ज्: कूलतं); YHṛ: कुलान्तं। The usual spelling of this place name is कुलूतः। 778. Version B and YKh (2): देविकोट्टं; YHṛ: देविकोटं।

779. Version B गोकर्ण (घ्, छ्: गोकर्णं); YHṛ and YKh (2): गोकर्णं।

780. Version B: मरुकेशरं; YKh (2): मरुकेश्वरं; YHṛ: मारुतेश्वरम्।

781. Version B, YKh (2) and YHṛ: अट्टहासं।

782. All MSs: तु विरजं; Version B, YKh (2) and YHṛ: च विरजं। IM 6 and 7.

783. घ्: –गेहे; all other MSs except झ्: –गृह; version B and YKh (2): राजवेश्मं;
YHṛ: राजगेहं। 784. YKh (2) and YHṛ: महापथम्।

785. ग्: एलांवरे; ट्: एलावुरे; all other MSs except घ्, छ्: एलावरे; version B: क्, ग्: कोल्लगिर्यो; ख्: कोल्लागिर्य; all other MSs except घ्: कोल्लगिर्या; YKh (2) कोलगिर्यं; YHṛ: कोलापुर (ख्: कोल्लगिरि)।

786. Version B: कोल्लापुरं; YKh (2): कोलापुरं; YHṛ: मेलापुरं। IM 5 + 6.

787. All MSs: भोपारे; version B: सोपाने; YKh (2): सापारं; YHṛ: ओङ्कारन्।

788. Version B, YKh (2), YHṛ and MSs क्, ङ्, झ्: जयंतिका।

789. ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्, ट्: उज्जयन्यां; All other MSs: उज्जैयिन्यां। version B: उज्जयिन्या (झ्: उज्जयित्वा); YKh (2): उज्जयंन्यां; YHṛ: उज्जयिन्यपि (ख्: उज्जयनी)। I take the form here to be उज्जयिनी See above, note 2/22a.

790. Version B and YKh (2): चरित्रं; YHṛ: चित्रा (ख्: विचित्रं)।

791. All MSs, version B and YKh (2): क्षीरिका; YHṛ: क्षीरकं।

792. All MSs: हस्तिका–; version B, YKh (2), and YHṛ: हस्तिनापुरम्।

793. Version B: उदकेशं (ख्: उदयेशं); YKh (2): ओडिकोशं; YHṛ: ओड्डीशं च।

794. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: प्रयोगाख्ये; ट्: प्रयोगोख्य; version B, YKh (2), and YHṛ: प्रयागाख्यं।

795. All MSs: मायापुरी; YKh (2) and version B: पीठं मायापुरी (क्, ग्, ज्, झ्: –पुरीं); YHṛ: षष्ठं मायापुरं।

796. All MSs and YKh (2): उरसा; version B: उरप्ता; YHṛ: जलेशं।

797. Version B, YKh (2), and YHṛ: मलयं।

798. All MSs सैल; version B: सैलं; YKh (2): शैलं।

799. ख्: भेरुडके; ग्: भरुंडके; च्, छ्: भेरण्डके; YKh (2) and version B: भेरुण्डकं (ख्: भेरेशुकं; झ्: भेरेण्डकं; घ्, छ्: भेरण्डकं); YHṛ: मलयं शैलं मेरुं गिरिवरं।

800. Version B, YKh (2), and YHṛ: महेन्द्रं।

801. Version B: वरुणा; YKh (2) MS क्: वरणं; YKh (2) MS ख्: वरेणं; YHṛ: वामनं।

802a. क्, ग्, ङ्, च्: हिरण्यपूरण्य; घ्, च्, छ्, झ्: हिरण्यं–; ट्: –पुर एव।

802b. All MSs: महालक्ष्मी। 803. ङ्, च्, झ्: –नं; version B and YKh (2): तथोद्यानं; YHṛ: महालक्ष्मीपुरोद्याणं। See above, note to 2/28b.

804. Version B, YKh (2), and YHṛ: च्छायाच्छत्रमतः परम्।

805. This and the following verses up to the end are reproductions of KMT 2/117-122. The variants indicated in Roman letters are those of the MSs of the KMT used in the printed critical edition.

806. All MSs: –लोकने। KMT: –कयेत्; MS D तरावलोकिते; MSs AB –ते; MSs EG –यन्। This emendation presumes that a present tense denotes past action. The reading of the edition of the KMT presumes the same for the optative. Cf. 7/37c.

807. च्: –तार्थानि। 808. छ्: –यततानि।

809. This line in the edited text of the KMT reads: तत्र सन्दोहतीर्थं च उपक्षेत्राण्यनेकधा।

810. MSs HK of the KMT agree with this reading. MS J reads: कृता whereas the edited text of the KMT reads: कृतं।

811. घ्: –कीर्ती; ग्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –कीर्ति; all other MSs: –कीर्तिः।

812. MSs ABC of the KMT read कुजाम्बिके. The editors of the KMT read आत्मकीर्तिकुमारिका. In the KMT Bhairava is addressing the goddess. Here the goddess is speaking. It appears that the redactor(s) of the KuKh simply quoted this line without taking care to make the necessary change from a feminine vocative to a masculine one. 813. ङ्: पूर्व्वसतानदेवेन।

814. घ्, च्, छ्: तदाप्रकृति; all other MSs: तदाप्रभृतिदेवेश; KMT: तदावसाने। Instead of देवेश the edited text of the KMT reads: कुब्जेशि. MSs AB read देवेशि. The required change to the masculine vocative is apparently based on this variant.

815. Clearly उभयोः is meant here. This is the reading in MSs FG of the KMT. 816. क्: मलकं। 817. छ्: नत्।

818. Here is yet another example of how a participle takes over the function of a gerund. See above, note to 5/38b.

819. घ्, च्: –मं; all other MSs: आज्ञामन्दा–। 820. ङ्: –स्त्रत्र।

821. All MSs: –रूपा तुयापिनी। This emendation corresponds to the reading in the MSs of the KMT. But see note to 2/4d.

822. ङ्, ज्, ट्: –न; च्: –सं * *; छ्: –सं * (?) त।

823. All MSs: शिष्यं। This emendation is supported by the reading of the edited text of the KMT. But not that MSs CDEFG of the KMT also read शिष्यं.

824. All MSs: सुरवरार्चितं। The edited text of the KMT reads the vocative addressed to the goddess सुरवरार्चिते। MSs CDF read सुरार्चितम् and HJK सुरवरार्चितः.

825. छ्, ज्, ट्: श्रीमदोदुमहेशान; च्: –न; all other MSs: –ने; KMT MSs EG: –महेशानः; all other MSs of the KMT –महेशानं। The deity 's name is drawn from the sacred seat he governs. Three MSs of the KuKh read ओदु and the rest ओड्डु for the name and one reads उड्डु and the rest उडु for the sacred seat. The readings in the MSs of the KMT of the name of the deity vary as follows: C: –ओड्रं; D: –ओद्द्र–; FH: –ओद्र–; K: –ओग्र–, AEG: –रौद्र– and the remaining four –ओड्र–, which is the reading accepted by the editors. The edited text of the KMT reads उड्डु– as the name of this sacred seat whereas MSs CK read: ओड्र–; HJ ओड॰–; D: ओड्डु– and A: उत्त–. See above, note to 2/28b.

826. All MSs: ददे। This last quarter reads in the KMT: पुनर्ददेत्। See above,
3/14c. 827. क्: स; ख्, ग्, च्, झ्: सः। 828. The KMT reads: व्रज त्वं। 829. ट्: भारत।

830. क्: वषे। All MSs add: शिष्यं सुरवरार्चितम्।

831. The rest of this line is missing in MS च्; all other MSs: शुततः। This emendation agrees with the reading in the KMT.

832. ख्: प्रत्यनुग्रहं। M → N. But note that in the KMT this word is in its regular masculine gender. See above, note to 3/164a.

833. घ्: –पुरभ्य तु; ट्: उड्डुपीठपुरभ्यं तु; all other MSs: –पुरभ्यं तु। I have emended to form an irregular compound typical of the Sanskrit of this text. See above, notes to 2/28b and 4/51a. The edited text of the KMT reads उड्डुपीठे पुनः स्थातुं.

834. All MSs: सृष्टिरनेकधा। 835. ख्: इत्यावरे; ग्, ङ्, छ्, ट्: इत्या * वतारे।

836. ङ्: –ज्ञ। 837. ङ्: –मार्ग। 838. ङ्: स्वा–।

839. ज्: –विंशति–; all other MSs except घ्, झ्: विंशतिस– –संहितां।

840. All MSs: –थाज्ञ–।

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER SIX

1. One could translate: ‘ . . . pray tell me something else, namely, the descent of the sacred seats.' However, the proposed translation makes better sense. Although, the concluding verses of this chapter (i.e 6/219cd-225) are drawn from the KMT (2/117-122) the mythical account of the foundation of the sacred seats and their contents that follows differs considerably from the one found in the KMT. This is because, although the KMT is the older text, the myth there does not relate to the founding of the original sacred seats. Instead it is the story of how the goddess projects these seats onto other sacred sites that form a part of a regional rather than pan-Indian geography. Although the account that follows carries over part of the narrative framework of the KMT it is concerned with the establishment of the original seats themselves, not their projection. Thus, it is indeed the 'other' descent of the sacred seats into the world.

2. The goddess, like the god, is 'accomplished' because she has attained the Command. The Command is not just the means. It is also the goal. The degree in which the goal is attained is in consonance with the degree in which the Command is imparted and received.

3. Three MSs read pratiṣṭhā. The goddess, according to this reading, has not just entered into the maṇḍala, she is established there.

4. The ‘place' (sthāna) of a deity or, indeed, any living being, is an index of its status and attainment. Sacred places have a special power of their own which those who reside there or visit receive. The entrance and presence of the goddess along with the deities who attend upon her in the maṇḍala is a sign of their eminence. It is ‘somewhere’ in some spatially undefinable ‘transcendental’ location. The holy abode of the goddess is not a ‘place’ in the common, everyday sense of the word.

5. The phrase 'the energy called the Yoni' (yā sā śaktir bhagākhyātā) is the opening quarter verse of the Root Sūtra (mūlasūtra) (see note to the Sanskrit text of 3/17ab). Three variants of this sūtra are found in chapters 26, 38 and 42 (26/7c, 38/1a, 42/3a). It also explained in chapter 58. Apart from these places this phrase appears again above three times (see 3/17a, 3/63a and 6/2a). The Root Sūtra, as we shall see, describes the Yoni of the goddess and its triangular shape marked out by the sacred seats in the corners and the centre. The goddess who emerges from the Void in this form is established in the centre of the Kramamaṇḍala, here called the Hermitage of Gesture and elsewhere Maṇḍala or Wheel of Gesture (mudrācakra) (46/18cd-19). In the centre is the triangle representing the goddess’s Yoni, which we are told in the next verse is the Cave within which the goddess sits in meditation.

According to KuKh 46/2-21ab (see table in note to 46/26) the Wheel of Gesture consists of the aggregate of sacred seats and their contents which are their `inner' nature. These are the twenty-five principles of existence (tattva) of the Sāṁkhya, ranging from the the principle of Earth (pṛthavītattva) to that of the Person (puruṣatattva), along with the three qualities (guṇa) of Nature (prakṛti). This is the form of the sacred seats when they are still within the goddess who enters and resides in her maṇḍala contemplating her own nature. When she is duly worshipped by the god and so emerges out of her introverted state, they are projected outside her and assume the outer form described in this chapter.

6. The Cave is the Void in the Yoni (see above, note to 3/1), identified with the Liṅga (see 58/7cd-8ab). In this Cave the goddess in the Liṅga receives the Command (see above note to 3/1). Her silence is a sign of her profound state of contemplation in the condition Beyond Mind (unmana) in which she meditates on her own energy – the energy of austerity Beyond Mind. But although immersed in silence (tuṣṇīstha), Beyond Mind is the womb of all the energies of Speech and so is active, flowing with the creative, illumining force of mantra (38/19-20).

The blissful body of the goddess in the Liṅga shines brilliantly, radiant with the light of ultimate reality. Thus the black Kālikā abandons her dark colour to become the white goddess in the Liṅga. She is white when engaged in the practice of austerities and perfect chastity. She is black when she emerges from the Liṅga and is ready to unite with the god. Inside the Cave or, to be more precise, within the Liṅga in the Cave the goddess is in her unmanifest state in which she is alone, coupling internally in `ecstatic celibacy' with aspects of herself in the core of the triangle of the sacred seats, her own Yoni. Thus she sits within the sacred seats even as the sacred seats are within her. When she rises from her introverted meditation, the triangle of the sacred seats emerges out into the outside world along with her. Now in what follows, the text describes how she couples with the god externally in each of the sacred seats, one by one.

7. See above, note to 3/125. In relation to the goddess within the Liṅga in the Cave, the Conduct of the Night is an euphemism for her inner union – what our text refers to as her ‘practice of ecstatic celibacy' (unmattabrahmacarya). One could say, using the later terminology, that this is the form of this practice in divyabhāva (see intro. vol. 1, p. 515). She moves within her infinite being - the triangular womb of all manifestation into which the sacred seats are projected. Thus she unites all the aspects and phases of her dynamic, flowing nature with their male counterparts even as she, at the summit of existence moving within the Void beyond all definition and polarities, unites with the god in the supremely blissful condition that transcends the opposites and with it, their union.

8. This great sound is produced by the explosion of the Liṅga, burst apart by the intense energy of the goddess who emerges from it. It is analogous to the cosmogonic Sound (nāda) emitted when the Point (bindu) formed by the union of Śiva and Śakti splits to generate the principles that form the cosmic order.

9. Several words denote the unconditioned expanse of the transcendent beyond time and space. Void of all phenomenal forms it may be simply called the Void - śūnya. Unlimited and encompassing, it is also appropriately called ‘space’ - ākāśa or ‘sky’ - kha, nabha (or, more correctly, nabhas), gagana, vyoman and other synonyms. I have translated variously as best suits the context and the English, taking my cue for this liberty from the Sanskrit that also often varies in the choice of words guided solely by aesthetic and metric consideration, rather than any distinction in meaning.

The Void is the Liṅga which is called, for this reason, the Liṅga of the Sky (ākāśa – or vyomaliṅga). It is both the goddess’s abode and the goddess herself when she is in her undifferentiated (niṣkala), unmanifest state (see above 5/18, line 39 of the Mālinīstava and 38/6). Within the Void of the transcendental Liṅga the goddess, solitary and silent 'plays' - a clear allusion to her playful union with herself in a transformed Kaula modality in which continence is understood to be the maintenance ('containment') of the supreme state of the Command in union with the god.

10. This divine knowledge is the Command.

11. Within the Liṅga the goddess abandons gender. In this ‘neuter’ state in which she is neither male nor female, she absorbes the empowering energy of the Command within the Liṅga (3/69). United with the god in this state she is the goddess Neuter who attains the plane of Nirvāṇa. This is her ‘continence’ (see 3/63-64ab).

12. Five sacred seats are described from here up to verse 6/212ab. The main features of these seats presented in this account have been listed for easy reference in the table 2 on p. 616-617 of vol.1 of the introduction.

13. The journey of the god around the sacred seats begins and ends with this one (see 6/224cd-225). See below note to 6/224cd-225 concerning the spelling of this place and its location.

14. The name of this Siddha is spelt Uḍīśa below in 6/31.

15. The Tree is the Point (bindu) in the centre of the Triangle into which the seats are projected. This is the location of this, the First Seat (ādipīṭha). The Conduct of the Night, as we have just seen above (note to 6/3-5ab) induces the liberated state of flight. Entry into the Tree, that is, the Point (bindu) in the centre, is the attainment of liberation.

One wonders how intentional the association of flight with the tree is. Shamans in many diverse cultures climb up a sacred tree or post, ascending up it in stages as they travers the worlds. At the top they take flight with the aid of their drum and cross over into the higher regions of the celestial spirits.

16. Cf. 6/127cd-128ab.

17. Cf. above 5/71ab.

18. The lion, majestic and powerful, is a symbol both of empowerment and the authority to transmit it. The Lion is the empowered form Bhairava assumes when he is initiated by the Command transmitted to him by the goddess's 'lion-gaze' (siṁhāvalokana) who, in the form of her Vidyā, is the lioness (53/4). Similarly, the Lion Knowledge transmitted by the goddess is the Command and so each Kaula school is the tradition, convention (saṁketa) or 'vision of the lion' (siṁhadarśana). See notes to 5/30 and 5/34 and intro. vol. 2, p. 344 ff..

19. There are fifty Rudras in Oḍḍiyāna (6/14-20), fifty Heroes (vīra) in Jālandhara (6/45cd-55ab), fifty Bhairavas in Pūrṇagiri (6/100cd-105) and fifty Rasasiddhas in Kāmarūpa (6/139cd-144; see also below, 38/17-19). The fifty Rudras of this seat belong to the Wheel of Kaṅkālabhairava (see below, 6/26).

20. These are the fifty Rudras (elsewhere also called Bhairavas, Vīras, Devas and Siddhas) who preside over the fifty letters of the alphabet embodied in Bhairava called the Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi). The projection of the letters and their presiding deities onto the body and other teachings related to the Assembly of Sounds are the subject of chapter 19. See table there where their names are compared with those found in the ṢSS, Ṭīkā, KnT, KMT and other sources.

We find numerous sets of deities said to preside over the letters of the alphabet in the many Tantric systems, whether Kaula, Śaiva, Vaiṣṇava, as well as Buddhist and Jain. We also find several in the Purāṇas and even in works in modern languages and their dialects. This series is certainly one of the most popular in the Śaiva and Kaula Tantras. Although the Mālinī alphabet (see chapter 18) is considered to be very important by the Kubijkā Tantras and Trika and therefore by Kashmiri Śaivites, it hardly survived in the later period. The Assembly of Sounds, on the other hand, continued to be popular. It appears, for example, in the Śāradātilaka (2/29cd–35) which is usually attributed to the 10th century but is probably two or three centuries later. It is also found in the famous 16th century compillation by the Bengali Kṛṣṇānanda, the Tantrasāra.

21. This Rudra is usually called Krūra. See Schoterman 1981: 218-219.

22. The name of this Rudra, the lord of the letter Gha, is usually Śiva. Krūra is normally the name of the Rudra who governs anusvāra. See ibid.

23. This Rudra is also called Ajita. See ibid.

24. A more common name of this Rudra is Śarman. See ibid.

25. Another name of this Rudra is Ḍāra. See ibid.

26. Also called Śikhin. See ibid.

27. Also called Bakīśa. See ibid.

28. See below, note to 6/126cd-127ab.

29. There are three plants with similar names. One is the Vellaka, also called Vellikā, which is Trigonella Corniculata. The others are the Vella which is the Embelia Ribes and the Vela which is the mango tree. Perhaps this is the triad to which the text refers. We are not told the names of the trees unless, assuming a skewed syntax, they are these three. But this is unlikely. Apart from the mango these are not trees.

30. The word 'udyāna' literally means a garden. Perhaps what is meant here is that this sacred seat is called 'garden' because the beings and other things in it are varied and well arranged together as are the plants in a garden. See below, note to 6/224cd-225ab, concerning the variant spellings of this sacred seat.

31. Concerning this famous cremation ground see above, note to line 118 of the Mālinīstava. The name of this place is fancifully derived from that of flowers that are said to grow there. Here called karapuṣpa - 'Kara flowers' - their full name is karavīra, that is, oleander (Nerium Odorum).

32. The Purāṇas sometimes refer to the infamous Kāpālika sect as Kaṅkāla (lit. 'skeleton') (Dyczkowski 1988: 19) possibly because the initiates worshipped this form of Bhairava, amongst others. He is mentioned as the first of a group of eight Bhairavas in the JY (ibid. 107). He appears in the KMT (16/85), the commentary on which identifies him with Asitāṅga, the first of the most common of the groups of eight Bhairavas. The KMT portrays him as prone beneath Parā, the four-armed form of the goddess who stands on top of him. They are visualized in the centre of the Khecarīmaṇḍala, which located above the six Wheels in the body, is the highest (see Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 173-4 and 272).

33. The maṇḍala is commonly said to be made of six parts (ṣaṭprakāra) with reference to the hexagon that encloses the triangle in the centre. Similarly, the less common expression triprakāra – 'consisting of three parts' refers to the triangle in the centre and may mean simply 'triangle' or 'triangular'. Thus, the inner sacrificial hearth (kuṇḍa) of Sun, Fire and Moon within which this sacred seat is said to be located is 'triprakāra', that is, triangular (65/28cd). Similarly, the offering of the sacred sandal (pādukā) is said to be 'triprakārā (15/22c). The Stone that is 'made of three parts' (triprakāramayā) is the central triangle made of letters (3/31-32). The goddess herself is triangular (triprakārā) and her form is the Yoni (bhagākṛti) (66/78b). At the same time she is the energy within the triangle (26/69c and 59/33b) and as the female triangle (triprakārā), she contains Oḍḍiyāṇa – the sacred seat in the centre of the triangle - within herself (26/3b, 38/2a and 42/3a).

34. Khecarī is the name of the goddess who governs this sacred seat as is the name of the Gesture.

35. The name of this Siddha is spelt Oḍīśa above in 6/9.

36. The goddesses, all aspects of Kubjikā, and the Siddhas of the sacred seats, are tabulated below. These are compared to the ones named in the KMT (ṢSS and the ŚM that agree with it) and the KRP (6/48cd-52cd according to to Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 130 note 33).

7. Table of Seats, Goddesses and Siddhas

Sacred seat	KuKh	KMT	KRP
Oḍḍiyāna	Kubjikā/ Khageśī - Uḍīśa	Raktacāmuṇḍā	Kamalā
Jālandhara	Siddhayoginī - Caryānātha	Karālinī	Samarī
Pūrṇagiri	Samarī /Pūrṇāmbā - Ṣaṣṭhadeva	Caṇḍākṣiṇī	Mahantārī
Kāmarūpa	Kāmeśvarī -	Kāmeśvarī	Koṅkaṇā
Trisrota	Mātaṅgī - Mātaṅgaka / Kucandra	Kuṇḍalinī	* * * *

37. This seat, more than any other is associated with mystic flight (see KMT 2/40 quoted in intro. 1, p. 81, note 3). Appropriately, here Kubjikā is Khageśī (i.e. Khecarī), the Skyfaring Goddess who flies like a bird (khaga) within the expanse of the infinite conscious being who is both beyond the body, senses and mind and pervades them. This condition is symbolized by the Full Moon that represents the fullness of the plenitude of life and the goddess who, as the energizing centre of the Moon, is full of all things. Accordingly, she is called Bhairavī whose name, like Bhairava's (see above, 2/42-43), denotes her blissful fullness.

Śiva's Path (śivamārga) is the Cavity of Brahmā on the crown of the head. Explaining how the sacred sound of mantra rises up in stages up through the centres governed by the presiding gods of the Five Praṇavas, the ṢSS enjoins:

One who is blessed with freedom of movement (gati) should develop the dynamism (gati) (of the rise of Kuṇḍalinī) by means of Sound. Once pierced through Brahmā, then Viṣṇu, Rudra and Īśvara and the movement (of energy between the eyebrows which) forms the bridge (to the upper level) the Key should open the cavity. Once opened (Kuṇḍalinī reaches) the Supreme Place where Aghora resides.

nādena tu gatiṁ kuryāt [kh: kuryā] svacchandagatibhāvitaḥ ||
bhitvā brahmā tato viṣṇuṁ [kh: viṣṇu] rudram īśvaram eva ca |
setubandhanagamanaṁ kuñcikodghāṭayed bilam ||
udghāṭya paramaṁ sthānam aghoraṁ yatra saṁsthitam | ṢSS 14/69cd-71ab

Explaining the words 'the Key should open the cavity' (ṢSS 14/70d = KMT 8/73d), the commentary on the ṢSS says: 'Just as a door is opened with a key similarly with this method Śiva's Path is opened' (yathā kuñcikayā [k: krauñcikayā; kh: kauñcikayā] dvārodghāṭanaṁ [kh: dvānoṭghāṭanaṁ] kriyate [k: kriḍyate] tathā anayā yuktyā śivamārgasyodghāṭanaṁ kriyate). The commentary on the KMT explains the same as follows: The Key is the tongue. The Cavity is the location of the goal. One should be pierce the Supreme Place (sthāna) that is, the Cavity of Brahmā, with the tongue (kuñcikā jihvā bilaṁ lakṣasthānaṁ | jihvayā bhedayet | paraṁ sthānaṁ brahmarandhram | KMT fl. 5b).

It seems that according to the passage we are examining, Aghora resides in the Cavity of Brahmā that has been opened by this Key. Elsewhere the ṢSS lists the places in the body where the fifty Rudras that govern the letters of the alphabet are located. There we read that the Rudra Mahāsena, who governs the letter Ḥ (visarga), is 'on Śiva's Path, that is, (he is) in the Cavity of Brahmā' (śivamārge brahmarandhragaḥ ṢSS 38/16b, cf. KMT 24/16b). Elsewhere in the ṢSS, Mahāsena is said to be on the tongue (aḥ mahāseno jihvāyām [k kh: jihvayā] ṢSS 7/51b). Perhaps we may infer that Mahāsena is on the tip of the tongue that, curled up into the nasal cavity, extends up towards the Cavity of Brahmā. He is the lord of the letter Ḥ, that is, visarga, which literally means emission. In this context, visarga is the powerful emission of sacred Sound (nāda) that pierces through the Cavity of Brahmā and projects this energy up into the transcendent Void beyond. Thus by means of this, the Gesture of the Skyfarer (khecarīmudrā), which is the upward movement of Sound on the one hand and the upraised tongue on the other, the goddess Bhairavī, who is the energy of Bhairava's bliss, has 'taken flight on Śiva's Path'. In this way Bhairavī travels to the highest level of her own lunar energy said to be 'the extremity of (the energy of the) New Moon' (see above 5/83cd-84ab).

38. In this chapter, as well as other places in the Kubjikā Tantras, the name Siddhinātha and Siddhanātha appear to be interchangeable (see note to the Sanskrit text). Siddhanātha (or Siddhinātha) is a title given to the founder of a lineage or transmission (see above, note to 4/50cd-51ab). It is equivalent to the title Ādinātha or Mūlanātha. Thus each of the sacred seats has it own Siddhanātha. The one here is called Uḍīśanātha (see above 6/31).

39. Almost all these are names of Vedic Ṛṣis. They are also mentioned in the Purāṇas. Vedic Ṛṣis are members of Bhairava's host and live with him on Kailāsa along with a variety of celestial beings and gods, numerous Yoginīs of various types and Mothers (mātṛ or mātṛkā). The sacred seats are the residence of the 'incarnations' of the goddess and so the majority of attendants are Bhairavas and the like rather than Yoginīs. But despite this change and the absence of other beings in the goddess's entourage who are part of that of her male counterpart, the Ṛṣis remain as a sign that the goddess, like the god, possesses the authority and status of a Vedic deity.

The names of the Ṛṣis mentioned in the four Vedas are listed in the introductions by Ravi Prakash Arya to Wilson 2000: (vol. 1 intro.: p. 44-71), Griffith 2000 (1): 20–22; Griffith 2000 (2): 42-46 and Whitney 2000: 32-33.

40. Jālandhara is regularly said to lie in the right corner of the triangle and Pūrṇagiri on the left (see, e.g. 26/3). Concerning the location of this and the other major seats, see intro. vol. 1, p. 553 ff..

41. Khageśī, that is Kubjikā herself, is indeed the goddess of Oḍḍiyāṇa (6/31), the seat of OṀ (oṁkārapīṭha). Similarly, Jālandhara is a transformation of the first seat. However, although the seats are progressively generated by the transformation of the corresponding seats that precede them, this is the only hint that a similar process may operate in relation to the goddesses who preside over them. Perhaps what is intended is that all the goddesses of the sacred seats are transformations of Kubjikā who, as Khageśī, is directly present in the first seat, just as the Siddhas of the seats are all equally manifestatations of Bhairava.

42. In the next sacred seat, Jālandhara, the goddess is red. The god in Pūrṇagiri is yellow (6/80cd-81) as is the goddess. In Kāmarūpa that comes next, the Siddha (6/128), goddess and seat (6/150cd-151) are white.

43. The goddess in this sacred seat is identified as Khageśī, Cāmuṇḍā and Jālā. The first of these names is common to all the goddesses of the sacred seats as they are all aspects of the Skyfaring Goddess (khageśī), that is, Kubjikā (see above 6/31). Bhairava here is said to be Kumāra, Caryādeva and Rakta. The tree is the Bilva, the cremation ground Laṅkuṭa and the gesture (mudrā) Karālā.

44. See below, note to 6/126cd-127ab.

45. Bhairava in the form of a young man 'absorbed in the state of Kaula practice (caryāvasthā)', unites here, as in Oḍḍiyāṇa, with the goddess and so receives initiation. This is why this place is called the Sacred Seat of the Youth (kumārapīṭha) (see below 6/64). We have seen that the previous seat was the Sacred Seat of the Eldest (jyeṣṭhapīṭha) (6/37cd) and is associated, as one would expect, with the Transmission of the Eldest. But Jālandhara is the sacred seat of the Skyfarer, while that of the Youth is Pūrṇagiri (see below 6/190 and note). The form Bhairava assumes here is not linked to the triadic transmission. In this case he is Kumāra, that is, the god Skanda:

> I will tell (you) about the beautiful Kumāra born of (a woman of good) family (kulajā). Endowed with the sacrament of initiation and born of (a good) womb he should be worshipped intensely. From six to eight years * * (?). Know him to be the child (vaṭuka) of the goddess, that is, Kumāra, with six faces.

kumāraṁ kathayiṣyāmi surūpaṁ [ṅ: svarūpaṁ] kulajodbhavam |
dīkṣāsaṁskārasahitaṁ [all MSs: -rahitaṁ] garbhajaṁ pūjayed bhṛśam ||
ṣaṭvarṣāṇy aṣṭakaṁ yāvad [k: yādan] yathā tadvilomakṛtaṁ [ṅ: tadvilāpakṛt] ? |
vaṭukaṁ [k: vaṭu *] taṁ vijānīyād [k: -yā] devīputraṁ ca ṣaṇmukham ||
YKh (1) 25/51-52.

Concerning Vaṭuka Bhairava see notes to 11/33cd-34ab. His visualized form is described in 47/3cd-6 and notes.

46. The maṇḍala is required for both the outer and inner worship of the goddess. Thus, just as in this sacred seat, Bhairava fashions a maṇḍala in front of the goddess and worships her feet in Kāmarūpa (6/130cd-131ab). He does the same in Pūrṇagiri (6/81), where a vast host of gods and other divine beings stand reverently in front of it with him (6/111). In Oḍḍiyāṇa the goddess is worshipped in the Rite of the Five Offerings that requires the maṇḍala (6/13) as does the ritual the attendants in Jālandhara perform (6/66). Out of the fervour of his devotion the god in Kāmarūpa generates the maṇḍala in which he worships the goddess by means of the sacred sound, loud and powerful, he produces (6/130cd-131ab).

47. The form of Kaula practice – caryā – meant here is union with the goddess.

48. The Heroes' Path is the path of the teaching of the Kaula Tantras. Practicing Kaula initiates are called 'heroes' (cf. 38/19). One of the qualities of a true teacher is that he is on the Heroes' Path (32/49).

49. The Heroes' Field is to the north of Jālandhara. See above 6/38.

50. See below 37/43-44.

51. I have emended to the form of the term we invariably find elsewhere in this chapter. But note the reading of the MSs - prīticārikāḥ - which literally means 'practitioners of love'.

The three female attendants are the first of three low caste women in a series of eight said to be embodiments of the eight Mothers who reside in their eight sacred sites (kṣetra) (see 16/13-14) and so are called Kuladevīs (6/108). The next three in serial order along with three maids (cellakā) and three male servants similarly reside in Pūrṇagiri (6/109–110) and Kāmarūpa (6/147cd-148). In the latter case, only the first two out of the three female attendants correspond to the last two embodiments of the Mothers with an extra one (called Mātaṅgī) added to complete the set. In Oḍḍiyāna there are only three female servants and three male servants. Moreover, these six are of a different type to those found in the other sacred seats. This is possibly why the female attendants in Oḍḍiyāṇa are called paricārikā (6/23ab) rather than praticārikā as they are here and in Kāmarūpa (6/148). They are not called anything in Pūrṇagiri. Similarly, the male attendants in Oḍḍiyāna are praticāraka (6/23cd) rather than praticāra, which is what they are called in Pūrṇagiri (6/110) and Kāmarūpa (6/148). Tisra, the fifth sacred seat, will come into existence in the future. Presumably for this reason the names of the attendants there are not listed.

52. The equivalent group of three in Pūrṇagiri (6/109) and Kāmarūpa (6/147) are called cellakā, a word not found in MW. It is possibly formed from the root cell (1P) meaning to go or move, to shake or tremble. I translate this word as 'maid'. We may possibly understand 6/109cd to mean that these three are the maids of the triad of Mothers who, in the form of low caste women, attend upon the goddess in the three seats of the corners of the triangles. Thus there are two triads (trika) of female attendants in each of these three. See below, note to 6/108.

53. Cf. 6/110-111 and 6/147cd-148ab. We can tabulate the names of these three groups of three attendants in the following way:

8. Table of Attendants in Jālandhara

The Three Female Servants	The Three Maids (cellakā)	The Three Male Servants
Veśyā (the Prostitute)	Lolā (Lustful)	Kallola
Muṇḍanī (Skull Bearer)	Vicitrā (Peculiar)	Kṛkara
Kaivartī (Fisherwoman)	Bhābhūtī (Wealth of Light)	Kāmeśvara

54. See above, note to 6/38.

55. There is ultimately only one teacher namely, Siddhanātha who, identified with Bhairava, assumes the identity of the teacher in each seat (cf. above, 6/33cd-34ab and below 6/118cd-119ab, 157cd-158ab, 183cd-184ab) just as the goddess does (see note to 6/39). Similarly, in a sense there is only one seat, that is, Oḍḍiyāṇa. But whereas Siddhanātha / Bhairava assumes various outer forms by the power of Māyā, Oḍḍiyāṇa, the first and original seat, becomes the others through a chain of transformations. Thus Jālandhara comes from Oḍḍiyāṇa and as we shall see, Pūrṇagiri is emitted by Jālandhara (6/121cd-122ab) and Kāmarūpa by Pūrṇagiri (6/132cd).

56. Cf. below 6/197–198ab.

57. Perhaps this is the secret name of this seat. As we shall see, the next seat, Pūrṇagiri also has a secret (gupta) aspect. In Kāmarūpa, the secret seat is called Ucchuṣma. Here it is called Puṣpa (Flower). Puṣpa in Sanskrit means both flower and menstrual blood or menstruation. The god here is called Rakta, that is, Blood. One of the goddesses is called Raktajā, which means 'Born of Blood'. Caryānātha, who was initiated by the mother of the seat namely, Jālāvvā, is present here in secret with the Yoginī, his consort. She, the hidden form of the goddess is, like all the consorts of the Siddhas of the seats, a tribal Śavarī woman (6/112cd-113ab). The goddess who appears before the Siddha and is visible to him in that form, that is, as the goddess who initiates him, incarnates as his consort.

58. See above, 6/41 and note.

59. The Siddha here is normally called Caryānātha. The name Caryāsiddha is unusual. Indeed, this may be the only place where it occurs.

60. The goddess stayed in the previous sacred seat, Oḍḍiyāna, for three hundred divine years (see above 6/32-33ab) and one hundred and fifty in Pūrṇagiri, the following seat (see below 6/118). We are not told how long she stayed in the other two seats, Kāmarūpa and Trisrota.

61. We have seen that the name of the first seat, Oḍḍiyāna, is said to imply a reference to the goddess's flight (see note to 6/31-33ab). She flies up into the sky when her work is complete in the seat of Pūrṇagiri also (6/118cd-119ab). Similarly, when she leaves Kāmarūpa she is said to 'enter the Transmission of the Skyfaring Goddess' (6/159cd-160ab). This is the Divine Current of the Transmission that flows through the Point in the centre within the expanse through which the energy of the Transmental travels back and forth from the supreme Śāmbhava state. The goddess, the energies and their possessors who accompany her there are all Skyfarers. The goddess first descends down following this current and then 'flies up into the Sky' ascending back up along it. Similarly, the god is said to be transported upwards by the rise of the energy of Kuṇḍalinī (6/82-83).

62. See above, note to 6/59ab.

63. Just as the sacred seats emerge progressively from one another, Jālandhara from Oḍḍiyāṇa and Pūrṇagiri from Jālandhara and so on (see above, note to 6/59ab), it makes sense that the Siddhas who teach there should come one from the other. Thus just as the Siddha who teaches in Jālandhara comes from Oḍḍiyāṇa, the one who teaches in Pūrṇagiri comes from Jālandhara (see below 6/121cd-122ab) and so on. The point is, that it is the same god Bhairava who, incarnate in the world as Siddhanātha, is in reality the founder of the transmission of each of the seats. In other words, his journey from one to the other takes place by his successive descent in each Age at each of these seats where a transmission (krama) is established (see below 6/162). Each time this happens the drama of his consecration by the goddess is re-enacted. Although essentially the same, both the goddess and the god assume a different form in each sacred place. At first sight there appears to be a contradiction here with what the god had said earlier namely, that Age after Age the role of teacher and the taught alternates between the two. It seems then that we must understand this to mean that the Age meant in that case is not a yuga but an entire cycle of four yugas.

We may also understand that what is meant here is that the teachings initially originated in Oḍḍiyāṇa and then spread progressively from seat to seat. We must always keep an eye on two levels. One is the transcendent beyond history in which there is no change. The other is the immanent within history in which the continuity and oneness of the transcendent is expressed in the perennial recurrence of the one salvific event, each time the same and yet every time different.

64. Cf. 7/59cd-60.

65. This sentance alludes to a didactic etymology which explains why this seat is called Pūrṇagiri namely, that it is the mountain - giri - that is full - pūrṇa - of Bhairava's nectar, that is, bliss.

66. YKh (1) (37/14) explains: The Path of the Gods is emanation. (Everything) is withdrawn by the Path of the Fathers. (When the goddess) is on the Great Path (all that is) auspicious is protected.

devayānaṁ bhavet sṛṣṭiḥ pitṛyānena saṁharet |
mahāyānagatā sā tu sthitaṁ pālayate śubham [k, gh, ṅ: śataṁ; g: subhāṁ] |

67. Apparently, a didactic etymology of the goddess Samarī's name is implied here based especially on the first two syllables. She is Sama-rī because she is saṁ-pūrṇā i.e. completely full and because she is the sama-tva lit. 'equality' i.e. the oneness of all beings. Notice how the lunar goddess arises splendid in her plenitude as the Full Moon from the underworld. Her cathonic origins as the Earth Mother of emergent fertility and growth clearly evident, as is her life-giving role as the nourishing Mother who is the very vitality in all living beings. Here we contemplate her arising, that is, the activation of her divine power and gaze upon her radiant form as it ascends to the highest spheres of the universe and then rise beyond into the luminous, blissful Sky of the transcendent deity beyond it. But first she stays for some time in the world to bestow upon it her grace by uniting with the god, who is also the most perfect of men. In this way she transmits her seed, embodied in her spiritual descendents, perfect beings who will in their turn transmit what they have received.

68. See note to 6/40.

69. This hermitage, that is, this sacred place (see above, note to 5/21) is a mountain. A word for mountain in Sanskrit is 'acala' which literally means 'immobile' or 'unmoving'. This place is said to be a mountain that is 'unmoving' because here the goddess renders the mind firm and stable by the grace of her Command.

70. Taking 'paramavāsanā' to be a bahuvrīhi compound, meaning 'belonging to the supreme abode', qualifying Samarikā we arrive at this translation. However, the word vāsanā may also mean an 'inclination or tendancy remaining as a latent trace of past action or perception'. Applied to the deity one could say that the goddess, as the primary energy of the god's will, is a supreme form of vāsanā present not in the mind or somehow in individual consciousness but within the godhead.

71. The reading 'kulajaiḥ' found in all the MSs is problematic. If we accept it, the seven beings 'born from Kula' that accompany the goddess should be male. The feminine instrumental plural – kulajābhiḥ – requires an extra syllable with respect to the masculine equivalent – kulajaiḥ - which would disturb the metre. As the gender of nouns is occasionally altered in our text, usually to accommodate the metre, it is not unreasonable to suspect that this may have taken place. The seven 'born from Kula' may be Siddhas who accompany the goddess. However, it would be more coherent with the overall demography of the inhabitants of the sacred seats if they were to be Yoginīs. Thus in the following sacred seat we are told that there are seven Mothers along with the deity as the eighth (6/126cd-127ab). Devatā, which is the word in that reference for 'deity' is a feminine word, although it may apply equally to a male or a female deity. But the context warrents the assumption that it refers to the goddess of the seat. Similarly, the diction of the verse we are examining is not free of ambiguity. The ordinal 'eighth' (aṣṭamī) is feminine qualifying an unstated feminine substantive, which is in all probability the goddess of this sacred seat.

The male form of the adjectival noun kulaja, meaning lit. 'born in a good family' and, in a technical sense, 'born into the Kula', may refer to a male initiate (37/65cd-66ab) who belongs to the 'family' – kula – of his lineage. Many such Siddhas or initiated yogis are amongst the great host of beings who attend upon the goddess (39/6). However, the feminine form kulajā is more common. In a generic sense, it is a way of referring to the Yoginīs who are the consorts of Siddhas (46/154cd). In another sense, connected to this one by association, kulajā may be an adjective qualifying the Command (6/8 above) or even the supreme goddess herself in the form of Kuṇḍalinī, as in the following passage:

> The (goddess) who by means (of the pure consciousness) devoid of mind abides in the middle of the stick of the Egg of Brahmā (i.e. Suṣumṇā) and is within (or between) the path that is both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent) is Kulajā in the tradition of the transmission (kramānvaya).

brahmāṇḍadaṇḍamadhye tu tiṣṭhate yā acetasā [ṅ: acetathā] ||
parāparapathāntasthā kulajā sā kramānvaye | YKh (1) 25/70cd-71ab.

Moreover, in a more specific sense, the Kulajās are also a type of Yoginī (31/123) who, together with other types of Yoginīs and goddesses, are a part of the goddess's entourage (35/104). In at least two places in our text they are especially associated with Sahajā Yoginīs (31/123 and 36/118). In one place they form a group of five corresponding to the Five Praṇavas (35/95-96ab). More commonly they are one of the eight types of Yoginīs associated with the eight Mothers (see 42/37-42).

72. This 'eighth one' (aṣṭamī - feminine!) is said to be śivātmikā which may translated as either 'Śiva by nature' or 'Śivā by nature'. Presuming that the line of reasoning outlined in the previous note is correct, I have chosen the latter alternative.

73. See above, note to 6/40. 74. See above, note to 6/42.

75. The western Yoginī's House is one of many names for the Kubjikā tradition. It is also a name for the Triangle in the centre of the maṇḍala above the head. Cf. below 6/129 and see 7/14cd-15ab.

76. Sexual pleasure is also 'invisible' as Bhairava is here said to be when he worships the goddess in secret, out of sight of the uninitiated.

77. Cf. above note to 6/66-67ab.

78. The goddess is satisfied because the mystic flights Bhairava experiences are signs of his sincere devotion. She is satisfied because his desires are authentically spiritual. She is sure that the union that is to take place by which she transmits her seed to him will be a spiritual one.

79. This Command is the first of a series of four empowerments Bhairava receives from the goddess. He will receive the second one when he is enclosed in a sacrificial jar (6/87cd-88), the third when he emerges from it and receives the sacrificial meat (6/89ab-90ab) and the final one when the goddess nominates him as the presiding Siddha of this sacred seat (6/96cd-97ab).

80. Below it is called the Assembly of Skyfaring Goddesses (khecarīcakra) (6/93ab). According to the Ṭīkā (MS K fl. 65b), the Wheel of the Skyfarers is the Sequence of Twenty-eight worshipped above the head at the End of the Twelve (aṣṭāviṁśabhedabhinnakramaṁ khecarīcakram bilāntasthaṁ pūjayet | bila iti dvādaśānte). According to the KMT (16/1-109ab), ŚM (chapter 19) and ṢSS (25/1-159ab), it is the fifth and highest of a series of five Wheels. It is located on the Cavity of Brahmā at the top of the head (Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 163). Normally, this term refers to the cavity on the crown of the head. But in this context, as the Ṭ we have just quoted explains, the 'cavity' (bila) is the End of the Twelve. The Wheel of the Skyfarers consists of three concentric circle arranged either within one another or, better, in such a way as to form an ascending tappering cone that, presumably, extends from the crown of the head to the extremity of the End of the Twelve. The outermost circle is that of the Sun (sūryamaṇḍala). It consists of a twenty-four-petalled lotus with the consonants from Ka to Bha projected onto them in serial order. Next comes the circle of the Moon (somamaṇḍala). This is a sixteen-petalled lotus containing the sixteen vowels. The circle within it is that of Fire (agnimaṇḍala). This is a lotus with eight petals onto which are projected the consonants from Ya to Ha. In the centre is the goddess's triangle called the 'first circle' (ādimaṇḍala) which contains the consonant Ma and the conjunct KṢa. These letters are governed by the skyfaring Yoginīs. Asitāṅga is the god and the goddess is seated on his lap. For details and references the reader is referred to Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 150 ff. and ibid. 256 ff.

81. The Great Meat (mahāphalgu or mahāmāṁsa) normally means either human flesh or beef. Those Śaivites who took the vows of a Kāpālika were notorious for their practice of eating human flesh. It is still considered to be empowering amongst the Kinarami Aghoris of Benares, although in actual practice it is rare. The Buddhist Anuttarayoga Tantras refer to what commentators explain are interiorized versions of the same practice in which human flesh functions as a symbolic cypher manipulated in their esoteric discourse concerning higher states of consciousness. Even sophisticated, domesticated Kashmiri Śaivites refer to injunctions from the Tantras such as the following (quoted in ŚSūvi p. 33; see Dyczkowski 1987: 143), although they too, of course, did not take them literally:

> O goddess, by eating the body of the beloved, a relative, close friend, benefactor or dear one, one must fly upwards with the Maiden of the Sky (gaganāṅganā).

Human flesh along with beef and the meat of other animals is one of the forms of sacrificial pap (caru) adepts may be given to empower them by the Yoginīs they meet on their pilgrimage around the goddess's sacred sites.

82. The text reads 'tasya mahākṣobham ajāyata' which literally means 'his (state) of great arousal came about'. Although sexual energy is generally understood in the Śaivāgamas to be essentially spiritual energy, it is in these Tantras, and others like them, such as the Bhairava Tantras and the Buddhist Anuttarayoga Tantras, that it is extensively manipulated as a means to spiritual development. In this perspective the god, like the goddess, is spiritually potent to the degree in which he is 'sexually' (read 'spiritually') aroused and arouses others. And this god, who is a veritable embodiment of 'sexual pleasure' (rati) (6/82), is especially so. This equation although startling at first, is not at all novel. The concept of ānanda -`bliss' has always had strong sexual connotations. The Upaṇisadic equation that identifies the Brahman with ānanda, for example, intends to represent the supreme spiritual experience of the Brahman as intensely blissful as sexual intercourse or, more specifically, its climax. The reader is referred to Olivelle 1997.

83. Five MSs indicate the reading 'bṛṁhitaḥ' which means 'intensified' i.e. the members of the Assembly intensified Bhairava's state of arousal.

84. The text simply says 'from the middle' (madhyataḥ) without specifying further. Presumably, Bhairava is in the middle of the assembly (cakra). Anyway, it is he who ejaculates.

85. Monier-Williams lists the following meanings for vikṣepa- (m.) 'the act of throwing asunder or away or about, scattering, dispersion, casting, throwing, discharging'. The last of these meanings is the closest to the one here namely, ejaculation and, by extension, the ejaculated seed. A similar derivative of the root kṣip is utkṣepa (masc.). The meanings listed in Monier-Williams are 'throwing or tossing up, raising, lifting up; throwing away; sending, dispatching; bringing up, vomiting'. This word also means 'ejaculation' as is clear from the following reference quoted in the commentary on the Tantrāloka (TĀ 29/109-110cd):

Sound, touch, form, taste and smell, the fifth - the order of things is of (these) five kinds when (experiencing) the bliss of ejaculation (utkṣepa). O great goddess, this is contemplative absorption (samādhi). Once known, one attains Śiva.

śabdaḥ sparśaś ca rūpaṁ ca raso gandhaś ca pañcamaḥ |
utkṣepānandakāle tu pañcadhā vastusantatiḥ ||
sa samādhiḥ maheśāni jñātvā śivam avāpnuyāt |

Clearly, the god is placed in the jar in the form of his sperm. He reports to the goddess that after being 'churned' he was 'cast (kṣipta) into a wine jar' (6/94cd). Kṣipta, the word for 'cast' is derived from the same root as is the word vikṣepa, meaning 'ejaculation' or 'ejaculated' literally being '(sperm) cast out (of the body)'. This sperm that was first 'emitted' (kṣipta) is then 'cast' (kṣipta) in a wine jar.

The jar in which Bhairava in the form of his seed is placed and worshipped is probably held by the goddess. According to the description of the goddess's visualized form below in chapter 29, Kubjikā holds, amongst other things, a jar (kalasa) containing the Five Potions of Immortality (amarīdravya) namely, urine, blood, feces, clarified butter and semen (Ṭ MS K fl. 65b, quoted below in the note to 29/43). Similarly, Kubjikā's supreme (parā) form described in YKh (1) portrays her holding a vessel in the midst of the Skyfarers and so, like the god, is in the middle of the Assembly of the Heroes (see note to 6/84):

She is the Kālī of the great Bhairava. Her lips are (red like the) Bimba (fruit) and she is greedy for blood. She chews on human flesh (mahāmāṁsa) and drinks blood, excrement and urine. Placing her vessel (pātra) in her hand, well sealed with the Gesture of Space (vyomamudrā), She abides perpetually in the Wheel of the Sky (khecakra) and plays with the Skyfarers in the midst of the Sky. Her face the Sky, she resides in the Sky delighted by (the company of) accomplished yogis.

mahābhairavakī [all MSs: -kaṁ] kālī [k, kh, gh: kālīṁ] bimboṣṭī [k, gh: viṁvoṣkāṁ; kh: vivoṣkāṁ; ṅ: viṁvoṣṭīṁ] raktalālasā [all MSs: -sāṁ] |
*carvayantī [k, gh, ṅ: carcayaṁtī] mahāmāṁsaṁ pivantī raktavinmūtraṁ [k, kh, gh: raktauṣṭaraṁ; ṅ: rakto * ṣṭaraṁ]* ||
svapātraṁ [ṅ: kha-] ca kare kṛtvā vyomamudrāsumudritam [k, kh, gh: -mudrāṁsamudritāṁ; ṅ: -tāṁ] |
khecakre saṁsthitā nityaṁ [k, kh, gh: nityāṁ; ṅ: nityā] khecaraiḥ saha krīḍate ||
khamadhye khamukhā khasthā [k, kh: khaṣṭā; gh: khaṣṭa] nanditā [k, kh, gh: mādṛtaṁ; ṅ: māvṛtāṁ] siddhayogibhiḥ [k, kh: siddhi- | YKh (1) 19/74-76ab.

Assuming the Wheel of Skyfarers is meant here, one wonders whether the jar in the middle does not represent the triangle in the centre. If so, this is another indication that the god, in the form of sperm, is not really alone in the jar but is together with goddess in the form of her Command, the Transmental (unmanī). The Command is, as we have seen, the Drop (bindu), the goddess's seed, her 'menstrual semen' (bindupuṣpā, see note to 1/1d). The two seeds mix in the womb/yoni/jar and they develop for five nights, as would an embryo. Then, by the power of the goddess's Command, Bhairava burst out of the jar.

The worship of sperm as a form of the deity, although certainly rare, may well still be practiced in India. I was informed in 1990 by the mahant of an Udāsīn maṭha in Puṣkara that he had heard that in Rājasthān there are two types of traditions amongst certain Vaiṣṇava ascetics. One he called viṣṇumār panth and the other bīrmār panth. Those who belong to the first category worship Viṣṇu with the usual vegetarian offerings. The members of the other panth worship Viṣṇu as Bindu. Those who engage in this form of worship produce the Bindu from their own body and, placing it in a jar, worship it. In this way they literally enact what is normally represented symbolically. That the Point or Drop – bindu – in the centre of the maṇḍala is the deity in 'seed' form is a common notion in all Tantric traditions. The symbolism of the point or drop has a long history extending back to its earliest expression in the Sanskrit sources as the veneration of the drop of the sacrificial Soma offered in the Vedic sacrifice. A white, inebriating substance, it was associated, as is the bindu described in our texts, with the moon and the vital seed. By drinking it the gods, especially Indra, became more sexual potent and, by extension, powerful in every way.

Bhairava's sperm is the Drop that pierces through the inner centres transforming the postulant's consciousness to that of the initiated state like the alchemical mercury that transforms common metal to pure gold (see note to 3/127). But this can only take place once Bhairava's seed is charged with the energy of the Command the god receives from the goddess. This process is essentially a union of opposites. Accordingly, the conditions required for this to take place in the case of the god mirror in reverse those required in the case of the goddess. Just as the goddess must enter the Liṅga – her male counterpart - to attain her empowerment, the god must enter the womb-like jar – his female counterpart - to attain his. The goddess inside the Liṅga is worshipped by the god outside it. The god within the jar worships the goddess within it. The goddess receives the Command by herself within the Liṅga. The god receives the Command from the goddess when he comes out of the jar (see note to 6/95-96ab). Another, less obvious, reversal concerns the period of five nights the god is said to be worshipped in the jar. The Vaiṣṇava Tantric tradition called Pañcarātra – lit. 'Five Nights' – is said to derive its name from a sacrifice performed for this length of time which was the occasion for the original revelation of those Vaiṣṇava teachings. According to the version of the goddess's myth of origin in YKh (2) (16/213-215), the goddess is similarly worshipped in the Liṅga by Bhairava as Viṣṇu's energy (vaiṣṇavīśakti) for five nights after which she emerged out of the Liṅga (see intro. vol. 1, p. 157). This is because this energy, otherwise known as Mahāmāyā, is Kubikā in the form of Kuṇḍalinī (see below 9/27-8 and 13/61-2). So here we have another set of reversals. In place of the Vaiṣṇava goddess in the Liṅga we have the Śaiva god in the jar.

Finally, we note another important reversal that sums up all the others and confirms that our interpretation is correct. We have seen that according to the version of the myth in YKh (2) (16/227-228ab, quoted in intro. vol. 1, p. 194), Bhairava's initiation and transformation into Sadyojāta (the Immediately Born) is accompanied by a strange phenomenon. There we read:

> The god, intent on the ritual (karmaṇaḥ sanmukhena), secreted blood in the navel, Liṅga and in the Cave. Then he became Bhairava, the abode of blood, in the sacrifice (yajña). (Thus) Bhairava bore the form of Sadyojāta (sadyarūpa).

The god has realised the goddess within himself. He secretes blood, the female seed. The navel is where Kuṇḍalinī, the inner goddess resides. She secretes her seed, the same seed emitted by the inner Liṅga in the Cave of the Yoni that unite within the god. Thus, through this reversal, which is his inner conjunctio, the god is transformed in an instant into the repository of the goddess's seed and 'immediately born' he is empowered to be the First Siddha.

86. I suppose Bhairava's trick is his secret meditation on the goddess's feet when he is in the jar. See below, 6/95-96ab.

87. Above according to 5/31 when the goddess saw Bhairava's bliss, she contracted her limbs in shame. Here she is glad, rather than bashful at the presentment of her immanent union with the god.

88. The later Kaula Tantras are notorious for the rituals (pūjā) they prescribe in which five sacrificial offerings (pañcadravya) are made to the deity. See, for example, chapter eight of the KVN. Beginning with the letter M, they are known as the 'Five Ms' (pañcamakāra). They are madya (wine), māṁsa (meat), matsya (fish), mudrā (mixed parched grains to be eaten as snacks along with the wine) and maithuna (sexual intercourse and the fluids produced by it). The earlier Kaula Tantras speak only of 'Three Ms' (trimakāra) namely, madya (wine), māṁsa (meat) and maithuna (sexual intercourse). The Kaula view presented by Abhinavagupta is that these three are especially important offerings because they engender bliss (ānanda) (TĀ 29/96cd-100ab; and note to 46/304cd-305ab). Just as in the later Kaula Tantras the five offerings are called pañcatattva - the Five Principles, the earlier schools refer to the three offerings as tritattva - the Three Principles from which the Yoga to which this passage derives its name.

Concerning this Yoga, below we read (46/302):

> Drink the wine (madya) which is the drink of Yoga. While sexual intercourse (maithuna) is the Supreme State. (The couple) Sound and the Drop (nādabindu) is the supreme meat (māṁsa) which the yogi should eat by means of Yoga.

89. Just as the Command, which is the goddess's seed, is cast into the centre of her maṇḍala, the Yoni, so Bhairava's seed is cast into the centre of the womb-like jar. Bhairava's nature, we are told is sexual pleasure (rati) (6/81cd-82ab), even so he lacks the potency of the goddess, who can arouse and fertilize herself and even generate offspring, indeed an entire lineage (26/5) by the power of the seed of her Command. Bhairava cannot do this with his own seed. He needs the goddess's seed. The goddess also needs her own seed, but she can generate it alone by arousing herself. Bhairava cannot even do this. The members of the assembly have to massage it out of him. So, even though the god is aroused and arousing, he is sexually dependent. And this dependence prevents him from attaining the repose that comes from a blissful climax through self-stimulation. Quite unlike the goddess alone in the Liṅga, he is confined, unable to do anything. He needs the goddess's seed. In order to receive it he must somehow induce the goddess to join him in the jar. He does this by resorting to what the text calls a `trick'. The first time he meets her in this sacred seat Bhairava generated the maṇḍala outside in front of her feet and worshipped her by raising Kuṇḍalinī. This pleased her sufficiently to grant him her first command (6/81ab-83). Now he does the same within the jar/yoni and she again gives her empowering Command. The god recollects her feet and the goddess responds by gracing him for his devotion. Thus he receives enough of the goddess's empowering seed to get out of the jar and take the sacrificial meat he requires to achieve the next degree of empowerment.

90. See above 6/13. The five offerings in this case are probably the Kula substances called the Five Potions of Immortality (see note 85 of chapter six).

91. Cf. entry 14 of this list.

92. Cf. below 6/195cd-196ab.

93. The three virgins who reside in Jālandhara are the first three of the series of eight low caste women corresponding to the eight Mothers. See above, 6/55cd and note. I assume, therefore, that 'Khaṭṭikī and the rest' are the following three namely, Khaṭṭikī, Kaṇḍukī and Rajakī (see below, 16/13-15). But note that the corresponding triad in Kāmarūpa is Śilpinī, Cakrinī and Mātaṅgī. The first does correspond to the seventh Mother (i.e. Cāmuṇḍā). However, Cakriṇī who should correspond to Mahālakṣmī, the eighth Mother, is called Antyajā below (see 16/15). We do come across a grouping of nine Mothers, but it is uncommon.

94. Cf. 6/56c where the same expression - trikasaṁjñā ('called the triad') - occurs. There are three such triads projected into the corners of the Triangle where Jālandhara, Pūrṇagiri and Kāmarūpa are located.

95. Cf. above 6/55cd-57 and note and below 6/146-148ab. Another possible translation is: 'these three are the three maids of (the three) beginning with Khaṭṭikī'.

96. Cf. 6/57 and 6/147cd-148ab. These nine attendants in this seat can be tabulated as follows:

9. Table of Attendants in Pūrṇagiri

Kula Goddesses	Maids (cellakā)	Male Servants
Khaṭṭakī (Chalkminer Lady)	Vijayā (Victory)	Vikrama (Valour)
Kaṇḍukī (Ballmaking Lady)	Damanā (Control)	Ḍobika (Washerwoman)
Rajakī (Washerwoman)	Mahimā (Glory)	Sadya (Attainable)

97. A little further ahead it is said that the Transmission of the Skyfarer originates in Jālandhara (6/190) which is generally the view. Pūrṇagiri is normally the seat of the transmission of the Youth (ibid.). It is surprising to find that the secret seat of the Skyfarer is associated here with this one.

98. The goddess of a seat is both the leader (nāyakī) and mother of that seat. She is called 'mother' (avvā) in this seat, Jālandhara (6/63) and Tisra (6/180cd-182ab). In Oḍḍiyāṇa (6/31) and Kāmarūpa she is simply said to be the goddess (6/151cd-153ab) or 'leader' (nāyakī) (6/150cd-151).

99. Ṣaṣṭhadeva is the Siddha form of Bhairava initiated in this seat by the goddess Pūrṇāvvā. Presumably, Maṅgalāvvā is his consort, which is the hidden form of the goddess in the secret aspect of this seat. This is the hidden couple of this seat. Kāmarūpa also has a hidden aspect. The hidden seat there is Ucchuṣmapīṭha (see 6/152). The revealed couple is Kāmeśvarī (6/124) (also called Bālikā) and Mitradeva (6/153cd-154ab). The hidden couple is Koṅkaṇā and Mitradeva (6/152). So there, as here, the hidden and revealed Siddha are the same. Tisra, the seat of the future, is said to be the hidden leader of the seats (6/180) and so is secret, as it were, by its very nature. Accordingly, unlike these seats, it does not have a hidden counterpart.

100. Each sacred seat is governed by the goddess. The cremation ground associated with it is governed by Bhairava. The former can therefore be said to be a 'Devīpīṭha' and the latter a 'Bhairavapīṭha'.

101. According to 6/124cd, the Rule is this scripture (śāstra).

102. Cf. above 6/38 and 6/72. 103. Cf. 6/66.

104. See above, note to 6/59ab.

105. Although, one could describe all the sacred seats in this way, only this sacred seat is called this. See below 6/126, 148cd-149ab and 164.

106. The Divine Liṅga and the Divine Current (divyaugha) are both contrasted with the `human' which is 'non-divine' (adivya). Similarly, the three lineages of the Child, Youth and the Aged are said to be 'non-divine' with respect to the divine lineage of the Skyfarers (khecarakrama) (3/11). This divine place on the Island of the Moon is thus located `somewhere' in a sphere beyond worldly, fettered life. There Siddhas and Yoginīs live together and those who have attained liberation participate in their intimacy.

107. The KJN declares that the Kaula teachings are in the house of every Yoginī in Kāmarūpa.

108. See note to 6/65 above.

109. All four sacred seats contain groups of seven. The leader of each group is mentioned in each case except Oḍḍiyāṇa where there are said to be seven deities (devatā) that are the main attendants (mūlapraticāra) (6/21). In Jālandhara there are seven virgins (kumārī) with Cāmuṇḍā as the eighth (6/40). In Pūrṇagiri there are seven ladies of good families (kulajā) with Śivātmikā as the eighth (6/80a). Here we have seven mothers who are referred to as attendants elsewhere (6/145). The deity who is the eighth is possibly Kāmeśvarī, the goddess of this sacred seat. Possibly this is the group of seven Mothers of which the eighth is considered to be the leader of the group and identified, implicitely, with the goddess of that seat and hence, indirectly, with Kubjikā herself.

110. The word devāgāra, lit. 'abode of the deity' simply means 'temple'. I have been able to trace it in only one other place in this text (37/55) but not in the rest of the corpus of the Kubjikā Tantras. In this context I suppose it means the triangle where the goddess resides.

111. The bud of the Kadamba tree represents bindu. According to 46/20-21ab there is a Bilva tree in Jālandhara, a Ciñcā (tamarind) tree in Pūrṇagiri and a Kadamba here in Kāmarūpa. The Kadamba tree is usually said to grow out of the centre of the triangle and so is associated with Oḍḍiyāṇa, the seat in the centre of the Yoni, where the syllable OṀ is located. There, as here, it 'rotates' (see 6/10). The tree is the seed-syllable that represents the goddess and its bud is the Point (bindu) that crowns it. The presence here of the Kadamba Tree may be because Kāmarūpa, which is in the lower corner of the triangle, is conceived to be a miniature reproduction of the whole triangle. This is not unlikely. It is called the House of the Yoginī (6/129cd-130ab), which is the triangular Yoni. Indeed, Kāmarūpa, lit. 'the form of passion', is aptly represented by the symbol of the goddess.

112. The goddess, who is the leader of this seat, and the seat itself are also white (6/150cd-151). See above, note to 6/40.

113. I understand svāmin here to refer to the goddess. See above, note to the Sanskrit text of 4/38c and 5/40a.

114. In a technical sense the Yoginī's House is the Western House of the Kubjikā Tantras. See above 6/82 and below 7/15 where it is represented as the Triangle of the Yoni that contains the energies of the letters. In a general sense, it may also just be the place where the goddess, who is the greatest of the Yoginīs, resides.

115. The goddess is the Nameless (Anāmā) experienced as a flow of blissful, liberating nectar. When the Self contemplates this flow within the Drop (bindu) that represents her, it emits Divine Sound (14/104cd-105). This is probably the process meant here. Bhairava was graced by the goddess's Command by recollecting her feet when, in the form of his vital seed, he was placed in a jar in Pūrṇagiri (6/95-96ab). Installed in the centre of the maṇḍala, we may surmise that the jar represents the goddess as the Drop or Point located there. Although the Tantra does not say so directly, one would expect that when Bhairava burst out of the jar this was attended by a 'loud sound' as was the bursting apart of the Liṅga when the goddess emerged from it (see 6/4cd and note). This Sound, emitted from the Drop of Bhairava's vital seed – which is the goddess - generates the maṇḍala made of the mantras of the Krama formed by the spontaneous deployment of sacred Sound (nāda). As in the other seats, the god worships the goddess by means of this, the Kramamaṇḍala. See above, note to 6/42-43.

116. See above, note to 6/65

117. The Kadamba is both the tree of the centre and hence of the triangular maṇḍala as a whole as well as the sacred tree of this sacred seat (6/127cd-128ab). Kādambarī, the goddess of the Kadamba tree, is the goddess of a spiritous liquor or wine (surā) distilled from the buds of the Kadamba. Surā, sometimes also called Sudhā, lit. 'the good drink', is the inebriating nectar of the gods. Surā is commonly worshipped in both the early and later Kaula traditions as the goddess of wine. According to the KVN (8/62cd-65), a text that probably post-dates most, if not all, of the Kubjikā Tantras, Kaulas should visualize the goddess Surā or Sudhā just before they drink the first cup of sacramental wine offered in a Kaula rite and reflect that:

> The goddess Sudhā arose from the most excellent of seas, the ocean of milk when it was being churned. She has the form of a (young) virgin. Born from the nectar of the foam (of that ocean), she is (bright yellow) like cow's urine. She has eighteen arms and big lotus eyes. She has come forth on the (very) peak of bliss and bliss is the Great Lord (Maheśvara). Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Śiva (are generated) by their union and so, I who am full (and perfect), worship that goddess Surā.

A long passage in chapter forty-six of our text is dedicated to the sacrificial wine, its consumption, 'inner' equivalent and this goddess (see 46/237-308). There the goddess Surā is said to be menstruated, dark blue and red in colour and possesses a fine aroma (46/253cd-254ab). She is 'nectar, not the drinking that takes place in the midst of the world' (46/253cd-254ab). In this verse, identified with the goddess of the Kadamba tree, which symbolizes the seed-syllable mantra of this seat, she is the embodiment of the bliss of oneness (samarasa) (46/254cd) experienced there in the prelude of union.

118. The goddess's lunar nature and qualities are those most frequently stressed. But she is also identified with the Fire of the Aeons called Saṁvartā or Vāḍavāgni that burns in the centre of the maṇḍala. We have seen that when the goddess was Dakṣa's daughter she ended her life by throwing herself into this fire. On that ocassion, consummed down to her essence, she became like a piece of burning coal (aṅgāra) (see above, 3/157cd-159). Here she appears in the form of a divine ulkā, which is 'a fiery phenomenon in the sky, a meteor, fire falling from heaven, a firebrand, dry grass etc set on fire, a torch' (MW). Cf. 5/27.

119. Siddhanātha is both the original propagator of the Kubjikā Tantras and the male deity. Here it appears that the deity is the five-faced Sadāśiva. The western face, that of Sadyojāta, is said to be the one that spoke the Kubjikā Tantras and so it is from here that the goddess who is embodied in the teachings emerges.

120. We have seen (intro. vol. 1, p. 58) that the word paścima means not only 'the west' but also 'the end', 'last' or 'final'. The teachings come from this direction. It is the 'last' or 'final' place to which Kuṇḍalinī rises before moving up beyond into complete union with the god from whom she originates. Conversely, it is also the 'final' place in the descent from the absolute condition where she emerges into the first, subtle state of separation between herself and the god. Located symbolically in the End of the Twelve at the extremity, the 'final' or 'last' part of the subtle body, Vakrā the 'crooked' goddess in the form of the Triangle pours out of herself as the divine energy of the Command manifest as the teachings. To her in this form and in this place, Siddhanātha offers his all, including the knowledge of Kula, which is the Command he will in turn receive from her, rendered pure and potent by the goddess's power.

121. Once again the goddess reminds the god of his true identity and hence his power. She does this before he takes initiation (3/25-28) as well as after. Prior to his initiation her words are not effective because the god is still shrouded in his own Māyā. Now the goddess has decided to transmit her Command through her words. She is not just telling the god who he really is, she is inducing this realisation in him. She may also do this by means of her gracious gaze. But that is such a powerful, sudden transmission that it causes the god to faint (5/33-34). In this case, the words, no less transformative, are more soothing, more gentle.

122. See note to 5/51cd-53ab. As a token of the god's transformation and as a means to his further accomplishment as alchemist and healer both for himself and others, the goddess gives him the Accomplishment of the Pill (guṭikāsiddhi). The Pill (guṭikā) is an alchemical potion made from purified mercury and other substances. Brought in contact with a metal, the Pill will transform it into gold. Any liquid that is poured onto it becomes a miraculous medicine that cures all diseases. The person who carries the Pill on his person is filled with vitality. If he is aged he becomes once more young and strong and the Pill preserves him that way.

A guṭikā can also be an amulet or a protective charm. One such amulet (rakṣanī), known to other Tantras in various other forms, is described in chapter 15 of the ṢSS (15/249-262ab). Briefly, the Pill is prepared by writing one's own name on birch bark and enclosing it in the prescribed way with letters and the thirty-two syllables of Aghora mantra each of which are conjoined to seed-syllables as explained in the ṢSS. It is put in a small container made of 'three irons' (triloha) which is tied to the body (guṭikaiṣā samākhyātā trilohapariveṣṭitā | dhāraṇīyā prayatnena śivalokam avāpnuyāt || ṢSS 15/264). We find the description of another way to prepare this alchemical pill in chapter 15 (verses 139 ff.) of the Kāmakalā section (khaṇḍa) of the Mahākālasaṁhitā. In brief, the procedure is as follows. Catch a frog with clear linear markings on its back. Place it in a clay pot along with about ninty grams of mercury and then cover it with an earthen lid. Dig a hole under a waterfall in a flowing river and place the pot there so that water falls onto it continuously. Offer an animal sacrifice on each fourteenth day of the lunar month and, thinking the frog to be a form of the goddess, worship it. After six months remove the pot from the river and place it in a dark corner of your own house. Make a small hole in the pot and pour water through it daily mixed with asephadita (hiṅga) for six months. In the same way, the following six months, pour water into it daily mixed with six kinds of herbs. Then, at the end of the six months sacrifice a buffalo. Then, covering one's hand with a cloth, take the frog out of the jar and spin it around. This will cause it to vomit an alchemical pill (guṭikā). By wearing this pill one acquires the power of flight (khecaratā), control over the gross elements, freedom from old age, and the power to grace and curse. By touching other metals (dhātu) with it, they turn to gold.

123. This and the thirty-fifth name are the same.

124. The Ghurghura is the Drunculus which is a kind of worm that burrows into the skin (MW p. 377).

125. The Sanskrit here reads praticārī. This is the nominative singular of the agent noun praticārin. The feminine, which is obviously intended here, would be praticāriṇī. The form praticārī may be taken to be the feminine of the noun praticāra-, although strictly speaking this is the action performed rather than the one who does it. But even then, we would expect a plural here not the singular. The goddess in Pūrṇagiri is accompanied by seven Yoginīs with herself as the eighth (6/79cd-80ab). The same pattern is repeated here in Kāmarūpa with seven Mothers (see above, note to 6/126cd-7ab). The sense therefore requires that praticārī be considered to function as a plural. Or else one could emend to the deviant praticāryaḥ as the regular praticāriṇyaḥ does not fit the metre. Note also that according to MW the word praticārin / praticāriṇī normally means 'a practicioner'. Here 'attendant' or 'companion' appears to be the intended sense of the word. See note to 6/55cd.

126. The normal spelling of this word is Ciñcā.

127. These nine can be tabulated as follows:

10. Table of Attendants in Kāmarūpa

The Three Female Servants	The Three Maids (cellakā)	Three Male Servants
Śilpinī (the Sculpteress)	Sunandinī (Well Praised)	Tāra (Saviour)
Cakriṇī (the Female Potter)	Bhadrā (Auspicious)	Vajradhara (Thunderbolt-Holder)
Mātaṇginī (the Sweeper)	Cchiñcchā (Tamarind)	Kula (Family)

Cf. above 6/55cd-57 (the servants in Jālandhara) and 6/107cd-109cd (the servants in Pūrṇagiri).

128. See above, note to 6/123.

129. See above, note to 6/40.

130. We have seen that Pūrṇagiri has a secret seat (guptapīṭha) (6/112d-113ab). Ucchuṣmapīṭha is probably the equivalent in relation to Kāmarūpa. According to the KMT, ṢSS and ŚM the Ucchuṣma Forest is part of the sacred geography that the goddess transforms into the seat of Kāmarūpa. In the body, the former, and hence the latter, is said to be in the Cavity of Brahmā. The previous goddess there was Ucchuṣmā (also called Mahocchuṣmā) whose form was a river. Kubjikā transforms her into Kāmeśvarī (KMT 2/86cd-91, ŚM 3/78cd-83 and ṢSS 4/95-96) who presides over this seat. See intro. vol. 1, p. 96-97.

131. This is the name the goddess gives to the god when she transmits the Command to him (see 4/50cd-51ab). He reappears here presumably because Kāmarūpa is the sacred seat established in the Age of Strife when the present transmission is revealed.

132. The Circle of the Mothers consists of the Eight Mothers (see Mālinīstava line 28). They may be alone or accompanied by their consorts, the eight Bhairavas (see Rao 1971: vol. 2, p. 180-182 and 2 app. B p. 93-94). Both possibilities are represented in the Kubjikā sources and the Tantras in general. As no specific mention is made here or in the other seats of the accompanying Bhairava, they are probably alone. Either way the goddess of the sacred seat is worshipped in the midst of the seven Mothers with herself as the eighth (see 6/79cd-80ab and 6/126cd-127ab). The goddess of Kāmarūpa is in the tip of the triangle in the centre of the Wheel which, I suppose, lines the circumference of the Cavity of Brahmā on the crown of the head. See Dyczkowski 2004, figure 4, p. 173.

The following passage from the KuKauM implicitely confirms that Kāmarūpa is located in the Cavity of Brahmā and associates it, as does the verse we are examining, with Yonimudrā, also called the Secret Gesture (guhyamudrā). It appears, therefore, that the triangle extends up into the End of the Twelve where its upper, flat base is located and the lower tip is in the centre of the Cavity of Brahmā. The Yogapīṭha is located there. This is the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala, thus confirming our supposition that the whole Triangle, which is the core of the maṇḍala, is in Kāmarūpa. Indeed it is the Yoni, which secretes menstrual blood, the goddess's seed symbolizing her energy. Above it is Uḍiyāna, which in the centre of the main triangle, is the residence of the upper, raised Kuṇḍalinī. In order to enter Kāmarūpa and hence the triangle, the vital breath must penetrate through the Cavity of Brahmā. This is done by raising Kuṇḍalinī by means of the Gesture of the Yoni (yonimudrā), which in its highest form is Kuṇḍalinī in the centre of the Wheel of the Mothers in Kāmarūpa. The Gesture of the Yoni is progressively formed by the rise of Kuṇḍalinī through the Yoga of the Measure, that is, the stages of the development of sacred Sound (nāda) along the Path of Brahmā, i.e. Suṣumṇā. Reaching the transcendent Akula and then descending again into the body repeatedly, the yogi experiences the bliss of the inner dynamism of Kuṇḍalinī, the energy of the vital breath, by means of the Gesture of the Yoni. The KuKauM describes this process in its own cryptic way as follows:

The great forest of lotuses here is said to be the Seat of Yoga (yogapīṭha). The form of a Kadamba bud, it is Divine Passion (kāma) whose form is the Point (bindu) in the Cavity of Brahmā. The maṇḍala, which is the foundation of Susumṇā, is (located) just there. The excellent principles, Earth and the rest, that sustain the (energies of the) gestures (are also there). The principle of the Point called 'full' (pūrṇa i.e. Pūrṇagiri) is between the two channels (of Iḍā and Piṅgalā). Above that is said to be the 'snake' (i.e. Kuṇḍalinī) which is praised as Uḍiyāna. Kāmarūpa is power (śakti), that is, emission (visarga) and Akula. It is a great lotus with a thousand spokes, adorned with red filaments. One should perceive it properly located there and raining with drops of blood (raktabindu).

I will explain the formation (bandha) of the gesture referred to previously called the secret one (guhyā) of the nature of nectar and how (liberated) consciousness (saṁcitti) (develops through it). First one must fix the mind within one's own support (ādhāra) by the Yoga of inhalation (pūrakayoga). The Yoni is located between the anus and the penis. By contracting it one should awaken (it) having visualized (the Point), (red) like a Kāmabhandhuka flower, rotating within the Yoni. It is brilliant like the blazing Fire of Time and shines like a hundred million lightning flashes and a hundred million suns, (although) cooling like a hundred million moons. It rains down streams of flowing blood rich with beautiful radiant energy (sutejas).

Above that is the subtle flame (śikhā), which is the supreme energy present within the Point. One should think of oneself as forming a unity along with that. (That energy) moves by the Path of Brahmā piercing progressively through the Liṅgas (in the lower centres). The nectar present in (this) progression (krama) is supreme bliss. Once drunk the divine nectar of Akula, one should again enter into the Kula (of the body). Then one should again go to (the transcendent) Akula by means of the Yoga of the Measure (mātrā), not otherwise. O Supreme Goddess, in this Tantra (that energy) is called the vital breath (prāṇa).

If (the yogi) touches the extremity of the breath that is said to be the opening (udghāta) (of the Cavity of Brahmā). He who practices in this way every day with determination, is freed from all the fetters namely, the streams of suffering, death and old age. The four-fold emanation takes place within this Yoni. It again dissolves into it beginning with the Fire of Time and ending with Śiva (see KuKh 2/40-41). This is the initial Gesture of the Yoni. (This) is said to be (the manner of) its the formation.

mahāpadmavanaṁ cātra yogapīṭhaṁ [gh: ?] prakīrtitam |
kadambagolakākāraṁ [ṅ: -gelakākāraṁ] tat kāmaṁ bindurūpiṇam [ṅ: vindupiṇaṁ] ||
brahmarandhre [ṅ: -raṁdhraṁ] tu tatraiva suṣumṇādhāramaṇḍalam |
pṛthivyādīni [kh: -dīri] tattvāni mudrāṇāṁ dhārakāni [k g: vārakāni; ṅ: våracchāni] tu ||
pūrṇākhyaṁ baindavaṁ [k gh ṅ: vedavaṁ; kh g: vaidavaṁ] tattvaṁ kodaṇḍadvayamadhyagam [ṅ: koḍaṇḍa-] |
*tadūrdhve [k kh g gh: tadūrdha; ṅ: tadū ] nāgam ākhyātam [k: āsthānam; ṅ: nāṁgasamākhyātaṁ] uḍiyānaṁ [g: oḍiyāṇaṁ; ṅ: odiyānaṁ] prakīrtitam ||
kāmarūpaṁ bhavec chaktiḥ [k ṅ: chaktiṁ; kh g: bhava chakti; gh: chakti] visargam [kh: viṁsargam] akulaṁ priye |
sahasrāraṁ mahāpadmaṁ raktakiñjalkaśobhitam ||
*tatrasthaṁ lakṣayet [k: lakṣyayet] samyag [ṅ: samyak] varṣantaṁ [kh: varṣa ; g gh: varṣanta] raktabindubhiḥ |
pūrvaṁ [ṅ: pūrvva] yā śucitā [k ṣuvitā; g: ṣuvibhā; ṅ: ṣucito] mudrā guhyākhyāmṛtarūpiṇī ||
bandhaṁ tasyāḥ [k gh ṅ: tasyā; g: tasya] pravakṣyāmi [gh: pravakṣāmi] saṁcittir [kh g gh: saṁcintir; ṅ: visaṁti] jāyate yathā |
ādau [gh: āsau] pūrakayogena [kh gh: sarakayogena; ṅ: sarasayogena] svādhāre [k: + yojaye] yojayen manaḥ || gudameḍhrāntare [ṅ: guḍamedrātate] yonis tām ākuñcya [kh g: yoninām-

kuṁcya; gh: yoniḥtāmākuñcya; ṅ: yoniḥ samākuṁcya] prabodhayet [kh gh: pravocayet] |
bhramad [kh: abhrad; ṅ: bhrama] yonigataṁ dhyātvā kāmabandhūkasannibham [g: -bandhaka-; ṅ: sāmavaṁdhūka] ||
jvalatkālānalaprakhyaṁ [gh: -kālālalaprakhya] vidyutkoṭisamaprabham |
sūryakoṭipratīkāśaṁ [kh: -praṭīkāśaṁ] candrakoṭisuśītalam [g: -susītalaṁ] ||
drutaṁ [k kh g gh ṅ: hataṁ] raktaṁ sutejāḍhyaṁ [k: subhejāghaṁ; g: sutejāvyaṁ; gh: sutejāḍhya; ṅ: sutejākhyaṁdyaṁ(?)] dhārāpātapravarṣaṇam |
tasyordhve tu śikhā sūkṣmā bindugā [kh: vidrapā; g: vidryā; gh: vidūpā; k ṅ: vindupā] paramā kalā [k: parasā kalā; ṅ: taremā kalāṁ] ||
tayā [ṅ: bhayā] sahitam ātmānam ekībhūtaṁ vicintayet |
gacchantī brahmamārgeṇa [ṅ: -mārgena] liṅgabhedakrameṇa tu [kh: ca] ||
amṛtaṁ yat [kh g: ca] tu [kh g: yat; gh ṅ: missing] kramasthaṁ [k kh: karmasthaṁ; g: karmastha; ṅ: karmacchaṁ] paramānandalakṣaṇam [k gh: pāramā-; ṅ: paramānandalaṇaṁ] |
pītvākulāmṛtaṁ [ṅ: kulomṛtaṁ] divyaṁ punar evāviśet [gh: viśe] kule ||
*punar evākulaṁ [gh: ?] gacchen mātrāyogena [kh: gachan-; g gh: gache-; ṅ: * * gātrā-] nānyathā* |
sā ca prāṇaḥ [k kh g gh: prāṁṇa; ṅ: prāṇa] samākhyātā [ṅ: saprāṇa-] tantre 'smin [kh: tatresmin; ṅ: tatraismin] pārameśvari [g: parameśvari] ||
udghātaḥ [k: ughāta; kh: udyota i; ṅ: udyataḥ(?)] procyate so 'pi [k kh gh ṅ: hi] prāṇāntaṁ [g: prāṇāṁta] spṛśate yadā [g: yadāṁ] |
evam abhyasamānaḥ sa [k kh g gh: -mānasya; ṅ: -mānasu] ahany ahani [gh: grahaścahani; ṅ: ahanyaha] niścayāt [kh: niścayaṁ] ||
jarāmaraṇaduḥkhaughair [k: jaganmaraṇa-; kh: jagatsaraṇa-; gh ṅ: jagamaraṇa-; kh: -duḥkhādyair; g ṅ: -duḥkhādyai; gh: duḥkhodyai] mucyate sarvabandhanaiḥ |
caturvidhā tu yā sṛṣṭis tasyāṁ [kh: sṛṣṭir yasyāṁ; g ṅ: sṛṣṭiḥ yasyā; gh: sṛṣṭiḥ yasyāṁ] yonyāṁ [g: yogāṁ; ṅ: yonyā] pravartate ||
punaḥ pralīyate yasyāṁ kālāgnyādiśivāntagam [k g ṅ: -ntagaṁ; kh: -śivānugaṁ; gh: (?)] |
yonimudrā purā sā tu bandhaṁ [k kh gh: badhaṁ; g: bandha; ṅ: vadhaṁ] tasyāḥ [k gh: tasya; g: nasyāḥ] prakīrtitam || KuKauM 5/8-22.

133. See above, note to 6/67ab.

134. Cf. above, 6/59ab and 6/121-122ab.

135. The teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras are commonly said to be especially meant for the Age of Strife (kaliyuga, see above, note to 5/15). We are occasionally told, mostly in YKh (1), that they are propagated in the end of the Age of Strife. For example, we read that: ‘in the same way (the fruit is) ten million in the western (tradition) and at the end of the Age of Strife it is liberating’ (paścime ca tathā koṭiḥ kalisyānte ca mokṣakaḥ | YKh (1) 20/9cd). Again:

'without a doubt, accomplishment is in the western Kula at the end of the Age of Strife' (paścime tu kule siddhiḥ kaler ante na śaṁsayaḥ | ibid. 9/65ab). But throughout the KuKh, the end of the Age of Strife is linked in a special way only to the appearance of this 'the leader of the seats' (6/180cd-181ab). Actually the two views are not at odds. Below we are told that the Mata, that is, the teachings and the scriptures (i.e. the śāstra), will manifest in the future at the end of the Age of Strife in this sacred seat (6/188cd-189ab). This future time has already come. Tisrapīṭha is the foremost of the seats because this is where the teachings that we have received come from. This, the fifth seat is said, in one place at least, to be the First Seat (ādyapīṭha) - a title normally reserved for Oḍḍiyāna. This is where Tūṣṇīnātha, the first Siddha of this Age is said to have come down into the world. (vande 'haṁ cādyapīṭhaṁ sakalajananutaṁ pañcamaṁ yat svarūpam | tūṣṇī tatrāvatāre sthitiparamatayā tisrapīṭhe tu śānte | YKh (1) 15/77d-78a).

136. Tense is a problem in the Sanskrit of this text. See note to the Sanskrit text of 3/14c. In the great majority of cases the present and optative are the narrative tenses for both future and past events. The past passive participle may even be used to denote future action. Sometimes, as happens in these lines, there is no marker of tense. In such cases, the reader is expected to understand for himself from the context which is the appropriate one. Here I have added the implied future referent. In what follows I do not do so as that would involve many departures from the literal sense of the Sanskrit.

137. See above, note to 6/123-124ab.

138. The Kubjikā Tantras are revealed in the Age of Strife, particularly at the end of it (see notes to 5/15 and 6/164-165ab). The liberating teaching is transmitted then in a very powerful and direct way. The teacher initiates his disciple by piercing (vedha) his inner centre with the energy of Kuṇḍalinī that he raises within him with great force simply by gazing upon him (see below 32/64cd-66ab). This is a very special grace needs to be imparted at the end of the Age of Strife because at that time the Command is generally very weak and there are few people who, without this special grace, would be fit to receive and practice the teachings (see below 31/135) and these too need special help.

139. See below, 6/211cd where it is quite clear that the island meant here is the Island of the Moon.

140. The Tantra is alluding here, in its own cryptic way, to the location of this seat in the subtle body. Cf. ṢSS 4:5/118cd-120 quoted in the intro. vol. 1, p. 108. See also ibid. p. 270 ff. for a description and diagram of the location of the Triple Peak at the End of the Twelve and ibid. p. 78-79 where I argue that this sacred seat is actually Koṅkana or situated within it. The reference in this verse to the north may echo the northern location of Trikūṭa in Koṅkaṇa, the land of the goddess.

141. The narrative here and in most of what follows is set in the past but is supposed to take place in the future. See above, note to 6/164-165ab.

142. According to the ṢSS (4:5/119) this seat is located in the middle of the Wheel of the Skyfaring Goddesses (khecarīcakra) which is where, according to the KMT, the Doomsday Fire (there called Vaḍavā) is realised in its fullness. Rising through the Mouth of the Vaḍavā Fire within the Cavity of Brahmā 'through which the internal Śakti of fiery nature leaves the body' it attains its supreme state above it (Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 178-9). Implicitely, in other words, we are told in this verse that the seat called Tisra is where the yogi attains final absorption. The ṢSS (25/157-158. Trans. by Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 180) describes this 'place' thus:

> She who is Kuṇḍalinī is above the Brahmarandhra [Cavity of Brahma]. That is the vaḍavīya - state and there the yogi is absorbed. What is called the womb of Śakti that is the womb of the Vaḍavā fire. The threefold world in its centre is called its essence.

The fire that consumes the worlds at the end of the Age of Strife issues forth from here. Thus the highest state coincides with the end of the cosmic order, which is a catastrophy for the fettered and liberation for those who have attained perfection.

143. This is the sacred seat of the 'Mātaṅga Kula' – the family of sweepers and so is especially associated with the lowest castes. Only sweepers can reside and officiate in this seat. See KMT 2/112cd-114 quoted in the intro. p. 104.

144. The lineages through which the Command is transmitted are generated through the same process of emanation through which the universe is created. Thus each time a new lineage is formed, the same process must be set into operation again.

145. The goddess is occasionally said to be a potterwoman (kulālikā) and other low caste women but this is the only place where she is identified in this way.

146. Sadyo also stands for Sadyojāta (the Instantly Born), the god of the western face of Sadāśiva with which the Western Tradition (paścimāmnāya) is particularly associated. We may also, therefore, translate sadyojñānam as the knowledge of, or propagated by, Sadyojāta. The two possible translations are also conceptually interchangeable. Sadyojāta - the 'instantly born one' - brings about instant - sadyo (< sadyaḥ) - realisation.

147. The Tree is the seed-syllable of the deity that emerges out of the Void (= Ravine) of the transcendent, disembodied Akula. See note 5/76cd-77ab. Presumably the Ravine of Akula (akulakandara) is the inner counterpart of the Ravine of the Tree Spirits (yakṣakandara) mentioned above (6/167cd-168ab) where this sacred seat was brought down into the world.

148. See above, note to 6/168cd-169ab.

149. See intro. vol. 3, p. 299.

150. Rituals and even the rise of Kuṇḍalinī can serve to either grace (anugraha) or chastise others. The latter should be done only to punish those who have offended the tradition and its followers. In other words, this seat will come into being to punish the barbarian invaders and the others who have profaned the Kaula teachings or fallen from them and induced others to do so.

151. This statement is not fully clear to me. We have seen that despite the special prestige of the Krama of twenty-eight mantras, the Sequence of Twenty-seven is the main one in the KuKh, not the Sequence of Twenty-eight. Possibly, here the idea is that the Sequence of Twenty-eight is actually the best and most complete. At present it is deficient by one unit but will be restored to the full twenty-eight when this sacred seat finally manifests in the world.

152. See note to 6/113cd-114ab.

153. Bindubhairava incarnates as Mātaṅgīśa, the lord of this, the fifth seat (39/135cd-136ab). The Point meant here is not the one in the centre of the triangle. This is the location of Oḍḍiyāṇa. This Point is above the Half Moon that is situated above the triangle formed by the syllable AIṀ. See below, 6/187cd-188ab.

154. Concerning Kucandra Bhairava, see below note to 7/35-36ab.

155. The Tāḍī (also spent Tālī) is the Flacourtia Cataphracta. It is a kind of palm and its leaves are used for medicinal purposes. The etymology is fatuous.

156. So there is no need to list the names of the attendants in this seat as was done when describing the other ones.

157. See above, note to 6/181cd-182ab. This verse alludes to AIṀ, the seed-syllable of the goddess into which the sacred seats are projected. The Yoni, that is, the 'bhaga', is the triangular lower portion of the syllable. This contains the first four sacred seats. Above is a slanting line issuing from the right corner of the triangle above which is a semi-circle - the Half Moon on top of which is a Point. Divine knowledge is the Command. It is symbolized by the Point of the Full Moon. Kālī is in the Half Moon (see above, 3/10 and 3/40-41), which is the hidden seventeenth energy of the New Moon that illumines and energizes the Full Moon.

158. According to 6/64, Jālandhara is the sacred seat of the Youth (kumārapīṭha) because Bhairava went to visit the goddess there in this form (6/41). The previous sacred seat, Oḍḍiyāna is, as one would expect, the Seat of the Eldest (jyeṣṭhapīṭha) (6/37cd). This implies that the transmissions of the Youth and Eldest originated from these seats (see note to 6/41) but this supposition is corrected here. For a different sequence of the four transmission see 39/75cd-77ab, 45/46cd-47 and notes. 159. Cf. above 6/106-107.

160. Many of the worlds that form a part of the Path of the Worlds (bhuvanādhvan) are governed by Rudras. These are not meant here. The placing of the teacher's hand on the disciple's head marks the culmination of the Regular Initiation (samayadīkṣā) of the Siddhānta. This is said to send the disciple's soul to Rudra's plane (rudrapada). According to some authoritative Siddhānta sources this is the supreme level of attainment. Other sources and commentators posit an Īśvara plane beyond this. Another view is that Śiva's plane (śivapada) is a third plane beyond that. The divergance of views is due to the manner in which the Śaiva Āgamic cults developed. At an early stage Rudra's plane was the supreme level. Then, as the Siddhānta developed, another plane beyond that was added and then another to accommodate mild forms in keeping with the general trend of the Siddhānta's development away from fierce forms. Here then we have an example of a residue of an earlier ideal that is still presented as ultimate.

161. Heroes' food is the sacrificial pap (caru). Normally, it is boiled rice and milk sometimes mixed with other grains. The Kaula equivalent is non-vegetarian. The consumption of this spiritually powerful food is considered to be especially empowering. We have seen how Bhairava receives meat from the goddess and the Yoginīs in the sacred sites he visits and is empowered thereby. Similarly, the adept is graced with the same empowerment by eating this in these and other similar sacred sites. See below 14/83cd-85ab and 14/131.

162. We have seen that they are the four groups of fifty, one for each of the four sacred seats. See above, note to 6/11cd-12.

163. Here Kula is the family or clan of initiates. They are all the disciples of one teacher or his predecessors in the same spiritual lineage.

164. The name of this seat is derived in the KMT from the word jvāla, meaning 'flame' or 'burning'. It is also said to be related to magic (indrajāla - lit. 'Indra's net') which, like Māyā, is a 'net'. See KMT 2/50–52 quoted in the intro. vol. 1 on p. 89.

165. In this case, the three and a half measures are derived from the syllable AIṀ, the Kaula version of the Vedic syllable OṀ. The first three measures are the audible part of the syllable and the 'half measure' the inaudible resonance of Unstruck Sound that reaches up into the silence of the supreme principle into which it dissolves (see intro. vol. 1 p. 378 ff.). Accordingly we are told that the triangular part of the syllable AIṀ consists of three measures while the half measure, represented by the slanting line, Half Moon (ardhacandra) and Point (bindu) are said to 'adorn' this syllable above (KuKh 58/29-30). This makes good sense. Here, however, the four units are equated with the four sacred seats. Although the numbers coincide the remaining features of these symbolic associations are akwardly accomodated. It would have been more coherent with the symbolism of these measures to have allocated the half measure to Trisrota above the triangle (see note to 3/4). Or, if not, to have attributed it to Oḍḍiyāna (here called Udyāna) the seat in the centre of the Triangle from which the other seats are said to originate. This location would have suited the Half Measure well as it is from here that the supreme energy (parā śakti), Rudra's power (rudraśakti), that is, the Command, expands three-fold in the form of the other measures representing the universe of triads (KuKh 60/97). But as the Point (bindu) has been shifted outside, the Point in the centre which, as a rule, is the main one and is said to be the energy of the Command, has lost its metaphysical identity and pre-eminant status. This loss is compensated, it seems, by ascribing to it the highest number of measures, and so maintaining its status as the origin of the others that it contains in a potential form within itself.

166. The Island of the Moon is the goddess's triangle situated in the End of the Twelve. The teachings proceed from there in three transmissions from the seats of Oḍḍiyāna, Pūrṇagiri and Kāmarūpa. The fourth transmission, that of the Skyfarers associated with Jālandhara, remains internal and so is not counted amongst those that flow out externally. Tisra is the seat from which the scriptures and all the transmissions proceed at the end of the Age of Strife (cf. note to 6/164 and 6/188cd-189ab) because, as we are told here, it impells them and so has no separate transmission of its own.

167. The projection of these places in this way appears for the first time in the MBT. The corresponding passage in the KMT (2/115-116) mentions only eight places specifically although it adds that the goddess went to other places also (see intro. vol. 1, p. 111). The same list of fifty sacred sites is found below in 51/16cd–22 (= YKh (2) 24/1-7ab), the Ṭ (fl. 4a-4b) and the YHṛ (3/34-40). The variant readings of KuKh 51/16cd–22 and the Ṭ are signalled in the notes and the letter to which each place corresponds is noted in brackets after each entry. Another, similar list of fifty sites is found in the AS (5/1-16). They have been discussed and the places mapped in Dyczkowski 2001(b): 51-55 and maps 1-3, figures 1 and 2.

According to the Ṭīkā each of these sites is equated with a letter of the alphabet and projected progressively in an anti-clockwise spiral into the compartments of a grid projected into the inner part of the goddess's triangle. This is the Meruprastāra, also called Merugahvara (see chapter 8 below where it is described in detail). Thus, the goddess's journey to the fifty sites is understood to be the outer representation of her inner energizing movement as the energy of Speech (vācchakti) through the letters. At the same time these are the places in which the Siddhas, corresponding to the letters of the Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi), and their consorts, the Yoginīs of the Mālinī alphabet, have been established by the goddess's power.

The following passage from the AS presents another, similar set of fifty sites projected into the triangle in the same way. After the contents of the triangle have been listed, the names of the sacred sites serve as code words for their corresponding letters. The first use to which the code is put is to name the letters in the Mālinī order of the alphabet that are to be projected into another triangular grid called Merumālinī. The passage reads:

> That goddess Bhagavatī is, in another aspect (bheda), Mālinī. Merely by recollecting her the cage of the body trembles. Just by practicing the deposition one wanders through the Wheels and, O mistress of the gods, one is always in the midst of the sacred seats. Explain that clearly again by (your) grace.
> The venerable Kubjikā said:
>
> Well done, Mahādeva! (You) have asked a very good question. Now I will tell you the teaching concerning reality. I have explained Mālinī extensively in many aspects. She constantly emerges from the Abyss (gahvara) by the path of the sacred seats. Now listen again, O lord of the gods, (I will tell you about her) in a different aspect.
>
> Fashion (uddharet) the grid of Meru properly as explained before. Deposit the brightly shining alphabet (mātṛkā) there from A to KṢa. (Fashion thus) the aggregate of fifty (sacred) sites (kṣetra) with the aforementioned manifestation (udaya) of the letters. * * * * O Rudra, one should perceive (them there) all together. One should deposit the tradition of the sequence of the sacred seats accompanied (saṁbhṛta) by the aggregate of letters. And (so one should deposit) Śrīpīṭha, the divine seat, the endless union (yoga) of the Siddhas.

yā sā bhagavatī devī mālinī anyabhedataḥ |
yasyāḥ [yasya] smaraṇamātreṇa kampate dehapañjaram ||
nyāsamātreṇa abhyāsāc cakrāṇām aṭanaṁ bhavet |
pīṭhānāṁ caiva deveśi sadā madhyasthago bhavet ||
etad bhūyo 'pi nistūṣaṁ kathayasva prasādataḥ |
śrīkubjikā uvāca
sādhu sādhu mahādeva kṛtaṁ praśnaṁ suśobhanam ||
niścayārthaṁ hi tattvasya kathyāmy adhunāpi te |
vistareṇa bahubhedair mālinī kathitā mayā ||
gahvarāt tu viniṣkrāntā pīṭhamārgeṇa nityaśaḥ |
idānīṁ śṛṇu deveśa bhūyo bhedāntareṇa vai ||
uddharen meruprastāraṁ yathāvat kathitaṁ purā |
mātṛkāṁ [mātrikaṁ] vinyaset tatra ādikṣāntāṁ [-ntā] mahāprabhām [-prabhāḥ] ||
śatārdhakṣetrasaṁghātaṁ [satārvvaṁ-] pūrvoktavarṇodayena tu |
*sṛṣṭili * * * (?) rudra saṁkṣepeṇaiva lakṣayet* ||
nyaset pīṭhakramāmnāyaṁ varṇagrāmeṇa saṁbhṛtam |
śrīpīṭhaṁ divyapīṭhaṁ ca siddhayogam anantakam ||
sṛṣṭikrameṇa sarve te vāmāvartaparibhramāt [cāmīvartta-] ||
kṣetravarṇasamūhena [kṣevavarṇa-] pīṭhanāmākṣareṣu ca |
liṅgam etat puraṁ merur mālinīṁ [merumālinī] ca tatoddharet ||
AS 5/2-9, 15cd-16

The text goes on to list the following sacred places in the order noted below. The corresponding letters and their serial order in the lists in the KuKh and allied sources are noted in brackets after the names that coincides. Note that, probably because of a lacuna in the sole manuscript of the AS, there are only forty-four places. They are:

Mahālakṣmī (Sa, 48), Elapūra (Ḍha, 30), Kulūta (Ṇa, 21), Pūrṇavardhana (Ī, 4), Vārāṇasī (Ā, 2), Kāmarūpa (A, 1), Gajendra, Oḍiyāṇaka (Ha, 49), Arcapīṭha, Prayāga (Pha, 38), Koṅkaṇa, Jālapīṭha (Ga, 19), Candrapūrya (Ḥ, 16), Mahābimba, Pūrṇagirya (Ṛ, 7) and Tisraka (E, 11), Varuṇa (Śa, 46), Śrīgiri and Śrīśaila (Ra, 44), Aṭṭahāsaka (Jha, 25), Mahendra (Va, 45) and Ekāmra (Ḷ, 10) and Kāñcī, Kullagiri (Ḍa, 29), Śrīparvata, Jayantī (Ta, 32), Caritra (Da, 34), Kanyakubjaka, Māyāpurī (Bha, 40), Devikoṭṭa (Ca, 22), Puṣkara, Himālaya, Paśupati (Nepāla - I, 3), Kurukṣetra, Kailāsa (O, 13), Sumeruka (Ja, 24), Hakkaḍukka (Ā, variant of 2), Pāripātra, Strīrājya, Magadhāpura, Rudrālaya, Vindhyā, Brahmavāhā, and Sarasvatī.

The AS continues:

All these are (deposited in the grid) by moving in an anti-clockwise spiral, in accord with the sequence of emanation. (They appear there) as a group of sacred sites and letters with the names of the seats within the letters. This is the Liṅga, the abode (pura) which is Meru. And then extract the Mālinī (alphabet) (from it).

168. The following are the variant spellings of these place names found in the other sources in which these verses appear. See the notes to the Sanskrit text for details. For other variant spellings, see the notes to the charts of these and other places mentioned in various Tantric sources in Dyczkowski 2001(b): 79-83. KuKh = 51/16cd–22, Ṭ = Ṭīkā (MS K fl. 4a-4b) and YHṛ = YHṛ 3/34-40.

2) Vārāṇasī (KuKh: Hakkaḍokka) 4) Pūrṇavardhana (Ṭ, YHṛ: Pauṇḍravardhanī), 5) Purastīra (Ṭ, YHṛ : Purastīrṇa) (U), 12) Kāmakoṭṭaka (KuKh: Kāmakoṭṭika; Ṭ: Kāmakoṭi; YHṛ: Kāmakoṭaka), 16) Candrapuryaka (YHṛ: Pūrṇacandraka), 18) Ekoṇa (Ṭ: Ekārapīṭha; YHṛ: Oṁkāra), 20) Mālava (KuKh: Mālaya), 21) Kulūti (KuKh, Ṭ: Kulūta), 22) Devikoṭa (KuKh: Devikoṭṭa), 24) Marukeśvara (KuKh: Marukeśara; YHṛ: Māruteśvara), 30) Kollagiri (KuKh: + Kollāpura), 33) Ujjaiyinī (KuKh, Ṭ Ujjayinī), 34) Caritra (YHṛ: Citrā), 35) Kṣīrikā (Ṭ: Kṣīrikāra), 37) Odukesa (KuKh: Udakeśa; Ṭ: Auḍikā; YHṛ: Oḍḍīśa), 41) Urasā (Ṭ Auruṣa; YHṛ: Jaleśa), 44) Bheruṇḍaka (Ṭ: Eruṇḍī; YHṛ: Meru), 46) Vāruṇa (KuKh: Varuṇā; YHṛ: Vāmana), and 49) Udyāṇa (KuKh: Udyāna; Ṭ: Uḍiyāṇa; KuKh: Uḍyāṇa).

169. The order of this and the next entry has been reversed. These two entries in the YHṛ are: Kolāpura followed by Elapura. Then the YHṛ adds: Oṁkāra.

170. This entry is found in the Ṭ and but is missing here and in KuKh 51/21 below.

171. Here, as in 51/21 below and the YHṛ, this place is called Śaila.

172. KuKh 6/219cd–225ab are drawn from KMT 2/117–122. The two versions have been compared in the critical apparatus of the Sanskrit edition of the KuKh.

173. See intro. vol. 1, p. 529.

174. See ibid., p. 115.

175. I have retained the reading 'ubhābhyām' - 'with (us) both'. Perhaps this should be emended to 'ubhayoḥ' 'of (us) both'. Either way the sense is clearly that the god and the goddess are uniting. An added implied sense of the unemended reading may well be that their devotees, sharing in this union, also unite with them.

176. The KMT says 'at the end of which' instead of 'from when'. This small alteration makes a great deal of difference to the meaning. According to the KMT, the union between the god and the goddess takes place only after she has completed her pilgrimage around India. In the ṢSS, which follows the KMT, the god declares: 'as long as these sacred seats are not established (by you) in the land of Bhārata, no union takes place between you and I' (etāni bhārate varṣe yāvat pīṭhāny asthāpyate || tāvan na me tvayā sārdhaṁ saṁgamaṁ ca prajāyate | ṢSS 4/10cd-11ab). The situation here is quite different, indeed it is virtually the opposite of the one in the KMT. According to our text, the god, not the goddess, wonders from seat to seat. Nor does he establish the seats but, consecrated by her, he becomes the Siddha of the seat and unites with her there. However, despite the differences, the redactor of the KuKh, or one of the them, attempts to integrate this version with the one in the KMT by concluding with the verses with which the version in the KMT ends.

177. See intro. vol. 1, p. 115.

178. In place of dadet tu sā - 'she gave' - the KMT reads: 'punar dadet' - '(she) gave again'.

179. The KMT reads uḍḍa. The reading of the name of the god who resides in this place according to the KMT (2/121-122), where these verses originate, is Oḍramaheśāna (MS C: oḍraṁ-; D: oddra-; FH: odra-) and the name of the place Uḍḍapīṭha (MSs CK: oḍra-; HJ: oḍḍra-; D: utta-).

180. The suffix -dhā, which normally means '(several) times' is frequently used in the Sanskrit of the Kubjikā Tantras to mean -vidha i.e. '(several) kinds'. So perhaps, the intended sense here is 'bring about the emanation which is of many kinds'

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER SEVEN

1. घ्: किमेतात्। 2. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.
3. ग्: दीव्य–; घ्: दिव्यमनुर्मुद्रा। 4. M → N.
5. M → N. उपदेश– is almost invariably treated as neuter in this text. See, for example, 7/6a, 8c, 9/37a, 10/7a, 22/27a, 24/77c, 30/82a, 178a, 37/1d, 38/4d, 12c, 28a, 41/34b, 49b, 46/26a, 50/10a, 32c, 59/4a, 60/19d, 62/57a, 57c, and 63/15a.
The regular gender occurs in a mantra repeated several times with variations in 16/5 ff. and only two other times in 30/50d and 62/48a. The mantras were probably drawn from some other source and because they are mantras the redactor(s) did not alter the gender of this word by changing the final visarga of the nom. sing. to anusvāra. The reading in 30/50d may need to be emended while the regular masculine form in 62/48a cannot be made neuter without disturbing the metre. 6. च्: सर्व। 7. छ्, ज्: चकृके।
8. क्, ख्, घ्, च्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच। 9. All MSs: –भेदे।
10. क्, ख्, ङ्: सहस्प्राह्यष्ट–; ग्, झ्: सहस्राह्य–; घ्, ज्: सहस्रा–; च्: सह * ज्येष्ठ–; छ्:
–ज्येष्टकौलिकं। 11. झ्: अवतार:; all other MSs: अवतार। Although the lexicons list this as a masculine noun, it is almost always treated as neuter in this and related texts and so has been emended accordingly. See above, note to 1/2c. 12. क्, ग्: तस्योद्वारो; ख्, च्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: तस्याद्वारो–। M →
N. See above, note to 7/2c. 13. M → N.
14. ग्: –सहारमंभृतं; घ्, ङ्: –मंभृतम्। One wonders whether emendation to –संभृतम् would not make a better reading.
15. च्: –सार्ध। Compounds like this one that incorporate indeclinables are most irregular. 16. All MSs: नु।
17. झ्: सप्त–। The cardinal of this number occurs twenty-eight times in this text and the ordinal twice. The regular form of the cardinal (सप्तविंशति–) occurs only ten times. The deviant form सप्ताविंशति– occurs eight times apart from this one (7/80b, 8/76c, 28/28a, 162c, 48/77a, 53/6a, 59/78a and 60/23c) The deviant form सप्ताविंशत् occurs six times (39/46c, 45/36b, 53b, 58/96b, 59/2b, and 67/23b). The form सप्तविंशत् occurs twice (38/9b and 38/26a). The ordinal सप्तविंश– occurs twice but in both cases it substitutes the cardinal (8/13c and 58/90b). See also above, note to 3/9c. The deviant ordinal सप्ताविंशमक– occurs once (8/82a) as does the deviant cardinal सप्ताविंश– (26/83a). See also above, note to 5/63d (for the form सप्तादशी) and 5/45a (for the form सप्तादशन्). Note finally that in 34/81c in all but two MSs सप्ताभि: (cf. the regular अष्टाभि:) replaces the regular सप्तभि: which is also attested in one place (63/13d). Although that reading has not been retained as it is a single instance and is not supported by the metre, one wonders whether this reading should have been retained as an example of an independent occurrence of the deviant feminine सप्ता apparently attested in the conjunct numbers. See also below, note to 11/68b. 18. All MSs: संस्थितास्तु।

19. Although the following three lines appear with almost no variants in all the MSs, they make no sense in this context. I have therefore removed them from the main body of the text: सप्तमस्य (ट्: सप्त * *) तु बीजस्य नवमी * * (ग्: ननमी * *)योत्कला। अनुलोमविलोमेन उद्धरेद् बीजमुत्तमम्।। एषा भगवती देवी नाम्ना सा वह्निवासिनी. This line appears below as 8/94cd and 20/25ab. 20. च्: गृहे–; all other MSs except ग्, ङ्, झ्:
–मित्यावतारोयं। See above, notes to 1/5b, 6/37c and 3/49a.

21. Cf. above 5/68b. 22. See above, note to 7/2c. IM 6 + 7.

23. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.

24. See above, note to 3/108b.

25. This normally masculine noun is mostly treated as neuter, although it does appear in its regular gender several times. It is ascertainably neuter here and in 7/11d, 99d, 11/44d, 27/39d, 30/198b and 38/5b. In two places (7/45a and 25/28b) although in its deviant neuter form, it is in concord as if it retained its regular masculine gender. The ease with which gender can be varied is well illustrated in 38/5 where this word appears first in its neuter nominative plural form and then in the very next line as a masculine nominative plural. In this case metrical considerations are evident as the masculine form is one syllable shorter than the neuter. Indeed, one gets the feeling in most cases in which the plural appears (which is the majority) that metre determines gender.

26. The regular form of the cardinal द्वादश does not alter with gender, only case. Nonetheless, this deviant form, which serves to add an extra syllable for the metre, is common. See below, 9/7b, 25/15a, 25b, 35/107b, 39/98b, 99c, 100c, and 62/92d. Cf. below 7/11d where the deviant neuter of the substantive is retained with the numeral in regular concord with it. 27. All MSs: –विधाम्।

28. M → N. 29. छ्: + त।

30. DS. See above, note to 6/153d. 31. आपोबीजम् would be correct but does not fit the metre. Perhaps emendation to परबीजं would be appropriate. 32. छ्: + तदासौ आपबीजं तु देव्यात्मानं तथैव च। It would be easy to emend to देव्यात्मनस्, but this is unneccessary. The form आत्मानम् functioning as a deviant nom. sing. of आत्मन् occurs frequently. See above, note to 3/10d. 33. पदमेकम् or एकपदम् would be correct but does not fit the metre. See above, note to 1/5a. 34. घ्: अशशोकानि। M →
N. See above, note to 7/9d and cf. 7/99d. 35. घ्, छ्, झ्: द्वादशः।

36. ग्, घ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: –शिवच्छाया; ङ्, च्: –शिवछाया। A plural ending is required here.

37. घ्, च्, छ्: कृत्या। 38. ग्, ङ्, ज्, ट्: –योगात् एतत्।

39. M → N. This noun, with this meaning, never appears in its regular masculine gender. The neuter form can be identified in not less than twenty other places (see 7/24d, 32d, 55b, 8/3d, 13/60b, 14/49b, 15/53b, 18/21b, 19/22b, 50d, 20/30d, 24/77d, 80d(79b), 82b, 83d, 85b, 86b, 27/40b, 28/31b, and 28/108d). However, in the sense of 'attachment ' it appears in its regular gender twice (see 13/56b and 41/30d) although even with this meaning it is found twice in the deviant neuter gender (see 37/26d and 47/52b). However, the two times निष्परिग्रह– occurs, it is in its regular masculine gender (see 32/35d and 32/46d).

40. All MSs: –न्तं।

41. ट्: –रस्मय:। See above, note to 1/5a.

42. One wonders whether to emend to the regular तिर्यग्गा but although तिर्यच् is an indeclinable and does appear as such once (see 7/44d –तिर्यगूर्ध्वगति:), all three of the other instances in which it occurs, it functions as an ordinary adjective. See 7/40d (तिर्यगाकृति:), 8/15a (तिर्यगाश्), 8/16b (तिर्यगस्त्रय:) and 18/68a (सा तिर्यगा रेखा।) Cf. TS 8/40a: संश्लिष्टं (ख्: –ट; ग्: ?) तिर्यगं कृत्वा।

43. क्, ख्, झ्: कत्यंत; all other MSs: कत्यंतं–। As in the following line where थसान्तम् is an abbrevation for थादिसान्तम्, similarly here I have emended to कतान्ता assuming this to be an abbreviation of कादितान्ता।

44. All MSs: थसान्तमित्य–। There are at least three easy ways this reading could be corrected. These include थादिसान्तेत्यनुक्रमात्, थादिसान्ता अनुक्रमात् or थसान्ता इत्यनुक्रमात्. The use of the letter 'm' as a hiatus filler is well attested. So in order to stick as close as possible to the unanymous reading of the MSs I have emended accordingly.

45. IC.

46. M → N. See above, 3/49a.

47. All MSs: अमृतादिव। A plural ending is required here by the syntax but does not fit the metre.

48. ङ्: जीवति।

49. घ्: येर्गिर्गा; छ्: गिंगा। ये लिङ्गा is missing in MS च्. N → M. This change of gender is clearly meant to accommodate the metre and is a unique occurrence in this text.

50. All MSs except ग्,ङ्, च्, झ्: योगि–; ङ्: –मडले।

51. All MSs: सिद्धाश्च।

52. क्, ग्, घ्, झ्: योगिन्यो। Missing in MS ख् up to अत्रये ते 7/17d.

53. All MSs: षादिसान्ता। Cf. above, 7/14d.

54. घ्, छ्: * भि:। Although emendation would be easy here, I take this to be another case of irregular vowel sandhi.

55. घ्, छ्: रेखै। This is one of the rare instances in which a feminine noun is treated as masculine as the regular तिसृभि: रेखाभि: would not fit the metre.

56. क्, ख्, झ्: सिद्धि–। See above, note to 3/22b.

57. तान् would be correct.

58. In this list of male proper names every one without exception has been made neuter. See above, note to 6/49c.

59. A dual ending is required here. See above, note to 5/46d and also note to 2/28b.

60. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: –देव।

61. क्, ख्, झ्: तूष्णीं; घ्: भूष्णी। 62. घ्, छ्: कंदंवं। 63. छ्: सिह–।

64. All MSs except झ्: कंदपी। 65. ख्: काडकं; घ्: क्राडनम्; ङ्: क्राडाकम्।

66. ख्, ग्, ङ्: वरुडं; झ्: विरोदं; all other MSs: वरोडं।

67. All MSs: वरुडं। 68. घ्, च्, छ्: –रे।

69. All other MSs: –गर्भ। 70. घ्: कुन्दलं।

71. See above, note to 1/11c. 72. All MSs: सवरं। IM 6 → 7.

73. ख्: –देयं; ङ्: –देव। 74. All MSs: पिप्पलीश। 75. घ्, छ्: पुलीदं।

76. All MSs: गजकर्ण। 77. झ्: कुरांगं। 78. ङ्: –ल।

79. All MSs except झ्: विशुद्धाभ्यांख्यं। 80. ङ्: –त।

81. All MSs: मणिपूर्ण। 82. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ट्: –ष्टानं।

83. ङ्: अवधार; all other MSs: आवधारं।

84. All MSs except झ्: कमारकं। 85. ङ्: –शेख * नाथं।

86. ख्: कूशं; ङ्: कूश; all other MSs: क्रूशं। This and the preceding two lines are repeated in all manuscripts except ख् and घ्.

87. All MSs: –चत्वारिंशति। Although the deviant –चत्वारिंशतिः does occur (see above, note to 3/9c) it makes this pāda one syllable too long. As ordinals frequently replace cardinals –चत्वारिंशो, which is metrically more correct than the accepted emendation, could be better although it does not avoid an irregular long fifth syllable. 88. M → N. See above, 7/12d.

89. M → N. 90. All MSs: –धिनम्। 91. DS. Cf. above 8/89c, 15/31a and 25/15a. This DS is commonly found in Tantric texts such as this one. For example, in the TS (अतोर्द्ध– >) अतोर्ध्व– appears not less than twelve times (see, for example TS 9/178a: अतोर्ध्वे नियतिराख्याता (ख्: *यति–). Similarly, in the same text we find ततोर्ध्व– (written ततोर्द्ध– in the MSs) three times (see, for example TS 10/666a: ततोर्ध्वे (क्, ख्: ततोर्द्धवें; ग्: ततोर्द्द्वे) तु भवेत् पृथ्वी.

92. All MSs except च्, छ्: –देव्यो। One could emend to the regular acc. plu. –देवीः but the readings point to the acc. plu. of the common deviant form देव्या. See above, note to 2/22b. 93. घ्: सर्वरी सर्वरी चैव सावरी ; all other MSs: सर्वरी सवरी चैव सावरी। 94. घ्: क्लि (?)म्ना।

95. घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: किरंकिणी। 96. घ्: अम्वादेवी।

97. ख्, ङ्, च्: मुखिरा; all other MSs except झ्: मुषिरा।

98. All other MSs except ग्, ङ्, च्: तार–। 99. झ्: शुष्कां।

100. ख्: –नां; घ्, छ्, ज्, ट्: भगांनना। 101. झ्, ट्: सेहारी। The regular feminine is संहारिणी. The contracted संहारी is probably derived from सेहारी which is not Sanskrit and appears in the Kubjikaa texts as an alternative name for this Yoginī. See note to the English translation.

102. क्, ख्, झ्: विंवा; घ्: विवा। The readings विव्वा and बिम्बा correspond to the common alternative forms अव्वा and अम्बा (concerning which see below, note to the English translation of 15/3cd-4). I have chosen the reading of the majority of the MSs. The same word appears again below in 17/86b. The same two versions of the name are found in the MSs. There the majority read विंवा, four read विव्वा। These are MSs क्, ख्, ग् and छ्. Note that MSs क् and ख् here read विंवा whereas in 17/86b they read विव्वा. 103. छ्: विद्युल्लताका।

104. Note the parallel irregular formation of the word देव्या from देवी that occurs quite frequently. See above, note to 2/22b.

105. All MSs: व। 106. ख्, ङ्: योगमालिका।

107. ख्: शुद्ध। Concerning this IC see above, note to 1/5b.

108. All MSs except झ्: देव्या। 109. M → N. See above, note to 7/12d.

110. छ्: वे। 111. क्, ख्: –राश्म्यादौ; झ्: शोकराश्यादौ।

112. All MSs: प्रणवा:। 113. An irregular compound has been formed here to accomodate the metre. The meaning is अव्वापादम् आवसानगम्. Cf. पञ्चप्रणवमाद्यन्तं अव्वापादान्तगं (क् ग्: अथा–) शुभम्. YKh (1) 40/145cd and अव्वापादान्तगं (त्र अव्वापादम् अन्तगं) कृत्वा ibid. 40/243c. 114. M → N. See above, 3/49a.

115. क्, ख्, च्, झ्: शिव। 116. घ्, छ्: –यात।

117. घ्: हकावेतौ। 118. All MSs except घ्, छ्: वरानने।

119. क्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: –य; ट्: श्री * * *?।

120. घ्, छ्: * चंद्राख्यं; झ्: कुचण्डाख्यं।

121. See above, notes to 3/45b and 4/38c. 122. घ्: द्वावेतो।

123. ङ्: यु * पद्। 124. All MSs except झ्: –स्था।

125. See above, note to 1/4a. 126. ङ्: –क्य।

127. क्: याया लोकयेत्; ग्: यायो लोकयेत्; ङ्, च्, झ्: येये लोकयेत्; ट्: यायो वल * * त्; all the rest: योयो लोकयेत्। 128. घ्: द्योति; च्, छ्: योति; all other MSs except झ्:
सोति। 129. ग्, ङ्, च्, झ्: यति। 130. घ्, छ्: सिद्धि; all other MSs: सिद्धिर्।

131. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: –म। 132. घ्: मुखाम्नायस्।

133. ङ्: –भेदे:। 134. All MSs except च्, झ्: –तं।

135. All MSs except क्, झ्: ऊर्द्ध्वे।

136. We may either consider that a regular sandhi has taken place with the cardinal that has assumed the form of the ordinal or else that this is the regular cardinal with which sandhi has not taken place. See above, note to 3/108b.

137. Restoration to the required cardinal would disrupt the metre. See above, note to 3/108b. 138. All MSs: शिवं।

139. क्, छ्, ज्: निषणात्मा। 140. ट्: –योस्मध्ये।

141. ङ्, च्, ट्: विश्रीता; छ्, ज्: विश्रींता।

142. घ्, च्, छ्: –ति। See above, note to 7/13c. 143. घ्, छ्: –शक्ति।

144. घ्: करोतिवेश–; छ्: करोचेशमुत्तमं। 145. All MSs: तस्य। 146. छ्: ऊर्द्धगतं; ज्: ऊर्द्ध्वं गतं। 147. क्, ख्, च्: स चार्ध–; ग्, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ट्: स चार्द्ध–; क्, ट्: –कृतं–; all other MSs: स चोर्द्ध–।148. See above, note to 6/10b. 149. क्, ख्, ग्, ट्: –वर्ति–; ङ्: –वन्तिहला–।

150. ख्, ट्: वंक्रका; ग्: वक्रका; ङ्: वक्रमा।

151. तां ज्ञात्वा is implied. 152. च्, छ्, ट्: वधः।

153. छ्: धुनेना–। A dual ending is required here. See above, note to 5/46d.

154. M → N. 155. ङ्: –गति; छ्, ज्: गूर्द्धगतिं; all other MSs: –गतिं।

156. M → N. 157. According to regular usage, the cardinals from 20 to 99 (which are feminine), as well as (the neuter) शत– and सहर–, are used as singular substantives, the accompanying substantive being either in the same case or in the genitive. Thus पञ्चाशत् would be correct. However, it does not fit the metre. See above, note to 6/47b. 158. क्: पुराद्धृतं; च्: पुरोर्द्धतं; all other MSs: पुरोद्धृतं।

159. छ्: –श्लो * नि ; all other MSs: –श्लोकानि। But see note to 7/9d.

160. घ्, च्, छ्: –चक्र; ङ्: अध–। 161. All MSs except झ्, ट्: –स्थिता।

162. IM 5. This deviant form of करोमि produces a sixth long syllable. It appears again below in 18/14d. It is not common but does appear once in the BY (MS Kh folio 193b). 163. ट्: त्वयां। 164. ग्, घ्, च्: सार्ध।

165. घ्: –रः; ङ्: महे * र। 166. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: पश्चिमं।

167. See above, note to 3/12c.

168. घ्, च्, छ्: –लय; all other MSs: –लये। 169. घ्: पुरेमेतत्।

170. घ्: –श्लोके–। 171. ङ्: मध्य। 172. The same deviant compound appears again below in 60/21b. Cf, the similar deviant उभौपञ्चक– below in 9/53a and 9/54a. Cf. also above 5/8c. 173. घ्: मार्ग।

174. All MSs: देव्या। 175. All MSs: सा विरमे। 176. All MSs: न।

177. क्: –सिद्धे; ख्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, झ्: –सिद्धं; छ्, ज्, ट्, ठ्: –सिद्धिं।

178. ख्, च्: कुलं–।; ठ्: +।। ५१ ।। 179. All MSs: –न्तं। The goddess 's Vidyā begins with भगवति and ends with विच्चे and so should be said to be भकारादिचेकारान्ता. Even so, this is the standard form of reference. Cf. below 27/50a and 30/65ab and see note to the English translation for a reference from the YKh.

180. घ्: अधोर्द्धे। The same DS recurs below in 19/8d, 29b, 35/10b, 24c, and 57/47a and is well attested in Tantras of other schools e.g. JY 1/6/21a, TS 1/43c and BY folio 108a. 181. च्: विमर्दितम्; all other MSs: विसर्दितम्।

182. क्: –कारं; ख्: –प्तारां; all other MSs: –कारां। 183. All MSs: रूपं–।

184. ठ्: +।। ५२ ।। 185. घ्, छ्: कुचन्द्रात्–।; ठ्: कुंचंद्रात्संग–

186. All MSs: चान्द्रेयं। See above, note to 1/5b. 187. ठ्: +।। ५३ ।।

188. छ्: –श्लो *। 189. ङ्: एव।

190. M → N. See above, note to 1/3a. 191. ठ्: +।। ५४ ।।

192. ख्, ङ्, ज्, ट्, ठ्: –र। 193. M → N. See above, note to 7/12d. ठ्: +।। ५५।। 194. ठ्: –मा: 195. क्, झ्: तं; all other MSs: तां।

196. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c. 197. ङ्: च।

198. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्: चिंचिनी।. ठ्: +।। ५६।।

199. घ्, छ्: –श्रमा–; झ्: आश्रभा; ठ्: –श्रमायोग *?; all other MSs: –श्रमायोगात्।

200. All MSs except झ्: गृह।; ठ्: * *? M → N. See above, 3/49a.

201. All MSs except ङ्, च्, झ्: चंद्रं–। 202. See above, note to 1/11c. The order of the first two components of this compound has been reversed; cf. 7/61a and 26/82d. Also, concerning this compound, see above, note to 4/51d. 203. ठ्: त्वनुग्रहं +।। ५७।।

204. See above, note to 1/2c. 205. All MSs except ख्, ग्, ङ्: मर्त्य। See above, note to 3/11b. 206. See above, note to 1/11c. ठ्: –पूर्याद्।

207. ठ्: +।। ५८।। 208. ट्: उकारुश्च। All other MSs: उकारश्च

209. Missing in MS ख्। 210. All MSs: त्व। 211. All MSs: संज्ञकम्।

212. All MSs except झ्: तज्ञान–। 213. ठ्: +।। ५९।।

214. All MSs: तेषु–; All MSs except झ्: –वतारिलं।

215. घ्: शिष्य–; च्, छ्: शिष्ये–। 216. ग्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ट्, ठ्: पुंड–; क्: –वर्द्धनै।

217. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c. ठ्: –र। 218. ठ्: +।। ६०।।

219. All MSs: सिद्धिश्च। 220. ङ्: –पुरं–। See above, note to 1/11c. Cf. 7/57a and 26/82d. 221. ङ्: चिंचि *–।

222. See above, note to 6/10b. ठ्: +।। ६१।। 223. The root भञ्ज् is 7P. The perfect participle passive is normally भग्न–. 224. ठ्: त

225. All MSs: त्वां। 226. घ्, ङ्, छ्: चिंचिनी। 227. घ्, च्, छ्: स्मृतं।

228. DS. See above, note to 6/153d. 229. घ्, छ्: विख्यातो तत् *; ट्: विख्यातो?; ठ्: विख्यातः तस्मिन; all other MSs: विख्यातो तस्मिन्। 230. ट्: ?।

231. See above, note to 1/11c. ट्: * * पुर्यके।; ठ्: +।। ६२।। 232. ठ्: षोडश। Here again the ordinal replaces the cardinal because of the metre. See above, note to 3/108b. This same quarter appears below in 7/92c. 233. All MSs except घ्, झ्: पुत्रा। 234. All MSs except घ्, झ्: तान्ननुग्रहेत्।

235. ख्, ग्: गु * त्वानाम्वायं; घ्, छ्, ठ्: गु * त्वाम्नाय; ङ्: गु * त्वानाम्वायं; च्: –य; ज्, ट्: गु * त्वाम्नायं। 236. ठ्: ।। ६३।। IM 6. 237. छ्, ठ्: याव।

238. छ्: च्छिनाथ–। This and the following line also appear above as 5/46cd-7ab. 239. ङ्: शभो। 240. ठ्: +।। ६४।। 241. क्, ग्: –द्यादिना * न्तं; च्: –दिमोथान्तं। 242. ठ्: +।। ६५।। 243. घ्, छ्: परं त्वं च। This and the following two lines are found in KuKauM 1/13-15ab. KuKauM MSs क्: परत्रश्च; ख् ग् घ्: परत्रं। 244. KuKauM: पारम्पर्यगुरुक्रमम् (ग्: पारंपर्यक्रमागतं)।

245. KuKauM: –वर्जितम्।; ठ्: +।। ६६।।

246. ङ्: वीजोज्भ्रितो; झ्: वीजोज्झितं; all other MSs: वीजोज्झितो; KuKauM: ऊषरे (क्: उखरे)
तु। 247. छ्: क्षेत्रें; all other MSs except क्, ख्, ज्, ट्: क्षेत्रं।
248. KuKauM: प्ररोहते। 249. KuKauM: पुष्पहीने कुतो देवि मूर्तिर्भवति (घ्: मूर्त्तिर्–) जन्तुषु।; ठ्: +।। ६७।। 250. From here up to the end of 7/74 corresponds to AS 8/43cd-51 with which it has been collated. क्: आदिनाथेस्त्रयोलीनो; ख्, ङ्: आदिनाथेति * * * (?); घ्: –लीना; all other MSs: –त्रयोलीनो; AS: आदिनाथं–।

251. Missing in MSs ख् and ङ्। DS. See above, note to 6/153d. The AS reads this quarter: सिद्धत्रयसमायुतः.

252. घ्: –णे; AS: वर्तमाना। KuKh 7/68-69ab correspond to YKh (2) 17/6cd-7 with which they have been collated.

253. +।। ६८।। 254. AS and all MSs except झ्: –ता।
255. क्, घ्: मर्त्य; AS: कुंकुणे मत्यं। 256. All MSs except झ्, ठ्: –त्रीणिस्। IC. See above, note to 1/2c. 257. DS. 258. क्, ख्, झ्, ट्, ठ्: निर्वशाश्च; all other MSs:
निर्वेशाश्च। 259. क्, घ्, छ्, ट्: षड्; ख्: खड्; AS: ते षड्भिः; YKh
(2): षडि जाता। 260. ज्: * सवंशास्– कोंकणे, झ्: च सर्वशास्– कोंकणे; ठ्:
+।। ६९।।; AS: सार्द्धसास्त्रीणि वासरे। 261. ग्: तेखा संज्ञा; ङ्, ज्, ट्: तेषा संज्ञा; AS: एवं नव।
262. ङ्: –य। 263. ख्, ङ्: गगन कुमुद * *; ठ्: गगनकुमु * * *?; all other MSs: गगन कुमुदस्–। 264. झ्: पद्मभैरवो देवश्च; ठ्: * * * * * (?) भैरवो देव एव
च +।। ७०।।; all other MSs: पद्मभैरवो देव एव च।

265. घ्: –रोमश्च। A dual ending is required here. See above, note to 5/46d.

266. ख्, ङ्: –नाः; all other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: –नः। Instead of these two lines the sole manuscript of the AS reads the following corrupt verse in sragdharā:

श्रीचर्याभेदनाथं मुनिगणनमितं (मौनि–) पिप्पली बालदेवं (+ श्री–)
श्रीकोट्टीश * * * विपुलगुणगणा श्रीमदांगोहनाथं।
* * * * * * * * * * * * * म् एवं श्रीदेशदेशे (श्रीरेशडेशं)
श्रीमत्करो देवं? श्री जयति अनुभवं सिद्धनाथावतारम् (+ श्री–)।।

267. घ्, च्, छ्: जाती; AS: जाता। 268. ठ्: +।। ७१।।

269. AS द्वितीयं च चतुर्थञ्च पञ्चमश्च अधस्त्रयः (–त्रियः)। The degree to which masculine and neuter are interchangeable is exemplified by the form पुरुषाणि found a few lines below (see 7/74d). All the ordinals in these lines of this version are uniformally neuter even though the substantives to which they refer are obviously masculine. Admittedly some are in their regular masculine form in the version in the AS but even there this is not uniformly the case. Moreover, this may be the result of correction. This kind of change in gender is present throughout not only this text but also the other *khaṇḍa*s, recensions and related texts. Of course, one may argue that this is the result of scribal error. But the pervasive and systematic, albeit at times erratic nature of this phenomenon supports the acceptance of the possibility that in the case of male beings especially masculine and neuter genders are interchangeable in the Sanskrit of this text. In other words, although they may possesses markers of neuter gender they can still be regarded as masculine in concord. This means that the editors work is very difficult. Where should he emend? Probably this was the scribes problem also. Faced with this strange mixture of genders in addition at times with an unclear original or impelled spontaneously by his own knowledge of the language, it is not surpising that a scribe may make his own emendations thus further confusing the situation in this way as well as by his own occasional errors.

270. ठ्: सप्तंमं चा–; all other MSs: सप्तमं चा–। A dual ending is required here. See above, note to 5/46d. IM 6 + 7.

271. ङ्: –त। IC. See above, note to 1/2c. 272. घ्, च्: ऊर्द्धगा।

273. Missing in all MSs except घ्, छ्, ज् and ट्, ठ्।; घ्: +।। ७२।। According to the AS this line reads: सप्तमश्चाष्टमश्चैव नवमं त्रीणि ऊर्द्धत:।। MS ट् ends here.

274. All MSs and AS: पुरा:। 275. च्: –यां; all other MSs: –आज्ञाया; AS: सर्व्व चिञ्चाज्ञाया। 276. च्: संप्रभावत:। 277. AS: गता चात्र। IC. See above, note to 1/2c. 278. झ्: भोगं; all other MSs: भोगा। This emendation agrees with the reading in the AS.

279. ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: भुजन्ति; ङ्: तुजन्ति।

280. घ्, छ्, ज्: वामरे; ठ्: चामरे +।। ७३।। ; AS: वासवे।

281. घ्, छ्: अधिकरे; AS: कोंकणे च। 282. IC.

283. AS: अधिकारपदे। 284. ठ्: +।। ७४।।

285. This line corresponds to YKh (2) 15/93ab. YKh (2): एतेषां।

286. All MSs and the AS: संतति। This line corresponds to YKh (2) 15/93ab.

287. ख्, ङ्, ज्, झ्, ठ्: संजाता:। YKh (2): सन्ततिर्जाता।

288. M → N. AS: पुरुषान्येव। 289. All MSs except ठ्: षोडश:। The ordinal almost always replaces the cardinal (see above, note to 3/108b), even so as the metre here does not require it and, moreover, this reading is not supported by the one in YKh (2), it has been emended.

290. ग्: नांमानि; ङ्: नमामि। 291. ख्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –संकेनकेन। 292. ठ्: +।। ७५।।

293. क्, ख्, ग्, ठ्: –तीप्रश्च; ङ्: सूस्त्रीप्रश्च; घ्, च्, छ्: सुरस्तप्रश्च।

294. क्: केचर्या; घ्, च्, छ्: खेचर्य; all other MSs except ख्, ङ्, ज्, ठ्: खचर्यो। This emendation is supported by the measure of the metre. खेचरो would be the regular form but does not fit the metre. The masculine खेचर्य: mirrors the deviant खेचरी > खेचर्या for which see above, 2/22b.

295. घ्: गर्व्भमुक्तो च; all other MSs except ठ्: –मुक्तो–। 296. च्: विजंय–।

297. +।। ७६।। 298. ठ्: रत्नकेशवमुन्मन्त;। क्, ख्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, ठ्: –श्रोतामहं; छ्, ज्: –मुन्मन्तमुद्राश्रोतामहं; झ्: स्रतामहं। A dual ending is required here. See above, note to 5/46d. 299. घ्, छ्: षोडश। This change from the cardinal to the ordinal is required here by the metre. See above, note to 3/108b.

300. ठ्: +।। ७७।। 301. ठ्: –मोज्रिते; all other MSs except क्, ख्, झ्:
–त। 302. ठ्: सुव्रते 303. ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ठ्: गा–; all other MSs: गो–।
304. ङ्: विज्ञया। 305. All MSs: –गा।;। ठ्: +।। ७८।। See above
6/149a and note to 3/77d. 306. क्, ख्, ङ्: –मोलायोपादेवस्य; ग्: ?; घ्, च्, छ्:
–मोलायोयादेवस्य; ठ्: –मोल्याय:या देवस्य; all other MSs: मोल्यामोपादेवस्य। See note to 3/11b.
Above we are told that out of the Nine Siddhas Gagana, Padma and Kamala were the teachers in the mortal world (7/72cd-73ab). But while it is clear that Gadeva means Gagana and Kadeva (7/78c), Kamala, the readings ओपादेवस्य or ओयादेवस्य make no sense. In accord with the form of the other two names, it is safe to assume an original पदेवस्य. The preceding syllable belongs to the previous pāda and may be safely assumed to serve just as a filler to complete it.

307. All MSs except झ्: दंशादि–; ठ्: षोडशान्तं तु; all other MSs: –षोडशन्तं तु। Although the readings of the MSs read or indicate the reading दशादि this does not square with what was said in the previous lines. There only the first eight out of the sixteen Siddhas are accounted for. So as eight remain, the reading has been emended accordingly. However, the metre does not allow emendation to the appropriate ordinals and so we must assume that cardinals are functioning as ordinals. 308. ङ्: विज्ञया।

309. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, झ्: –ओलिता; all other MSs: –ओलिका; ठ्: +।। ७९।।

310. घ्: कदम्बस्य। 311. ङ्: ज्ञया।

312. All MSs: सिद्धिषोडश:। The regular order of the members of this compound has been reversed. See note to 2/25c.

313. All MSs: परान्वये. See above, note to 1/5c. IM 5, 6 + 7.

314. घ्, छ्, ठ्: –चाद्। 315. ख्, ङ्, झ्: भवेज्येष्ठा; घ्, च्, छ्: भवेज्येष्ठ; ज्, ठ्: भवेज्येष्ठे। 316. Concerning this numeral see above, note to 7/7c. Note also that the ending has been dropped for the metre.

317. All MSs: काल–। 318. क्, ङ्, च्: चतुराशीती। The ending of this numeral also has been dropped for the metre. Concerning the deviant form of this numeral, see above, note to 3/41b.

319. All MSs except क्, झ्: –न ण् –सन्तानानाम् would make regular syntax. M →
N. See above, note to 1/3a. 320. All MSs: मन्द–। 321. छ्: भ * ष्यति।

322. घ्: –र:। 323. All MSs: –स्थानात्। M → N.

324. ग्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: तदा–। 325. छ्, ज्: भूवोर्मध्ये। KuKh 7/83cd-85ab corresponds to YKh (2) 15/91cd-93.

326. This irregular compound has been formed to save a syllable for the metre. The reading in YKh (2) is correct Sanskrit: आधारे च द्वितीयकं.

327. ङ्: –र। The penultimate vowel here has been lengthened for the metre.

This and the following five lines are also found below as 50/16-18. The variant readings are labelled 'B'.

328. This line corresponds to two lines in the version found in YKh (2) (15/92) which reads:

तृतीयं (क्, ख्: त्रीतीयं) च चतुर्थं च पञ्चमं (क्: पञ्चगं) च तथा पुनः।
मणिपूरस्थाने (क्: –स्थानेके; ख्: –स्थानके) पूज्या नित्यमेव (क्: – मवं) कुलान्वये॥

329. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –र। IM 5. 330. झ्: संपूज्यं। 331. क्: षष्ठ।

332. घ्: –ष्थानगम्; ङ्: स्वाधिष्ठनगं; YKh (2): षष्ठं (क् ख्: षष्टं) चैव महाशम्भो ब्रह्मग्रन्थौ प्रपूजयेत्।

333. ङ्: सप्त–। As often happens in the Sanskrit of this text, co-ordinative compounds are in the singular number (see above, note to 5/46d). Version B of this quarter is in correct Sanskrit: सप्तमं नवमंयावत् (ख्: यातु); all other MSs except ज्: याव); YKh (2): सप्तमं चाष्टनवमं।
334. All MSs add च।
335. Missing in MSs क् and झ्. Instead of तु पूजयेत् YKh (2) and B read: प्रपूजयेत्।
336. ङ्: –ना।

337. क्: –लो; घ्, च्, छ्: –लं।
338. क्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: द्विपञ्चा; ख्: दिपंचा, ग्, ज्: दिपंच; झ्: द्विपंच; ठ्: ?। This emendation agrees with the reading in version B (i.e. below 50/18c). We find the nominative - द्विपञ्चम् - of the same deviant ordinal below in 23/25c. The cardinal द्विपञ्च appears above in 6/120a. The collective द्विपञ्चकम् functions as such above in 6/121b whereas both in KMT 25/55a and its source TS 15/27a it functions as a cardinal as it does below in KuKh 34/87d although in 9/34a and 56/10d it functions as an ordinal. Here, effectively, it is declined like the ordinal दशम–.

339. Only MSs घ्, छ्, ज् and ठ् read यावद् which is the correct sandhi. All the MSs of version B unanymously confirm the accepted reading. Sandhi is not compulsory. It need not take place, especially at the end of a quarter verse. Cf. 7/88b.

340. Possible direct identification may be meant i.e the tenth to the sixteen Siddhas are bhagamālā. But it is more likely that this is a contraction of the locative –मालायाम्. Cf. below 7/92b where संहिताम् is a contracted form of संहितायाम्.

341. ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –ति। 342. घ्, छ्: –वत्मनि।
343. All MSs: स्थानान्येकादशान्। 344. ठ्: यावद्. Cf. above, 7/87a
345. ख्: –शुब्जिनिह। 346. ठ्: ह्येतद्। 347. ख्: कुलो–; ग्: कुला–; ङ्, ठ्: कुलोनाना; घ्, च्: कुले–। 348. ङ्: –ष। 349. क्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ठ्: स्व
– उल्या। See above, notes to 3/11b and 3/77d. 350. क्, ख्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: उद्यं; ठ्: गु *? उघं। See above, note to 1/5b. 351. All MSs: पूजयन्तिये।
This emendation entails an irregular short sixth syllable. But if this reading is kept as it is, the related verbs in the next line would need to be emended to plurals which would disrupt the metre in two places. The same problem recurs in the following two lines. 352. क्: –रं।

353. All MSs except झ्, ठ्: भूयो। 354. ठ्: ?।

355. ठ्: ?; all other MSs: पूजयन्तिये। Compare this and the following line with the previous two. 356. ठ्: ?। 357. ठ्: संसा *? न्न।

358. All MSs except झ्: –मार्गे। M → N. 359. घ्, छ्: –लं।

360. M → N. 361. घ्: संहिता। संहिताम् appears to be a contraction of the locative संहितायाम्. Cf. above, 7/87b. 362. ठ्: ?।

363. ग्, घ्: पुत्रा। See above, note to 3/108b. This quarter also appears above in 7/62c. 364. All MSs except क्, झ्: नित्र–।

365. See above, note to 3/11b. 366. च्, ठ्: –द।

367. All MSs: समाख्यातं। 368. ङ्: –मालो; ठ्: –मा *?; all other MSs except झ्: मध्यमाली। See above, note to 3/11b. 369. घ्: –यो।

370. ठ्: तृतीयाग्रे च कोणस्था; all other MSs: तृतीयाग्र–।

371. All MSs: ओषमित्राणि। See above, note to 2/28b and 2/45c.

372. झ्, ठ्: ओल्यां प्रकीर्त्तितां; all other MSs: ओल्यां प्रकीर्त्तिता:। Rather than accept lack of concord in both number and gender, I have chosen to emend. But, as hiatus is common in compounds, especially with this word, one wonders whether to emend to त्रि – ओलिषु प्रकीर्तिता:. 373. See above, note to 4/48c.

374. See above, note to 1/11c.

375. See above, note to 1/5a. 376. All MSs: त्रिसिद्धाश्च।

377. All MSs: विद्या। 378. ङ्: जा * ति। 379. च्: पूर्यो।

380. See above, note to 4/3c.

381. ङ्: –पु * स्य; घ्, च्, छ्: –पूर्य *। See above, note to 1/11c.

382. See above, 3/12c and note. 383. ग्: त्रिभि–।

384. घ्: श्लोकानि द्वादश:; ठ्: श्लोकादिद्वादश; all other MSs: श्लोकादि द्वादश:। M → N. See above, notes to 6/67c and 7/9d also cf. 7/11d where we find the same expression but only three MSs read the ordinal द्वादश: and the rest the regular cardinal द्वादश, thus supporting this emendation. 385. All other MSs except क्, ख्: देव्या।

386. ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: व; missing in MS ङ्।

387. All MSs except झ्: –षा। 388. All other MSs except ठ्: –श:। See above, note to 3/108b. 389. All MSs: तु। 390. छ्: * न्वये।

391. ख्: –मार्ग * * * ते। 392. ठ्: –वतारिते Missing in MSs घ्, झ्।

393. ख्, ङ्: परमेश्वरे; च्: –र। 394. ख्: –सहस्त्रं–। 395. घ्, ठ्: अंवा–।

396. All MSs except क्, च्, ज्, ठ्: –वर्णन।

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER SEVEN

1. Verses 8/3-5ab answer question 'what is the Kula scripture?' The reply is that it is the MBT, here called the scripture of the Command. Its descent into the world from the triangular Meru in the End of the Twelve is described here in brief.

2. The term 'Kādibheda' generally refers to the whole Kubjikā scriptural tradition, but in this case it appears to refer to specifically to the MBT, as its primary representative.

3. The first seat is Oḍḍiyāna. See intro. vol. 1, p. 144.

4. The first seat is normally Oḍḍiyāna. Possibly Kāmarūpa may be intended as it is the first seat in this, the Age of Strife (kaliyuga). See 5/15-17 and note.

5. Instead of 'sarvasaṁhāramantritam' - 'consecrated with universal destruction', three manuscripts read 'sarvasaṁhārasaṁbhṛtam' - 'assembled by universal destruction'. Both readings make sense and, as it were, suppliment each other. Originally hidden in the Godhead, the teachings are in the form of the energies of Speech, represented by the letters of the alphabet. Their emission in the form of mantras initiates the creation of the world generated by mantras. Destruction is the reverse of this process. Rising progressively from the lower, outer, grosser levels to the inner, by the utterance of the mantras corresponding to the stations of this ascent, their objective counterpart is consecrated and withdrawn back into the higher, subtler level above it. When this process is complete all the phonemic units of energy that make up the mantras are thus 'assembled' and 'consecrated' in their original source, the Yoni.

6. The Transmission in Twenty-seven Divisions is the main one in the MBT, just as the one in Twenty-eight Divisions is the form of the Transmission (krama) in the KMT.

7. Broadly speaking we can say that verses 7/8ab-56 contain the reply to Śrīnātha's first question namely, 'what is the Western House?' The Western House, also called the House of the Yoginī (7/14cd-15ab), is both Kubjikā's tradition and the Triangle at the End of the Twelve above the head described in the following verses. The Triangle has already been described above in chapter three. Here several new details are added that are not mentioned there. Chapter three focuses on this triangular core of the goddess's maṇḍala as the abode of the Liṅga and Cave where the goddess and the first Siddha receive and transmit the Command. In this chapter the focus is on the Triangle as a symbol of the pleroma from which the teaching and the lineage of teachers proceed.

8. The Western Face is the Liṅga of the goddess (śrīliṅga), which situated in the End of the Twelve, drips the nectar of the consecrating Command (5/66cd-68ab). It is the paścimāmukha, that is, the face or outlet - mukha - of the goddess Paśćimā - the Last or Ultimate One.

9. The three groups of sixteen are 48 Siddhas (see below 7/18-24ab) who represent 48 letters of the alphabet arranged along the sides of the goddess's triangle (see below 7/13-14ab and 7/39). They are the sixteen vowels, the sixteen consonants from Ka to Ta and those from Tha to Sa. These 48 letters are embedded in alphabetical order in the Twelve Verses formed by the conjunction of these three groups. The full form of the mantra called Twelve Verses is recorded above in a note to 3/31-32.

10. The names of the letters projected into the Triangle are listed below in 8/34cd-40ab. There we find that Gajakarṇa is the name of the letter AI. However, Gajendra is the name of the Siddha corresponding to the letter Ca in the list of Siddhas noted below in 7/18-24ab. It is hard to say exactly what is meant here. The goddess's thirty-two syllable Vidyā is commonly said to be the Vidyā that 'begins with Bha and ends with Ca' (see note to 7/51cd-52ab). Recited in the forward order with the addition of the Five Praṇavas at the beginning and the end, it is the Vidyā of the Full Moon (9/58cd-59). The form of Kubjikā's Vidyā which embodies the energy of the New Moon is recited in the reverse order (see note to 8/42cd) and so begins with Ca. As the New Moon is considered to be the source of the energy of the Full Moon it is especially powerful and so may well be intended here.

11. It has not been possible to trace the term 'Peak of Knowledge' (vidyākūṭa) anywhere else in the Kubjikā corpus. But we may nonetheless infer what it is with reasonable certainty. The term 'kūṭa', which means literally 'peak', denotes a type of seed-syllable mantra (see above, note to 3/122). In the following lines it is said to be the 'Self of the goddess' (7/10cd-11ab). As such it is, as one would expect, the seed-syllable form of the goddess who, in the expression 'Peak of Knowledge', is identified with her Vidyā.

There are two such seed-syllables. One is the syllable HSKHPHREṀ and the other AIṀ. The former is said to be 'six-fold' (ṣaḍvidha) (8/75) and is identified with the goddess who is six-fold (ṣaṭprakārā) (see above, 2/9c). Even so, it is more likely that the Peak of Knowledge is the syllable AIṀ. This syllable comes at the beginning of the mantra called Twelve Verses and of each of its twelve parts. Moreover, in an earlier reference the Triangle is said to be located on or in the 'peak' (3/48). Newar initiates draw the syllable AIṀ in the centre of the triangular core of the maṇḍala which may thus be considered to be the 'peak' on which it rests. In the following lines the Peak of Knowledge is described as the Liṅga in the centre of the Triangle (7/10cd-11ab). This is the goddess Vakrā (the Crooked One) herself who is 'facing downwards' (3/51). The main part of the graphic form of the syllable AIṀ is shaped like a downward pointing triangle and so 'faces downwards'. Moreover, as it is 'empty' within, it also aptly symbolizes Śiva's Void that the Peak of Knowledge is said to represent (7/10cd-11ab). Six sacred seats may be projected into it. These include the standard four in the main, triangular portion of the syllable AIṀ and two more in the Half Moon and the Point above. So it too can be said to be 'six-fold'.

12. Why the Peak of Knowledge (vidyākūṭa) is the seed-syllable of water is not clear to me. One could emend 'āpabījaṁ' - 'the seed-syllable of Water' to 'parabījaṁ' - 'the Supreme seed-syllable' which would solve the problem. But rather than do that we may hazard the following explanation. Varuṇa is the deity of the element Water (cf. 13/32). He is the guardian of the west and so the Western Tradition (paścimāmnāya) of the Kubjikā Tantras is associated with him (see below 36/107 and 48/3). It may be for this reason that the Peak of Knowledge, which is the seed-syllable of the goddess and hence particularly associated with the Western Tradition, is said to be the seed-syllable of Water. The association of AIṀ (but not HSKHPHREṀ) with Water is apparent in the link made between this syllable, which is commonly identified with the Yoni, and the primordial Waters. Just as an embryo is immersed in amniotic fluid similarly, prior to its manifestation, the universe is as if immersed in the phonemic energies within the Yoni. Accordingly, the syllable AIṀ is called the Ocean of the Yoni (yonyārṇava) (62/32) as is the Yoni itself (see 39/128 and 58/2).

13. As the triangular syllable AIṀ contains all the energies of the letters, it is the Letter which is all the letters. Empty within, it is Śiva's transcendental Void. It is also, as we have seen, the Liṅga Kaulas worship and so, from that point of view is Śiva. At the same time it is pure energy that contains, emanates and withdraws back into itself all energies and so is the most essential nature of the goddess.

14. This line refers to the divisions of the mantra called the Twelve Verses. It is divided into twelve 'sections' (aṁśa) of thirty-two syllables each. This is the length of one verse in śloka metre which is divided into four parts (pada) of eight syllables each. Moreover, there are forty-eight parts, one for each of the letters from A to Sa. See note to 3/31-32 where this mantra is reproduced in full.

15. The process of 'going and coming' (gamāgama) has already been described (see above, note to 3/124). The deployment of the letters on the sides of the Triangle is explained below in 26/76ff. Essentially, this involves conjoining each letter to the movement of the vital breath. This is in two phases: exhalation and inhalation that correspond to the two phase of the processes of 'going and coming'. They are represented by the last two letters of the alphabet not included in the forty-eight that make up the sides of the triangle. These are the letters Ha and KṢa that encapsulate each letter. The individual letters represent the retention of the breath that takes place between exhalation and inhalation. The three phases of the breath, inhalation, exhalation and retention, are reproduced internally by the three phases of the movement of Kuṇḍalinī in the End of the Twelve that traces the sides of the Triangle. They correspond to the energies of will, knowledge and action (3/124) to which this verse refers as Śiva's will, the Sun and Moon, respectively. Kuṇḍalinī, the energy of Speech (vācchakti), deploys its phonemic energies progressively in these three phases. This dynamism traces out the 'form of the field' (kṣetraparigraha), that is, the outer form of the triangle (see 8/13cd). Candrapura, the complete triangular maṇḍala, is formed by the conjunction of the field with the Liṅga (7/55cd), that is, the Point (bindu) in the centre. In this way it encloses the couple, Bhairava and Bhairavī, in the centre.

The 'form of the field' then, is determined by the sides of the triangle traced out by the inner breathing of Kuṇḍalinī's movement in the End of the Twelve. Impelled by Śiva's will it descends as the lunar breath and ascends as the solar breath. The former deploys the vowels, which are lunar letters, and the latter a part of the consonants, which are solar letters. The intermediate phase in which the breath is suspended between the movement of the ascending and descending breath occurs at both ends of this movement and is governed directly by Śiva's will. It connects the two like the horizontal line of a triangle.

The triangle described here is drawn in the same way, that is, anti-clockwise. Beginning from the top left-hand corner, the first phase of the movement of Kuṇḍalinī is traced by the line that travels down to the bottom corner. This is the diagonal line of the vowels on the left. Then, starting with Ka, the first consonant, the second line travels diagonally upwards. Then, having generated the sixteen consonants up to the letter Ta and reached the original level where the vowels begin, the third line of letters extends horizontally from right to left beginning with the letter Tha and ending with Sa. See diagram in intro. vol. 1, p. 293.

We are told below in 40/133 (see also note 2/16 above), how these three lines correspond to the channels of the vital breath (nāḍī) and the gods and goddesses mentioned in the next verses of this section. Combining these equivalences we can draw up the following table to describe succinctly the 'form of the field', that is, the sides of the triangle representing the Yoni of the goddess and variously called, Meru, the Stone (above 3/31-32), the Heart of the Yoginī (below in 29/22–26), the City of the Moon (7/57ab), the Yonimaṇḍala (7/15cd-16ab) and the House of the Yoginī (7/15ab).

11. Table of the Triads of the form of the Field

Goddess	Energy	Location	Channel	Breath	Luminary	Letters	Gods
Vāmā	Action	Left	Iḍā	Apāna	Moon	Vowels	Brahmā
Jyeṣṭhā	Knowledge	Right	Piṅgalā	Prāṇā	Sun	Ka to Ta	Viṣṇu
Raudrī	Will	Middle	Suṣumṇā	Śiva's will	(Equinox)	Tha to Sa	Maheśvara

16. The MSs read 'kalāṣoḍaśaraśmayaḥ' - 'the sixteen rays of energy'. One could, perhaps, emend to kalāḥ ṣoḍaśaraśmayaḥ - 'the energies are the sixteen rays' in which case the energies would be the letters. But kalā here probably refers to Jyeṣṭhā, the first of the three energies that radiate sixteen rays each in the form of the phonemic energies of her letters.

17. The deity on the left - vāmadevatā - is appropriately called Vāmā.

18. In other words the letters Ka and Ta are at the two ends of the row of phomenic energies that make up the left slanting line of the Triangle.

19. Cf. 26/8, 31/71 and 35/85-86. We may translate the expression 'yoginīgṛha' in two ways. One is as I have done viz. 'the House of the Yoginī'. The Yoginī is Kubjikā herself and so the expression effectively means 'the House of the goddess Kubjikā'. Accordingly, the House of the Yoginī, sometimes also called the Western House of the Yoginī, is one of many names for the Kubjikā tradition.

We may also translate yoginīgṛha as 'the House of the Yoginīs'. The House in this case is the Triangle within which are forty-nine compartments, also called Houses (8/18), containing the letters of the alphabet. From this perspective (that is without considering the letters around the sides), the same Triangle becomes the triangular grid called Meruprastāra described in the following chapter (see also Schoterman 1982: 183 ff.). Externally, on the periphary the House, it is formed by the awakened energy of the letters embedded in the mantra called Twelve Verses (7/23cd-24ab).

The Triangle is thus a matrix of energies in union with their power-holders formed and held together by the union of the three primary energies and their power-holders to which these lines refer. The former are worshipped as Yoginīs (also called devīs) and the latter as Siddhas (also called Bhairavas or Rudras). Both represent the letters. Within the Triangle the Siddhas are those of the letters in the normal alphabetical order of the Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi) and the Yoginīs those in the Mālinī sequence of the alphabet (see chapter 18 and 19 below). Around them are the ones named in the following verses (7/18-31ab). Thus the same triangle can equally well be named after the female or the male components. So here, with the former in mind, it is called the House of the Yoginīs while elsewhere, it is called the House of the Gods (devagṛha) (58/25-26ab) with reference to the latter.

20. The same expression is found below in 7/32cd-33ab.

21. One of the cardinal pinciples symbolized and acted out in ritual in a vast variety of ways in all Tantric traditions is the notion that the most complete condition is a union of opposites (conjunctio oppositorum). We have already witnessed several examples of this principle. Here is another. The essentially female Yoni is fertile and powerful due to the conjunctios that take place within and around it. Here the series of Yoginīs and Siddhas representing the energies and power-holders of the letters are those that make up the boundaries of the Triangle. Their names are listed below (7/24cd-31ab). The Yoginīs are the consorts or wives (patnī) of the Siddhas (7/31cd-32ab). Just as they constitute the 'form of the field' (kṣetraparigraha) (7/12), by the same token they are the 'pure enclosure (parigraha)' of the goddess (7/31cd). In other words, the Yoni, which is the pure form of the goddess, is repleat with Liṅgas both internally (see 58/25cd-26) and on the periphery, each uniting with its female counterpart. Energizing *conjunctio*s thus take place everywhere within and all over the goddess who is the Triangle of the Yoni. All of them together are contained in the one cosmic Yoni in the centre of which is the original, archetypal conjunctio of the god and the goddess that sustains each individual conjuctio (see Dyczkowski 1995-6: 132ff.). The remaining two letters, Ha and KṢa, are also said to be Liṅgas and unite with their energies in the same way.

22. The Siddhas and Yoginīs listed here are those of the letters embedded in the Twelve Verses that line the side of the triangle. They should not be confused with those that inhabit the inside of the triangle. Those Siddhas are listed below in 8/33-40ab.

Only forty-eight out of the fifty Siddhas and Yoginīs are listed here because the Twelve Verses contain only forty-eight letters. The last two, Ha and KṢa, which are said to be Liṅgas (58/22–23ab), are governed by Śiva and Śakti directly whereas the others are considered to be their energies (kalā) (7/13). As the archetype of all male and female polarities, Śiva and Śakti pervade the others and are present within them and so are not counted along with them. Located in the centre of the Triangle (7/34), Śiva governs the Siddhas who surround him (7/38) and Śakti, the Yoginīs. Thus a solitary female presence - Śakti - amongst the forty-nine Siddhas (including Śiva) is sufficient to energize them all. Similarly, Śiva is so potent amongst the corresponding forty-nine Yoginīs that he alone is sufficient to fertilize them all. Thus we can distinguish a series of conjunctios that take place in the Triangle. These are:

1) The union of the Liṅga in the centre with the encompassing Yoni.
2) The union of Śiva and Śakti in the centre.
3) The union of the Siddhas and Yoginīs within and around the Triangle.
4) The union of Śiva with the Yoginīs.
5) The union of Śakti with the Siddhas.

The union of Śiva and Śakti takes place in two modalities. One is transcendental union that leads to anullment. The other is immanent union that heralds emanation. The union of the goddess in her geometric form with the god in his ultimate supreme condition leads to the disappearance of both polarities. This is the 'neuter' absolute beyond the realms of all polarities and their union. The union of Śiva and Śakti in the centre replicates on the level of the Transmental, at the apex of immanence, the total fusion or, one could say, the non-arising, of the polarities in the transcendent beyond. This is the transcendental oneness (sāmarasya) of Śiva and Śakti (see 2/27) which, in a sense, anulls them and the entire maṇḍala. This is the transcendental union of Śiva and Śakti. The immanent union of Śiva and Śakti is symbolized by the image of the goddess sitting next to the god or on his lap. It is not only a way of alluding to their union (see note to 3/63-64ab; cf. 7/52cd-53ab), it also represents the immanent modality of union at the Transmental level in which the polarities persist in order to generate the lower levels through their union.

23. MSs JH and Ṭ read sehārī instead of saṁhārī - the Destructress. The two readings appear to be open choices for the redactors of the Kubjikā Tantras. According to the KMT (16/11a) Sehārī is one of the thirty-two Yoginīs of the Wheel of the Moon (somamaṇḍala), which is a part of the Wheel of the Skyfaring Goddesses (khecarīcakra). But according to both the ṢSS (25/18c) and ŚM (19/212c), where the names of these Yoginīs are also listed, she is called Saṁhārī.

24. See above, note to 7/15cd-16ab.

25. 'Avvāpāda' is an abbreviation of the diction 'avvāpādukāṁ pūjayāmi' - 'I worship the sandals of mother . . . '. Abbreviations of this sort are commonly found in liturgical works of all kinds (see above, note to 2/28) and sometimes carry over, as has happened here, into the Tantras. We find several examples of this particular abbreviation in the other sections (khaṇḍa) of the MBT. For example, concerning a series of mantras dedicated to the Six Yoginīs (the so-called ḍādiṣaṭka) the YKh (1) explains that: 'the (group of) Five Prāṇavas is at the beginning and end. The auspicious avvāpāda is at the end' (pañcapraṇavam ādyantaṁ avvāpādāntagaṁ śubham || 41/145cd). Further ahead in the same text a brief form of the Samayā Vidyā is extracted consisting of only six syllables, thus completing the ancilliary mantras of the Division of Twenty-seven. There comes the injunction: 'Having placed avvāpāda at the end, one should worship the Samayavidyā' (avvāpādāntagaṁ kṛtvā samayavidyāṁ prapūjayet | ibid. 41/265ab).

These simple instructions tell us how to form the mantras by which the Siddhas and Yoginīs (also called goddesses) are worshipped. I presume that this series of mantras, called the Sequence of the Siddhas (siddhakrama), is uttered first. This is followed by the recitation of the Twelve Verses here called the Aggregate of Verses (see note to 3/31-32).

The structure of the mantras used to worship the Siddhas and Yoginīs is as follows: 1) The Five Praṇavas 2) The name of the Siddha 3) The name of the corresponding Yoginī 4) The diction 'avvāpādukāṁ pūjayāmi' - 'I worship the sandals of the mother . . . '. Assuming the form of the Five Praṇavas is the one taught in the KMT, the first mantra, for example is: AIṀ HRĪṀ ŚRĪṀ PHREṀ HSAUṀ ĀNANDAŚARVARĪ-AVVĀPĀDUKĀṀ PŪJAYĀMI

26. The Triangle is full of the letters of the alphabet. We shall see in detail in the following chapter how they are arranged within it in such a way that Ha, the last letter of the alphabet, is in the centre. As there are only forty-nine compartments in the triangle there is no room inside the triangle for the conjunct consonant KṢa and so it is placed below the centre. This is represented graphically as an extra compartment extending out from the middle of the straight horizontal side of the triangle. In this way Śiva, represented by the letter Ha, is on top of Śakti who is represented by the conjunct consonant KṢa.

27. Maitreya is a derivative of the name Mitra given to Bhairava when he, as Ādinātha (4/40-41ab), otherwise known as Siddhanātha (4/50cd-51ab), received the goddess's empowering Command. Thus Kucandra, like Vṛkṣanātha (7/66cd-67ab), is one of the names of Bhairava, the first teacher and Kubjikā's consort in which capacity he appears in several places (e.g. 6/181cd-182ab) As one would expect, he is identified with Navātman Bhairava (69/14-15) as is Vṛkṣanātha (29/29-30ab). His full name - Kucandraśekharānanda - means '(he who experiences) the Bliss of the Moon of KU on the crown (of his head)'. KU is an abbreviation of the goddess's name.

Kubjikā herself declares that she is the Moon (7/55cd-56ab). She emerges from the god's body in the form of the Moon (7/51cd-52ab). Kucandra is Navātman Bhairava, the consort of the Kubjikā, the goddess of the Moon. Above his head, she radiates her divine lunar light. He presides over the inner Moon, the sixth and highest sacred seat (68/23). He is also the lord of Trisrota, the fifth seat represented by the lunar Point (bindu) that adorns the Triangle in the End of the Twelve (6/211cd–212ab) in which he resides along with the goddess (6/181cd-182ab).

Note that in this case the goddess is above the god. She is the Transmental whereas he is said to emerge from the Equal One (samanā), which is just one level below it. As the lower stages are generated by the higher ones, he is said to be born from her will (69/15), thus reversing the usual order of emanation. Normally the goddess is generated from him as his will (icchā). The reason for the reversal is clear. Although Kucandra is the god, he assumes the identity of a yogi who gazes upwards to contemplate the goddess in the End of the Twelve above him. The lunar light, and with it the nourishing and blissful lunar nectar (amṛta) that comes from her, empowers the yogi who, identified with the god, is born from the goddess just as the goddess was originally born from the god. At the same time, Kucandra, represented by the letter Ha, unites with the goddess who is represented by the letter KṢa in the centre of the maṇḍala. Thus he is also a form of Bhairava, identified with the First Siddha who is in union with the goddess.

28. See note to the Sanskrit text.

29. In other words, the text teaches that the goddess's Vidyā, encapsulated by the Five Praṇavas, should be recited together with the letters Ha and KṢa.

Possibly these two letters should also be enclosed in the Five Praṇavas. If so, as is usually done, they should probably be in the forward order in front of the letter and in the reverse order at the end. If we take the form of the Five Praṇavas to be the one in the KMT, we get: AIṀ HRIṀ ŚRĪṀ PHREṀ HSAUḤ HA HSAUḤ PHREṀ ŚRĪṀ HRĪṀ AIṀ AIṀ HRIṀ ŚRĪṀ PHREṀ HSAUḤ KṢA HSAUḤ PHREṀ ŚRĪṀ HRĪṀ AIṀ.

30. The expression 'House of the Peak syllables (kūṭaveśman)' is not common. Santānabhuvana, the beautiful mountain resort of Bhairava, is 'on the summit of (mount) Trikūṭa' (KMT 1/2b and ṢSS 1/6b). Trikūṭa literally means 'Three Peaks'. Projected internally, the three peaks of this mountain are represented by the three Peak seed-syllables (kūṭa) at the corners of the Triangle. The play on words is obvious and extends easily to the whole Triangle. Below we are told that: 'the abode of all the Siddhas is within the Three Peaks, that is, in the Western House' (ālayaṁ sarvasiddhānāṁ trikūṭe paścime gṛhe | 57/21ab). We may conclude that kūṭaveśman is short for trikūṭaveśman and that this is the Triangle in the corners of which are three 'peaks' i.e. seed syllable mantras. Thus the text instructs that the letters Ha and KṢa, along with the Five Praṇavas, should be projected together into the Triangle to represent the union of Śiva and Śakti in the centre of it.

31. Below (see 7/48-50ab) we are told that the Vidyā in the middle of the Triangle is that of the Full Moon. This is the Vidyā of Mahantārikā. It is formed by adding the Five Praṇavas in the forward order to the beginning of Kubjikā's thirty-two syllable Samayā Vidyā and at the end, in reverse (9/59).

32. See note to 5/30.

33. The centre, which is the highest (or 'deepest') point of the Yoni (here called bhaga), is situated at the level of the Transmental. Beyond it is the supreme transcendental state in which the opposites, Śiva and Śakti, fuse into one.

34. The text reads svādhi which is a common abbreviation for the Wheel (cakra) in the body called s*vādhiṣṭhāna* - the Self-supported. Similarly, pūraka is an abbreviation of maṇipūraka, that is, maṇipura - the City of Gems - which is the Wheel above it located in the navel.

35. Cf. 3/13-14ab and 7/43cd-44ab.

36. In here inactive state, Kuṇḍalinī is commonly depicted as a coiled, sleeping snake waiting to be awakened. Here she appears as the Knot of Brahmā, ready to be loosened. Just as Kuṇḍalinī has two aspects corresponding to the raised (ūrdhva) and lowered (adhaḥ) forms (see note to 7/50cd-51ab) there are, as one would expect, two Knots of Brahmā, one supreme (para) and the other lower (apara). The raised form of Kuṇḍalinī who 'curved like an elephant goad' is the supreme form of the Knot of Brahmā (19/84) is the 'Command of the Wheel of the Krama' that is, the Kramamaṇḍala, in the End of the Twelve, the core of which is the Triangle. Below we read (64/43):

The Bhairavī of the letters of the Triangle is in the space of the letters of the Siddhaliṅgas. She is Śavarī of the Siddhaliṅgas and the Knot of Brahmā on the supreme plane (of existence).

The lower Knot of Brahmā, described in this verse, is the first of three Knots. The other two are those of Viṣṇu and Rudra. The three correspond to the Sun, Fire and Moon and are located below the navel, the heart and between the eyebrows, respectively (see Ṭīkā MS K fl. 171b-172a quoted below in note to 25/36cd-37). The sonic form of the Knot of Brahmā is the first of the Five Praṇavas in the body (see 40/61-62ab; 60/31-32ab and 62/20-21ab), that is, the syllable AIṀ, which is also the syllable of the goddess in the centre of the upper Triangle. As the Transmental 'facing downwards' she rests in her own nature until she descends into the body transporting her vital energy down into the lower Knot of Brahmā between the Wheels of the Self-supported and the City of Gems (maṇipura) where she assumes her coiled form and rests, unmanifest, hidden within it (38/31ab) as the pure vitality of life (62/20-21ab).

When the will, held fast in the lower Knot of Brahmā, relinquishing its downward, descending orientation, faces upwards (40/61-2ab) it sets out on the return journey back up to ultimately merge into its original source. In this way, the same energy that binds by descending frees by ascending. A binding Knot in the lower state, the goddess is the nexus or 'knot' of energies gathered together in her ascent into the liberating energy of the Transmental in the raised state. There, at the extremity of the pure energy of the will, the Knot of Brahmā (brahmagranthi) is finally undone and Kuṇḍalinī merges into Śiva (19/84). Thus the two conditions, lower and upper, are juxtaposed. They are equivalent and operate analogously in their respective and contrary domains. The one confined and the other unlimited; one energizing the individual, the other the universal; one immanent, the other transcendent. The two domains are connected by Kuṇḍalinī who straight and 'facing downwards' descends from above and 'facing upwards' ascends from below to assume her coiled form - the Knot of Brahmā - at the extremities of her 'going and coming' (see above, notes to 3/124 and 7/12).

37. After describing the state of the energy of the goddess in the lower Knot of Brahmā, the text continues with a description of her raised condition and what happens when she rises.

38. The Half Wheel (ardhacakra) is, it seems, the Triangle (see below 7/45cd-46). A similar name for the Triangle is khaṇḍacakra, which literally means 'the Wheel of the Fragment'. Abhinavagupta quotes a line in the PTv from a section of what he calls the 'Śrīkubjikāmata' that deals with khaṇḍacakra. As this reference is not found in the printed edition of the KMT, it is possible that the word 'mata' here means just 'teaching' or 'school'. At any rate, there is no reason to doubt that it was drawn from another Kubjikā Tantra or an earlier version of the KMT. It says: ‘above Māyā is Mahāmāyā which is the bliss of the Triangle’ (PTv p. 64). We may infer from the context that Abhinava implies that the Triangle is khaṇḍacakra. Admittedly, the identification of the Triangle with Mahāmāyā is not common in the Kubjikā sources but it does occur, for example, in the following reference from the AS (25/65c) where the Half Wheel is similarly identified with Mahāmāyā, the higher 'divine' aspect of Māyā. There we read: ‘she is the goddess Koṅkaṇā, the energy of nectar (madhu lit. 'honey') who oozes into the divine Half Wheel of Māyā’ (devī sā koṅkaṇā yā (vā) kṣarati madhukalā divyamāyārdhacakre).

39. Literally the `Hearth and Ball'. In the centre of the triangle is the Point, here called the Kadamba Tree and described as the union of the female (kuṇḍa) and male (gola) seed.

40. The goddess Raudrī, who is present within all things, animate and inanimate, is said to be like a flame on the wick of a lamp (dīpavartiśikhā raudrī vartamānā carācare | YKh (1) 42/114cd). Similarly, after describing the Point (bindu) in the centre our text (13/117-118ab) goes on to explain that:

> Within that is the Vidyā who is Parā, the Supreme Goddess. She is Energy (śakti) in (her) terrible (bhīma) aspect, Mind Beyond Mind (manonmanī) (whose) form is Light. Horrific (ghorā), she burns without smoke, (like) the flame on the wick of a lamp.

The wick of this lamp is the Command (30/84), which is Bhairava's deity (58/42cd). The Wick is the goddess called 'Triangle' (triṣkoṇā) who is the imperishable energy of the deity (śakti) within the Triangle (30/59). This Flame (śikhā) which is like 'the flame of a lamp' is Kuṇḍalinī who emerges from the centre of the navel where she is present as a pin point of radiant energy, like the spark of a fire (31/57). When she reaches the summit of her ascent she resumes her original elevated place within the Point in the centre of the Triangle at the End of the Twelve.

The Point (bindu) that crowns seed-syllable mantras, full of energy, is also said to be like the tip of a flame (śikhāśekhara) that burns intensely with the Wick of the Command (8/93-94 and 21/12-13ab). The sound, resonance and finally pure, silent phonemic energy of the seed-syllable rises up from the base of the body until, at the climax of its ascent, it attains the supreme stage of its development in the End of the Twelve, which is described as follows:

> Then next, within the Supreme Void (vyoman) (comes) the Transmental whose nature is the teaching (mata). Her form like the wick of a lamp, she pours forth. Practice (thus).

tataḥ paraṁ pare [k, kh: tare] vyomni unmanā matarūpiṇī [k, kh: -nī] |

dīpavartinibhākārā ullasantī samabhyaset || YKh (2) 29/14.

The Wick of the Command burns with a 'flame without smoke' in the End of the Twelve. But below it, according to the ṢSS, there is a thin trail of smoke, called the Wick of Smoke (dhūmravarti) (see intro. vol. 1, p. 378 ff.). This rises up for a distance of twelve fingers from the Great Cavity (mahārandhra) of Brahmā (brahmarandhra) on the crown of the head (ṢSS 28/4). It marks the stations of the ascent of the Fire of Kuṇḍalinī through the higher levels of disembodied consciousness up to the Transmental where even the most subtle traces of impurity have been burnt away. There, finally, it burns 'without smoke'. Represented graphically within the Point by the 'plough-shaped' Wick of the Command, this Fire is the energy of the New Moon hidden within the Full Moon.

41. Above in 3/13-14ab we are told that the Liṅga faces downwards within the Yoni. The Liṅga, the goddess and the Command are the same reality, which is represented by the syllable AIṀ.

42. The goddess in the centre of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is the Command. She is the power of bliss and is said to be 'pleasingly horrific' (subhīmā) (1/1a). She faces downwards ready to penetrate down through the Wheels. When she is known and the Command is thereby attained, Kuṇḍalinī rises piercing through the Void in the centre of the Wheels arranged along the axis of the subtle body transporting the individual soul up through them.

43. Shaking and the other signs of Kuṇḍalinī's penetration through the Wheels are discussed in detail below in the notes to 33/47-49. See also 13/101cd-102 where eleven such signs are listed of which the first three are the ones mentioned here. These and other signs of attainment (pratyaya) appear in the course of Kaula initiation due to the rise of Kuṇḍalinī.

We have seen (intro. vol. 1, p. 49-50) that the manner in which the deity affects and relates to the initiate in the Kaula mode of practice is akin to possession or 'penetration' by demonic beings and ghosts. Positive possession by the deity stimulates Kuṇḍalinī's ascent while negative possession by demons and ghosts causes the same energy to descend (cf. TĀ 29/237-239ab quoted in note to 31/11ab). The upward penetrating movement of Kuṇḍalinī is elevating and leads to liberation. The other, demonic possession, on the contrary leads down to 'entry into the lower regions'.

Kuṇḍalinī can rise in two ways, either progressively, step by step or instantaneously. In the latter modality there are no types or forms of penetration, no gradations or stages. The adept who is fit for it recognizes in a flash of insight that the lower Kuṇḍalinī and the upper are equally the one Command. In other words, he realises that the goddess present in the body in a seemingly confined, latent state is the infinite, transcendental energy of the deity. This grace or 'descent of energy' (śaktipāta), unmediated and without gradations, is the most intense. The initial shaking, possession and trembling, which are signs of the awakening of Kuṇḍalinī, are immediately followed by her sudden and powerful rise. In a flash she reaches her upper place of rest and the individual soul, penetrated by the flux of energy, is transported upwards and conjoined with Śiva.

44. The letters that fill the triangle of Meru are governed by the Rudras (also called Siddhas or Bhairavas) who constitute the body of Bhairava, the Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi). The first of these is Śrīkaṇṭha who governs the letter A (see Schoterman 1981: 218-219 and the tables relating to chapter 19 below). Extracted from the parts of Bhairava's body, they are progressively deployed in the Triangle, which is referred to here as the Half Wheel (see note to 7/41cd-42ab). Once the phonemic energies have been projected inside the Triangle, the letters of the mantra called Twelve Verses are extracted from them and projected onto the sides of the Triangle.

The Wheel of Emanation in the middle of the Triangle is, presumably, the Point (bindu) in the centre, that is, the seminal, lunar Drop of the Command. This emerges from the goddess who presides over the path of emanation that is emitted from the Drop along which the Krama is transmitted and the universe is created.

45. The context tells us quite clearly that this is yet another name for the Triangle. The goddess is Gesture (mudrā) and so in this case the Gesture of the Yoni is the goddess of the Yoni or the goddess who is the Yoni.

46. Although the Seat of Yoga to which the verse we are examining is referring may be the whole maṇḍala or its triangular core, it is more likely that this is not the Seat of Yoga meant here. As a part may represent the whole, the Seat of Yoga (yogapīṭha) is also the name of the compartment in the bottom corner of the Triangle where Kāmarūpa is located from which the teachings in the present Age of Strife have issued (see below 8/19). Thus the Ṭ (MS K fl. 53b) declares that: ‘the Seat of Yoga (yogapīṭha) is Kāmarūpa (kāmaru) which should be worshipped. By saying this the entire transmission (krama) is alluded to so that it may be worshipped’ (yogapīṭham iti kāmarupīṭhaṁ pūjyam [k kh: pūjyām] ity uktena samastakramasya ākṣepaṁ pūjanārthe [kh: pūjanārthaṁ] kṛtam).

The goddess's power of Speech streams down from here in the form of the teachings that are accordingly said to proceed from KĀ (kādi), that is, Kāmarūpa. We have seen that each of the compartments in the Triangle correspond to a sacred site where the Siddha and Yoginī of the letter of that compartment reside and through which the energy of Kuṇḍalinī travels. Just as the point of exit in the phase of Kuṇḍalinī's descent is the first of these compartments, the Yogapīṭha, it is also the first to be filled with the energy that rises up from below.

47. Cf. 7/36cd-37ab.

48. The goddess of the Full Moon is Mahantārikā whose Vidyā is formed by reciting Kubjikā's Samayā Vidyā along with the Five Praṇavas (see 8/91, 9/30ff and 9/58cd-59). This is the path of emanation (sṛṣṭi), just as the New Moon (see note to 8/42cd) is that of withdrawal. Propense to emanation she is 'facing downwards' and rests there in the centre, the location of the first sacred seat, from which the teachings are transmitted and the universe is emitted. The goddess's 'anti-clockwise rotation' is the dynamism of emanation (sṛṣṭi). Inwardly impelling it, the goddess 'exercises authority', that is, exerts her power (sāmarthya).

49. Kashmiri Śaivites, drawing from the teachings of the Tantras of other schools, distinguish between two aspects of Kuṇḍalinī namely, a lower form (adhaḥkuṇḍalinī) and an upper, raised form (ūrdhvakuṇḍalinī). Although this distinction is not explicitely formulated in this way in the Kubjikā Tantras, it is nonetheless an important feature of the teachings concerning Kuṇḍalinī and her activity. The upper Kuṇḍalinī is in the End of the Twelve and operates there within the triangle of Meru. The lower Kuṇḍalinī, is within the Wheels and channels of the vital breath of the body. The two aspects of Kuṇḍalinī mirror one another, just as the lower domain of the subtle 'yogic' body is mirrored in a 'transcendental' form in the triangle of Meru at its summit (cf. note to 7/40cd-41ab). All that takes place and exists in one modality is represented in the other. We have already noted, for example, that the sides of the Triangle are the three energies or aspects of the goddess identified with the Transmental (unmanī) namely, Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī. These three energies are also those that operate through the three major channels of the vital breath in the body, that is, Iḍā, Piṅgalā and Suṣumṇā. In the same way, the energies of the letters that are in the triangle of Meru are also found in the six Wheels, arranged along the axis of the body. The Command, which is the energy of Kuṇḍalinī in her raised or 'upper' form, moves in an anti-clockwise spiral round the compartments within the triangle of Meru and so activates her own phonemic energies. In this way each compartment becomes the fertile Yoni of the corresponding Yoginī with which the Siddha of that letter unites. The Command thus empowers the residents of each compartment, giving them authority through their union to carry out their function as building blocks that, extracted one by one, are welded together to form mantras. As the source of the domain of Speech in this way, the goddess is the Nameless (anāmā) Transmental beyond it. The End of the Nameless, the final, highest extremity of her extension, marks the completion of her spiral motion up into transcendental Śiva that unfolds from the end of the alphabet where her grosser energies manifest.

The same takes place within the lower domain of the 'yogic' body. Moving upwards through the Wheels in the body with the same anti-clockwise motion, she is the energy that awakens (bodhanī). Moving in the opposite direction, that is, in a downward clockwise spiral, she obstructs (nirodhanī) (40/79cd-80ab). The highest Wheel, as we have seen (3/108), contains the sixteen energies of the vowels. It is the Wheel of the Nameless (3/114) corresponding to the liberated state Beyond the Fourth. Spiraling through this Wheel, that is, through the vowels in reverse, the Nameless Kuṇḍalinī reaches the End of the Nameless. This is the energy Anāmā whose name literally means both '(she who) is without name' and '(she whose) name is (the letter) A'. So 'anāmānta' means both 'at the end of (the goddess) Anāmā' and 'at the end of the (letter) called A'. The ascending spiral through the Wheels of the body ends with the letter A in the Wheel of the Nameless. The spiral in the triangle above also ends with the letter A, which is in the bottom corner of the downward facing triangle.

Reaching thus the End of the Nameless, the Kulakrama, that is, the sequence of the energies of Kula, is completed and with it the process of awakening and the burning away of impurities, which is the fulfilment of the teachings, the practice and the tradition, all of which are the Kulakrama. Thus the Command, which is the Nameless Transmental is accomplished both in the sense that its task is fulfilled and the adept, identified with Śiva is fully realised. The next stage is the descent of this lunar energy that pours down its life-giving nectar as it does so (see below 13/135-136).

50. The expression 'bhākārādicakārāntā' - 'beginning with the letter Bha and ending with the letter Ca' is a common way of referring to the goddess's Samayā Vidyā which, although it does begin with the Bha, ends with CCe. Two examples of this usage are found below in 27/50a and 30/65a. This is the forward order of the Vidyā, which recited with the Five Praṇavas is the Vidyā of the Full Moon (9/58cd-59). Recited in the reverse order it is that of the New Moon (8/42cd ff.) and so is said to begin with Ca (see above 7/9cd-10ab and note). The latter embodies in sonic form the rise of Kuṇḍalinī from 'below' that burns away impurities. The former is the descent from 'above' of the risen Kuṇḍalinī that fills the subtle body with nourishing and vitalizing lunar nectar. In this way the Vidyā, in its two forms, has 'emerged above and below'. The luminous igneous energy of Kuṇḍalinī present in the Wheels is commonly likened to the illumining flame of a lamp (see note to 7/42cd-43ab). Three such flames are described below in chapter thirty-six that burn in the Wheel of the Foundation (36/28), the Heart (36/68-9) and the End of the Twelve (36/77cd-78ab; see also 13/16). The verse we are examining is concerned with the third and highest of these three flames. This is one of the two forms in which goddess abides in the End of the Twelve. She is both the Triangle filled with the fifty phonemic energies and the Vidyā that burns like a flame in the centre. The following passage is found in both versions of the YKh. The first recension (labelled 1) emphasises the latter and the second (labelled 2), the former:

Listen, O Lord, to this secret, the teaching concerning the goddess's (Vidyā of) thirty-two (syllables) (2: the excellent grid of the Vidyā). Beginning with Bha and ending with Ca, this is the excellent lunar means. Your Five Praṇavas are at the beginning and they have also emerged at the end. The New Moon is in the centre of the Full (Moon) and at the end she is said to be the First Lunar Day.

Maheśvarī, the goddess Flame (Śikhā) is within the three corners of the (Triangle called) Three Peaks (trikūṭa) (2: she is endowed with the seven parts (of the Meruprastāra). The Command of Kubjikā (Kukārā), who is the mistress of the Wheel and the leader of the Siddhas, is said to be there. She has come from the sequence of Meru adorned with the fifty letters. Beginning with Necter (i.e. the letter A) and ending with the letter Ha, she abides having pervaded Meru. (2: The divine sequence (krama) beginning with the letter A and ending with the letter KṢa faces downwards).

śṛṇu nātha rahasyedaṁ devyā dvātriṁśanirṇayam (2: vidyāprastāram uttamaṁ) ||
bhakārādicakārāntaṁ saumeyaṁ karaṇottamam (2: karaṇaṁ śubhaṁ) |
ādau te praṇavāḥ pañca ante te 'pi visarpitāḥ ||
amā pūrṇe tu madhyasthā ante pratipadā smṛtā |
śṛṅgatrayatrikūṭasthā śikhā devī maheśvarī (2: saptakhaṇḍasamanvitā) | [. . .]
kukārājñā smṛtā tatra (2: kukārā kakārā sā smṛtā khañjī) cakreśī siddhanāyikā (1: -nāyīkā) ||
sā ca merukramāyātā pañcāśākṣarabhūṣitā |
amṛtādihakārāntā meruṁ vyāpya vyavasthitā || (2: akārādikṣakārāntaṁ kramaṁ divyaṁ hy adhomukham) YKh (1) 16/9cd-11, 14-15ab (= YKh (2) 14/9-11ab, 13cd-14).

'Form' is the object of sight, the sensation (tanmātra) corresponding to the gross element Fire. I suppose that the Vidyā of Form, a term I have not been able to trace elsewhere, is the goddess embodied in her Vidyā in its essential energetic and luminous form as Kuṇḍalinī in the Wheels of the subtle body and in her most elevated state. In the latter condition she shines in the centre of the triangle of Meru adorned with the fifty letters that, as aspects of her own energy fill it, and so pervaded by her is illumined by the flame of her energy.

Note that in this case, the entire Vidyā is said to burn in the centre. The goddess may also appear in the centre of the maṇḍala in her seed-syllable form that, burning like the flame of a lamp, is identified with the Liṅga and the goddess's tree (see below, 8/77 and note).

51. See above, verse 3/39 where the Vidyā is depicted in the same way sitting close to Śambhu, that is, in union with him (see note to 3/63-64ab). Also 7/35-36ab where Kubjikā, here called Mālinī, is similarly described as siting next to Kucandraśekhara Bhairava.

52. The activity of the Vidyā has lite, as it were, the flame of the lamp of the goddess's energy that attains fullness in the centre of the Triangle in the End of the Twelve. Here, the risen Kuṇḍalinī is Mālinī, the Full Moon (cf. 7/55-56) portrayed together with the god whose divine attributes she too possesses. Thus below the goddess declares: ‘O god! I, Mālinī, am the goddess who is next to him and, endowed with his attributes and form (mūrti), am auspicious' (19/82). Originally, transcendental, formless (niṣkala) Śiva is the solitary deity in the centre of the Triangle (7/38). By the rise of Kuṇḍalinī within him, the goddess, who is the embodiment of the Command and its sacred authority, develops progressively, as it were, as do the digits of the inner Moon to finally emerge with 'full authority' from the transcendent god as the energy of his omnipotent will embodied in the Full Moon. Thus the god, seemingly diminished by the outpouring of his energy, is again empowered and authorized by the goddess to assume the role of her consort, Kucandra (cf. above 7/35-36ab). In other contexts, the god Assembly of Sounds (śabdarāśi) is portrayed as the male counterpart of the goddess Mālinī. In this way the couple embody the deities of the phonemes and their energies. Similarly here, the mantra called Twelve Verses, that contains the phonemes, is the god who is the consort of Mālinī, the deity of the Krama. They are Śiva and Śakti, represented, respectively, by the letters Ha and KṢa (7/34-35ab). These are two 'paths', namely, the path of the male Twelve Verses that lines the sides of the Triangle along with the letter Ha, and the path of the goddess Mālinī along with the letter KṢa. They unite in the centre to generate their sacred offspring, the Kaula lineage of teachers and with them the transmission of the teachings that proceeds out from the centre down into the body and the outer world.

53. These two verses describe the structure, formation and identity of the City of the Moon - Candrapura, the maṇḍala of the goddess. It consists of two parts, namely, 'candra', the Moon and 'pura', the City. The City is the 'enclosure of the field' (kṣetraparigraha) that consists of the sides of the triangle of Meru formed by the Twelve Verses (7/11-12). The Moon is the goddess Kubjikā, also called Ciñciṇī who governs and is the source of authority in the triangular maṇḍala of the City of the Moon. She is the Liṅga, the support of the Kula. Kula in this case is the Triangle understood as an aggregate of energies embodied in the Siddhas and Yoginīs who like a family (kula) work together under the direction of the goddess and the god, the leaders (nāyikā and nāyaka) of the Kula. These two, the Liṅga and the field, the centre and the periphery, the contained and the container, the goddess and the god, their functions and attributes reversed and exchanged, unite to form the maṇḍala.

This verse concludes the exposition of the maṇḍala. It also introduces the second part of this chapter that is dedicated to the outpouring of the maṇḍala, that is, the Command of the goddess embodied in the teaching of the Western Tradition along with the lineage of the teachers through which it is transmitted.

54. The name of the Triangle - Candrapura (the City of the Moon) - has been altered to Candrapūrṇa, which means 'full of the Moon'. By reversing the order of the components of this compound we get pūrṇacandra, which means 'the Full Moon'. And this is indeed the maṇḍala of the Full Moon repleate with all the lunar energies of the goddess.

The events that attend the origin of the Western Tradition (paścimāmnāya) are those that take place in the same fecund womb of blissful energy from which all things originate. Occurring perpetually in the semper eternum of the perennial source of all things, they are not events set in time and space. Even so, the origin and development of the Western Tradition also possesses a concrete temporal and geographical dimension that is never denied or neglected. Accordingly, the 'mortal' City of the Moon is distinguished from the Triangle in the End of the Twelve even as the former serves as a channel for the latter by which the teachings come into the world during the Age of Strife.

55. The MSs read U for Uḍḍīśanātha but I have emended this to the standard abbreviation O (see above note to 2/28, cf. 2/45) for Oḍḍīśanātha or Oḍḍīśa, which is the form of the name found further ahead in this chapter (7/94cd-97ab) and in most cases in our text (see note to the Sanskrit text of 2/28ab).

56. Here and in other places only the three Siddhas who are the founders of the three lineages (oli/uli) are mentioned (for example see above 2/28 and below 7/95cd-98ab). They are also said to be four. See for example, 46/40-41.

57. The Command is 'stamped' or 'sealed' within the being to whom it is transmitted.

58. Cf. above 6/224cd-225ab.

59. Gagana, the first of the Nine Siddhas, whose original name was Vikrama, is said to have come from the city of Puṇḍravardhana in Bengal (see intro. vol. 2, p. 542). Three of these Siddhas (also called Nāthas) taught the beings who reside in the celestial region, three in the netherworld and three in the world of men (see 7/68cd-69ab and 7/71cd-74ab). This triadic division is common to all accounts. Here a significant detail is added not found elsewhere. The middle region, that is, the world of men is identified with Pūrṇagiri in Koṅkaṇa.

60. KuKh 7/63cd-64ab = KuKh 5/46cd-47ab.

61. The First Nātha is Vṛkṣanātha (see 7/67cd-68ab) who teaches in Koṅkaṇa as do his emanations, namely, first the three and then the nine Siddhas. Three of the latter had sixteen disciples. The Convention of the Flower is the Divine Current of eighteen Siddhas who teach in the eighteen stages of descent from the Transmental down to the world of men. The last of this series of inner teachers is Śrīnātha (2/21cd-25, 57/27,75cd-76ab) who, also called Ciñciṇīnātha and here Vṛkṣanātha, is the First Nātha from whom originate the three lineages.

62. Instead of bījojjhite yathā kṣetre - 'just as in a field devoid of seed', the KuKauM reads: ūṣare tu yathā kṣetre - 'just as in a field with saline soil'.

63. This and the previous verse correspond to KuKauM 1/14-15.

64. These verses are introduced in the AS (8/42cd-43ab) with the statement: 'She, Trikhaṇḍā Bhairavī, is Carcikā, the deity of the Kula. Her son is the great yogi, Mahābhairava by name' (trikhaṇḍā bhairavī yā sā carcikā kuladevatā || tasyāḥ (tasya) putro mahāyogī mahābhairavanāmataḥ |)

Lines 7/68cd-74 correspond to AS 8/43cd-51 with one major change. This is verse 7/70 in which the names of the Nine Nāthas appear. It is replaced by a verse in sragdharā in which the same nine are listed but with different names. Similarly, in lines 7/75cd-77ab the pūjā names of the sixteen Nāthas are listed. Here the AS agrees with the KuKauM in which the caryā names of the sixteen are listed.

65. Instead of 'is famous as Vṛkṣanātha' the AS reads 'is accompanied by the three Siddhas'.

66. KuKh 7/68-69ab correspond to YKh (2) 17/6cd-7. See YKh (2) 15/81-87ab and Ṭ MS K fl. 179a-179b quoted ibid.

67. The three are authorized to teach in this world (bhūloka KuKauM 1/90-91ab).

68. Above we are told that out of the Nine Siddhas Gagana, Padma and Kamala were the teachers in the mortal world (7/72cd-73ab). In other words, they were the three teachers of the Sixteen Siddhas. The following verses tell us indirectly that Gagana and the other two each belonged to one of the three lineages (oli) and, so their respective disciples must belonged to the same ones. These may be tabulated as follows:

12. Table of Teachers, Lineages and Disciples

Teacher	Lineage	Disciples
Gaganadeva	Jyeṣṭholi	Sūra, Tīvra, Khecarya, Garbhamukta, Jaya Vijayamitra, Vīra
Padmadeva	Madhyamoli	Siṁhaka
Kamaladeva	Bāloli	The Five Pure Ones, Ratnakeśava, Unmattamudrā, Srotāvaha

69. At first sight it appears that this verse refers to the three groups of sixteen Siddhas mentioned in the preceding verses but if that were the case it is hard to make this statement square with what has been said up to here. The three Siddhas came into the world in the beginning of the Kali Age (1/2c). The descent (avatāra) of the teachings takes place in the Age of Strife (7/56-57ab). This is when the sacred seats or 'hermitages' (āśrama) of the Siddhas of the three lineages (uli/oli) were founded (7/56-57ab) and the transmission is divided into three in Koṅkaṇa (7/63cd-64ab). As Vṛkṣanātha is the First Siddha of the three lineages (7/66cd-67ab) he attained this status in the Kali Age. The Nine Siddhas, the spiritual sons of Vṛkṣanātha, also belong to the Age of Strife (7/66cd-67ab) as do the Sixteen Siddhas (7/74cd-76ab). Indeed, all of this took place then (7/87cd-88ab).

We may conclude, therefore, that the Lineage of Siddhas begins with the First Siddha. This is preceded by the Lineage of Teachers (gurvogha), otherwise known as the Convention of the Flowers that extends from the Transmental down to Ādinātha, the First Siddha (7/63cd-64ab). As Kubjikā is the Transmental perhaps this is Vakrikā's lineage. The Supreme Lineage is possibly the direct one between the god and the goddess beyond the Transmental.

70. See intro. vol. 2, p. 533-4. The names of the 163 disciples are listed in the Ṭ MS K fl. 184a. 71. Lines 7/84-85ab are repeated below as 50/16-18.

72. The Wheel or maṇḍala of the Foundation is the location of the second Siddha. It is possible, therefore, that our text prescribes that the second Siddha should be worshipped a second time after the worship of the Siddhas in the Wheel of Maṇipura in the navel. But there seems to be no reason to do this. All the other Siddhas are worshipped only once. Possibly, no Siddha is specified in order to avoid this anomaly or simply the text is corrupt. According to the text as it stands, after the rise from the Foundation in base of the spine to Maṇipura in the navel, there is a descent to the Foundation followed by an ascent to the Wheel of the Self-supported between the base of the spine and the navel. From there there is a leap onto the plane Beyond the Fourth in the End of the Twelve. The variant version in YKh (2) (15/91cd-93) does not refer to the descent from Maṇipura in the navel, but this may simply be because the readings of the manuscripts are less corrupt or the redactor of the version in the KuKh made a mistake. There is one other difference between the two versions. The KuKh says that the sixth Siddha should be worshipped in Wheel of the Self-supported whereas in YKh (2) (15/93ab) the goddess says: 'O great Śambhu, the sixth should be worshipped in the Knot of Brahmā' (ṣaṣṭhaṁ caiva mahāśambho brahmagranthau prapūjayet). Above, the Knot of Brahmā is said to be located between the Wheel of the Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna) and the City of Jewels (maṇipura) (7/39cd-40ab). It is possible, however, that according to the YKh (2) the Knot of Brahmā corresponds to the Wheel of the Self-supported itself. Either way, we have seen that the Knot of Brahmā is Kuṇḍalinī and that there are two, one below and the other above in the centre of the Triangle which is the symbolic location of the state Beyond the Fourth. the Knot of Brahmā, which is the inner connection between these two aspects of Kuṇḍalinī, could account for the sudden jump between these two levels (see note to 7/86cd-87ab).

The following table records the inner locations of the three groups of Nine Siddhas who teach in the lower netherworld, the middle human world and upper celestial world:

13. Table of the Three Worlds

Netherworld	Human World	Celestial World
2 - Foundation	1 - Command	7 – Beyond the Fourth
4 - City of Jewels	3 - City of Jewels	8 – Beyond the Fourth
5 - City of Jewels	6 - Self-Supported	9 – Beyond the Fourth

We may easily observe from this table a number of correspondences. The netherworld corresponds to the part of the subtle body from the navel downwards. The celestial world is, as one would expect, the domain in the centre of the Triangle located in the End of Twelve where the liberated condition, Beyond the Fourth State, is attained. The first of the Nine Siddhas in the intermediate human world is appropriately located in the Wheel of the Command and the other two in the Wheels associated with the latent presence of Kuṇḍalinī in the body from where she rises.

73. I have not been able to trace a reference to the location of the Garland of Skulls (kapālamālā). So we can only infer where it could be. One may understand the word kapālamālā to be an attributive compound (bahuvrīhi) that describes the place where the first eight Siddhas are worshipped as having the skull as its 'garland', that is, encloses or surrounds it. This may be either the Wheel of the Command situated between the eyebrows or the Cavity of Brahmā on the crown of the head. If we understand this compound to be a noun meaning 'Garland of Skulls' as I have translated, there may well be eight such 'skulls', one for each of these Siddhas.

According to the system of classifying the lineages of Siddhas in YKh (2) (see intro. vol. 2, p. 535 ff.), the sixteen Siddhas of the divyaugha branch (śākhā) are projected into these places. However, in YKh (2) the last seven Siddhas are in the Knot of Brahmā (i.e. Kuṇḍalinī) instead of the centre that has the Yonis as a Garland (bhagamālā). This suggests the identity of the two. Moreover, it appears that according to YKh (2), the Knot of Brahmā is located in the Wheel of the Self-supported. Possibly, therefore, this is the Wheel that has the Yonis as a Garland. This Wheel is represented by two interlocking triangles, one facing upwards and the other down and so is said to be 'located between two triangles' (66/75). This, perhaps, is the Garland of Yonis. If so, the six Siddhas are probably projected into the six corners of the hexagon with the seventh in the middle.

In short, it appears that the first eight Siddhas are projected into the Cavity of Brahmā on the top of the head or the Wheel of the Command between the eyebrows. The ninth Siddha is in the Wheel in the navel, that is, the City of Jewels (maṇipura). The remaining seven are in the Wheel of the Self-supported, which is between the navel and the genital region.

According to the Ṭ (MS K fl. 180a-180b) the sixteen places in the body where these Siddhas should be worshipped are called Doors (dvāra). Their location in the body are listed in the table in intro. vol. 2, p. 531.

74. Ṭīkā explains:

These sixteen disciples will have a lineage in the Age of Strife (kaliyuga) up to the eleventh place which is one's own. What is the eleventh place said to be? That is explained as follows. One (place) is from amongst the Nine Nāthas. Then the second is from amongst the sixteen. The third is from amongst the fifty-two (of the lineage of the Eldest, see 7/81-82). His (spiritual) son is the fourth (place). The fifth is his (spiritual) son (and so on up to) . . . the eleventh who is the son of the (one corresponding to the) tenth (place). The lineage should be purified (ovalliśuddhi) in this, the Western Tradition, up to his, the eleventh place and beyond that according to the ennumeration of the (subsequent) places (occupied in the serial order). This is the meaning.

If the lineage is not be purified by means of the sequence of the various denotations of place, then how should one worship the lineage from Śiva up to one's own teacher? How that (should be done) is explained (next). One should (first) worship the group of five (consisting of) the teacher, grand-teacher (paramaguru), grand-master (paramācārya), the first Siddha (ādisiddha), and the great grand-teacher (parameṣṭhi). In the same way, (one should worship) Navātman and then the group of five teachers, namely, (the Five Siddhas) Śrīkaṇṭha, Śaṁkara, Ananta, Sādākhya, and Piṅgala. Once these nine and sixteen lords (nātha), who are Bhairava's, that is, Śrīnātha's sons, have fulfilled their office they will all be in the state of Skyfarers (khecaratva). If they assume office then the lineage (santāna) is in Koṅkaṇa in the Deccan (dakṣiṇāpatha). In this way the sixteen disciples are in the present Age of Strife and they should be linked to their own clan (gotra).

'Then I have other disciples.' The sixteen will have one hundred and sixty-three disciples (see 7/81-82) and then their (spiritual) sons will be countless thousands. Merger takes place in the western lineage (paścimovalli). Where? They are all merged in the supreme Void, that is, in the divine Liṅga which is Unstruck Sound. By what means (does that take place)? By the one who has realised blissful consciousness by the awakening of the knowledge of the bliss of consciousness. The meaning is that they are never born again in the world of transmigration.

eteṣāṁ ṣoḍaśānāṁ śiṣyāṇāṁ kaliyuge santatir bhaviṣyati yāvat ātmana [k, kh: ātmā] ekādaśasthānam | ekādaśasthānaṁ kim ucyate | tat kathyate yathā | navanāthamadhyād ekaṁ tataḥ ṣoḍaśamadhyād [kh: -madhyā] dvitīyam | dvāpañcāśanmadhyāt [k: -śamadhyāt-; kh: -śamadhyā] tṛtīyam | tatputraḥ [k kh: -putraṁ] caturtham | tasya putraḥ [k kh: putraṁ] pañcamam | tasya [kh: tasyaḥ] putraḥ [k kh: putra] saṣṭham [k kh: saṣaṣṭhaṁ] | tasya putraḥ [k: putra; kh: putraṁ] saptamam | saptamasya putraḥ [k kh: putraṁ] aṣṭamam | aṣṭamasya putraḥ [k kh: putraṁ] navamam | navamasya putraḥ [k kh: putraṁ] daśamam | daśamasya putraḥ [k kh: putraṁ] ekādaśam | tasyaikādaśasthānaṁ [kh: tasyadekā-] yāvat asmin paścimāmnāye ovalliśuddhiḥ kāryā [k kh: kāryāḥ] | tadūrdhve sthānasaṁkhyānakād ity arthaḥ | yadi cet [k: cche; kh: cchet] sthānasaṁjñābhedakrameṇa ovalliśuddhir na kriyate tadā [k kh: yathā tada] śivādisvagurvantam ovalliṁ [k* *kh: ovalliḥ] kathaṁ pūjayet | tat kathyate yathā | guruḥ [k kh: * *] paramaguruḥ [k kh: -ru] paramācārya ādisiddhaḥ [k kh: -siddha] parameṣṭhir iti [k kh: parameṣṭhi iti; kh: parameṣṭhiti] pañcakaṁ pūjyam [k: -jyā; kh: -jya] | tathā navātmā tataḥ śrīkaṇṭhaḥ [k kh: -kaṇṭha] śaṁkaro 'nantaḥ sādākhyaḥ piṅgala [k: piṁgalaḥ] iti gurupañcakaṁ pūjayet | evaṁ nava ṣoḍaśa nāthāḥ [k kh: -thaḥ] bhairavasya śrīnāthasya putrāḥ adhikāraṁ kṛtvā sarve [k: sarvaṁ] khecaratve bhaviṣyanti | yadā tair adhikāraṁ [k kh: te adhi-] kṛtaṁ tadā santānaṁ dakṣiṇāpathe koṅkaṇe [kh: kuṁkuṇe] | evaṁ ṣoḍaśa śiṣyāḥ kaliyuge vartamāne vartante [k kh: varttati] | te ca svagotre niyojanīyāḥ [k kh: -yāt] | tato 'parāś ca [k kh: tataḥ parāśva] me śiṣyāḥ || iti [k kh: * *] ṣoḍaśānāṁ śiṣyāḥ śatam ekaṁ triṣaṣṭyādhikam bhaviṣyanti [k kh: * * * ] | tatas teṣāṁ putrāḥ sahasraśaḥ asaṁkhyātāḥ | paścimovallyāṁ [k: -valli; kh: -molli] layaṁ bhavati | kutra [k kh: kotra] | divyaliṅge anāhate pare śūnye līnā bhavanti [k kh: bhavati] sarve | kayā [k kh: kena] yuktyā | ānandabodhabodhinā bodhānandajñānodbodhanāt | punaḥ saṁsāre na [k kh: ṇa] saṁbhavanti kadācid ity arthaḥ || Ṭ MS K fl. 180b-181a.

75. 'Without seed' may mean without the Divine Current of the Convention of the Flower which, as we have seen, is compared to a seed and is essential in order to attain liberation (7/65cd-66ab). Alternatively, the seed may be the seed-syllable Navātman, which plays a central role in the worship of the Circle of Teachers (gurumaṇḍala). The reference in the following line to Vṛkṣanātha who, as the first teacher (ādinātha) (see 7/67cd) is the embodiment of this seed-syllable (see 2/29-30ab), strongly supports this interpretation. Most probably both are meant if we take Navātman to be the sonic form of the Divine Current.

76. Here Śrīnātha is, presumably, the god, whereas Vṛkṣanātha is the first teacher (ādinātha). Although essentially the same (i.e. Navātman Bhairava) they are distinguished for ritual purposes. From the point of view of the initiate what is meant here is that one must worship both the god who is the goddess's consort and the first teacher with equal veneration, just as one's teacher must be worshipped along with the deity although they are essentially one. From the point of view of the historian, the text is taking care to ensure that Vṛkṣanātha, who in this phase of the development of the tradition has assumed a special, independent role must be worshipped no less than Śrīnātha is worshipped in the other branches of the Kubjikā tradition.

77. Mitra may be distinquished from the First Nātha in various ways, according to the context. He may, for example, be the Siddha of the sacred seat of Kāmarūpa (see 6/134cd-135ab) or, as is the case in the KRU, he may be the precursor of the First Nātha (see intro. vol. 2, 457 ff.). We have seen above (4/50cd-51ab) that the goddess gave Bhairava this name when he received initiation from her and with it the authority to spread the teachings. In that case Mitra is the First Nātha, identified with Bhairava. The Command is the sperm-like Drop (bindu) of the energy of grace that fertilizes the womb-like disciple from whom issues, in due course, further spiritual offspring. Thus Mitra's wombs are, presumably, his disciples, the Nine Nāthas, from whom issued these sixteen spiritual sons.

78. The text says 'there' which refers to both the entire triangle or just Kāmarūpa. Above we have seen that Yoni Mudrā is especially associated with Kāmarūpa (6/153cd-154ab). At the same time the entire Triangle is said to be the House of Yoni Mudrā (7/46-47ab). The goddess is Mudrā in the three lineages (3/33-34) and so, from this point of view Yoni Mudrā is the goddess of the Yoni. As such she is the energy of Mudrā (2/14).

79. Oḍḍīśanātha, who is the Siddha presiding over the sacred seat of Oḍḍiyāna, established the Lineage of the Eldest that is worshipped first in the centre of the Triangle. The location of the Middle Lineage in the two upper corners of the Triangle implies that Ṣaṣṭhanātha, the founder of this Lineage, presides over the sacred seats said to be located there namely, Jālandhara and Pūrṇagiri. Mitranātha founded the Lineage of the Child in Kāmarūpa, which is the third and last to be worshipped.

80. The First Gesture i.e. the primary form of Mudrā is Yoni Mudrā. Its energy manifests in three forms, one for each of the corners of Triangle where the three seed syllables, the sonic equivalents of the three aspects of Mudrā, are located (3/48).

81. The three divisions are the lineages of the Eldest, Youth and Child. The Twelve Verses is the mantra recorded above in the notes to 3/31-32. The House is the triangular Yoni in the End of the Twelve. The Siddhas of the House are the Lords of the phonemic energies that line it and with which it is filled. The Samayā Vidyā of the goddess and its manipulations will be described in chapters 8 to 12. The mantra of the Full Moon is a variety of the Samayā Vidyā. The three persons are the three Siddhas of the three major sacred seats. The Siddhas of Lineages may be either the Nine Siddhas or the 'three persons' themselves.

The

Kumārikākhaṇḍa

of the Manthānabhairavatantra

Volume Two
Part One

Edition and Translation of
Chapters Eight to Sixteen

Mark S. G. Dyczkowski

CONTENTS OF VOLUME TWO OF TEXT AND TRANSLATION

Contents i-iii

CHAPTER EIGHT: The Extraction of the Vidyā according to the Teaching Concerning the Meruprastāra

The Code of the Letters 9
The Extraction of Kubjikā's Thirty-two Syllable Vidyā 11
The Five Praṇavas: the Kaulikī Vidyās 19
Kuleśvarī Vidyā (AIṀ), Mahāmāyā Vidyā (HRĪṀ) 21
Śaṁkarī Vidyā (ŚRĪṀ), Khecarī Vidyā (KHPHREṀ), Bhairavī Vidyā (HSRAU-UṀ) 23
The Five Lettered Kaulika Vidyā 25
The Five Praṇavas and the Five Sacred Seats 25

CHAPTER NINE: The Consciousness of the Vidyā according to its Divisions as Full and the Rest.

The Peak Syllable of the Goddess, the Six With Support 31
The Six Without Support 33
The Five Praṇavas 35
The Vidyā of Thirty-two Syllables in Sixteen Parts 37
An Explanation of the Thirty-two Syllable Vidyā, Application and Modifications 37

CHAPTER TEN: A Description of the Glory of the Vidyā

The Fixing and Release of the Vidyā 47
The Vidyā of Thirty-two Syllables in Eight Parts 49
The Division and Deposition of the Limbs and Faces of the Vidyā 49
The Visualization of the Goddess's Faces and Limbs 55
The Glory of the Vidyā 57

CHAPTER ELEVEN: The Way to Offer Libation (argha) and Repeat the Vidyā

The Sequence of the Goddesses of the Letters and their Deposition 65
The Deposition of the Peak syllable (HSKHPHREṀ) 67

The Fashioning of the Maṇḍala and the Offering of Libation (argha) 69
The Repetition of the Vidyā with the aid of the Left Hand 75
The Benefits of Reciting the Vidyā 77

CHAPTER TWELVE: The Glory of the Vidyā

The Benefits of Reciting the Vidyā 85
Reasons for the Failure of the Vidyā 89

CHAPTER THIRTEEN: Concerning the Destruction of Impurity

Supreme Śiva 95
Bondage and the Nature of Impurity (mala) 97
The Burning Away of Impurity,
Merger of the Principles of Existence and Liberation 97
The Merger of the Twenty-four Principles into one another 101
The Rise of Kuṇḍalinī and the Destruction of Māyā 107
The Nature of Karma, its Destruction and Entry into Nirvāṇa 109
The Destruction of the Threefold Impurity and Maturation of Karma by means of the Rise of Kuṇḍalinī and the Transmission (krama) 115
The Consecration of the Command: The Devyākramasūtra
The Ascent and Descent of Kuṇḍalinī 117

CHAPTER FOURTEEN: Concerning (Kaula) Conduct (caryā)

The Vow of Knowledge (vidyāvrata) 129
The Insignia, appearance, garments, ornaments and weapons of the observer of the Vow of Knowledge 129
The Ornaments 129
The Matted Hair, the Shaved Head, the Topknot, the Ashes, the Nakedness,
the Vow of Celibacy 131
The Bathing, the Chowrie, the Bark Clothing, the Ornaments 133
The Vow of Knowledge and the Vidyā 133
The Red Clothing 135
The Duration of the Observance and its Fruits 137
The Places to Observe the Vow, the Cremation Ground 139
The Forest, the Well, the Garden, the Temple, the King and his Palace 141
The Mountain Peak, the Crossing of Four Roads, the Triple Path, the Village, the Highway, the Shore of the Ocean 143
The River, the Confluence, the Bank of the River, the Solitary Tree,

the Solitary Liṅga 145
The Bunch of Flowers (ṣaṇḍa), the Eight Sacred Fields 147
The Inner Attributes of the Ascetic, the Ascetic's Staff 151
The Vow of Silence, the Wandering Life, the Hand Drum, the Fetter, the Sword 153
The Trident, the Shield, the Arrow, the Knife, the Goad 155
The Pestle, the Bow, the Flat Knife, the Mace, the Javelin, the Stick 157
The Waterpot, the Kaula Consorts 159

CHAPTER FIFTEEN: About the Section (of the Scripture) Concerning (Kaula) Conduct (caryāpāda)

Kaula Consorts, the Mother, the Daughter, the Sister 161
The Twin Sister (sahajā), the Last Born, the Washerwoman, the Leatherworker, the Sweeper, the First-born 163
The Vratasūtra: The Observance of the Vow (vratacaryā) in the Four Lineages 165
The Vow of the Transmission of the Skyfarers 165
The Vow of the Transmission of the Aged 167
The Vow of the Transmission of the Youth 167
The Vow of the Transmission of the Child 169
The Conduct of the Night (niśācāra) 169
Conclusion and Benefits 171

CHAPTER SIXTEEN: The Section Concerning the Vidyā

The Secret Language of the Mantras of the Eight Mothers 175
The Eight Mothers 175
The Sūtra of the Octad of Kula (kulāṣṭakasūtra) 179
The Pīṭhastava: A Hymn to the Sixty-four Sacred Seats 183
The Hymn to the Sixty-Four Sacred Seats 185
The Last Ten Sites 197
The Ritual 201

।। ॐ स्वस्ति ।।
श्रीनाथपादुकाभ्यां नमः। श्रीगणेशाय नमः।

मन्थानभैरवतन्त्रे कुमारिकाखण्डे

अष्टमानन्दः

श्रीनाथ उवाच[१]

देवि[२] सिद्धिस्त्वं[३] मे स्वामि[४] आदिनाथे[५] कुलोद्भवे[६] ।
ब्रूहि[७] ज्ञानोपदेशं तु यत् सार[८] पश्चिमान्वये[९] ।। १ ।।

प्रकटं[१०] कुरु[११] कौलीशे[१२] मेरुप्रस्तारमुत्तमम्[१३] ।
येन[१४] विज्ञातमात्रेण विद्यामार्ग[१५] प्रवर्तते[१६] ।। २ ।।

सबाह्याभ्यन्तरं मेरु[१७] स्थूलं[१८] सूक्ष्मं[१९] व्यवस्थितम् ।
सूक्ष्मं[२०] तु देवताचक्रं स्थूलं वर्णपरिग्रहम्[२१] ।। ३ ।।

श्रीकुब्जिका उवाच[२२]

योऽसौ[२३] परापरोऽनन्तो[२४] विभुः कारणमध्यगः[२५] ।
तस्येच्छा[२६] निर्गता शक्तिर्वक्रदेवी ह्यधोमुखी ।। ४ ।।

तस्याश्रममिदं मेरु कोष्ठकेषु शतार्धकम्[२७] ।
गुरोर्वक्त्रात् पुरा ज्ञात्वा तस्योद्धारं[२८] समारुहेत्[२९] ।। ५ ।।
विद्या च पूर्णिमारभ्य[३०] कादिभेदेषु षड्विधम्[३१] ।
तवाख्यातं तु सिद्धस्य साम्प्रतं किञ्चिदन्वयम् ।। ६ ।।

आदिस्थं मेरुमार्गोऽयं[३२] यत् सारं पश्चिमान्वये ।

CHAPTER EIGHT

The Extraction of the Vidyā according to the Teaching Concerning the Meruprastāra.

Śrīnātha said:

O goddess! You are (the veritable embodiment of) accomplishment (siddhi)! O my Lord (svāmin)! O first teacher (ādināthā)! Outpouring of Kula! Tell me the teaching concerning the knowledge which is the essence of the Western Tradition (anvaya). (1)

O Kaulīsā, make the Meruprastāra,[1] the best (of all), clear (to me), merely by knowing which the Path of Knowledge (vidyāmārga) functions (pravartate). (2)

Meru exists (in two forms), external and internal,[2] gross and subtle. The subtle is the Wheel of Deities. The gross is in the form of letters. (3)

The venerable (goddess) Kubjikā said:

The endless, all-pervasive Lord (vibhu), who is both supreme (i.e. transcendent) and inferior (i.e. immanent) resides in the core of the (universal) cause. His (omnipotent) will has emerged as energy (śakti), the goddess Vakrā, who faces downwards.[3] (4)

Her hermitage[4] is this Meru which, (divided up into) compartments (koṣṭhaka), is fiftyfold. Once known from the teacher's mouth, it is progressively extracted.[5] And the Vidyā with which to begin is that of the Full Moon. Now something has been told to you about the tradition of the Accomplished One (siddha) that, sixfold, belongs to the sections (of the tradition) beginning with Kā.[6] (5-6)

This, the Path of Meru, is the essence of the Western Tradition and stands at the very beginning.[7] (7ab)

सुशुद्धे भूप्रदेशे तु पांशुगोमयलेपिते[३३] ।। ७ ।।
पुष्पप्रकरसंकीर्णे[३४] हस्तत्रितय[३५] कारयेत् ।

तत्रैकां पूजयेत् कन्यां तथैवाचार्यपुत्रकम्[३६] ।। ८ ।।
एकान्ते विजने रम्ये[३७] न पशुजनसंकुले[३८] ।
स्नातेन[३९] मन्त्रपूतेन सुशुद्धेनान्तरात्मना[४०] ।। ९ ।।
मदिरानन्दचैतन्यो[४१] वीरवन्दितविग्रहः ।
कृत्वादौ मण्डलं तत्र संपूज्य गुरुपादुकाम्[४२] ।। १० ।।

हेमगोदानवस्त्राद्यैः[४३] संतोष्य[४४] अतिभक्तितः ।
पूज्यः[४५] कुलागमाचार्यः[४६] प्राङ्मुखं[४७] तदनन्तरम्[४८] ।। ११ ।।
मेरुवन्मेरुप्रस्तारं[४९] सर्वमन्त्रालयं[५०] शुभम् ।
व्यापकं कुलदेवीनां अधिकारं[५१] तु मन्त्रिणाम्[५२] ।। १२ ।।
खटिकानवात्मकं[५३] यष्ट्वा[५४] ततः धर्मारिहो[५५] भवेत् ।

सप्तविंशांगुलं[५६] क्षेत्रं[५७] समन्तात् समसूत्रितम्[५८] ।। १३ ।।
तत्रैव आलिखेत् मेरुं[५९] तस्यानुक्रमपद्धतिः[६०] ।
भागास्त्रयोदश[६१] नाथ ऋजुस्पष्टाः[६२] क्रमेण तु ।। १४ ।।

तिर्यगाश्चाष्टभिश्चैव[६३] समसूत्राणि[६४] च[६५] लिखेत् ।
चतुष्टयशतैकं[६६] च कोष्ठकान्[६७] परिसंख्यया ।। १५ ।।

प्रागेकं मध्यमं गृह्य[६८] तदधस्तिर्यगस्त्रयः[६९] ।
अधस्तात्[७०] पञ्चकश्चैव[७१] तदधः सप्तभिः पुनः[७२] ।। १६ ।।
नवाधस्तादधस्ताच्च[७२a] तदधिकादश[७३] पुनः ।[७४]
त्रयोदशान्यधश्चेति[७५] वर्णमेकं[७६] च मध्यतः ।। १७ ।।

प्राक्स्थानमादितः कृत्वा मेरुक्रमं[७७] वदाम्यहम् ।
आदौ मेरोश्च[७८] मूर्ध्निस्थं गृहं गृह्य[७९] परापरम् ।। १८ ।।

One should make (a space) three handspans in size on a nicely swept piece of ground, smeared with dust and cow dung and strewn with flowers. (7cd-8ab)

There, in an isolated, beautiful place where there are no non-initiates (paśujana), one should worship a young virgin as well as the teacher and (his) apprentice (putraka).[8] After bathing (the adept) is purified with mantra; (his) inner Self pure, his mind delighted with wine having already fashioned the maṇḍala whose form is praised by Kaula adepts (vīra), he worships the teacher's sandals. (8cd-10)

Having done that (he) should worship the teacher of the Kula scripture (kulāgama) with intense devotion and with thousands (of offerings of) gold, cloth and cows. Then, facing east, (he should worship) the Meruprastāra as (he would) Meru itself. It is the auspicious abode of all mantras and, pervading the goddesses of Kula, it is (the visible embodiment of) the authority of (all) reciters of mantra. Having worshipped the foundation (khaṭikā)[9] which is Navātman, one becomes the destroyer of the enemies of religion (dharma). (11-13ab)

The (encompassing) field (kṣetra i.e. the sides of the triangle)[10] measured evenly all around with a thread (samasūtrita) is twenty-seven fingers (long all together). One should draw Meru there in accord with its prescibed ritual procedure (anukramapaddhati). O Lord, (it contains), in due order, thirteen parts that are straight and clear. (13cd-14)

One should (then) draw by means of eight horizontals (the same number of) straight lines. (This makes) one hundred and four squares. (15)

First one should take the (square) in the middle, then three horizontal ones below it, then five below those, then seven below again, then below those, nine and below that eleven and, again, thirteen and below (those) one letter in the middle.[11] (16-17)

Now I will tell (you) the Sequence of Meru starting from the first place. First, one should take the house that, both supreme (i.e transcendent) and inferior (i.e. immanent), is located on the peak of Meru.[12] (18)

योगपीठं[८०] त्रिसिद्धाश्च तदधो[८१] रत्नपञ्चकम्[८२] ।
अधस्तान्मातरः[८३] सप्त नवभिर्देवतान्यधः[८४] ॥ १९ ॥
रुद्रैकादशकोऽधस्ताद्[८५] दिव्यसिद्धास्त्रयोदश[८६] ।
तदधश्चिञ्चिणीनाथं[८७] भेदाः[८८] पञ्चाशत् कीर्तिताः ॥ २० ॥

मेरुप्रस्तारबिम्बस्य एतत् पूजाक्रमोद्धरम्[८९] ।
सृष्टिन्यायेन कृत्वादौ शेषान्यं[९०] लोपयेद् बहिः ॥ २१ ॥

प्राचीमुखादि अपरं[९१] अपरादिषु प्राङ्मुखम् ।
षड्भिस्तु पञ्चभिश्चैव चतुर्धा त्रिभिरेकतः[९२] ॥ २२ ॥
तथा षड्भिः क्रमेणैव षड्भिरेकद्वयं त्रिभिः ।
चत्वारः पञ्चभिः षड्भिरनुलोमविलोमयोः[९३] ॥ २३ ॥

सुविलुप्तं[९४] च प्रस्तारं लिङ्गरूपं[९५] च केवलम् ।
एकस्त्रयोदशश्चैव[९६] एकादश नवस्तथा ॥ २४ ॥
सप्तभिः पञ्चभिस्त्रीणि[९७] एक एव[९८] महेश्वरः[९९] ।

शिवादिरन्ध्रशक्त्यन्तं[१००] तथा च सहजाक्रमम्[१०१] ॥ २५ ॥
पूजयेत् परया भक्त्या उपचारैस्तु पञ्चभिः ।

वर्णसिद्धांश्च[१०२] पञ्चाशदालिखेन्मातृकाक्रमात् ॥ २६ ॥
वामावर्तक्रमेणैव मध्ये तु यावत् पश्चिमम् ।
नपुंसकसमायुक्तं वर्गातीतमधः कुरु ॥ २७ ॥

(This is) the Seat of Yoga (yogapīṭha) and (below that are) the Three Siddhas. Below that (triad) are the Five Jewels below which are the Seven Mothers. Below (them) are the deities (accomodated) by nine (squares), below which are the Eleven Rudras, (then come) the Thirteen Divine Siddhas and below them, Ciñcinīnātha. (In this way) there are said to be fifty divisions.[13] (19-20)

This is (how) the form (bimba) of the Meruprastāra is constructed in accord with the order (in which the beings within it are) worshipped (pūjākramoddhara). Having done this first in (the forward order) according to the principle of emanation (sṛṣṭinyāya), one should then erase the remaining external (squares). (21)

The first (squares) that should be erased are on the eastern side (of the diagram). The others (that should be erased next) are on the western side (of the diagram). In this way (one should first erase) six (groups consisting of) six, five, four, three, two and one (squares) successively in the forward order (anuloma). (Then) six (on the other side) of one, two, three, four, five and six (squares, repectively) in the reverse order (viloma).[14] (22-23)

(In this way) the prastāra, with (the extra outer squares) properly erased, alone (remains) and is in the form of a Liṅga. (The number of remaining squares are, from the bottom to the top), one, thirteen, eleven, nine, seven, five, three and one only (wherein resides) Maheśvara (the Great God).[15] (24-25ab)

Such is the Transmission of the Innate (sahajākrama) that begins with Śiva and ends with the Energy of the Cavity (randhraśakti).[16] It should be worshipped with supreme devotion with the five offerings.[17] (25cd-26ab)

Draw the fifty letters (each of which are) Siddhas, that is, the sequence of the alphabet (mātṛkākrama), moving in an anticlockwise direction (vāmāvarta) progressively to the last (letter i.e. Ha) which is in the centre. Place (KṢa) the neuter (napuṁsaka) conjunct (consonant) (samāyukta), which is outside the groups of (letters), below.[18] (26cd-27)

अजकारझकारश्च[१०३] आकारं च समुद्धरेत् ।
छकारश्च भकारश्च ञ म इकार—पञ्चमम्[१०४] ॥ २८ ॥
चबकारसहश्चैव[१०५] य ट ईकार—सप्तमम्[१०६] ।
ङफकारषकारश्च[१०७] शवकार[१०८] लरेफकम् ॥ २९ ॥
ठकारश्च उकारश्च[१०९] नवमं मातृमण्डले[११०] ।
घ पकार[१११] नकारश्च ध—दकारस्तथैव[११२] च ॥ ३० ॥
थतकारणढश्चैव[११३] ड ऊकार—दशाधिकम्[११४] ।
ग खकारं ककारश्च अःकारं अं तथैव च ॥ ३१ ॥
औ ओकार[११५] च ऐकारं ए लॄकार[११६] ऌ ॠ ऋ[११७] च ।
त्रयोदश[११८] समाख्याताः[११९] कषाख्य[१२०] च अधःस्थितम्[१२१] ॥ ३२ ॥

अधुना शृणु देवेश शब्दनिघण्ट्वरोपितान्[१२२] ।
अकारादिक्षकारान्तान्[१२३] न्यासयोगाद् वदाम्यहम् ॥ ३३ ॥

अनुलोमेन[१२४] विन्यासं विलोमाच्छब्दवर्णनम् ।

अमृतं[१२५] भानुजं माया गौरी एकजवेधकम् ॥ ३४ ॥
लुप्तं चैव महेन्द्र[१२६] च रावणो[१२७] भृकुटीमुखः[१२८] ।
पुद्गलो[१२९] गजकार्णश्च गोष्ठी त्रिपदि[१३०] एव च ॥ ३५ ॥
तथा बिन्दुः स्वरान्त[१३१] च वर्णोदयमतः परम् ।

महान्[१३२] वृषभसिंहश्च[१३३] मातर[१३४] हट्टकेश्वरम् ॥ ३६ ॥
जिह्मक[१३५] शूलराजं च उन्मत्तो वीरबाहुकम् ।
कपालं च जटाहार[१३६] वासुकिः[१३७] षोढतद्ग्रहम्[१३८] ॥ ३७ ॥
नीलकण्ठं परावर्तं[१३९] कुवेरं गिरिजात्मजम् ।
तारं द्विजपतिः[१४०] रावं तथा शक्तिपुरन्दरम्[१४१] ॥ ३८ ॥
एकवीरो हयं चैव अग्निधाम[१४२] च[१४३] पार्थिवम्[१४४] ।
पद्मयोनिर्महाशंखस्तथा[१४५] धूम्रध्वजं पुनः ॥ ३९ ॥
सृष्टिबीजमनङ्गं च च्छायाछत्रमतः परम् ।

A,[19] the letter Ja and the letter Jha – extract also the letter Ā.[20] The letters Cha and Bha, Ña, Ma and the letter I as the fifth (make up the third row). The letters Ca and Ba, along with Sa, Ha, Ya, Ṭa and the letter Ī as the seventh (make up the fourth row). The letters Ṅa and Pha and the letter Ṣa, Śa, the letter Va, La, Ra, the letter Ṭha and the letter U as the ninth in the Circle of the Mothers (make up the fifth row). Gha, the letter Pa and the letter Na, Dha and the letter Da, Tha, the letter Ta, Ṇa and Ḍha, Ḍa and Ū as the eleventh (make up the sixth row). Ga, the letter Kha and the letter Ka, the letter Ḥ and Ṁ, Au, the letter O and the letter Ai, E, the letter Ḷ, ḷ, Ṛ and Ṝ are said to be the thirteen. The one called Ka Ṣa (i.e. KṢa) is located below. (28-32)

The Code of the Letters

Now listen, O Lord of the gods, I will tell (you how) the letters A to KṢa are named in conjunction with (their) deposition (nyāsa). (33)

The deposition (is done) in the forward order (anuloma), while the terms (used to) denote (them) are in the reverse order (vilomācchabdavarṇanam).[21] (34ab)

(The vowels are): Amṛta (Son – A), Bhānuja (Born of the Sun – Ā), Māyā (I), Gaurī (Śārī) (Ī), Ekaja (Paṅkaja) (Born from One – U), Vedhaka (Ājñā) (The Piercer – Ū), Lupta (kulāṣṭaka) (Erased – Ṛ), Mahendra (Ṝ), Rāvaṇa (ḷ), Bhrūkuṭīmukha (Knit Eyebrows – Ḷ), Pudgala (Soul – E), Gajakarṇa (Karṇaniratā) (Elephant Ear – Ai), Goṣṭhin (Member of the Assembly – O), Tripadin (Dvipādi) (Three-footed – Au), Bindu (Drop – AṀ) and Svarānta (End of the Vowels – Ḥ). (34cd-36ab)

Now follows the arising of the (consonant) letters: Mahat (hanumānta) (Great – Ka), Vṛṣabha (Bull – Kha)[22], * ? (Mahākaliyuga) (Ga), Siṁha (Lion Gha), Mātṛ (Mother – Ṅa),[23] Haṭṭakeśvara[24] (Ca), Jihmaka (k: Divyaja; g: Jihvāja) (Deceitful – Cha), Śūlarāja (King of the Spear, the god of Death – Ja), Unmatta (Ecstatic -Jha), Vīrabāhuka (Heros Arms – Ña), Kapāla (Skull – Ṭa), Jaṭāhāra (Jaṭādhārin) (Dreadlock – Ṭha), Vāsuki (Ḍa), Ṣoḍha (Ṣoḍaśānta) (Ḍha), Tadgraha (Ṇa), Nīlakaṇṭha (Blue Throat – Ta), Parāvarta (Change – Tha), Kuvera (Kuṭhāraka) (Da), Girijātmaja (Son of the Daughter of the Mountain and Daughter of the Mountain Dha), Tāra (Saviour – Na), Dvijapati (Lord of the Twice-born – Pa), Rāva (Sound – Pha), Śakti (Ba),[25] Purandara (Destroyer of the City Bha),[26] Ekavīra (Ekākinīvīra) (Solitary Hero – Ma), Haya (Horse – Ya), Agnidhāman (Abode of Fire – Ra), Pārthiva (Earthen – La), Padmayoni (Womb of the Lotus Va), Mahāśaṅkha (Great Conch – Śa), Dhūmradhvaja (Smoke Flag – Ṣa), Sṛṣṭibīja (Seed of Creation – Sa), Anaṅga (Mṛgāṁgaja) (Cupid – Ha) and then Cchāyāchatra (Umbrella – KṢa).[27] (36cd-40ab)

एतद् वै मेरुप्रस्तारं[१४६] पूजयेत् खटिकायुतम् ।। ४० ।।
न चात्र विस्मरेत्[१४७] किञ्चिद्[१४८] विद्यामार्गं समुद्धरेत् ।
सिंहावलोकने[१४९] शम्भो संहारेण स्वरूपत: ।। ४१ ।।

पीठनायक्यहं देव्या कुब्जिका[१५०] नाम योगिनी ।

कृषभेदेन चैवात्र[१५१] अजामावासिकं[१५२] क्रमम् ।। ४२ ।।

सांप्रतं हि[१५३] प्रवक्ष्यामि विद्योद्धारविनिर्णयम् ।
आद्यं शक्तिपुरस्यैव[१५४] रावस्यैव तु मस्तकम् ।। ४३ ।।
द्विधाभूतैकपादश्च आद्यं वै अक्षरं शुभम् ।

शंखपार्थिवयोर्मध्ये पद्मयोनि:[१५५] शिवालयम् ।। ४४ ।।
मायायुक्तं महादेव द्वितीयमक्षरं भवेत् ।

आसनं चाग्निधामस्य[१५६] कपालोर्ध्वेन[१५७] भेदितम्[१५८] ।। ४५ ।।
तृतीयमक्षरं[१५९] प्रोक्तं[१६०] चतुर्थं कथयामि ते ।

अनन्तहनुमन्मध्ये[१६१] देव वर्णोदयं[१६२] शुभम् ।। ४६ ।।
आन्तं[१६३] मायासमायुक्तं उद्धरेत सुरोत्तम ।

षोढाद्यं[१६४] टोर्ध्वभिन्नं[१६५] तु अक्षरं पञ्चमं भवेत् ।। ४७ ।।

आसनं द्विजपतेश्च कपालशिरभूषितम् ।
षष्ठमक्षरमाख्यातं सप्तमं चाधुना शृणु ।। ४८ ।।

That indeed is the Meruprastāra and one should worship it along with the foundation (khaṭikā).[28] One should not forget anything here. O Śambhu, one should extract the Path (mārga) of the Vidyā in the reverse order[29] as one (looks upon the prastāra with) the Gaze of a Lion.[30] (40cd-41)

The Extraction of Kubjikā's Thirty-two Syllable Vidyā[31]

I am the mistress of the sacred seat, the Yoginī called the goddess Kubjikā. (42ab)

Here, according to the division of the dark (fortnight) (kṛṣabheda), the sequence is that of the unborn New Moon.[32] (42cd)

Now I will explain the teaching concerning the extraction of the Vidyā. (The letter) that precedes the City of Energy (Śaktipura, Ba i.e Ca) – the head of Sound (Rāva, Pha i.e. Ca) which is (thereby) doubled and (conjoined) to the One-footed (Ekapāda, E) – is the first auspicious syllable (CCE). (43-44ab)

The Womb of the Lotus (Padmayoni, Va), which is the abode of Śiva between the Conch (Śaṅkha Śa) and Earthen (La), conjoined with Māyā (I) is, O great god, the second syllable (VI). (44cd-45ab)

The third syllable (ṆI) is said to be the seat (āsana) of the Abode of Fire (Ra i.e. Ṇa) conjoined with (the letter) above the Skull (Ṭa i.e I). (Now) I will tell you the fourth one (KI). (45cd-46ab)

(This), O god, is the auspicious arising of the letter (Ka that occurs) between the Endless (Ḥ) and Hanumān (Kha). O best of the gods, one should extract the end (of it) conjoined with Māyā (I). (46cd-47ab)

The fifth syllable (ṆI) (consists of the letter) preceded by Ṣoḍha (Ḍha i.e Ṇa) and is conjoined with (the letter) above Ṭa (i.e. I). (47cd)

The seat of the Lord of Brahmins (Dvijapati, Pa i.e. Ka) is adorned with the head of the Skull (Ṭa i.e I). I have told you the sixth syllable (KI). Now hear the seventh. (48)

हराद्यं हि[१६६] तथा पात्य[१६७] हयान्तेनोर्ध्वमण्डितम्[१६८] ।
वासुकेरन्तमध्यस्थ[१६९] चन्द्रोऽयं परमाक्षरम्[१७०] ।। ४९ ।।

शूलहाटकयोर्मध्ये उन्मत्तान्तविभेदितम्[१७१] ।
एकवीरकृतं शम्भो सौरमष्टाक्षरोद्धृतम्[१७२] ।। ५० ।।

द्वावेतौ चन्द्रसूर्योभौ[१७३] कपालेनोर्ध्वमण्डितौ[१७४] ।
आज्ञा मूर्ध्नि कृताभासौ विद्याप्राकारतोरणौ ।। ५१ ।।

सिंहौघहनुमान्[१७५] नाथ मायया[१७६] वेष्टितं पुरम्[१७७] ।
नवमं सर्वकामिन्या अक्षरोऽयं निपातितम्[१७८] ।। ५२ ।।

शिरो बीजमनङ्गस्य जटाहारान्तभेदितम् ।
अक्षरेद[१७९] तु दशमं आख्यात[१८०] तव भैरव ।। ५३ ।।

जटापार्थिवयोर्मध्ये अग्निधाम[१८१] निपातयेत् ।
ऐभानुसंगत[१८२] भेद्य[१८३] अक्षरैकादश[१८४] भवेत् ।। ५४ ।।

हनुमान्शिरसिंहश्च[१८५] च्छायाछत्रोर्ध्वमण्डितम् ।
द्वादशं वर्णमाख्यातं उन्मत्तोर्ध्व[१८६] त्रयोदशम् ।। ५५ ।।

तस्यासनमेकवीर[१८७] तद्ग्रहासनभेदितम्[१८८] ।
चतुर्दश[१८९] समाख्यातं अक्षरं त्रिदशेश्वर[१९०] ।। ५६ ।।

द्विजपते: शिवस्यान्त[१९१] तारकाक्षर[१९२] केवलम् ।
पञ्चदश[१९३] समाख्यातं देवदेव्या प्रकाशितम् ।। ५७ ।।

(The letter that) precedes Hara (Bha i.e Cha) should be placed in the same way, decorated by the (letter) that precedes the one that is followed by the Horse (Haya Ḥ i.e Ṁ). (The letter) in the middle is the one that is followed by Vāsuki (Ṭa i.e. Ī). This, the Moon (Candra),[33] is the supreme syllable (CHĪṀ). (49)

(The first letter is) between the Spear (Śūla – Ja) and Hāṭaka (Ca i.e. Cha) and is conjoined with the (letter) followed by the Ecstatic (Unmattā Jha i.e Ā) and is completed by the Solitary Hero (Ma). O Śambhu, the eighth syllable (CHĀṀ),[34] which is that of the Sun, has been extracted. (50)

Both of them, namely, (the syllables of) the Sun and Moon, are decorated with (the letter) which is above with the Skull (Kapāla Ṭa i.e. Ra). Those two archways of the ramparts of the Vidyā bear the Command (Ṁ) on (their) head (CHRĀṀ CHRĪṀ). (51)

O lord, the city (pura)[35] of Hanumān (Kha) belonging to the Current of the Lion, enveloped by Māyā (I) – this, the ninth syllable (KHI), is formed by (the goddess) who loves all (sarvakāminī).[36] (52)

The seed that is the head of the god of love (Anaṇga Ha i.e Ma), conjoined with (the letter) that ends with the Dreadlock (Jaṭāhāra – Ṭha i.e U). O Bhairava, I have told you this, the tenth syllable (MU). (53)

One should place the Abode of Fire (Ra) between the Dreadlock (Jaṭā Ṭha) and the Earthen (La). It should be conjoined with the Sun (Aibha Ā), which follows after. This is the eleventh syllable (RĀ). (54)

The Lion (Gha) who is on Hanumān's head is adorned (with the letter) above the Umbrella (KṢa i.e O). (This) is said to be the twelfth syllable (GHO). The thirteenth (letter) is above the Ecstatic (Unmatta Jha i.e A). (55)

Its seat the Solitary Hero (Ha i.e Ma), it is conjoined with the seat of Tadgraha (Ṇa i.e E). (Thus), O lord of the gods, (this) is said to be the fourteenth syllable (ME). (56)

The fifteenth (NA) (letter) revealed by the goddess of the gods is said to be simply the letter of the Saviour (Tāraka Na), at the end of which is Śiva, the Lord of the Twice-born (Dvijapati Pa). (57)

नीलकण्ठस्य षोढस्य[१९४] मध्यपुरे तु[१९५] तद्ग्रहम् ।
केवलं षोडशं[१९६] ख्यातं हयशीर्षं[१९७] च केवलम् ।। ५८ ।।
सप्तादशं[१९८] समाख्यातं फकाराद्यं[१९९] दशाष्टमम्[२००] ।[२०१]

अनुनासिकचत्वार:[२०२] सिद्धा मन्त्रस्य व्यापका:[२०३] ।। ५९ ।।[२०४]
ते युगानि तु चत्वार:[२०५] ते पीठा[२०६] ऐहिकाभुवि[२०७] ।

ततो बीजत्रयं ज्ञेयं[२०८] विद्याजिह्वा[२०९] सुरोत्तम ।। ६० ।।

हयसृष्टिगतानङ्गं पार्थिवान्तेन भेदितम्[२१०] ।
रावणाद्येन संभिन्नं अनङ्गशिरसाहतम्[२११] ।। ६१ ।।
एतद् बीजं तु रुद्रस्य[२१२] एकोनविंश[२१३] संख्यया ।

हरपार्थिवमध्यस्थं[२१४] जटान्तेन[२१५] विभेदितम्[२१६] ।। ६२ ।।
कपालान्तयुतं[२१७] गौर्या हरानुजविभेदितम्[२१८] ।
एतन्मायात्मकं[२१९] पिण्डं विष्णुमूर्ध्नि च विंशमम् ।। ६३ ।।

शंखवीरान्तगानङ्गं जटाहाराद्यभेदितम् ।
अ—इमध्यगतं[२२०] कूटं हरान्तेन शिराहतम्[२२१] ।। ६४ ।।
एतद् ब्रह्माक्षरं पिण्डं[२२२] एकविंशं[२२३] प्रकीर्तितम् ।

ब्रह्मा विष्णुश्च रुद्रश्च एते[२२४] सिद्धाः क्रमान्विता:[२२५] ।। ६५ ।।

एषां[२२६] मूर्ध्नि स्थिता शक्तिर्माया कासनसंस्थिता[२२७] ।
अक्षमध्यमवर्णानां उदयं च समायुतम् ।। ६६ ।।
एतद् वर्णं च द्वाविंशं त्रयोविंशमकं भवेत् ।

सृष्टिशक्तिपुराद्यं[२२८] च हशिरेण[२२९] समायुतम् ।। ६७ ।।
कपालशिरसाक्रान्तं[२३०] एषा चक्रतनुर्ह्यहम्[२३१] ।

The single (letter) Tadgraha (Ṇa), which is in the compartment (pura) between Blue Throat (Nīlakaṇṭha Ta) and Ṣoḍha (Ḍha), is said to be the sixteenth (ṆA). The Head the Horse (Haya Ya – i.e Ña) alone is said to be the seventeenth (ÑA). The one preceded by the letter Pha (i.e Ṅa) is the eighteenth (ṄA). (58-59ab)

The nasals (anunāsika) are the four Siddhas who pervade the mantra.[37] They are the four Ages and sacred seats present here in the world.[38] (59cd-60ab)

Then, O best of the gods, one should know the three seed-syllables (that constitute) the Tongue of Wisdom (vidyājihvā). (60cd)

Passion (Anaṅga Ha), which is between the Horse (Ya) and Emanation (Sṛṣṭi – Sa), is conjoined with (the letter) followed by the Earthen (La i.e Ra), (then) conjoined with (the letter) preceded by Rāvaṇa (O i.e. AU) and united with the head of Passion (Ha i.e. Ma). That is the seed of Rudra which, in numerical order, is the nineteenth (HRAUṀ).[39] (61-62ab)

(The letter) between the Hara (Bha) and the Earthen (La i.e. Ha) conjoined with the (letter) that comes after the Dreadlock (Ṭha i.e Ra), united with the (letter) followed by the Skull (Ṭa), that is, Gaurī (Ī), conjoined with (the letter) preceding (anuja lit. younger brother) Hara (Bha i.e Ma) – this is the syllable (piṇḍa) of Māyā (HRĪṀ). It is the twentieth and is on Viṣṇu's head.[40] (62cd-63)

The god of love (Ha), who is between the Conch (Śa) and the Hero (Ña), conjoined with (the letter) preceded by the Dreadlock (Ṭha i.e. Ra), the letter (kūṭa) between A and I (i.e. Ā), the head of which is conjoined to (the letter) followed by Hara (Bha i.e Ma). This is the syllable (akṣara) of Brahmā (HRĀṀ), said to be the twenty-first syllable (piṇḍa). (64-65ab)

Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Rudra – these are (all) Siddhas endowed with the transmission (krama).[41] (65cd)

Above them is Power (E), that is, Māyā, who is on the seat of Ka. That is the twenty-second letter (KE) conjoined with the arising of (all) the letters between A and KṢa.[42] (66-67a)

The twenty-third is (as follows). It is (the letter) that is preceded by the compartment of the energy of emanation (Sa i.e Ba) conjoined with the (letter) above Bha and united (with the letter) above the Skull (Ṭa i.e I). My body being made of the Wheels (cakratanu), I am this (BJI).[43] (67bcd-68ab)

पुद्गलस्य[२३२] तु पूर्वाद्यं वासुकिशिरसि[२३३] स्थितम् ।। ६८ ।।
चतुर्विंशमकं वर्णं[२३४] मुद्रानामाभिधानकम्[२३५] ।
आख्यातं तव सिद्ध्यर्थं[२३६] श्रीनाथेन समायुतम् ।। ६९ ।।

पञ्चविंशतिकं वर्णं[२३७] शर–ईकारसंज्ञया[२३८] ।

एकपदगतानङ्गं[२३९] पुरं[२४०] शक्त्यन्तभेदितम् ।। ७० ।।
त्रिषु वर्णान्तहनुमान्[२४१] तेन युक्तमधःकृतम् ।

धूम्रमातरमध्यस्थं[२४२] युक्तं टासनमेव च ।। ७१ ।।
शिरोभूषणरत्नाढ्यं[२४३] तेनाक्रान्तं च पिण्डकम् ।
आज्ञादीप्तं कृतं कूटं षड्विंशं[२४४] कुलनायकम्[२४५] ।। ७२ ।।

अनेन स्मरते[२४६] देवं[२४७] भवेत्[२४८] कौलस्य भाजनः[२४९] ।
आज्ञा प्रवर्तते शिष्ये आज्ञयाभ्यासनेन[२५०] तु ।। ७३ ।।
खगतिश्च न संदेहो[२५१] अचिरादपि सुन्दर ।

एतच्चैतन्यकूटं तु षड्विधं[२५२] परमेश्वर[२५३] ।। ७४ ।।
षड्भिः पीठैः समायुक्तं खेचरं आद्यपीठकम् ।

तद् यदालोकयेन्मन्त्री[२५४] पतते[२५५] इति निश्चयम्[२५६] ।। ७५ ।।[२५७]
सप्ताविंशतिलक्षैस्तु[२५८] जपितैश्चापि[२५९] खेगतिः[२६०] ।

क्रममण्डलमध्यस्थं ज्वलन्तं दीपरूपकम्[२६१] ।। ७६ ।।
तल्लिङ्गं तं च[२६२] वृक्षं च[२६३] विधिना[२६४] क्रमनायकम् ।

तस्योद्यानं[२६५] सपूर्वं[२६६] च अग्निर्जालन्धरोदितः[२६७] ।। ७७ ।।
खार्णान्तं[२६८] पूर्णगिर्यं[२६९] च हसान्तमिति[२७०] कोंकणम्[२७१] ।
एकपादं च तिस्राख्यं सिद्धं[२७२] पीठक्रमेण तु ।। ७८ ।।
एतद् वै षड्विधं पिण्डं आश्रमं पारमेश्वरम्[२७३] ।

The first one before the Individual Soul (pudgala), seated on Vāsuki's (Ṭa) head. (is) the twenty-fourth letter that denotes the Gestures (mudrā). I have told you this so (you may achieve) success along with Śrīnātha (KU). (68cd-69)

The twenty-fifth letter, according to (the standard) nomenclature, (consists of) Śa, Ra and Ī (ŚRĪ). (70ab)

Passion (Ha) is linked with the One-footed (E) and conjoined first at the end with Power (Sa). The last letter out of the three is Hanumān (Kha). Conjoined with that (i.e. the previous two consonants), it is placed below.[44] (70cd-71ab)

The (letter) between Smoke (Ṣa) and Mother (Ṅa i.e Pha) is conjoined (to that) as is the seat of Ṭa (Ra). (Finally), the seed-syllable (piṇḍaka) is covered with (the letter) called the jewel that adorns the head (Ṁ). (This) is the twenty-sixth Peak syllable – the leader of the Kula energized by the Command. (71cd-72)

He who remembers the god with this (syllable) possesses Kaula (the union of Śiva and Śakti). The Command operates in the disciple and by practicing with the Command (on the body), O handsome one, certainly one quickly (achieves) flight. (73-74ab)

O Supreme Lord, that is the Peak of Consciousness (caitanyakūṭa) which is sixfold. It is the Skyfarer (Khecara), the first sacred seat, conjoined with the six sacred seats.[45] (74cd-75ab)

Whatever the reciter of (this) mantra gazes at, that (object) falls to the ground and, having recited (this syllable) two million seven hundred thousand times, (one achieves mystic) flight. (75cd-76ab)

The (reality) in the centre of the Kramamaṇḍala burns in the form of (the flame of) a lamp. That is the Liṅga,[46] the Tree[47] and, according to the rule, the master of the Krama. (76cd-77ab)

(The sacred seat) Udyāna that belongs to that (seed-syllable) is (the letter) that precedes Sa (i.e Ha). Fire (Ra) has emerged from Jālandhara. (The letter) after Kha (i.e. Pha) is Pūrṇagiri (Pha). Koṅkaṇa (which is Kha) comes at the end of Ha and Sa. (The sacred seat) called Tisra is the One-footed (E) and is (thus) accomplished (siddha) in accord with the sequence of the sacred seats.[48] That, indeed, is the sixfold seed-syllable (piṇḍa), the hermitage of the Supreme Lord. (77cd-79ab)

एषा सा खेचरीमुद्रा ग्रस्तं[२७४] त्रैलोक्यमद्भुतम् ॥ ७९ ॥
ओलित्रितयमध्ये तु एषाज्ञा कुब्जिकाक्रमे ।

तस्या[२७५] मूर्तिरघोरा[२७६] च उद्धारं[२७७] तु विलोमतः ॥ ८० ॥
जटाहाराद्यमनलं[२७८] तद्ग्रहाधःसमन्वितम् ।
सप्ताविंशमकं[२७९] वर्णं[२८०] अष्टाविंशमकं भवेत् ॥ ८१ ॥
हनुमान्शिरसिंहस्य परावर्ताधयोजितम्[२८१] ।

गजेन्द्रस्य शिरं पात्यं नीलकण्ठेति[२८२] नामतः ॥ ८२ ॥
मायायुक्तमूनत्रिंशं कथितं तव सुन्दर ।

त्रिंशमं कथयिष्यामि परावर्तशिरं[२८३] पुनः ॥ ८३ ॥
केवलं हनुमाद्यं च एकत्रिंशं प्रकीर्तितम् ।

शूलस्यैवासनं[२८४] देव द्वात्रिंशं[२८५] समुदाहृतम्[२८६] ॥ ८४ ॥

एकवीरादि–आरभ्य[२८७] भगान्तं यावद्[२८८] भैरव ।
आख्यातं परमं देहं बिम्बा[२८९] देवी नभस्थिता[२९०] ॥ ८५ ॥
उद्धृता तु विलोमेन पीठान्[२९१] कुर्यान्नुलोमतः[२९२] ।

एतत्[२९३] सिंहावलोकेन सिंहवत् सिंहसञ्ज्ञया ॥ ८६ ॥
आदिपीठेश्वरी ख्याता मुद्रात्रितयभेदिता[२९४] ।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

यदेतत् पुरवरं[२९५] देवि ज्वलन्तं[२९६] भीमरूपिणम्[२९७] ॥ ८७ ॥
भयावहं तु शिष्याणां अमृतीकरणं वद[२९८] ।

This is the Gesture of the Skyfaring (Goddess) (khecarīmudrā) (by which) the astonishing triple world is consumed. This is the Command in the midst of the triple lineage (oli) within Kubjikā's transmission (krama). (79cd-80ab)

The form (mūrti) of that (Command) is AGHORĀ and extraction (of this name is) in the reverse order. Fire (Ra), which is (the letter) preceded by the Dreadlock (Jaṭāhāra Ṭha) is endowed with (the letter) below Tadgraha (Ṇa i.e. E). (This is) the twenty-seventh letter (RE). (80cd-81c)

The twenty-eighth (GHO) belongs to the Lion (Gha) who is above Hanumān (Kha)[49] conjoined (with the letter) below Change (Tha i.e. O). (81d-82ab)

One should extract (pātya)[50] the (letter) on top of the Lord of Elephants (Gajendra, Ai i.e Ta) called Blue Throat (Ta), conjoined with Māyā (I). (Thus I) have told you the twenty-ninth (TI) (syllable), O handsome one. (82cd-83ab)

I will (now) tell (you) the thirtieth (VA). (It is the letter) on top of Change (Tha i.e Va). The thirty-first (GA) is said to be only (the letter) that is preceded by Hanumān (Kha i.e Ga). (83cd-84ab)

The seat (āsana) of the Spear (Ja i.e Bha), O god, is said to be the thirty-second (Bha). (84cd)

O Bhairava, (the letters) starting from the Solitary Hero (Bha) up to the Yoni (E) are said to be the supreme body, the goddess Bimbā who resides in the Sky (of the transcendent). (Her Vidyā) has been extracted in reverse, while the sacred seats should be fashioned in the forward order.[51] (85-86ab)

(Generated) by the Lion's Gaze, that (Vidyā is) like a lion; (and so, she who is) the mistress of the first sacred seat (ādipīṭha) and is associated (bheditā) with the three gestures[52] is called the Lion. (86cd-87ab)

The Five Praṇavas: the Kaulikī Vidyās

Śrīnātha said:

O goddess, this is (your) most excellent abode. Burning and terrible, it inspires fear in (your) disciples. (Now) explain the process whereby it is transformed into nectar (amṛtīkaraṇa).[53] (87cd-88ab)

येन सर्वत्र शिष्याणां संपूर्णसिद्धिदा[२९९] भवेत् ॥ ८८ ॥
एतत्[३००] प्रयोगमिच्छामि चान्द्रेयं करणं शुभम् ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[३०१]

अतोर्ध्वं[३०२] संप्रदायं तु पूर्वस्यैव तु उत्तरम् ॥ ८९ ॥
श्रीनाथ त्वां प्रवक्ष्यामि अमृतीकरणं शुभम् ।

कृत्वादौ प्रणवाः पञ्च अन्ते तेऽपि विलोमतः ॥ ९० ॥
तयोर्मध्यगता[३०३] विद्या पूर्णिमा नात्र संशयः ।

न चात्र विस्तरं किञ्चित्[३०४] विद्यापञ्चार्णमुद्धरेत्[३०५] ॥ ९१ ॥
ययोच्चारितमात्रया[३०६] महेश्वर्यं[३०७] प्रवर्तते ।

वायुवर्णाच्चतुर्थं तु अधस्थं[३०८] यत् पुरार्चितम्[३०९] ॥ ९२ ॥
शिखाशेखरमाक्रान्तं[३१०] आज्ञावर्तिसमुज्ज्वलम्[३११] ।
एषा कौलेश्वरी विद्या ओकारान्तविभेदिता[३१२] ॥ ९३ ॥
एषा भगवती देवी नाम्ना सा वह्निवासिनी[३१३] ।

आरक्तां चिन्तयेद् देव आधारमणिमध्यतः ॥ ९४ ॥
लक्षैकजपनात् सिद्धिर्महावेधः प्रवर्तते ।

अमृतादिचतुर्थं तु इकाराधस्तृतीयकम् ॥ ९५ ॥
यान्तान्तं[३१४] बिन्दुनादस्थं अशिरेण[३१५] शिराहतम्[३१६] ।
महामाया स्मृता ह्येषा त्रैलोक्यक्षोभकारिणी ॥ ९६ ॥

I desire (to know) that method (prayoga), the lunar (process) by which (the Vidyā) bestows on (her) disciples complete accomplishment everywhere. (88cd-89ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

What follows is the tradition that answers (your) previous (question). Śrīnātha, I will tell you the auspicious process of transformation into nectar. (89cd-90ab)

Once (one has) fashioned the Five Praṇavas at the beginning and, those same (five) at the end in reverse, the Vidyā in between these two (groups) is the Full Moon. Here (about this), there is no doubt.[54] (90cd-91ab)

There is no (further) extension here (of this mantra) of any sort. One should (simply) extract the five syllables of the Vidyā.[55] Great lordship manifests (within one's self) by the mere utterance (of the Vidyā). (91cd-92ab)

Kuleśvarī Vidyā (AIṀ)

[56]The Vidyā of Kuleśvarī (consists) of the fourth (letter) (Ai below) the letter of the Wind (Ya). It is worshipped in the City (i.e. the maṇḍala) conjoined with the tip of the flame (śikhāśekhara) (Ṁ) and burns intensely with the Wick of the Command. This is Kauleśvarī Vidyā, conjoined with the letter followed by O (Ai). This is the goddess Bhagavatī whose name is Vahnivāsinī (Dweller in the Fire).[57] (92cd-94ab)

O god, one should think that she is light red (and located) between the Foundation (ādhāra) and the (City of) Jewels. By reciting (this Vidyā) 100,000 times (one achieves) success (siddhi) and the Great Piercing (mahāvedha) takes place.[58] (94cd-95ab)

Mahāmāyā Vidyā (HRĪṀ)

(It is composed of) the fourth (letter down) beginning from Nectar (A i.e. Ha)[59] (combined) with the third (letter) below the letter I (Ra) and (the letter) that is followed (by the letter) followed by Ya (yāntānta) (Ī). Established in the Point and Sound, the head of (the syllable) is conjoined with that which is the head of A (Ṁ).[60] This is said to be Mahāmāyā who disturbs the triple world. (95cd-96)

वह्निं[३१७] कपिलसंकाशं[३१८] चिन्तयेन्मणिपूरके[३१९] ।
वशीकरणमावेशं लक्षैकजपनाच्छ्रियः[३२०] ॥ ९७ ॥
षवान्तं[३२१] टासनारूढं[३२२] उशिरेण[३२३] विभेदितम् ।

कलाबिन्द्वङ्कितं नादं[३२४] आज्ञामूर्ध्नि कृतान्तकम्[३२५] ॥ ९८ ॥
एषा सा शाङ्करी देवी सर्वदुःखक्षयंकरी ।

हिमकुन्देन्दुसंकाशां ध्यायेद्[३२६] देव अनाहते ॥ ९९ ॥
सकृज्जप्तेन[३२७] लक्षेण कौलज्ञानं लभेन्नरः ।
ऐहिकान्[३२८] प्राप्नुयाद्[३२९] भोगान्[३३०] सौभाग्यं[३३१] यशसः श्रियम् ॥ १०० ॥

पानुजं[३३२] खरमध्यस्थं एलीनरविभेदितम्[३३३] ।
इन्दुबिन्दुकलाक्रान्तं[३३४] देवानामपि दुर्लभम्[३३५] ॥ १०१ ॥
एषा सा खेचरी विद्या[३३६] श्यामा रक्ता विशुद्धगा ।
लक्षैकजपनात् सिद्धिर्मातृलब्धवरो भवेत् ॥ १०२ ॥

लघुत्वं कर्मविच्छेदं निर्गमं[३३७] जालकान्तरे[३३८] ।
धारास्तम्भं न संदेहः[३३९] करोत्यावेशमुत्तमम् ॥ १०३ ॥

यशमध्यगताकाशं[३४०] हबान्तं च[३४१] लठान्तरम्[३४२] ।
ऋशिरं ओशिरैकत्वं[३४३] बिन्दुनादखगाङ्कितम् ॥ १०४ ॥
एषा सा भैरवी विद्या श्वेतरक्तां[३४४] विचिन्तयेत् ।

One should think of the (element) Fire, brown in colour, within the City of Jewels (maṇipūraka). By reciting (this Vidyā) 100,000 times one (achieves) control (over others vaśīkaraṇa), possession (āveśa)[61] and (other) powers (śrī). (97-98ab)

Śaṁkarī Vidyā (ŚRĪṀ)

(The letter) between Ṣa and Va (i.e. Śa) mounted on the seat of Ṭa (Ra), conjoined with the head of Ṭha (Ī), (along with) Sound marked with Energy (kalā) and the Point (bindu) placed on the top of the Command at the end[62] – this is the goddess Śāṁkarī who destroys all suffering. (98cd-99ab)

O god, one should visualize (her) (dhyāyet), (white as) snow, the jasmine flower or the moon, in (the Wheel of) Unstruck Sound (anāhata). By reciting this 100,000 times, a man attains Kaula knowledge. He gains the benefits (bhoga) of this world, good fortune, fame and prosperity. (99cd-100)

Khecarī Vidyā (KHPHREṀ)

(The letter) following Pa (Pha), which is located between Kha and Ra, conjoined with the Sun that is merged in the (letter) E and pervaded by the energy of the lunar drop: hard to acquire even by the gods, this is the Vidyā of (the goddess) Khecarī. Dark blue and red, she resides in the Pure (Wheel) (viśuddha). By reciting it 100,000 times (one achieves) success (siddhi) and attains the boon of the Mothers. (101-102)

It (bestows) the power to make oneself small at will (laghutva) and Karma is destroyed. (Trapped, the adept can) get out of a net or a deep ravine. (He can) check the (flow of a strong) current. Without a doubt, it induces the most excellent form of possession. (103)

Bhairavī Vidyā (HSRAU-UṀ)

Space, which is a between Ya and Sa (Ha), (the letter) between Ha and Ba (Sa), the one between La and Ṭha (Ra), the head of Ṛ (U), at one with (the letter) after O (Au) and marked with the Point, Sound and the Skyfarer – this is the Bhairavī Vidyā.[63] One should think of her as white and red. (104-105ab)

आज्ञास्थानशलाकाया[३४५] लक्षैकजपनाच्छ्रिय:[३४६] ॥ १०५ ॥
कृत्वा क्रोधं क्षयं याति[३४७] शक्रसैन्यं न संशयः ।

निग्रहं चैव दुष्टानां शत्रूणां चैव ताडनम् ॥ १०६ ॥
भवते नात्र संदेहो ययाराधनमात्रतः[३४८] ।
धर्मार्थकाममोक्षाणां फलं प्राप्नोति मानवः ॥ १०७ ॥

यस्त्विदं विन्दते योगी विद्यापञ्चककौलिकम्[३४९] ।
सोऽपि याति परे तत्त्वे[३५०] यत्र गत्वा न शोचते[३५१] ॥ १०८ ॥

वाग्भवं प्रथमं बीजं मायाबीजं द्वितीयकम् ।
तृतीयं च श्रियो[३५२] बीजं चतुर्थं चैव खेचरम् ॥ १०९ ॥
पञ्चमं भैरवं नाम विज्ञेयाः[३५३] कुलभूषणाः[३५४] ।

प्रणवाः पञ्च आख्याता दीपकानि[३५५] कुलक्रमे[३५६] ॥ ११० ॥
पुनरेव[३५७] हि विद्याया[३५८] आदिपीठाः[३५९] प्रकीर्तिताः[३६०] ।

प्रथमं कामरूपं तु जालपीठं द्वितीयकम् ॥ १११ ॥
पूर्णगिर्य[३६१] तृतीयं तु ओडियानं[३६२] चतुर्थकम्[३६३] ।
पञ्चमं तिस्रपीठाख्यं[३६४] सिद्धास्ते पुनः पञ्चभिः[३६५] ॥ ११२ ॥
मैत्रीशं चर्यदेवं च[३६६] षष्ठीशो[३६७] ओडमेव[३६८] च ।
तूष्णीशं[३६९] देवदेवेश[३७०] सिद्धाः पञ्च क्रमेण तु ॥ ११३ ॥

आद्यपीठात् समारभ्य कुर्यादेव क्रमार्चनम्[३७१] ।
पञ्चप्रणवसंयुक्तं[३७२] सिद्ध्यते नात्र संशयः ॥ ११४ ॥
विद्यापञ्चार्णरहितं[३७३] यस्तु पूजयते क्रमम् ।
अक्रमस्थः स विज्ञेयो[३७४] न मोक्षाय[३७५] विधीयते ॥ ११५ ॥

By reciting (this Vidyā) which, (sharp as) a scalpel, is (located on) the plane of the Command[64] 100,000 times, (one attains many) powers (śrī). (If one who recites it) is angered (he can), without a doubt, destroy (even) the army of Śakra (the king of the gods). (105cd-106ab)

Merely by worshipping with this (Vidyā) the wicked are punished and enemies are struck down. There is no doubt about it. (Through it) a man attains the fruit of (the four goals of human life, namely) Dharma, prosperity (artha), conjugal love (kāma) and liberation. (106cd-107)

The Five Lettered Kaulika Vidyā

The yogi who acquires this fivefold Kaulikī[65] Vidyā reaches the Supreme Principle where, once gone, he no (longer) grieves. (108)

Vāgbhava (AIṀ) is the first seed-syllable. The seed of Māyā (HRĪṀ) is the second. The third is the seed of Śrī (ŚRĪṀ). The fourth is Khecara (KHPHREṀ) and the fifth is (that of) Bhairava (HSRŪAUṀ). These should be known to be the ornaments of Kula. (109-110ab)

The Five Praṇavas and the Five Sacred Seats

The Five Praṇavas, the energizers (dīpaka) in the Kula transmission (kulakrama), have been explained. Again, they are said to be the first sacred seats of the Vidyā. (110cd-111ab)

The first (of these) is Kāmarūpa. The second is Jālapīṭha (i.e. Jālandhara). The third is Pūrṇagiri. Oḍiyāna is the fourth and the fifth is called Tisrapīṭha. Again, they have five Siddhas (one for each seat). O lord of the gods, the five Siddhas are, in due order, Maitrīśa, Caryadeva, Ṣaṣṭhīśa, Oḍa and Tūṣṇīśa.[66] (111cd-113)

One should worship the Transmission (kramārcana) thus starting from the first seat in conjunction with the Five Praṇavas. (In this way) one is certainly successful. One should know that he who worships the Transmission (krama) that is devoid of the five-lettered Vidyā is not established in the Transmission (and that his worship) does not make for liberation. (114-115)

क्रमं पञ्चाक्षरं योगं[३७६] क्रमविद्यार्णपञ्चकम्[३७७] ।
पञ्चधातुगृहं चक्रं तथात्मानं[३७८] च पञ्चधा[३७९] ॥ ११६ ॥
पञ्चाक्षरमिदं न्यासं कृत्वा क्षोभोऽभिजायते ।

ये योगिनीकुले[३८०] जाता ते च विन्दन्ति पञ्चकम् ॥ ११७ ॥
गत्वा वै कामरूपे तु तथा जालन्धरे तु[३८१] च ।
अपरं पूर्णगिर्यायां[३८२] गत्वा पीठे चतुर्थके ॥ ११८ ॥
तिस्राख्ये च पुनर्गत्वा[३८३] विद्यापञ्चकमभ्यसेत् ।
पूर्वक्रमेण सिद्ध्यन्ति नान्यथा वीरवन्दित[३८४] ॥ ११९ ॥

आदौ ते पञ्च लक्षाणि[३८५] जप्तव्याः[३८६] साधकेन[३८७] तु ।
संयोगाल्लक्षमेकं[३८८] तु जपेद्[३८९] विद्याद्यपीठके ॥ १२० ॥
साधकः सिद्धिभागी स्यात्[३९०] खेगतिर्नात्र[३९१] संशयः ।

मेलापं[३९२] खेचरीसार्धं[३९३] तत्र पीठे लभेन्नरः[३९४] ॥ १२१ ॥
वीरसिद्धिर्महाव्याप्तिः[३९५] पुरक्षोभं[३९६] तु इच्छया ।

अणिमा[३९७] महिमा चैव लघिमा प्राप्तिरेव च ॥ १२२ ॥
प्राकाम्यं[३९८] चैव ईशित्वं वशीकरणमेव च ।
यत्र कामगतीच्छया[३९९] सिद्ध्यष्टाविह[४००] जन्मनि ॥ १२३ ॥
लभेदमरपदं[४०१] योगी स्वयं रुद्रो[४०२] भविष्यति ।

एषा पञ्चाक्षरी[४०३] विद्या मुद्रापञ्चकभूषिता ॥ १२४ ॥
प्रथमा कुलकौले तु ज्ञातव्या क्षोभचिन्तकैः[४०४] ।
योनिमुद्रा तु शङ्खिन्या[४०५] पद्ममुद्रा तथैव च ॥ १२५ ॥
कपालमुद्रा देवेश तथा वै घटसंज्ञया ।

मुद्रापञ्चकनिर्मुक्तो विद्यापञ्चकवर्जितः[४०६] ॥ १२६ ॥
नासौ अन्वयिको[४०७] मन्त्री न भवेत् सिद्धिभाजनः ।

जिह्वोपस्थनिमित्यर्थं[४०८] कौलिकान् तान्[४०९] ब्रूवन्ति[४१०] ये ॥ १२७ ॥
न तेषां कुलकौलोऽस्ति[४११] अन्यथा[४१२] पतनं भवेत् ।

The Transmission consists of the union (yoga) of the Five Syllables. The Vidyā of the Transmission is the group of five syllables. The Wheel is the House of the Five Bodily Substances (dhātu). Similarly, the Self is fivefold. Once one has executed this, the deposition (nyāsa) of the five syllables, (Kuṇḍalinī) is aroused (kṣobha).[67] (116-117ab)

(Only) those born into the Yoginīkula obtain the Group of Five. Once one has gone to (the five sacred seats, namely) Kāmarūpa, Jālandhara, to the other in Pūrṇagiri, the fourth sacred seat (i.e. Oḍḍiyāna) and again to the one called Tisra, one should practice therein the Group of Five. O you who are praised by the Heroes, they achieve success by means of (this), the previous Transmission and not otherwise. (117cd-119)

The adept must first repeat them 500,000 times. (Then) he should repeat them 100,000 times conjoined together in the original seat, which is the Vidyā. (In this way) the adept has siddhi and (achieves mystical) flight. Here, (concerning this), there is no doubt.[68] (120-121ab)

There, in (that) sacred seat, man attains union (melāpa) with (the goddess) Khecarī. At will, (he experiences) the arousal of (the energy in) the body, the Accomplishment of the Heroes, and the Great Pervasion (mahāvyāpti).[69] (121cd-122ab)

Here, in (this very) life, wherever (his) desire may wander, (he attains) at will the eight accomplishments.[70] These are the power of atomicity (aṇimā), the power of greatness (mahimā), the power of lightness (laghimā), the power of attainment (prāpti), the power of wilfulness (prākāmya), lordship (īśitva) and subjugation (of others) (vaśīkaraṇa). The yogi attains the immortal abode and will be Rudra himself.[71] (122cd-124ab)

This is the Five-lettered (pañcākṣarī) Vidyā, adorned with the five gestures. The first (of these gestures taught) in the Kulakaula that should be known by those who contemplate the arousal (of Kuṇḍalinī) (kṣobhacintaka) is the Gesture of the Yoni (yonimudrā). (The others are the Gestures of the) Conch (śaṅkhinī), the Lotus (padmamudrā), Skull (kapālamudrā) along with the one called the Jar,[72] O lord of the gods. (124cd-126ab)

The reciter of mantra devoid of the five gestures and the fivefold Vidyā does not belong to the tradition and has no attainments (siddhi). (126cd-127ab)

Those who, for (the pleasures) of the tongue and genitals, say that (people such as) these are Kaulikas do not possess the Kulakaula. On the contrary, they fall (instead to lower levels). (127cd-128ab)

विद्या ध्यानानि पीठानि सिद्धा मुद्राश्च पञ्चकम्[४१३] ॥ १२८ ॥
एतद् वै तत्त्वतो ज्ञेयं तथा पञ्चार्णपञ्चकम् ।

सूचितं तव सिद्धस्य गोपनीयं शरीरवत् ॥ १२९ ॥
इदं रहस्यं परमं नाख्येयं[४१४] यस्य कस्यचित् ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते[४१५] विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये
कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे[४१६] स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्र–
संहितायां अव्वाक्रमभाषिते मेरुप्रस्थारनिर्णये
विद्या–उद्धारो नामानन्दः ॥ ८ ॥

The pentad (consists of) the Vidyā, the visualizations (dhyāna), the sacred seats, the Siddhas and the gestures. This should be known as it really is and so too, the pentad of the five syllables. (128cd-129ab)

What I have indicated to you, O Accomplished One, should be kept hidden, as one does the body. This supreme secret should not be told to (just) anybody. (129cd-130ab)

This is the (eighth) chapter called the Extraction of the Vidyā according to the Teaching concerning the Meruprastāra. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for more than a hundred thousand quarter (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses) (vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's Command, as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

नवमानन्दः

श्रीनाथ उवाच

श्रुतं च देवदेवेशि विद्या–उद्धारमुत्तमम्[१] ।
देव्याः[२] कूटं न मे ज्ञातं विस्तरेण मया प्रभो ॥ १ ॥
अधुना श्रोतुमिच्छामि इदानीं तद् वद प्रभो[३] ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[४]

कूटमेकं गुरोर्वक्त्रात्[५] ज्ञातव्यं तत्[६] महेश्वर[७] ॥ २ ॥
न तेन रहिता सिद्धिस्तदाकर्णय[८] सुन्दर ।

प्रथमं जालपीठं तु पूर्णगिर्य[९] द्वितीयकम् ॥ ३ ॥
तृतीयं कोंकणं[१०] प्रोक्तं कामरूपं चतुर्थकम्[११] ।
पञ्चमं पीठमोंकारं षष्ठं[१२] त्रिस्त्रोतनायकम्[१३] ॥ ४ ॥

सालम्बास्ते[१४] स्मृताः[१५] षड्भिः[१६] शरीरे तु[१७] विनिर्दिशेत्[१८] ।
निरालम्बान्[१९] तदूर्ध्वं तु षड्भिर्वक्ष्यामि[२०] साम्प्रतम् ॥ ५ ॥

इन्दुबिन्दुः[२१] स्वयंनाथः[२२] शक्तिरूर्ध्वे[२३] च[२४] व्यापिनी ।
तदूर्ध्वे[२५] समना ज्ञेया[२६] उन्मना वै तथोपरि[२७] ॥ ६ ॥

उभयोरपि संयोगात्[२८] द्वादशानि[२९] भवन्ति ते ।
पदार्थानि[३०] समूहेन अथ वक्ष्यामि[३१] साम्प्रतम् ॥ ७ ॥

तेजोरूपं तु जालाख्यं हृदये तु[३२] हुताशनम्[३३] ।
दाडिमीपुष्पसंकाशं[३४] कूपस्थं[३५] पूर्णगिर्यकम् ॥ ८ ॥

CHAPTER NINE

The Consciousness of the Vidyā according to its Divisions as Full and the Rest.

The Peak Syllable of the Goddess

Śrīnātha said:

O mistress of the god of gods, I have heard the most excellent extraction of the Vidyā (but), O lord, I have not know the Peak syllable (kūṭa) of the goddess in detail. I now wish to hear (about) it. O Lord,[1] tell me that. (1-2ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

O Maheśvara, the single Peak syllable should be known from the teacher's mouth.[2] (There is no) accomplishment (siddhi) without it. Hear me, O handsome one! (2cd-3ab)

The first is the sacred seat of Jāla (Ra).[3] The second is Pūrṇagiri (Pha). The third is said to be Koṅkaṇa (Kha). Kāmarūpa (Sa) is the fourth. The fifth is the sacred seat of the letter OṀ (Ha) and the sixth is the Leader of the Three Currents (i.e. Tisrapīṭha – E). (3cd-4)

These six are said to be 'with support' (sālamba) and should be indicated within the body. Now I will now tell about the ones 'without support' (nirālamba) that are six. (5)

(First come) the Moon and the Drop (indubindu), (followed by) the Lord Himself (svayaṁnātha);[4] above is Energy (śakti) and the Pervasive One (vyāpinī). One should know that above (all) that is the Equal One (samanā) while the Transmental (unmanā) is, similarly above that. (6)[5]

By conjoining the two (groups) they make twelve. Now I will tell (you what these) things (padārtha) are as a group. (7)

The Six With Support

1) The (sacred seat) called Jāla is brilliant energy (tejas). (It is) the fire (that burns) in the Heart. 2) Pūrṇagiri, (red) like the flower of the pomegranate, is located in the pit of the throat. (8)

कोङ्कणं घण्टिकायां तु शरद्गगनसन्निभम्[३६] ।
कामाख्य[३७] तालुमध्ये तु हिमकुन्देन्दुनिर्मलम् ॥ ९ ॥

तस्य ऊर्ध्व[३८] तु विज्ञेय[३९] ॐकार[४०] दर्पणप्रभम् ।

ब्रह्मरन्ध्रे[४१] त्रिकोणाख्य[४२] ऊर्ध्ववक्त्र[४३] विचिन्तयेत् ॥ १० ॥
तप्तहेमनिभं ध्यायेत्[४४] तिस्राख्यं पीठनायकम्[४५] ।
तदूर्ध्व[४६] व्योमचक्रं तु आलातकसमप्रभम्[४७] ॥ ११ ॥

बिन्दुरूपं समाभ्यस्य[४८] अर्धेन्दुस्तस्य[४९] चोपरि[५०] ।
ज्योतिरूप[५१] समाख्यात[५२] आदिनाथ[५३] तु[५४] मूर्धनि ॥ १२ ॥

शिवतत्त्व[५५] विजानीयादव्यक्तं चक्रवत् स्मरेत् ।

हृदयात् तु[५६] समारभ्य[५७] यावदूर्ध्वं हि मस्तकम्[५८] ॥ १३ ॥
तावत् कूटं समाख्यातं नवधा संव्यवस्थितम् ।
सुषुम्नानाडिभेदेन शनै: शनैस्तु[५९] भेदयेत् ॥ १४ ॥

तदूर्ध्वे ओलिभेदानि[६०] त्रिभिर्वक्ष्यामि[६१] साम्प्रतम् ।

चतुरंगुलमुत्सृज्य ऋजुशक्तिर्विधीयते ॥ १५ ॥
अतसीपुष्पसंकाशां व्योमव्यापीं[६२] विचिन्तयेत् ।

तदूर्ध्वे[६३] व्यापिनी प्रोक्ता चत्वार्यगुलमूर्ध्वत:[६४] ॥ १६ ॥
समना सा स्वरूपेण चन्द्रकोटिसमप्रभा ।
शिवतत्त्वस्य ऊर्ध्वे[६५] तु ओलिदेव्यस्त्रय:[६६] स्मृता:[६७] ॥ १७ ॥

3) Koṅkaṇa, which is like the autumn sky, (is located) in the uvula.

4) Kāmākhya, pure as snow, the jasmine or the moon, is in the middle of the palate. (9)

5) One should know that above that is (Oḍḍiyāna the sacred seat of) the letter OṀ, (Ha) as brilliant as a mirror.[6] (10ab)

6) One should think of the Upper Face (ūrdhvavaktra), called the Triangle, in the Cavity of Brahmā.[7] One should meditate on the leader of the sacred seats called Tisra as similar to heated gold. Above that is the Wheel of Space (vyomacakra)[8] brilliant as a whirling firebrand.[9] (10cd-11)

The Six Without Support[10]

1) Once one has practiced (meditation) on the form of the Drop (bindurūpa), (one should concentrate on) the 2) Half-moon above it. 3) The Primordial Lord (ādinātha), who is said to be light (jyotirūpa), is on top (mūrdhani). (12)

Know that to be the Śiva Principle (śivatattva). Unmanifest, one should recollect it (as having a form and motion) like a wheel.[11] (13ab)

The Peak (kūṭa), established ninefold, is said to extend from the Heart upward onto the head. By splitting apart the channel of Suṣumṇā one should slowly (and gradually) split apart (the Peak).[12] (13cd-14)

Above that the divisions of the lineages (oli) are (associated) with (the following) three. I will now tell (you what they are). (15ab)

4) Abandoning (a distance of) four fingers (breadth upwards), (one comes to) the Straight Energy (ṛjuśakti). One must think (of her to) be like the hemp flower (in colour) and pervading the Sky (of the Supreme Principle).[13] (15cd-16ab)

5) It is said that the Pervasive One (v*yāpinī*) is above that. (Again), four fingers further above is 6) the Equal One (samanā) who is, by her very nature, as brilliant as countless millions of moons.[14] (These) are said to be the three goddesses of the Lineages (oli) that are above the Śiva principle. (16cd-17)

तस्योर्ध्वे उन्मनावस्था[६८] शब्दावस्थं[६९] हि शाम्भवम् ।
शून्यमेकं समाभ्यस्य[७०] यत्र सर्वं[७१] निवर्तते ।। १८ ।।[७२]
शून्यान्ते[७३] तून्मने[७४] प्राप्ते को न[७५] मुच्येत[७६] बन्धनात् ।

अथान्यं[७७] संप्रवक्ष्यामि कारणं गूढमुत्तमम् ।। १९ ।।

प्रथमं कामरूपाख्यं शृङ्गाटाकृतिशेखरम्[७८] ।
मायाबीजं द्वितीयं तु गुहा मुद्रा च तूष्णिका[७९] ।। २० ।।

तृतीयं रुद्रबीजं तु दिव्यं सुरवरार्चितम् ।
चतुर्थं[८०] खेचरं[८१] पीठं[८२] खफरेमिति[८३] विग्रहम् ।। २१ ।।

पञ्चमं भैरवं नाम[८४] हसरौ–उपदाङ्कितम्[८५] ।
पीठपञ्चकमाख्यातं गुप्तसंज्ञं कुलागमे ।। २२ ।।

तेषां संकेतकाः पञ्च शास्त्रेऽस्मिन्[८६] स्ववतारिताः[८७] ।
ईकारश्च[८८] आकारश्च इ उ ओ[८९] स्वरपञ्चकम् ।। २३ ।।

एते तत्त्वक्रमाच्छम्भो संजातानि[९०] कुलेच्छया ।
आद्यं पीठं[९१] भवेद्[९२] दीर्घं चतुर्थं[९३] स्वरनायकम् ।। २४ ।।
स्वरोदयं[९४] द्वितीयं[९५] च[९६] तृतीये च तृतीयकम् ।
चतुर्थकं चतुर्थे तु[९७] पञ्चमे तु त्रयोदशम्[९८] ।। २५ ।।
एते पीठाः[९९] स्मृता रत्ना[१००] ओजापूकाः[१०१] सतिस्त्रकाः[१०२] ।

एतेषां नायिकाह[१०३] च विद्या च महान्तारिका[१०४] ।। २६ ।।

साकारा च निराकारा अद्वैताकारभूषिता[१०५] ।
सा स्थूला सा च वै सूक्ष्मा चिच्छक्त्यन्तरचारिणी[१०६] ।। २७ ।।

Above that is the state Beyond Mind (unmanāvasthā) and that is the Śāmbhava state of the Word (śabdāvastha). (One attains it) once one has practiced (immersion in) the one Void where everything comes to an end. And once the Transmental at the end of the Void has been reached, who is it that would not be freed from bondage?[15] (18-19ab)

The Five Praṇavas[16]

Now I will explain something else, the most excellent secret concerning the (five) causes.[17] (19cd)

The first is called the 'form of passion' (kāmarūpākhya), which is the peak in the shape of (the triangular) water chestnut (AIṀ). The second is the seed of Māyā (HRĪṀ). (It is) the silent (goddess) (tūṣṇikā), the Gesture (mudrā) and the Cave.[18] (20)

The third is Rudra's divine seed (ŚRĪṀ), which is worshipped by the best of the gods. The fourth is Khecara's sacred seat whose form is KHAPHAREṀ.[19] (21)

The fifth is called Bhairava marked with (the seed-syllable) HASARAU-UṀ.[20] (This is) said to be the secret name of the group of the five sacred seats in the Kula scripture (kulāgama). (22)

Their five conventions have been well brought down (into the world) in this scripture. (They are) the five vowels, namely, the letter Ī and the letters Ā, I, U and O.[21] (23)

These, O Śambhu, have arisen in accord with the sequence of the principles (tattvakrama) by the will of Kula. The first sacred seat is the long fourth (vowel) which is the leader of the vowels (Ī). The second is the arising of the vowels (Ā), while the third (sacred seat) is in the third (vowel) (I). The fourth (sacred seat) is in the fourth (vowel) (U), while the thirteenth (vowel) (O) is in the fifth (seat). These sacred seats are said to be (five) jewels. (They are) O (Oḍḍiyāna), JĀ (Jālandhara), PŪ (Pūrṇagiri), KĀ (Kāmarūpa) and with them is (the sacred seat called) Tisraka.[22] (24-26ab)

I am their mistress; I am the Mahāntārikā Vidyā (the Incantation of the Great Saviouress). (26cd)

Decorated with a nondual form she (both) has form and is formless. She is gross. She is subtle. She is the inwardly moving energy of consciousness. (27)

बोधरूपा[१०७] महामाया अलेख्या[१०८] लेख्यरूपिणी[१०९] ।
गुह्ये च हृदये वक्त्रे विलसेत् परमेश्वरी ।। २८ ।।

मुद्राकूटसमायुक्ता तेन सा मुद्रिता भवेत् ।
यावन्न विन्दते कूटं तावद् विद्या न सिद्ध्यति[११०] ।। २९ ।।

पश्चात् संपूर्ण करण[१११] कादिभेदेन कौलिकम् ।
गूढार्थेन प्रवक्ष्यामि विद्या द्वात्रिंशदक्षरा[११२] ।। ३० ।।
संकेतेन यथा प्रोक्ता[११३] सिद्धिदा चैव योगिनाम् ।

प्रथमं पीठसंकेत[११४] भगवतीत्यतः[११५] परम् ।। ३१ ।।

तृतीयं मूर्तिसंकेत[११६] चैतन्यं च अतः परम्[११७] ।
चतुर्थं तु समाख्यतं अलङ्कार[११८] च पञ्चमम्[११९] ।। ३२ ।।

अभिधानं ततः षष्ठं ब्रह्माख्यं बीजसप्तमम्[१२०] ।
अष्टमं विष्णुबीज[१२१] तु नवमं रुद्रमुच्यते[१२२] ।। ३३ ।।

द्विपञ्चक[१२३] करालाख्यं अमृतैकादशोच्यते[१२४] ।
महाभैरवरूपं तु द्वादशं समुपस्थितम् ।। ३४ ।।

त्रयोदशं भवेद् व्याप्तिः[१२५] संस्थितिश्च[१२६] चतुर्दशम्[१२७] ।
सिद्धिः पञ्चदशे[१२८] स्थाने आज्ञा षोडशमे[१२९] पदे ।। ३५ ।।

षोडशात्मकसंकेत[१३०] उपदेशकृते कृतम्[१३१] ।
त्रिधा देवी क्रमाणां हि ओलीनां तदनन्तरम् ।। ३६ ।।

यथा कर्णोपदेश[१३२] तु तत् प्रवक्ष्याम्यनन्तरम् ।

(She is) Mahāmāyā who is consciousness (bodharūpā).[23] She cannot be written about and (yet she) is (all that can be) written about. May the Supreme Goddess play in the genitals (guhya), the heart and the mouth (vaktra).[24] (28)

She is conjoined with the Peak syllable and with Gesture and so she is stamped (mudritā) (onto the body).[25] (This) Vidyā is not successful until one obtains the Peak (syllabic mantra).[26] (29)

The Vidyā of Thirty-two Syllables in Sixteen Parts

Next I will explain the complete Kaulika means (to realisation) according to the division beginning with Kā (kādibheda) with its profound meaning. (This), the Vidyā of Thirty-two Syllables explained according to the convention, bestows accomplishment (siddhi)[27] upon yogis. (30-31ab)

The first (part of this Vidyā consists of) the Convention of the Sacred Seats.[28] After that comes (the word) 'BHAGAVATI'. (31cd)

The third is the Convention of Form (mūrti)[29] (GHORE)[30] and after that comes Consciousness (HSKHPHREṀ),[31] which is said to be the fourth. The Ornament (ŚRĪ)[32] is the fifth. (32)

Then comes the Designation (KUBJIKE), which is the sixth. Brahmā is the name of the seventh seed-syllable (HRĀṀ). The eighth is the seed of Viṣṇu (HRĪṀ) and the ninth is said to be Rudra (HRAŪṀ).[33] (33)

The tenth is called Karāla (ṄAÑAṆANAME) and Nectar (A) is said to be the eleventh. The twelfth is present in the form of the great Bhairava (GHORA). (34)

The thirteenth is Pervasion (MUKHI), while Stability is the fourteenth (CHĀṀ CHĪṀ). Accomplishment (KIṆI KIṆI) is in the fifteenth place and the Command (VICCE) is in the sixteenth part. (35)

For the purpose of instruction, the convention has been made sixteenfold. The goddess of the Transmissions (krama) and, after that, that of the Lineages (oli), are threefold. (36)

An Explanation of the Thirty-two Syllable Vidyā, Application and Modifications

I will (now) explain the oral teaching (karṇopadeśa). (37ab)

मूर्तिभेद[१३३] त्रिधा[१३४] प्रोक्तं व्युत्क्रमेण[१३५] क्रमत्रये ॥ ३७ ॥
विपरीतेन रेघो वै द्वौ सिद्धौ[१३६] अ गणाधिपः[१३७] ।
यावन्न ज्ञायते चार[१३८] ओलिशुद्धिः कुतः क्रमे ॥ ३८ ॥

आदौ विकृतिकारण[१३९] सौम्यं च तदनन्तरम् ।
महावृक्ष[१४०] पुनश्चात्र[१४१] त्रिविध[१४२] करणेन तु ॥ ३९ ॥

मूर्तिशुद्धि[१४३] पुरा ज्ञात्वा आज्ञातत्त्वमनुस्मरेत् ।
चैतन्येन विनिर्मुक्तं प्रमादादपि वर्तते ॥ ४० ॥
तत्र शून्यं क्रम[१४४] तस्य अधिकारं विना गुरोः ।

शक्तिना[१४५] व्यतिरिक्तं तु रुद्रबीजं त्रिकन्दकम्[१४६] ॥ ४१ ॥
मलाना[१४७] दहनं कस्माच्छक्तिना परिभाव्यते ।
शक्तियुक्त[१४८] पुरा[१४९] ज्ञात्वा तदादिष्ट[१५०] मलक्षयम्[१५१] ॥ ४२ ॥

अमृतं योगिनीरिक्तं विसर्गरहित[१५२] यदा ।
अपवर्ग[१५३] कुतस्तस्माद्[१५४] नापि[१५५] स्वर्ग[१५६] प्रवर्तते[१५७] ॥ ४३ ॥

भैरवान्तं यदा दीर्घ[१५८] भिन्नं कस्मात् कलेवरम् ।
कुतः[१५९] स्याद् भैरवीशक्तिः कुतः स्यात् सिद्धिमण्डले ॥ ४४ ॥

अव्ययेन यदा रिक्तं व्याप्तं मण्डलपञ्जरम्[१६०] ।
संसारमण्डलात्[१६१] तस्मान्न मुक्तिरिह[१६२] गीयते ॥ ४५ ॥

सर्वेषां पूर्वतो देव्या नमो[१६३] आमन्त्रणे पदे ।
कुलभ्रंशविनाशाय[१६४] मतिभ्रंशः[१६५] सदात्मनि ॥ ४६ ॥
मलानां भवते वृद्धिस्तद्वद्[१६६] वृद्धिः[१६७] कुतो भवेत् ।
तदा संसारचक्रेऽस्मिन् उदयते[१६८] दिने दिने ॥ ४७ ॥

The Division of Form (mūrtibheda) is said to be threefold and is present, out of order, in the three Transmissions (kramatraya). 'RE' and 'GHO' in reverse order (i.e. GHO RE) are the two accomplished ones (siddha) (and along with them) is A, the Lord of Hosts (gaṇādhipa).[34] As long as one does not know the dynamics (cāra) (of this Vidyā), how can the lineages (oli) be purified in the Transmission (krama)? (37cd-38)

(The Vidyā starts) in the beginning with the Cause of Change (vikṛtikāraṇa) (AIṀ) and is followed by the Profound (saumya) (HRĪṀ). Again here the Great Tree is threefold (AIṀ HRĪṀ ŚRĪṀ) in accord with the instrument (that applies its mantras). (39)

Initially, having known the purification of Form, one should recall the Principle of the Command (AIṀ). If, due to negligence, (this Vidyā is uttered by someone) without consciousness (HSKHPHREṀ), the Transmission (krama) of such a one, devoid of the authority of the teacher, is empty.[35] (40-41ab)

If the seed of Rudra, which is in three parts (HRĀṀ HRĪṀ HRAUṀ), is devoid of Energy (RA) how can impurities (mala) be burnt away? (For it is) due to Energy that (this) takes place. It is taught that having initially known it to be conjoined with Energy, (only) then is impurity destroyed.[36] (41cd-42)

If Nectar (A) is devoid of the Yoginī[37] and Emission (visarga) how can there be liberation? (Indeed, not even) heaven is (attained). (43)

If there is a long (vowel) at the end of Bhairava (i.e. HSRAU-UṀ) how can the body be split apart? Where would Bhairavīśakti be? Where (would it be in) the Circle of Accomplishments? (44)

If the cage of the maṇḍala is pervaded (by the Vidyā) devoid of the Imperishable (avyaya),[38] it is said that there is no liberation from the sphere (maṇḍala) of transmigratory existence. (45)

Preceding all (the parts of the Vidyā) comes the salutation of the goddess (namaḥ) in the section (pada) (of the Vidyā) concerned with invocation.[39] (This is done) in order to destroy lapses from (the teachings of the) Kula. (Moreover, if one fails to do this) the intellect within oneself constantly lapses. In this way impurities increase, so how can there be (any spiritual) growth? (Indeed one) then enters (further) into this wheel of transmigratory existence day by day. (46-47)

पीठरिक्ता अमावास्या नेह सिद्धिफलप्रदा ।
भाग्यक्षयं च कुरुते[१६९] अन्ते आज्ञाविवर्जिता ।। ४८ ।।
दुर्भगा जायते विद्या[१७०] दुर्भगत्वं न संशय:[१७१] ।

अथ संपुटयोग[१७२] वा आद्यन्तेऽवकृतं यदि ।। ४९ ।।
तदा रेफप्रभावेण[१७३] जज्वलद् भैरवानलम् ।
तेन सा भीषणीमूर्ति:[१७४] साक्षात्[१७५] क्लिन्ना भविष्यति[१७६] ।। ५० ।।

तत्रास्ति करणं किञ्चित्[१७७] हसमध्ये[१७८] प्रवर्तते ।
रवेर्लोप[१७९] पुरा[१८०] कृत्वा तत्र[१८१] सा वारुणी[१८२] कला ।। ५१ ।।

करणं चन्द्रचारेण तदा पूर्णतरङ्गिणी[१८३] ।
चन्द्रांशु:[१८४] क्षरते यस्मात् तस्मात् पूर्णा निगद्यते ।। ५२ ।।

उभौपञ्चकहीना[१८५] च जपिता[१८६] विधिना यदि ।
तथापि हि न[१८७] सिद्ध्यन्ति इत्याज्ञा पारमेश्वरी ।। ५३ ।।

उभौपञ्चकनिर्मुक्ता नमो[१८८] आमन्त्रणे[१८९] युता ।
तेन विद्यां अमावास्या[१९०] जप्त्वा कोटिशतैरपि ।। ५४ ।।
विमुखा जायते विद्या मर्त्यलोके कलौ युगे ।
यद्यपि दक्षिणे प्रोक्ता मन्त्रसिंहासने हर ।। ५५ ।।

निग्रहानुग्रहे[१९१] शक्ति: वृक्षस्फोटादिप्रत्यया[१९२] ।
तदिद[१९३] क्षेत्रमाहात्म्य[१९४] तत्[१९५] तु विद्याप्रभावत: ।। ५६ ।।

वटुकस्य प्रभावेण[१९६] संस्थिता बाह्यप्रत्यया:[१९७] ।
स्वप्रत्यया भवेद् विद्या यथा[१९८] ओघक्रमेण[१९९] तु ।। ५७ ।।
ओघहीना न[२००] मुच्यन्ति[२०१] पतनं तेन खेचर ।

The New Moon that is devoid of the sacred seats does not bestow the fruits of accomplishment here (in this world). Devoid of the Command (AIṀ)[40] at the end, it destroys (all of one's) good fortune.[41] The Vidyā becomes unlucky (and so one is) undoubtedly (afflicted) by misfortune. (48-49ab)

Now, if the union of encapsulation (saṁpuṭayoga) (of the Vidyā with the Praṇavas)[42] at the beginning and the end is omitted then, by the power of the letter Ra, the fire of Bhairava burns intensely. Thus (to extinguish this fire) the (goddess) of fearsome form becomes visibly (sākṣāt) wet (klinnā) (by the power of the encompassing syllables). (49cd-50)

There is some (mantric) instrument (karaṇa) there that operates in the middle between Ha and Sa. The energy (called) Vāruṇī is present there once the Sun has been removed.[43] (51)

Then, by the movement of the Moon, the (mantric) instrument (i.e. the Vidyā) becomes the Full Taraṇgiṇī. (Then) the ray of the Moon oozes (nectar) and so (that energy) is called the Full (pūrṇā).[44] (52)

The Command of the Supreme Goddess (ordains that) (even) if (the Vidyā) is repeated according to the rule (but) without the two pentads (of Praṇavas at the beginning and end), then also (those who recite it) are not successful. (53)

If one recites (this), the Vidyā of the New Moon, along with the salutation (namaḥ) during the invocation (but) without the two pentads even a hundred million times, the Vidyā becomes averse (to its reciter) in the mortal world during the Age of Strife. (This is so), O Hara, even though she is said to be on the right (propitious) (dakṣiṇa) side of the Lion Throne of mantra. (54-55)

(This Vidyā is) the power to (both) grace and restrain, which (has as its) sign of attainment (pratyaya) such (powers as the capacity to) burst trees apart and the like.[45] This, the glory of the sacred field (i.e. the maṇḍala), is due to the power of the Vidyā. (56)

The external signs of attainment are established by Vaṭuka's power,[46] (while) the Vidyā (itself) is its own sign of attainment in accord with the transmission of the current (of the lineages) (oghakrama). O Skyfarer, those who are devoid of the current (of the transmission) (ogha) are not freed (but, on the contrary,) fall because of this. (57-58ab)

अनुलोमेन पाठ्यादौ[२०२] विलोमान्ते[२०३] च[२०४] पञ्चकम्[२०५] ।। ५८ ।।

कृत्वा गमागमं[२०६] देव मध्ये विद्या सुरेश्वर ।
भादिसृष्टिक्रमेणैव तदा सा[२०७] पूर्णिमा भवेत् ।। ५९ ।।

सकृदुच्चारिता[२०८] विद्या[२०९] कम्पते देहपञ्जरम् ।
रुद्रांशको[२१०] भवेन्मन्त्री[२११] विद्या देवी च पूर्णिमा ।। ६० ।।

अन्यथा न भवेद्[२१२] देव शास्त्रेऽस्मिनवतारिता[२१३] ।
एतद्वै संपुटं योगं[२१४] विद्याया तनुपूर्वकम्[२१५] ।। ६१ ।।
पञ्चार्णमिति[२१६] विख्यातं यो विन्दति[२१७] स सिद्ध्यति ।

विद्या संपुटिता शुद्धा संपुटेन विवर्जिता ।। ६२ ।।
अशुद्धा नात्र संदेहो विघ्नदात्री[२१८] पदे पदे ।
विघ्नविदारणार्थाय[२१९] तदाख्यातं च संपुटम् ।। ६३ ।।

अमावास्या भवेत् पूर्णा कृष्णा[२२०] स्थूला[२२१] भविष्यति[२२२] ।
रौद्रा सा भवते सौम्या आक्रान्ता करणेन तु ।। ६४ ।।

ये[२२३] ते पञ्च क्रमात्[२२४] पीठाः[२२५] पूर्वोक्ता हि[२२६] सुरोत्तम ।
ते च कुर्याद् भकारादौ वाग्भवाद्यनुलोमतः[२२७] ।। ६५ ।।

पुनस्तेऽपि विलोमाच्च[२२८] चकारान्ते[२२९] नियोजयेत् ।
आदौ ते प्रणवाः पञ्च अन्ते तेऽपि विसर्पिताः[२३०] ।। ६६ ।।

विद्यामध्ये[२३१] गताहं च त्वमूर्तिरिति कौलिनी ।
द्वात्रिंशाक्षरिका[२३२] या तु अनेन करणेन तु ।। ६७ ।।
द्विचत्वारिंशती[२३३] सा तु स्वमन्त्रं[२३४] पश्चिमान्वये ।
तच्चास्य[२३५] प्रणवं[२३६] देयं दीपनं वैदिकं[२३७] प्रिय ।। ६८ ।।

तेन सा च विनिर्मुक्ता षड्जातिभ्यो[२३८] विवर्जिता ।
ॐकारं[२३९] च नमः[२४०] पूर्वं नमः स्वाहा स्वधा वषट्[२४१] ।। ६९ ।।
वौषट्[२४२] चैव तु स्वाहान्तं रक्षफट्कारवर्जिता[२४३] ।
एभिर्मन्त्रपदैस्तत्र[२४४] उत्तीर्णा सिद्ध्यते[२४५] परा ।। ७० ।।

Once recited in the beginning in the forward order, the group of five (*praṇava*s should be recited) in the end in reverse. (58cd)

O god, having gone and come,[47] the Vidyā, O lord of the gods, is in the middle. Then, in accord with the sequence of emanation starting with the (letter) Bha, it is the Full Moon (pūrṇimā).[48] (59)

(If this) Vidyā is recited (just) once, the cage of the body shakes. The reciter of mantra (becames) an incarnation (aṁśa) of Rudra and the goddess of the Vidyā is the Full Moon. (60)

Otherwise, O god, she would not have descended down into this scripture. This indeed is the union of encapsulation (saṁpuṭaṁ yogaṁ)[49] with the Vidyā preceded by (the formation of its) the body. It called the Five-lettered (Vidyā).[50] He who receives it is successful. (61-62ab)

The encapsulated Vidyā is pure (but) without the encapsulation it is impure and, undoubtedly, creates obstacles at each step. Then (the method of) encapsulation has been explained in order to remove (these) obstacles. (62cd-63)

(In this way) the New Moon becomes the Full Moon. The dark (Moon) is gross and fierce (raudrā) (but), conjoined with the instrument (of mantra i.e. the Praṇavas), it becomes tranquil (saumyā).[51] (64)

O best of the gods, these five (*praṇava*s), that are the aforementioned sacred seats in due order,[52] should be placed before the letter Bha (in the beginning of the Vidyā) in the forward order beginning with Vāgbhava (AIṀ). (65)

Then again, the same (*praṇava*s) should be placed at the end of the syllable CCE (which is at the end of the Vidyā) in the reverse order. (Thus) the same Five Praṇavas that are at the beginning have emerged also at the end. (66)

I am the Vidyā in the middle, (the goddess) Kaulinī without form (amūrti). (I am) that thirty-two syllable (Vidyā) who, by means of this (mantric) instrument, is the forty-two syllable (Vidyā), which is my own mantra in the western tradition.[53] And that, O beloved, is the Praṇava, the Vedic energizer (dīpana), that should be given to it. (67-68)

Thus, (the Vidyā) is free and devoid of the six types.[54] (It is devoid of) OṀ preceded by NAMAḤ, SVĀHĀ, SVADHĀ, VAṢAṬ, VAUṢAṬ and SVĀHĀ at the end. It is devoid of PHAṬ that serves for protection. There (in that case), the supreme (Vidyā), free of these mantric syllables, is successful. (70)

प्रधानास्तेऽपि तन्त्रेषु इज्यार्थे होमकर्मसु ।
तैस्तु[२४६] कृत्वा कुलाम्नाये योगभ्रंशो[२४७] हि[२४८] जायते[२४९] ॥ ७१ ॥

स्वभावे दीपिता विद्या संस्थिता वह्निमण्डले ।
तदा सा तन्त्रमन्त्रैस्तु उत्तीर्णा[२५०] चापि सिद्ध्यति ॥ ७२ ॥

न चास्याः[२५१] सदृशा विद्या त्रिषु लोकेषु विद्यते ।
विद्यते कुलशास्त्रेऽस्मिन् पीठानां पीठदेवता ॥ ७३ ॥
अस्या विद्या परा नास्ति आज्ञाशास्त्रात् परं नहि ।
पीठक्रमात्[२५२] परं नास्ति गुरुवक्त्रात् परं नहि ॥ ७४ ॥

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये
कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे[२५३] स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्र–
संहितायां[२५४] अव्वाक्रमभाषिते विद्यापूर्णादिभेदचैतन्या–
धिकारवर्णने[२५५] क्रमोदयो नामानन्दः ॥ ९ ॥

Even though, according to the Tantras, these are also the main (syllables used) in rites in which offerings are made in the fire (homakarma) for the gods and ancestors (ijya); if (this) is done with these in the Kula tradition, there is a fall from Yoga. (71)

The Vidyā is energized (dīpitā) in its own essential nature and abides in the Circle of Fire. Then, even though it is free (uttīrṇā) of (supplimentary) rites (tantra) and mantras, it is successful. (72)

There is no Vidyā like it in the Three Worlds. The deity of the sacred seats, it is present in this Kula teaching (śāstra). There is no Vidyā superior to this one. There is nothing superior to the scripture of the Command (ājñāśāstra). There is nothing superior to the transmission of the sacred seats (pīṭhakrama) nor anything superior to the teacher's mouth. (73-74)

This is the (ninth) chapter which is the emergence of the transmission (kramodaya) with regards to the description concerning the (seed-syllable of) Consciousness and the types of the Vidyā, namely, Full and the rest. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for more than a hundred thousand quarter (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

दशमानन्दः

श्रीनाथ उवाच

किमेतत् पूर्णकरणं[१] विद्यायाः[२] कथितं त्वया ।
भैरवस्य तु पिण्डस्य यत्[३] तेजो[४] औसमध्यतः[५] ।। १ ।।

आदावन्ते स्थितस्यैव द्वौ[६] रेफौ[७] सन्निरोधतः ।
वक्रीकरणमेतद् वै[८] न पूर्णं करणं क्वचित् ।। २ ।।

एतच्छल्यं च विद्यायास्तदा[९] सा कीलिता[१०] भवेत्[११] ।
उत्कीलनं वद[१२] तस्या[१३] येन सा पूर्णिमा भवेत् ।। ३ ।।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१४]

एतत् प्रश्नवरं[१५] गुह्यं देवदेवावतारितम् ।
त्वदृते बुद्धिमान् नास्ति उत्तरं तस्य[१६] तच्छृणु ।। ४ ।।

भैरवस्य तु पिण्डस्य आदावन्ते स्थितस्य च ।
औसमध्यगतं[१७] शल्यं मध्याह्नार्कसमप्रभम्[१८] ।। ५ ।।

लोपनं[१९] तस्य तत् कृत्वा तत्र सा वारुणी कला ।
कृत्वा चामृतमाद्यन्ते ततो विद्या च सिद्ध्यति ।। ६ ।।

उपदेशं[२०] समाख्यातं लक्षजापेन खेगतिः ।
साधकस्य भवेद् देव नात्र कार्या विचारणा[२१] ।। ७ ।।

CHAPTER TEN

A Description of the Glory of the Vidyā.

The Fixing and Release of the Vidyā

Śrīnātha said:

What is that complete instrument (karaṇa) of the Vidyā you have explained (previously), namely, the radiant energy (tejas) of Bhairava's syllable (piṇḍa) (that emerges) from between Au and Sa?[1] (1)

There are two Ras. (One is in the seed-syllable) located at beginning (of the Vidyā) and (the other is in the seed-syllable at) the end, (placed there) in order to block (it). That is the way to make (the Vidyā) crooked (vakrīkaraṇa). (In that condition) the instrument (of mantra) is nowhere complete.[2] (2)

That is the Lance (śalya) of the Vidyā. (The Vidyā) is then fixed (kīlitā). (Now) tell me of its release (utkīlana) by virtue of which it becomes (the Vidyā of) the Full Moon. (3)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

This is the best of questions; (it concerns) the secret brought down (into this world) by the god of the gods. None is wise apart from you (and so) listen to its answer. (4)

The Lance (Ra), located between AU and Sa of Bhairava's syllable (HSRAU-UṀ) at the beginning and end (of the Vidyā), is as brilliant as the midday sun. (5)

The energy Vāruṇī is (located) there when that (i.e. the letter Ra) has been eliminated. Then, when nectar has (thus) been placed at the beginning and end, the Vidyā is successful.[3] (6)

(This) is said to be the teaching. By repeating (this Vidyā) 100,000 times, O god, the adept possesses (the power of mystical) flight (khegati).[4] (This is a fact), one need not ponder here (about this. It will certainly take place). (7)

तस्य तत्क्रमयुक्तस्य विद्याजापरतस्य च ।
अन्तिमे[२२] च युगे सिद्धिः प्रत्ययानि[२३] बहून्यपि[२४] ॥ ८ ॥

नष्टप्रत्यन्तविज्ञानं[२५] विद्यानाभ्यसनाद्[२६] भवेत् ।
एतत्[२७] तस्यापि[२८] संतानं प्रस्तारं[२९] पूर्वभाषितम् ॥ ९ ॥
मेरूत्था[३०] रुद्रशक्तिस्तु ज्ञात्वा[३१] विद्यार्थिनो[३२] भवेत् ।

इदानीं पदभेदेन विद्या पूर्णा[३३] निगद्यते ॥ १० ॥

च्वेविणिकिपदं[३४] पूर्वं णिकिच्छींच्छां[३५] द्वितीयकम् ।
तृतीयं खिमुराघो[३६] अमेनण[३७] चतुर्थकम् ॥ ११ ॥
पञ्चमं च ञ ङ स्ह्रौँ[३८] स्ह्रीँ[३९] षष्ठं[४०] स्ह्राँ[४१] केब्जिकु[४२] भवेत् ।
श्रीँ[४३] ह्स्ख्फ्रेँ[४४] रेघो सप्तमं स्यात् तिवगभपदाष्ठमम्[४५] ॥ १२ ॥

विद्या चाष्टपदैरुक्ता अघोरैषा[४६] महातनुः ।
पञ्चप्रणवपूर्वा च अन्ते पञ्च[४७] विलोमगाः ॥ १३ ॥

पूर्णकरणयोगोऽयं[४८] कथितं तव भैरव ।
अस्या[४९] वक्त्रषडङ्गानि[५०] करन्यासे विशोधयेत् ॥ १४ ॥

भेदद्वादशसंयुक्तान्[५१] पूर्वं[५२] चैव तु[५३] विन्यसेत् ।
वक्त्रन्यासमतः[५४] पूर्वं सृष्टिन्यायेन[५५] कारयेत्[५६] ॥ १५ ॥

ऊर्ध्ववक्त्रात् समारभ्य[५७] यावत्[५८] पश्चिममाननम्[५९] ।
सौम्यं सृष्टिक्रमेणैव[६०] रौद्रमन्यक्रमेण[६१] तु ॥ १६ ॥

He who is intent on that transmission (tatkramayukta) and is devoted to the repetition of the Vidyā (attains) accomplishment (siddhi) and many signs of attainment (pratyaya) in the last Age. (8)

Failure to practice the Vidyā leads to the complete loss of understanding (vijñāna) and of one's lineage and the grid (prastāra) explained previously. (But) once one knows Rudra's energy that has arisen from Meru,[5] he becomes a (true) disciple (vidyārthin).[6] (9-10ab)

The Vidyā of Thirty-two Syllables in Eight Parts

Now the Vidyā in its full form (pūrṇā) will be explained in accord with the division of its parts (padabheda).[7] (10cd)

First comes the part CCEVI ṆIKI. The second one is ṆIKI CCHIṀ CCHĀṀ. The third is KHIMURĀGHO. The fourth is AMENAṆA. The fifth is ÑAṄA SHRAUṀ SHRĪṀ. The sixth is SHRĀṀ KEBJIKU. The seventh is ŚRĪṀ HSKHPHREṀ REGHO. The eighth part is TIVAGABHA.[8] (11-12)

This Vidyā with eight parts, Aghorā whose body is great, has been explained. It is preceded by the Five Praṇavas and (has the same) five at the end in the reverse order. (13)

The Division and Deposition of the Limbs and Faces of the Vidyā[9]

O Bhairava, (I) have told you this, the conjunction (yoga) of the full (form of the) instrument (of mantra). One must purify (the Vidyā's) faces and six limbs when the deposition onto the hands (karanyāsa) (has been completed).[10] (14)

(These limbs and faces) with (their) twelve divisions (bheda)[11] should be deposited (onto the body) first. Thus, initially, one should perform the Deposition of the Faces (vaktranyāsa) according to the pattern of emanation (sṛṣṭinyāya).[12] (15)

The tranquil (saumya) (aspect is worshipped) according to the sequence of emanation, beginning with the upper face up to the western one. The fierce (raudra aspect is worshipped) through the other (reverse) sequence. (16)

पश्चिमानन[६२] कृत्वादौ यावद् ऊर्ध्वं क्रमाननम्[६३] ।
तावत् संहारमेवोक्त[६४] सिद्धाङ्गपञ्चक[६५] भवेत् ।। १७ ।।

सृष्टिक्रमेण[६६] सकल[६७] संहारेण तु निष्कलम्[६८] ।
सृष्टिसंहारयोर्ज्ञात्वा[६९] दिव्यवक्त्रं प्रवेशयेत् ।। १८ ।।

भकारादि[७०] च रेफान्तं ऊर्ध्ववक्त्रं च विन्यसेत्[७१] ।
देव्याकूटादि नामान्त[७२] मूर्धवक्त्र[७३] तु विन्यसेत् ।। १९ ।।[74]

बीजत्रयं समारोप्य विन्यसेत् पूर्वमाननम् ।
ङकारादि[७५] च शून्यान्तं विज्ञेयं दक्षमाननम्[७६] ।। २० ।।

सूर्यादिसोमपर्यन्त[७७] विन्यसेच्चोत्तराननम्[७८] ।
क्यादि[७९] चानुक्रमाभ्यासाद् वक्त्रेद[८०] पश्चिमं न्यसेत् ।। २१ ।।

देव्यः[८१] षट्कगतास्तेषां यथा चैव क्रमेण तु ।
परा देवी च मालिन्या सिद्धयोगेश्वरी[८२] तथा ।। २२ ।।
कालिकाख्या तथा देवी त्रिपुरामूर्ति[८३] पञ्चमी ।
पश्चिमे तु पुनस्तस्य उमाखेचरि[८४] पूर्विका[८५] ।। २३ ।।

पश्चिमाननमारभ्य[८६] वाग्भवाद्यन्तयोजिताः[८७] ।
पीठन्यासानुन्यासैस्तु कृत्वाङ्गानि षडिः[८८] पुनः ।। २४ ।।

(In that case) one must start first with the western face (and continue) up to the upper face of the Krama (kramānana).[13] Such is said to be (the process) of withdrawal (saṁhāra) and the group of five accomplished limbs (siddhāṅga).[14] (17)

The differentiated (sakala) (form of the deity is worshipped) in accord with the sequence of emanation, the undifferentiated (niṣkala) (form) by (the process of) withdrawal. Once one has know (the sequences of) emanation and withdrawal, one should enter the Divine Face.[15] (18)

One should deposit the letters from Bha to the letter Ra (BHAGAVATI GHORE) onto the uppermost face. (The section) from the goddess's Peak up to the end of the name (HSKHPHREṀ ŚRĪṀ KUBJIKE) should be deposited (directly) onto the head (above the four) (mūrdhavaktra).[16] (19)

Having placed the three seed-syllables (SHRĀṀ SHRĪṀ SHRAUṀ), deposit (them on) the eastern face. One should know that the southern face (consists of the letters) starting with Ṅa and ending with the Void (ṄAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHI). (20)

Deposit the Sun (CCHĀṀ) at the beginning and the Moon (CCHĪṀ) at the end onto the northern face. (The section) beginning with KI (KIṆI KIṆI VICCE) – by practicing (the recitation) in due order – deposit this onto the western face.[17] (21)

The goddesses associated with the six (faces) and of those (parts of the Vidyā) are, in due order, (as follows): the goddess Parā, Mālinī, Siddhayogeśvarī,[18] the one called Kālikā, the goddess whose form is Tripurā as the fifth and to the west of that, Umākhecarī, who is the one in front[19] (pūrvikā). (22-23)

Beginning with the western face, they are (all) conjoined at the beginning and end with Vāgbhava (AIṀ) and the rest (of the Five Praṇavas). The six limbs are again formed by means of the deposition of the sacred and seats and the subsiduary depositions. (24)

पुनरेव भकारादौ रेफान्तं हृदयं न्यसेत्[८९] ।
आत्मकूटादि नामान्तं[९०] उद्धृतं तु शिर[९१] न्यसेत् ।। २५ ।।

शिखायां[९२] त्रीणि बीजानि ब्रह्मविष्णुमहेश्वराः ।
ङादि[९३] चैव तु शून्यान्तं वर्मदेव्यामनुक्रमात् ।। २६ ।।

च्छाँ च्छीँ चैव तु चन्द्रार्कौ द्वावेतौ[९४] नेत्रयोर्न्यसेत्[९५] ।
विच्चे किणिकिणिपूर्व[९६] अस्त्रराजं तु विन्यसेत् ।। २७ ।।

एवं चाङ्गानि[९७] सुभग[९८] कौलिकाद्यन्तयोजिताः[९९] ।
पुटिताङ्च[१००] न्यसेद् देव सर्वरक्षकराः[१०१] पराः[१०२] ।। २८ ।।

तैरङ्गैर्देवताषट्क[१०३] हृदयादिक्रमेण[१०४] तु ।
देवी हृत्कमलाम्बाख्या[१०५] कुलदीपा तथैव च ।। २९ ।।
बर्बरा बहुरूपाख्या[१०६] महन्तारी च कोङ्कणा[१०७] ।
एवं ते देवताषट्कं अङ्गाना[१०८] परिकीर्तितम्[१०९] ।। ३० ।।

एतैर्द्वादशभिर्भेदैर्विन्यसेत्[११०] कुलदेवताम्[१११] ।
तन्त्रादेशविनिर्मुक्ताः[११२] सिद्धाङ्गानि[११३] षडङ्गयोः ।। ३१ ।।

ॐ नमश्चैव स्वाहान्तं वौषट् च स्वस्थिरार्णवम्[११४] ।
वषट् फट् क्रमेणैव[११५] उत्तीर्णाङ्गानि विन्यसेत् ।। ३२ ।।

योगपीठक्रमाच्छम्भो आद्यन्ते[११६] विनियोजिताः[११७] ।
पश्चादारभ्यते[११८] न्यास[११९] यथाख्यातं कुलागमे ।। ३३ ।।

Once this has been done, one should again deposit (the letters) beginning with Bha and ending with Ra (BHAGAVATI GHORE) as the Heart. (The part of the Vidyā) that has been extracted beginning with the Peak of the Self (HSKHPHREṀ) and ending with the name (KUBJIKE) should be deposited as the head. (25)

The three seed-syllables, namely those of Brahmā (SHRĀṀ), Viṣṇu (SHRĪṀ) and Maheśvara (SHRAUṀ), (should be deposited) onto the topknot. (The part) beginning with Ṅa and ending with the Void (Kha – ṄAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHI – should be deposited), in due order, onto the goddess of the armour. (26)

These two, CCHĀṀ and CCHĪṀ, which correspond to the Sun and Moon (respectively), should be deposited onto the eyes. VICCE preceded by KIṆI KIṆI should be deposited onto the king of weapons.[20] (27)

In this way the limbs, O handsome one, are conjoined at the beginning and end with the Kaulikā (Vidyā). O god, deposit them (thus) encapsulated, supreme and protectors of all.[21] (28)

(There is a) group of six deities along with these limbs. (These are), in due order, commencing with the heart, the goddess called Hṛtkamalāmbā along with Kuladīpā, Barbarā, the one called Bahurūpā, Mahantārī and Koṅkaṇā. This is said to be your group of six deities belonging to the limbs.[22] (29-30)

(Kubjikā) the deity of Kula should be deposited with these twelve divisions. The accomplished (siddha) limbs of the two groups of six limbs are free of the teachings of the Tantra.[23] (31)

The extensions of the limbs (uttīrṇāṇga) should be deposited in the following order: OṀ and NAMAḤ, the ending SVĀHĀ (then) VAUṢAṬ, HŪṀ (svasthirārṇava), VAṢAT and PHAṬ.[24] (32)

O Śambhu, (the syllables) are added at the beginning and end according to the transmission of the sacred seat of Yoga.[25] The deposition is performed after this as explained in the Kula scripture. (33)

वक्रमुख[१२०] भवेत्[१२१] षट्कं आख्यातं पूर्वनिर्णये ।
अङ्गषट्के[१२२] षडिमुद्रा[१२३] मुद्रा द्वादशधाक्रमे[१२४] ॥ ३४ ॥

योनिमुद्रा[१२५] तथा सिंहा[१२६] दूतीमुद्रा च[१२७] चिञ्चिणी[१२८] ।
शूलमुद्रा[१२९] च वक्रिण्या[१३०] मुद्राषट्कं क्रमेण तु ॥ ३५ ॥

एतैस्तु[१३१] भेदिता विद्या तदा सिद्ध्यारुहो[१३२] भवेत् ।
मुद्रिता[133] योनिमुद्राया[१३४] तदा विद्या[१३५] समभ्यसेत्[१३६] ॥ ३६ ॥

ध्यानद्वादशकं वक्ष्ये वक्त्राङ्गेषु[१३७] पृथक् पृथक् ।

श्वेत[१३८] रक्तानन[१३९] मूर्ध[१४०] पाण्डुर[१४१] पूर्वमाननम् ॥ ३७ ॥
दक्षिणानन[१४२] कृष्णं तु पीतं चैवोत्तराननम्[१४३] ।
पश्चिमं श्यामरक्तं तु वक्त्रं त्रिदशपूजितम् ॥ ३८ ॥

शुद्धस्फटिकसंकाशं देव्या हृदि विशिष्यते ।
तप्तहेमप्रतीकाशं शिरो देव्याः प्रकीर्तितम् ॥ ३९ ॥

ज्वालामालाकुला[१४४] रौद्रां विद्युज्जिह्वा[१४५] शिखां स्मरेत् ।
किञ्चिच्छाम[१४६] च[१४७] रक्तं च बहुवर्ण[१४८] कवचं न्यसेत्[१४९] ॥ ४० ॥

नेत्रौ चन्द्रार्कतुल्याभौ वर्तुलौ[१५०] हिमशीतलौ ।
वह्निवत् सदृश[१५१] चास्त्रं सर्वविघ्नविनाशकम्[१५२] ॥ ४१ ॥

The group of six explained in the previous teaching is the (sixfold) face of (the goddess) Vakrā. The Gesture in the twelvefold sequence[26] is the sixfold Gesture within the group of six limbs. (34)

The six Gestures, in due order, are: Yonimudrā (the Gesture of the Yoni – the Heart), Siṁhā (the Gesture of the Lioness – the Head), Dūtīmudrā (the Gesture of the Tantric Consort – the Topknot), Ciñciṇī (the Gesture of the Tamarind Tree – the Armour), Śūlamudrā (the Gesture of the Lance – the Eye) and Vakriṇyā (the Gesture of the Crooked One – the Weapon).[27] (35)

When the Vidyā is conjoined with these (limbs, faces and gestures), (the adept) is successful (siddhyāruha). He should practice the Vidyā when it has been sealed within the Gesture of the Yoni (yonimudrā).[28] (36)

The Visualization of the Goddess's Faces and Limbs

(Now) I will explain the twelvefold visualization (dhyāna) (that should be performed) individually (in association with) the faces and limbs. (37ab)

(The uppermost face is) white (śveta). The upper (one below that) is a red face. The eastern face is yellow (pāṇḍura).[29] The southern face is dark blue (kṛṣṇa). The northern face is yellow while the western face, worshipped by the gods, is blue and red.[30] (37cd-38)

(The limb) that is radiant like pure crystal is most excellent and is within the Heart of the goddess, (while) the Head of the goddess is said to be as brilliant as heated gold. (39)

One should recollect the Topknot to be (like) a terrible (raudra) tongue of lightning filled with garlands of flames. One should deposit (on one's body) the Armour (kavaca) that, multi-coloured, is light blue and red[31]. (40)

Round and cool as snow, the Eyes shine like the Sun and Moon,[32] while the Weapon, like fire, is the destroyer of all obstacles.[33] (41)

एतत् क्रमागतं योग[१५३] न्यासद्वादशक[१५४] प्रति ।
सदा[१५५] न्यस्तैस्तु देवेश[१५६] साधक: सिद्धिभाग् भवेत् ।। ४२ ।।

यानि[१५७] चेच्छति कामानि[१५८] तानि[१५९] लभति[१६०] नान्यथा ।
एक एव महादोषो[१६१] विद्ययाभ्यसनाद्[१६२] भवेत्[१६३] ।। ४३ ।।
यमेव लोकयेज्जन्तु[१६४] कोपाविष्टस्तु[१६५] साधक: ।
पातयेन्नात्र[१६६] संदेहो यदि शक्रसमो भवेत्[१६७] ।। ४४ ।।

पीठन्यासानुन्यासैस्तु[१६८] कृत्वा वै[१६९] वज्रपञ्जरम्[१७०] ।
मुद्रास्फोटा:[१७१] प्रवर्तन्ते[१७२] चालनं चावलोकनम्[१७३] ।। ४५ ।।

दिव्यदेह[१७४] न संदेहो वपुस्तेजश्चिरायुषम्[१७५] ।
सौभाग्य[१७६] कान्तिलक्ष्मी[१७७] च विद्याक्षोभ:[१७८] समन्तत:[१७९] ।। ४६ ।।
कामेश्वर्य[१८०] बल[१८१] शौर्य[१८२] सर्वसिद्धि: प्रवर्तते[१८३] ।

इत्यागमविशुद्धस्य विद्या[१८४] शुद्धक्रमस्य[१८५] च ।। ४७ ।।
प्रभावमेतदाख्यात[१८६] सिद्धप्रत्ययलक्षणम्[१८७] ।
सतताभ्यासयोगेन[१८८] द्वादशाब्दैस्तु[१८९] सिद्ध्यति ।। ४८ ।।

स्वयमाकाशगामी[१९०] च पातालतल[१९१] भुञ्जति[१९२] ।
यथा चाहं यथा त्व[१९३] च तथासौ साधकोत्तम:[१९४] ।। ४९ ।।

देवमाता जगन्माता[१९५] विश्वमाता प्रतिष्ठिता[१९६] ।
सर्वेषामालयं देव देवदेवी महातनु:[१९७] ।। ५० ।।

The Glory of the Vidyā

This is the Yoga[34] that has come through the transmission (kramāgata), namely, the deposition (nyāsa) in relation to the group of twelve (limbs and faces). O lord of the gods, the adept (sādhaka) is successful (siddhibhāk) with (these) constantly deposited (on his body).[35] (42)

He obtains whatever he desires (in this and in) no other way. There is only one great defect brought about by practicing with the Vidyā. If the adept (has practiced enough to have become) the equal of Śakra (the king of the gods), then whoever he looks at when angry, he certainly causes to drop (down senseless).[36] (43-44)

Once (he) has fashioned the (protective) cage of lightning flashes (vajrapañjara) by the deposition of the sacred seats and the subsidiary depositions (that accompany it), bursts of energy emanate from (his) gestures (mudrāsphoṭa), (and he receives the magical power to) move (objects at will) (cālana) and (the power of yogic) sight (avalokana). (45)

Without a doubt (the adept acquires a) divine body, corporeal radiance (vapustejas)[37] and a long life. (He attains) good fortune, the wealth of beauty, the arousal (kṣobha) of the (power of) the Vidyā[38] in every direction, the mastery of passion, strength, valour and complete accomplishment. (46-47ab)

This is the Vidyā of one who has been purified by the scriptures and of the pure transmission (krama). This, the power (prabhāva) (of the Vidyā), whose mark is accomplished realisation (siddhapratyaya), has been explained. (The adept) achieves success after twelve years through the constant practice of this Yoga. (47cd-48)

He (acquires the power of) flight spontaneously and enjoys (the pleasures of) the lower world. Just as you and I are, such is (he), the best of adepts (sādhaka). (49)

Mother of the gods, mother of the universe, mother of all things, well-established, abode of all, (she) is the goddess of the gods and her body is great, O god. (50)

सद्यावेशकरी[१९८] घोरा अघोराघोररूपिणी ।
महाविद्येश्वरी[१९९] माया भैरवी देवता[२००] परा ॥ ५१ ॥

अस्योच्चारणमात्रेण[२०१] सर्वपापक्षयो भवेत् ।
ब्रह्महत्या असंख्यानि[२०२] स्त्रीणां[२०३] गौबालहन्तकाः[२०४] ॥ ५२ ॥
भूमिहन्ता[२०५] सुवर्णं च परदारहराश्च ये ।
गुरुद्रोही[२०६] दुरात्मा च[२०७] मित्रद्रोही[२०८] विशेषतः ॥ ५३ ॥
अग्निद्रोहकरा[२०९] ये[२१०] च तथा विश्वासघातकाः[२११] ।
रथ्याचौरकरा[२१२] ये च पितृमातृ—उपेक्षकाः[२१३] ॥ ५४ ॥
बहून्यपि[२१४] कृतान्यायात्[२१५] मेरुराशिप्रमाणतः[२१६] ।
विद्योच्चारणन्यासैस्तु भस्मसात्[२१७] यान्ति[२१८] तत्क्षणात् ॥ ५५ ॥

सकृदुच्चरणाद्[२१९] देव सर्वतीर्थफलं लभेत्[२२०] ।
स्मरणान्निर्मलो[२२१] योगी भवते नीरुजः[२२२] सदा ॥ ५६ ॥

अश्वमेधसहस्राणां[२२३] गोकन्यादानकोटीनाम[२२४] ।
स्मरणात् तारणं[२२५] पुण्यं गोगृहे[२२६] शरणागते ॥ ५७ ॥
संग्रामे सन्मुखो युद्धे[२२७] गोग्रहे[२२८] प्राणदायकः ।
अनशने[२२९] च[२३०] भृगोः पाते तथा चैव महापथे[२३१] ॥ ५८ ॥
ग्रहणे[२३२] सोमसूर्ययोः[२३३] राहुग्रस्ते तु यत् फलम्[२३४] ।
तत् फलं प्राप्नुयाद् वीरो विद्यायाः[२३५] स्मरणादपि ॥ ५९ ॥

योगिन्यो[२३६] वरदास्तस्य पीठजाः[२३७] क्षेत्रजाश्च[२३८] वा ।
सहजाः[२३९] कलजाश्चैव पूजयन्ति पदे पदे[२४०] ॥ ६० ॥

She brings about immediate possession and, (both) horrific (ghorā) and benign (aghorā),[39] her nature is (basically) not fierce (aghorarūpiṇī).[40] (She is) the mistress of the great Vidyā, Māyā, Bhairavī, and the deity Parā (the Supreme). (51)

Merely by reciting (the Vidyā) all sins are destroyed, (even) countless brahminicides. Those who have killed women, children and cows, one who has spoilt the land, (stolen) gold and those who have kidnapped other (men's) women. The wicked one who has done violence to (his) teacher, particularly one who has done violence to a friend. Those who have violated the (sacred) fire, those who have betrayed (another person's) trust, highway robbers and those who disregard (their) mother and father. Even if (one's sins are all those that such people commit) and one commits many more, a heap as great as (mount) Meru, they are reduced to ashes in a moment by the recitation of the Vidyā and the depositions.[41] (52-55)

O god, by reciting it (just) once one gets the fruit of (pilgrimage to all) the sacred places (tīrtha). By recalling it, the yogi is always pure and free of the wrinkles (of old age). (56)

By recalling (this Vidyā) one (gets) the fruit, succur (tāraṇa) and merit (of performing) a thousand horse sacrifices and making countless millions of donations of cows and virgins. Even by just recalling the Vidyā, the Hero gets the fruit (acquired by practicing meditation) in a cow stall, by taking refuge (in the deity) (or that of) one who stands firm (sanmukha) in battle, (or he who) gives his life in a war, or (in attempting to prevent) the stealing of a cow. (He gets the fruits) of fasting, (or those acquired by one who committes ritual suicide by) throwing himself down from a precipice (bhṛgupāta), or (by undertaking) the Great Journey (mahāpatha),[42] (or that one acquires) during a lunar or solar eclipse when (the sun or moon) are devoured by Rāhu. (57-59)

The Yoginīs grant him boons, and those (Yoginīs who are) born out of the sacred seats (pīṭhajā) from the field (kṣetrajā), spontaneously (s*ahajā*) or out of the energies (kalājā), worship him at (his) every step. (60)

दुर्भग: सुभगो याति जनसौभाग्यवत्सल:[२४१] ।
संग्रामे तु जयप्राप्ति:[२४२] राजद्वारे यशो लभेत् ।। ६१ ।।

अपुत्रो लभते पुत्रान् आयुरारोग्यसंपद:[२४३] ।
मृतवत्सा तु[२४४] या नारी सुतजीवन्तिका भवेत् ।। ६२ ।।

कृतकृत्य:[२४५] स[२४६] देवेश[२४७] यस्य विद्या मुखे स्थिता ।
एकया जिह्वया[२४८] देव नाहं वर्णयितु[२४९] क्षमा ।। ६३ ।।

यान् यान् वांच्छयते[२५०] कामान् तांस्तान्[२५१] सर्वानवाप्नुयात्[२५२] ।
कलौ युगे[२५३] प्रभावोऽयं मर्त्यानां गोचरं गत:[२५४] ।। ६४ ।।

साधिता देवदेवेश ब्रह्मविष्ण्वेंद्रनायकै:[२५५] ।
अस्या विद्याप्रभावेण[२५६] नरा देवत्वमागता: ।। ६५ ।।

ये स्मरन्ति इमां नित्यं भुक्तिमुक्तिफलप्रदाम् ।
तस्य[२५७] हस्ततले मोक्षं इत्याज्ञा पारमेश्वरी ।। ६६ ।।

ब्रह्मणा[258] पूजिता चैषा शक्रेण च महेश्वर ।
विष्णुना भैरवेणापि[२५९] सिद्धगन्धर्वकिन्नरै:[२६०] ।। ६७ ।।
मारुतेन कुवेरेण लोकपालैर्दशो दिशै:[२६१] ।[२६२]
सर्वै:[२६३] संपूजिता[२६४] विद्या वन्दिता त्रिदशैरपि[२६५] ।। ६८ ।।

नान्या सा[२६६] गीयते[२६७] विद्या द्रव्यहीना[२६८] न चोच्चरेत् ।
कृतं तेन[२६९] महाशापं योगिन्यश्चक्रनायिका:[२७०] ।। ६९ ।।
रक्षणीया प्रयत्नेन इत्याज्ञा पारमेश्वरी[२७१] ।

An unfortunate man becomes lucky, loved by (all) people and by good fortune. (He attains) victory in battle and gets fame at the door of the king. (61)

The sonless man gets sons, the wealth of long life and health. The woman whose child has died becomes one who has given birth (to a child who) lives. (62)

O lord of the gods, he who has the Vidyā on his lips is one who has accomplished all that needs to be done. O god, I cannot describe (its power) with (just) one tongue. (63)

He gets all the things he desires. This (is) the power (that), in the Age of Strife, has come into the domain of mortal men.[43] (64)

O lord of the god of the gods, (this Vidyā) was acquired by the leaders (of the gods, namely) Brahmā, Viṣṇu and Indra. By the power of this (Vidyā), men have become gods. (65)

It bestows (both worldly) benefits and liberation to those who always recall it. It is the Command of the Supreme Goddess that liberation be in the palm of their hands. (66)

O Great God, this (Vidyā) is worshipped by Brahmā, Śakra (the king of the gods), Viṣṇu, Bhairava, the Siddhas, celestial eunuchs (kinnara) and the divine musicians (gandharva). (This) Vidyā is worshipped by all, by Rudra (māruta), Kuvera, the guardians, the ten directions as well as by the gods. (67-68)

The Vidyā extolled here is like none other. (But remember,) it should not be uttered (if it is) devoid of offerings (dravyahīnā). By doing this (one incurs) a great curse. It is the Supreme Goddess's Command that the Yoginīs, who are the leaders of the circles (of Siddhas and Yoginīs), should be protected with (every possible) effort. (69-70ab)

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[२७२] अन्वये[२७३] सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे[२७४] मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके[२७५] आद्यपीठावतारिते[२७६] विद्यापीठमार्गे[२७७] विमलषट्कनिर्णये
कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे[२७८] स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां
अव्वाक्रमभाषिते विद्यामाहात्म्यवर्णने[२७९]
क्रमोदयो नामानन्दः ॥ १० ॥

This is the (tenth) chapter which is the emergence of the transmission (kramodaya) with regards to a description of the Glory of the Vidyā. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for more than a hundred thousand quarter (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses) (vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with Kā in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

एकादशानन्दः

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१]

वर्णदेव्याः[२] क्रमं शम्भो[३] वदाम्यहं[४] यथा भवेत् ।
तथा कूटस्य विन्यासं[५] जपसंख्यार्घमण्डलम् ।। १ ।।

सृष्टिक्रमेण ऊर्ध्वादि देव्यो[६] द्वात्रिंशसंयुताः[७] ।
वाग्भवाद्यं ततः कृत्वा विद्यान्यासं च कौलिकम् ।। २ ।।

मस्तके प्रथमं देयं[८] द्वितीयं तुर्यमण्डले ।
तृतीयं[९] च चतुर्थं[१०] च द्वावेतौ[११] नेत्रयोर्न्यसेत्[१२] ।। ३ ।।

पञ्चमं च[१३] तथा षष्ठं[१४] द्वावेतौ[१५] च[१६] भ्रुवोर्न्यसेत्[१७] ।
आज्ञास्थाने सप्तमं[१८] च नासिकाग्रे तथाष्टमम्[१९] ।। ४ ।।

नवमार्णं[२०] त्रिभिर्मध्ये[२१] वक्त्रे[२२] चैव दशाक्षरम्[२३] ।
बीजं द्वादशमं[२४] कर्णे तथा वामे त्रयोदशम् ।। ५ ।।

कण्ठस्थाने विजानीयाद् वर्णं[२५] देव्याश्चतुर्दशम्[२६] ।
दक्षे पञ्चदशं स्कन्धे[२७] उत्तरे षोडशं[२८] भवेत् ।। ६ ।।

सप्तादशं[२९] बाहुदण्डे दक्षिणेऽष्टादशोत्तरे[३०] ।
एकोनविंशं[३१] हृदये[३२] विंशमं नाभिमण्डले ।। ७ ।।

CHAPTER ELEVEN

The Way to Offer Libation (argha) and Repeat the Vidyā.

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

[1]O Śambhu, I will explain the sequence of the goddesses of the letters as it is. (Then) in the same way, (I will tell you about) the deposition of the Peak syllable, the number of repetitions of mantra (required) and the maṇḍala of the argha offering.[2] (1)

The Sequence of the Goddesses of the Letters and their Deposition

(The syllables of the Vidyā) along with the thirty-two goddesses (should be deposited) in the sequence of emission, beginning from the top.[3] Then, once one has formed (the group of Five Praṇavas) that begins with Vāgbhava (AIṀ), (one should perform) the Kaulika deposition of the Vidyā. (2)

The first (syllable) (BHA) should be placed on the head and the second (GA) in the Circle of the Fourth State (turyamaṇḍala).[4] The third (VA) and the fourth (TI) – these two should be deposited onto the two eyes. (3)

The fifth (GHO) and sixth (RE) – these two should be deposited onto the two eyebrows. The seventh (HSKHPHREṀ) onto the location of the Command[5] and the eighth (ŚRĪṀ) onto the tip of the nose. (4)

The ninth syllable (KU) is between the three while the tenth (BJI) is in the mouth.[6] The twelfth seed-syllable (HRĀṀ) is on the (right) ear and the thirteenth on the left (HRĪṀ). (5)

Know that the fourteenth letter (HRAUṀ) of the goddess is on the throat. The fifteenth (ṄA) is on the right shoulder, the sixteenth (ÑA) on the left. (6)

The seventeenth is on the right arm (ṆA), the eighteenth (NA), on the left. The nineteenth (ME) is in the heart and the twentieth (A) is in the circle of the navel. (7)

एकविंशं ऊरुभ्यां[३३] च द्वाविंशं[३४] योनिमण्डले ।
त्रयोविंशारमध्ये[३५] च चतुर्विंशं[३६] तु[३७] नाडिगम् ॥ ८ ॥
सूष्मनायां[३८] महादेव स्फिजे[३९] च पञ्चविंशमम् ।
दक्षिणे तु भगीशाख्यं[४०] षड्विंशं[४१] चोत्तरे स्फिजे[४२] ॥ ९ ॥

सप्ताविंशं[४३] चाष्टाविंशं[४४] द्वावेतौ[४५] जानुनी[४६] न्यसेत् ।
एकोनत्रिंशं[४७] * त्रिंशं[४८] च[४९] जङ्घयोरुभयोर्न्यसेत्[५०] ॥ १० ॥

एकत्रिंशं[५१] च द्वात्रिंशं[५२] पादे दक्षे तथोत्तरे ।
वर्णानां देवतेदानीं[५३] द्वात्रिंशच्छुभ भैरव ॥ ११ ॥
स्वनामाक्षरभेदेन पदमन्त्रैर्विसर्पिता: ।

भीमा गगनवेगा[५४] च वीरदेवी चतुर्थिका[५५] ॥ १२ ॥
घोरा चैव तु रक्ताक्षी कूटमुद्रा श्रेयस्तथा[५६] ।
कुवेर्या[५७] कुब्जिकादेव्या कैवर्ता[५८] हरदेवता ॥ १३ ॥
हरी चैव हरानन्दा ङणनञमटेश्वरी[५९] ।
नागाख्या मीनदेवी च तथा चैव तु अम्बिका ॥ १४ ॥
घोरमुखी[६०] च रावा च मुसलायुधखेचरी[६१] ।
च्छांकारी[६२] चैव[६३] छिंच्छा[६४] च[६५] किङ्किणी कुलदेवता ॥ १५ ॥
करङ्किणी नारायणी[६६] विमला वर्चिका[६७] तथा ।

ज्ञेया द्वात्रिंशतिर्देव्य:[६८] स्थाने स्थानेऽधिकारिण्य:[६९] ॥ १६ ॥
एतासु पूजितास्वेव[७०] न भूयो जन्मबन्धनम् ।

एतदेव[७१] पुराख्यातं तस्योच्चारं[७२] तु कौलिकम् ॥ १७ ॥
सा[७३] च एकाक्षरं कूटं सप्तधाज्ञा च खेचरम् ।
करणं षड्विधं[७४] तस्य तत्र सिंहक्रमं भवेत् ॥ १८ ॥

The twenty-first (GHO) is on the thighs and the twenty-second (RĀ) in the circle of the Yoni. The twenty-third (MU) is in the centre of the spokes (of the wheel of the Yoni (?)). The twenty-fourth (KHI) is in the conduit (nāḍī) within Suṣumṇā (sūṣmanā) while the twenty-fifth (CHRĀṀ), called Bhagīśa, O great god, is on the right buttock, while the twenty-sixth (CHRĪṀ) is on the left buttock. (8-9)

The twenty-seventh (KI) and the twenty-eighth (ṆI) should be deposited on the knees. The twenty-ninth (KI) and the thirtieth (ṆI) should be deposited on the two shanks. The thirty-first (VI) and the thirty-second (CCE) on the right and left foot (respectively). (10)

Now, O auspicious Bhairava, (here are) the thirty-two deities of the letters that have emerged along with the parts (pada) and mantras according to the division of their own names and syllables. (11-12ab)

1) Bhīmā (Terrible) (BHA), 2) Gaganā (Sky) (GA) 3) Vegā (Force) (VA) with 4) Vīradevī (the Goddess of the Heroes) (TI) as the fourth. 5) Ghorā (Horrific) (GHO), 6) Raktākṣī (Red-eyed) (RE), 7) Kūṭamudrā (Peak Gesture) (HSKHPHREṀ), 8) Śreyas (Welfare) (ŚRĪṀ), 9) Kuveryā (KU), the goddess 10) Kubjikā (BJI), 11) Kaivartā (Fisherwoman) (KE), 12) Haradevatā (Śiva's Deity) (HRĀṀ), 13) Harī (HRĪṀ), 14) Harānandā (Śiva's Bliss) (HRAUṀ), 15) Ṅa, 16) Ña, 17) Ṇa, 18) Na, 19) Maṭeśvarī, the one called Nāgā (ME), 20) Mīnadevī (the Fish Goddess) (who is) Ambikā (A), 21) Ghoramukhī (GHO), 22) Rāvā (Sound) (RĀ), 23) Musalāyudhā (She whose Weapon is a Mortar) (MU), 24) Khecarī (Skyfarer) (KHI), 25) Cchāṁkārī (She who makes the Sound Cchām) (CHRĀṀ), 26) Chiṁcchā (Tamarind) (CHRĪṀ), 27) Kiṅkiṇī (Tinkle) (KI), 28) Kuladevatā (ṆI) 29) Karaṅkiṇī (KI) 29) Nārāyaṇī (ṆI), 31) Vimalā (Pure) (VI), and 32) Varcikā (Radiant) (CCE).[7] (12cd-16ab)

One should know the thirty-two goddesses to have authority (each) in (their own) particular place.[8] When they are worshipped, the bondage of birth does not occur again. (16cd-17ab)

The Deposition of the Peak syllable *(HSKHPHREṀ)*

This, as explained before, is the Kaulika (method of) the utterance (of the Vidyā).[9] And that is (also) the Peak of one syllable, the sevenfold Command[10] and (is called) the Skyfarer (khecara).[11] The instrument (of mantra) there (in that case) pertaining to it is the sixfold Transmission of the Lion (siṁhakrama).[12] (17cd-18)

ओडियाणं[७५] भ्रुवोर्मध्ये कामाख्यं शक्तिजन्मनि ।
शून्यं षट्कोणमध्ये तु रावपूर्णेन[७६] पूर्णकम् ॥ १९ ॥

तेजो[७७] जालन्धरं नाभौ[७८] तिस्राख्यं च विशुद्धिषु[७९] ।
तालुमध्ये तु चन्द्राख्यं[८०] तन्मध्ये बिन्दुमण्डलम्[८१] ॥ २० ॥
षोडशान्ते[८२] स्मृता[८३] आज्ञा एतत्[८४] खेचर्यनुक्रमात् ।

पदान्वेषणशीला[८५] ये जीवन्मुक्तिरताश्च ये[८६] ॥ २१ ॥
न तेषां[८७] पतनं देव गतास्ते पश्चिमे पदे ।

कृत्वा त्रितयसंयोगं[८८] क्षिप्ता[८९] आज्ञान्तमण्डले[९०] ॥ २२ ॥
रश्मिज्वालाकदम्बं[९१] च चिन्तयेच्च अधोमुखम्[९२] ।
नवलक्षकृते देव त्रैलोक्यमपि साधयेत् ॥ २३ ॥

कुलाचारे यथा[९३] प्रोक्तं अर्घमण्डलकं शृणु ।

एकान्ते विजने रम्ये[९४] एकारे[९५] पश्चिमादिशि[९६] ॥ २४ ॥
पशुदृष्टिविनिर्मुक्ते एकहस्तप्रमाणतः[९७] ।
गोमयेन प्रकर्तव्यं[९८] मण्डलं चतुरस्रकम्[९९] ॥ २५ ॥

तन्मध्ये सूर्यबिम्बं तु[१००] मण्डलं वर्तुलं कुरु[१०१] ।
अलिचन्दनकाश्मीरैः[१०२] पञ्चप्रणवमन्त्रितम्[१०३] ॥ २६ ॥
क्षिप्त्वा पञ्चार्णविद्यां तां[१०४] दक्षहस्ततलारुहेत्[१०५] ।
संयोगेन तु उत्थाप्य[१०६] वामावर्तपरिभ्रमात् ॥ २७ ॥
मुष्टिं[१०७] मध्ये ततो बध्वा अखण्डमिति मण्डलम् ।

Oḍiyāṇa is in between the eyebrows and Kāmākhya is in the Birth of Energy (śaktijanman). Pūrṇaka, (i.e. Pūrṇagiri, so called) because it is full of Sound (rāvapūrṇa), is the Void in the centre of the hexagon (ṣaṭkoṇa). (19)

Jālandhara is the radiant energy (tejas) in the navel, while the (sacred seat) called Tisra is in (the Wheel of) Purity (viśuddhi) (in the throat). The (seat) called Candra is in the centre of the palate and in the middle of that is the Circle of the Drop (bindumaṇḍala). The Command is said to be in the End of the Sixteenth. This is in due order, (the goddess) Khecarī.[13] (20-21ab)

O god, those who are intent on seeking (the supreme) level (of existence) and those devoted (to the attainment of) liberation in this life (jīvanmukti), do not fall once (they) have attained the Western Plane (paścimapada).[14] (21cd-22ab)

Having formed the conjunction of the three,[15] once the Command has been placed (kṣiptā) in the maṇḍala at the end,[16] one should think (of it) as the Kadamba (tree)[17] aflame with its rays facing downwards. O god, when (the Vidyā has been recited) 900,000 times, he shall even gain control of the triple world. (22cd-23)

The Fashioning of the Maṇḍala and the Offering of Libation (argha)[18]

(Now) listen to what is said to be the Maṇḍala of the Libation (argha)[19] according to the practice of Kula (kulācāra).[20] (24ab)

(Having fashioned) the letter E in the western direction in a beautiful secluded place where there are no people, out of sight of the uninitiated (paśu), one should (then) fashion a square (caturasraka) maṇḍala the size of one handspan with cow dung (and water).[21] (24cd-25)

In the centre of that make a round maṇḍala (representing) the solar disc made of liquor, sandalwood and saffron (kāśmīra) and consecrated (mantrita) with the Five Praṇavas. Having cast that Five-lettered Vidyā[22] (into the square) then place the palm of the right hand (there). Having raised it in conjunction (with the Five Praṇavas) by rotating (the hand) anticlockwise (around the maṇḍala), and clenching it into a fist in the middle (of the maṇḍala), it is (known as) the Unbroken (akhaṇḍa) Maṇḍala.[23] (26-28ab)

पञ्चप्रणव[१०८] कृत्वादौ प्राकाराष्टक[१०९] विन्यसेत् ।। २८ ।।
ऐन्द्रादारभ्य देवेश दिग्दिशाष्टौ क्रमेण तु ।
त्रिबीजैरारुहेत्[११०] तेषां ततो हस्तं समुद्धरेत् ।। २९ ।।

दर्पणं शोधयेत् तत्र षोडशांगुलमानतः ।
त्रिगुण[१११] चांगुलैक[११२] तु भस्मना च विशोधयेत् ।। ३० ।।
स्थापयेद्[११३] देव्यशस्त्रेण[११४] कवचेनावगुण्ठयेत्[११५]।

त्रिकोणान्ते लिखेच्छक्तिं कौलेशीं[116] च अधोमुखीम् ।। ३१ ।।
तद्बाह्ये कारयेत् षट्कं मेखलात्रयभूषितम्[११७] ।

वीरपात्रमथारोप्य[११८] अनेन करणेन तु ।। ३२ ।।
तस्या[११९] वक्त्रषडङ्गानि सबाह्याभ्यन्तरे[१२०] न्यसेत् ।

क्षेत्रेशवटुकाभ्यां[१२१] च योगिनीनां बलित्रयम् ।। ३३ ।।
कृत्वादौ प्रारभेत् पूजां निर्विघ्ना सिद्धिरिष्यते[१२२] ।

आनियाद्[१२३] हेमकलश[१२४] तदभावेन[१२५] रौप्यजम्[१२६] ।। ३४ ।।
ताम्रजं मृन्मयं वापि[१२७] निर्व्रणं सुसमं शुभम्[१२८] ।
कम्बुग्रीवोच्छ्रितं स्वर्ण[१२९] बालबालुकवर्जितम्[१३०] ।। ३५ ।।

उदके[१३१] पूर्वतः[१३२] क्षाल्य[१३३] अस्त्रराजेन शोधयेत् ।
अवगुण्ठ्य च वर्मेण[१३४] अलिद्रव्येण पूरयेत्[१३५] ।। ३६ ।।

स्थापयेत्[१३६] कोङ्कणास्त्रेण[१३७] मण्डलाग्रे महेश्वर[१३८] ।
कवचेनावगुण्ठेन मूर्त्यावेशस्तथात्मना[१३९] ।। ३७ ।।

विद्यान्यासं ततः कुर्याद् भादि चानुक्रमेण तु ।
क्रमार्चनमतः कुर्यात् पृथक्वर्णक्रमेण तु ।। ३८ ।।
त्रिकोणान्ते तु विन्यस्य विद्यां[१४०] पुष्पाञ्जलिं क्षिपेत् ।
संयोगेन तु विद्यायाः पीठषट्कं तु बाह्यतः ।। ३९ ।।

Having formed the Five Praṇavas at the beginning, O Lord of gods, one should deposit the eight ramparts (prākārāṣṭaka) in due order into the eight directions beginning with Indra's (quarter i.e. the east). One should place (them) with three (repetitions) of their seed-syllables. Then one should raise one's hand.[24]
(28cd-29)

Then there, one should purify the mirror,[25] which measures sixteen fingers (in diameter) and is one finger (thick). (The circle is) three times (that). One should purify it with ash. Install it with the (goddess's) divine Weapon[26] and envelop it within the Armour.27

Draw the energy Kauleśī, facing downwards, into the triangle.[28] Outside that, one should cause to fashion the group of six (ṣaṭka) adorned with three girdles (mekhala).[29] (31cd-32ab)

Once the Hero's Vessel (vīrapātra) has been placed (in the maṇḍala)[30] with this instrument (of mantra), one should deposit the faces and six limbs of (the goddess) internally and externally. (32cd-33ab)

After one has first made three meat offerings (bali) to the Lord of the Field, to Vaṭuka[31] and to the Yoginīs, one should start the rite of adoration (pūjā) if one wishes unobstructed success.[32] (33cd-34ab)

One should fetch a golden jar. If that is unavailable, (fetch) a silver one or one of copper, or even of clay (but it should be) without cracks, beautifully even and auspicious. It (should have a thick) neck like a conch and be tall, golden and free of (polluting) hair and sand. (34cd-35)

Having first washed it in water, it should be purified it with the King of Weapons (astrarāja) and once it has been wrapped within the Armour, it should be filled with liquor (alidravya). (36)

O great lord, place it in front of the maṇḍala with the Weapon of Koṅkaṇa and, by enveloping (it with) the Armour and by means of the Self, the image (of the deity) penetrates (into it) (mūrtyāveśa).[33] (37)

Then deposit the Vidyā in due order beginning with Bha. Then one should perform the worship of the Krama (kramārcana) according to the order of the individual letters (of the Vidyā). Having deposited the Vidyā into the triangle, throw a handful of flowers (into the maṇḍala). Outside the Vidyā and in conjunction (with it), (deposit) the six sacred seats.[34] (38-39)

पञ्चप्रणवसंयुक्ता ॐकारे[१४१] पश्चिमे दले ।
आग्नेया[१४२] जालपीठं तु नैर्ऋत्या[१४३] पौर्णगिर्यकम् ॥ ४० ॥
पूर्वकोणे[१४४] तु कामाख्यं वायुकोणे तु तिस्रकम् ।
ईशाने कोङ्कण[१४५] नाम उलिसिद्धाश्रय[१४६] पुनः ॥ ४१ ॥
त्रिष्कोणे[१४७] तु भगीशाख्यः[१४८] पूजितव्यः[१४९] क्रमेण तु[१५०] ।

सिद्धाङ्गपञ्चक[१५१] मध्ये षडङ्गं तु षडस्रके ॥ ४२ ॥
हृदयं कामरूपे तु शिरः[१५२] पूर्णगिरिः स्मृतम्[१५३] ।
शिखा जालन्धरे पीठे कवचं तिस्रसंज्ञके[१५४] ॥ ४३ ॥
नेत्रमोंकारपीठे तु अस्त्रं[१५५] चैव तु कोंकणे ।

तद्बाह्ये मेखलायां तु श्लोकानि[१५६] द्वादशार्चयेत् ॥ ४४ ॥
अकारादिविसर्गान्ता[१५७] स्वरचक्रेशिमेखला[१५८] ।
कादिभान्तक्रमे[१५९] सिद्धिर्द्वितीया बाह्यमेखला ॥ ४५ ॥
मादिसान्ता[१६०] तृतीया च[१६१] एतद् वै वर्णराशिकम्[१६२] ।

मलयाधिवासितैः पुष्पैः श्वेतैः कुंकुमचर्चितैः ॥ ४६ ॥
दर्पणे च पुरा शुद्धैस्तथा[१६३] सर्वोषधीषु[१६४] च ।
सुगन्धेन तु धूपेन गोधूमादिकदीपकैः[१६५] ॥ ४७ ॥
त्रिविधेन[१६६] तु मद्येन[१६७] क्षीरोदनगुडौदनैः[१६८] ।
मांसौदनैस्त्रिभिर्देव[१६९] आममांसेन कर्दमैः ॥ ४८ ॥
कुब्जिकाक्रममेतद्धि[१७०] पूजयित्वा निवेदयेत् ।

कलश[१७१] पूजयेत् पश्चात्[१७२] विद्यापुष्पांजलित्रिभिः[१७३] ॥ ४९ ॥
चन्दनं कुंकुमादीनि आत्मानं च निवेदयेत् ।
ततोऽप्यर्घं च पुष्पानि[१७४] द्वात्रिंशाक्षरसंख्यया[१७५] ॥ ५० ॥

जानुनी उभयौ[१७६] भूमौ क्षिप्त्वा चार्घं तु विद्यया[१७७] । विनिवेद्य महाचक्रे जपसंख्यामुदीरयेत् ॥ ५१ ॥

अम्बे[१७८] सिद्धे तथाघोरे देहि मां परमेश्वरि ।
ममेप्सितां महासिद्धिं सर्वकामफलोदयाम् ॥ ५२ ॥

(The Vidyā), conjoined with the Five Praṇavas, (should be) deposited onto the western petal which is that of (the sacred seat of) OṀ (i.e. Oḍḍiyāna). The sacred seat Jāla is in the south-east. (The seat of) Pūrṇagiryaka is in the south-west. Kāmākhya is in the eastern corner. Tisraka is in the north-west corner and Koṅkoṇa is in the north-east. Again, the abode of the Siddhas of the (three) lineages (uli) (should be deposited) into the triangle. (Then), in due order, one should worship (the god) called Bhagīśa.[35] (40-42ab)

The group of five limbs of the Siddhas (i.e. the Five Praṇavas) is in the centre, while the six-limbed is in the six spokes. The Heart is in Kāmarūpa, while the Head is said to be Pūrṇagiri. The Topknot is in the sacred seat of Jālandhara, the Armour in (the seat) called Tisra. The Eye is in the sacred seat of the syllable OṀ and the Weapon is in Koṁkaṇa.[36] (42cd-44ab)

Outside that one should worship the Twelve Verses in the enclosure (mekhalā). (The first) girdle, that of the mistress of the Wheel of the Vowels, begins with the letter A and ends with Emission (visarga). The second outer girdle consists of the accomplishment (attainable) in the sequence (of letters) beginning with Ka and ending with Bha. The third (enclosure) consists of (the letters) from Ma to Sa. This indeed is the aggregate of letters (varṇarāśika).[37] (44cd-46ab)

(The maṇḍala should then be worshipped) with pure, white flowers, perfumed with sandal (malaya) and smeared with vermilion. (They are offered) first to the mirror with all the herbs, sweet-smelling incense, lamps (made of) wheat (pastry) (godhūma) and the rest, three kinds of wine, the three kinds of cooked rice, namely, those made with milk, raw sugar and meat, along with raw meat and (varieties of) rice (kardama). After it has been worshipped, one should make food offerings (nivedayet) to this, the Kubjikā Krama.[38] (46cd-49ab)

After that, one should worship the jar with three handfuls of flowers and the Vidyā. One should make offerings of sandalwood, vermilion and the rest and one's self (ātman) as well as water (argha) and flowers numbering thirty-two (an amount equal to) the syllables (of the Vidyā). (49cd-50)

Placing both knees on the ground and having offered water (argha) along with the Vidyā to the Great Wheel, one should say (the following as many) number of times as one repeats the Vidyā (japasaṁkhyā). (51)

"O mother! Siddhā! Aghorā! O Supreme Goddess, give me the Great Accomplishment that I desire, which is the arising of the fruit of all desires!"[39] (52)

कुमार्यष्टौ[१७९] ततः पूज्याः[१८०] षट्कं[१८१] च त्रयमेका वा[१८२] ।
ततः सिद्धिं[१८३] लभेन्मन्त्री आदिपर्वे[१८४] न संशयः ॥ ५३ ॥
ब्रह्मचर्यव्रतं कुर्यात् कामक्रोधादि घातयेत्[१८५] ।
ततः[१८६] सिद्धिर्न संदेहो सेवनाद् गतिरिष्यते ॥ ५४ ॥

सहस्रादि च लक्षान्तं जपसंख्याविधिं शृणु[१८७] ।

वामपाण्यक्षमाला[१८८] या[१८९] स्फाटिकैरथ पुत्रकैः ॥ ५५ ॥
पद्माक्षैर्वा प्रकर्तव्या यथालाभेन कारयेत् ।
अक्षसूत्रमलाभेन[१९०] पाणिना जप्यमारभेत् ॥ ५६ ॥
आगमार्थविधानेन वामावर्तपरिभ्रमात्[१९१] ।
तर्जनीवाममूलात्[१९२] तु पूर्वारभ्य[१९३] महेश्वर ॥ ५७ ॥

उपदेशं गुरोर्वक्त्राज्जपसिद्धिं[१९४] लभेत्[१९५] क्रमात् ।
स्थूलं वाप्यथ सूक्ष्मं वा न मेरुं लङ्घयेत् करे[१९६] ॥ ५८ ॥

वर्जयित्वा तु तज्ज्येष्ठं[१९७] कुर्यात् प्रान्तं[१९८] चतुष्टयम् ।
पर्वसंख्याकृतं[१९९] जप्यं मध्यमोभौ[२००] तु वर्जयेत् ॥ ५९ ॥

एवं क्रमविधानेन वामावर्तपरिभ्रमात् ।
गमागमेन[२०१] मनसा[२०२] हृद्गतं[२०३] गमनं[२०४] कुरु[२०५] ॥ ६० ॥

पूरकेन स्वकीयेन[२०६] मनं[२०७] कुम्भे[२०८] प्रकल्पयेत्[२०९] ।
रेचयित्वा ततः सिद्धिरिहलोके परत्र च[२१०] ॥ ६१ ॥

यावदक्षरसंख्या च[२११] तावत् कुर्याच्च[२१२] कुम्भकम् ।
वायुना सह वेगेन करोत्यावेशमुत्तमम् ॥ ६२ ॥

Then one should worship eight virgins (kumārī), six, three or one. Thus the one who recites mantra will undoubtedly achieve success (siddhi) at the first auspicious time (ādiparvan). One should observe a vow of chastity and destroy lust, anger and the rest. Then without any doubt (one attains) success and, by practice (sevana), the (supreme) state (gati).[40] (53-54)

The Repetition of the Vidyā with the aid of the Left Hand[41]

(Now) listen to the prescription concerning the enumeration of the repetition of the Vidyā commencing with one thousand up to one hundred thousand (repetitions).[42] (55ab)

The rosary for the left hand should be made of crystals, Putraka[43] or lotus seeds. One should have it made according to the (material one has managed to) obtain (and afford). If one cannot get a rosary then one should practice the required repetition (of the Vidyā) (japya) with (the aid of one's) hand. O Great Lord, in accord with the method (laid down) by the teaching of the scripture, (this is done) by moving (the thumb) in an anticlockwise direction (vāmāvartaparibhrama), starting initially from the root of the left index finger.[44] (55cd-57)

One should get the teaching from the teacher's mouth and success in the repetition of the Vidyā progressively. Whether (the repetition) is gross or subtle[45] one should not cross over Meru on the hand.[46] (58)

Omitting the middle finger (jyeṣṭha) (count the repetitions up to the end) of the group of four (phalanges) at the end (of the little finger). Both (fingers) in the middle (of the hand) should be omitted (in the returning movement). The repetition is done according to the number of phalanges (parvan) (traversed).[47] (59)

In this way, by moving in an anticlockwise direction in accord with the prescribed sequence, by the going and coming[48] mentally fix the movement in the Heart. (60)

By means of one's own inhaled breath (pūraka), mentally station (prakalpayet) the mind (manas) in the (inwardly) retained breath (kumbhaka). Having exhaled, (one obtains) success (siddhi) in this world and the next. (61)

One should practice retention of the breath (for a period of time) according to the number of letters (of the Vidyā).[49] (In this way) by means of the force (vega) (of intent) along with the breath (vāyu), (the yogi) brings about the most excellent (form of) penetration (āveśa).[50] (62)

अनेनैव विधानेन न[२१३] द्रुतं न विलम्बितम् ।
मध्यचारगतिं ज्ञात्वा जपं कुर्यात्[२१४] त्रयोलिषु ॥ ६३ ॥[२१५]
एवं पाणिकृतं जप्यं उत्तमं परिकीर्तितम् ।

अक्षसूत्रेण वा देव माहात्म्यमथवा[२१६] शृणु ॥ ६४ ॥

सहस्रेण तु[२१७] जप्तेन प्राप्तः[२१८] शत्रुः परांमुखः ।
द्विभिः[२१९] प्रवर्तते तेजस्त्रिभिरैश्वर्यसंपदः[२२०] ॥ ६५ ॥
चतुर्भिर्जनसौभाग्यं[२२१] आयुरारोग्यं[२२२] पञ्चभिः ।
ज्ञानप्राप्तिर्भवेत्[२२३] षड्भिरवस्था सप्तभिर्भवेत् ॥ ६६ ॥
अष्टाभिः[२२४] पश्यते[२२५] किञ्चिद् दिव्यरूपं कुलात्मकम्[२२६] ।
नवभिर्लभते योगं[२२७] निर्वाणं खेचरक्रमम्[२२८] ॥ ६७ ॥

दशभिर्वर्तते वेधं[२२९] मुद्रास्फोटं[२३०] तु विंशभिः[२३१] ।
मारणं त्रिंशभिश्चैव[२३२] चत्वारिंशभिः[२३३] स्तम्भनम् ॥ ६८ ॥
रणे राजकुले द्यूते विवादे शत्रुमध्यतः ।

शिलानां भेदनं स्तोभं[२३४] वृक्षाणां पातनं तथा[२३५] ॥ ६९ ॥
पञ्चाशद्भिः[२३६] सहस्रैस्तु जपितैर्नात्र संशयः ।
षष्टिभिश्च[२३७] सहस्रैस्तु[२३८] देवकन्या[२३९] तिलोत्तमा[२४०] ॥ ७० ॥
वशं याति न[२४१] संदेहो मानुषेषु[२४२] च का कथा[२४३] ।

राजानः[२४४] मण्डलीकास्तु[२४५] अन्तःपुरनिवासिनः[२४६] ॥ ७१ ॥
ये चान्ये[२४७] मानवा लोके आज्ञाश्रवणतत्पराः[२४८] ।

Knowing the manner of the modality of the medium movement, (the practice of which) according to this method (vidhāna) is neither (too) fast nor (too) slow, one should practice the repetition of Vidyā in the three Lineages (trayoli).[51] The recitation of Vidyā done with the (aid of) the hand in this way is said to be the best.[52] (63-64ab)

The Benefits of Reciting the Vidyā

O god, alternatively, listen to the glory (of the recitation of Vidyā done) with (the aid of a) rosary.[53] (64cd)

By reciting (the Vidyā) a thousand times, the enemy one encounters (becomes) averse (to fight). (Recited) two (thousand times), brilliant energy (tejas) is generated.[54] (Recited) three (thousand times), (one attains) the wealth of sovreignty. (Recited) four (thousand times), the well-being of the people.[55] (Recited) five (thousand times), long life and good health. (Recited) six (thousand times), one obtains knowledge. (Recited) seven (thousand times, it generates) a higher state. (Recited) eight (thousand times), he sees something divine of the nature of Kula.[56] (Recited) nine (thousand times), he achieves Yoga, Nirvāṇa and the Transmission of the Skyfarer (khecarakrama). (65-67)

(Recited) ten (thousand times), the perforation (of the psychic centres) (vedha) (takes place). (Recited) twenty (thousand times), (the power to bring about) explosions by a gesture (mudrāsphoṭa)[57] (is attained). (Recited) thirty (thousand times, it brings about) the death (of an enemy). (Recited) forty (thousand times, it brings about) the paralysis (of the enemy)[58] in battle, in the king's family (and that of an adversary) when gambling, (during) a dispute or in the midst of (one's) enemies. (68-69ab)

By reciting the Vidyā fifty thousand times, without a doubt, stones burst apart, (enemies) are paralysed (stobha) and trees fall.[59] By sixty thousand (repetitions), undoubtedly (even) Tilottamā, the celestial maiden (devakanyā), comes under one's control, so what to say of (the women) among men?[60] Kings, (their) vassals, those who dwell in (their palaces') inner chamber and all the other people in the world who are intent on listening to (their) command (are all brought under one's control). (69cd-71ab)

O god, by (reciting the Vidyā) seventy thousand times, one controls (demonic beings called) Vetālas and the demon Mahiṣāsura as well as the (world of) moving and immobile (beings). (71cd-72ab)

सप्ततिभिः[२४९] सहस्रैश्च वेतालान्यभिसाधयेत्[२५०] ।। ७२ ।।
तथा चराचरं देव[२५१] महिषासुरदानवम् ।
ब्रह्मा[२५२] सम्पद्यते मूर्तौ[२५३] स्वयंरूपेण[२५४] देहिना[२५५] ।। ७३ ।।
पाताले भुञ्जते[२५६] भोगान्[२५७] कन्याभिः[२५८] सह क्रीडते[२५९] ।
अशीतिभिः सहस्रैस्तु[२६०] जपितैर्नात्र संशयः[२६१] ।। ७४ ।।
नवतिभिर्भवेद्[२६२] विष्णुः स्वयं मर्त्यतनुः प्रिय[२६३] ।
पृथिव्याधिपतिर्भूत्वा एकच्छत्रेण भुञ्जते ।। ७५ ।।
लक्षैकेन[२६४] स्वयं रुद्रो[२६५] भवे[२६६] तिष्ठति मानवः[२६७] ।
विमानं तस्य चायाति पञ्चचामरभूषितम् ।। ७६ ।।
देव्यष्टकसमोपेतं[२६८] चतुःषष्टिभिरावृतम्[२६९] ।
वेष्टितं बहुभिः सिद्धैस्तारानक्षत्रमण्डलैः ।। ७७ ।।
भवेत् कलौ महासिद्धः साधको विद्यया युतः ।
व्रजते[२७०] च खमार्गेण यत्रस्था भैरवी स्वयम् ।। ७८ ।।
वसते[२७१] तत्र मध्ये तु भवते अजरामरः ।
यथाहं देवदेवेश तथासौ साधकोत्तमः ।। ७९ ।।
इच्छारूपधरः श्रीमान् लक्षजापेन खेचरः ।
त्रैलोक्ये[२७२] क्रीडतेऽसौ[२७३] वै कामरूपी महाबलः ।। ८० ।।
क्षणाच्च शाङ्करं रूपं क्षणाद् रूपं च वैष्णवम् ।
क्षणाद् ब्राह्मं च ऐन्द्रं च सौरं चान्द्रं क्षणेन तु ।। ८१ ।।
क्षणान्नारायणं रूपं क्षणाद् वै मारुतं भवेत् ।
क्षणाच्चापि ज्वलद्रूपं स्थूलं सूक्ष्मं क्षणात् क्षणात् ।। ८२ ।।
क्षणात् पक्षिणमाकाशे[२७४] क्षणात् सिंहं[२७५] महावने ।
मार्जारं[२७६] च शृगालं च श्वानमुष्ट्रं[२७७] च गर्दभम् ।। ८३ ।।
वृषं चैव तु मेषं च उलूकं च तथैव च ।
व्याघ्रं चैव तु ऋक्षं च मृगं वाथ महाद्विपम् ।। ८४ ।।
क्षणाच्च मानुषे[२७८] लोके नानारूपधरो भवेत् ।

By reciting (the Vidyā) eighty thousand times, the embodied being attains Brahmā in (his embodied) form as his own form and, without a doubt, he enjoys the pleasures in the lower world and sports (there) with young women. (72cd-74)

(By reciting the Vidyā) ninety thousand times, O dear one, the embodied mortal becomes Viṣṇu himself,[61] and having become the king of the earth enjoys it (all, keeping it under the protection of his royal) parasol alone. (75)

(By reciting the Vidyā) one hundred thousand times, a man abides as Rudra himself in (this) world (of bondage) (bhava).[62] His vehicle comes (to fetch him) decorated with five chowries,[63] accompanied by the eight (mother) goddesses, surrounded by the sixty-four (Yoginīs) and many Siddhas along with the circles of stars and constellations. (76-77)

The adept who is yoked to the Vidyā is (indeed) a great Siddha in the Age of Strife. He moves by the path of the sky and lives there, free from old age and death, in the midst (of these beings) where Bhairavī herself resides. (78-79ab)

O God of the gods, this, the best of adepts, is as I am. By reciting the Vidyā one hundred thousand times he possesses royal power (śrī),[64] flies (khecara) and assumes whatever form he pleases. (79cd-80ab)

Indeed, this mighty one, whose form is as he pleases (kāmarūpin), plays in the triple world. In an instant (he can assume) Śaṅkara's form, in an instant Viṣṇu's, in a moment Brahmā's, in a moment that of Indra, the Sun and the Moon, in a moment Narāyaṇa's, in an instant it is that of the wind. (80cd-82ab)

And in an instant (he can assume) a burning form. In an instant he is gross, one moment later, subtle. In a moment (he is) a bird in the sky, in an instant a lion in a great forest, a cat, a jackel, dog, camel, donkey, bull, ram, owl, tiger, bear, deer or a great elephant. In an instant he assumes many forms in the world of men.[65] (82cd-85ab)

एवं संजायते सिद्धिर्भवते[२७९] अजरामरः ।। ८५ ।।
निश्चयात्[२८०] लक्षजापेन साधकस्य तु खेगतिः ।

यत्र यत्र मनो याति तत्र तत्र महाश्रियः ।। ८६ ।।
यद् यद्[२८१] कामयते कामं[२८२] तत् तत् क्षणात् प्रवर्तते[२८३] ।

न तस्य दुर्गमं स्थानं भ्रमतेऽसौ[२८४] पतङ्गवत् ।। ८७ ।।
मत्तमातङ्गयूथानां हनत्येकोऽपि[२८५] केशरी ।
तथासौ भवदेवानां हनति[२८६] साधकोत्तमः ।। ८८ ।।
त्वत्तुल्यः[२८७] साधकेन्द्रस्तु विद्ययाभ्यसनाद्[२८८] भवेत् ।

एकवृक्षे श्मशाने च गत्वा चैव चतुष्पथे ।। ८९ ।।
अटव्यां[२८९] निर्जने स्थाने शून्ये देवगृहे तु[२९०] च ।
एषु स्थानेषु कर्तव्यं विद्याजापमनन्तकम्[२९१] ।। ९० ।।
पूजाकाले[२९२] तु सुभग[२९३] निशाचारेण कौलवित् ।

परिभ्राजितचित्तस्य[२९४] संसारे विरतात्मनः ।। ९१ ।।
तस्यैषा सिद्धिराख्याता विद्याराधनकर्मणि ।

न च मायावृतस्यैव गृहस्थस्य तु भैरव ।। ९२ ।।
गृहे सिद्धिस्तथा नैव भुक्तिमुक्तिमवाप्नुयात्[२९५] ।

इहैव जीवलोकेऽस्मिन् जीवन्मुक्ता[२९६] न संशयः ।। ९३ ।।
विद्यापूजारता ये तु तन्मनास्तत्परायणाः ।
गत्वा वै आदिपीठे तु अथवा पूर्णगिर्यके ।। ९४ ।।
जालाख्ये त्वथवा देव तथा[२९७] श्रीकामरूपके ।
सिद्ध्यन्ते च न संदेहो न तेषां परिवेदना[२९८] ।। ९५ ।।

In this way (he gets) success (siddhi) and he is free from old age and death. By one hundred thousand repetitions of the Vidyā, the adept certainly (achieves) flight.[66] (85cd-86ab)

(He acquires) great royal powers wherever his mind goes and whatever he desires occurs that very moment. (86cd-87ab)

He wonders (free) as a bird and there is no place hard for him to reach. Even a single lion (can) kill herds of mad elephants; just so, he, the most excellent of adepts, kills the (false) gods of conditioned existence (bhavadeva). By practicing with the Vidyā, the king of adepts becomes equal to you.[67] (87cd-89ab)

O handsome knower of Kaula, one should practice the repetition of the Vidyā which has no end (in conjunction) with the nocturnal practice (niśācāra) when the rite of adoration is performed.[68] (This should be done) once one has gone to (any of the) following places: (a desert where there is only a) solitary tree, a cremation ground, a crossroad, a forest, a place without people or empty (abandoned) temples.[69] (89cd-91ab)

This, the aforesaid accomplishment (siddhi) (attained) through the act of worshipping the Vidyā, belongs to one who is detached (from the things) in the world of transmigration and whose mind is well illumined. (91cd-92ab)

O Bhairava, the householder shrouded by Māyā[70] does not possess accomplishment in the home and he does not attain worldly benefits (bhukti) or liberation (there). (92cd-93ab)

(But) those who are devoted to the worship of the Vidyā, intent on that, their mind (given solely to) that, are without a doubt liberated while living (jīvanmukta) in this world of living beings. Once they have gone, O god, to either the First Seat,[71] Pūrṇagiryaka, the place called Jāla or the venerable Kāmarūpaka, they certainly achieve the goal (there) and they have no troubles. (93cd-95)

यस्य एषा महाविद्या मुखे तिष्ठति नित्यशः ।
स सर्वविघ्ननिर्मुक्तो जयं सर्वत्र आप्नुयात् ॥ ९६ ॥

रणे राजकुले द्यूते शत्रुमध्ये जलाग्निषु[२९९] ।
अटव्यां[३००] विषमे[३०१] दुर्गे तथा चौरपथेषु च ॥ ९७ ॥
वृश्चिके विषसर्पेषु गजोन्मत्तवृषेषु च ।
उल्कापाते च दिग्दाघे योगिनीगणमध्यतः ॥ ९८ ॥
निशाचारैकवृक्षे[३०२] वा वज्रपाते चतुष्पथे ।
संग्रामे समये चक्रे पीठे क्षेत्रे त्वेवादिषु[३०३] ॥ ९९ ॥
शुभं च प्रप्नुयाद् योगी[३०४] अस्य[३०५] विद्याप्रभावतः ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थान्भैरवयज्ञे[३०६] अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये कादिभेदे
आज्ञापारमेश्वरे स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां
अव्वाक्रमभाषिते[३०७] विद्याजप्यार्घ–
विधानो नामानन्दः ॥ ११ ॥

He who has this great Vidyā always on his lips is free of all obstacles and is victorious everywhere, whether in battle, the king's family, gambling or in the midst of enemies. (96)

By the power of his Vidyā, the yogi attains what is auspicious, (even) in fire or water, in a dangerous forest, in a fort, on roads plied by robbers, in the presence of a scorpion, poisonous snakes, elephants and mad bulls, when a meteor falls, when (there is a huge fire that) burns in all directions, in the midst of a troup of Yoginīs, while wandering about at night, in (a desert where there is only) a solitary tree, when lightning falls, at a crossroad, during a battle, in the assembly of initiates (cakra), in a sacred seat, in a sacred area (kṣetra) and so too in other such (places).[72] (97-100ab)

This is the (eleventh) chapter called the Prescribed Way to Offer Libation (argha) and Repeat the Vidyā. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for more than a hundred thousand quarter (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

द्वादशानन्दः

श्रीवक्त्रा उवाच[१]

जयं[२] भवति देवेश यस्य विद्या हृदि[३] स्थिता ।
सुखमारोग्यकल्याणं[४] चिरायुः शौर्यवृत्तिश्च[५] ॥ १ ॥
प्रभा दीप्तिश्च कान्तिश्च विद्ययाभ्यसनाद्[६] भवेत् ।
भविष्यति न संदेहो का[७] चिन्ता[८] मरणे रणे ॥ २ ॥

यस्य विद्या[९] भवेत् सिद्धा[१०] दुर्लभा महतारिका[११] ।
तस्य सिद्धिः[१२] करे बद्धा स सिद्धो नात्र संशयः ॥ ३ ॥

गोहत्यानां सहस्रैकं लक्षैकं[१३] ब्रह्महत्यानाम्[१४] ।
तथान्ये[१५] मायजाः पापाः[१६] नश्यन्ते[१७] नात्र संशयः ॥ ४ ॥

विद्या[१८] स्मरितमात्रा या अशुभं च विनश्यति ।
मिष्टान्नभोजनं पानं दिव्यभोगं[१९] रसायनम् ॥ ५ ॥[२०]
शयनं चोत्तमं यानं वस्त्राभरणभूषणम्[२१] ।[२२]
सकृत्स्मरणमात्रेण[२३] विद्यावेशात्[२४] प्रवर्तते[२५] ॥ ६ ॥

पदार्थमर्थविज्ञानं[२६] सर्वस्वं पुत्रपौत्रकम्[२७] ।
परमार्थं[२८] परं ज्ञानं विद्यावेशात् प्रवर्तते[२९] ॥ ७ ॥
परं तत्त्वं परावस्था परं योगमरूपकम्[३०] ।
परं सौभाग्यमतुलं[३१] विद्यावेशात् प्रवर्तते ॥ ८ ॥

पराज्ञा परमानन्दं[३२] परं वाग्भवशासनम् ।
सकृत्स्मरणमात्रेण[३३] विद्यावेशात् प्रवर्तते ॥ ९ ॥

CHAPTER TWELVE

The Glory of the Vidyā.

The Benefits of Reciting the Vidyā

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

O lord of the gods, he in whose heart the Vidyā abides is victorious. By practicing with the Vidyā (he attains) happiness, health and good fortune; he has a long life and is courageous. (By practicing the Vidyā he gains) light, brilliance and beauty. He will certainly (continue to exist forever, and so) what worry (can he have) when dying (or) in battle? (1-2)

He whose Vidyā, Mahantārikā, difficult to acquire, has been accomplished, holds success (siddhi) firmly in (his) hand and is, without a doubt, an accomplished yogi (siddha).[1] (3)

A thousand bovinicides, a hundred thousand brahminicides and (all) the other sins born of Māyā are certainly destroyed. (4)

That is the (true) Vidyā which, merely by recalling it, destroys (all that is) inauspicious. Merely by recalling it once, by the penetration of the Vidyā (the adept obtains) delicious food to eat as well as, drink, divine enjoyment, life-giving medicine (rasāyana),[2] a bed, an excellent vehicle, ornaments and clothes. (5-6)

Penetration (āveśa) by the Vidyā brings about (the acquisition all that is) substantial (padārtha), knowledge of reality, wealth, sons, grandsons, the supreme goal (of life) (paramārtha), supreme knowledge, the supreme principle, the supreme state, the supreme formless Yoga and supreme, unequalled good fortune. (7-8)

Merely by recalling it once, the penetration (āveśa) of the Vidyā brings about (the realisation of) the supreme Command, supreme bliss and the teaching (śāsana) concerning Vāgbhava, which is supreme.[3] (9)

शाम्भवं शक्तिविज्ञानं वैष्णवं सौरसंहिता ।
बौद्धादि आरहन्ताश्च[३४a] चान्द्रायणपरायणम्[३४b] ॥ १० ॥
क्षुभ्यन्ति[३५] च षडङ्गानि विद्यावेशान्न[३६] चान्यथा ।

शैवसिद्धादिसिद्धान्ता[३७] लाकुलास्तुम्बुरादयः[३८] ॥ ११ ॥
नित्यातन्त्रादिका ये[३९] च विद्यावेशात् प्रवर्तते[४०] ।

वैदिकं गारुडं तन्त्रं[४१] सुतन्त्रशब्दलक्षणम्[४२] ॥ १२ ॥
योगं[४३] परमनिर्वाणं विद्यावेशात्[४४] प्रवर्तते ।

यत्[४५] सर्वसात्विकं[४६] ज्ञानं मर्त्यलोके व्यवस्थितम्[४७] ॥ १३ ॥
सकृत्स्मरणमात्रेण विद्यावेशात् प्रवर्तते ।

ये[४८] केचिच्छास्त्रसंघाता[४९] नित्यातन्त्रादि सर्वशः ॥ १४ ॥
क्षुभ्यन्ति[५०] देवदेवेश विद्यया[५१] परमेश्वर[५२] ।

तावत्[५३] गर्जन्ति[५४] तन्त्राणि स्वच्छन्दादीन्यनेकशः[५५] ॥ १५ ॥
द्वात्रिंशाक्षरविद्यायाः[५६] कलां[५७] नार्हन्ति[५८] षोडशीम्[५९] ।

यथा दन्तिसहस्राणि[६०] सिंहस्यैव परांमुखाः[६१] ॥ १६ ॥
तथा विद्याश्च मन्त्राश्च विमुखाः[६२] प्राप्तविद्यया[६३] ।

निशायां च शशिर्यद्वत्[६४] आप्यायेत्[६५] सचराचरम् ॥ १७ ॥
तथैषा[६६] पूर्णभेदेन[६७] आप्यायनकरी भवेत् ।

यथा दीपः[६८] प्रदीप्तस्तु अन्धकारं[६९] विनाशयेत्[७०] ॥ १८ ॥
तेषां[७१] च पटलं घोरं छेदयेन्नात्र[७२] संशयः ।

तथा श्रीश्रीकुजाविद्या[७३] षट्प्रकारा वरानन[७४] ॥ १९ ॥
दहते[७५] नात्र संदेहो देहस्थं[७६] पापसंचयं[७७] ।

(One realises) Śiva's (state) (śāmbhava), the knowledge of (his) energy, Viṣṇu's (state), (the teachings of) the scripture of the Sun (saurasaṁhitā), (the ideal of) the Buddhists etc. and the Jains (ārahanta) and (one goes) beyond the path of the Moon. By the penetration of the Vidyā, and in no other way, the six limbs (of the body) are aroused. (10-11ab)

Penetration by the Vidyā gives rise to the Siddhānta (schools) of the Śaivas, the Siddhas and the rest, the Lākula (Paśupata schools) and the Tumburu (Tantras), as well as the Nityā Tantras[4] and the like.[5] (11cd-12ab)

Penetration by the Vidyā gives rise to the (knowledge of) the Veda, the Gāruḍa Tantra, the (reality which is) the sign of the good words of the Tantra, Yoga and the supreme Nirvāṇa.[6] (12cd-13ab)

Merely by recalling it once, penetration by the Vidyā brings about (the knowledge) of all that every creature in the mortal world knows. (13cd-14ab)

O Lord of the gods, whatever be the class of scriptures (śāstrasaṁghāta), whether it be the Nityātantra or the like, (they are all) aroused (and made potent) in every way, O Supreme Lord, by (this) Vidyā. (14cd-15ab)

The Svacchanda and other Tantras repeatedly proclaim that they are not worth (even) a sixteenth part of the Thirty-Two Lettered Vidyā. (15cd-16ab)

Just as (even) a thousand elephants turn away from (just one) lion, so (all other) Vidyās and mantras avert themselves once (this) Vidyā has been obtained. (16cd-17ab)

This (Vidyā) in its full form (pūrṇabheda) nourishes just as the moon at night nourishes (itself) along with the moving and immobile (universe). (17cd-18ab)

(This Vidyā) certainly pierces through the terrible covering of those (shrouded in ignorance), just as a well lit lamp destroys darkness. (18cd-19ab)

In the same way, O fair-faced one, the venerable sixfold (ṣaṭprakārā)[7] Vidyā of the venerable (goddess) Kujā certainly burns away the sin accumulated in the body. (19cd-20ab)

शुभाशुभं च यत् कर्म सप्तजन्मान्तरार्जितम्[७८] ॥ २० ॥
तत् सर्वं विलयं याति[७९] विद्याभ्यासान्न[८०] संशयः ।

ये केचित्[८१] शास्त्रसंघाता[८२] मन्त्रा विद्याद्यनेकशः[८३] ॥ २१ ॥
तस्य विद्याप्रभावस्य कलां[८४] नार्हन्ति[८५] षोडशीम्[८६] ।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

युक्तमुक्तं[८७] प्रभावोऽयं[८८] विद्याभ्यासेन नान्यथा ॥ २२ ॥
परं जप्यरतानां तु किं न सिद्ध्यन्ति[८९] साधकाः[९०] ।
तत् किमर्थं[९१] महादेवि[९२] संशयं[९३] छेत्तुमर्हसि[९४] ॥ २३ ॥

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[९५]

मानवा दुर्भगा देव[९६] विद्याहंकारगर्विताः ।
जातिशीलविनिर्मुक्ता[९७] अगम्यगमनोद्यताः[९८] ॥ २४ ॥

अभक्ष्यभक्षणरताः[९९] कलहन्ति[१००] यतस्ततः ।
प्राणिभङ्गं प्रकुर्वन्ति बहुलोभसमन्विताः[१०१] ॥ २५ ॥
बहुकामप्रसक्ताश्च[१०२] बहुशास्त्रार्थचिन्तकाः[१०३] ।
उद्ग्राहयन्ति[१०४] तर्कार्थं[१०५] विवदन्ति[१०६] परस्परम् ॥ २६ ॥

महामायाविमोहेन अर्थसंग्रहणादिषु[१०७] ।
कुकर्माणि[१०८] प्रकुर्वन्ति निन्दां[१०९] रागं[११०] चरन्ति च ॥ २७ ॥
समयानि[१११] न मन्यन्ते गुर्वाज्ञालोपकारकाः ।
गुरुद्रोहं प्रकुर्वन्ति समयद्रोहं[११२] वरानन[११३] ॥ २८ ॥

तेन[११४] ते सिद्धिनिर्मुक्ताः विद्ययाभ्यासनादपि[११५] ।
तपोभ्रष्टा[११६] नरा ये च तेषां संख्या न विद्यते ॥ २९ ॥

तृप्ता मद्येन मांसेन परस्त्रीरमणोत्सुकाः[११७] ।
अगम्यगमनाद्[११८] देव भुक्तिमुक्तिर्न[११९] विद्यते[१२०] ॥ ३० ॥

All Karma, whether auspicious or inauspicious, generated in the course of seven lives certainly dissolves away, by practicing the Vidyā.[8] (20cd-21ab)

Whatever the scriptures, mantras and Vidyās of many types, they are not equal to (even) a sixteenth part of the power of his Vidyā. (21cd-22ab)

Reasons for the Failure of the Vidyā

Śrīnātha said:

It has been rightly said that this power (comes) by the practice of the Vidyā and not otherwise. But, why is it that adepts who are devoted to the Vidyā (japya) do not attain the supreme? O great goddess, why is that? Please remove (my) doubt. (22cd-23)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

[9]O god, men are unfortunate, they are proud because of (their) knowledge and ego. They do not behave correctly in accord with their caste status (jātiśilā) and are intent on going where they should not go.[10] (24)

They are devoted to eating what should not be eaten and quarrel (amongst themselves) and so commit murders. They are full of greed and are attached to many pleasures. They think of the meaning of many scriptures (but to no avail) and they (attempt) to fathom (the depths) of logic and quarrel with one another. (25-26)

Deluded by the great Māyā (of the world), they behave badly in order to accumulate wealth and the like. They censor (others) and cultivate attachment. They do not respect the rules of religion (samaya) and they disobey the teacher's commands. O fair-faced one, they do violence to (their) teacher and the rules of religion. (27-28)

So, even though they practice with the Vidyā, they have no success (siddhi). (Such) men who have fallen from (their practice of) austerity are innumerable. (29)

They are satisfied with meat and wine and keen to enjoy (sexual pleasure) with other (mens') women. By going to where one ought not go, (one obtains) neither worldly enjoyment (bhukti) nor liberation. (30)

श्वपचास्ते[१२१] समाख्याताः[१२२] प्राकृताः[१२३] श्वानकुक्कुटाः[१२४] ।
पिबन्ति स्वेच्छया मद्यं मांसं खादन्ति[१२५] स्वेच्छया[१२६] ।। ३१ ।।

अगम्यगमनं यान्ति[१२७] अज्ञानपटलावृताः ।
न तेषां मुक्तिरस्तीह संयमान्मुक्तिरिष्यते ।। ३२ ।।

बहुपानात्[१२८] कुतो मुक्तिरिच्छाभोगे[१२९] तथैव च ।
अगम्यगमनाचाराद्[१३०] अभक्षस्य[१३१] च भक्षणात् ।। ३३ ।।

विकर्मणा कुतो मुक्तिरर्थलोभात् कुतो भवेत् ।
पापिष्ठा[१३२] दर्पदुष्टानां दूषका[१३३] तन्त्रवादिनाम्[१३४] ।। ३४ ।।
कुमार्गेषु प्रसक्ताना[१३५] न सिद्धिर्विद्यते[१३६] क्वचित् ।

आगमार्थविनिर्मुक्ताः[१३७] समयाचारलोपकाः[१३८] ।। ३५ ।।
न तेषां साधने[१३९] सिद्धिर्न च ते मोक्षभाजनाः ।
एवंभूतगुणाः[१४०] शिष्याः[१४१] साधकाचार्यपुत्रकाः ।। ३६ ।।[१४२]

विद्याराधनशीला हि[१४३] भवन्ते[१४४] सिद्धिभाजनाः ।[१४५]
गुरुभक्ता विनीताश्च समयाचारपालकाः ।। ३७ ।।
द्वैताचारपदारूढा मकारत्रयवर्जिताः ।
निर्लोभाः[१४६] सदयाः[१४७] शान्ताः[१४८] नित्यानन्दरताः सदा[१४९] ।। ३८ ।।
आगमार्थरता धीराः[१५०] तर्कशास्त्रमुपेक्षकाः[१५१] ।
अनुरक्ताश्च[१५२] भक्ताश्च सर्वजीवदयापराः[१५३] ।। ३९ ।।
एवंगुणविशिष्टा ये सिद्ध्यन्ते ह्यविचारतः[१५४] ।
एतेषां सिद्ध्यते[१५५] विद्या[१५६] अन्येषां[१५७] न कदाचन[१५८] ।। ४० ।।

पारम्पर्यागता[१५९] विद्या अर्घसंस्कारमण्डले[१६०] ।
संस्फुटा[१६१] यावन्न ज्ञात्वा[१६२] तावत् सिद्धिं[१६३] कुतो लभेत्[१६४] ।। ४१ ।।

They are said to be outcastes (svapaca)[11] and their nature is that of dogs. They drink wine as they will and (freely) eat meat according to their desire.[12] (31)

Wrapped in the shroud of ignorance, they go (to visit prostitutes) where they should not go. They have no worldly enjoyment (or) liberation here (in this world). Liberation comes by self-control. (32)

How can (one achieve) liberation by much drinking or enjoying (oneself) according to (one's own) desires, or by visiting (prostitutes) to whom one should not go, or by bad behaviour, or by eating what should not be eaten? (33)

How can (one achieve) liberation by sinful action (or) by greed for wealth? The men who are most sinful and proud, those who cause harm (and profess) false views (tantravādin), and those attached to bad paths (kumārga) do not have success (siddhi) anywhere. (34-35ab)

Those who have no (understanding) of the sense of the meaning of scripture and break the rules of right conduct have no success in (their) spiritual discipline (sādhana) nor liberation. None of the many disciples, adepts, teachers and spiritual sons who are such are liberated. (35cd-36)

But those whose habit is to worship the Vidyā are successful (if they are) devoted to the teacher, well behaved, maintain the rules of right conduct and are well established on the level of conduct (based on) duality (that is, a sound sense of difference between right and wrong). (They are successful) if they do not (make use of) the three `Ms',[13] are free of greed, compassionate, tranquil, ever devoted to eternal bliss, devoted to the teachings of the scripture, grave, indifferent to treatises on logic, affectionate, devoted and concerned for the well-being of all living creatures. Those who have such qualities are successful without (even having to) think (about how to be so). The Vidyā of such (people) is successful, never (that) of anyone else. (37-40)

As long as one has not learned the Vidyā, transmitted through the (spiritual) lineage and clearly manifest within the maṇḍala used to purify the libation, where can one attain success (siddhi)?[14] (41)

अन्यग्रन्थाद्[१६५] विनिष्क्रान्ता[१६६] जातिभेदेन[१६७] संयुता[१६८] ।
सिद्धिदा सा न[१६९] विज्ञेया[१७०] अन्वये[१७१] पश्चिमे गृहे ॥ ४२ ॥
तस्मात् सर्वप्रयत्नेन गुरुवक्त्रात् समभ्यसेत्[१७२] ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते[१७३] विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये
कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां[१७४]
अव्वाक्रमभषिते विद्यामाहात्म्यवर्णनाधिकारे
क्रमोदयो नामानन्दः ॥ १२ ॥

One should know that (a Vidyā) that has come from another (sacred) book and is conjoined to various types (of Vedic seed-syllables) (jāti) does not grant success in the tradition of the Western House. Therefore, (having received it) from the teacher's mouth, practice it with all effort. (42-43ab)

This is the (twelfth) chapter called the Description of the Glory of the Vidyā. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru that contains more than a hundred thousand quarters (of a metre) and has been brought (down to earth) into the primordial sacred seat on the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's Command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

त्रयोदशानन्दः

श्रीनाथ उवाच

शिवेति[१] कथितं[२] नाम स कथं गम्यते[३] जगत् ।
वैकल्पेन अपूर्णत्वात्[४] कथं कर्तृत्वमाप्नुयात् ।। १ ।।
कथं वा[५] भुञ्जते[६] भोगान्[७] संसारति[८] तमाश्रितः[९] ।
मृत्युरस्ति कथं तस्य सत्यमाख्याहि[१०] निर्णयम् ।। २ ।।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[११]

सर्वश्रेष्ठं[१२] परं[१३] शान्तं अवर्णतत्त्वमाश्रितम्[१४] ।
ज्योतिरूपं[१५] निराभासं अनन्तं सततोदितम्[१६] ।। ३ ।।[१७]
अप्रतर्क्यमिदं ज्ञेयं स्वयं मुक्तं च[१८] संस्थितम्[१९] ।

अच्छेद्यं च अभेद्यं[२०] च[२१] अलेप्यं[२२] च परापरम् ।। ४ ।।
ब्रह्मा विष्णुश्च रुद्राद्यः[२३] अमृतं जीवमाश्रितम् ।
परानन्दस्वरूपेण नित्यानन्दपरायणम्[२४] ।। ५ ।।
निरानन्दमयं शान्तं कारणाष्टकवर्जितम् ।
गुणतत्त्वविनिर्मुक्तं हेयोपादेयवर्जितम् ।। ६ ।।

न तस्य गर्भसंभूतिः[२५] सर्वावस्थगतो[२६] विभुः ।
स कर्ता न[२७] परः कश्चिदशरीरः[२८] शिवः प्रभुः ।। ७ ।।

CHAPTER THIRTEEN

Concerning the Destruction of Impurity.

Supreme Śiva

Śrīnātha said:

How can (he who is) called Śiva enter the world? (He would be subject to) thought constructs, and so would be imperfect (apūrṇa), and so, how (could he) acquire the power to act (kartṛtva) (in the world)?[1] (1)

Or, again, how does he enjoy worldly experiences (bhoga) and, immersed in darkness, transmigrate? How is it that he dies? Tell (me) the true teaching (nirṇaya) (concerning this matter). (2)

The venerable (goddess) Kubjikā said:

One should know that this (reality) beyond reason (apratarkya), the best of all, supreme and tranquil, established in the principle of unmanifest Speech (avarṇatattva),[2] (in the) form of light, unmanifest, endless and everywhere active, abides liberated of itself.[3] (3-4ab)

(Both) supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent), it cannot be cut, divided or stained. (The supreme principle is) Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra and the rest (of the gods). It is the immortal (amṛta) established in (every) living being (jīva). It is supreme bliss by nature, and so is the eternal bliss which is the ultimate goal (of all existence). (It is) the Bliss of Stillness (nirānanda), tranquil and free of the eight causes (that constitute the subtle body). It is free of the qualities (guṇa) and principles (tattva), and devoid of both that which is to be taken up and that which is to be abandoned.[4] (4cd-6)

(Not) born from any womb, (this transcendent reality) is the All-pervasive Lord (prabhu) who is present in every state (of being). He is the (universal) agent (kartṛ), (that) undefinable (kaścit) and supreme disembodied (reality), Śiva, the Lord.[5] (7)

तस्येच्छा निर्गता शक्तिर्नादरूपा चिदात्मिका[२९] ।
तयासौ[३०] नीयते तत्त्वे[३१] अधोमूर्तेस्तु[३२] धारणात् ॥ ८ ॥

तत्त्वैर्युक्ता[३३] यदा भाति[३४] तदा तन्मयतां[३५] गतः ।
मूर्तभूतोऽप्यमूर्तस्तु[३६] स्वभावादपि निर्मलः ॥ ९ ॥

महामायाश्रितो यस्मात् तस्मात् कर्ता स[३७] कर्मणि ।
जायते व्रजते[३८] देहे[३९] तत्त्वैर्युक्तममलकः[४०] ॥ १० ॥

मायातत्त्वेन लिपस्तु[४१] तदा भोगांश्च भुञ्जति[४२] ।
भोग्यक्षये भवेत्[४३] दुःखं रमते पूर्वधिष्ठितः[४४] ॥ ११ ॥

मायाजं[४५] कर्मजं चैव ऐहिकं तत्त्वमाश्रितम् ।
त्रिविधस्तु मलः[४६] प्रोक्तः सत्त्वरजस्तमेरितः[४७] ॥ १२ ॥

मायाजं[४८] सत्त्वमारूढं[४९] स्वाभाविकं शिवेच्छया ।
शक्त्यावेशेन[५०] संप्राप्ते समले[५१] तु यदात्मनि[५२] ॥ १३ ॥
तदा कर्मजसंप्राप्तिः[५३] भावसंस्थितिचित्पुरे[५४] ।
तदा संभवते भूय[५५] ऐहिकस्तु महामलः ॥ १४ ॥

तस्यैव दहनं कुर्यात्[५६] शक्तिपातेन[५७] मन्त्रवित् ।
परानन्दस्वरूपेण शक्तिनाक्रम्य[५८] पूर्ववत् ॥ १५ ॥

The power, as his will of the nature of consciousness and in the form of Sound (nāda), has emerged (from within him). He is lead by that (energy) to the principle (of phenomenal existence) by (his) contemplation (dhāraṇa of his) lower form (adhomūrti).[6] (8)

Bondage and the Nature of Impurity (mala)

If (Śiva) manifests conjoined to the principles (of conditioned existence), he then assumes their nature. But even though he (then) has a form (mūrtabhūta), he is by his very nature without form (amūrta) and pure (nirmala). (9)

It is because he has entered (āśrita) (the sphere of) Mahāmāyā that he is the agent in the midst of Karma. (In this way) he who is free of impurity comes to be (jāyate) within the body and he enters (it), conjoined to the principles (of conditioned existence). (10)

Stained by the principle of Māyā, he then enjoys worldly pleasures (bhoga). When the object of enjoyment ceases to exist, there is suffering (and then, after the suffering), governed by (his) previous (action), he enjoys (himself once again).[7] (11)

Impurity (mala) is said to be of three kinds, namely that born of Māyā, that born of Karma and that of the world (aihika) which is based on the principle (of Nature).[8] The threefold impurity is said to be impelled (īrita) by (the qualities) of sattva, rajas and tamas, (respectively).[9] (12)

(The impurity) born of Māyā is established in sattva. In accord with Śiva's will, it belongs to one's own (phenomenal) nature (svābhāvika). Then, once the Self has become impure (samala), due to (Śiva's) energy, the (impurity) born of Karma obtains within the abode of consciousness pertaining to (phenomenal) being (bhāvasaṁsthiti). Then the great impurity of (this world) here (aihika) arises once again.[10] (13-14)

The Burning Away of Impurity, Merger of the Principles of Existence and Liberation

The knower of mantra should burn that away by the descent of power (śaktipāta) which is supreme bliss, once he has invaded (the Self) (ākramya) with energy as before.[11] (15)

आक्रान्तं पूर्वकारणं[५९] अधोर्ध्वं[६०] च विघट्टितम्[६१] ।
शक्तिर्दीपशिखाकारा[६२] आनन्दत्वं[६३] समुद्धरेत् ॥ १६ ॥

महामाया मलस्तत्र[६४] शोध्याध्वनि[६५] च[६६] लीलया[६७] ।
नीयते तेन सा ऊर्ध्वे[६८] ऊर्णातन्तुनिनादवत्[६९] ॥ १७ ॥

ब्रह्मघोषेण बलवान्[७०] प्राक्तनं[७१] यन्मलं[७२] दहेत् ।
तस्योर्ध्वे परमा शक्तिः शिवेन[७३] सह संस्थिता ॥ १८ ॥

लीयते[७४] परमे व्योम्नि[७५] परे धाम्नि विनिक्षिपेत् ।
ऐहिकं शोधयेत् तत्र[७६] मलस्त्यजति काञ्चनम् ॥ १९ ॥
त्रिविधस्तु[७७] समासेन शिवेन परमात्मना[७८] ।[७९]

शक्तिसंगमकाले तु प्राप्तमेतन्मलत्रयम् ॥ २० ॥
आत्मान्तरे[८०] कृतं शून्यं[८१] रुद्रशक्तिप्रभावतः[८२] ।
मलशुद्धिस्तदा तस्य निर्मलत्वं प्रपद्यते ॥ २१ ॥

प्रकृतिस्थो[८३] यदा[८४] मुञ्चेज्जन्मसंसारबन्धनात्[८५] ।
आत्मनात्मा[८६] पुरा शोध्यः[८७] शक्तिपातेन प्रत्ययात्[८८] ॥ २२ ॥

तदा मलक्षयं[८९] तस्य देहं[९०] तिष्ठति केवलम् ।
तत्त्वैर्युक्तो यदा युक्तः[९१] पुण्यपापक्षये[९२] सति ॥ २३ ॥
कर्मक्षयेऽपि संप्राप्ते मुक्तिरस्ति न संशयः ।

विशुद्धं काञ्चनं[९३] यद्वन्नागसंगाद्[९४] विनश्यति[९५] ॥ २४ ॥
एवं विशुद्धशान्तात्मा[९६] मायासंगाद्[९७] विनश्यति ।

दीक्षामात्रेण शिष्यस्य संभवेद् गतिरुत्तमा[९८] ॥ २५ ॥
शक्तिपातेन संशुद्धिर्मलस्त्यजति काञ्चनम् ।
त्रिविधस्तु समासेन शिवेन[९९] परमात्मना ॥ २६ ॥
त्यज्यते वेधपाकेन मन्त्राभ्यासेन लीलया ।

When the previous cause (of impurity is thus) filled (ākrānta) (with energy) and split apart (vighaṭṭita) above and below, (then) the energy, in the shape of the flame of a lamp, should generate[12] the state of bliss. (16)

Impurity is there and Mahāmāyā,[13] which like an echoing resonance (nināda) along a spider's thread, is playfully transported upward along with that (impurity) by the path of what is to be purified.[14] (17)

The powerful (adept) should burn whatever past impurity there is with the Sound of the Brahman (brahmaghoṣa). Above that is the Supreme Energy who, along with Śiva, is well established.[15] (18)

(Impurity) dissolves away[16] in the Supreme Sky (of ultimate reality). It should be cast into the Supreme Abode. Purify the impurity of the world (aihika) there. (In this way) Śiva, the Supreme Self (induces) the threefold impurity as a whole (samāsena) to quit (the individual soul just as) dross does gold.[17] (19-20ab)

This triple impurity is acquired (by the Self) when uniting with the power (of Mahāmāyā). When the Void has been formed within the Self by the power of Rudra's energy, it is purified from impurity and attains a state of purity. (20cd-21)

If he who resides within (the confines of) Nature (prakṛti) (seeks to) be free from the bondage of transmigratory existence, the Self must first purify the Self by grace (śaktipāta) and realisation (pratyaya).[18] (22)

Then his impurity is destroyed and all that persists is the body. When the one who is conjoined with the principles (of phenomenal existence) is separated (from them), and when both merit and sin are destroyed and Karma has also been destroyed, (he) certainly (attains) liberation.[19] (23-24ab)

Just as pure gold is destroyed by fusion with lead (nāga), in the same way, the pure, tranquil Self is destroyed by fusion with Māyā.[20] (24cd-25ab)

The disciple's (liberation which is his) most excellent state (gati) is possible only by means of initiation. Purification (can only take place) by the grace (śaktipāta) (received during initiation). (In this way) Śiva, the Supreme Self, (induces) the threefold impurity as a whole (samāsena) to quit (the individual soul just as) dross does gold.[21] (Impurity) is (thus) playfully abandoned by means of the maturation (of Karma) brought about by the piercing (of the psychic centres) (vedhapāka) through the practice of mantra.[22] (25cd-27ab)

मलपाकमिदं[१००] प्रोक्तं त्रिविधं त्रिस्वरूपतः ।। २७ ।।
स्थूलं[१०१] सूक्ष्मं परं[१०२] चैव भित्त्वा शुद्धतनुर्भवेत् ।
सतताभ्यासयोगेन विद्रवेत[१०३] मलत्रयम् ।। २८ ।।

मायामलविनिर्मुक्तः स[१०४] भवेत् ज्ञानचक्षुषा[१०५] ।
जीवन्मुक्तस्तु योगीशोऽयं[१०६] यदा चरते[१०७] शिवः ।। २९ ।।

तेन तस्य न लेपोऽस्ति[१०८] पद्मपत्रमिवाम्भसि ।
बिन्दुमध्यगतस्यैव तत्त्वैर्युक्तस्य चेच्छया[१०९] ।। ३० ।।
शिवस्यैव[११०] न लेपोऽस्ति[१११] योगाभ्यासाच्च[११२] तत्त्ववित् ।
प्रत्ययाज्ञास्वरूपेण[११३] विद्धस्यैवं[११४] मलक्षयम्[११५] ।। ३१ ।।

संसारावधि[११६] संप्राप्य तत्त्वं यास्यति[११७] व्युत्क्रमात्[११८] ।
पृथिवी पार्थिवे[११९] याति[१२०] आपो[१२१] वरुणमण्डले ।। ३२ ।।
तेजो[१२२] ह्यग्नौ लयं[१२३] याति[१२४] मारुतो[१२५] वायुमण्डले ।
आकाशं[१२६] व्योम्नि मध्ये[१२७] तु व्रजते[१२८] तत्त्वपञ्चकम्[१२९] ।। ३३ ।।

शब्दं[१३०] लीयते[१३१] चाकाशे स्पर्शं वै[१३२] वायुमूर्धनि[१३३] ।
रसं[१३४] वै जलमध्ये[१३५] तु रूपं तेजोमुखे[१३६] हुतम्[१३७] ।। ३४ ।।
पार्थिवे लीयते गन्धं[१३८] तन्मात्रमिति[१३९] पञ्चकम् ।

वाचा वागीश्वरे[१४०] तत्त्वे[१४१] पाणिः[१४२] करणपञ्चके[१४३] ।। ३५ ।।
पादौ लीयति[१४४] पाताले पायुर्वैं[१४५] वायुमण्डले[१४६] ।
उपस्थं[१४७] व्योम्नि मध्ये तु[१४८] इत्येतत् कर्मपञ्चकम्[१४९] ।। ३६ ।।

This, the maturation of impurity (malapāka), is said to be of three kinds because of its triple nature. (One) possess a pure body having been penetrated through (and having consumed the three impurities,) gross, subtle and supreme. By the Yoga of constant practice, one should melt away the three impurities.[23] (27cd-28)

He is free of the impurity of Māyā by means of the eye of knowledge.[24] If it is Śiva who acts, this lord of yogis is one who is liberated in this life (jīvanmukta). (29)

Thus, he is not stained, like a lotus leaf in water (that remains dry). (In the same way), Śiva is not stained (although he) resides within the Point (bindu),[25] conjoined by (his own) will with the principles (of phenomenal existence) and, by practicing Yoga, (he is the sage who) knows reality. The impurity of one who has been pierced (by Śiva's energy) is destroyed in this way by the essential nature of the Command (that brings about) realisation (pratyayājñā). (30-31)

The Merger of the Twenty-four Principles into one another

Once (the adept) reaches the (highest) limit of transmigratory existence, he goes on to reach the (supreme) principle (by ascending) by the reverse (process with respect to emanation). Earth enters into the (principle of) Earth and Water, the sphere (maṇḍala) of Varuṇa. Fiery energy (tejas) merges into Fire, and Wind into the sphere of the Wind, while Space enters the centre of the Sky. (This is) the group of five principles (of the gross elements).[26] (32-33)

Sound merges into Space and Touch into the head of the Wind, Taste (rasa) into the centre of Water, while Form is offered as an oblation into the mouth of Fire and the subtle element of Smell merges into the Earth. This is the group of five (subtle elements). (34-35ab)

Speech (merges) into the principle of Vāgīśvara (the Lord of Speech) and the hand into the group of five instruments.[27] The feet dissolve into the lower world (pātāla), the genital organ into the sphere of the Wind and the anus into the centre of the Sky. This is the group of five (organs of) action. (35cd-36)

बुद्धीन्द्रियेषु[१५०] संपर्कात्[१५१] तल्लय[१५२] च तथा[१५३] भवेत् ।
श्रोत्रं लीयति[१५४] शब्देऽस्मिन्[१५५] त्वचं च पिशिते तथा[१५६] ॥ ३७ ॥
चक्षुर्लीयति[१५७] चन्द्रार्के[१५८] जिह्वा वै राहुमण्डले[१५९] ।
नासिका[१६०] गन्धतत्त्वे[१६१] तु[१६२] अत ऊर्ध्वं चतुष्टयम् ॥ ३८ ॥

मनो लीयति[१६३] बिन्दौ[१६४] च[१६५] विद्यातत्त्वे धियः[१६६] पुनः[१६७] ।
अहंकारः[१६८] शिवस्यान्ते[१६९] प्रकृतेः[१७०] सर्वतो लयः[१७१] ॥ ३९ ॥

धर्मकामार्थवशग[१७२] चतुर्विंशात्मक[१७३] कुलम्[१७४] ।
लयं याति इडापात्रे मोक्षवर्गे[१७५] चतुर्थके ॥ ४० ॥[१७६]

शक्तिपातेन संपातात्[१७७] शिष्यस्य विनिवर्तते[१७८] ।
व्रजते मायया[१७९] रिक्तो कैलास[१८०] सर्वमूर्धनि[१८१] ॥ ४१ ॥

तेन मृत्युरिय[१८२] चात्र[१८३] चतुर्विंशात्मकस्य[१८४] च ।
न मृत्युः शिवतत्त्वस्य अपवर्गगतस्य[१८५] च ॥ ४२ ॥

मायाकरणवैकल्ये[१८६] शक्तिपातेन प्रत्ययात्[१८७] ।
विद्यते तच्छिवो ह्येको[१८८] दर्पणे[१८९] च यथा मुखम्[१९०] ॥ ४३ ॥

अभीत्वा[१९१] प्रविशेत्[१९२] तत्र[१९३] कुलस्यान्तर्गतः[१९४] प्रभुः ।
जरामरणनिर्मुक्तो[१९५] मोक्ष[१९६] च अन्तजन्मनि[१९७] ॥ ४४ ॥

यथा एकमनेकञ्च[१९८] योगाभ्यासेन तत्त्ववित्[१९९] ।
प्रत्यययाज्ञास्वभावस्य विद्धस्यैव च प्रत्ययः ॥ ४५ ॥

मलपाते[२००] वशं[२०१] प्राप्ते[२०२] मुक्तीह[२०३] कुलदर्शने[२०४] ।
न मुक्तिर्हेतुवादेभ्यो[२०५] अविद्धस्य न तिष्ठति[२०६] ॥ ४६ ॥

Similarly, the same merger takes place within the senses (buddhīndriya) by (their) contact (with their equivalent principles). The Ear[28] dissolves into this Sound and, in the same way, Skin into Flesh, the Eye into the Sun and Moon, the Tongue into Rāhu's sphere and the nose into the principle of smell.[29] (37-38c)

Above, after (this), comes the group of four. The mind (manas) dissolves into the Point, then the perceptions of the intellect (dhiyaḥ) into the Principle of Knowledge (vidyātattva), the Ego into the extremity of Śiva and Nature[30] dissolves away everywhere.[31] (38d-39)

The aggregate (kula) consisting of (these) twenty-four (principles) is under the sway of Dharma, passion (kāma) and worldly gain (artha).[32] It dissolves into the fourth goal of life (varga), that is, liberation, the sacrificial vessel (iḍāpātra).[33] (40)

The disciple's (impurity) comes to an end by (a powerful) descent of power. Free from Māyā, he goes to (mount) Kailāsa at the top of all.[34] (41)

Thus, this is the death of what consists of the (aggregate of) twenty-four (principles). (But this does not entail) the death of the Śiva principle, which is established in liberation. (42)

When Māyā, the instrument (of bondage), comes to an end through grace (śaktipāta) and realisation (pratyaya), the one Śiva is present (before the yogi) as is (his own) face in a mirror. (43)

[35]One should enter there without fear. The Lord is within the body (kula).[36] He is free from old age and death and is (himself) the liberation (that occurs in the last and most) beautiful life. (44)

Just as the knower of reality (knows both) the one and the many by the practice of Yoga, (such also) is the realisation (pratyaya) of a person who has been pierced (by Śiva's energy) and whose nature is the Command (that brings about a true) experience (of ultimate reality) (pratyayājñā). (45)

When impurity falls away and mastery is achieved, liberation (is attained) here in the Kula doctrine (kuladarśana). Liberation is not (attained) through the philosophies of logic. One who is not pierced (by grace) is not (liberated). (46)

दीक्षामन्त्रविहीनस्य विना च[२०७] मलशोधनम्[२०८] ।
तस्य पूर्ववशात्[२०९] कर्म प्रसज्यते[२१०] मुहुर्मुहुः ॥ ४७ ॥

मलं[२११] त्रिविधमाधत्ते स्वयमात्मावशोत्तरे ।
अविदित्वा[२१२] परं[२१३] तत्त्वं तत्र बद्धो[२१४] न मुच्यते ॥ ४८ ॥

नोपवासादितीर्थेभ्यो न[२१५] व्रतशोधितात्मनि[२१६] ।
अनशने[२१७] सोमसूर्यराहुग्रस्ते रणेऽपि वा ॥ ४९ ॥
शरणागतसंबन्धे[२१८] गोग्रहे[२१९] वा जलाग्निषु ।
देवायतनमूलेषु[२२०] वाराणस्यां जलेश्वरे ॥ ५० ॥
केदारादिषु सर्वत्र कुरुक्षेत्रे रणेऽपि[२२१] वा ।
न मुक्तिरस्ति[२२२] भूतानां वृथाः[२२३] क्लिश्यन्ति[२२४] ते जनाः[२२५] ॥ ५१ ॥
किन्तु स्वर्गमवाप्यन्ते[२२६] अष्टधागुणो[२२७] वर्तते ।
ऋणशेषः[२२८] प्रवर्तते मर्त्ये[२२९] भुवनमण्डले ॥ ५२ ॥

शुभाशुभे च संप्राप्ते भुञ्जते सुखदुःखयोः[२३०] ।
कर्मक्षयं[२३१] विना[२३२] तेषां कथं मुक्तिर्विधीयते ॥ ५३ ॥

दीक्षामात्रादनभ्यासात्[२३३] शक्तिपातेन निश्चयात्[२३४] ।
मलशुद्धिमवाप्नोति[२३५] कम्पस्तोभादिप्रत्ययान्[२३६] ॥ ५४ ॥

भुक्तीह[२३७] सर्वसामान्या प्रकृतिः[२३८] पुरुषेच्छया[२३९] ।
प्रकृतिः[२४०] पुरुषाधारा[२४१] स्वकर्मणा[२४२] इहोच्यते[२४३] ॥ ५५ ॥

शून्ये[२४४] शून्यमनाश्रित्य[२४५] निराशीति[२४६] परिग्रहः ।
नास्तिभावपदारुह्य[२४७] भावसिद्धिस्तदा भवेत् ॥ ५६ ॥

One who has neither initiation nor mantra and is devoid of the purification of impurity is subject repeatedly to Karma because of his previous (Karma). (47)

He himself takes (onto himself) the three kinds of impurity when he is beyond self-control. Without having known the Supreme Principle, he is bound there and is not freed. (48)

Beings do not attain liberation from (visiting) sacred places (tīrtha), fasting and the like, nor when they are purified by observing a vow. (They do not find liberation simply) in not eating (impure food) or when the sun or moon are eclipsed, or in battle, or in the relationship (that is formed) by taking refuge (śaraṇāgata). (They are not liberated) by taking a cow (and tending it), or (by performing austerities) amidst fire or water, or (by living) in the recesses of the foundations of temples (devāyatanamūla). (None find it just by going to) Vārāṇasī, or in (the sacred abode of) Jaleśvara, or in Kurukṣetra or anywhere (in sacred places) such as Kedāra[37] or even in battle. (Those who seek liberation in these places and these ways simply) suffer troubles uselessly. However, they do attain heaven and (possess) the eight yogic powers (aṣṭadhāguṇa).[38] (But), a debt remains (to be paid) in the world of mortals. (49-52)

In the wake of auspicious and inauspicious (actions), one experiences pleasure and pain. How can (people) be liberated without the destruction of Karma (karmakṣaya)? (53)

By initiation alone, (even) without practice, by grace (śaktipāta) and the certainty (of insight it gives), one attains the purification of impurity and the signs of realisation (pratyaya) such as the shaking and paralysis (of the body).[39] (54)

Experience here (in this world) (bhukti) is Nature (prakṛti) that is universally equal for all[40] (and it takes place) by the will of the Person (puruṣa). Nature's support is the Person. It is said to be here because of one's own action. (55)

The accomplishment of Being (bhāvasiddhi) comes about when, having assumed a void (state of mind) within the Void and having laid hold of a condition free of longing,[41] one ascends to the plane of the state of Non-being (nāstibhāva).[42] (56)

प्रत्यक्षे[२४८] बहिकर्माणि[२४९] स्वयं भूतानि यानि वै ।
तान्येव[२५०] विधिपूर्वेण शोध्यान्यनेन[२५१] मन्त्रवित् ।। ५७ ।।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

एवं मायाश्रितोऽनन्तमायाकर्मसमुच्चयः[२५२] ।
मायाबीजं[२५३] कथं[२५४] तस्मात्[२५५] वेधनं[२५६] भुवनत्रये ।। ५८ ।।
तेन संस्मृतमात्रेण किं फलं भवते नृणाम् ।

शरीरस्य यथातथ्यं सप्तधातुविमिश्रणम्[२५७] ।। ५९ ।।
एवं[२५८] तत्त्वप्रमाणं[२५९] तु अस्थिनाडिपरिग्रहम्[२६०] ।
कथं व्यक्तपुरे[२६१] चात्र देहे देहे तथोदितम्[२६२] ।। ६० ।।
तथाविधरूपेण[२६३] ब्रूहि सर्वं तु[२६४] मे उमे ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[२६५]

आदौ तन्वी परा[२६६] देवी दण्डिनी चारुनन्दिता[२६७] ।। ६१ ।।
स्वरहीना महामाया प्रज्वलन्ती[२६८] शिवासने[२६९] ।
ऋजुः[२७०] स्पष्टा महौघेन स्मरेत्[२७१] तां योनिमुद्रिताम्[२७२] ।। ६२ ।।

खेचरीमूलमाश्रित्य[२७३] शिवेन सह जल्पते[२७४] ।
नीयते हृद्गुहान्ते[२७५] च कदम्बकुसुमत्विषा ।। ६३ ।।

संस्मरेद्[२७६] ज्ञानचन्द्रेण[२७७] बिन्दुचक्रे च मूर्धनि ।
नीयते परमे व्योम्नि हिमकुन्देन्दुनिर्मला ।। ६४ ।।

क्षीयमाणां[२७८] स्मरेद् वक्रां[२७९] नासिकाग्रे[२८०] लयं[२८१] कुरु ।
सदानन्दमहौघं तु वर्तते[२८२] गिरिजात्मजे ।। ६५ ।।

O knower of mantra, whatever external, directly apparent Karmas there may be or physical elements, they should (all) thereby be purified in accord with the prescribed method. (57)

The Rise of Kuṇḍalinī and the Destruction of Māyā

Śrīnātha said:

In this way, the seed of Māyā resides in Māyā (i.e. Mahāmāyā) and is the aggregate of endless Mayā and Karma. So how is the piercing (of the psychic centres possible) in the three worlds? What fruit do men get just by remembering that? (58-59ab)

O Umā, tell me truly about how the seven constituents (dhātu) of the body are combined together, the measure (pramāṇa) of the principles and the configuration of the bones and channels. How is it that (all this) has arisen thus here in the manifest abode (of Śiva), that is, in each body? (59cd-61ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

[43]First of all, one should recall the Supreme Goddess (Parā). Beautiful and blissful (cārunanditā), she is thin and (straight like) a stick (daṇḍinī).[44] She is Mahāmāyā, the silent (sound of consciousness) (svarahīnā),[45] who burns in Śiva's seat. She is straight and clear. Recollect her, she who is stamped (with the triangular form of) the Yoni, along with the great current (of bliss) (mahaugha).[46] (61cd-62)

Taking up her residence in the root of (the energy which) wanders in the Sky (of ultimate reality) (khecarī), she converses with Śiva. She, who is the radiance of the Kadamba Flower,[47] is led into the cave of the Heart. (63)

Recollect (her) as the moon of knowledge, in the Wheel of the Point (binducakra) (on the top of) the head. Pure as the moon, snow and the kunda flower, she is led into the Supreme Sky.[48] (64)

Think of (her, the goddess) Vakrā, as waning away. Dissolve (her) away at the tip of the nose.[49] (In this way) the great current of perpetual bliss abides within (Śiva) who is Pārvatī's son (girijātmaja).[50] (65)

मायाविध्वंसनं[२८३] सम्यक् योगावेशनधारणात्[२८४] ।
लयोत्पत्तिविपत्तिञ्च[२८५] कृत्वा[२८६] आचारवान् भवेत् ॥ ६६ ॥

विध्वस्तमायाचैतन्या[२८७] शुद्धस्फटिकनिर्मला ।
करणेन सदाभ्यासाद्[२८८] योगनिद्रा ततो[२८९] भवेत्[२९०] ॥ ६७ ॥

मायाकरणसंबन्धं[२९१] कथितं सिद्धिहेतवे ।
मुमुक्षूणां[२९२] विमुक्त्यर्थं[२९३] शक्तिभेदं[२९४] परापरम्[२९५] ॥ ६८ ॥

श्रीनाथ उवाच

उदयास्तमनं चाद्यं तच्च[२९६] क्रमात्[२९७] कथं विदुः[२९८] ।
निग्रहानुग्रहे[२९९] शाक्ते आणवे[३००] शाम्भवे क्रमे[३०१] ॥ ६९ ॥

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[३०२]

निग्रहस्य च संशुद्धिरन्तर्यागे विशोधयेत्[३०३] ।
या सा शिवमयी पूर्वं उद्धृता भैरवागमे[३०४] ॥ ७० ॥
तया कर्मक्षयः स्वान्तदेहे[३०५] पूर्वं[३०६] क्रमार्चनात्[३०७] ।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

आदौ कर्म कथं प्रोक्तं क्षये[३०८] तस्य[३०९] किमोषधिः[३१०] ॥ ७१ ॥
कथं शुद्धिर्मनुष्याणां मोक्षमार्गं[३११] कथं वद ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[३१२]

तान्त्रिकाः[३१३] कर्मसंशुद्धिं[३१४] न विन्दन्ति[३१५] यथात्मनः[३१६] ॥ ७२ ॥
तेन तेषां न[३१७] मुक्तीह[३१८] अस्तीति कुलशासने ।

The destruction of Māyā (takes place) by properly maintaining the possessed state brought about by Yoga (yogāveśanadhāraṇā). (By doing this) and bringing creation and destruction to an end, (the adept is one who practices) right conduct (ācāravat).[51] (66)

Thus, by the constant practice of the means (karaṇa) (i.e. mantra), (the adept experiences) Yogic sleep (yoganidrā) which, stainless as pure crystal, is consciousness in which Māyā has been destroyed.[52] (67)

The relationship between Māyā and the means (karaṇa) has been explained. (I have also explained) the categories of power, supreme and inferior, in order that (the adept may achieve) accomplishments (siddhi) and those who desire liberation may be liberated.[53] (68)

The Nature of Karma, its Destruction and Entry into Nirvāṇa

Śrīnātha said:

How do (the wise) know the (true nature of the) arising and falling away (of impurity) and the primary (form of impurity) in due order, both in grace and obstruction (nigraha), in the Śāmbhava, Śākta and Āṇava sequences?[54] (69)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

(The binding) restraint (nigraha) (should be) purified.[55] One should purify it during the inner sacrifice. That (Vidyā), the nature of which is Śiva, was previously extracted (uddhṛtā) in the Bhairava Āgama.[56] It destroys Karma within one's own body prior to the worship of the transmission (kramārcana).[57]
(70-71ab)

Śrīnātha said:

Firstly, what is Karma said to be? And what is the remedy for it by which it is destroyed? How are men purified? Tell (me), how is the path to liberation?
(71cd-72ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

As Tāntrikas do not manage to purify the Self from Karma, thus there is no liberation for them here (in this world) as there is in the Kula teaching.[58]
(72cd-73ab)

प्रभुत्वे च शिवः कर्ता भूतग्रामे[३१९] चतुर्विधे ॥ ७३ ॥
परमात्मा निराकाशः[३२०] सावकाशात् समुद्भवः ।
स्वयंभू[३२१] कारणं[३२२] लोके शून्यभूतमचेतनम् ॥ ७४ ॥

अस्वतन्त्रं यदा जीवं[३२३] चाराचारविवर्जितम्[३२४] ।
शून्यभूतात्मकं लोके योगाभ्यासात् प्रवर्तते ॥ ७५ ॥
तस्यापि चोर्ध्वचैतन्यं[३२५] निमित्तं ज्ञानभास्करम् ।

उदयास्तमनैकत्वे[३२६] राजते बोधरूपकम् ॥ ७६ ॥
कामस्य विषतत्त्वस्य निरञ्जनान्तर्गस्य च[३२७] ।

चन्द्रार्कप्रतिबिम्बं[३२८] च निष्कलं तरितात्मजम् ॥ ७७ ॥
ताप्यमानं[३२९] स्वयं तिष्ठेद् भारूपं तिमिरापहम् ।
पुरुषः सर्वसामान्यो भरणादपि भैरवः[३३०] ॥ ७८ ॥

निर्मलः सकलो व्यापी क्षीरमध्ये[३३१] यथा घृतम्[३३२] ।
प्रच्छन्नं परमानन्दं[३३३] शिवतत्त्वं निरञ्जनम् ॥ ७९ ॥
अभेद्यमव्ययं शान्तं सर्वोक्तं सर्वतोमुखम् ।

तस्येच्छा निर्गता[३३४] शक्तिर्ऋजुरेखा[३३५] ह्यधोमुखी ॥ ८० ॥
विसर्गमध्यगा[३३६] भीमा अग्निज्वाला सुवर्चसा ।
व्यापिका सृष्टिमार्गस्य[३३७] धर्माधर्मात्मके पदे ॥ ८१ ॥

स्वाभाविकी कला माया सृष्टिहेतोः समुद्भवा[३३८] ।
गुणत्रयधरात्युग्रा[३३९] नादरूपा मनोन्मनी[३४०] ॥ ८२ ॥

(As the one who possess) mastery (over action), Śiva is the agent within the fourfold aggregate of living beings (bhūtagrāma).[59] The Supreme Self is spaceless (nirākāśa). Creation (samudbhava) proceeds from that which is spatial (sāvakāśa). That is the self-born (universal) cause (that operates) in the world. The insentient (acetana) is emptiness (śūnyabhūta). (73cd-74)

If the living being (jīva) is not free and is devoid of (i.e does not care about) right and wrong conduct (cārācāra), it is (insentient) emptiness (śūnyabhūta). (However), the higher consciousness (ūrdhvacaitanya), which is the sun of knowledge and the instrumental cause (of liberation), also works for him by (his) practice of Yoga in the world. (75-76ab)

When the arising and falling away (of the breath become) one, the conscious nature (bodharūpaka) of Passion (kāma), the Principle of Poison (viṣa) and of that within the Stainless (nirañjana), shines.[60] (76cd-77ab)

(The conscious nature) is the reflection of the Sun and Moon, undifferentiated (niṣkala), born of the liberated Self (taritātmaja) that burns by itself, abiding as light that removes darkness.[61] It is the Person (puruṣa) who is universally identical for all.[62] He is 'Bhairava' (for this reason) and also because (he) fills (all things) (bharaṇa).[63] (77cd-78)

Free of impurity (nirmala), endowed with (universal) power (sakala),[64] pervasive like clarified butter within milk,[65] it is the Śiva principle which is stainless (nirañjana), hidden, supreme bliss, indivisible, imperishable, tranquil, present everywhere and is all that is spoken. (79-80ab)

His will has emerged (as his universal) energy (from within him in the form of) a straight line facing downwards.[66] Horrific (bhimā), she is in the centre of emission (visarga). A tongue of flame of beautiful lustre, she pervades the path of emanation on the plane (pada) consisting of Dharma and Adharma. (80cd-81)

She is Māyā, the energy inherent in one's own nature (svābhāvikī) that has come forth in order to emanate (the world). Sustaining the three qualities, she is extremely fierce. Her nature Sound (nāda), she is Mind Beyond Mind (manonmanī).[67] (82)

दण्डाकारा निराकारा साकारा शिवदेवता ।
मायामलमिदं कर्म[३४१] निष्कलस्य[३४२] समुद्भवम्[३४३] ॥ ८३ ॥

तेनासौ सकलो योगी मायातत्त्वोपरिस्थितः[३४४] ।
एवं मायामलं[३४५] पूर्वं बन्धनं[३४६] तस्य[३४७] नामतः ॥ ८४ ॥
सृष्टेः स्थितेश्च[३४८] संहारे[३४९] कर्तृत्वे कर्मपाशकम्[३५०] ।

पञ्चभौतिकब्रह्माद्याः[३५१] संसृष्टेरवतारकाः[३५२] ॥ ८५ ॥
कृत्रिमं[३५३] सहजं नैव भौतमाभोगवेष्टितम्[३५४] ।
मायामोहेन संतप्तं[३५५] बिन्दुरात्मा[३५६] जगोत्तरे[३५७] ॥ ८६ ॥

सा[३५८] चैव प्रकृतिर्व्यापी[३५९] कर्मबन्धात्मिकी भवेत् ।
स[३६०] पशुः पाशबन्धेन[३६१] आक्रान्तः[३६२] च गुणत्रये ॥ ८७ ॥

सत्त्वेन कुरुते कर्म[३६३] कामश्च रजवर्तिनः[३६४] ।
तमाविष्टः[३६५] स्मरेत् पापान्[३६६] सुखदुःखवशंगतः ॥ ८८ ॥

भुञ्जते[३६७] स्वर्गनरकं अविदित्वा[३६८] न मुच्यते[३६९] ।
सुकृतं दुष्कृतं भुंक्ते[३७०] इष्टानिष्टं मनेप्सितम्[३७१] ॥ ८९ ॥
एवं[३७२] मानापमानौ च वेदितव्यौ मलस्य च ।

ब्राह्मे च वैष्णवे लोके ऐन्द्रे चैव शशिप्रभे ॥ ९० ॥
यक्षलोके च गान्धर्वे रक्षपैशाचिके कुले ।
स्वर्गे चाष्टविधे कर्मभोगान्[३७३] भुञ्जति[३७४] भैरव ॥ ९१ ॥

अशुभे च[३७५] कृते पापे[३७६] नरकं गच्छते[३७७] क्षणात् ।
मर्त्यलोके महाघोरे पशुयोनौ[३७८] मृगे[३७९] तथा ॥ ९२ ॥
पतति[३८०] नरके[३८१] घोरे[३८२] शरीषु[३८३] स्थावरेष्वपि[३८४] ।
व्यापितं[३८५] कर्मपाशेन स[३८६] विन्दति शुभाशुभम् ॥ ९३ ॥

Śiva's deity, (this energy is the goddess) in the form of a stick.[68] She is both formless and with form. This (binding) Karma is (essentially) the impurity of Māyā, which is the product (samudbhava) of (the aspect) 'without power' (niṣkala).[69] (83)

Thus the Yogi above the principle of Māyā possesses power (sakala). In this way, his first bond is called the the impurity of Māyā, (whereas) the bond of Karma is present in the agency of emanation and persistence and in withdrawal.[70] (84-85ab)

Brahmā and the rest (of the gods who govern) the five (gross) elements bring about phenomenal existence (saṁsṛṣṭi). The (gross) elemental nature (bhauta) is created (kṛtrima lit. 'artificial'), it is not innately existent (sahaja lit. 'natural'). It is material (bhauta), wrapped in worldly experience and troubled by the delusion of Māyā, (whereas) the Point is the Self beyond the universe.[71] (85cd-86)

And, pervasive, (Mahāmāyā) is Nature (prakṛti) which becomes the fetter of Karma. (While) this is the fettered soul (paśu), attacked by the bondage of the fetters (who resides) in the three qualities (guṇa).[72] (87)

(Impelled) by sattva, he acts (lit. `makes Karma'). Passionate desire (kāma) resides in rajas. Penetrated by tamas, he reflects on (many kinds of) sins, (due to which he is) under the sway of pleasure and pain. (88)

He experiences heaven and hell and, not having known (ultimate reality), is not freed. He experiences (the consequences of) good and bad deeds and what is not desired whether it is something he likes or dislikes. In the same way, know that (both) respect and contempt are also (products) of impurity. (89-90ab)

O Bhairava, he undergoes the experiences that are the consequences of (his) actions in the eight kinds of heaven (svarga). (These are) those of Brahmā and Viṣṇu, the world of Indra, that of the lunar light, the world of Yakṣas, that of the Gandharvas and the (worlds) of the families (kula) of Rakṣasas and Piśācas. (90cd-91)

When (some) inauspicious sin has been committed, he goes to hell in an instant. In this way, he falls into the ghastly world of mortal (men, or) into the womb of a deer (or any other) animal, (or) into a terrible hell, (or) even into Śarīs and (other) plants. Pervaded by the fetter of Karma, (at times) he gets what is auspicious (and at other times) what is inauspicious. (92-93)

तेन कर्मवशाद् योगी विश्वरूपो मणिर्यथा ।
कर्मच्छेदेन[३८७] चाभ्यासात्[३८८] तदा निर्वाणमाविशेत् ।। ९४ ।।

भुवनान्तर्गतः[३८९] तिष्ठेद् व्योमव्यापी स भैरवः[३९०] ।
मायाविध्वस्तजीवाख्यो[३९१] अपरे पश्चिमे पुरे ।। ९५ ।।

जायते रत्नतुङ्गे तु तेन मोक्षो विधीयते ।
इति ज्ञात्वा यथा तस्य[३९२] मलपातं तु कारयेत्[३९३] ।। ९६ ।।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

एवं स्वाभाविकं तस्य कर्मायत्त[३९४] मलत्रयम् ।
प्राकृतं मानसं चैव मायामोहाद्[३९५] भवार्णवम् ।। ९७ ।।
क्षयं[३९६] तेषां कथं उग्रे क्रमेऽस्मिन् संप्रगीयते ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[३९७]

निरोधकरणं कृत्वा पञ्चोत्थं मण्डलक्रमम्[३९८] ।। ९८ ।।
योनिमुद्रां[३९९] समाश्रित्य भैरवीं मायया[४००] युताम्[४०१] ।
कुम्भककरणाधिष्ठाय[४०२] येनोर्ध्वं[४०३] * व्रजेन्मणिः[४०४] ।। ९९ ।।

शनैः[४०५] शनैरुपरमेद्[४०६] यावद् रौद्रीं[४०७] च मूर्धनि ।
तदावेशेन[४०८] जगतो[४०९] मलविध्वंसनं भवेत् ।। १०० ।।
मायास्तमनमेतद् वै[४१०] निर्मलं काञ्चनं भवेत्[४११] ।

धुननावेशनं[४१२] कम्पं[४१३] निद्रा घूर्मिः[४१४] पिपीलिका[४१५] ।। १०१ ।।
एकाङ्गनर्तना भाषा अश्रुपातं[४१६] कुरङ्गवत् ।
प्लुतिभेदं सिंहशब्दं[४१७] इत्येकादश प्रत्ययाः ।। १०२ ।।

Thus, due to the effect of Karma, the yogi, like a jewel, (assumes each and) every form. By the cessation of Karma and through practice, he enters Nirvāṇa.[73] (94)

He, Bhairava who pervades the Sky, abides within the world. (There he is) in the lower (apara) City of the West and is called the living being (jīva) in whom Māyā has been destroyed.[74] (95)

He arises victorious (jāyate) on the Mountain of Jewels and so liberation is attained. (Having learned this), do what is necessary to remove his impurity.[75] (96)

The Destruction of the Threefold Impurity and Maturation of Karma by means of the Rise of Kuṇḍalinī and the Transmission (krama)

Śrīnātha said:

Such is his threefold impurity which is (both) innate (svābhāvika) and dependent on Karma in this way; while the ocean of transmigratory existence, material (prākṛta) and mental (mānasa), is due to the delusion brought about by Māyā. O terrific one! How is their destruction said to take place in this transmission (krama)? (97-98ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

Having fashioned the means to check (impurity), namely, the sequence of the maṇḍalas generated from the five (pañcottha),[76] one should make the Gesture of the Yoni,[77] which is that of Bhairavī,[78] conjoined with (the seed-syllable of) Māyā (HRĪṀ) while retaining the breath in such a way that (Kuṇḍalinī) the jewel (maṇi) [79] may travel upwards.[80] (98cd-99)

He should gradually bring (all action to) rest until (he reaches) Raudrī (at the top of) the head.[81] Then by the penetration (āveśa) (that takes place, all) the impurity of the universe is destroyed. This is indeed the cessation of Māyā (whereby the soul, free of Māyā) becomes like pure gold.[82] (100-101ab)

[83]The eleven signs of attainment (pratyaya) (that manifest then) are (as follows).[84] 1) trembling (dhunana), 2) possession (āveśana), 3) shaking (kampa), 4) sleep (nidrā), 5) rolling (of the eyes as if inebriated) (ghūrmi), 6) (the sensation of) ants (crawling on the body),[85] 7) dancing on one limb, 8) (speaking in the Kaula) language (bhāṣā),[86] 9) tears, 10) jumping like a deer and 11) roaring (like) a lion. (101cd-102)

रुद्रभागे पदे[४१८] प्राप्ते तुर्योर्ध्वे[४१९] लयतां गते ।
नश्यन्ति[४२०] सर्वकर्माणि[४२१] तस्मिन् दृष्टे परापरे ॥ १०३ ॥

परानन्दस्वरूपेण भवेदानन्दविग्रहः ।
दहनाप्यायभेदोऽय[४२२] ज्ञात्वा कर्मक्षयो भवेत् ॥ १०४ ॥

मुक्तं ज्ञानाश्रितं देहं कृत्वा क्रमात्[४२३] क्रमार्चनम् ।
पशुपाशविनिर्मुक्तः[४२४] पतते[४२५] ज्ञानमण्डले ॥ १०५ ॥
आज्ञाप्रत्ययमावेश[४२६] रोमाञ्चं[४२७] च[४२८] मुहुर्मुहुः[४२९] ।

अन्वयं पूजयेन्नित्य[४३०] अन्वयं पूर्वसंग्रहम्[४३१] ॥ १०६ ॥
मुहुर्मुहुः क्रमाभ्यासाल्लक्षजापेन[४३२] खेगतिः ।

पञ्चमूर्तिधरेन्द्रस्य[४३३] शिवस्य[४३४] दक्षिणापथे ॥ १०७ ॥
यदा[४३५] कलियुगे घोरे तदा तं पूजयेत् क्रमात् ।

इत्याज्ञा मलपातेन निष्कला सकलागमे ॥ १०८ ॥
गुर्वाम्नायेन इत्युक्ता[४३६] न चोक्ता अन्यदर्शने ।
मयावतारित[४३७] तुभ्यं आश्रमं क्रमपञ्चकम् ॥ १०९ ॥

श्रीभैरव उवाच

महत् कर्मविपाक[४३८] तु ज्ञातमद्य मया स्फुटम् ।
दहनं च कथं तस्य ओलीना[४३९] क्रममण्डले ॥ ११० ॥

Once the plane which is Rudra's part[87] has been attained and (individual consciousness) has dissolved away in (the state) Beyond the Fourth, all Karmas are destroyed upon perceiving (ultimate reality which is both) supreme (transcendence) and lower (immanence). (103)

(The yogi's) nature is (then) supreme bliss and so (his very) form is bliss. Once one has known this division (bheda) (of the teaching, namely) the burning away (of impurity) (dahana) and nourishment (apyāya), Karma is destroyed.[88] (104)

Once (the adept) has worshipped the Krama in due order, the body, established in knowledge, is liberated. Free of the fetters (pāśa) of a fettered soul (paśu), he enter into (patate)[89] the Maṇḍala of Knowledge.[90] (Then he experiences) possession (āveśa), the signs (of accomplishment), the Command and (his) hair stands on end, again and again.[91] (105-106ab)

One should always worship the Tradition (anvaya). The Tradition is (the teaching) that has been gathered together from the past. By practicing (this) progression (krama) repeatedly and by 100,000 repetitions of the Vidyā, (the adept attains) flight (khegati). (106cd-107ab)

During the terrible Age of Strife one should worship, in due order in the Deccan (dakṣiṇāpatha) (the Liṅga) of Śiva, the Lord who bears a fivefold form.[92] (107cd-108ab)

This is the Command, which after the removal of impurity is formless (niṣkalā) (and present) in all the scripture. (The Command) is uttered by the tradition of the masters (gurvāmnāya). It is not discussed in (any) other system (darśana). I have brought the fivefold transmission (kramapañcaka) of the Hermitage (maṇḍala) down (to earth) for you. (108cd-109)

[93]The Consecration of the Command: The Devyākramasūtra

The Ascent and Descent of Kuṇḍalinī

The venerable (god) Bhairava said:

Today I have clearly understood the great maturation of Karma. (Now please tell me), how are the Lineages (oli) in the Circle of the Transmission (kramamaṇḍala) burnt away? (110)

श्रीवक्त्रा उवाच[४४०]

पुनरन्यक्रमेणैव[४४१] अन्तर्यागस्य निर्णयम्[४४२] ।
क्रमेऽस्मिन् वृद्धकौमारे[४४३] सिद्धगुह्ये[४४४] कुलकन्दरे ॥ १११ ॥

क्रमस्य पूरको[४४५] मन्त्री वज्राविष्टेन[४४६] साधकः[४४७] ।
स्वमुद्रायोगिनीपाणौ कृत्वा चित्तमधोन्मुखम्[४४८] ॥ ११२ ॥
मुद्रामडलकं वृत्तं[४४९] आश्रमं पारमेश्वरम् ।

तप्तहेममयं शुद्धं तस्य मध्ये च वर्तुलम् ॥ ११३ ॥
आरक्तं रविबिम्बं तु दक्षावर्तपरिभ्रमात्[४५०] ।
तस्य मध्येऽखण्डचक्रं आरक्तं ज्योतिसन्निभम्[४५१] ॥ ११४ ॥
तस्य[४५२] मध्ये परं द्वीपं गोक्षीरं[४५३] शान्तवारुणम्[४५४] ।
भ्रमन्तं संस्मरेत्[४५५] तत्र ओलित्रितयशासने[४५६] ॥ ११५ ॥

जन्मचक्रे जगन्नाथ तन्मध्ये बिन्दुमण्डलम् ।
अलातपुष्पसंकाशं[४५७] वामावर्तपरिभ्रमात् ॥ ११६ ॥

तदन्तरगता विद्या या परा परमेश्वरी ।
सा शक्तिर्भीमरूपेण[४५८] ज्योतिरूपा[४५९] मनोन्मनी ॥ ११७ ॥

दीपवर्तिशिखा घोरा ज्वालिनी[४६०] धूम्रवर्जिता ।
रुद्रकोटिसहस्राभा[४६१] रुद्रशक्तिः[४६२] परापरा[४६३] ॥ ११८ ॥

रुद्रकोटिधरो बिन्दुः शक्तिराभूमिसंप्लवः ।
तस्य तेजः[४६४] परा शक्तिः रुद्रशक्तिर्महेश्वरी[४६५] ॥ ११९ ॥

वक्त्ररूपा शिवेन्द्रेण भाविताज्ञास्वभावतः[४६६] ।
चित्स्वरूपा[४६७] विकासा[४६८] तु श्रीदेवी कुलकुब्जिका ॥ १२० ॥

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

(Now) according to a different sequence, (I will expound) the teaching (nirṇaya) concerning the inner sacrifice again in these, the Transmissions of the Aged and the Youth,[94] that are within the Secret Place of the Siddhas (siddhaguhya), the Cave of Kula (kulakandara).[95] (111)

The adept, the one who recites mantra, fulfils the Transmission because he is penetrated by (AIṀ) the Thunderbolt (vajra). Performing his own (ritual) gesture of union with (his) hands and making (his) mind face downwards,[96] (he should) make the round Maṇḍala of Gesture which is the Hermitage of the Supreme Lord.[97] (112-113ab)

Made of heated gold, it is pure. There is a round, light red solar disc rotating in a clockwise direction in the middle of it. In the middle of that is an unbroken circle (akhaṇḍacakra), light red in colour and similar to (pure) light. In the middle of that is the supreme Island (white as) cow's milk, tranquil and watery. Recollect that there as it rotates in the midst of the teaching of the Triple Lineage (oli)[98] which (constitute) the Wheel of Birth (janmacakra).[99] (113cd-115)

O Lord of the Universe, in the centre of that is the Circle of the Point (bindumaṇḍala) which, by (its) anticlockwise motion, is like a flower (formed by whirling) a firebrand. (116)

Within that is the Vidyā who is Parā, the Supreme Goddess. She is Energy in (her) terrible aspect, Mind Beyond Mind (manonmanī) (whose) form is Light.[100] (117)

Horrific (ghorā), she burns without smoke, (like) the flame on the wick of a lamp. Shining like countless millions of Rudras, she is Rudra's energy who is both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent). (118)

(This) energy is the Point, the deluge (of energy that flows) right down to the earth and contains millions of millions of Rudras. Its radiant power (tejas) is the Supreme Energy, Rudra's energy, the Great Goddess. (119)

Her form is crooked because she is the Command blessed (bhāvita) by lord Śiva. She is consciousness, the goddess Śrī, Kulakubjikā and Vikāsā (Expansion). (120)

प्रज्वलन्ती[४६९] स्वकिरणैश्चतुर्भिः रौद्रमण्डले[४७०] ।
एवं तां[४७१] गूढरोधेन[४७२] संस्मरेत् किरणावलीम्[४७३] ।। १२१ ।।

निःश्वासमेकभावेन[४७४] शिष्यदेहं[४७५] विशोधयेत्[४७६] ।
आकम्पो[४७७] रोमहर्षश्च वर्तते[४७८] दृढमुष्टिना ।। १२२ ।।

शक्तितत्त्वे च संप्राप्ते समुत्थाप्य शनैः शनैः ।
मध्यनाडीप्रवाहेन सुषुम्नान्ते यथा पुरा[४७९] ।। १२३ ।।
भुजङ्गकुटिलाकारां[४८०] नाभिस्थाने[४८१] प्रवेशयेत् ।

अलातचक्ररूपेण वामावर्तपरिभ्रमात् ।। १२४ ।।
नीयते ऊर्ध्वमार्गेण[४८२] यावद्[४८३] हृद्व्योमपञ्चकम्[४८४] ।

कृत्वा चतुःप्रकारेण[४८५] वामावर्तेण[४८६] सा कला ।। १२५ ।।
नीयते परमे धाम्नि अनामापथमण्डले[४८७] ।

तस्योर्ध्वे[४८८] क्षीयमाणां[४८९] च मेरुमण्डलमध्यतः ।। १२६ ।।
चतुःप्रकारक्रमान्ते[४९०] ध्वनिमात्रां[४९१] प्रवेशयेत् ।

शक्तिं[४९२] विमलरूपेण उद्धरेत्[४९३] कन्दमण्डलात्[४९४] ।। १२७ ।।
शनैः शनैरूर्ध्वमार्गे[४९५] नादरूपां[४९६] लयं कुरु ।

उदयं बिन्दुमध्ये तु एवमस्तमनं पुनः ।। १२८ ।।
तत्रैव ऊर्ध्वमार्गे[४९७] तु शक्तिमाद्यां[४९८] लयं कुरु ।
इत्याज्ञागमभेदेन अमावास्या प्रचोदिता[४९९] ।। १२९।।

एतत् कर्मविपाकं[५००] तु शक्त्यावेशनधारणात्[५०१] ।
पुरक्षोभे तु[५०२] संप्राप्ते शिष्याणां[५०३] च मलक्षयम्[५०४] ।। १३० ।।

She burns intensely with her beautiful rays in Rudra's maṇḍala. Thus, by blocking the anus, one should recollect her, she who is the aggregate of the rays (of supreme consciousness) (kiraṇāvalī). (121)

By uniting the exhaled breath (with his own, the teacher should) purify the disciple's body. (While this happens, the disciple) shakes a little, horripilates and, when (he) reaches the Principle of Energy, (his) fist becomes firmly clenched.[101] (122)

Initially, once (Kuṇḍalinī) has been slowly raised, as before, within Suṣumṇā by means of the flow within the Central Channel (madhyanāḍī), (the adept) should cause (her) whose form is a crooked snake to reach the navel.[102] (123-124ab)

By rotating in an anticlockwise direction,[103] (she) is led along the Upper Path in the form of a circle (of flame like that of a whirling) firebrand, until (she reaches) the pentad of the Sky of the Heart. (124cd-125ab)

Once it has been rotated four times anticlockwise,[104] that energy is led up to the Supreme Abode in the Sphere of the Path of the Nameless (anāmāpathamaṇḍala).[105] (125cd-126ab)

She is in the process of waning away above that, in the centre of the Sphere of Meru (merumaṇḍala). One should make (this energy, now in the form of) pure resonance (dhvanimātrā), enter the end of the fourfold sequence.[106] (126cd-127ab)

One should lift up (that spiritual) energy in a pure form from the Sphere of the Root (kandamaṇḍala). (Now) in the form of Sound (nāda), gradually dissolve (her) away along the Upper Path. (127cd-128ab)

(This energy) arises in the centre of the Point, and in the same way, returns back (there) again. Dissolve away (that) Primary Energy there itself, along the Upper Path. In this way, the (energy of) the New Moon is variously impelled by the Command and the scriptures. (128cd-129)

This is the (way) Karma matures by contemplating the penetration (āveśa) of Energy. The disciples' impurity is destroyed when (they reach the degree of Yoga) in which the body trembles (purakṣobha). (130)

यदा प्रवर्तते देहे तदा कर्मक्षयो भवेत्[५०५] ।
एतदाक्षेपदहन[५०६] अन्तर्यागे प्रतिष्ठितम् ॥ १३१ ॥
परानन्दस्वरूपेण भ्रमते[५०७] क्रमनिर्णयम्[५०८] ।

प्रथम[५०९] स्थूलयागस्य[५१०] सूक्ष्ममेवानुपद्धतिः[५११] ॥ १३२ ॥
अत ऊर्ध्व[५१२] पूर्णभेद[५१३] पुनरन्यक्रमेण[५१४] तु ।
आगमेन प्रवक्ष्यामि[५१५] भेदाष्टादशभेदितम्[५१६] ॥ १३३ ॥

ऊर्ध्वस्थानाद् बिन्दुमध्याद् रेतोरूपा[५१७] समुद्धरेत् ।
उपक्षीणा तु या पूर्वं सा पूर्णामृतवर्षिणी ॥ १३४ ॥

वक्रशक्तिरनन्तात्मा सौम्यरूपा विचिन्तिता[५१८] ।
संहारस्यागमे सृष्टिश्चिञ्चिणी[५१९] परमा कला ॥ १३५ ॥

आनयेच्च अनामान्ते तु क्षीरकणिकोपमाम्[५२०] ।
ततोऽभिषेकस्तेनैव[५२१] प्राक्स्वरूपेण देवता[५२२] ॥ १३६ ॥
हृच्चक्रे पूर्णसंस्थाने पूर्णचन्द्रसमप्रभा ।
एवं सञ्चिन्त्य[५२३] चित्तेन[५२४] स्वचक्रे तु प्रवेशयेत् ॥ १३७ ॥

प्रहसन्ती परानन्दा द्रवते[५२५] साभिनन्दिता[५२६] ।
चित्स्वरूपात्मिका[५२७] शक्तिरनामानाममण्डले[५२८] ॥ १३८ ॥

तेनामृतभरा[५२९] तृप्तिः पौर्णमासी प्रवर्तते ।
आगम[५३०] सृष्तिभेदेन एतदाज्ञाभिषेचनम् ॥ १३९ ॥

गमागमेन संशोध्य पश्चात् कुर्यात् क्रमार्चनम् ।

Karma is destroyed when this occurs in the body. This (state of) convulsion (ākṣepa) and the burning away (of Karma) is well established in the inner sacrifice. (This) is the teaching concerning the Transmission (kramanirṇaya). It wanders (through the body) as supreme bliss. (131-132ab)

The first (division is) the gross sacrifice, the (second), according to the liturgy, is the subtle. Again, above that is the full division (pūrṇabheda), which follows a different sequence. I will explain (this) division, which is (itself) divided into eighteen parts,[107] according to the scripture. (132cd-133)

(The adept) should elevate (the goddess) in the form of semen (retas) from the middle of the Point,[108] the Upper Place. The same (Energy) that had previously waned away (now) rains down the nectar of the Full (Moon) (pūrṇāmṛta).[109] (134)

(The adept) should contemplate that crooked power (i.e. Kuṇḍalinī). Endless by nature, and tranquil (saumyarūpā) (she is the goddess) Ciñcinī[110] who is the supreme power and the emanation (sṛṣṭi) (that occurs when) the withdrawal (of phenomenal existence) takes place. (135)

(In this state, this energy is round and white) like a drop of milk. (Contemplating it in this form, the yogi) should lead it up to end of the Nameless (anāmānte). Then the consecration takes place by that same (process).[111] Once (the adept) has thus contemplated the deity in its original form, brilliant as the full (moon) in the Wheel of the Heart, the place of the Full (Moon) he should induce (her) to enter her own Wheel by means of the mind (citta). (136-137)

She who is praised as supreme bliss, laughing, melts (dravate). She is the Nameless (anāmā). The energy which is consciousness (resides) in the Sphere of the Nameless (anāmamaṇḍala).[112] (138)

(Thus, the yogi experiences) the contentment (trpti) of the night of the Full Moon that arises in this way, laden with nectar. This is the consecration of the Command, the entry (āgama) (of the breath) with the phase of emanation. (139)

Once he has purified (himself) by (this process of) going and coming (gamāgama),[113] (the adept) should worship the Transmission (kramārcana).[114] (140ab)

क्रियापादस्य[५३१] प्रथम[५३२] शक्त्यावेशमिहोच्यते[५३३] ॥ १४० ॥
हृत्स्वरूपं खरूपं च योगभेद[५३४] परापरम् ।
क्रमसद्भावमत्यन्तमुद्रितमाद्यपीठके ॥ १४१ ॥

इति आद्यावतार[५३५] तु महाभैरवयज्ञके ।
मोक्षमार्गक्रम[५३६] चक्रे आगमेनावतारितम् ॥ १४२ ॥

एवं देव्याक्रम[५३७] सूत्रं मानसयागसंकुलम्[५३८] ।
अभ्यसेत् सततं यस्तु[५३९] स योगी पाशहो[५४०] भवेत् ॥ १४३ ॥

जीवन्मुक्तिधरः श्रीमान्[५४१] पापं पूर्व[५४२] न लिप्यते[५४३] ।
वर्गैकेन[५४४] तु अभ्यासाद्[५४५] द्वित्रिपञ्चभिर्वर्तते[५४६] ॥ १४४ ॥

आत्मनः[५४७] स्मरणादेव ब्रह्मघ्नः[५४८] सिद्धिमाप्नुयात् ।
कि[५४९] पुनर्भावशुद्धात्मा[५५०] गुर्वाज्ञाप्रतिपालकः ॥ १४५ ॥

तस्मात् सूक्ष्मशरीर[५५१] तु प्राकृतं षड्विध[५५२] भवेत् ।
जप्त्वा लक्षाणि द्वात्रिंशद् वर्तते[५५३] मुद्रमण्डले[५५४] ॥ १४६ ॥[५५५]

भूमित्यागं पुरक्षोभं मुद्रास्फोटादिप्रत्ययम् ।[५५६]
चालनावेशन[५५७] कम्पं परसंक्रमणोऽपि[५५८] वा ॥ १४७ ॥[५५९]
प्रत्यक्षमणिमाद्यष्टौ वर्तन्ते प्रत्ययानि[५६०] वै ।[५६१]
तडित्कोटिस्वरूपेण ध्यानमात्रेण संगतिः[५६२] ॥ १४८ ॥
स्तम्भनं परसैन्यानां सर्वकर्माणि कारयेत्[५६३] ।
अतीतानागतं किञ्चिद् वर्तमान[५६४] परापरम् ॥ १४९ ॥
दूरात् श्रवणविज्ञानं कौलभाषाप्रवर्तनम्[५६५] ।

Here it is said that the penetration of energy (śaktyāveśa) marks the beginning (part) of the ritual section part (kriyāpāda) (of the teaching). The Yoga part, superior and inferior, (corresponds to) the essential nature of the Heart and the Sky (of consciousness). It is the essence of the Transmission which is kept well sealed in the Primordial Seat. (140cd-141)

This is primordial descent (of the teachings that took place) during Bhairava's great sacrifice. The sequence of the path to liberation within the Wheel has been brought down (to earth) by the scripture. (142)

Such is the aphorism of the Transmission of the Goddess (devyākramasūtra). It contains (the teaching concerning) the mental sacrifice. The Yogi who practices it constantly destroys the fetters (of conditioned existence). (143)

The venerable man is liberated while living and (his) prior sin does not stain (him). By practicing according to one section he abides along with two, three and five. (144)

By recollecting the Self in this way, (even) a man who has killed a Brahmin gets success (siddhi). So what (to say) of one whose Self (has become) pure through these (profound states of) being and who keeps the teacher's Command? (145)

Thus the subtle, natural (prākṛta) body is of six kinds. Once (the adept) has repeated the mantra 3,200,000 times, he abides within the Maṇḍala of Gesture. (146)

And he can perform all (magical and yogic) acts, including flight (bhūmityāga), arousal of the body (purakṣobha), (attainment of the) explosive power of Gesture (mudrāsphoṭa) and other such signs (of accomplishment). (He attains the power of unimpeded) movement (calana), penetration (āveśa), shaking (kampa) and transference into another (body). The eight signs (of accomplishment), including the powers to become small at will (aṇimā) and the rest, become directly apparent. (He can) meet (anybody at will) by means of concentration alone (that is as powerful as) a hundred million lightning bolts. (in this way he can) paralyse an opponent's armies, (know) whatever has past, is in the future and in the present as well as the supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent reality). (He possesses the power to) hear at a (great) distance and the (ability to speak in the secret) Kaula language (kaulabhāṣāpravartana). (147-150ab)

क्रमस्योर्ध्वे[५६६] क्रमाम्नायं[५६७] परं सूक्ष्मं द्विधा भवेत् ।। १५० ।।
सूक्ष्मं[५६८] देहोद्भवं स्थूलं द्वाचत्वारिंशती[५६९] क्रमात् ।
तच्छकाशाद्[५७०] विनिष्क्रान्तं[५७१] क्रमार्थं[५७२] मण्डले त्रये ।। १५१ ।।

ज्ञात्वा पूर्वक्रमं योगं[५७३] पश्चादाज्ञाभिषेचनम्[५७४] ।
प्रत्ययेन यदा सिद्धिस्तदासौ क्रमपूजकः ।। १५२ ।।

इत्याद्यावतारे[५७५] कादिभेदे मलक्षयाधिकारवर्णने क्रमोदयो नामानन्दः ।। १३ ।।

Above the Transmission (krama), the Krama tradition (kramāmnāya) is of two kinds: subtle and supreme. The subtle one is generated from the body. The gross one is the (Vidyā) of forty-two (syllables that comes) from the Krama. The teaching of the Transmission (kramārtha) has emerged from its presence into the three Maṇḍalas (of the Sun, Fire and Moon). (150cd-151)

The consecration of the Command occurs after one has known the Yoga that constitutes the prior Transmission. If (the adept attains) success (siddhi) along with the experience (which is the sign of attainment) (pratyaya) he is then (a true) worshiper of the Transmission. (152)

This is (the thirteenth) chapter called the Description of the Authority (to bring about) the Destruction of Impurity. It belongs to the primordial descent in the division beginning with 'Ka'.

चतुर्दशानन्दः

श्रीकौलीश उवाच[१]

अनुज्ञातोऽभिषिक्तस्तु[२] वीरो[३] वीरत्वमिच्छतः[४] ।
चरेद्[५] विद्याव्रतं मन्त्री यथावद् विधिपूर्वतः[६] ॥ १ ॥
तदहं श्रोतुमिच्छामि विद्याव्रतमनुत्तमम्[७] ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[८]

शृणु देव[९] प्रवक्ष्यामि[१०] विद्याया[११] व्रतमुत्तमम् ॥ २ ॥
जटी मुण्डी[१२] शिखी वापि[१३] स्नातको[१४] ब्रह्मचारिणः[१५] ।
बाह्यव्रतं प्रकर्तव्यं कौलिकाचारगोपितम्[१६] ॥ ३ ॥
क्रमस्थोऽपि व्रतस्थो वा[१७] सर्वावस्थोऽपि सिद्ध्यति[१८] ।

पञ्चमुद्राधरो[१९] योगी[२०] भस्मनिष्ठो[२१] दिगम्बरः[२२] ॥ ४ ॥
चीरवल्कलधारी[२३] वा सर्वाभरणभूषितः[२४] ।
रक्तवस्त्रपटो[२५] वापि स्वेच्छावेषधरोऽपि[२६] वा[२७] ॥ ५ ॥

येन येन हि[२८] वेशेण[२९] वर्तते साधकोत्तमः ।
तत् तदेव[३०] व्रतं प्रोक्तं इति[३१] शास्त्रस्य निश्चयः[३२] ॥ ६ ॥

यद् यदाभरणं तस्य यद् वा[३३] वदति वाचया[३४] ।
कर्मणा[३५] यत् कृतं[३६] तस्य क्रमाच्छादनचर्यया ॥ ७ ॥
एतद्[३७] बाह्यव्रतं चर्या[३८] अन्तव्रतमनामकम्[३९] ।

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

Concerning (Kaula) Conduct (caryā)

The Vow of Knowledge (vidyāvrata)

The Insignia, appearance, garments, ornaments and weapons of the observer of the Vow of Knowledge

The venerable Kaulīśa said:

[1]The Hero (vīra) who has been consecrated and permitted to do so, (impelled) by the desire (to attain the highest) status of a Hero,[2] should practice the Vow of Knowledge (vidyāvrata). He, the reciter of mantra, should do so properly according to the prescribed method. I want to hear of that, the most excellent Vow of Knowledge.[3] (1-2ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

Listen, O god, I will explain the excellent Vow of Knowledge. (The adept may have) matted hair, a shaved head or[4] a topknot, he may take baths (snātaka) or practice celibacy[5] – in any condition, whether he abides in the (normal) course of practice (kramastha)[6] or (the observance of this) vow, he is successful. (In any case), the external vow should be observed, that is, the concealment of Kaula practice (kaulikācāragopana). (3-4ab)

(This is true also) of the yogi who bears the Five Insignias (pañcamudrā), is covered in ashes and is naked, or of who wears rags (cīra) or the bark of trees,[7] or is adorned with all the ornaments, or who wears red clothes, or even one who wears whatever he pleases. (4cd-5)

The teaching of the scripture is that the vow is said to be in accord with the garment the best of adepts may assume. (6)

The Ornaments

Whatever be his ornaments, whatever he says by way of speech[8] or what is done by way of (outer) action as the conduct (caryā) (he practices), to keep the Transmission (krama) secret is the external vow and (outer) conduct (caryā). The inner vow is Nameless (anāmaka). (7-8ab)

जटावत्[४०] स्थापयेच्चित्तं बाह्यवृत्त्यनपेक्षणात्[४१] ॥ ८ ॥
मनमेकाग्रं[४२] युञ्जीत आत्मामण्डलमभ्यसेत्[४३] ।
सा जटा न जटाभारं[४४] व्रतीनां[४५] कायशोधनम्[४६] ॥ ९ ॥

आज्ञास्मरणमात्रेण[४७] पतते[४८] च्छिन्नमूलवत्[४९] ।
न किञ्चिदपि जानाति[५०] न शृणोति न[५१] पश्यति ॥ १० ॥
इत्याज्ञामुण्डितो मुण्डी[५२] न मुण्डी केशमुण्डितः ।

शिखा दीपोपमा यस्य विद्याहं महतारिका[५३] ॥ ११ ॥
पश्यते[५४] याम्[५५] समाधिस्थः[५६] सा शिखा न शिखा शिखा ।

भस्मीभूतः कृतः कर्म[५७] मण्डलान्तररश्मभिः[५८] ॥ १२ ॥
ध्यात्वा मलक्षयं मुक्तिरेतद्[५९] भस्मं[६०] निरामयम् ।

अम्बरं कथिताकाशं[६१] अखण्डं शून्यमण्डलम्[६२] ॥ १३ ॥ तन्मध्ये चांकुराशक्तिस्त्रिकालभुवनालयम्[६३] ।
दिगम्बरं[६४] समाख्यातं नग्नो नैव दिगम्बरः ॥ १४ ॥

परं[६५] ब्रह्म कुलं कौलं[६६] चरते[६७] कुलभावितः[६८] ।
सर्वद्वन्द्वपरिक्षीणो ब्रह्मचर्यव्रती[६९] भवेत् ॥ १५ ॥

The Matted Hair

(The adept) should establish the mind as (the ascetic keeps) matted hair, that is, out of indifference to outer activity (vṛtti) (and custom), and apply the concentrated mind to the Sphere of the Self (ātmāmaṇḍala)[9] and to practice. This is (the real) matted hair of those observing the (true) vow; (cultivating) a load of tangled hair does not amount to the purification of the body.[10] (8cd-9)

The Shaved Head

Merely by recollecting the Command, he falls down (onto the ground) like (a tree whose) roots have been cut. (In that state) he knows nothing at all, nor hears or sees (anything). In this way, the (true) tonsured (ascetic is one who) has been tonsured by the (goddess's) Command, not one whose hair has been shaved off.[11] (10-11ab)

The Topknot

I, Mahātārikā, am the Vidyā of (the adept) who, established in contemplation (samādhi), sees (his) topknot (that shines brilliantly) as a lamp. That is the (true) topknot, not the topknot (made of hair at the top of the head).[12] (11cd-12ab)

The Ashes

When Karma has been reduced to ashes by the rays (of energy) within the maṇḍala and (the adept) has contemplated the destruction of impurity, this is liberation, the ash free of defect (nirāmaya).[13] (12cd-13ab)

The Nakedness

The (true) sky (ambara) is said to be Space (ākāśa), which is the Unbroken Circle of the Void. In the centre of that is the energy which is the Sprout (aṅkurāśakti) (of the Command). (This), the abode of the world of the three times, is said to be (the truly) naked (state) (digambara). One who (simply) wears no clothes (nagna) is not (truly) naked (digambara).[14] (13cd-14)

The Vow of Celibacy

One who observes the vow of celibacy (brahmacarya) is free of all duality. Sanctified (bhāvita) by Kula (Śiva's power) he is engaged (carate) (in the realisation of) the Supreme Brahman,[15] Kula and Kaula (the transformation of Kula). (15)

सुस्निग्धं[७०] यत् परं[७१] किञ्चित्[७२] कदम्बाधारनिर्मलम्[७३] ।
तं[७४] पीत्वा[७५] भवते शुद्धिः[७६] स्नानमेतन्न[७७] चान्यथा ॥ १६ ॥

चमरं[७८] चिञ्चिणी मध्ये पुरे पुरे[७९] विभेदितम् ।
तत्रोच्चारगतिर्ज्ञेया[८०] रमणी वीरसंज्ञया[८१] ॥ १७ ॥
बाह्यक्रमविनिर्मुक्ता[८२] धारा चामृतवर्षिणी[८३] ।

समाधिस्थो भवेद्[८४] योगी अम्बराम्बरमम्बरः[८५] ॥ १८ ॥
वल्कलं[८६] तत् समाख्यातं न चर्म वल्कलं[८७] भवेत्[८८] ।

क्रमभेदेन तत्त्वानि ये स्थिताः[८९] स्थानविग्रहे ॥ १९ ॥
एतदाभरणं प्रोक्तं न हेमाभरणं भवेत् ।
कुलं सर्वमुखं ज्ञात्वा सर्वाभरणमुच्यते[९०] ॥ २० ॥

विद्या नाम[९१] परा[९२] शक्तिर्द्विभिर्भेदैर्व्यवस्थिता[९३] ।
चिच्छक्तिरिति[९४] सिद्धिः स्यात् सावर्णा[९५] वर्णगा शुभा[९६] ॥ २१ ॥[९७]

The Bathing

Supreme, ineffable (kiñcit) and very pleasant (susnigdha), its foundation the Kadamba Tree, it is pure. Having drunk this, (the yogi) is purified. This is (true) bathing (that purifies the soul) and (it is done only in this and in) no other way.[16] (16)

The Chowrie

The chowrie (camara) is (the goddess) Ciñcinī in the centre and is distributed in each sphere of existence (pure pure or 'in each body'). One should know that the upward movement (of Kuṇḍalinī) (uccāragati) (takes place) there. (This movement is the energy called) Ramaṇī (the Playful Lady) (who sports with the one) called the Hero. Free of outer processes, it is (the inner) stream (dhārā) (of consciousness) and rains down a shower of nectar.[17] (17-18ab)

The Bark Clothing

The Yogi absorbed in contemplation (samādhi) (wears the) garment (ambara) that is the Emptiness of the Void (of the Absolute) (ambarāmbara). That is said to be (the ascetic's) clothing made of bark. The skin (of a tree) is not (true) bark clothing. (18cd-19ab)

The Ornaments

(The ascetic's true) ornament is said to be the principles (of existence) that abide within the form of (their respective) locations (in the body) (sthānavigraha) in accord with the division of the sequence (of their manifestation) (kramabheda). (Mere) gold is (not the ascetic's true) ornament. Once one knows Kula (the omnipresent power of the deity), everything is said to be an ornament. (19cd-20)

The Vow of Knowledge and the Vidyā

[18]Vidyā is the supreme power and abides twofold. (When the adept realises that she is) the power of consciousness, (he achieves) success. Devoid of letters (avarṇā), auspicious, she (the power of consciousness) is present in (every) letter.[19] (21)

विद्यामार्गे[९८] चरेद् यस्तु[९९] शास्त्रदृष्टेन[१००] कर्मणा[१०१] ।
ध्यान[१०२] पूजा जपो होम:[१०३] समयाचरणं तथा[१०४] ।। २२ ।।
एतद् विद्याव्रत[१०५] प्रोक्तं बाह्यव्रतमनुत्तमम्[१०६] ।

विद्या ज्ञेया[१०७] तु[१०८] नाभिस्था[१०९] चरते[११०] द्वादशान्तगा[१११] ।। २३ ।।
व्रतस्थानेषु[११२] सर्वेषु तेन विद्याव्रत[११३] महत्[११४] ।

ब्रह्मा विष्णुश्च रुद्रश्च ईश्वरश्च सदाशिव:[११५] ।। २४ ।।
एते[११६] स्थाना[११७] व्रतस्यैव[११८] यत्र सा रमते[११९] परा ।
तं ज्ञात्वा[१२०] परमं स्थान[१२१] चीर्णविद्याव्रतो[१२२] हि स:[१२३] ।। २५ ।।

विद्या[१२४] नामाक्षरा पंक्ति:[१२५] पंक्तिश्चक्रे[१२६] ह्यधोमुखी ।
तासां[१२७] रक्तव्रतस्थं तु अज्ञानपटच्छेदकम्[१२८] ।। २६ ।।
अन्तरङ्गे पटं रक्तं न बाह्ये पटरक्तकम्[१२९] ।
रक्तपटपरीधान:[१३०] षट्प्रकारप्रबोधक: ।। २७ ।।
कौलिकव्रतसंज्ञेय[१३१] न बाह्यव्रतिनो[१३२] भवेत् ।

पञ्चमुद्राधरो देव:[१३३] पञ्चकारणकं तत:[१३४] ।। २८ ।।
भूषितो[१३५] हृदि संतिष्ठेत् पञ्चमुद्राधर: शिव:[१३६] ।

एतैस्तु[१३७] भूषितो[१३८] मन्त्री[१३९] पर्यटेत्[१४०] क्षेत्रमाश्रित:[१४१] ।। २९ ।।
श्मशाने कानने कूपे उद्याने देवकुले शुभे[१४२] ।
शून्ये[१४३] राजगृहे[१४४] मन्त्री पर्वताग्रे[१४५] चतुष्पथे ।। ३० ।।
त्रिपथे[१४६] ग्रामरथ्यासु[१४७] महोदधितटेऽथवा[१४८] ।
नदीसंगमतीरे वा एकवृक्षेऽथवानघ[१४९] ।। ३१ ।।
एकलिङ्गेऽथवा[१५०] षण्डे[१५१] क्षेत्रेष्वष्टेषु च क्रमात्[१५२] ।[१५३]

Meditation, worship, the repetition of mantra, the fire sacrifice and the observance of the Rule (samayācaraṇa) – this is said to be the Vow of Knowledge (for one) who walks on the Path of Knowledge by means of action, in accord with scripture. (But) the external vow is not the best. (22-23ab)

One should know the Vidyā located in the navel.[20] It moves (and is also) present at the End of the Twelve (dvādaśāntagā). (Indeed, it is present) in all the sites (where the) vow (is observed). Thus the Vow of Knowledge is great. (23cd-24ab)

Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśvara and Sadāśiva: these are the sites of the Vow where the Supreme (Goddess – Parā) sports.[21] Once that supreme place is known, (the adept) has observed the Vow of Knowledge well. (24cd-25)

The Red Clothing

The Vidyā is the row of letters (akṣara). It is the row (of letters) facing downwards within the Wheel.[22] The one who is established in the vow (of wearing) red cuts through the cloth of ignorance of these (letters). The red cloth is within (antaraṅga). The (true) red cloth is not outside. The one who wears (such) red clothes awakens the sixfold (energy).[23] This is called the Kaulika Vow. It is not (the vow) of one who performs external vows. (26-28ab)

The god dons the Five Insignia (mudrā) and so is (himself) the fivefold cause. May Śiva, adorned and wearing the Five Insignia[24] abide in the heart! (28cd-29ab)

Adorned with them, the reciter of mantra, taking (the sacred) field (kṣetra) (of the body[25] as his) refuge, should wander in a cremation ground, forest, (near a) well (or) garden. The reciter of mantra (should go) to an auspicious temple, an empty palace, the peak of a mountain, a crossing of four roads or one of three. (He should wonder) on village roads, the seashore, the bank of the confluence of rivers or, O sinless one, (in a desert where there is only) a solitary tree or (where there is just) a single Liṅga or in a thicket (ṣaṇḍa) or in the eight sacred fields in due order.[26] (29cd-32ab)

प्रयागा[१५४] वरुणा[१५५] कोल्ला[१५६] अट्टहासा[१५७] जयन्तिका ॥ ३२ ॥
चरित्रैकाम्रक[१५८] चैव देवीकोट्ट[१५९] तथाष्टमम्[१६०] ।
एतेषु[१६१] पर्यटेन्मन्त्री योगिनीसिद्धिमिच्छत:[१६२] ॥ ३३ ॥

खट्वाङ्गधारिणो[१६३] मौनी[१६४] वेगात् पर्यटते[१६५] सदा ।
डमरु[१६६] पाशखड्ग[१६७] वा त्रिशूल[१६८] खेटकं तथा ॥ ३४ ॥
नाराच[१६९] कर्तरी[१७०] चक्र[१७१] अंकुशं मुशल[१७२] धनु:[१७३] ।
गदा[१७४] कट्टारिका शक्तिस्तथा[१७५] दण्डकमण्डलुम्[१७६] ॥ ३५ ॥
एव[१७७] ते चायुधा:[१७८] श्रेष्ठाश्चर्याकालेऽपि[१७९] धारयेत् ।

पञ्चदैवसिक[१८०] कार्य[१८१] अस्त्रसंख्या[१८२] व्रतोत्तमा[१८३] ॥ ३६ ॥
द्वादशाह[१८४] चरेन्मन्त्री पक्षमासादितोऽपि वा[१८५] ।
षण्मासमथवाब्द[१८६] वा[१८७] द्विरब्द[१८८] त्रीणि एव[१८९] वा[१९०] ॥ ३७ ॥[१९१]
द्वादशाब्द[१९२] चरेन्मन्त्री[१९३] ब्रह्महा अपि[१९४] सिद्ध्यति[१९५] ।

अन्तरङ्गे[१९६] विशुद्धात्मा पारम्पर्यप्रबोधक:[१९७] ॥ ३८ ॥
अचिरात्[१९८] सिद्धिभागी[१९९] स्यात् पारम्पर्येण[२००] मुच्यते ।
अब्दैकेन तु[२०१] तु देवेश[२०२] मण्डलीकै:[२०३] प्रपूज्यते[२०४] ॥ ३९ ॥

अन्त:पुरवरै: सार्धं राजात्मा सपरिवर:[२०५] ।
वशं यान्ति न संदेहो उत्तमाधममध्यमा:[२०६] ॥ ४० ॥

द्विरब्दैर्यक्षकन्याश्च[२०७] कामविह्वललोचना:[२०८] ।
आगच्छन्ति[२०९] पुरे तस्य प्राणान् मुञ्चन्ति तत्क्षणात् ॥ ४१ ॥

त्रिरब्दै:[२१०] सप्तपाताला[२११] ये च[२१२] देवादिकन्यका:[२१३] ।
वशं यान्ति[२१४] मदोन्मत्ता[२१५] मदविभ्रान्तलोचनाः ॥ ४२ ॥

The reciter of mantra, (impelled) by the desire to (attain) the accomplishment (siddhi) of the Yoginīs, should wander in these (places), namely: Prayāgā,[27] Varuṇā, Kollā, Aṭṭahāsā,[28] Jayantikā, Caritra, Ekāmraka and Devīkoṭṭa,[29] the eighth. (32cd-33)

Carrying an ascetic's staff (khaṭvāṅga), (the adept who) observes silence (maunin), (fuelled) by (his spiritual) impetus (vega), should wander constantly. A hand-drum (ḍamaru) or a noose (pāśa) and sword, trident, shield (kheṭaka), an arrow, a dagger (kartarī), discus (cakra), a goad, a pestle, a bow, a mace, a flat knife (kaṭṭārikā), a javelin, and a stick and waterpot (kamaṇḍalu) – these (O god) are your finest weapons. (The adept) should carry them also in the course of (his Kaula) practice (caryā).[30] (34-36ab)

The Duration of the Observance and its Fruits

(The vow) should be observed (kārya) for five days. Contemplation of the weapons (astrasaṁkhyā)[31] is the most excellent vow. The reciter of mantra can practice for twelve days, a lunar fortnight or a month. (Again), the reciter of mantra may practice for six months or a year, two years, three or twelve. (In this way) even (a man) who has murdered a Brahmin achieves success. (36cd-38ab)

He who is inwardly a pure soul and awakens (others to the teachings transmitted through the) lineage is soon successful and is freed (by the teaching transmitted through) the lineage. O lord of the gods, in one year, (a king) gains the respect (prapūjyate) of (his) vassals.[32] (38cd-39)

The king with his entourage and the chosen who dwell in the inner apartments (of his palace), whether the best, middling or lowest, (all) certainly come under (the adept's) control.[33] (40)

With two years (practice), the damsels (kanyā) of the Yakṣas, their eyes distraught with passion, come to his dwelling (pura) and give up (their) lives (prāṇa) that instant (due to the intensity of their desire). (41)

With three years (of practice), the young women of the gods and the others who (dwell in) the seven lower worlds, mad with passion, their eyes distraught with passion, come under (the adept's) control.[34] (42)

मत्तमातङ्गगामिन्यो[२१६] अक्षया[२१७] यौवनोद्वहा:[२१८] ।
क्षुभ्यन्ति[२१९] साधकेन्द्रस्य प्राणान् मुञ्चन्ति[२२०] तत्क्षणात् ॥ ४३ ॥

चतु:[२२१] पञ्च तथा षट्सु[२२२] ब्रह्मलोकादि[२२३] साधयेत्[२२४] ।
सप्तमाब्दे[२२५] वरारोह[२२६] रुद्रान्ते[२२७] या व्यवस्थिता:[२२८] ॥ ४४ ॥
सिद्ध्यन्ति[२२९] साधकेन्द्रस्य इति शास्त्रस्य[२३०] निश्चय:[२३१] ।

अष्टमे ईश्वराख्यं[२३२] तु नवमे तु सदाशिवम्[२३३] ॥ ४५ ॥
दशे विद्यालयो[२३४] भूत्वा क्रीडते[२३५] गगने महान्[२३६] ।
एकादशैर्महादेव[२३७] रुद्ररूपत्वमाप्नुयात्[२३८] ॥ ४६ ॥

द्वादशैर्गुणसंयुक्तो[२३९] अणिमादिसमायुतः ।[२४०]
क्रमविद्याधरो मन्त्री[२४१] गच्छते[२४२] खेचरं[२४३] पदम्[२४४] ॥ ४७ ॥

अक्षयो ह्यजयो[२४५] योगी क्रीडते[२४६] सर्वगः शुभ:[२४७] ।
व्रतस्य फलमेवं तु[२४८] कथितं तु तवानघ[२४९] ॥ ४८ ॥

साम्प्रतं योगमार्गं तु[२५०] स्थानाश्रमपरिग्रहम्[२५१] ।[२५२]
प्रवक्ष्यामि यथापूर्वं चर्यया[२५३] देहशोधनम्[२५४] ॥ ४९ ॥

श्मशानं[२५५] च गृहं[२५६] नाम[२५७] गृहं देहं[२५८] प्रकीर्तितम्[२५९] ।
अटते[२६०] तु[२६१] अविश्रान्त:[२६२] श्मशाने[२६३] गतचेतस:[२६४] ॥ ५० ॥

(Women) endowed with eternal youth who walk (swaying with passion) like elephants in rut, (so beautiful that) they arouse (even) the best of adepts, give up (their) lives (prāṇa) that instant (due to the intensity of their desire). (43)

In four, five and six years, he attains the world of Brahmā and the rest.[35] O fair one, in the seventh year those beings who reside in (the world of) Rudra achieve success on behalf of (him), the best of adepts. This is the certain conclusion of the scripture. (44-45ab)

In the eighth year (he attains the one) called Īśvara and in the ninth (the one called) Sadāśiva. (45cd)

In the tenth (year), having become the abode of the Vidyā, he is great and sports in the Void (of ultimate reality). With eleven (years of practice), O Great God, he attains Rudra's nature. (45cd-46)

With twelve (years of practice), he is endowed with the qualities (of a perfect yogi) and possesses the (eight yogic powers, namely) the power to become small at will (aṇimā) and the others. The reciter of mantra who practices the Kramavidyā (kramavidyādhara)[36] attains the plane of the Skyfarer. (47)

(This) imperishable and unconquerable yogi, omnipresent and auspicious, (engages in) play. Thus, O sinless one, the fruit of (this) vow has been told to you. (48)

The Places to Observe the Vow

I will now explained the path of Yoga in the form of the hermitages and the sacred places (sthāna) and, in due order, the purification of the body (that takes place by Kaula) practice (caryā). (49)

The Cremation Ground

The Cremation Ground is the House (gṛha). The House is said to be the body. (The adept), tireless, wanders (there), his mind absorbed in the Cremation Ground.[37] (50)

कं[२६५] शरीरमिति[२६६] प्रोक्तं तस्यान्ते नयनद्वयम्[२६७] ।
ताभ्यां संपश्यते[२६८] चात्मा[२६९] वाङ्मयं सचराचरम् ॥ ५१ ॥
काननं तेन चाख्यातं[२७०] कायान्ते[२७१] संव्यवस्थितम्[२७२] ।

मनः[२७३] कूपं[२७४] समुद्दिष्टं[२७५] संकल्पान्[२७६] कुरुते बहून्[२७७] ॥ ५२ ॥
तत्राधारे[२७८] व्रजेत्[२७९] क्षेत्री[२८०] तेन[२८१] कूपं[२८२] तु विश्रुतम्[२८३] ।

उद्यतो मन[२८४] नाभिस्थो मन्यते[२८५] सर्वजन्तुषु ॥ ५३ ॥
नयति[२८६] पदसंप्राप्ते[२८७] उद्यानस्तेन[२८८] उच्यते[२८९] ।
ददाति[२९०] तत् पदं देव अमृतं तु नभोगतम्[२९१] ॥ ५४ ॥

कुलान्ते[२९२] चरते योगी[२९३] धर्माधर्मात्मबन्धयोः[२९४] ।[२९५]
तेन देव[२९६] समाख्यतं[२९७] देही[२९८] देवकुलं सदा[२९९] ॥ ५५ ॥

राजा[३००] आत्मा[३०१] समुद्दिष्टः तत्त्वैश्च युक्तचेतसः[३०२] ।
शब्दादिगुणभूयिष्ठो[३०३] तत्त्वसंदोहभूषितः[३०४] ॥ ५६ ॥
तेनासौ चरते कर्म[३०५] तेनैव सह गच्छति[३०६] ।[३०७]

उन्मनत्वे[३०८] सदा[३०९] युक्तो[३१०] मनः[३११] शून्यमुदाहृतः[३१२] ॥ ५७ ॥
शून्यं राजगृहं[३१३] तेन उन्मनत्वे[३१४] सदा प्रिय[३१५] ।

The Forest

Ka is said to be the body. At its extremity are the two eyes (nayana). By means of them, the Self sees (all that is made of) Speech along with the moving and immobile (universe) and so it is said to be the 'forest' (kānana) established within the body.[38] (51-52ab)

The Well

It is taught that the well is the mind (manas)[39] which produces many thoughts (saṁkalpa). The owner of the field (of the body) (kṣetrin) goes there to the foundation (of all things) and so is it known as the Well.[40] (52cd-53ab)

The Garden

(When) the mind is located in the navel, it is active and contemplates (the higher principles) within all people. Once that plane has been reached, it leads (nayati) (upwards) and so is called the garden (udyāna). O god, that is the immortal (amṛta) plane within the Void (nabhas) (of the Supreme Principle).[41] (53cd-54)

The Temple

The yogi wonders within Kula in the fetters of Dharma and Adharma. This is why, O god, the embodied soul (dehin) is always said to be the temple (devakula).[42] (55)

The King and his Palace

It is said that the king is the Self.[43] His mind is conjoined with the principles (of phenomenal existence) and, replete with the qualities of sound and the other (sensations), is adorned with the essence (saṁdoha) of the principles (of existence). And thereby he performs action (karma) and moves along with that same (action). (56-57ab)

If the mind is intent (yukta) on the Transmental state (unmanatva), it is (then) said to be the Void (śūnya). Thus, O dear one, the Void is the King's Palace, perpetually in the state Beyond Mind.[44] (57cd-58ab)

पर्वतं[३१६] गुरुवक्त्रं[३१७] तु तस्याग्रमवलम्बयेत्[३१८] ॥ ५८ ॥
पर्वताग्रे[३१९] स्थितं तत्र तेन पर्यटतेऽखिलम्[३२०] ।

चतुष्पथं[३२१] प्रवक्ष्यामि[३२२] वामा ज्येष्ठा च रौद्रिका ॥ ५९ ॥
अम्बिकायाः[३२३] समायुक्तं[३२४] अटनं[३२५] पुद्गलस्य तु[३२६] ।
चतुष्पथं[३२७] समाख्यातं[३२८] पथमेतदुदाहृतम्[३२९] ॥ ६० ॥

पथं[३३०] नाडीत्रयं[३३१] प्रोक्तं[३३२] इडाद्यं[३३३] तु महेश्वर[३३४] ।
त्रिपथे चरते[३३५] नित्यं कुरुते गतिरागतिम्[३३६] ॥ ६१ ॥
त्रिपथे चैकभावस्थो[३३७] यः करोति स सिद्ध्यति[३३८] ।

ग्रामं[३३९] देहमिति प्रोक्तमात्मा देही[३४०] इति स्मृतः[३४१] ॥ ६२ ॥
आलयं[३४२] सर्वसत्त्वानां[३४३] सुखदुःखपरापरम्[३४४] ।

गच्छते अध ऊर्ध्वं[३४५] तु रथ्याधारो[३४६] जगत्पतिः ॥ ६३ ॥
तेन रथ्या[३४७] स्मृता नाडी ब्रह्माद्या ह्यात्मनश्च[३४८] तु[३४९] ।

तटं[३५०] तीरं समाख्यातं शिवोच्चारं[३५१] निगद्यते ॥ ६४ ॥
दुःखान्तं तु[३५२] लयातीतं तटमुदधिसंज्ञकम्[३५३] ।
चरते व्यापको[३५४] देवः[३५५] शिवः[३५६] परमकारणम्[३५७] ॥ ६५ ॥
तिष्ठते[३५८] सततं मन्त्री चर्यान्ते च प्रकाशिता[३५९] ।

The Mountain Peak

[45]The mountain is the Teacher's Mouth.[46] (The votary) should catch hold of its peak. He abides there on the mountain peak and so wanders everywhere.[47] (58cd-59ab)

The Crossing of Four Roads

Now I will explain the crossing of four roads. Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrikā along with Ambikā is the path (aṭana) of the individual soul (pudgala), which is said to be the crossing of the four roads. This is said to be the path (patha).[48] (59cd-60)

The Triple Path

O Mahādeva, the path is said to be the three channels (nāḍī), Iḍā and the rest.[49] (The vital breath) moves, coming and going constantly along the triple path. He who does (this), established in oneness on the triple path, is successful.[50] (61-62ab)

The Village

The village (grāma) is the (maṇḍala) (made of) six parts (ṣaṭprakāra). The first village is the sphere (golaka) (in the middle of the maṇḍala). It is the abode of all living beings and is (the union of opposites), pleasure and pain, supreme (transcendence) and inferior (immanence).[51] (62cd-63ab)

The Highway

The lord of the universe who (takes as his) support the Highway (rathya), travels up and down. Thus, the highway is the channel (nāḍī) of the Self that begins with (the Cavity of) Brahmā.[52] (63cd-64ab)

The Shore of the Ocean

The shore is said to be the bank (of the ocean). It is called Śiva's utterance (śivoccāra). The cessation of suffering, beyond (the stages of) merger, it is the shore that (by implication) denotes the sea. The one who moves (on it) is the Śiva, the pervasive God who is the supreme cause (of all things). The reciter of mantra always stands (there on the bank) and (it is there), at the conclusion (of his) practice (caryā), that (Śiva) is revealed.[53] (64cd-66ab)

नदते[३६०] सास्वराधारा[३६१] परा कुण्डलिनी[३६२] तु या[३६३] ॥ ६६ ॥
सा नदी योगरूपा[३६४] तु व्योमार्णे[३६५] वहते[३६६] सदा[३६७] ।

संगमं[३६८] परया युक्तं[३६९] उन्मनान्ते प्रकाशितम्[३७०] ॥ ६७ ॥
संगमं तं[३७१] समाख्यातं नद्यास्तु समुदाहृतम्[३७२] ।

सर्वत:[३७३] समवायिन्या[३७४] शक्त्याधार: परापर:[३७५] ॥ ६८ ॥
तया नीयत्यसौ[३७६] व्यापी[३७७] नदीतीरमुदाहृतम्[३७८] ।

एकं[३७९] वृक्षं[३८०] परं देव एका शक्ति:[३८१] परा[३८२] त्रिधा[३८३] ॥ ६९ ॥
एकामिन्द्रियजा[३८४] नाडी बिन्दुसंज्ञा प्रकाशिता[३८५] ।

लयंगता परे धाम्नि[३८६] अमनस्के निरामये[३८७] ॥ ७० ॥
तेन देव[३८८] मया प्रोक्तमेकवृक्षं[३८९] तु मन्त्रिणाम्[३९०] ।

एकमेव[३९१] परं[३९२] तत्त्वं लिङ्गाधारं[३९३] परामृतम्[३९४] ॥ ७१ ॥
पर्यटेत[३९५] दिवारात्रौ[३९६] अविश्रान्तः पुनः पुनः।

The River

The supreme Kuṇḍalinī is the flow of Unstruck Sound (asvarā) that resounds (in all the spheres of reality). This is the river in the form of Yoga that flows constantly through the Ocean of the Sky (of the Supreme Principle).[54] (66cd-67ab)

The Confluence

The confluence is conjoined with the supreme (power) and is revealed at the end of the Transmental. That confluence has been explained which is said to be that of a river.[55] (67cd-68ab)

The Bank of the River

(Śiva) the foundation (ādhāra) (of existence), both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent, conjoined) in every way with (his own) inherent (energy) (samavāyinī) who, pervasive, governs (the universe) by means of that (power), is said to be the bank of the river.[56] (68cd-69ab)

The Solitary Tree

There is one tree, O god, and (only) one supreme energy, which is threefold. One (of the three aspects) is (energy) born of the senses, (another is) the channel (nāḍī) and (the third one) that has been revealed is called the Point. (69cd-70ab)

She has dissolved away into the supreme abode, which is fautless and beyond mind (amanaska). So, O god, I have explained the solitary tree of those who recite mantra.[57] (70cd-71ab)

The Solitary Liṅga

There is only one Supreme Principle. It is the supreme nectar (of immortality) and its form a Liṅga. He (who wears it) should wander tirelessly, night and day again and again. O god, this is the solitary Liṅga.[58] (71cd-72abc)

एकलिङ्गमिदं देव[३९७] षण्डं[३९८] तु अपरं यथा[३९९] ॥ ७२ ॥
हृदयं तु सरः[४००] प्रोक्तं दलाष्टकसमायुतम्[४०१] ।
उदानेन तु देवेश[४०२] विकसेत् तु रविस्तु सः[४०३] ॥ ७३ ॥

सेव्यते[४०४] पुद्गले[४०५] लीनं[४०६] सरोजं[४०७] हृदयात्मकम्[४०८] ।
रमते[४०९] तत्र हंसाख्यं[४१०] शक्तिबीजं[४११] मनोन्मनी[४१२] ॥ ७४ ॥
तद् षण्डं[४१३] कथितं शास्त्रे[४१४] क्षेत्राष्टकमतो भवेत्[४१५] ।

क्षेत्रं[४१६] नाम परं शान्तं[४१७] शरीरं तत्त्वसंयुतम् ॥ ७५ ॥
क्षेत्रज्ञश्चरते[४१८] तत्र[४१९] स्थानाष्टकगतिस्थितः[४२०] ।
तेनेदं[४२१] देवदेवेश[४२२] क्षेत्राष्टकमुदाहृतम्[४२३] ॥ ७६ ॥

ये पीठास्ते[४२४] च वै[४२५] क्षेत्राः[४२६] क्षेत्राः पीठाः[४२७] क्रमेण तु[४२८] ।
नामपर्यायभेदानि[४२९] शास्त्रे देव्याः[४३०] पृथक् पृथक् ॥ ७७ ॥

प्रयागं[४३१] नाभिसंस्थं[४३२] तु वरुणा[४३३] हृत्प्रदेशतः ।
कोल्लगिर्यं[४३४] तु[४३५] कण्ठस्थं अट्टहासं[४३६] तु तालुके[४३७] ॥ ७८ ॥
बिन्दुस्थाने जयन्त्याख्यं[४३८] नादाख्ये[४३९] तु चरित्रकम् ।
एकाम्रं[४४०] शक्तिदेशस्थं[४४१] ज्ञातव्यं[४४२] विदितात्मभिः[४४३] ॥ ७९ ॥
गुरुवक्त्रगतं[४४४] प्रोक्तं कोटिवर्षं[४४५] तथाष्टमम्[४४६] ।

एते स्थाना[४४७] मया प्रोक्ता[४४८] अध्यात्मे[४४९] पुद्गलाश्रयाः[४५०] ॥ ८० ॥
अटते[४५१] सततं तेषु[४५२] हृच्चक्रस्थः[४५३] सनातनः[४५४] ।

यावदेवं न विन्देत[४५५] पीठमध्यात्मनिर्णयम्[४५६] ॥ ८१ ॥[४५७]
तावत् तस्य कुतः सिद्धिरटितेऽपि[४५८] जगत्त्रये[४५९] ।

The Bunch of Flowers (ṣaṇḍa)

Next comes the bunch.[59] The Heart is said to be (like) a lake (saras) that has an eight-petalled (lotus). O lord of gods, the sun, by (its) dawning, causes it to blossom. (72d-73)

The lotus of the Heart is attended by (the consciousness) merged in the individual soul (pudgala). The Transmental power (manonmanī), the seed of energy[60] called Haṁsa (the Gander),[61] sports there. In the scripture that is called the bunch. (74-75a)

The Eight Sacred Fields

Next (I will explain) the group of eight fields. The field is the supreme and tranquil body endowed with (all) the principles (of existence). The knower of the field moves around there established in the condition (gati) of the group of eight (sacred) sites. Thus, O lord of the gods, this is said to be the group of eight sacred fields.[62] (75bcd-76)

The sacred seats (pīṭha) are indeed sacred fields and the sacred fields are sacred seats (arranged) in due order.[63] (Their) names, synonyms and types are various in (differing places in) the goddess's scripture[64]. (77)

Prayāga is located in the navel. Varuṇā is in the locus of the heart. Kollagirya[65] is in the throat and Aṭṭahāsa, in the palate. The (place) called Jayantī is in the place of the Point (between the eyes) and Caritraka in that called the Sound. Those who have realised the Self should know that Ekāmra is in the Place of Power (śaktisthāna). Similarly, the eighth, Koṭivarṣa, is said to be in the Teacher's Mouth.[66] (78-80ab)

These places (sthāna) I have mentioned are within the inner Self (adhyātma) and are grounded in the individual soul. The eternal (Self), residing in the Wheel of the Heart, wanders constantly within them.[67] (80-81ab)

As long as he does not attain the sacred seat which is the inner teaching (adhyātmanirṇaya)[68], how can he achieve success (siddhi) even if he wanders (throughout) the triple universe? (81cd-82ab)

बहिरन्तरभावं[४६०] तु अन्तरं बहिरङ्गयोः[४६१] ॥ ८२ ॥
लोकानां भक्तिहेत्वर्थे[४६२] बहिःपीठाः[४६३] प्रकाशिताः[४६४] ।

अन्तरङ्गं[४६५] यथा[४६६] शुद्धं पश्यते[४६७] मनसा[४६८] प्रिय[४६९] ॥ ८३ ॥
तथा पश्यति[४७०] बाह्यस्थाः[४७१] सूक्ष्मरूपा गभस्तयः[४७२] ।
मेलकं च[४७३] प्रयच्छन्ति[४७४] चरुं[४७५] वापाशवीविधिम्[४७६] ॥ ८४ ॥
संप्रदायं[४७७] प्रयच्छन्ति[४७८] स्थानं[४७९] वा प्रवदन्ति च[४८०] ।

अशुद्धेनान्तभावेन[४८१] पर्यटेत्[४८२] पृथिवीं[४८३] यदि[४८४] ॥ ८५ ॥
न तस्य[४८५] दर्शनं[४८६] देव[४८७] ददन्ति[४८८] मनसा[४८९] क्वचित् ।

पश्यन्नपि न पश्यति[४९०] दृश्यन्तोऽपि न दृश्यते[४९१] ॥ ८६ ॥
संकीर्णलक्षणा[४९२] देव्यो[४९३] विज्ञातुं[४९४] नैव शक्यते[४९५] ।

प्रभावैषां[४९६] समुद्दिष्टो[४९७] विद्या तासामनुग्रहः[४९८] ॥ ८७ ॥
पुरे ग्रामेऽथवारण्ये[४९९] नगरे चत्वरेऽपि वा[५००] ।
खेटके[५०१] चैव सन्दोहे[५०२] पीठे[५०३] क्षेत्रे वने तथा[५०४] ॥ ८८ ॥
उद्यानोपवने[५०५] देवि[५०६] पूर्वोक्ते वा तथैव च[५०७] ।
देशे देशेऽभिजायन्ते[५०८] ज्ञानरूपा[५०९] गभस्तयः[५१०] ॥ ८९ ॥

पार्थिवावरणे[५११] चैव[५१२] आपे तेजे तथानिले[५१३] ।
आकाशे चैव सुश्रोणि[५१४] तासां[५१५] संख्या[५१६] न विद्यते[५१७] ॥ ९० ॥

पीठाश्रयविशेषेण[५१८] उत्पद्यन्ते[५१९] अनेकधा[५२०] ।
खानपानरता[५२१] नित्यं क्रीडन्ते[५२२] चान्त्यजेष्वपि[५२३] ॥ ९१ ॥

तेन देव[५२४] मया प्रोक्ताः[५२५] पीठा[५२६] बाह्यस्वरूपतः[५२७] ।
वेश्यागृहं[५२८] प्रयागाख्यं वरुणां[५२९] शुण्डिनीं[५३०] विदुः[५३१] ॥ ९२ ॥
कौल्लगिर्यां[५३२] तु कैवर्ती[५३३] अट्टहासे तु खट्टिकी[५३४] ।
जयन्त्यां कण्डुकी[५३५] प्रोक्ता चरित्रे[५३६] रजकी[५३७] तथा[५३८] ॥ ९३ ॥
एकाम्रकी[५३९] भवेच्छिल्पी[५४०] देविकोट्टे[५४१] च[५४२] कोशटी[५४३] ।

(Both) the inner and outer aspects have an inner and outer condition.[69] The external sacred seats have been revealed in order to (instil) devotion in the (common) people. (82cd-83ab)

Just as (the yogi) perceives the pure inner aspect with the mind, O beloved, in the same way he sees the subtle rays (of the light of the Supreme Principle) that are outside[70] and they bestow union (melaka), the sacrificial pap (caru) or the liberated state (apāśavīvidhi).[71] They bestow the (teachings of the) tradition and or else explain the (location of each sacred) place (sthāna).[72] (83cd-85ab)

O god, they do not bestow a vision (darśana) (of themselves) by means of the mind anywhere if one wanders on the earth with an impure state (of being). (85cd-86ab)

Although he sees, he sees not; although (reality is) perceivable, it is not perceived. He cannot know (the rays of consciousness which are) the goddesses of various kinds.[73] (86cd-87ab)

It is taught that their power is the Vidyā, which is the grace they have (to give),[74] whether in a town, village or forest, city or crossroad, peasant's hut, meeting ground (saṁdoha), sacred seat, field, grove, garden, small grove or in (any one of the) aforementioned (places). (Indeed), the rays of consciousness (jñāna) arise in every single place. (87cd-89)

O fair-hipped one, innumerable, (they are present) in the covering of the earth, so too in water, fire, wind and space. (90)

They arise in many ways in accord with the particular (nature of) the sacred seat of which they take their support. Ever devoted to eating and drinking, (the goddesses of the rays of consciousness) play even amongst those of the lowest castes. (91)

And so, O god, I have talked of the sacred seats according to their external nature. The house of Veśyā (the Prostitute) is called Prayāga. Know that Varuṇā[75] (also spelt Varaṇā) (corresponds to) Śuṇḍinī (the Barmaid)[76], Kaivartī (the Fisherwoman) is in Kaullagiri,[77] Khaṭṭikī (the Butcherwoman) is in Aṭṭahāsa, Kaṇḍukī (the Barberwoman) is said to be in Jayantī, similarly, Rajakī (the Washerwoman) is in Caritra. The (goddess of) Ekāmra is Śilpī[78] (the Sculpteress) while Kośaṭī[79] is in Devikoṭṭa.[80] (92-94ab)

ज्ञातव्याश्चुम्बकेनैव[५४४] भुक्तिमुक्तिफलार्थिभिः[५४५] ॥ ९४ ॥

पर्यटेदेषु[५४६] स्थानेषु[५४७] पूजनीयाः[५४८] सदा बुधैः ।
भक्षभोज्यान्नपानैस्तु[५४९] तर्पयेन्मन्त्रवित्[५५०] सदा[५५१] ॥ ९५ ॥

एतेषु[५५२] संस्थितिस्तासां[५५३] योगिन्यस्त्वप्रमेयतः[५५४] ।
भवन्ति च[५५५] न संदेहो वरदाः[५५६] साधकस्य[५५७] तु ॥ ९६ ॥
तर्पिताः[५५८] पूजिता देव्यः[५५९] साधकस्य[५६०] ददन्ति[५६१] हि ।
षण्मासाद्[५६२] युक्तमार्गस्य[५६३] समयव्रतपालनात्[५६४] ॥ ९७ ॥

अथान्यं[५६५] संप्रवक्ष्यामि संक्षेपाच्छास्त्रवादिनाम्[५६६] ।
आध्यात्मिकं[५६७] बहिश्चैव[५६८] यथा जानन्ति[५६९] तत्त्वतः[५७०] ॥ ९८ ॥
तथा ते कथयिष्यामि[५७१] शृणुष्वायतलोचन[५७२] ।

आध्यात्मं[५७३] कुरुते बाह्यं व्रतं चर्यां[५७४] च साधनाम्[५७५] ॥ ९९ ॥[५७६]
एवं कृते भवेत् सिद्धिः[५७७] सत्यमेव[५७८] न संशयः[५७९] ।

खट्वाङ्गं[५८०] कथयिष्यामि[५८१] अनुग्राह्यं[५८२] वरानन[५८३] ॥ १०० ॥
आपादतलमूर्धान्तं[५८४] यथा भवति तच्छृणु[५८५] ।[५८६]

सर्वाङ्गेषु शिराद्येषु[५८७] अङ्गप्रत्यङ्गसन्धिषु[५८८] ॥ १०१ ॥
खण्डते[५८९] येन देवेश[५९०] खट्वाङ्गस्तेन[५९१] उच्यते[५९२] ।

Those who seek the fruit of worldly enjoyment (bhukti) and liberation should know these (goddesses) by means of a kiss (cumbaka).[81] (94cd)

One should wander in these places.[82] The wise should worship (the goddesses there) constantly. The knower of mantra should always make offerings (to them) with good food, boiled rice (anna) and drink. (95)

And these Yoginīs that reside in these (places) certainly bestow gifts beyond measure to the adept. By maintaining the Vow of the Rule of the aforementioned path, the goddesses, worshipped and lustrated, give the adept (their gifts) within six months. (96-97)

The Inner Attributes of the Ascetic

[83]Now I will explain something else in brief concerning the inner and outer (reality) of the knowers of the scripture. I will tell you (this) as (the wise) know it in truth. Listen, O long-eyed one. (98-99ab)

One who has thus internalized the external vow, (Kula) conduct (caryā) and (spiritual) discipline (sādhanā), (achieves) success (siddhi). O god, (this is) the truth, without a doubt. (99cd-100ab)

The Ascetic's Staff

O fair-faced one, I will explain (to you) the ascetic's staff (khaṭvāṇga) which should be taken up[84] (that extends) from the soles of the feet up to the head. Listen to how it is. (100cd-101ab)

O lord of the gods, it is called the ascetic's staff (khaṭvāṇga) because it is that by means of which (the adept) pierces through (khaṇḍate)[85] all the limbs (of the body), beginning with the head, within the junctures between the limbs, major and minor.[86] (101cd-102ab)

मौनेन[५९३] अटते[५९४] नित्यं हृदि[५९५] गूढपरायणः[५९६] ।। १०२ ।।
तेन मौनीति विज्ञेयः[५९७] सर्वागमसुभावितः[५९८] ।

वेगेन[५९९] पर्यटेद्[६००] देहे[६०१] अविश्रान्तः पुनः पुनः ।। १०३ ।।
तेन वेगात्म विख्यातं[६०२] अटनं[६०३] पुद्गलस्य तु[६०४] ।

डमरुकं[६०५] प्रवक्ष्यामि[६०६] यथावदनुपूर्वशः[६०७] ।। १०४ ।।
अनामा[६०८] परमा[६०९] सूक्ष्मा कला चामृतवाहिनी[६१०] ।
आत्मा संचरते[६११] तस्मिन्[६१२] रावं[६१३] मुञ्चति[६१४] बिन्दुके[६१५] ।। १०५ ।।

विसर्गस्थो यदात्मा तु[६१६] नदते[६१७] त्रिपथेषु च[६१८] ।
तत्र डमरुकं नाम[६१९] अमनस्के[६२०] निरामये[६२१] ।। १०६ ।।

तिष्ठते[६२२] नाभिसंस्था तु[६२३] मायारूपा तु कुण्डली ।
पाशिताः[६२४] पशवः सर्वे अभक्ता ये[६२५] जगत्त्रये[६२६] ।। १०७ ।।
पाशमेतद्[६२७] विनिर्दिष्टं[६२८] खड्गं[६२९] चैवाधुना[६३०] शृणु ।

खस्था[६३१] च्छिनत्ति[६३२] पाशांस्तु[६३३] विसर्गास्त्रेण[६३४] मोहनी[६३५] ।। १०८ ।।
खड्गे च निःश्रिता[६३६] येन[६३७] खगमध्ये[६३८] महेश्वर[६३९] ।
गता[६४०] सा ब्रह्मसायोज्यं[६४१] खड्गान्ते[६४२] शक्तिरव्यया[६४३] ।। १०९ ।।
तेन खड्गमिति प्रोक्तं[६४४] आयुधं सुरनायक[६४५] ।

The Vow of Silence

One should know that the ascetic who observes a vow of silence (maunī) is so called because, sanctified (subhāvita) by all the scriptures, he wanders constantly, by means of (his) silence, intent on the secret (and profound reality), in the Heart.[87] (102cd-103ab)

The Wandering Life

The wandering (aṭana) of the individual soul (pudgala) is said to be impetus (vega) because it is due to (his) impetus that he wanders, tireless, in the body again and again.[88] (103cd-104ab)

The Hand Drum

Now, in due order, I will explain the hand drum (ḍamaruka) as it truly is. The Nameless (Anāmā)[89] is the supreme, subtle energy that transports (the flow) of the nectar of immortality (amṛta). The Self wanders[90] within[91] it and (so) emits Sound within the Drop (of nectar). (104cd-105)

If the Self, established in emission (visargastha), moves along the three paths, (he experiences) the hand drum there within (the reality) devoid of mind (amanaska) and perfect (nirāmaya).[92] (106)

The Fetter

Located in the navel is the (goddess) Kuṇḍalī who is Māyā (by which) all the fettered souls devoid of devotion in the three worlds are fettered. This is called the fetter.[93] (107-108a)

The Sword

Now listen to (what is meant by) the sword (khaḍga). Established in the Void (kha), Mohanī cuts the fetters to pieces with the weapon of emission (visarga). O Great God, it is that by virtue of which this imperishable energy has emerged within the sword and has attained (gatā) union with the Brahman in the middle of (Śiva) the Skyfarer (khaga) within sword. Thus, O leader of the gods, (this) weapon is called the sword.[94] (108bcd-110ab)

एका एव[६४६] पराशक्तिस्त्रिपथाकृतिमण्डले[६४७] ।। ११० ।।
वामा ज्येष्ठा[६४८] तथा रौद्री इच्छाज्ञानक्रियात्मिका[६४९] ।
त्रिशूलं[६५०] त्रिपथं ख्यातं[६५१] त्रिशक्तितनुमण्डितम्[६५२] ।। १११ ।।

खरूपा[६५३] व्योमगा[६५४] शान्ता निर्मला[६५५] अटते सदा[६५६] ।
खेटकं[६५७] तेन[६५८] नामं[६५९] तु[६६०] द्वादशान्ते व्यवस्थितम् ।। ११२ ।।

नाराचं[६६१] शक्तिरुच्चारं[६६२] करणात्माव्यवस्थितम्[६६३] ।
बोधयति[६६४] निरोधिन्या करणान्[६६५] पञ्च एव हि[६६६] ।। ११३ ।।
तेन नाराचमाख्यातं[६६७] पर्यायेण[६६८] तु सुन्दर[६६९] ।

कर्तरी ज्ञानशक्तिस्तु येन[६७०] पाशान्[६७१] छिनत्त्यसौ[६७२] ।। ११४ ।।
सा कला[६७३] परमा सूक्ष्मा मन्त्राणां बोधनी[६७४] परा ।
कर्तरी कर्तृरूपेण[६७५] ज्ञातव्या साधकेन तु ।। ११५ ।।
चरते[६७६] द्वादशान्ते तु[६७७] क्रमात् तत्त्वानि[६७८] मुञ्चति ।

चक्रवद् भ्रमते[६७९] नित्यं अंकुशस्था परापरा ।। ११६ ।।
अन्तरङ्गगता देव[६८०] बहिरङ्गेन संस्थिता[६८१] ।
कुरुते[६८२] सततं[६८३] चेष्टां[६८४] आसने[६८५] शयने तथा ।। ११७ ।।
धावनं वल्लनं[६८६] रोधं[६८७] अकुञ्चनप्रसारणम्[६८८] ।

The Trident

The Supreme Energy is only one in the maṇḍala whose form is the triple path (tripathākṛti).[95] (She is equally) Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī and (her) nature is will, knowledge and action. The Trident is called the triple path, adorned with the body of the Triple Energy (triśakti).[96] (110cd-111)

The Shield

(This) energy whose form is the Void (kha), established in the Void (kha), tranquil and pure, wanders (aṭate) constantly (within it). Thus (it is called) the shield (kheṭaka) established at the End of the Twelve (above the head) (dvādaśānta).[97] (112)

The Arrow

The arrow is the upward movement of energy established in the essential nature of the (five) causes. It pierces through (vedhayati) the Five Causes by means of Nirodhinī (the Obstructress). Thus, O handsome one, it is also called the arrow (nārāca).[98] (113-114ab)

The Knife

The knife is the power of knowledge that severs the fetters. It is the supreme and subtle energy, the supreme awakener (bodhanī) of mantras. The adept should know the knife (kartarī) to be the agent. It moves (up) to the End of the Twelve and (as it does so) progressively frees the three Transmissions.[99] (114cd-116ab)

The Goad

The (energy) in the goad, which is both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent), rotates constantly like a wheel. O god, inwardly present, she is well established externally.[100] Constantly active, both on the seat and in the bed, (the energy) runs, rolls, blocks, contracts and expands.[101] (116cd-118ab)

मुषलत्वे[६८९] स्थितो नादो[६९०] रेखाकारोर्ध्वगः[६९१] प्रिय[६९२] ॥ ११८ ॥
तं भित्त्वा[६९३] गमनं चोर्ध्वे[६९४] मुषलाख्यं सदाशिवम्[६९५] ।

धनुर्लक्ष्यमनाख्यं[६९६] तु येन[६९७] वेधयते परम् ॥ ११९ ॥[६९८]
आपूर्य[६९९] सविसर्गेण[७००] परेण मनचक्षुषा[७०१] ।

खर्परि करणेनैव[७०२] पर्यटेच्च[७०३] अधोमुखी[७०४] ॥ १२० ॥
ऋतुद्वयविशुद्धेन[७०५] कारणान्तर्गतेन[७०६] तु ।
अनेन करणान्तेन[७०७] ज्ञेया[७०८] कट्टारिका परा[७०९] ॥ १२१ ॥

प्राप्नोति तत्त्वसायोज्यं[७१०] गदया च[७११] त्रिलोचन[७१२] ।
गता ह्येका[७१३] परं[७१४] रन्ध्रं ददते[७१५] चामृतं शुभम्[७१६] ॥ १२२ ॥
गतास्ते[७१७] न निवर्तन्ते ये गता गदया सह ।

शक्तिः शक्तिमतोरैक्यं[७१८] आत्मा चालयते[७१९] सदा[७२०] ॥ १२३ ॥
तद् भवेद् योगसिद्धिस्तु[७२१] शक्तिर्नादान्तरेऽधिप[७२२] ।

दण्डवदृजुरेखा[७२३] तु गता सा[७२४] पदमव्ययम्[७२५] ॥ १२४ ॥
तेन[७२६] मार्गेण गन्तव्यं[७२७] दण्डाकारे[७२८] व्यवस्थितम्[७२९] ।[७३०]

The Pestle

O beloved, Sound (nāda) is in the pestle's state. The form of a straight line, it moves upwards. Once broken through that, it travels upwards. (Thus) Sadāśiva is (the reality) called 'the pestle'.[102] (118cd-119ab)

The Bow

The (arrow shot by the) bow pierces the target, the Supreme (reality), the Inexplicable (anākhya) once filled by the supreme eye of the mind and with emission.[103] (119cd-120ab)

The Flat Knife[104]

Facing downwards, (Kuṇḍalinī) moves through (paryaṭet) the skull as the instrument (of mantra) present within the (five) causes and purified by the two seasons. O god, one should know the supreme sacrificial knife by means of this (energy) at the end of the (five) causes.[105] (121)

The Mace

O three-eyed one, (the adept) attains conjunction with the (Supreme) Principle by means of the mace (gadā).[106] When the one supreme (energy) has reached (gatā) the Cavity (at the top of the head), it bestows auspicious nectar.[107] Those who have gone with the mace do not return.[108] (122-123ab)

The Javelin

The oneness of power (śakti – the javelin) and its possessor causes the Self to operate constantly. O lord, that is the accomplishment of Yoga (yogasiddhi), namely, the energy (śakti) within Sound.[109] (123cd-124ab)

The Stick

(Kuṇḍalinī) the Straight Line, like a stick, has reached the imperishable plane. Established (in that energy whose) form is a stick, one should travel by that path.[110] (124cd-125ab)

कं शरीरमिति[७३१] ख्यातमण्डाकारं व्यवस्थितम्[७३२] ॥ १२५ ॥
तत्राध्वा तु[७३३] वरारोह[७३४] शोधनीयो[७३५] मनीषिभिः ।
कुण्डला[७३६] या परा शुद्धा सर्वशुद्धा[७३७] गतात्मनि[७३८] ॥ १२६ ॥
तेनेदं च मया प्रोक्तं[७३९] कमण्डलु[७४०] परं स्मृतम्[७४१] ।

एवं ते चायुधाः[७४२] सूक्ष्माः[७४३] पर्यायैः[७४४] बहुभिः पदैः[७४५] ॥ १२७ ॥[७४६]

कथितं तु[७४७] मया सर्वं[७४८] परापरं विभागशः[७४९] ।[७५०]
बाह्यान्ते[७५१] कथयिष्यामि[७५२] दूतीनां[७५३] लक्षणम् परम्[७५४] ॥ १२८ ॥

विचारं चैव[७५५] दूतीनां अपरं संप्रगीयते[७५६] ।
माता च दुहिता भग्नी[७५७] सहजा[७५८] अन्त्यजा तथा[७५९] ॥ १२९ ॥
रजकी चर्मकारी च मातङ्गी चाग्रजन्मनी[७६०] ।
कौलिनी चक्रलोला[७६१] च मैथुनी नारसिंहकी[७६२] ॥ १३० ॥

आचारं[७६३] मातृभिर्योनौ[७६४] कथितं तु सुरार्चित[७६५] ।
अन्त्यजानां द्विजानां च एकत्र चरुभोजनम् ॥ १३१ ॥
कर्तव्यं साधकेनैव[७६६] यदीच्छेत्[७६७] सिद्धिमुत्तमाम्[७६८] ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[७६९] अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये कादिभेदे
आज्ञापारमेश्वरे[७७०] स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशतिसहस्रसंहितायां[७७१]
अव्वाक्रमभाषिते चर्याधिकारो नामानन्दः ॥ १४ ॥

The Waterpot

'Ka' is said to be the body and it is established in the form of an ornament (maṇḍākāra).[111] O fair-hipped one, the wise should purify the Path here. (Kuṇḍalinī) the Coiled One (kuṇḍalā) is supreme and pure. That (energy) pure in every way is present within the Self.[112] Thus, I have explained this, the waterpot (kamaṇḍalu) which is said to be supreme.[113] (125cd-127ab)

Such are your subtle attributes (āyudha) named in many ways.[114] I have explained everything both supreme and inferior, part by part.[115] (127)

The Kaula Consorts

I will (now) explain the supreme characteristic of the Consorts (dūtī) in (both) the internal and external (domain). (Now) here is another teaching (vicāra) (this time) concerning the consorts (dūtī). (128)

(The consorts are the adept's) mother (mātṛ), daughter (duhitṛ), sister (bhaginī) and twin sister (sahajā).[116] (The consort may also be) a woman of the lowest (caste) (antyajā), a washerwoman (rajakī), a leather worker (carmakārī), a sweeperwoman (mātaṇgī), a first-born woman (agrajanmanī), Kaulinī, Cakralolā (Swung in the Wheel), Maithunī and Nārasiṁhakī. (Thus), O adored by the gods, the Conduct in the Yoni (yoni) with the Mothers has been explained. (129-130)

The adept who desires the most excellent accomplishment (siddhi) should always eat the sacrificial pap (caru) together with those who belong to the lowest caste (as well as) the twice-born.[117] (131cd-2ab)

This is the (fourteenth) chapter called Concerning (Kaula) Conduct (caryā). It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for more than a hundred thousand quarter (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

पञ्चदशानन्द:

श्रीकौलीश उवाच[१]

कुत्सितं[२] कथितं देवि[३] अयुक्तं[४] शास्त्रवादिनाम् ।
पशूनां[५] यत्[६] समाख्यातं आचार[७] परमेश्वरि[८] ।। १ ।।
एतन्मे न श्रुतं देवि प्रसादाद् वक्तुमर्हसि[९] ।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१०]

साधु मे तन्महाप्राज्ञ[११] प्रश्नं[१२] चैव शुभं कृतम्[१३] ।। २ ।।
कथयामि[१४] महाशम्भो[१५] पूर्वस्नेहेन[१६] निश्चयम्[१७] ।

या सा देव पराशक्तिर्जगतां[१८] योनिरूपिणी ।। ३ ।।
तत्रोत्पन्नं[१९] समस्तं हि वाङ्मयं सचराचरम् ।
अव्वा तेन इमा माता:[२०] सा शक्ति: परमेश्वरी[२१] ।। ४ ।।

उद्भवस्था[२२] दुहित्री[२३] सा[२४] दुहनाच्च[२५] जगस्य[२६] च[२७] ।
दुहित्री सा[२८] द्वितीया तु[२९] भगिनी[३०] च तथोच्यते[३१] ।। ५ ।।

भगरूपा[३२] परा[३३] सूक्ष्मा उन्मनामात्मना[३४] सह[३५] ।
यथाग्निस्तेजसा[३६] नित्यं नानाभेदैर्व्यवस्थिता[३७] ।। ६ ।।
तद्वदेव हि आत्मस्था[३८] भगिनी[३९] भगरूपिणी ।

CHAPTER FIFTEEN

About the Section (of the Scripture) Concerning (Kaula) Conduct (caryāpāda).

Kaula Consorts

The venerable Kaulīśa said:

[1]O goddess, what you have said is reprehensible and improper for those who know the scriptures. O Supreme Goddess, the conduct (ācāra) (to which you) refer is that of the fettered. O goddess, I have not heard (anything like) that; by your grace, you should tell (me about it). (1-2ab)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

O greatly wise one, well done (sādhu)! that you have asked this auspicious question of me. For the sake of our previous love, O Great Śambhu, I will tell (you) the teaching (niścaya). (2cd-3ab)

The Mother

O god, the Supreme Energy is the womb (yoni) of the worlds.[2] All that is made of Speech along with (both all that) moves and is immobile has arisen there. And so these Mothers are (all) the Mother (avvā) who is energy, the Supreme Goddess.[3] (3cd-4)

The Daughter

Established in the outpouring (of emanation) (udbhava), she is the Daughter (duhitrī) and because (she) milks (duhana) the universe. Know her to be the Daughter.[4] (Now), similarly, the Sister is going to be explained. (5)

The Sister

She is the womb (bhaga), supreme and subtle, the Transmental (unmanā) endowed with the (energy of the) First Digit of the Moon (amā).[5] Like fire, by virtue of its radiant energy (tejas), she is always of many kinds.[6] In this same way, the Sister (bhaginī), who is the Yoni (bhaga), resides in the Self. (6-7ab)

स्वयंजाता महासूक्ष्मा गुहामध्ये[४०] विसर्पिता[४१] ।। ७ ।।[४२]
स्वतोत्पन्ना[४३] स्वयंजाता उक्ता च[४४] सहजा कला[४५] ।

अन्तस्था[४६] सर्वजन्तूनां[४७] वर्तते अन्तगा[४८] परा[४९] ।। ८ ।।[५०]
अन्ते तु[५१] संस्थिता[५२] ह्येका अन्त्यजा परमेश्वरी[५३] ।

रजस्तमोविनिर्मुक्ता[५४] सा भवेद् रजकी इति[५५] ।। ९ ।।
रञ्जते[५६] सर्वगात्रेण[५७] जगत् स्थावरजङ्गमम्[५८] ।[५९]

चरते चर्मगा[६०] येन[६१] सुरङ्गेन[६२] * रञ्जिता[६३] ।। १० ।।
चर्मकारी तु[६४] सा ज्ञेया[६५] मातङ्गीति तथोच्यते[६६] ।

आत्मस्थाने[६७] च सततं[६८] गीतस्यान्तपदे[६९] स्थिता[७०] ।। ११ ।।
मातङ्गी कथिता[७१] दूती[७२] अग्रजन्मी[७३] तथोच्यते ।

सर्वेषां चैव[७४] शास्त्राणां अग्रोत्पन्ना[७५] च अग्रणी[७६] ।। १२ ।।
नान्यत्[७७] तत्र[७८] भवेत् किञ्चिन्मनसान्ते[७९] मनोन्मनी[८०] ।
उन्मना सा[८१] समाख्याता परा ह्यमृतवाहिनी[८२] ।। १३ ।।[८३]

The Twin Sister (sahajā)

She is self-born, very subtle and has emerged from the midst of the Cave. Spontaneously generated and self-born, she is said to be the Innate (sahajā) energy.[7] (7cd-8ab)

The Last Born

At the end (antagā) (of the hierarchy of levels) is the supreme (goddess – Parā) present within (antasthā) all living beings. The one Supreme Goddess, the Last Born (antyajā), is established within / at the end (of phenomenal existence).[8] (8cd-9ab)

The Washerwoman

The Washerwoman (rajakī) is (the energy) that is free of the (qualities of) passion (rajas) and darkness (tamas). With all (her) body she colours (rañjate) the universe, both moving and immobile.[9] (9cd-10ab)

The Leatherworker

She, the one (goddess), is the Leatherworker (carmakārī) because, residing in the skin (carma),[10] she moves about (carate) (within the microcosm) stained with beautiful colour.[11] She should be known to be the Leatherworker (carmakārī) who, established inwardly, desires intensely and so is coloured with the beautiful colour (of desire). (Now), in the same way, the Sweeper Woman (mātaṇgī) is going to be explained. (10cd-11ab)

The Sweeper

She abides constantly in the abode of the Self on the plane at the end of Song (gīta). Thus the dūtī Mātaṇgī (the Sweeper) has been explained.[12] (Now), in the same way, the First Born (agrajanmanī) is going to be explained. (11cd-12ab)

The First-born

She is the foremost (energy) (agraṇī) who has come forth first (agrotpannā) (before) all the scriptures. There, at the end of the mind, there is nothing else except the (energy) Mind Beyond Mind (manonmanī).[13] (And so), she is called the Transmental (unmanā),[14] the supreme (energy), who transports the nectar (of immortality).[15] (12cd-13)

आनन्दं[८४] तत् समत्वं हि मदिरानन्दचेतसः[८५] ।
सिद्ध्यते नात्र[८६] सन्देहो गुरुवक्त्रेण[८७] निश्चयम्[८८] ॥ १४ ॥

योगचर्यासमाप्ते[८९] तु व्रतसूत्रमनन्तरम्[९०] ।

त्यक्त्वा संसारप्रथनं[९१] कामरूपादिपञ्चसु ॥ १५ ॥
ततश्च[९२] चर्याव्रतं गृह्य[९३] अन्यथा न कदाचन[९४] ।
महाव्रतं तु निर्वाणं तदेव[९५] सर्व–ओलिषु[९६] ॥ १६ ॥
यदा वैराग्य[९७] जन्तूनां[९८] तदा निर्वाणगं व्रतम्[९९] ।

वक्ष्यामि कौलिकं मार्गं[१००] निर्गतं खेचरं[१०१] क्रमम् ॥ १७ ॥

कुर्याद् व्रतं[१०२] कुले[१०३] रक्षा[१०४] नग्नवासा[१०५] तु पिङ्गला[१०६] ।

तेनैव कारयेद् घोरं[१०७] विद्यायुक्तं परापरम्[१०८] ॥ १८ ॥
शिरं[१०९] मुण्डितं[११०] कृत्वादौ तस्याच्छादन[१११] वल्कलम् ।
अलाभात् कर्पट[११२] बिल्वं[११३] भुवनाकृति आसनम्[११४] ॥ १९ ॥

मुखं संकुचितं तस्य संसारमलछेदकम् ।
प्रसादं देवि मां[११५] कृत्वा चरुकं प्रतिदेहि माम्[११६] ॥ २० ॥

पञ्चभिः सप्तभिर्वापि अथ चाष्टौ दशः[११७] पुनः ।
द्वात्रिंशदथवा भिक्षाः[११८] कर्तव्या योगचिन्तकैः ॥ २१ ॥

Bliss is the oneness (samatva) (with that Transmental energy) of one whose mind is blissful with wine.[16] He will certainly be successful. (This) is the teaching (uttered) by the Teacher's Mouth.[17] (14)

The Vratasūtra: The Observance of the Vow (vratacaryā) in the Four Lineages

(Now that the teaching concerning) the Conduct of Yoga (yogacaryā)[18] is complete, the Vratasūtra, follows. (15ab)

Once one has abandoned the perception (prathana) of transmigratory existence in the five (sacred seats of), Kāmarūpa and the rest, one should then take the Vow of Right Conduct (caryāvrata). (It can) never (be taken) in any other way. The Great Vow (mahāvrata) is Nirvāṇa and (it is taught) in all the lineages (oli). If people possess dispassion (vairāgya) then (by observing this) Vow (they) attain Nirvāṇa. (15cd-17ab)

The Vow of the Transmission of the Skyfarers

(Now) I will explain the Kaula path (from which) the Transmission of the Skyfarers (khecarakrama)[19] has emerged. (17cd)

Observe the Vow! The naked (nagnavāsā) Piṅgalā[20] protects (everybody) in the Kula. (18ab)

For that reason (he should observe a) severe (ghora) (vow), both supreme (transcendent) and inferior (immanent), in association with the Vidyā. First, once he has shaved (his) head, (he dons) a garment of bark. (If) he does not have that, (he may wear) old torn clothes or (ones made of) bilva (leaves). (His) seat has the form of the world. (18cd-19)

(The adept should observe the Vow strictly and repeat the Vidyā constantly); his face contracted, (he should ask) "O goddess! Be gracious to me and give me the sacrificial pap (caruka) that destroys transmigratory existence." (20)

Those who contemplate Yoga (should) beg (this way) five, seven or eight, ten or thirty-two (times). (21)

मद्य[११९] मांसं तथा कामं लौल्यलोभविवर्जितम्[१२०] ।
पादुका[१२१] त्रिप्रकारां च[१२२] इज्यार्थे विनिवेदयेत् ।। २२ ।।
तदा चर्याव्रतं मन्त्री[१२३] द्वादशाब्दैस्तु सिद्ध्यति ।

पीठोपपीठ[१२४] सर्वेषु क्षेत्राद्यैर्भूतले[१२५] व्रती ।। २३ ।।
पञ्चरात्रं तु सर्वत्र भस्मगोमयमध्यतः ।
स्वपेदेकान्तके[१२६] पुनः अटव्या[१२७] निर्जने[१२८] वने ।। २४ ।।

नाराच[१२९] क्षुरिका खड्ग[१३०] तथा कर्तरि पङ्कटी ।
अस्त्रपञ्चकसंयुक्तः[१३१] कौलिकास्त्रस्वलंकृतः[१३२] ।। २५ ।।
विचरेत् पृथिवीं सर्वां प्रथमस्त्रिषु[१३३] ओलिषु ।

अपरं संप्रवक्ष्यामि क्रमवृद्धस्य[१३४] यद् व्रतम्[१३५] ।। २६ ।।
तद् व्रतं नाम विद्यायाः[१३६] ज्ञेयमाज्ञापट[१३७] इति ।

कुर्यात् कार्पासिक[१३८] शुद्ध[१३९] त्रिपञ्चदीर्घविस्तरम्[१४०] ।। २७ ।।
हस्ते पटं प्रक्रतव्यं कौपीन[१४१] शिरभूषणम्[१४२] ।
मुण्डितस्य प्रकर्तव्य[१४३] कामराजेन[१४४] रञ्जयेत्[१४५] ।। २८ ।।

ताम्रजं खर्पर[१४६] पात्रं सुशुद्धं च अलातवत्[१४७] ।
पूर्ववत् कारयेच्चर्या[१४८] भिक्षाश्च[१४९] सप्तविंशतिः[१५०] ।। २९ ।।

कर्तव्या[१५१] दशधा[१५२] वापि अथवा च चतुर्वरम्[१५३] ।
अस्त्रपञ्चकघोरास्त्रं आद्यपीठाद् विनिर्गतम् ।। ३० ।।

अथ[१५४] द्वितीयकं वक्ष्ये[१५५] व्रतं कौमारमध्यतः ।
तद् व्रत[१५६] व्रतमित्याहुः[१५७] सिद्धं पूर्णाद् विनिर्गतम् ।। ३१ ।।
तद् व्रतं सिद्धसंकेत[१५८] तस्याचार[१५९] यथा भवेत्[१६०] ।
पटं च पूर्ववत् कार्यं कौपीनमथ च्छादनम्[१६१] ।। ३२ ।।

He should (then) offer the triangular (triprakārā)[21] sandal (pādukā) as an offering (to the deity), namely, wine, meat and passion (kāma) devoid of desire and greed. Then, twelve years, the reciter of mantra accomplishes the Vow of Conduct (caryāvrata). (22-23ab)

(The adept who) observes this vow should sleep in a solitary place on the ground anywhere, in any of the sacred fields and seats, primary and secondary, or in a deserted forest for five nights in the midst of ashes and cow dung. (23cd-24)

The foremost in the three lineages should wander over all the earth, well-adorned with Kaula weapons and possessing the five arms, namely, an arrow, a razor, a sword, a knife and an axe (paṅkaṭī). (25-26ab)

The Vow of the Transmission of the Aged

Next I will tell something else, namely, the vow of the Transmission of the Aged, the Vow of the Vidyā that should be known as the Cloth of the Command (ājñāpaṭa). (26cd-27ab)

(The adept) should fashion a pure (cloth) made of cotton fifteen (fingers?) in extent. He should (hold the) cloth in (one) hand and (use his) loincloth as an ornament for the head. He should undertake (the vow) of the tonsured and colour (his consciousness) with (KRĪṀ the seed-syllable of) the King of Passion. (27cd-28)

(His) bowl (should be) a begging bowl made of copper, very pure, like a firebrand. As before, he should practice (Kaula) Conduct (caryā) and beg twenty-seven (times). (29)

He should form the terrible weapon (ghorāstra) consisting of the Fivefold Weapon (astrapañcaka)[22] that has emerged from the Primordial Seat (ādyapīṭha) ten times or else four. (30)

The Vow of the Transmission of the Youth

Next, I will explain the second vow, which is the one in the (Transmission) of the Youth. That vow is said to be the Accomplished Vow and has emerged from the (sacred seat of) the Full One (purṇa) (i.e. Pūrṇagiri). The convention with regard to that vow has been (established by) accomplished yogis (siddhasaṁketa), (and I will tell you) how it is observed. (31-32ab)

रञ्जनीयञ्च[१६२] रङ्गेन पीतेन तु[१६३] महेश्वर ।
तथा पात्रं च पूर्वोक्तं भिक्षाचर्याप्रतिग्रहम्[१६४] ।। ३३ ।।

अस्त्रपञ्चकमेवं तु तथा पाशुपतास्त्रकम्[१६५] ।
एतत् सिद्धव्रतं शुद्धं पालनादपि सिद्ध्यति ।। ३४ ।।

अपरं तृतीयकं वक्ष्ये व्रतं बालक्रमस्य च ।
मुद्रा[१६६] नाम व्रतं शुद्धं कामरूपाद् विनिर्गतम् ।। ३५ ।।

पटं पूर्वक्रमेणैव यथा भवति तच्छृणु[१६७] ।
गैरिकारञ्जित[१६८] कृत्वा तथा खर्पर[१६९] ताम्रजम्[१७०] ।। ३६ ।।
चर्याभिक्षा[१७१] यथा पूर्व[१७२] पञ्चास्त्रं भैरवास्त्रकम् ।
गृहीत्वा पर्यटेत् मन्त्री[१७३] एतद्[१७४] योगव्रतं शुभम् ।। ३७ ।।

उलीनां क्रमसिद्धाना[१७५] व्रतत्रितय[१७६] दर्शितम् ।

एतेषामासनं श्रेष्ठं मृगचर्म[१७७] सुकोमलम् ।। ३८ ।।
आसनत्रितय[१७८] तेषां ज्येष्ठमध्ये[१७९] कनीयसे[१८०] ।

कूर्मासन[१८१] तु प्रथम[१८२] तथा पद्मं द्वितीयकम् ।। ३९ ।।
तृतीयं स्वस्तिकं नाम मुद्रापूर्वक्रमव्रते[१८३] ।
प्रयागादिगृहाणा[१८४] तु स्वपेद् योगीश्वर: सदा ।। ४० ।।
तासां सार्ध[१८५] तु समय[१८६] दूतीनां सह मैथुनम् ।
अविरुद्धं च[१८७] भवति[१८८] निशाचारेण कौलवित् ।। ४१ ।।

The cloth, loincloth and covering should be fashioned as before. O Great Lord, (the cloth) should be coloured with yellow dye and so too the aforementioned bowl used for begging alms (bhikṣācaryā). (32cd-33)

In the same way, (he should carry) the Fivefold Weapon and the Pāśupata Weapon. This is the pure Accomplished Vow. By observing it also, (the adept) is successful. (34)

The Vow of the Transmission of the Child

(Now) I will explain another vow, the third, which is that of the Transmission of the Child. It is the pure vow that has emerged from Kāmarūpa and is that of the Gesture (mudrā). (35)

Listen how the cloth is according to the first Transmission. Once it has been coloured with ochre and a copper bowl (has) also (been procured), (the adept should undertake), as before, the practice of begging (bhikṣācaryā). Taking hold of the Fivefold Weapon which is that of Bhairava,[23] the reciter of mantra should wander (from place to place). This is the auspicious Vow of Yoga. (36-37)

The three vows of the lineages (uli) and the Siddhas of the Transmissions have been explained.[24] (38ab)

(Now), their best seat is one of soft deerskin. (I will tell you) their three sitting postures in the (lineages of the) Oldest, Middling and Youngest. The Posture of the Tortoise (kūrmāsana) is the first and the (Posture of) the Lotus is the second. The third is that of the Svastika (and is a part of) the Vow of the Transmission (kramavrata) which is that of Gesture. (38cd-39ab)

The Conduct of the Night (niśācāra)

The lord of yogis should always sleep in Prayāga and the other Houses. The pledge (samaya) with them is sexual intercourse with the *dūtī*s. O knower of Kaula, (as a part of) the Conduct of the Night (niśācāra), it is not prohibited. (39cd-41)

चरुकं गृह्यते[१८९] गुप्तं तथा पुष्पं च अन्तजम् ।
रसं तु वैष्णवं नाम चरुक[१९०] त्रिविध[१९१] स्मृतम् ॥ ४२ ॥

अलिफल्गुसमायुक्तं भक्षयेदविशङ्कितः ।
द्वादशाब्दैरतीतैस्तु[१९२] खेगतिर्नात्र[१९३] संशयः ॥ ४३ ॥

क्रमाराधनयुक्तानां विद्यानुष्ठानपारगाम्[१९४] ।
निश्चय[१९५] नात्र संदेहो इत्याज्ञा[१९६] पारमेश्वरी[१९७] ॥ ४४ ॥

ये योगिनीकुले जाता येषां तुष्टा[१९८] ह्यहं परा[१९९] ।
ते लभन्ति[२००] व्रतं[२०१] सत्यं आत्म—औल्यां[२०२] पृथक् पृथक् ॥ ४५ ॥

वीरचर्या[२०३] वीरव्रतं[२०४] वीरसंगमवृत्तिषु ।
दूतीनां सर्वगमनं सबाह्याभ्यन्तरं स्थितम् ॥ ४६ ॥
निशाचारे[२०५] समाचारं[२०६] कर्तव्यं व्रतिभिस्त्रिधा[२०७] ।

मनोरोधं[२०८] न कर्तव्यं यत्र[२०९] यत्र व्रजेन्मनः[२१०] ॥ ४७ ॥
तत्र तत्रैव गन्तव्यं इच्छाचर्यां[२११] समाचरेत् ।
एतल्लिङ्गं[२१२] त्रिधा[२१३] प्रोक्तं प्रकटं व्रतसंग्रहम्[२१४] ॥ ४८ ॥

अष्टानां कुलदेवीनां सदा भक्तिं[२१५] समाचरेत् ।
पूजयेत् सर्वदा चाष्टौ वेश्याद्याः[२१६] कौलिके क्रमे ॥ ४९ ॥

अथ[२१७] चर्याविनिर्मुक्तो[२१८] चरुकार्थी गृहेष्वपि ।
निशाचारेण कुर्वीत प्राशनात्[२१९] परमा गतिः ॥ ५० ॥

व्रतिनो[२२०] रुद्रवत् साक्षान्मम[२२१] तुल्यबलो[२२२] भवेत् ।
व्रतमव्यक्तकं येन[२२३] इच्छारूपधरो भवेत् ॥ ५१ ॥

(The adept) takes the sacrificial pap (caruka) which is secret (gupta), the Flower (puṣpa) that is 'last born' (antaja) and Vaiṣṇava juice (rasa). The sacrificial pap is said to be (of these) three kinds.[25] (42)

Free from doubt, (the adept) should eat it along with meat and wine. He will certainly (achieve) flight after twelve years. (43)

(This is) the conclusion of those intent on worshipping the Transmission and have completed the practice of the Vidyā. There is no doubt here (about this). This is the Command of the Supreme Goddess. (44)

Those who are born in the Yoginīkula and with whom I, the Supreme One (Parā), am pleased, acquire the vow and truth in their own respective lineage (auli). (45)

Those who undertake the vow should practice the threefold conduct (samācāra) over the course of (their) nocturnal practice (niśācāra). This is the Conduct of a Hero (vīracaryā) which is the Hero's Vow (observed) in the modalities of the Hero's union and the union *Dūtī*s practice with everybody (sarvagamana), which is both external and internal.[26] (46-47ab)

The mind should not be checked. One should go wherever the mind goes and practice the Conduct of Desire (icchācaryā).[27] This is said to be the threefold sign (liṅga) (of this practice), the sum (saṁgraha) (and substance) of the Vow, clearly evident.[28] (47cd-48)

One should always practice devotion to the eight goddesses of Kula. One should always worship the eight, Veśyā (Courtesan) and the others, in the Kaulika transmission. (49)

Now, one who has been freed by the practice (caryā) (of spiritual discipline) and who desires (to eat) the sacrificial pap in the Houses (of these goddesses) as well, should do so by means of the Conduct of the Night (niśācāra), and (so) by eating (it) (he achieves) the supreme state. (50)

Conclusion and Benefits

It is directly apparent that the one who observes the vow is like Rudra and is equal to me in strength. By virtue of the vow that is hidden (lit. 'unmanifest' – avyaktaka) he can assume any form he desires.[29] (51)

तेन अव्यक्तमित्याहुः[२२४] व्रतं[२२५] कौलस्य लक्षणम् ।
संसारक्रमसंस्थानां अधिकारे तु संस्थितम्[२२६] ॥ ५२ ॥
आचार्याणां समाख्यातं गुप्तं व्रतपरिग्रहम्[२२७] ।
न तेषां कथिता चर्या नाम संगममत् सधा ॥ ५३ ॥

आत्मचर्यासमायुक्तं[२२८] व्रतं गुप्ततमं[२२९] चरेत् ।
इत्यागमविशुद्धस्य कौलिकस्य महीपतेः[२३०] ॥ ५४ ॥
चर्यापादं[२३१] समाख्यातं निर्णयान्ते[२३२] समर्पितम् ।

अदत्ता[२३३] व्रतचर्या[२३४] च अदत्तं च कुलक्रमम् ॥ ५५ ॥
न ग्राह्यं च परत्रार्थं[२३५] ग्रहनात्[२३६] पतनं भवेत् ।

चर्यापादेन दृष्टेन गुरूणां शास्त्रपद्धतिः ॥ ५६ ॥
तेनैव यद् व्रतं दत्तं चर्यासंगमकौलिकम् ।
तत् सर्वं सफलं शिष्ये व्रतीनां नात्र संशयः ॥ ५७ ॥
अन्यथा न व्रतं[२३७] चर्या न न्यासं न क्रमं क्वचित् ।

यावन्न[२३८] पश्यते ज्ञानं मतार्थं शुद्धकौलिकम् ॥ ५८ ॥
तावद् भ्रान्तिक्षयं[२३९] नास्ति तस्माच्छास्त्रं परिग्रहेत् ।

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके आद्यपीठावतारिते विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये[२४०]
कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां
अव्वाक्रमभाषिते चर्यापादाधिकारो नामानन्दः ॥ १५ ॥

Thus the (wise) say that the vow, which is the mark of (a true) Kaula, is unmanifest. Meant for those subject to transmigration (saṁsārakramasaṁstha), the secret form of the vow that teachers (ācārya) observe has been explained. Their conduct has not been explained * * * * * * (?)[30] (52-53)

(The adept) should practice the most secret vow that includes the Observance of the Self (ātmacaryā). Thus the section concerning the practice (caryāpāda) of a Kaulika,[31] the lord of the earth, purified by the scripture, has been explained and placed at the conclusion of the teaching. (54-55ab)

If the observance of the vow (vratacaryā) and the Kula transmission (krama) have not been imparted, one should not take up the transcendental teaching (paratrārtha). By adopting it (unprepared), one falls. (55cd-56ab)

The path of the scriptures (taught by) the teacher (has been established) from the perspective of (Kaula) practice (caryāpāda). The Kaulika vow, which is the convergance of practice (caryā) that has been imparted with that same (perspective), all bears fruit within the disciple. Those who observe the vow have no doubt about this. Otherwise, there is no vow, no practice (caryā), no deposition (of mantras on the body) and no transmission (krama) anywhere. (56cd-58ab)

As long as one does not perceive the pure Kaula knowledge, that is, the teaching of the scripture (matārtha), illusion is not destroyed. Therefore one should take up the scripture. (58-59ab)

This is the (fifteenth) chapter called About the Section (of the Scripture) Concerning (Kaula) Conduct (caryāpāda). It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru that contains more than a hundred thousand quarters (of a metre) and has been brought (down to earth) into the primordial sacred seat on the path of sacred seat of knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Ka' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's Command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

षोडशानन्दः

श्रीनाथ उवाच

कुलचर्यारतः शान्तो[१] योगीन्द्रः सिद्धिकांक्षिणः[२] ।
कथं भिक्षाटनं[३] देवि[४] कथं भाषां समुच्चरेत् ॥ १ ॥
सूचिता च त्वया देवि[५] भिक्षाचर्या कुलाष्टके ।
कथयस्व प्रसादेन भाषासंकेतनिर्णयम् ॥ २ ॥

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[६]

प्रयागा[७] वरणा[८] कोल्ला[९] अट्टहासा[१०] जयन्तिका ।
चरित्रैकाम्रकं[११] चैव देविकोट्टं[१२] तथाष्टमम् ॥ ३ ॥
गृहाष्टके[१३] च देवेश भाषासंकेतकोत्तमम्[१४] ।
सिद्धिमुक्तिकरं देव कथ्यते चाधुना शृणु ॥ ४ ॥

कु ला[१५] ई आ[१६] त्रिभुवनावली[१७] दिव्याम्नाये प्रचारोपदेशः[१८] चरुकं देहि मे[१९] ई आ[२०] ।

अक्षरी[२१] कथिता चर्या प्रयागाख्ये वरानन[२२] ।
वेश्यागृहे कुकाराख्या निशाचारे गता स्वयम्[२३] ॥ ५ ॥

कु शा[२४] ई आ सकलभुवनावली कुलाम्नाये प्रचारोपदेशः चरुकं देहि मे ई[२५] आ ।

द्वितीया कथिता चर्या[२६] कामरूपा[२७] कुनामिका[२८] ।
वरणा[२९] शुण्डिनी[३०] देवी गता समयमेलके[३१] ॥ ६ ॥

कु वे[३२] ई आ अखण्डमण्डलावली[३३] समयाम्नाये[३४] प्रचारोपदेशः चरुकं देहि मे ई आ ।

CHAPTER SIXTEEN

The Section Concerning the Vidyā.

The Secret Language of the Mantras of the Eight Mothers

Śrīnātha said:

O goddess, how (should) the Lord of Yogis,[1] devoted to Kula practice (caryā) and desirous of success (siddhi), wander in search of alms (bhikṣāṭana)? And how should he utter (the secret) language? (1)

O goddess, you have (already) referred to the practice of begging (alms) in the eight (centres of) Kula[2], (now) please tell (me) the teaching concerning the convention of the (secret) language.[3] (2)

The Eight Mothers

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

Prayāga, Varaṇā,[4] Kollā[5], Aṭṭahāsa, Jayantikā, Caritra, Ekāmraka and Devikoṭṭa, the eighth – in (these) eight Houses, O lord of the gods, the convention of the (secret) language is the best. O god, it bestows success and liberation and is now being explained, (so) listen.[6] (3-4)

[7]KU LĀ[8] Ī Ā, (you who are) the series of the three worlds and the teaching preached in the Divine Tradition, give me the sacrificial pap! Ī Ā.

O fair-faced one, Akṣarī's[9] practice (caryā) in Prayāga has been declared. Kubjikā (kukārākhyā)[10] has herself gone to the House of Veśyā (the Courtesan) (in the course of her) Conduct of the Night (niśācāra).[11] (5)

KU ŚĀ[12] Ī Ā, (you who are) the series of all the worlds and the teaching preached in the Kula Tradition, give me the sacrificial pap! Ī Ā.

The second practice (caryā) has been declared. It is that of Kubjikā (kunāmikā)[13] in Kāmarūpa. The goddess Śuṇḍinī (the Liquor Seller)[14] in Varaṇā has gone to the Assembly of the Rule (samayamelaka).[15] (6)

KU VE[16] Ī Ā, (you who are) the unbroken series of maṇḍalas and the teaching preached in the Tradition of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap! Ī Ā.

कुंकुण्डी[३५] कथिता चर्या तृतीया समयगोचरे[३६] ।
कौल्ले[३७] कैवर्तिनी देवी कुनामाजा[३८] जगत्सुता[३९] ॥ ७ ॥

कु या[४०] ई आ शिवगुरुपरमावली मुद्राम्नाये प्रचारोपदेशः चरुकं देहि मे ई आ ।

कौशली[४१] कथिता[४२] चर्या[४३] चतुर्थी च महाबला ।
अट्टहासे गता देवी कुनामा[४४] खट्टिकीगृहे[४५] ॥ ८ ॥

कु भु[४६] ई आ आनन्दपरमावली आद्याम्नाये प्रचारोपदेशः चरुकं देहि मे आ ई ।

काञ्चीमुखा स्मृता चर्या पञ्चमा[४७] भवसंज्ञका[४८] ।
जयन्त्यां च कृता नित्यं कुनामा कण्डुकीगृहे[४९] ॥ ९ ॥

कु क्षे[५०] ई[५१] आ मातङ्गावली षट्काम्नाये[५२] प्रचारोपदेशः[५३] चरुकं देह[५४] मे आ ई ।

वागेशी च[५५] स्मृता चर्या षष्ठी[५६] निग्रहकारिका ।
चरित्राख्ये[५७] कृता नित्य[५८] कुनामा[५९] रजकीगृहे[६०] ॥ १० ॥

कु निः[६१] ई आ निशाचारभुवनावली पीठाम्नाये[६२] प्रचारोपदेशः[६३] चरुकं देहि मे आ ई ।

शाङ्करी[६४] कथिता[६५] चर्या सप्तमा[६६] वरवर्णिनी[६७] ।
एकाम्रे शिल्पिनी देवी कुनामा समये गता[६८] ॥ ११ ॥

कु म[६९] ई आ मोक्षकुलावली पारम्पर्याम्नाये प्रचारोपदेशः[७०] चरुकं देहि मे आ ई ।

The third practice (caryā) has been declared. It is that of Kuṁkuṇḍī in the field of the Rule. The goddess Kaivartinī (the Fisherwoman), born of Kubjikā (kunāmājā) and the mother of the universe, is in Kaulla. (7)

KU YĀ[17] Ī Ā (you who are) the supreme series of Śiva and the teachers as well as the teaching preached in the Tradition of the Gesture, give me the sacrificial pap! Ī Ā.

The fourth practice (caryā) has been declared. It is that of Kauśalī (the Skilful One) who is very strong. The goddess Kubjikā (kunāmā) has gone to Aṭṭahāsa, the House of Khaṭṭikī (the Butcherwoman). (8)

KU BHU[18] Ī Ā, (you who are) the supreme series of bliss and the teaching preached in the Primordial Tradition, give me the sacrificial pap! Ā Ī.

(This is) said to be the fifth practice, that of Kāñcīmukhā (Scissor-faced) and is called Phenomenal Existence (bhava). (She is) Kubjikā (kunāmā) who is always formed in Jayantī, the House of Kaṇḍukī (the Ball-making Woman). (9)

KU KṢE[19] Ī Ā, (you who are) the series of elephants (mātaṇga) and the teaching preached in the Tradition of the Six Thousand (ṣaṭka),[20] give me the sacrificial pap! Ā Ī.

(This is) said to be the sixth practice, that of Vāgeśī (the Mistress of Speech) who brings about restraint (nigraha). It is Kubjikā (kunāmā) who is always formed in (the place) called Caritra, the House of Rajakī (the Washerwoman). (10)

KU NIḤ[21] Ī Ā, (you who are) the series of the worlds of the Conduct of the Night and the teaching preached in the Tradition of the Sacred Seats, give me the sacrificial pap! Ā Ī.

The seventh practice has been declared. It is that of Śāṅkarī, the best of females (varṇinī). The goddess Śilpinī (the Sculpteress),[22] who is Kubjikā (kunāmā) in Ekāmra, is present in the Rule. (11)

KU MA[23] Ī Ā (you who are) the series of the Kulas of liberation and the teaching preached in the Tradition of the Transmission (pāramparyāmnāya), give me the sacrificial pap! Ā Ī.

भैरवी कथिता चर्या अष्टमा[७१] मोक्षदायिका[७२] ।
देविकोट्टे तु कथिता कुनामा कौशटीगृहे[७३] ॥ १२ ॥

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[७४]

सिद्ध्यष्टकं कुलाम्नाये[७५] मातॄणां च प्रसादतः ।
वेश्यारूपेण ब्रह्माणी शाङ्करी शुण्डिनी स्मृता ॥ १३ ॥

कैवर्ती नाम कौमारी खट्टिका वैष्णवी स्मृता ।
वाराही[७६] कण्डुकी देवी इन्द्राणी रजकी स्मृता ॥ १४ ॥

शिल्पी[७७] ज्ञेया तु चामुण्डा महालक्ष्मी तथान्त्यजा ।
चर्याक्षेत्रविभागेन ज्ञात्वा चर्यां[७८] समाचरेत्[७९] ॥ १५ ॥

मा मा मा य डि आ हो आव हो[८०] प्रयागभैरवि[८१] ई आ समयाचारु देहि मे चरुकम्
।

एषा चर्या महाचर्या वेश्यागृहे[८२] तु कारयेत् ।
तस्मादवाप्य चरुकं[८३] तदा कौलेश्वरो[८४] भवेत्[८५] ॥ १६ ॥

अव्वे अम्बे[८६] च मे माये न च हुं हुं आ हु[८७] हो[८८] पीठसमयाचारयोगानन्दे
वरणाभैरवि[८९] समयाचारु देहि मे चरुकम् ।

वाराणस्यां तु वरणा[९०] समयाचारमेलके ।
शौण्डीगृहे[९१] महाचर्यां[९२] कृत्वा वागेश्वरीपदम्[९३] ॥ १७ ॥

The eighth practice has been declared. It is that of Bhairavī who bestows liberation. (The form of) Kubjikā (kunāmā) in Devikoṭṭa, the House of Kauśaṭī, has been declared. (12)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

The Octad of Accomplishments (siddhyaṣṭaka)[24] belongs to the Kula Tradition by the grace of the Mothers. Brahmāṇī is in the form of Veśyā (the Prostitute), (while) Śāṅkarī[25] is said to be Śuṇḍinī (the Liquor Seller). (13)

Kaivartī (the fisherwoman) is Kaumārī, (while) Khaṭṭikā (the Chalkminer Woman) is said to be Vaiṣṇavī. Vārāhī is the goddess Kaṇḍukī (the Ball-making Woman),[26] (while) Indrāṇī is said to be Rajakī (the Washerwoman). (14)

One should know Śilpinī (the Sculpteress) to be Cāmuṇḍā, while Mahālakṣmī is Antyajā (the Last Born).[27] Having learned (them) according to (their) fields (kṣetra) and practice (caryā), (one should) engage in practice (caryā). (15)

The Sūtra of the Octad of Kula (kulāṣṭakasūtra)[28]

MĀ MĀ MĀ ḌI Ā HO ĀVA HO, O Prayāgabhairavī[29]! Ī Ā, O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule (samayācāru),[30] give me the sacrificial pap!

This practice (caryā) is the great practice. (The adept) should observe it in the House of the Courtesan and, having obtained the sacrificial pap from there, he becomes the lord of Kaula. (16)

AVVE AMBE CA ME MĀYE NA CA HUṀ HUṀ Ā HUṀ HO,[31] O sacred seat! O bliss of the Yoga of the practice of the Rule in the sacred seat! O Varaṇābhairavī! O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap!

Varaṇā is in Vārāṇasī in the assembly of the practice of the Rule. Once one has observed the great practice in the House of Śauṇḍī (the Liquor Seller) (one attains) Vāgeśvarī's state. (17)

जाग्रिणी[९४] म इ दि द्वि आ घुग् घुरुमालवजन्ति आ जम्भणि जम्भणि[९५] हो
कोल्लापुरभैरवि[९६] ई आ समयाचारु देहि मे चरुकम् ।

कोल्लापुरे[९७] महाचर्या कैवर्त्ती[९८] नग्नवाससा[९९] ।
चरुकाज्ञाप्रसादेन ज्ञानैश्वर्यं न[१००] संशयः[१०१] ॥ १८ ॥

दिद्वन[१०२] द्वसयल[१०३] परिवलि[१०४] आ हो अव्वा[१०५] मे कुलसिद्धि आ अट्टहासभैरवि[१०६]
आ समयाचारु[१०७] देहि मे चरुकम् ।

खट्टिकीमन्दिरे चर्या अट्टहासाकुले[१०८] स्थिता ।
समयाज्ञाप्रसादेन चरुकेन तु सिद्धिदा[१०९] ॥ १९ ॥

सुब्भरि सुब्भरि आहो कुडि कुडि[११०] हो माये महामाये एहि एहि भो हिनः[१११] भोजय
भोजय[११२] भैरवी आ समयाचारु देहि मे[११३] चरुकम् ।

कन्दुकीमन्दिरे[११४] जाता जयन्तीकुलकन्दरे ।
तस्याः[११५] चरुकदानेन[११६] वीरेन्द्रो[११७] योगिनीकुले[११८] ॥ २० ॥

लम्बे लम्बे न होमालि लिलिविज्जे[११९] समर सवक् कहजन्ती सा चरित्रभैरवी[१२०] आ
समयाचारु देहि मे चरुकम् ।

जम्बुकी च परानन्दे उन्मनानन्दचेतसा ।
तस्याः श्रीचरुकं प्राप्य भैरवो भैरवीकुले[१२१] ॥ २१ ॥

अव्व हो सव्व हो स ल वट्ट हो शतयोजनपरमानन्दे[१२२] आ कन्दुकीभैरवी आ
समयाचारु देहि मे चरुकम् ।

शिल्पीमन्दिरमध्ये तु या करोति समागमम् ।
योगिना[१२३] चरुकार्थीनां ददेत् सिद्धिमनेकधा[१२४] ॥ २२ ॥

JĀGRIṆĪ (She Who is Awake) MA I DI DVI Ā GHUG GHURUMĀLAVAJANTI Ā JAMBHAṆI JAMBHAṆI HO, O Kollāpurabhairavī! Ī Ā,[32] O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap!

The great practice in Kollāpura is the naked Kaivarttī (Fisherwoman). By the grace of the Command (that comes by means of) the sacrificial pap, (one attains), without a doubt, (both) knowledge and lordship. (18)

DIDVANA DVASAYALA PARIVALI ĀHO[33] AVVĀ ME KULASIDDHI Ā Aṭṭahāsabhairavī! Ā, O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap!

The practice in the temple of Khaṭṭikī (the Butcherwoman) is in the family (kula) of Aṭṭahāsā. By means of the sacrificial pap, which is the grace (prasāda) of the Command of the Rule, she bestows success. (19)

SUVBHARI SUVBHARI ĀHO KUḌI HO HOMĀYE![34] Mahāmāyā! come come BHO HINAḤ feed feed. Bhairavī Ā, O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap!

By bestowing the sacrificial pap of (the goddess) who has arisen in the temple of Kandukī in the Kula cave of Jayantī, the Lord of the Heroes (is generated) within the Yoginīkula. (20)

LAMBE LAMBE NAHOMĀLI LILIVIJJE SAMARA SAVAK KAHAJANTĪ[35] she who is Caritrabhairavī Ā, O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap!

Having obtained the venerable sacrificial pap of Jambukī, which is within Supreme Bliss, by means of the mind (cetas) blissful with the Transmental, (the yogi becomes) Bhairava in the Bhairavī Kula. (21)

AVVA HO SAVVA HO SA LA VAṬṬA HO,[36] O supreme bliss of countless leagues! Ā, Kandukībhairavī Ā, O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap!

She who engenders union in the middle of Śilpinī's temple, bestows upon the yogis who desire the sacrificial pap accomplishments (siddhi) of many kinds.

मातङ्गी विमलमती[१२५] प्रकटयोगिनी समयसिद्धि[१२६] माये[१२७] समयाचारचक्रे
वन्दितत्रिभुवनदिव्ययोगिनी[१२८] देविकोट्टभैरवी[१२९] आ समयाचारु[१३०] देहि मे[१३१] चरुकम् ।

अनादिविमलमातङ्गीकुले[१३२] जाता मतङ्गिनी[१३३] ।
प्रसादबुद्ध्या चरुकं[१३४] संप्राप्य खेचरो भवेत् ।। २३ ।।

इति कुलाष्टककुलचर्यासूत्राधिकारः[१३५] ।।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

समयलोपानि[१३६] सर्वाणि मेरुराशिस्त्वसंख्यया[१३७] ।
तेषां संशोधनार्थाय या विद्या समुपस्थिता ।। २४ ।।
पीठस्तवेन सहिता यथा भवति कौलिनि[१३८] ।

प्रमादाल्लोपमायाते[१३९] सिद्धे समयमण्डले[१४०] ।। २५ ।।
साधकस्य भवेद् ग्लानिर्नानाविघ्नैः[१४१] प्रबाध्यते[१४२] ।

अपमृत्युभयं तस्माद् दारिद्र्यं[१४३] कलहं तथा ।। २६ ।।
दुःस्वप्नं[१४४] कार्यहानिश्च लोकद्वेषं[१४५] मुहुर्मुहुः ।
का गतिस्तस्य देवेशि[१४६] कथं संशुद्धिमाप्नुयात्[१४७] ।। २७ ।।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[१४८]

साधु साधु महाशम्भो यन्मे[१४९] निगदितं शृणु ।
विस्तरेण बहुभेदैस्तत्सर्वं[१५०] कथयामि ते ।। २८ ।।

पीठोपपीठसंदोहक्षेत्रोपक्षेत्रमेव[१५१] च ।
द्वारोपद्वारस्थानानि[१५२] सेवनान्निर्मलो भवेत्[१५३] ।। २९ ।।

Mātaṇginī, the pure-minded and manifest Yoginī, accomplishment of the Rule! O Māyā! you who are praised in the Gathering of Conduct according to the Rule (samayācāracakra), the divine Yoginī in the three worlds, Devikoṭṭabhairavī Ā, O (you who are) skilful in the practice of the Rule, give me the sacrificial pap!

Mātaṅginī has arisen in the beginingless and pure Kula of Mātaṅgī. Once (the yogi) has obtained the sacrificial pap by means of the intellect graced (by this goddess), he becomes a Skyfarer.[37] (23)

This (completes) the section (adhikāra) of the scripture (sūtra) concerning Kula conduct with regards to the Octad of Kula.

The Pīṭhastava: A Hymn to the Sixty-four Sacred Seats

Śrīnātha said:

Countless are all (those deeds) that break the Rule, a heap (as great as mount) Meru. O Kaulinī, the Vidyā is meant to purify them and is at hand, along with the Hymn to the Sacred Seats.[38] (24-25ab)

The adept suffers from lassitude (glāni)[39] and is afflicted by many kinds of obstacles if, due to his negligence, (something is) omitted[40] once (he has received initiation and) the Maṇḍala of the Rule (samaya) has been completed (siddha). (25cd-26ab)

From that (omission comes) fear of an untimely death, poverty, conflict, uneasy sleep, destruction of one's goal (kārya) and the aversion of people (towards oneself), time and again. O mistress of the gods, what happens to him and how can he attain (a state of) complete purity? (26cd-27)

The venerable (goddess) said:

O Great Śambhu, wisely indeed have you spoken to me. (Now) listen. I will tell you all that at length with (its) many (subtle) distinctions. (28)

(The adept) becomes pure by attending to the sacred seats, the fields and the doors (dvāra), primary and secondary, along with the meeting places (saṁdoha).[41] (29)

अथाशक्त: प्रमादी[१५४] वा विद्यापीठौघसेवनात्[१५५] ।
सम्यक् संशुद्धिमाप्नोति[१५६] प्रातरुत्थाय य: पठेत्[१५७] ।। ३० ।।
तदहं संप्रवक्ष्यामि समयलोपविशुद्धये[१५८] ।

चतु:षष्टिस्तु चक्राणि कूटभेदेन संस्थिता:[१५९] ।। ३१ ।।
चतु:षष्टिस्तथा पीठान्[१६०] क्रमेण कथयाम्यहम् ।

पश्चिमेन क्रमेणैव शाक्त[१६१] प्रणवपञ्चकम् ।। ३२ ।।
मातृकूटसमायोगात् पीठस्तवमुदीरयेत् ।

अट्टहासे[१६२] कदम्बस्था[१६३] सौम्यास्या[१६४] वज्रधारिणीम् ।। ३३ ।।
महाघण्टसमोपेता[१६५] प्रणमामि शिवंकरीम्[१६६] ।

चरित्रायां करञ्जस्था[१६७] कृष्णाख्या[१६८] शक्तिधारिणीम् ।। ३४ ।।
महाबलसमोपेता[१६९] प्रणमामि सुसिद्धिदाम्[१७०] ।

अग्निकेन[१७१] समोपेतां दण्डहस्तां नगौकसाम्[१७२] ।। ३५ ।।
कौलगिर्या[१७३] महालक्ष्मीं नौमि लक्ष्मीविवर्धनीम्[१७४] ।

ज्वालामुखी[१७५] जयन्त्याया[१७६] निम्बस्था[१७७] खड्गधारिणीम्[१७८] ।। ३६ ।।
महाप्रेतसमोपेतां नौमि सर्वार्थसिद्धिदाम्[१७९] ।

अश्वत्थस्था[१८०] महामायामुज्जैन्या[१८१] पाशधारिणीम्[१८२] ।। ३७ ।।
महाकालयुतां नौमि[१८३] सर्वार्थप्रतिपादिनीम्[१८४] ।

उडुम्बरतलावस्था[१८५] वायुवेगां ध्वजायुधाम्[१८६] ।। ३८ ।।
प्रयागे पवनोपेता[१८७] नौमि शत्रुविनाशनीम्[१८८] ।

Now, one who is negligent (of the Vidyā) or who is helpless, by rising (early in the) morning and reading (the scripture), achieves perfect purity by attending to the Vidyā, sacred seats and the lineage (ogha). I will explain that so that (the adept can) purify the omissions of the Rule. (30-31ab)

The sixty-four Wheels accord with the division of the Peak (seed-syllables) (kūṭa). Similarly, I will tell (you) the sixty-four sacred seats, in due order. (31cd-32ab)

The Hymn to the Sixty-Four Sacred Seats[42]

One should utter the Hymn to the Sacred Seats in accord with the Western Transmission, along with the Peak (seed-syllable) of the Mothers and the empowered (śākta) pentad of *Praṇava*s.[43] (32cd-33ab)

I[44] salute (the goddess) Saumyāsyā (Dignified Demenour)[45], the doer of good (śivaṁkarī), who holds a thunderbolt (vajra) and resides in a Kadamba (tree)[46] in Aṭṭahāsa[47] along with[48] Mahāghaṇṭa (the Great Bell)[49] (1). (33cd-34ab)

I salute (the goddess) called Kṛṣṇā[50] who holds a javelin, bestows good success and resides in a Karañja (tree)[51] in Caritrā[52] along with Mahābala (Great Strength)[53] (2). (34cd-35ab)

I salute Mahālakṣmī[54] who increases wealth (lakṣmī), carries a staff and resides in a Nagā (plant) in Kollāgiri[55] along with Agnika (Fire) (3). (35cd-36ab)

I salute Jvālāmukhī[56] who bestows success in every goal, carries a sword and resides in a Nimba (tree)[57] in Jayantī[58] along with Mahāpreta (the Great Ghost) (4). (36cd-37ab)

I salute (the goddess) Mahāmāyā[59] who effects all (one's) goals and, holding a noose, resides in an Aśvattha (tree)[60] in Ujjayinī[61] along with Mahākāla (the Great Time) (5). (37cd-38ab)

I salute (the goddess) Vāyuvegā (Force of the Wind)[62] who destroys (one's) enemies.[63] (Her) attribute is a flag and she resides in an Uḍumbara and Palmyra (tree)[64] in Prayāga[65] along with Pavana (the Wind) (6). (38cd-39ab)

वाराणस्यां तु तालस्था[१८९] ऊर्ध्वकेशी[१९०] गदायुधाम्[१९१] ।। ३९ ।।
प्रणौमि[१९२] शिरसा देवीं शाङ्करीं[१९३] शाङ्करान्विताम्[१९४] ।

कर्णमोटी[१९५] वटस्था[१९६] तु सशूला[१९७] हेतुकान्विताम्[१९८] ।। ४० ।।
श्रीकोटे[१९९] श्रीप्रदा[२००] नौमि राज्यसंपत्प्रदायिनीम्[२०१] ।

विरजायाम्बिकादेवीं[२०२] मुद्रापट्टिशधारिणीम् ।। ४१ ।।
अनलेन[२०३] समोपेतां प्रणमामि जयावहाम्[२०४] ।

एरुडे[२०५] अग्निवक्त्रां तु वज्रशक्तिधरां शुभाम् ।। ४२ ।।
घण्टारवसमोपेता[२०६] नमामि रिपुनाशनीम्[२०७] ।

मुशलायुधहस्ता[२०८] तु[२०९] महाजङ्घसमन्विताम् ।। ४३ ।।
नमामि शत्रुभङ्गार्थे[२१०] पिङ्गाक्षीं[२११] हस्तिनापुरे[२१२] ।

एलापुरे[२१३] खरास्यां तु पाशहस्ता[२१४] महाबलाम्[२१५] ।। ४४ ।।
गजकर्णसमोपेतां नौमि दुष्टप्रमर्दनीम्[२१६] ।

कुमारीं[२१७] चैव गोकर्णे[२१८] मुद्रालकुटधारिणीम्[२१९] ।। ४५ ।।
तडिज्जङ्घसमोपेता[२२०] नमामि रिपुमर्दनीम्[२२१] ।

इन्द्राणीं[२२२] मरुदेशे[२२३] तु त्रैलोक्याकृष्टिकारिकाम् ।। ४६ ।।[२२४]
करालेन समोपेतां नमाम्यंकुशधारिणीम्[२२५] ।[२२६]

रोमजङ्घसमोपेता[२२७] नगरे तु[२२८] हलायुधाम्[२२९] ।। ४७ ।।
वक्रा[२३०] गच्छनिवासिन्या[२३१] नमामि वरसिद्धये[२३२] ।

कुम्भकेन[२३३] समोपेतां खट्वाङ्गकरभूषिताम् ।। ४८ ।।
नमामि पापशुद्ध्यर्थं[२३४] चामुण्डा[२३५] पौण्ड्रवर्धने[२३६] ।

I salute, (bowing my) head to the goddess Śāṁkarī[66] who is accompanied by Śaṁkara.[67] Her weapon is a mace (gada)[68] and, (her) hair upraised (ūrdhvakeśī), she resides in a palm (tree) in Vārāṇasī[69] (7). (39cd-40ab)

I salute (the goddess) Karṇamoṭī[70] who bestows regal power (śrī) and the attainment of a kingdom, who carries a spear and resides in a banyam (tree) in Śrīkoṭa[71] along with Hetuka[72] (8). (40cd-41ab)

I salute the goddess Ambikā[73] who carries a seal (mudrā) and a sharp pointed spear, who bestows victory and resides in Virajā[74] along with Anala (Wind) (9). (41cd-42ab)

I salute (the goddess) Agnivaktrā (Fire Mouth)[75] who is auspicious. She holds a javelin and thunderbolt and destroys (one's) enemies. She (resides) in Eruḍa[76] along with Ghaṇṭārava (Bell Sound) (10). (42cd-43ab)

In order to smash (my) enemies (to pieces) I salute (the goddess) Piṅgākṣī (Tawny-eyed)[77] who holds in her hand a pestle as a weapon and (resides) in Hastināpura[78] along with Mahājaṇgha (Big Thigh) (11). (43cd-44ab)

I salute the (goddess) Kharāsyā (Donkey Face)[79] who (resides) in Elāpura[80] along with Gajakarṇa (Elephant Ears). She holds in her hand a noose[81] and, very strong, crushes the wicked (12). (44cd-45ab)

I also salute (the goddess) Kumārī[82] who (resides) in Gokarṇa[83] along with Taḍijjaṇgha (Lightning Thigh). She bears a seal and a club[84] and crushes (all one's) enemies (13). (45cd-46ab)

I salute (the goddess) Indrāṇī[85] (who resides) in the Land of Maru[86] along with Karāla (Big Teeth). She holds a goad and attracts the triple world[87] (14). (46cd-47ab)

In order to receive a boon, I salute (the goddess) Vakrā[88] who resides in a tree (gaccha) in Nagara[89] along with Romajaṅgha (Hairy Thigh) and who has a plough as (her) attribute (15). (47cd-48ab)

In order to be purified of sin, I salute (the goddess) Cāmuṇḍā[90] whose hand is adorned with an ascetic's staff (khaṭvāṇga) and (who resides) in Pauṇḍravardhana[91] along with Kumbhaka (the Pot)[92] (16). (48cd-49ab)

पुरस्तीरे[२३७] प्रसन्नास्यां[२३८] वज्रशृङ्खलधारिणीम्[२३९] ॥ ४९ ॥
नमामि त्रिजटोपेतां[२४०] बन्धस्तम्भनकारिकाम्[२४१] ।

पृष्ठापुर्यां[२४२] विद्युन्मुखीं[२४३] दण्डशक्त्यायुधोद्यताम् ॥ ५० ॥
नौमि घण्टारवोपेतां[२४४] दैत्यस्तम्भनकारिकाम्[२४५] ।

उल्कामुखसमोपेतां ऊर्ध्वकेशीं[२४६] महाबलाम् ॥ ५१ ॥
मुद्रालकुटहस्तां[२४७] तु[२४८] नौमि दुष्टाङ्गभञ्जनीम्[२४९] ।

पिशिताशसमोपेतां[२५०] नौमि[२५१] कट्टारिकोद्यताम्[२५२] ॥ ५२ ॥
सोपारे अग्निवक्त्रां[२५३] तु अशेषपशुघातनीम्[२५४] ।

क्षीरिके लोकमातां च[२५५] खड्गहस्तां नमाम्यहम् ॥ ५३ ॥
महासेनसमोपेतामहितौघनिकृन्तनीम्[२५६] ।

वज्रांकुशधरां[२५७] नौमि[२५८] भीमसेनसमन्विताम्[२५९] ॥ ५४ ॥
स्तम्भाकृष्टिकरीं[२६०] देवीं[२६१] मायापुर्यां[२६२] प्रकम्पिनीम्[२६३] ।

महाक्रोधसमोपेतां पूतनाम्रातिकेश्वरे[२६४] ॥ ५५ ॥
गदाहलायुधां[२६५] नौमि ताडनाकृष्टिकारिकाम्[२६६] ।

भग्ननासां राजगृहे[२६७] महाकर्णसमन्विताम् ॥ ५६ ॥
वज्रशक्तिधरां[२६८] नौमि[२६९] अशेषफलदायिकाम्[२७०] ।

गुह्येश्वरीं[२७१] महाभोगां[२७२] नित्यं पशुपतेर्युताम्[२७३] ॥ ५७ ॥
नेपाले संस्थितां[२७४] नौमि भवघोरान्धहारिणीम्[२७५] ।

काश्मीरे[२७६] शारदां[२७७] देवीं[२७८] विद्येश्वरसमन्विताम्[२७९] ॥ ५८ ॥
विद्यापीठसमोपेतां विद्याज्ञानप्रदायिकाम्[२८०] ।

I salute (the goddess) Prasannāsyā[93] (Contented Face) in Purastīra[94] along with Trijaṭa (Triple Dreadlock). She bears a thunderbolt and a chain and paralyses bondage (17). (49cd-50ab)

I salute (the goddess) Vidyunmukhī (Lightning Mouth)[95] (who resides) in Pṛṣṭhāpurī[96] along with Ghaṇṭārava (Bell Sound)[97], (her) weapons, a stick and javelin, upraised, she paralyses demons (18). (50cd-51ab)

I salute Ūrdhvakeśī (Upraised Hair)[98] who holds in (her) hands a seal and a club[99] who, very strong, breaks the limbs of the wicked (and resides in her sacred place) along with Ulkāmukha (Ember Face) (19). (51cd-52ab)

I salute (the goddess) Agnivaktrā (Fire Mouth)[100] (who resides in) Sopāra[101] along with Piśitāśa (Meat Eater) and, holding up a dagger (kaṭṭārikā), smashes every fetter[102] (20). (52cd 53ab)

I salute (the goddess) Lokamātā (Mother of the World)[103] (who resides) in Kṣīrika[104] along with Mahāsena (Great Army). She holds a sword in her hand and severs the flux of what is unbeneficial[105] (21). (53cd-54ab)

I salute the goddess Prakampinī (Shaker)[106] (who resides) in Māyāpurī[107] along with Bhīmasena (Fierce Army). Holding a thunderbolt and goad,[108] she paralyses and attracts (22). (54cd-55ab)

I salute (the goddess) Pūtanā[109] (who resides) in Amrātikeśvara[110] along with Mahākrodha (Great Anger). Her weapons a mace and plough,[111] she beats and attracts (23). (55cd-56ab)

I salute (the goddess) Bhagnanāsā (Bent Nose)[112] (who resides) in Rājagṛha[113] along with Mahākarṇa (Big Ears). Bearing a thunderbolt and javelin, she bestows all the fruits (of one's actions) (24).[114] (56cd-57ab)

I salute (the goddess) who saves those who are blinded by (this) awesome (ghora) fettered state (bhava); Guhyeśvarī (Mistress of the Secret Place) who enjoys great pleasure (mahābhogā) and, always together with (the god) Paśupati, resides in Nepāla[115] (25). (57cd-58ab)

(I salute the goddess) Śāradā (who resides) in Kashmir[116] along with Vidyeśvara[117]. Endowed with (the power of) the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha), she bestows knowledge and wisdom[118] (26). (58cd-59ab)

गद्दिहरणे[२८१] महाशक्तिं[२८२] नौमि दुःखक्षयंकरीम्[२८३] ॥ ५९ ॥
महाशरसमोपेतां[२८४] पार्वतीं[२८५] पर्वतस्थिताम्[२८६] ।

जयेश्वरीं[२८७] कुलूतायां[२८८] चक्रेशीं[२८९] नग्नवाससाम्[२९०] ॥ ६० ॥
कपालीशसमोपेतां[२९१] भोगमोक्षफलप्रदाम्[२९२] ।

सिंघुहारे[२९३] कुलालाख्यां[२९४] चित्रभोगसमन्विताम्[२९५] ॥ ६१ ॥
भैरवेन समोपेतां नौमि किल्विषनाशनीम्[२९६] ।

भोजपुर्यां[२९७] महाचम्पां[२९८] लुलन्तीं[२९९] परमां कलाम्[३००] ॥ ६२ ॥
कैलासेन समोपेतां नौमि दुःस्वप्ननाशनीम्[३०१] ।

स्त्रीराज्ये अम्बिकादेवीं[३०२] दुर्गमार्गक्षयंकरीम्[३०३] ॥ ६३ ॥
नटेश्वरसमायुक्तां[३०४] नौमि ज्ञानार्थसिद्धये[३०५] ।

महेन्द्रे तु महामायां खड्गहस्तां नमाम्यहं ॥ ६४ ॥
महामेरुसमोपेतां[३०६] महदार्तिनिकृन्तनीम्[३०७] ।

अन्तर्वेद्यां महारक्तां सर्वज्ञानौघदायिनीम् ॥ ६५ ॥
चण्डेश्वरसमोपेतां नित्यं नौम्यपराजिताम्[३०८] ।

मुशलहस्तां महामायां त्रिलोचनसमायुताम् ॥ ६६ ॥
क्रूरहस्थां[३०९] महाकालीं सर्वद्वन्द्वविनाशनीम्[३१०] ।

महाश्मशाने[३११] घण्टाले[३१२] घण्टालीं[३१३] परमायुधाम् ॥ ६७ ॥
अहिनोघसमोपेतां[३१४] भैरवीं प्रणमामि[३१५] ताम्[३१६] ।

चिञ्चिणीं[३१७] तु कदम्बस्थां[३१८] चिञ्चिनीवृक्षनायिकाम्[३१९] ॥ ६८ ॥
नौमि भद्रेश्वरयुतां[३२०] महापापक्षयंकरीम्[३२१] ।

I salute the great goddess (mahāśakti) who destroys suffering, Parvatī who resides in the mountains in Gaddiharaṇa[119] along with Mahāśara (27). (59cd-60ab)

(I salute the goddess) Jayeśvarī (who resides) in Kulūtā[120] along with Kapālīśa (Lord of the Skull). Naked, (she is) the mistress of the Wheel (cakreśī) and bestows the fruit of worldly enjoyment and liberation[121] (28). (60cd-61ab)

I salute (the goddess) called Kulālā (the Potterwoman who resides) in Siṁghuhāra[122] along with Bhairava. Endowed with varied enjoyment, she destroys sin (29). (61cd-62ab)

I salute (the goddess) Mahācampā[123] (who resides) in Bhojapurī[124] along with Kailāsa. She is the supreme energy who swings to and fro and destroys (all) bad dreams (30). (62cd-63ab)

In order to attain knowledge and wealth, I salute the goddess Ambikā who destroys hard paths and (resides) in Strīrājya[125] along with Naṭeśvara (Lord of the Dance) (31). (63cd-64ab)

I salute (the goddess) Mahāmāyā (who resides) in Mahendra[126] along with Mahāmeru. Sword in hand, she cuts off the great pain (of phenomenal existence) (32). (64cd-65ab)

I constantly salute (the goddess) Aparājitā[127] (who resides) in Antarvedī[128] along with Caṇḍeśvara. Great and red, she bestows every stream of knowledge (33). (65cd-66ab)

(I salute the goddess) Mahāmāyā (who resides in her sacred place) along with Trilocana (Three Eyes) and holds in her hand a pestle. (She is) Mahākālī, who resides in Krūraha[129] and destroys all dualities (34). (66cd-67ab)

I salute that Bhairavī (who is called) Ghaṇṭālī, (carries) the supreme weapon (and resides) in the great cremation ground (called) Ghaṇṭāla[130] along with Ahinogha (Congregation of Snakes) (35). (67cd-68ab)

I salute (the goddess) Ciñciṇī, the mistress of the tamarind (ciñcinī) tree who destroys great sin and who resides in Kadamba[131] along with Bhadreśvara (36). (68cd-69ab)

करवीरे श्मशाने तु ऊर्ध्वकेशीं[३२२] भयंकरीम्[३२३] ।। ६९ ।।
नग्नवाससमोपेतां[३२४] पानपात्रधरां[३२५] शुभाम्[३२६] ।

लंगुडे[३२७] च्छिन्नमुण्डाख्यां[३२८] क्रोधराजसमन्विताम्[३२९] ।। ७० ।।
कर्तरीकरहस्तां तु नौमि पापक्षयंकरीम्[३३०] ।

कामशरे[३३१] श्मशाने[३३२] तु कामलक्ष्मीं[३३३] जगत्पतिम्[३३४] ।। ७१ ।।
मन्मथेन समायुक्तां त्रिकोणाकारसंस्थिताम्[३३५] ।

एककोणे श्मशानाख्ये[३३६] त्रिकोणां[३३७] रक्तवाससाम् ।। ७२ ।।
त्रिशिरेण समोपेतां नृमुण्डकरभूषिताम्[३३८] ।

एकवीरे श्मशाने[३३९] तु मातङ्गीं[३४०] कुलनायिकाम्[३४१] ।। ७३ ।।
मातङ्गीशसमोपेतां नौमि नूपुरहस्तिकाम्[३४२] ।

डोहरे तु शिवादूतीं[३४३] असुरसुरवन्दिताम्[३४४] ।। ७४ ।।
हयशीर्षसमोपेतां धनुबाणधरां[३४५] पराम्[३४६] ।

श्रीपर्वते[३४७] महासिद्धां सिद्धमार्गविकासिनीम् ।। ७५ ।।
ज्योतिलिङ्गसमोपेतां[३४८] महायुधधरां शुभाम्[३४९] ।

ओणके तु महाशक्तिं[३५०] अपवर्गविकासिनीम्[३५१] ।। ७६ ।।
परानन्दसमायुक्तां पुष्पचापकरोद्यताम्[३५२] ।

च्छायाच्छत्रे तु चण्डिन्यां ऊर्ध्वकेशीं महौजसीम्[३५३] ।। ७७ ।।
ऊर्ध्वकेशसमोपेतां[३५४] मन्त्रमातृकरोद्यताम्[३५५] ।

(I salute) the frightening Ūrdhvakeśī (Upraised Hair) who, auspicious, holds a drinking vessel and (resides) in Karavīra,[132] the cremation ground, along with Nagnavāsa (Naked) (37). (69cd-70ab)

I salute (the goddess) called Cchinnamuṇḍā (Severed Head)[133] (who resides) in Laṁguḍa along with Krodharāja (King of Anger). Holding a knife, she destroys sin (38). (70cd-71ab)

(I salute the goddess) Kāmalakṣmī (Wealth of Passion), the mistress of the universe (jagatpati) who, in the form of a triangle, (resides) in the cremation ground (called) Kāmaśara[134] along with Manmatha (39). (71cd-72ab)

(I salute the goddess) Trikoṇā (Triangle) (who resides) in the cremation ground called Ekakoṇa along with Triśira (Three Heads).[135] Her hand is adorned with a man's head and she wears red clothes (40). (72cd-73ab)

I salute (the goddess) Mātaṇgī (the Sweeper), the mistress of Kula, she holds in her hand an anklet and (resides) in the cremation ground (called) Ekavīra[136] along with Mātaṇgīśa (Lord of the Sweepers) (41). (73cd-74ab)

(I salute) the supreme (goddess) Śivādūtī (Jackal Messenger) who, praised by both gods and demons, bears a bow and arrow and (resides) in Ḍohara[137] along with Hayaśīrṣa (Horse Head) (42). (74cd-75ab)

(I salute the goddess) Mahāsiddhā (Great Accomplished One), who unfolds the path of the Siddhas. Auspicious, she bears a great weapon and (resides) on Śrīparvata[138] along with the Liṅga of Light (jyotirliṅga) (43). (75cd-76ab)

(I salute the goddess) Mahāśakti (Great Energy), who unfolds liberation. In her upraised hand she holds a flower bow and (resides) in Oṇaka[139] along with Parānanda (Supreme Bliss) (44). (76cd-77ab)

(I salute the goddess) Caṇḍinyā[140] whose hair is upraised and who is very mighty. In her upraised hand she holds the mother of mantras and (she resides) in Cchāyācchatra[141] with Ūrdhvakeśa (Upraised Hair) (45). (77cd-78ab)

शैलपृष्ठे[३५६] तु त्रिजटां शैलराजसमायुताम् ॥ ७८ ॥
महाडमरुकहस्तां[३५७] च तमान्धभयहारिणीम्[३५८] ।

हक्कडोक्के[३५९] रुद्रशक्तिं[३६०] भगाख्यां[३६१] सिद्धवासनाम्[३६२] ॥ ७९ ॥
श्रीकण्ठसहितां[३६३] नौमि अग्निज्वालाकलान्विताम्[३६४] ।

देवीकोट्टे महामायां इषुपाशकरान्विताम् ॥ ८० ॥
विकरालसमोपेतां संसारभयनाशनीम्[३६५] ।

महामायावने[३६६] घोरे चण्डकापालिनीं शुभाम् ॥ ८१ ॥
प्रचण्डसंयुतां नौमि सरसृङ्गकरोद्यताम्[३६७] ।

श्रीमच्चन्द्रपुरे रम्ये चिञ्चिनीकुलमालिनीम्[३६८] ॥ ८२ ॥
लम्बोदरसमायुक्तां तडित्कोटिकरोद्यताम्[३६९] ।

महामलयदेशे तु महामन्त्रमहेश्वरीम्[३७०] ॥ ८३ ॥
चक्रेश्वरसमोपेतां कूष्माण्डायुधहस्तिकाम्[३७१] ।

मालवे[३७२] तु महाकालीं कालकङ्कालहस्तिकाम् ॥ ८४ ॥
मेघनादसमायुक्तां[३७३] ज्ञानविज्ञानदायिकाम्[३७४] ।

श्रीमत्केदारनिलयां[३७५] संस्थितारे (?) तु मालिनीम् ॥ ८५ ॥
सदाशिवसमोपेतां नौम्यहं शूलहस्तिकाम्[३७६] ।

महालक्ष्मीवने घोरे महालक्ष्मीं[३७७] जगत्सुखाम्[३७८] ॥ ८६ ॥
नौमि तुम्बुरुसंयुक्तां वरदाभयगोचराम्[३७९] ।

(I salute the goddess) Trijaṭā (who resides) in Śailapṛṣṭha[142] with Śailarāja (King of the Mountains). Holding a great double-headed drum, she removes the fear of the dense darkness (of phenomenal existence) (46). (78cd-79ab)

I salute Rudra's energy called Bhaga (Yoni) and whose (cosmic) idea (vāsanā) is (fully) realised. Endowed with the energy of fire's flaming power, (she resides) in Hakkaḍokka[143] along with Śrīkaṇṭha (47). (79cd-80ab)

(I salute the goddess) Mahāmāyā who, holding in her hands an arrow and a noose, destroys the fear of transmigratory existence. (She resides) in Devikoṭṭa[144] with Vikarāla (Very Horrific) (48). (80cd-81ab)

I salute the auspicious (goddess) Caṇḍakāpālinī (Violent Skull Bearer) who (resides) in the terrible forest of Mahāmāyā[145] along with Pracaṇḍa (Most Violent) and carries in her upraised hands an arrow and a horn (49). (81cd-82ab)

(I salute the goddess) Ciñcinīkulamālinī[146] who holds in her upraised hand countless thunderbolts and (resides) in the venerable and beautiful Candrapura along with Lambodara (Big Belly) (50). (82cd-83ab)

(I salute the goddess) Mahāmantramaheśvarī (Great Goddess of the Great mantra) who holds in her hand as an attribute a watermelon and (resides) in the Land of Mahāmalaya[147] along with Cakreśvara (Lord of the Wheel) (51). (83cd-84ab)

(I salute the goddess) Mahākālī who holds in her hand the skeleton of death. The bestower of knowledge and wisdom, she resides in Mālava[148] along with Meghanāda (Sound of the Clouds) (52). (84cd-85ab)

I salute (the goddess) Mālinī whose abode is the venerable Kedāra[149] and who, holding a spear, (resides) in Saṁsthitāra (?) along with Sadāśiva (53). (85cd-86ab)

I salute (the goddess) Mahālakṣmī, the joy of the universe who, bestowing boons and fearlessness, (resides) in the terrible forest of Mahālakṣmī along with Tumburu[150] (54). (86cd-87ab)

क्षेत्रोपक्षेत्रसंदोहा:[३८०] चतु:पञ्चाश[३८१] कीर्तिता: ।। ८७ ।।
पीठोपपीठसंदोहान्[३८२] दशान्यान्[३८३] कीर्तयामि ते[३८४] ।
पूजाक्रमविधानेन[३८५] कथयामि समासत:[३८६] ।। ८८ ।।

चन्द्रद्वीपे[३८७] कुलालाख्या[३८८] विद्याराजसमन्विताम् ।
टङ्कटीकरहस्ता[३८९] तु पश्चिमे प्रणमामि ताम्[३९०] ।। ८९ ।।

रक्ता[३९१] कराला[३९२] चण्डाक्षी[३९३] महोच्छुष्मा[३९४] तु भैरवीम्[३९५] ।
ॐकारे चाग्निकां नौमि जप्यमालाकरोद्यताम्[३९६] ।। ९० ।।

जालन्धरस्थिता[३९७] देवी[३९८] कामलक्ष्मी[३९९] जगत्प्रभाम्[४००] ।
फलेश्वरसमोपेता[४०१] अलक्ष्मीतमनाशनीम्[४०२] ।। ९१ ।।[४०३]

पूर्णगिर्ये[४०४] महाग्रीवा[४०५] मुण्डखट्वाङ्गधारिणीम्[४०६] ।
पूर्णेश्वरसमायुक्ता[४०७] वन्देऽहं[४०८] सर्वमङ्गलाम्[४०९] ।। ९२ ।।

मनोद्भवा[४१०] कामरूपे काद्यखट्वाङ्गहस्तिकाम्[४११] ।
कामेश्वरसमोपेतां नित्यं नौम्यपराजिताम्[४१२] ।। ९३ ।।

तिस्रपीठे त्रिभुवनां त्रिदशाधिपतीश्वरीम्[४१३] ।
कपालदण्डहस्तां तु वरदां विश्वरूपिणीम्[४१४] ।। ९४ ।।[४१५]

कृतिवाससमोपेता[४१६] चामुण्डा[४१७] मुण्डधारिणीम्[४१८] ।
एकाम्रे[४१९] संस्थिता[४२०] देवीं नमाम्यशुभहारिणीम्[४२१] ।। ९५ ।।

अग्निकेन समोपेता[४२२] क्षुरधारकरार्पिताम्[४२३] ।
कामकोट्टे[४२४] मोक्षलक्ष्मी[४२५] नमामि श्रीविवृद्धये[४२६] ।। ९६ ।।

The Last Ten Sites

(Thus),[151] fifty-four meeting grounds (saṁdoha), primary and secondary fields have been extolled. I will tell you of ten other meeting grounds, primary and secondary sacred seats. I will speak of them in brief, in accord with the prescription laid down for the liturgy (pūjākrama). (87cd-88)

I salute (the goddess) called Kulālā (Potter Woman)[152] who holds in her hand an axe and (who resides) in Candradvīpa[153] in the west along with Vidyārāja (King of Wisdom)[154] (55). (89)

[155]I salute (the goddess) Agnikā in (the sacred seat of) Oṁkāra.[156] She is the Bhairavī Mahocchuṣmā who holds in her upraised hand a rosary. Her eyes wrathful (caṇḍākṣī), she is red (raktā) and horrific (karālā)[157] (56). (90)

(I salute) the goddess Kāmalakṣmī (Wealth of Passion), who is the light of the universe. She destroys the darkness of misfortune (alakṣmī) and resides in Jālandhara, along with Phaleśvara (the Lord of the Fruit)[158] (57). (91)

I salute (the goddess) Mahāgrīvā (Great Neck) who, carring a severed head and an ascetic's staff, is everything auspicious and (resides) in Pūrṇagirya along with Pūrṇeśvara (the Full Lord) (58). (92)

I constantly salute (the goddess) Aparājitā (Unconquered)[159] who holds a skull (kādya) and ascetic's staff and, born of the mind, (resides) in Kāmarūpa along with Kāmeśvara (59). (93)

(I salute) the omniform (goddess) Tribhuvanā (Three Worlds),[160] the mistress of the gods who, holding a skull and a staff, bestows boons and (resides) in Tisrapīṭha (60).[161] (94)

I salute the goddess Cāmuṇḍā who removes all that is inauspicious.[162] Holding a severed head, (she resides) in Ekāmra along with Kṛtivāsa[163] (61). (95)

In order to develop the power of sovreignty (śrī), I salute (the goddess) Mokṣalakṣmī (Wealth of Liberation)[164] in whose hand is a razor[165] and who resides in Kāmakoṭṭa along with Agnika (62). (96)

अस्वरां[४२७] तु महादेवीं[४२८] नित्यमर्बुदवासिनीम्[४२९] ।
अर्बुदेश्वरसंयुक्तां नौमि विघ्नार्तिहारिणीम्[४३०] ॥ ९७ ॥

हिरण्यपुरसंस्थां[४३१] तु परां शिवसमायुताम्[४३२] ।
ज्ञानपुस्तकहस्तां[४३३] तु परमार्थफलप्रदाम्[४३४] ॥ ९८ ॥[४३५]

क्षेत्रोपक्षेत्रसंदोहे[४३६] स्थिता[४३७] भूचक्रमातरः[४३८] ।
क्षेत्रपालसमोपेताः[४३९] कीर्तयेद् यः समाहितः[४४०] ॥ ९९ ॥
प्रातरुत्थाय[४४१] मन्त्रज्ञः[४४२] स्वप्नकालेऽथवा[४४३] सुधीः ।
आद्यपीठे[४४४] क्रमाग्रे तु योगे[४४५] समयमण्डले ॥ १०० ॥
युक्तोऽपि पातकैर्घोरैर्देवीनां[४४६] सम्मतो भवेत्[४४७] ।

पितृहा मातृहन्ता[४४८] च ब्रह्महा[४४९] गोघ्न एव च ॥ १०१ ॥
ब्रुणहा[४५०] पशुहन्ता वा पापिष्टो[४५१] गुरुतल्पगः ।
वीरद्रव्यापहारी[४५२] च प्रमादात् समयच्युतः ॥ १०२ ॥
मन्त्राचारविलुप्तात्मा[४५३] पीठानां[४५४] कीर्तनादपि[४५५] ।
सर्वपातकनिर्मुक्तो[४५६] नैव पश्यति दुर्गतिम्[४५७] ॥ १०३ ॥

यः पुनः[४५८] शुद्धभावात्मा[४५९] त्रिकालं[४६०] परिकीर्तयेत्[४६१] ।
प्राप्नोति चिन्तितान् कामान् मातॄणां[४६२] वल्लभो भवेत्[४६३] ॥ १०४ ॥

कुण्डे वा मण्डले वापि[४६४] प्रतिमायां पटेऽपि[४६५] वा ।
लिङ्गे[४६६] दक्षिणमूर्तौ[४६७] वा[४६८] जलमध्यगतोऽपि[४६९] वा ॥ १०५ ॥
त्रिकालमेककालं[४७०] वा यः[४७१] पठेत्[४७२] सुसमाहितः[४७३] ।
विषशस्त्रजलाग्निभ्यो[४७४] व्याधिभूतग्रहैरपि ॥ १०६ ॥
अजितः सुचिरं कालं जीवते[४७५] निरुपद्रवः[४७६] ।

सबीजं[४७७] साधयेत् सम्यक् सफलं नात्र संशयः ॥ १०७ ॥
निष्फलं बीजरहितं[४७८] अरण्ये[४७९] रोपितं[४८०] यथा ।

I salute the great goddess Asvarā[166] who removes the pain of the obstacles (of life) and resides perpetually in Arbuda[167] along with Arbudeśvara (63). (97)

[168](I salute the goddess) Parā (the Supreme) who, carring in her hand the book of knowledge, bestows the fruit of the Supreme Reality and resides along with Śiva in Hiraṇyapura[169] (64). (98)

The Mothers of the Wheel of the Earth (bhūcakra), along with the guardians of the field,[170] reside in the primary and secondary fields and meeting grounds (saṁdoha). The knower of mantra who, attentive, rising (from sleep) in the morning, praises them in the First Sacred Seat, in front of the Krama (kramāgre) within the Maṇḍala of the Rule (samayamaṇḍala)[171] in (a state of) union (yoga), or the wise man who does so even when asleep, is honoured by the goddesses, even though he has committed terrible sins.[172] (99-101ab)

O beloved, by praising the sacred seats, (even) one who has fallen from the practice of mantra never sees misfortune and is freed of all sin. (This is true even for one) who has killed his father, murdered his mother, slain a Brahmin, a cow or a foetus, killed animals or who, the most sinful of men, has had sex with his teacher's wife. (He may even be one who has) stolen the sacrificial substances of the heroes, or who, through negligence, has fallen from the Rule or the practice of mantra. (101-103)

Again, one who is pure by nature and praises (the sacred sites all the) three times (of the day)[173] gets the things he desires and sets his mind on and is the beloved of the Mothers.[174] (104)

He who, well-attentive, reads (this hymn to the Mothers) in the presence of a firepit (kuṇḍa), in front of a maṇḍala, statue or even a cloth (with an image of the deity), a Liṅga, or a propitious idol[175] or standing in water, during the three times (of day) or (just) at one, is not overcome by poison, weapons, water, fire, disease, ghosts or (inauspicious) planets. Unconquered, he lives long, free of troubles. (105-107ab)

(If the hymn is recited) with the seed-syllables, one attains (one's goal) properly and (one's efforts are) certainly fruitful. Devoid of the seed-syllables it is fruitless, like (seed) planted in a jungle. (107cd-108ab)

अट्टहासात् समारभ्य यावत्[४८१] त[४८२] हाटकं पुरम् ।। १०८ ।।
तावद् मन्त्रान्वयो ह्येष अणिमादिफलप्रदः[४८३] ।

श्रीनाथ उवाच

अट्टहासादिपीठाणा[४८४] हेमपीठान्तकावधिः ।। १०९ ।।
तावत् पीठेषु सर्वेषु अशक्तोऽबीजपञ्चके ।
मातृकूटसमायोगात् तदुपायं वदस्व मे ।। ११० ।।

श्रीवक्रा उवाच[४८५]

अट्टहासादिपीठेषु कृत्वा वै दीपपञ्चकम् ।
तथैव मातृहृदयं हेमकूटस्य उच्चरेत् ।। १११ ।।
आद्यन्तोच्चारयोगेन सर्वे[४८६] मातृकुले[४८७] गताः ।

आद्यन्तकरणं योगं[४८८] सबीजकरणोत्तमम्[४८९] ।। ११२ ।।
अशक्तानां समाख्यातं श्रीगृहे तस्य सांप्रतम् ।
तस्माद् भुक्तिश्च[४९०] मुक्तिश्च[४९१] पीठानां कीर्तनाद् भवेत्[४९२] ।। ११३ ।।

आधाराः[४९३] स्तवराजस्य प्रणवाः पूर्वपश्चिमे[४९४] ।
गुप्तोच्चारकृते[४९५] सिद्धिर्यदि योगी च मन्त्रवित् ।। ११४ ।।

महाभये[४९६] समुत्पन्ने कपिलागोमयेन[४९७] तु ।
अष्टाष्टविधानेन[४९८] कारयेद्[४९९] वृत्तमण्डलम्[५००] ।। ११५ ।।

शिवरत्नं तथान्येषु एकान्ते यागमन्दिरे[५०१] ।

The series of mantras (mantrānvaya), beginning with Aṭṭahāsa and ending with the town Hāṭaka (i.e. Hiraṇyapura),[176] bestows as its fruit (the eight yogic powers) starting with the power to make oneself small at will. (108cd-109ab)

Śrīnātha said:

(The adept) is powerless in all the sacred seats starting with Aṭṭahāsa and ending with Hemapīṭha (i.e. Hiraṇyapura) (when) the Five Syllables are not present (in their mantras) because they are not linked with the Peak syllable of the Mothers. Tell me the remedy for this. (109cd-110)

The venerable (goddess) Vakrā said:

Having fashioned the Five Lamps (dīpapañcaka) in the sacred seats starting from Aṭṭahāsa, one should, in the same way, utter the Heart of the Mothers (mātṛhṛdaya) of the Golden Peak (hemakūṭa). By the conjunction of the utterance of (the seed-syllables) at the beginning and the end all the (sites and the rest) merge into the aggregate (kula) of the Mothers. (111-112ab)

The union (yoga), which is the instrument (i.e. the Five Praṇavas) at the beginning and end (of mantras) and which is the most excellent manner of infusing seed-syllables (sabījakaraṇa) (into them) in the Venerable House (śrīgṛha) (of the Kubjikā Tantras), has now been explained for those who are powerless, by virtue of which (the adept enjoys) worldly benefits (bhoga) and (attains) liberation by praising the sacred seats. (111-113)

The *Praṇava*s at the beginning and the end (pūrvapaścima) are the foundations of (this) the King of Hymns (stavarāja). One (attains) success (siddhi) and the yogi (becomes) a knower of mantra when (mantras) have been uttered in secret.[177] (114)

The Ritual

When great fear arises,[178] one should cause to fashion a circular maṇḍala in accord with the prescribed method of eight times eight (parts)[179] with the dung of a brown speckled cow (kapilā). (115)

(This maṇḍala is called) Śiva's Jewel (śivaratna). (It should be fashioned) in a solitary place in a pavilion where a fire sacrifice is performed (yāgamandira) and in other similar (places). (116ab)

साधकानां[५०२] पुत्रकानां[५०३] स्तवराजस्य सेवनात् ॥ ११६ ॥
सुगन्धैः श्वेतपुष्पैश्च कुंकुमेन सुवासितैः ।[५०४]
धूपैः श्रीखण्डगन्धाद्यैः[५०५] सुमनेन पलालिना[५०६] ॥ ११७ ॥
नैवेद्यभक्षपानाद्यैर्दीपैर्नानाविधैः[५०७] शुभैः[५०८] ।
मध्ये तु कलशं स्थाप्य वीरद्रव्यप्रपूरितम् ॥ ११८ ॥
ऐंकारमासनं[५०९] दत्वा तेन कन्दं तु लाञ्छितम् ।

स्वयं चार्णं महापिण्डं करौ[५१०] देहे तु विन्यसेत् ॥ ११९ ॥

पिण्डान्वितेन देहेन पीठयागं[५११] तु कारयेत् ।
मध्ये[५१२] हिरण्यं[५१३] संपूज्यं[५१४] पश्चिमं[५१५] सर्वकामदम् ॥ १२० ॥

अन्ये[५१६] विलोममार्गेण[५१७] यावद् वै अट्टहासकम् ।
पीठयागं तु कर्तव्यं पाद्वन्तं[५१८] श्रीपुरादिना ॥ १२१ ॥

पीठोपपीठसंदोहक्षेत्रोपक्षेत्रनायकाः[५१९] ।
सर्वे[५२०] ते द्वारभूतास्तु शिवपीठस्य मध्यतः ॥ १२२ ॥

युक्तास्ते प्रेतनाथेन शिवव्याप्त्या हरन्ति ते ।
तत्रस्थाः[५२१] पूजिता मन्त्राः क्रियामार्गावलम्बकाः[५२२] ॥ १२३ ॥
ज्ञानं ददन्ति[५२३] सर्वेषां भक्त्या संतर्पिताः शुभाः ।

तस्मात् सर्वं[५२४] प्रयत्नेन[५२५] हैरण्यं[५२६] पीठमुत्तमम् ॥ १२४ ॥
तत्र पूजा कृता[५२७] नित्यं सर्वकामानवाप्नुयात् ।

दिग्विदिक्षु गताः[५२८] पीठा[५२९] बाह्यतो[५३०] मध्यमासने[५३१] ॥ १२५ ॥
गर्भस्थाने महापीठं त्वेवं[५३२] क्रमेण योजयेत्[५३३] ।
चतुःषष्टिस्तु[५३४] दीपानि पीठानि परिवर्तयेत् ॥ १२६ ॥

Supplying a seat for it (in the form of the) syllable AIṀ by which the base (kanda) is marked, a jar filled with the sacrificial substance of Heroes is placed in the middle (of the maṇḍala). When this has been done, (the maṇḍala should be worshipped) by attending to the King of Hymns, the adepts (sādhaka) and spiritual sons (putraka) with fragrant white flowers, well-smeared with vermilion and incenses that smell of sandalwood and the like, pleasing meat, offerings of food and drink etc. and with auspicious lamps of many kinds.[180] (116cd-119ab)

(The officiant) should himself deposit the letter (known as) the Great Body (mahāpiṇḍa)[181] on (his own) hands and body. (119)

The Sacrifice of the Sacred Seats should be performed with a body that bears (this) seed-syllable (piṇḍa). In the centre one should worship the golden (sacred seat i.e. Hiraṇyapura), which is the last one and bestows all that one desires. (120)

The rest (should be worshipped) in the reverse order up to (the first which is) Aṭṭahāsaka. Sacrifice is offered to the sacred seats (by uttering their mantras) beginning with (the utterance) 'venerable site' (śrīpura) and ending with 'pādu'[182]. (121)

All the lords of the primary and the secondary sacred seats and meeting grounds as well as those of the fields, primary and secondary, serve as doors to Śiva's sacred seat, which is in the middle. (122)

Conjoined (in this way) to Śiva (Pretanātha, lit. Lord of Ghosts) they save (their devotees) by virtue of Śiva's pervasive presence (vyāpti). Established there and worshipped, mantras linked with ordered ritual action (kriyāmārgāvalambaka) bestow knowledge to all (when), auspicious, libations are offered to them with devotion. (123-124ab)

Thus (one should make) every effort * * *[183] Hairaṇya is the most excellent of sacred seats. (124cd)

When the rite of adoration (pūjā) is performed there regularly (nityam), (the adept) gets everything he wants. (124-125ab)

The sacred seats are located externally (on the circumference of the maṇḍala) in the primary and intermediate directions. In due order, one should place the great sacred seat in this way, in the location of the womb on the seat in the centre (of the maṇḍala). One should (then symbolically) transform (parivartayet) the sixty-four lamps into sacred seats.[184] (125cd-126)

अहोरात्रोषितो[५३५] भूत्वा स्वपेकाकी[५३६] सुयन्त्रितः[५३७] ।
ब्रह्मचारीव्रतस्थश्च पिशितालिविवर्जितः ॥ १२७ ॥

तत्र जप्यं प्रकर्तव्यं मात्रत्रिंशतिजं[५३८] यतः ।
प्रभाते[५३९] विमले[५४०] मन्त्री वीरभोज्यं तु कारयेत्[५४१] ॥ १२८ ॥

ततः क्षमापयेत् पीठान्[५४२] प्रणिपत्य मुहुर्मुहुः[५४३] ।
निर्विघ्नस्तु ततो मन्त्री[५४४] सर्वं भवति सिद्धिदम्[५४५] ॥ १२९ ॥

उपसर्गग्रहादीनि[५४६] यक्षकूष्माण्डगुह्यकाः[५४७] ।
शत्रोरुत्कटदेशे[५४८] तु राजाभङ्गे विशेषतः ॥ १३० ॥
मुच्यते[५४९] स[५५०] उपसर्गेभ्यो[५५१] धनधान्यमवाप्नुयात् ।
परोपघाटकृत्येषु[५५२] मारणोच्चाटनादिषु ॥ १३१ ॥

पापपङ्काद् हि मुच्येत निर्मलं वास्त्रं[५५३] वर्तते ।
पीठानां[५५४] क्रमयोगेन पापात्मा न पुनर्भवेत् ॥ १३२ ॥

प्राप्नुयादभीप्सितान्[५५५] कामान्[५५६] मृतवत् सोऽपि यो[५५७] भवेत् ।
जीववत्सा[५५८] भवति[५५९] पुत्रिणी तदभिषेचनात्[५६०] ॥ १३३ ॥

पुत्रार्थी[५६१] लभते पुत्रान् सुभगत्वमवाप्नुयात्[५६२] ।
विद्यार्थी लभते विद्यां[५६३] धनार्थी धनवान् भवेत्[५६४] ॥ १३४ ॥

दारार्थी लभते दारां[५६५] रूपयौवनगर्विताम् ।
भूम्यर्थी लभते भूमिं[५६६] पानार्थी पानमाप्नुयात् ॥ १३५ ॥

ज्ञानार्थी लभते ज्ञानं समयार्थी समयं लभेत्[५६७] ।
मन्त्राराधनशीलस्तु[५६८] जायते निरुपद्रवः ॥ १३६ ॥
योगाभ्यासरतो नित्यं प्राप्य सिद्धिं[५६९] परं व्रजेत्[५७०] ।

Once (the adept) has resided (there in the sacrificial enclosure) for a night and a day (ahorātroṣito bhūtvā), well-controlled, he should sleep alone. Observing a vow of celibacy, (his diet should be) devoid of meat and liquor. (127)

The repetition of mantra (japya) generated with (the Vidyā) of thirty-two measures should be performed there. In the pure (light) of dawn, the reciter of mantra should eat a Hero's meal (vīrabhojya) (of meat and wine). (128)

Then he should propitiate the sacred seats, prostrating (before them) repeatedly. Thus the reciter of mantra (is) free of obstacles and everything gives (him) success.[185] (129)

He is freed from troubles (including) misfortune, (malevolent) planets, tree spirits (yakṣa), goblins (kūṣmāṇḍa) and (evil) cave-dwelling spirits (guhyaka). (He is protected) in an enemy's violent land and especially when the king is deposed. He acquires wealth and is at ease (even when he is the object of) the violent magic of others such as (incantations inducing) murder (maraṇa), expulsion (uccāṭana)[186] and the like. (130-131)

He is freed from the mud of sin and (remains as pure as) a clean cloth. By successive union with the sacred seats, he does not become a sinner again. (132)

Even one who is (as powerless) as a corpse gets the things he most desires. Consecrated with that, (one's) daughter becomes a mother (jīvantavatsā)[187]. (133)

The man who desires a son gets (many) sons and good fortune[188]. The student acquires knowledge and the man who desires wealth becomes wealthy.[189] (134)

The man who wants a wife gets one proud of her beauty and youth. The man who desires land gets land and he who wants drink, gets drink. (135)

The man who desires wisdom gets wisdom and he who desires the Rule, gets the Rule. He whose habit is to worship with (these) mantras is freed of (all) troubles. He who is constantly dedicated to the practice of (this) Yoga acquires yogic power (siddhi) and reaches the supreme (state). (136-137ab)

पादविद्याप्रसङ्गेन[५७१] पीठस्तवप्रकाशितम् ।। १३७ ।।
समस्तव्यस्तप्राप्तिस्तु[५७२] मन्त्रोच्चारणधारणात् ।
अन्वयेऽस्मिन् समस्तं तु स्तवपाठमुदाहृतम्[५७३] ।। १३८ ।।[५७४]

इत्याद्यावतारे महामन्थानभैरवयज्ञे[५७५] अन्वये सप्तकोटिप्रमाणे मेरुमार्गविनिर्गते
लक्षपादाधिके[५७६] आद्यपीठावतारिते[५७७] कादिभेदे[५७८] पीठस्तवाधिकारे[५७९]
विद्यापीठमार्गे विमलषट्कनिर्णये कादिभेदे आज्ञापारमेश्वरे
स्वामिनीमते श्रीचतुर्विंशत्सहस्रसंहितायां अव्वाक्रम–
भाषिते[५८०] विद्याधिकारो[५८१] नामानन्दः ।। १६ ।।

The Hymn to the Sacred Seats has been revealed in terms of sections (of mantras) and as (a series of) Vidyās (pādavidyāprasaṅgena). One obtains (everything, both) collectively and individually, by maintaining (one's practice) of reciting (this) mantra. (Thus) all that concerns the recitation of the Hymn in this tradition has been explained. (137cd-138)

This is the (sixteenth) chapter called Concerning the venerable Hymn to the Sacred Seats. It belongs to the primordial descent into the great sacrifice of the Churning Bhairava in the tradition (anvaya) that consists of seventy million (verses) that has emerged on the Path of Meru and (extends) for more than a hundred thousand quarter (verses). It has been brought (down to earth) into the first sacred seat along the path of the Seat of Knowledge (vidyāpīṭha). It is the ultimate purport of the Pure Six Thousand (verses vimalaṣaṭka) in the division beginning with `Kā' in the venerable scripture of twenty-four thousand (verses) (known as) the Svāminīmata of the Supreme Lord's command as uttered within the Tradition of the Mother (avvākrama).

The

Kumārikākhaṇḍa

of the Manthānabhairavatantra

Volume Two
Part Two

Notes to the
Edition and Translation of
Chapters Eight to Sixteen

Mark S. G. Dyczkowski

CONTENTS OF THE NOTES OF VOLUME TWO

Contents i-iii

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Eight 1

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Eight 9

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Nine 43

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Nine 47

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Ten 64

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Ten 70

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Eleven 87

Notes of the Translation of the Chapter Eleven 94

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Twelve 138

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Twelve 142

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Thirteen 145

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Thirteen 156

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Fourteen 219

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Fourteen 242

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Fifteen 277

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Fifteen 282

Notes of the Sanskrit Text of Chapter Sixteen 287

Notes of the Translation of Chapter Sixteen 298

Appendix I: The Code of Fifty Letters 342

Appendix II: The Main Forms of the Kubjikā's Samayā Vidyā 357
The Thirty-two Forms of the Vidyā 365

Appendix III: The Six Dūtīs of Kubjikā's Limbs 371
1) Kālikā – the Dūtī of the Heart 372
2) Juṣṭācāṇḍālī – the Dūtī of the Head 374
3) Śikhāsvacchanda – the Deity of the Topknot 376
4) Śivā – the Dūtī of the Armour 388
5) Raktacāmuṇḍā – the Dūtī of the Eye 390
6) Guhyakālī – the Dūtī of the Weapon 392
The Tantras related to the Six Dūtīs 396

Appendix IV: The Deposition and Goddesses of Kubjikā's Vidyā 398

Appendix V 405

Appendix VI: The Principles of Passion, Poison and the Stainless 407
The Stainless (nirañjana) 412
The Principle of Poison 415
The Principle of Passion 417

Appendix VII 420

Appendix VIII: The Hymn to the Sacred Seats 421
The Twenty-four Sites according to Tantrasadbhāva 430
The Twenty-four sites according to the Āmnāyamañjari 434
The Remaining Forty Sites according to the Ambāmatasaṁhitā 434
The Last Ten Sites of the Pīṭhastava of the Ambāmatasaṁhitā 442

Diagrams

1. The First Formation of the Meruprastāra 20
2. The Second Formation of the Meruprastāra 25
3. The Meruprastāra 29
4. The New and the Full Moon 34
5. Navātman 56
6. The Triangle, Hexagram and Sacred Seats 117

Figures

1. Kālikā 372
2. Juṣṭācāṇḍālī 374
3. Śikhāsvacchanda 378
4. Svacchandabhairava 380
5. Śivā 388
6. Raktacāmuṇḍā 390
7. Guhyakālī 393

Tables

1. Table of Opposites 32
2. Table of the Four Siddhas of the Goddess's Vidyā 35
3. Table of Contents of the Syllable HSKHPHREṀ 52
4. Table of Correspondences between Praṇavas, Seats and Vowels 59
5. Table of the Faces and Limbs of the Goddess 78
6. First Table of the Goddess's Six Faces 84
7. Second Table of the Goddess's Six Faces 84
8. Table of the Goddess's Six Faces and Limbs 85
9. Table of the Inner Wheels and the Sacred Seats 97
10. Table of the Six Limbs and Seats 116
11. Table of Three Transmissions and the Three Vows 285
12. Ten Extra Sites of the Kubjikāmata (1) 321
13. Ten Extra Sites of the Kubjikāmata (2) 321
14. Table of the Deities, Wheels and Tantras of the Goddess's Limbs 397
15. Table of the Goddesses of the Vidyā 405
16. The Eight Mothers and their Sacred Fields 420
17. Table of the Twenty-four sites according to the Kubjikāmata 426
18. The Primary Fields (kṣetra) according to the Tantrasadbhāva 433
19. The Secondary Fields (upakṣetra) according to the Tantrasadbhāva 434
20. The Meeting Grounds (sandoha) according to the Tantrasadbhāva 434
21. Table of the Twenty-four Sites according to the Āmnāyamañjarī 435
22. Table of sites of the middle portion of the Pīṭhastava of the AS 440
23. Table of the Thirty Sites of the Middle Portion of the Pīṭhastava 441
24. Table of Additional Sites of the Pīṭhastava of the Ambāmatasaṁhitā 442
25. Comparative Table of the Last Ten Sites of the Pīṭhastava 445

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER EIGHT

1. च्: श्रीकुब्जिकोवाच; छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच. All other MSs except ज्: श्रीवक्रा उवाच; KuKh 59:
श्रीकौलीश उवाच 2. Verses 8/1-2a are repeated with minor variants below in 27/1-2a and 59/1-2a. 3. क्: सिद्धित्वं; ख्: ?; ग्, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ठ्: सिद्धित्व; घ्, च्, ज्: –त्व 4. ख्: ?; झ्: स्वामी; KuKh 27 सिद्धे (क्, ग्: सिद्ध) उमे (घ्, छ्: जगत्) स्वामि; KuKh 59: सिद्धे उमे स्वामि. See above, note to 5/40c and also note to 4/38c. 5. घ्, च्, छ्: आज्ञानाथे; KuKh 27 झ्: –नाथो. This is the vocative singular of the feminine आदिनाथा. Feminines may be formed ad hoc by simply suffixing a final long 'a' to a masculine stem ending in short 'a'. Compare the word कौलीशा in 8/2a derived from कौलीश–. 6. घ्, च्, छ्: –भवेत्
7 KuKh 27 घ्: कादि; छ्: काहि; झ्: क्रुहि 8. ङ्: सार
9. ङ्: –य 10. KuKh 59 घ्: प्रकटं:
11. All MSs except घ्, छ्, झ्: + ते in KuKh 27. 12. क्, ग्: कौ * शे
13. KuKh 27: पूजा–आगममण्डलम्; KuKh 59: सप्ताविंशद्विविक्रमम्
14. घ्: येण 15. ङ्: –र्ग; च्: –मार्गा 16. ङ्: –वर्त्तत
17. All MSs: मेरुं M → N. 18. घ्, च्, छ्: –ल 19. ठ्: सूक्ष्मं
20. च्, छ्: सुक्ष्मं; ठ्: सूक्ष्मं 21. M → N. See above, note to 7/12d.
22. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: –क उवाच; घ्, च्, छ्: –कुब्जिकोवाच 23. घ्, च्, छ्: या सा
24. ख्: –नंत; घ्, च्: –नन्तर्; छ्: परापरानन्तर्; ग्, ङ्, ज्: –नंत:
25. All Mss except झ्: मध्यगं 26. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ठ्: तस्येंच्छा
27. ठ्: शताद्धक 28. छ्: तस्योद्वारं
29. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: क्रमारुहे; ठ्: +।। ५।।; all other MSs: क्रमारुहेत्
30. See above, note to 4/51a. 31. घ्, ङ्, च्: षट्–; छ्, ज्: षद्विधं
32. See above, note to 1/5b. 33. घ्, छ्, ज्: पांसु– 34. छ्: –र्ण
35. The final anusvāra has been dropped for the metre.
36. I take this to be a dual compound and that, as such, it requires a dual ending. See above, note to 5/46d and cf. 37/50d. 37. IM 7.
38. All MSs: निरारुहेनारुहेऽ जन– 39. ग्: स्नातन 40. छ्: सुशुद्धेतां –. The instrumentals in this line mark the subject of the gerund कृत्वा. The same subject in the next line of the following verse is in the nominative. 41. क्: –न्या
42. All MSs: –पादुका: 43. घ्: हैमगोदन–. च्: –द्यौ; छ्: हेमगोदनवस्त्राद्यै
44. घ्, छ्, ठ्: सम्प्रोख्या; all other MSs: सस्त्रोख्या 45. झ्: पूज्यं
46. घ्: कुलागमावार्यो; all other MSs: –माचार्यो 47. IC.
48. All MSs except ख्, ग्, च्, छ्, झ्: तदन्तरम्
49. क्: मेरुचन्–; घ्, च्: मेरुन्मेरुप्रस्तारं; ठ्: मेरुवत्मेरु–. M → N. प्रस्तार– is virtually always treated as neuter throughout the text.
50. All MSs except झ्: सर्व्वा– 51. M → N. See above, note to 1/2c.
52. घ्: मांतृणां 53. By emending खटिका to खटि– the metre is set straight. It is possible that खटि was the original reading and that का was added in the course of the transmission of the text in order to restore the complete form of this word. However, as this may equally well be an irregularity and all manuscripts agree on the same reading, it has been retained in the edition. One wonders whether to emend to नवात्मखटिकां which is both grammatically correct and fits the metre.

54. The regular form is इष्ट्वा. यष्ट्वा, like the irregular यष्ट– (in 3/86c), is formed on the analogy of the infinitive of यज्, namely, यष्टुम्. Cf. below 27/48c, 46/117a, 49/53c and 50/12a. 55. All MSs: कर्मारिहो
56. विंशत्य– would be correct by too long for the metre. See above, note to 3/9c and 7/7c. 57. क्, ङ्: क्षत्रं
58. कर्तव्यम्, or the like, is required to complete the syntax.
59. घ्, च्: मंत्रं; छ्: मेत्रं 60. घ्, च्, छ्: तस्यानक्र–. Cf. 1/20b and note.
61. च्, छ्: भोगत्रयोदशा; all other MSs: भागत्रयोदशा
62. All MSs: –स्पष्टा 63. ज्: तिर्यग्भिश्चा–. See above, note to 7/13c.
64. IC. This quarter and the following two lines are missing in MS च्
65. घ्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: चा 66. See above, note to 2/25c.
67. क्: काष्ठकान्; घ्: कोष्कात्ण् कोष्ठकानाम्; छ्: कोट्यकात्; ठ्: कोष्टकानु। कोष्ठकानि would be correct but too long for the metre. 68. See above, note to 5/64d.
69. See above, note to 7/13c. 70. Missing in MS च्. 71. च्: * * * श्चैव
72a. ग्: पुन 72b. All MSs: नवधस्तद–
73. झ्: –दश:. Below in verse 8/31b we find the word दशाधिकम् in the sense of the number eleven. This is apparently a variant of the deviant form अधिकदश– which is a contraction of एकाधिको दश. The form अधिकादश may be construed as echoing the lengthening of the medial vowel of the common एकादश:. Were it not, that usage in this text allows for the possibility of suffixing (or prefixing) अधिक– to tens in the sense of 'plus one', one might simply emend the text here to read ततोऽ प्येकादश. 74. This line is missing in MSs घ्, च्, and छ् 75. ङ्: –धश्चैति
76. All MSs except ङ्: वारणेकं; झ्: वारुणकं; all other MSs: वारुणेकं
77. All MSs: –क्रम 78. All MSs: मेरुं च 79. See above, note to 5/64d. 80. All MSs: पीठस् 81. घ्, च्, छ्: तदधौ 82. ठ्: –पंचमं
83. ङ्: –तर 84. F→N. ठ्: –देवतांन्यध:
85. ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –तात्; ठ्: –धस्तात्. All other MSs: –दशा–
86. All MSs except ठ्: –श: 87. ङ्: –चिञ्चिनीनाथं
88. Note that भेद– is here in its regular masculine form, while in the majority of cases it is treated as neuter in this text.
89. All MSs: –क्रमोद्धृतम् M → N. 90. All MSs except च्: शेषान्य
91. IM 6 and 7. 92. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –रेखत:
93. ङ्: –रणुलोम–. It appears that the writer has tried to keep as many numbers as possible in the instrumental plural. Where this fails he uses other forms and compounds that fit the metre.
94. ङ्: –लुप्त; all other MSs: सविलुप्तं 95. छ्: लिं चरूपञ्
96. ङ्: –षोडश–; all other MSs: एकस्तु षोडशश्चैव. In this context (a group of) sixteen makes no sense. The second cardinal number has assumed the form of a numeral to fit the metre. 97. ज्: पंचभि:स्त्रीणि; ठ्: पंचभि: त्रीणि. See above, note to 1/2c. 98. All MSs: एकमेव 99. छ्: –र 100. All MSs: –रधशक्तिस्तु 101. The vowel between the two elements of this compound has been lengthened for the metre. 102. All MSs: –सिद्धाश्च 103. All MSs except ज्: –ऋकारश्च. The letters indicated in the following verses as constituting the Meruprastāra have been emended on the basis of the diagram of the Meruprastāra published by Schoterman (1981: 205, fig. 33, labelled, Sumeru Gahvara). A plural ending would be regular Sanskrit here. Cf. 8/29c and see above, note to 5/46d.

104. छ्: ऋ ञ ईकार–; All MSs except च्: ऋम इकार–. Note how the items in this list are sometimes masculine and at other times neuter. Again, copulative compounds are invariably treated as collective although they are not always neuter as grammar demands. Moreover, if they are direct objects of समुद्धरेत् in the previous line they should be accusatives. 105. ङ्: –श्चै *
106. ङ्: इका– 107. ग्: डटकार–; ठ्: डढ–; all other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: उट–. A plural ending is required here. 108. All MSs except घ्, च्: सव–. M → N. A dual ending is required here and in the next compound. See above, note to 5/46d. 109. ख्: –र *; ज्: फ– 110. All MSs: –लम्
111. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –र; ठ्: घ–एकार; all other MSs: घ–एकारं
112. झ्: धकार–; ग्: –थव. 113. क्, ख्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, ठ्: –कारणदृढश्चैव
114. Cf. 8/17d. ठ्: ड–उकार– 115. क्: ओड–; ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, झ्, ठ्: ओ उ–; च्:
ओकारश् 116. ङ्, च्, छ्, ज, थ्: –र 117. ठ्: ऌ झ ऋ
118. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: त्रयोडश: 119. All MSs: समाख्याता
120. All MSs: कथाख्यं 121. All MSs: अध
122. घ्: –निघण्टरोयिता; च्: –नित्यंतरोपिता; all other MSs: –निघण्टरोपिता. Presumably the initial vowel of the last constituent of this compound has been shortened for the metre. 123. All MSs: –न्ता 124. घ्: –ण
125. च्: अमृजं; all other MSs except घ्, छ्: अनुजं 126. छ्: मदेन्द्रञ्
127. All MSs except ज्, ठ्: रामणो
128. ङ्, ज्: तृकुटी–; ङ्: –मुखं 129. घ्: युंगलो; च्: *(?) युंगलो; all other MSs: पुंगलो
130. The final vowel of this word has been shortened for the metre.
131. घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: स्वरातं 132. घ्, च्: महा; छ्: महात्
133. Compare the form of this pseudo dual compound with that found above, 8/28a. 134. In this case मातरम् can be considered to be a deviant 'neuter' derivation of मातृ rather than the accusative of that word. Cf.
above 5/61c. See also above, note to 5/41b. 135. ठ्: जिह्वकं
136. YKh (1) 34/76c reads this name as: जटाधर–. However, the form जटाहाराम् is found consistantly through this text and जटाधरम् never is. See, for example, 8/53b
8/64b 8/81c 18/33b and 19/45b. 137. ङ्: –की; all other MSs: वासुकिं
138. All MSs: षोड–; च्: –तद्ब्रहं 139. क्: –वर्त
140. घ्, ङ्, झ्: द्विजयन्तिं; ज्: –जपति
141. क्: –रे; All other MSs except झ्: – र 142. छ्: –मञ्
143. घ्, च्: अच 144. ङ्: –व
145. ख्, ग्: –शंख:–; घ्, च्, छ्: –शंखतथा; ङ्: –शख:तथा 146. ङ्: –र
147. All MSs: विस्तरंण् 148. घ्: किचिद्; ठ्: किंचि 149. घ्: शिंहा–; ङ्: सिहा–
150. च्, छ्, ज्: +यां. छ्, ज्: –कां 151. ठ्: वै चात्र
152. च्: अजावामा–. Three other alternative forms of the word अमावस्या are recorded in lexicons viz. अमावास्या, अमावसी and अमावासी.
153. झ्: साम्प्रतोद्यं; all other MSs: साम्प्रताद्यं 154. च्: –स्यै
155. All MSs except झ्: –योनि. See above, note to 3/18a.
156. See below, 8/54b. 157. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –लोर्द्धेन
158. ग्: भदिनं; all other MSs except घ्, झ्, ठ्: भेदिनं

159. ठ्: –रे 160. ठ्: प्रोक्त
161. ङ्: अनन्तहनुमध्ये च; all other MSs: अनन्तहनुमान्–
162. M → N. 163. क्: आतं; घ्, च्, छ्: आन्त
164. ङ्: षा– 165. क्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: टोर्द्ध–; घ्, ङ्: टोर्द्ध–
166. ठ्: जि 167. All MSs: ह्वजा पत्यं
168. च्, ज्: हयान्तेनार्द्धमण्डितम्; छ्, ठ्: –र्द्धमण्डितं
169. All MSs: वीरबाह्वान्त– 170. ङ्: परमक्षरं IC. 171. ङ्: –तान्ते–
172. ङ्: –रद्धृतं 173. All MSs: –सूर्याभौ
174. क्: कपालेना–; छ्: कपाल–; ठ्: –नोर्द्ध–
175. घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: सिंहोद्यहनुमान् 176. All MSs: मयासौ
177. ङ्: परं 178. ठ्: –तः IC. Cf. 8/49d.
179. IM 6 → 7. See above, note to 3/12c.
180. घ्: आद्वख्यातं; च्, छ्: आट्टख्यातं 181. Here as in 8/45c धामन् is treated like a thematic noun for the sake of the metre. Elsewhere, for example, in 8/39b, its regular non-thematic form is also attested. 182. च्, ठ्: एभानु–, ङ्:
–संगत् 183. All MSs except झ्: भेद्य 184.The regular order of the components of this compound has been reversed. 185. ङ्: –माशिर–; च्: –सिंहस्य 186. All MSs:
उन्मत्तोर्द्ध 187. ख्: तस्यासेनकमेवीरं; ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: तस्यासे–. IM 5 → 6.
188. ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –दिनं 189. All MSs except घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: चतुर्दश
190. घ्: –शेस्यने 191. घ्, च्: शिरस्यान्तं
192. The ending of this compound has been dropped for the metre.
193. ठ्: पंचमंदश; all other MSs except च्, छ्: –दश 194. All MSs: षोडस्य
195. छ्, ज्: तद्गतं पुरे; ठ्: तङ्गतं पुर; all other MSs: तङ्गतं पुर
196. All MSs: षोडशा 197. The rest of this line is missing in MS घ्.
198. All MSs: –दश 199. ठ्: तावत्पंच; all other MSs: तावद्यंच
200. The regular form – अष्टादशमम् – would make the fifth syllable long and the sixth short. Cf. below 23/6b, 29b, 57/80c, and 68/3a.
201. This line is missing in MS घ्. 202. च्, छ्: –शिक–.
203. All MSs: व्यापकः 204. This line is missing in MS घ्.
205. ठ्: चत्वारस् 206. N → M. 207. ठ्: एहिकाभुवि
208. All MSs: –त्रये दानीं 209. ख्: विद्या * ह्वा 210. ङ्, ज्: –नं
211. छ्: –मारतं; all other MSs except घ्, झ्: –शिरमा– 212. घ्: रौद्रस्य
213. ग्: एकान–; घ्, छ्: एकून–; ज्: एकोनविंस. The required inflected ordinal does not fit the metre. See above, note to 3/9c.
214. All MSs: हय–; ख्: –म * स्थं
215. घ्: षोढान्तेन; all other MSs: षोडान्तेन
216. After this verse, manuscripts घ्, च्, छ् and ज् continue with the words एतत् भावेष्टितं पुरम् and repeat verses 8/52b-58ab. The final line, equivalent to 8/58cd, reads: केवलं षोडशाख्यातं उन्मत्तोर्ध्वत्रयोदशम्। After this come lines 8/61ab-62cd. The scribe of manuscript ज् has put brackets around this repeated portion. ख्, च्, झ्: कपालान्तर्युतं
217. ख्, च्, झ्: कपालान्तर्युतं 218. घ्, छ्: हयाभुज–
219. In MSs घ्, च् and छ्, after एतन्मा– all the verses up to and including 8/72 are missing. They are written in small letters around the margins in manuscript ज्.
220. ज्, झ्: अ – ई 221. ग्: शिरो– 222. ङ्: विंड

223. This is a contraction of the ordinal, as is the case with other numbers such as द्वाविंशम् that occurs in 8/67a. 224. All MSs: एतत् 225. ग्, ज्: + एषा मूर्ध्नि
स्थिता: 226. ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, ठ्: एषा 227. All MSs: आसन– 228. क्, ग्, ज्: –पुरोद्यं
229. All MSs: भशिरेण 230. ज्, ठ्: –साक्रान्तं 231. ठ्: –नुह्यहं
232. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्: पुटुलस्य; ठ्: पुट्लस्य 233. All MSs except ङ्, ज्: वासुकिं– 234. ङ्: वर्ण 235. ङ्: मुद्रानामभि–
236. क्, ख्, ग्: –र्थ 237. ङ्: वर्ण
238. ख्: –ईक्षरसं *या; ज्: (?); all other MSs: –ईक्षर– 239. All MSs: एकपद्म–
240. ठ्: परः; All other MSs: पुरः 241. ख्, ङ्: वर्णान्ति–. IM 6 → 7.
242. Cf. above, 8/36c. See also above, note to 5/41b.
243. ज्: –ख्यं 244. ठ्: षट्विंशं
245. घ्: –नासनं All other MSs: –शकम् 246. All MSs: स्मरिते
247. All MSs: देव 248. ख्, ग्, ङ्, च्: भवत्. What is meant here is:
योऽ नेन स्मरते देवं स भवेत्। Although the root स्मृ is usually classed as 1P, it is also ātmanepadī in the epics. 249. च्: –न?
250. च्, छ्: आज्ञायान्यसनेन; ठ्: आज्ञाया–; all other MSs: आज्ञायात्यसनेन
251. I take thus to be a case of irregular visarga sandhi. See above, note to 3/22b. 252. छ्: षट्विधं 253. क्, ख्, ग्: –रे
254. घ्, ङ्, च्, ठ्: यंयोवलोकयन्–; all other MSs: यं योऽ वलोकयेन्–. A nominative ending has taken the place of the accusative here to save a syllable for the metre, cf. 7/40. 255. See above, note to 6/201b.
256. छ्: सोपि रि–; ठ्: ?; all other MSs: सोपि निश्चयम्. M → N. See above, note to 3/25d. 257. घ्, च्, छ्: + खगतिश्च न संदेहो अचिरादपि सुन्दर।
एतच्चैतन्यकूटं तु षड्विधं परमेश्वर। 258. See above, note to 7/7c. 259. All MSs:
जपितेष्वपि 260. The forms खेगतिः and खगतिः interchange throughout this text. 261. The substantive of these adjectives is missing. I presume it is something like तत्त्वम्.
262. च्: तलिंगश्च तश्च; all other MSs: तल्लिङ्गं च तं. See 1/5d and note. No further note will be made of the deviant form तम् when it appears again in the place of तत्.
263. All MSs except च्: च वृक्षं. See above, note to 6/10b.
264. छ्: विध्विना; ज्: झ्: विधिणी; all other MSs except घ्, च्: विध्विणी
265. ङ्: तद्योद्यानं; ठ्: ?; all other MSs except च्, छ्, झ्: तस्योद्याणं
266. All MSs: भ– 267. घ्, च्, छ्: –धरादितं; all other MSs: –तं
268. छ्: खारान्तं; all other MSs: खरान्तं 269. ङ्: –र्य
270. क्, ग्, च्: हसान्तेमिति; ख्: हस्तान्तमिति; ङ्, झ्: हस्था–
271. घ्: कांकण; च्, छ्: कोंकण 272. All MSs: सिद्धाः 273. M → N.
274. यया is implicitly meant here. 275. घ्, च्, छ्: तस्यां
276. All MSs: मूर्तिम–; all MSs except च्: –रां
277. M → N. 278. IM 6 → 7.
279. ख्: –कै; ग्: –सकं. See above, note to 7/7c. Cf. above, 8/59a.
280. क्: –वर्ण. M → N. 281. परावर्ताधः – would be correct but does not fit the metre. 282. DS. Cf. above, 6/153d.
283. घ्, च्: परावर्त्त– 284. घ्, ङ्, छ्: शूलसै–; all other MSs: शूलस्य–
285. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –तृंश 286. ग्: समुहतं

287. एकवीरादारभ्य would be correct but too short for the metre. Cf. below,
9/13c and 67/21a. 288. All MSs except ङ्, झ्: याव
289. क्, ख्, ग्, छ्: विव्वा. There are two spellings of this name, that is, बिम्बा and विव्वा. See above, note to 7/30c. 290. See above, note to 3/74b.
291. All MSs: पीठा. N → M. 292. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्: कुर्यान्तु–; घ्, छ्, ज्, ठ्:
कुर्यातुलोमत:; च्: कुर्यानु–. कुर्यान्नु– is a contraction of कुर्यादनु– made for the metre.
293. IC. 294. Cf. above 295. छ्: परवं *
296. ठ्: ज्वरन्तं 297. घ्, च्, छ्: –रूपिणी
298. क्, ग्, छ्, झ्: वह. तस्य, or the like, is required to complete the syntax.
299. All MSs except झ्: संपूर्णा–. विद्या देवी or the like is intended as the substantive of this attributive compound. 300. ङ्: एत
301. घ्, च्, छ्: –वक्रोवाच 302. DS. 7/25c, 15/31a and 25/15a.
303. च्, छ्: –मध्ये– 304. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ठ्: –चिद्
305. All MSs: –पञ्चार्णकोद्धरेत् 306. All MSs: –मात्राया
307. क्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: महेश्वर्य; च्: महेश्वर्य:
308. See above, note to 3/41c. 309. All other MSs except ठ्: पुरार्छितं
310. घ्: शिखाशेषर–; छ्: शिखाशेषरमाक्रान्तं * 311. छ्, ज्: –समुज्वलं
312. All MSs: इकारा– 313. This line appears again below as 20/25ab. See also note to 7/7d. 314. ग्: –न्त
315. ङ्: अशिरण. The athematic noun शिरस् here and in the following compound has been thematized. 316. ठ्: शिरोहतं 317. क्, ग्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: वह्नि:
318. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –शां 319. All other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्, ठ्: –पूरये
320. ङ्: –नाच्छ्रय:; छ्, ज्: लक्षैकं–. See above, note to 2/25c.
321. All MSs: –वातं 322. च्, छ्: टासमारूढं 323. घ्: उसि–
324. M → N. 325. घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –न्तिकम्
326. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ठ्: ध्ययेद्. A connecting pronoun such as ताम् is required here by the syntax. 327. छ्: सकृजप्तेन
328. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –कात्; ठ्: एहिकात् 329. All MSs except छ्, ज्, ठ्: प्रप्नुयाद् 330. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: –गात्
331. घ्, च्, छ्: –ग्य 332. ठ्: * नुजं; all other MSs: या–
333. झ्: ऐलींनरवि; all other MSs: ऐतरनरवि– 334. छ्, ज्, ठ्: –क्रान्तं
335. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: दुल्लभं 336. ङ्: –यां 337. च्, छ्: निर्गतं
338. All MSs except ज्, झ्: –कन्तरे
339. All MSs except ठ्: संदेहो. There are four other instances in this text in which, according to the readings in all if not the great majority of the MSs, visarga changes to 'o' followed by a hard consonant as it would normally when followed by a short 'a'. There are four other instances, namely 13/145a, 145b (followed by 's' in both cases), 19/41a (followed by 'p') and 32/50c (followed by 't'). But as they all occur between pādas and this change is far from regular, I have decided to emend to the regular sandhi. Note also that here, as frequently happens, connecting words required to complete the sense and the syntax are missing. Thus नास्त्यत्र संदेह: would make a possible complete statement.
340. झ्: यशे–; घ्: –मध्ये– 341. च्: –तश्च 342. झ्: रठा–
343. All MSs: ओशिरे–; ङ्: –तं 344. All MSs: रक्तं–. Cf. above, 8/100b.
345. ग्: –शमाकाया 346. ङ्, ज्: –जपनात्श्रिय:; च्: –जपनाच्छय:

347. All MSs: यान्ति 348. All MSs: –राधित– 349. च्, छ्: –के
350. ठ्: तत्वे 351. घ्, छ्: गोचते; च्: गोचरे
352. All MSs: श्रिया. 353. घ्: –या 354. ङ्: कुश–. IC.
355. M → N. 356. ङ्: * लक्रमे 357. घ्, छ्: –वा
358. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –याः 359. M → N. 360. ङ्: –तां; च्, छ्: –ता
361. Note how the final –रि or –री of nouns can sometimes change to –र्य the gender of which is masculine or neuter. In a few cases, we find the feminine stem. For example, in 8/118c, गिर्या. Compare the transformation of पुरी to पुर्यः found throughout this text. 362. See above, note to 2/28b.
363. ङ्: –र्थक 364. छ्: तिस्रपी * ख्यं
365. IC. The instrumental plural occasionally substitutes the nominative or accusative of cardinal numbers. Cf. 9/5d and 9/15b. 366. च्: –देवस्य
367. I take this to be another case of irregular visarga sandhi. See above, note to 3/22b. 368. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: ओड्डुमेव
369. क्, ग्, घ्: भू– 370. All MSs except ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: देवदेवेशं
371. ङ्: –न; छ्: क्रर्मार्चनं 372. The syntax here requires some connecting pronouns, or the like, to link the verbal action of the verb in this and the previous line. 373. ङ्: –वहितं. IM 6 → 7. पञ्चार्णविद्या– would be the correct sequence of the units of this compound.
374. घ्: –यो; च्, छ्, ज्: –या 375. ङ्: मोक्षय. Supply तस्य पूजा, or the like, for the syntax. 376. च्: –ग. M → N. 377. All MSs except झ्: कर्म– 378. See above, note to 3/10d.
379. ज्, ठ्: –धाः. As in this case, the suffix –धा is commonly used throughout the text to mean the equivalent of विधः See note to 2/2d.
380. छ्, ज्: –कुल 381. All MSs: -षु
382. See above, 8/112c and note. 383. घ्: –त्वाद्
384. All MSs except क्, ग्: –वन्दिता 385. ङ्: –लक्षणि
386. ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ठ्: जप्तन्या; all other MSs: जप्तव्या. IC. जप्तव्यानि has been contracted to the masculine form for the metre. 387. ङ्: साधकन
388. घ्: –गालक्ष– 389. ङ्: जपद्
390. घ्, छ्, ठ्: स्या 391. छ्: खेगतिनात्र
392. M → N. See above, note to 2/27c.
393. घ्: खगतिसार्द्धं; च्: –सार्धं. An irregular compound has been formed between a noun and prepositional adverb because the required instrumental ending would disrupt the metre. 394. ख्, ग्, ङ्: लभन्नरः
395. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: वीरसिद्धिमहा; all MSs: –व्याप्ति 396. M → N.
397. ङ्: अनिमा 398. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: प्राकाश्यं; ङ्: प्राश्यम्का
399. क्, ग्, ज्: कामती–; घ्: कामगति–; छ्, ज्: –च्छाया. In order to keep to the metre, an irregular compound has been formed instead of the required sandhi. Moreover, the syntax requires a correlative तत्र.
400. घ्: –स्ताविह; ङ्: –विहि 401. ङ्: लभतेद–; च्: –मरपं 402. च्, छ्: रुद्रा
403. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –रा 404. All MSs: क्षमि–
405. शंखिनी has become शंखिन्या to make the seventh syllable long.
406. च्: –पञ्चके– 407. क्, ग्: अत्वयिको
408. ग्: –निमिर्त्यर्थं; छ्: जिह्वे–; all other MSs: –निमित्त्यर्थं

409. छ्: कौलिकात्मा; all other MSs: कौलिकात्सा
410. All MSs: ध्रुवंति. This emendation entails a long fifth syllable.
411. All MSs except झ्: कलकौलास्ति 412. ग्: अन्तथा.
413. ङ्: पञ्चक; च्: –के 414. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: नाख्यायं
415. This and the following three words are missing in MS ङ्.
416. च्, छ्, ज्: –र

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER EIGHT

1. The word prastāra – lit. 'lay out' – might simply be translated as 'grid'. The term is used in this sense in other types of texts as well. Thus, for example, in treatises on musicology the same word denote a grid, diagram or 'graph' (as Lath calls it) on which the notes and *śruti*s are schematically represented. In his work on the Dattilam, Lath (1988: 74) explains that: 'The vṛtti [commentary] on the Bṛhaddeśī speaks of three ways of representing the śruti [microtone] and svara [note] positions within a grāma [scale]. These were known as the three *prastāra*s: (1) the daṇḍaprastāra (2) the vīṇāprastāra and (3) the maṇḍalaprastāra '.

In the case of this and other similar grids, letters of the alphabet are accomodated into its compartments. Mantras are formed by 'extracting' letters from these grids. Mantras are powerful configurations of phonemic energy. The letters from which they are constructed must be charged with the goddess's energy for them to be effective. This is achieved by extracting the letters, as it were, from their original source, which is the goddess herself who is Speech. In this aspect the goddess assumes the form of various configuration of letters that are projected into grids of corresponding shapes. The Kubjikā Tantras, like all other Tantras, can be considered to be treatises on mantra – mantraśāstra. In a sense this is the subject of the Tantras. Thus the common definition the Tantras supply of what Tantra is makes good sense. A Tantra, 'expounds many matters in conjunction with mantra and yantra.' (tanoti vipulān arthān yantramantrasamanvitān) And as yantras are essentially geometric figures into which the mantras and parts thereof representing the sonic forms of the deities are projected and worshipped, yantras are effectively extensions or spatial applications of mantras in space.

Thus the grids from which the mantras of the Kubjikā Tantras are derived are extremely important. Accordingly, Mukundarāja writes in the SamP:

> Now (I will) describe the conventions (found in the) Manthānabhairavatantra. There, (amongst them) first of all, comes knowledge of the *prastāra*s and *gahvara*s without which there is no understanding (saṁgati) of (the meaning of the) books of the Western Tradition.

atha manthānabhairavatantrasaṁketanirūpaṇam | tatra prathamataḥ
prastāragahvaravijñānaṁ vinā paścimāmnāyagranthasaṁgatir nāsti ||

We come across several prastāras in the Kubjikā sources. Mukundarāja lists the names of fourteen *prastāra*s and fourteen *gahvara*s. The latter serve the same function as the former, the difference between them appears to be solely in name. Thus we find that the Meruprastāra is also called Merugahvara (KuKh 51/25-26ab) or just gahvara (KMT 7/76b), which Schoterman (1981: 183 ff.) takes to mean Mālinīgahvara. Mukundarāja says that there are fourteen of each type, but lists fifteen (Schoterman 1982: 182). The YKh (1) (16/113a) says that there are sixteen *prastāra*s (prastārāḥ ṣoḍaśa proktā) but does not name them it also mentions *gahvara*s.

Concerning the Meruprastāra Mukundarāja simply says that 'Meru is the Yoni and is a triangle.' (meru[r] yonis trikoṇa[m] | fol. 1a). He refers next to another grid, which is probably the Merugahvara and says '(A grid) in the form of double-headed drum is also said to be Meru.' (ḍamaruvad api merur ucyate | ibid.). He goes on to describe the shapes of some of the other *prastāra*s and *gahvara*s he has mentioned. These are basically the ones whose names themselves indicate their shape. Thus:

> And (the one called) Everywhere Auspicious (sarvatobhadra) consists of three and four corners (śṛṅgaka). The Grid of the Sword (khaḍgaprastāra) has the shape of a sword. The Grid of the Vajra (vajragahvara) has the shape of a Vajra. The Grid of the Umbrella (chatragahvara) has the shape of an umbrella. (The one called) Wind and others are square. The Six-peaked (ṣaṭśṛṁgin) has the form of a mountain with six peaks. The triangle is the Yoni. . . . (ibid. fl. 1a)
>
> sarvatobhadraś ca trayaś catuḥ śṛṅgakāḥ | khaḍgākāraḥ khaḍgaprastāraḥ | vajrākāro vajragahvaraḥ [-rāḥ] | chatrākāraś [-kāro] chatragahvaraḥ | prabhañjanādayaś catuṣ.koṇāḥ | ṣaṭśṛṅgī ca ṣaṭśṛṅgavaan nagākāraḥ | trikoṇaṁ [trikoṇo] yoniḥ |

Schoterman supplies diagrams of twenty-four such grids he discovered in a manuscript. The names of many of them coincide with the names of the *prastāra*s and *gahvara*s listed by Mukundarāja, although some do not and some are missing (see Schoterman 1982: 203-209). Not many of these grids are actually put to use in the Kubjikā sources. The KMT refers to the formation of what came to be called the Meruprastāra, which the KuKh presents here, but never uses. The ṢSS, on the other hand, makes use of it a great deal in the manner we shall discuss below. It also describes how to draw the Vajragahvara but uses it to 'extract' the letters of only one mantra (see Schoterman 1982: 189 ff. with reference to ṢSS 39/49-95). A lengthy section of chapter six of the ŚM (called the 'teaching concerning the limbs and faces of Mālinī and the *prastāra*s') which is not found in the KMT is dedicated to the description of a series of seven prastāras. It is introduced as follows:

> O fair lady who is the seed of the letters (mātṛkā), there are said to be seven (prastāras) (used) here in the Śrīmata, (namely): Meru, Gahvara, Vajra, and Mahāpīṭha, the fourth, Samasaptaka, Cchatra and Triśūlāṣṭaka, and there is again (another form of the) Vajra (prastāra), and each one is separate. O goddess, the grid is sevenfold, each marked with its own characteristic.

samasaptaka cchatraṁ [kh: -cchātraṁ] ca triśūlāṣṭakam eva ca I saptātra [kh: aṣṭau ca] śrīmate proktā mātṛkābījasundari I merugahvara vajraṁ [g: -śrījraṁ] ca mahāpīṭhaṁ caturthakam I punaḥ vajraṁ varārohe ekaikaṁ ca [kh: ekaikasya] pṛthak pṛthak I prastāraṁ saptadhā [kh: cāṣṭadhā] devi [k, g: devī] pṛthak lakṣaṇalakṣitam [kh: -lakṣitā; g: -lakṣiṇaṁ] I ŚM 6/205cd-207

Although the ŚM makes use of each one of these grids in this passage to extract a particular mantra, effectively it uses the Meruprastāra described here and just once or twice the Vajragahvara. Other grids are used, for example the Candradvīpaprastāra, but very rarely. The Meruprastāra which is dominant in the Kubjikā Tantras originates in the earlier Trika Tantras. Indeed, as we shall see in detail further ahead, the earliest representation of the Meruprastāra in the KMT is derived directly from the one described in the TS. The TS denotes letters in the same way as we find in the Kubjikā Tantras, that is, with reference to the letters around it in the same grid. But this is not the original source of this procedure, as the TS itself tells us (ekavīravidhānaṁ tu prāg uktam anya āgame TS 3/132ab = KMT 4/112ab). It is very significant that the grid is drawn in the TS as in the KMT, first of all in order to extract the letters of the Mālinī order of the alphabet. Mālinī is the Supreme Goddess of the Trika. She emerges from the womb – Yoni – of phonemic energies. Kubjikā, in the form of the Vidyā, emerges from it in the same way (see below). Thus the Trika prastāra becomes Kubjikā's prastāra and we have yet another of many examples of the direct transition from one to the other.

2. Supposedly, one form of Meru is the 'external' mythical mountain. The corresponding inner form of Meru has two aspects. One is gross and the other subtle. The subtle consists of the assembly of fifty deities who govern the phonemic energies of the letters. In this case they are the fifty Bhairavas (also called Rudras, Siddhas or Lipīśvaras – Lords of the Letters). These are listed above in chapter six (14-20) as the fifty Bhairavas in attendance on the goddess in Oḍḍiyāna. The first part of this chapter deals with the 'gross' inner Meru, that is, the Meru made of letters. YKh (1) 16/28ab says of the inner Meru: The great current (ogha) of the letters from A to KṢa resides in the Wheel of the deities (ādikṣāntamahaughaṁ tu devatācakrasaṁsthitam).

One of the virtually universal cosmological and geographical concepts in India and wherever Indian religions have travelled is that Meru is the mountain that marks the centre of the world. Sanskrit literature and the Buddhist, Jain as well as Hindu sacred texts of many different schools describe this marvellous, sacred mountain. Monier-Williams (1996: 833) supplies one common description of Meru as generally represented in the Purāṇas and Sanskrit literature. He writes:

> [Meru] is said to form the central point of Jambudvīpa [South-east Asia]; all the planets revolve round it and it is compared to the cup or seed-vessel of a lotus, the leaves of which are formed by the different dvīpas [island-continents]. The river Ganges falls from heaven on its summit, and flows thence to the surrounding worlds in four streams. The regents of the four quarters of the compass occupy the corresponding faces of the mountain, the whole of which consists of gold and gems. Its summit is the residence of Śiva, and a place of meeting of the gods, Ṛ is ṣ, Gandharvas etc. When not regarded as a fabulous mountain, it appears to mean the highland of the Tartary north of the Himālaya.

The following description of Meru in chapter eight of the TĀ is drawn from the SvT (10/121-169). Standing in the centre of the world, it is surrounded by the cities of divine beings located in the eight directions. In the perspective of the teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras, note the identification in this passage of Meru with a Bhairava Liṅga. This 'outer' Meru is an earthly parallel of the 'inner' Meru to which this verse refers. The outer Meru is the male Bhairava Liṅga facing upwards, reminiscent of the Udyānabhairava Liṅga into which the goddess penetrates to meditate. The 'inner' Meru is the female 'yoniliṅga' that faces downwards:

> Mount Meru rises above the earth to a height of eighty-four thousand leagues and is rooted (in the middle of it) to a depth of sixteen thousand leagues. The width at its base is sixteen thousand leagues and thirty–two thousand at its summit. Made of gold, it is the abode of all the immortals. Its middle, upper and lower parts are, respectively, octagonal, round and square. (Its peak has the round concave shape) of a plate (śārava).
>
> That (mountain) is a (veritable) Bhairava Liṅga and its base (pīṭhikā) is the earth. All the gods resides there (and so) is an object of constant veneration. (Above it), in the centre, is Brahmā's divine assembly (called Manovatī). (The region) to the north-east is the Crystal Peak (jyotiṣkaśikhara) where Śambhu, an aspect of Śrīkaṇṭha, is the lord. Descending fourteen thousand (leagues) below Manovatī, all around Meru, there is a circular terrace (cakravāṭa). The gaurdians of the four quarters (reside) here. To the east lies Amaravatī, Indra's city, to the south of which are those of the Apsaras, Siddhas and Sādhyas. To the north is that of the Vinayakas. To the south-east is Tejovatī, the city of Agni, to the west of which are the Viśvadevas, Viśvakarmans and, in due order, those who are their (attendant) retinue.

In the south (is the city of Yama called) Samyaminī to the west of which, in due order, are (the cities) of Mātṛnandā, those of the Rudras who attend on Yama (tatsādhaka) and that of the eleven Rudras. In the south-west is Kṛṣṇāṅgārā, to the east of which is that of the Piśācas. Then, successively, (moving clockwise) towards north, (are the cities) of the Rākṣasas, Siddhas and Gandharvas. The city of Varuṇa in the west is called Śuddhavatī, to the south of which is that of the ghosts (bhūta). Then, successively, (moving clockwise) towards north are (the cities) of the Vasus and Vidyādharas. To the north-west is Vayu's city, Gandhavatī, to the south of which (reside) the Kinnaras, the goddess Vīṇāsarasvatī, Nārada and Tumburu. (To the north is the city of) Soma, Mahodayā. To the west of that, in due order, are (the cities) of the Guhyas, Kubera, the Karmadevas and (the Yakṣas) who attend (on Kubera). (To the north-east is the city) of Maheśa (i.e. Īśāna), Yaśasvinī, to the west of which is the city of Hari (i.e. Viṣṇu) and, in due order, (moving) south that of Brahma, the Aśvins and Dhanvantari. Thus the main cities on Meru's circular terrace (cakravāṭa) are eight while the others between them are said to be twenty-six.

The natives of the sacred land of India (bhāratvarṣa) who are devoted to meritorious works (iṣṭāpūrta), and those who have worshipped Śiva (even) once in the proper manner, go to mount Meru. TĀ 8/43cd-58ab

3. The Tantra repeatedly teaches that Kubjikā is the embodiment of the divine creative will (icchā) of the god that emerges from him to bring about creation. This will is the energy of the Transmental (unmanī), the goddess who, as the Yoni, contains within herself the potential universe in the form of the fifty letters, each aspects of her inner bliss (see below 24/8). The text tirelessly repeats, as here, that she 'faces downwards' (e.g. above 8/4), orientated towards and intent upon (unmukhī) emanation. The energy of the Transmental (unmanī) stands at the interface between the upper transcendental sphere and the lower one of immanence. The latter is where manifestation and the spread of the teachings takes place. The former is where all that is below is contained in a potential seed form within the womb – Yoni – above. These seeds are the letters embedded in the energy of the Transmental as its fifty aspects. By their conjuction and separation, all the mantras are formed through which all the levels of manifestation are generated below, first in their generic form and ultimately as all the particulars that at each level, as the universal nature of these particulars, they contain.

4. Other names for the Meruprastāra include Ocean or Ocean of the Yoni which, as the YKh puts it, is the Orginal Part of the Virgin Goddess (ādyākumārikākhaṇḍa) within which the Siddhas in the form of the letters reside. As such it is the residence of deities, and so is referred to as a hermitage and is the goddess's maṇḍala.

5. The drawing of the Meruprastāra, which is going to be described, reproduces the emergence of the goddess as pure will and the Transmental and the deployment of its fifty divine phonemic energies. From that, first of all emerges the mantric form of the goddess as the thirty-two syllable Vidyā in its most complete form with the Five Praṇavas as the Full Moon. Thus the goddess emerges in stages to manifest in her fullness as the Vidyā, even as she energizes all the parts of the Meru from the centre which is its peak – Śikhā – where she burns as the Divine Flame – Śikhā – through the energies of the letters and out to the seed-syllables at the corners of her prastāra (which also means 'unfolding'). In the following passage, found in both recensions of the Yogakhaṇḍa (variants labelled 2), the entire matter unfolded in detail in this and the following four chapters is presented directly and concisely. Thus, by way of introduction, it is quoted here leaving the reader to discover its layers of meaning as he goes through this and the following chapters.

Listen, O Lord, to this secret, the teaching concerning the goddess's (Vidyā of) thirty-two (syllables) (2: the excellent grid of the Vidyā). Beginning with Bha and ending with Ca, this is the excellent lunar means. Your Five Praṇavas are at the beginning and they have also emerged at the end. The New Moon is in the middle of the Full Moon and at the end it is said to be the First Lunar Day (pratipadā). She is within the three corners of the Three Peaks (trikūṭa) and is endowed with the seven sections (of the Meruprastāra). She is accompanied by the eight deities (i.e. the Mothers).

She is the Transmental, the straight line who is (drawn) at the beginning (to represent her emergence from Emptiness), and manifest in brief once (her) expansion has been removed. She, the goddess Mātṛkā who begins with A and ends with KṢa, should be placed there in due order. She is said to be the Command of Kukārā. There she is the mistress of the Wheel and the leader of the Siddhas. She has come from the sequence (krama) of Meru adorned with the fifty letters. Beginning with Nectar (i.e. the letter A) and ending with the letter Ha, she abides (there) having pervaded Meru (2: the divine Krama beginning with the letter A and ending with the letter KṢa that faces downwards). (9cd-15ab)

[. . .] The letter A is Ādinātha who is above Meru. (Whereas the goddess) resides within the world of the three currents (trisrotrabhuvana). Sevenfold (as the sections of the prastara), she is present in the Krama. Straight, she is conjoined to the eight parts (which are the Mothers that surround her). On the peak of Kailāsa she is the goddess, the Great Goddess Śikhā. On the peak of Kailāsa (emanate) the rays in the form of letters that have come forth within the imperishable (akṣara) series of letters (akṣara) from the Womb of Meru (merubhaga).

śṛṇu nātha rahasyedaṁ [k: rahasyadaṁ; ṅ: rahasyevaṁ; 2: k: rahasyadaṁ] devyādvātriṁśanirṇayam [2: vidyāprastāramuttamam] || [2: kh: ?]
bhakārādicakārāntaṁ [k, kh: -rāṁtā; gh: -cakārātā; ṅ: takārādivakārāntā] saumeyaṁ [k, kh, ṅ: saukaraṁ; gh: sokaraṁ] karaṇottamam [k: karsalamuttamaṁ; kh: kasalamuttamaṁ; gh: kasanamuttamaṁ śubhaṁ; ṅ: kamalamuttamaṁ; 2: karaṇaṁ śubham] | [2: kh: ?]
ādau te [ṅ: teḥ] praṇavāḥ [k, kh, gh: praṇavā] pañca [k, gh: yaṁca] ante [k, gh: ate] te 'pi visarpitāḥ [k, kh, gh, ṅ: -tā] ||
amā pūrṇe tu madhyasthā ante pratipadā smṛtā |
śṛṅgatrayatrikūṭasthā [k, gh: śṛṁgatrayaṁtrakūṭasthā.; kh: śṛṁgatrayaṁtrikūṭasthāṁ; ṅ: śṛṅgaṁtrayaṁtrikūṭasthā; 2: k: sṛṅga-; kh: ?] saptakandhasamanvitā [k, kh, gh, ṅ: śikhā devī maheśvarī; 2: kh: saptaskaṁghaisamanvitā] ||
devatāṣṭasamāyuktā ṛjurekhāgragonmanī (k: -tonmanā) | [This and the following three lines are missing in MSs k, kh, gh and ṅ; 2: kh: ?]
*vistaraṁ lopayitvā * saṁkṣepeṇa prakāśitā* || [2: kh: ?]
*tatra sā mātṛkā devī ādikṣāntām anukramāt [kh: -kramā ?] |
nyastavyā [kh: ?] ca [kh: ?] prayatnena [kh: ?] śikhā devī maheśvarī ||
kukārājñā [k, gh: -rāṁjñā; 2: kakārā sā (kh: ?)] smṛtā [k, kh, gh: smṛtāṁ] tatra [k: taṁtta; kh: tatta; 2: khañjī] cakreśī siddhanāyikā [k, gh: -nāyīkā; ṅ: siddhi-] |
*sā ca merukramāyātā [ṅ: -kamāyātā] pañcāśākṣarabhūṣitā [kh: paṁcā * * * * * ; 2: -rūpiṇī] ||
*amṛtādihakārāntā [ṅ: -rāntaṁ; 2: akārādikṣakārāntaṁ (kh: akārādi * *?)] meruṁ [gh: meru; 2: kramaṁ (kh; * ?)] vyāpya [ṅ: āpya; 2: divyaṁ (kh: ?)] vyavasthitā [k, gh: sya-; 2: hyadhomukham] | [. . .]
akāraṁ [k: ākāraṁ; kh: ?] cādināthas tu merūrdhve [k: merūddvai; kh: merūddhai] saṁvyavasthitam |
trisrotabhuvanāntasthā [k: trisrotta-] saptadhā tu krame sthitā ||
*ṛjuś cāṣṭapadair yuktā [k: -yukta; gh: ṛtuścāṣṭapadairyukta; ṅ: rā * ścāṣṭapadairyuktā] merumandiramadhyagā [gh: merumaṁḍala-; ṅ: merumandara-]* |
kailāsaśikharāntasthā śikhā devī maheśvarī || [k, gh, ṅ: missing*]* kailāsaśikharāntasthā [gh: -rātasthā; ṅ: kailāśaśi-] varṇarūpā gabhastayaḥ |
*akṣarākṣarasantāne merubhagād [k, gh: bhargojātād; ṅ: bha * jātād] vinirgatāḥ [ṅ: -tā]* || YKh (1) 16/9cd-15ab, 17-19

The drawing of the prastāra and the 'extraction' of the letters thus reproduces the primary moment of creation – the emergence of Deity, the sonic theophany which heralds the dawning of the sixfold Krama – the tradition of the Accomplished One and with it a new world re-generated, filled with the lunar nectar of the goddess's divine energy. Here we are at the origin of all things which is the sphere of the Unborn (ajacakra), the core of the goddess's Saṁvartā Maṇḍala. As the source of all the teachings that lead back to the Origin, this is the Path of Meru established in the beginning by Dakṣa's Sacrifice (see intro. vol 1, p. 119 ff.). In other words, the Meruprastāra is the core of the goddess's maṇḍala. From here emerges the goddess, and with her, the Krama.

6. The Western Tradition of the Kubjikā Tantras is the one 'beginning with Kā' because in this Age of Strife (kaliyiuga) it originated in Kāmarūpa.

7. The Ṭīkā teaches:

> In this way everything is equally all bliss (that has emerged) from the Path of Meru which is the End of the Twelve above the head where the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala is located. The Path of Meru is the sacrifice Dakṣa (performed). It should be grasped from the midst of the five verses from the Ṣaṭsāhasrasaṁhitā (with which it begins as does the Kumārikākhaṇḍa). The same is said there itself:
>
> Meru is said to be the head and the body is the earth. (ṢSS 1/28ab)
>
> Thus Meru is the Wheel called Aja (Unborn). Everything has arisen from there, that is, the collection (of the scriptures) of the western tradition that extends for thousands of millions (of verses).

evaṁ sarvaṁ [kh: sarva] sarvānandasamaṁ merumārgān mastakopari [kh: -māgāt- -rāt] dvādaśāntāt saṁvartāmaṇḍalasthānāt [k kh: savantā-] || dākṣaṁ [kk: dṛkṣaṁ; k: dṛkṣa] sattraṁ [k kh: rāttaṁ] merumārgaṁ ṣaṭsāhasrāt [k kh: -sāhasryāt] pañcaślokamadhyād [kh: -madhyāt] grāhyam [k, kh: grāhyāt] | tathā tatraivoktam meruḥ śiraḥ samuddiṣṭaṁ [kh: samudiṣṭaṁ] śarīraṁ pṛthivī smṛtā || evaṁ meruḥ ajākhyaṁ cakram | tatrotpannaṁ sarvaṁ lakṣakoṭipramāṇaṁ paścimānvayasya saṁgraham | (Ṭīkā fl. 1a)

8. These are the basic preliminaries. First the worshipper must bathe and purify himself outwardly and inwardly with the appropriate mantras as he would for any rite. The ground is cleaned and covered with a stratum of sacred cow dung and water. It is worshipped with flowers, for here is where the world will be created as the maṇḍala etched into the layer of cow dung. Before forming and invoking the deity by drawing her maṇḍala, as usual the 'reciter of mantra' worships his teacher and, in this case also, his apprentice (putraka). Kaulas normally worship a young virgin girl (Kumārī) and, sometimes along with her, a virgin boy (Kumāra). In the towns and cities in the Kathmandu Valley, for example, where the religion is predominantly Kaula, several Kumārīs are maintained for regular worship in this way, just as idols are in temples.

The YKh (1) enjoins:

The virgin girl (kumārī) is the Supreme Goddess; she is a beautiful eight year old girl. The virgin boy is six years old and he is young boy (vaṭuka) of divine form. One can also worship an uninitiated (girl); she (should be considered to be) a Śakti in the Krama lineage (anvaya). When she enters the Wheel of the Transmission, one should drink wine (surāsava) (and eat) meat. Those who do not behave correctly towards a Yoginī, a boy, virgin, the king, teacher, scripture, the supreme Dharma, one's own caste fellow, the country and the Kaulika sacred seat, cannot have Kaulikī Siddhi. Those who, having eliminated the virgin girl and the teacher, steal away the sacred seat of knowledge (vidyāpīṭha) (where the scripture is kept and worshipped), their sins are not destroyed nor do they attain Kulakaulikī Siddhi. Knowing this rule (samaya) first then one should begin the rite (karman).

kumārī sā parā devī aṣṭavarṣā subālikā [k, kh, gh: havākilā] |
kumāraṁ ṣaḍivarṣaṁ [k, kh, gh: ṣarḍi-] tu taṁ vaṭukaṁ divyarūpiṇam ||
adīkṣitāpi [k, gh: adikṣitāpi] pūjyeta eṣā [k, kh, gh: śeṣā] śaktiḥ [k, kh: śakti; gh: śaktiṁ] kramānvaye |
yad viśati [k, kh, gh: viṣati] kramaṁ cakraṁ pānaṁ phalgusurāsavam || yoginīṁ [k, kh, gh: goginī] vaṭukaṁ kanyāṁ [k, kh, gh: kaṁnyāṁ] rājānaṁ gurum āgamam |
paraṁ dharmaṁ [k, kh, gh: dharma] svakaṁ jātaṁ deśaṁ pīṭhaṁ tu kaulikam ||
yeṣāṁ [k, kh, gh: teyaṁ] tat [k, kh, gh: taṁt] yan nācāret [k, kh, gh: yatracāre] tu na teṣāṁ siddhikaulikī |
kumārīṁ [k, kh, gh: kumārī] deśikaṁ [kh: + kumārī deśikaṁ] hatvā vidyāpīṭhaṁ haranti ye ||
teṣāṁ pāpakṣayo nāsti [k: nīsti] na siddhiḥ [k, kh, gh: siddhi] kulakaulikī |
tat [k, kh, gh: iti] samayaṁ purā jñātvā paścāt karma samārabhet ||
YKh (1) 4/325-329

9. The word khaṭikā, according to Monier-Williams, means chalk. If this is the correct translation the 'chalk' (khaṭikā) is presumably the material with which the Meruprastāra is drawn. However, it appears from the contexts in which the word is used that it denotes the foundation of the prastāra. The term, although not common, does also appear in Tantras of other traditions with this meaning. For example in the JY, a Kālī Mata Tantra, we read:

The Hero who has fashioned the sequence of the lineage is the very form of the khaṭikā. One should lay out (prastaret) the alphabet (mātṛkā) beginning with A and ending with KṢa into that in due order on the earth which is covered with meat and wine and scrubbed with (the powdered bones) of the skeleton of a great (man).

kṛtāvalikramo vīraḥ [k, kh: -ra] khaṭikākāra eva ca |
palālipṛṣṭāṁ vasudhāṁ mahākaṅkālagharṣitām [k: -parṣitām] ||
prastaren mātṛkāṁ tasyām ādikṣāntām anukramāt | JY 2/12/9-10ab

This is the meaning, it seems, in the following rare passage from the Kubjikā Ambāmatasaṁhitā in which this word appears:

The grid is the 'heap of sounds' of the letters (laid out there) in alphabetical order (rāśikrameṇa). One should write the fifty (letters) there on the khaṭikā, the Great Ocean.

rāśikrameṇa [rāsi-] varṇānāṁ prastāraḥ śabdarāśikaḥ [-stvavdarāśikaḥ] |
ālikhet tatra pañcāśa khaṭikāyāṁ [-yā] mahārṇave || AS 5/204

We have seen that the Yoni is occasionally called the Ocean of the Yoni. Here the Great Ocean similarly appears to be a reference to the oceanic source of phonemic energy. This suggests that the khaṭikā is the prastāra itself. Thus we are told that the extraction of a mantra takes place by means of the khaṭikā (khaṭikādvāra) (YKh (1) 41/1c) and that it is an 'extraction from the khaṭikā' (khaṭikoddhāra) (ibid. 41/3c). But this would be a mistake. The Meruprastara, we are told further ahead, should be worshipped along with the khaṭikā (8/40cd-1), as is clearly the case here. Perhaps we should think that the female triangular prastāra rests on the male Navātman, the First Nātha who, outside it, sustains it. It is probably a way of representing the goddess as sitting in the lap of the god (utsaṅgagaminī) in union.

10. See note to 7/12.

11. In order to understand the instructions here, we must anticipate what will be said in the following verses concerning the placement of the letters in the compartments of the Meruprastāra. Mukundarāja explains:

The letter A is above (in the uppermost compartment). Below that compartment to one side is the letter Ā. In this way, the placement (of the letters) is in an anticlockwise spiral similar (to the coil of) Kuṇḍalinī (kuṇḍalī). The letter Ha is in the centre. (Thus) there are forty-nine compartments and forty-nine letters. In order to complete (the full number of) fifty (in terms of both the extra) compartment and letter, there is one (extra) compartment below, (that is) below in the middle. (The letter) KṢa is (located) there. (The presence) of the letter KṢa in the triangle (ekoṇa) is not required because it is formed by the conjunction of Ka and Ṣa (and so is not an independent letter).

upari akāras tatkoṣṭhataḥ koṇato 'dhastād ākāraḥ | evaṁ vāmāvartena kuṇḍalīvad veṣṭanam | madhye hakāraḥ | ekonapaṁcāśat koṣṭhā ekonapaṁcāśad varṇāś ca ǀ paṁcāśatpūraṇe 'rthe koṣṭhe varṇe cādhastān madhyato 'dhaś caikaṁ koṣṭhaṁ tatra kṣaḥ ǀ ekoṇe [ekone] kṣakāro nāpekṣyate ǀ kaṣasaṁyogenoddhārāt ǀ

Schoterman (1981: 182) translates the last two sentences as follows: 'The letter KṢa is inside the 49th [square]; it is invisible; by means of combining Ka and ṣa it is raised.' Schoterman has understood the word ekoṇe to mean 'inside the 49th [square]'. The word ekoṇa- literally means '(something that has) the corners (of the letter) E'. As the letter E is the shape of a downward-facing triangle, ekoṇe simply means 'in the triangle'. Moreover, it appears that Schoterman translates nāpekṣyate as if it meant na dṛṣyate, i.e. 'is not seen' – that is, as he says, 'it is invisible' whereas the correct translation is 'is not required.' This is why he explains that what Mukundarāja means is that 'underneath the central square of the figure (prastāra or gahvara) one should visualize an additional 50th square, in which the letter KṢa is located. As the central 49th square always contains the letter Ha, it follows that the KṢa should be imagined underneath it.'

Schoterman's forced translation is motivated no doubt by the fact the most of the few drawings of the Meruprastāra found in the manuscripts do not include the letter KṢa. But, as Mukundarāja tells us, its presence is not essential. However, if we do wish to represent the letter KṢa, this is done by drawing an additional compartment in the centre below the middle compartment of the last row. And there are examples of drawings of the meruprastāra in the manuscripts where this is done, as, for example in the manuscripts of the Ṭīkā. Indeed, Schoterman himself reproduces a diagram of the Meruprastāra from a manuscript (where it is called Sumerugahvara) in which this extra compartment is depicted, placed in the manner just described, with the letter KṢa (wrongly written as kṣaḥ) in it.

The Ṭīkā (fl. 2b) which, apparently commenting in this place on the ṢSS, that is, on Schoterman's own source, settles the matter thus:

Then below in the eighth row, six (squares) and (then) six (again) should be elided from the right and the left, successively. In this way there is (only) one comparment (left) and that is the fiftieth one. Thus the Gahvaraprastāra is completed with fifty compartments.

tathā adhaḥ aṣṭamapaṅktau [kh: -paṁktā] dakṣavāmakrameṇa ṣaṭ ṣaḍ [k kh: ṣaṭ] lopyāḥ [k kh: -pyā] ǀ tathā koṣṭhakaikaṁ bhavati ǀ tat pañcaśatamam iti koṣṭhaka-pañcāśadbhir [k: -śatribhir-; kh: -śatibhiḥ-] gahvaraprastāraṁ siddhyate ǀ

I do agree that there is a special relationship between the letters Ha and KṢa, we have observed an example already (above 3/35-36ab). Moreover, even though KṢa may well be imagined to be below Ha, underneath the grid (see 8/26cd-27), even so, I take the meaning of Mukundarāja's words literally and understand the prescription in this regard given in this verse accordingly. The grid at this stage thus looks like this:

Diagram 1. The First Formation of the Meruprastāra

12. The reader may have noticed, but it is worth noting nonetheless at this point, that the construction of the layout of the Meruprastāra is described as if it were an upward-pointing triangle, although, when it is located in the End of the Twelve, it faces downwards. Perhaps this is the implied sense of saying that the first compartment on the peak of Meru is both transcendent – when Meru points upwards, and immanent (apara) – when it points down. The realionship between transcendence and immanence is thus understood in quite simple spatial terms. The transcendent is at the supreme, uppermost limit and immanence is below. It is the other – apara – in relation to the supreme (para) which is entirely 'other' (para) and 'beyond' (para). The inversion of the triangle from up to down thus represents the inversion of these two polarities. Pointing upwards, the triangle marks the path to the supreme transcendence and thus the ending of all immanent, phenomenal and conditioned being. Pointing downwards, the triangle channels the energies down into immanence – as the presence of that same transcendent, sacred, reality in the spheres of the emanation of its own transcendental being into, and as, every single thing.

13. Yogapīṭha here clearly means the topmost square of the upward-pointing Meruprastāra. It is the sacred seat of the energy and lord of the letter A. The Ṭīkā informs us that Kāmarūpa is the Seat of Yoga and Kāmarūpa is indeed said to be located in the upper corner of the Meruprastāra when it faces upwards. But, in other contexts, the Yogapīṭha is the whole Saṁvartāmaṇḍala as the seat of the scriptures and hence of the entire teachings (see note to KuKh 2/18 and 7/47).

There are four other accounts of the occupants of the Meruprastāra. One is found in chapter fifty-one of our text, another is found in YKh (1) (16/18-27), the third is in the AS (14/12cd-26) and the fourth in the ṢSS (34/4ab and commentary). With respect to this account and the one in YKh (1), the rows are listed in the reverse order in chapter fifty-one below as is the case below in 8/22-23. Again, we are told there that Kālāgnirudra – the Rudra of the Fire of Time (corresponding to the conjunct KṢa) – lies at the bottom of the triangle (51/26cd-27ab). According to 51/28cd-29ab, Ciñcinīnātha is at the top of Meru. Here we are told that Maheśvara resides (8/25b) in this place, that is, the Yogapīṭha. Perhaps we should understand that this is the peak of Meru. The ṢSS says that the highest of a series of four Saṁvartāmaṇḍalas strung along the axis of the body is located above (the commentary says – on) the Cavity of Brahmā at the top of the head (ṢSS 2/5, see long discussion by Schoterman). There it is the triangular Santānabhuvana (ibid 1/29). Moreover, the Yogapīṭha appears to be another name for Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (visargaṁ ca suṣumṇāyā ādhāraṁ dvādaśāntagam | kvacic ca yogapīṭhaṁ tu kvacit saṁvartāmaṇḍalam | ṢSS 28/15cd-16ab)

The compartments of the Meruprastāras have been described here as squares, but this is only for ease of representation. In actual fact each compartment is a Yoni in itself and hence is triangular (see Schoterman 1982: 186 fig. 4). An example of the way this is drawn is found in the beginning of chapter three of the KuKauMa (3/15-20ab) where it is made in order to extract the twelve syllables of Tvaritā's Vidyā. The text explains how to form a triangle within a square. This is the Yoni called Trikhaṇḍā. A series of parallel diagonal lines are drawn within it that cross over one another in such a way as to form forty-nine small triangles. These are also Yonis. Twenty-eight of them face downwards and twenty-one upwards. The letters of the alphabet are then placed in them. The exposition, concludes declaring:

> It is the ocean of scripture (śāstrārṇavā), the Yoni that is the first existent (ādibhūtā) in the triple universe. She is the source of all the scriptures and main mantras. There is no mantra similar to it, no Tantra that is her equal. He who sees the Yoni drawn with all its seed-syllables achieves Siddhi by (his) devotion to worship and the recitation of mantra.

eṣā [k: eṣāṁ; kh: yathā; ṅ: ekā] śāstrārṇavā [ṅ: śāstrārttavā] yonir ādibhūtā [kh ṅ: yoniḥ ādi-; g: yoge ādipūjā] jagattraye [kh: jagantraye; g ṅ: jagatraye] |
sarveṣāṁ mantramukhyānāṁ śāstrāṇāṁ prabhavātmikā ||
nānayaḥ [kh: tayā; g: nānāyā] sadṛśo [kh: sadṛśi; gh: ?m] mantras [g, ṅ: mantra] tantraṁ naiva [g: naivā] tayā [g gh: nayā; ṅ: mayā] samam |
yaḥ paśyel likhitāṁ [kh: paśyal likhitā; g: paśye likhitā; gh: paśyarl likhitā; ṅ: paśyantikhe] yoniṁ [ṅ: yoni] sarvabījasamanvitām [kh gh(?): sarvavījā-; ṅ: -nvitaṁ] ||
tasyaiva jāyate [gh: jayate] siddhiḥ [g ṅ: siddhi] pūjājapyaparāyaṇāt [k kh gh: -parāyaṇaiḥ; g: pūjājāpya parāyaṇaiḥ; ṅ: -parāyaṇeḥ] | KuKauMa 3/25- 27ab

These interchanging representations are expressions of one of the basic principles of Tantric symbolism, so eloquently expressed by the TS (1/295c): 'everything is of the nature of all things' (sarvaṁ sarvātmakam). In other words, the whole is in each part. In this case, each triangle in the Triangle is the entire triangle and the Triangle in the centre of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala – here represented as the Meruprastāra – is the whole maṇḍala. Another way this principle is exemplified here is the inherent identity of the poles at the extreme ends of the triangle. Ciñcinī, at the apex of the Triangle, is the goddess Saṁvartā in the centre of the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala, who is the energy of the fire that burns at the end of the aeons and consumes the worlds. According to YKh (1) (16/18cd) she is Śikhā who is Maheśvarī. Kālāgnirudra – the Rudra of the Fire of Time. – at the other end of the triangle could well be taken to be her consort, just as Maheśvarī of YKh (1) is in relation to Maheśvara of our account. Ciñcinīnātha, who is there according to the AS, which also refers to its occupant as the 'solitary tree' (ekavṛkṣa) – no doubt the Tamarind. If so, we find the female pole at the summit and the male pole at the base represented as what is in effect an identity in difference, that is, as fire and its energy. Similarly, the AS (14/14cd) represents the occupant of the apex as a goddess in the company of her consort, although the symbolism there is lunar, not igneous. She is Vakrādevī, the Full Moon (pūrṇimā) who is worshipped first with Cakranātha.

The next row consists, according to the text we are examining here, of the Three Siddhas. These are probably Oḍḍīśanātha, Ṣaṣṭhanātha and Mitranātha (see above 2/28 and note). This is confirmed indirectly by the YKh (1), which says that the three beings in this row are the deities of the three lineages (oli). The three Siddhas, the founders of the three lineages, may also be their deities. According to chapter fifty-one (line 29ab) below, the three beings in this row are three energies. Perhaps these are Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī – a triad commonly associated with the goddess's triangle. According to the ṢSS they are the three worlds and where as according to the AS, the three seals (mudrā).

The Five Jewels in the next row are five mantras praising the hosts of Yoginīs in the spheres of the worlds of the sky (gaganaloka), the wind (vāyuloka), fire (pavanaloka), the world of mortals (martyaloka) and the world of snakes (nāgaloka) in the netherworlds. According to YKh (1), the letters in the five compartments of this row are the five worlds corresponding to the five gross elements. Chapter 51 (28cd) says that the five here are Akhaṇḍa and the rest without telling us who they are, while the AS simply says that they are five Siddhas.

Our text goes on to say that the next row consists of the seven Mothers; in chapter 51 they are called Yoginīs. The AS (14/15cd-16), referring to them as the 'seven deities' (devatā), lists them as: Brahmāṇī, Maheśvaryā, Kaumārī, Vaiṣṇavī, Vārāhī, Indrāṇī, and Īśānyā, and adds that one should worship these seven deities energized with mantric sound (rāva). The explanation in the other sources is quite different. According to YKh (1) these seven compartments contain the seven seas, whereas according to the ṢSS, they are the seven sages. Next, our text tells us, come nine deities. Below (8/30ab) this row is called the 'Circle of the Mothers' (mātṛmaṇḍala). Groups of nine Mothers, although unusual, are also found. See, for example, chapter ninenteen below. There, the letters in the normal alphabetical order, which make up the body of Śiva as Śabdarāśi, are divided into nine groups each of which is governed by a Mother. Just as the group of eight is formed to make a complete circle with a Mother in each of the primary and secondary directions, the group of nine Mothers is worshipped with a ninth Mother in the centre.

Our other two sources differ here. According to the ṢSS the nine are the nine planets. According to the YKh, there are nine Siddhas in this row. The nine meant here are probably the Nine Nāthas who govern the nine letters of Navātman (see below 51/27cd-28ab). The AS (14/17-18) refers to them as the nine disciples who belong to the transmission of the three sacred seats and lists their names as: 1) Śrīcarya 2) Bherinātha 3) Paṭyarī 4) Bāladeva 5) Śrīcaryādhīśa 6) Goṣṭīśa 7) Gauhanātha 8) Netrīśanātha 9) Krodhanātha.

The account below (51/27cd-28ab) and our text here agree that the next row consists of the eleven Rudras. These, like the seven Mothers, form a very old group. Related to the Vedic storm gods, the Māruts, they appear as a group of eleven in both the Tantras and the Purāṇas. According to the Vāyupurāṇa (1/7), Rudra sprang from Brahmā's forehead and then separated himself into a composite figure, half male and half female. The former portion separated again into the eleven Rudras. Regarded as inferior manifestations of Rudra-Śiva, their names, although variously given in different Purāṇas and Tantras, are generally those of Śiva. According to the Vāyupurāṇa (ibid), they are Ajaikapāda, Ahirbudhnya, Hara, Nirṛita, Īśvara, Bhuvana, Aṅgaraka, Ardhaketu, Mṛtyu, Sarpa and Kapālin. According to other sources, the Rudras are the children of Kaśyapa and Surabhi or of Brahmā and Surabhi or of Bhūta and Surūpā (Monier-Williams 2000: 883). According to the AS (14/21cd-22) the eleven Rudras are: 1) Śrīkaṇṭha 2) Piṇgala 3) Ananta 4) Aṭṭahāsa 5) Yamantaka 6) Mahārāva 7) Mahākāya 8) Trinetra 9) Amara 10) Akṣaya 11) Vijaya.

Here our text simply says that the last row of thirteen contains thirteen Siddhas. The ṢSS says that they are thirteen worlds. According to the AS (14/24-25) they are thirteen *maṇḍala*s called: 1) Ananta 2) Mahanta 3) Akhaṇḍa 4) Parāpara 5) Aji 6) Jayānanda 7) Sūrya 8) Soma 9) Agni 10) Bhairava 11) Trailokya 12) Ghaṭapūrṇa 13) Śiva.

14. One would expect the diagram to be drawn by the officiant facing east. This is the case, for example, with the drawing of the Vajragahvara described in the ṢSS (39/49-95. Concerning the spatial orientation, see ibid. 39/59ab).

However, the only way to make sense of the prescription here is to assume that the diagram is orientated along the north-south axis. Assuming that north is above, the squares that should be removed first, which are on the western side of the grid, are to the left of the observer, on the right side of the triangle. These squares are removed left to right from the top to the bottom rows as described. Thus, one is first travelling down and from left to right. The procedure is reversed on the other side. First, one square is removed from the bottom right-hand corner. Then three from the next row up going from right to left and so on to the top.

This way of describing how this grid is drawn is derived from the procedure outlined in chapter four of the KMT (4/75-80), which is discussed in detail by Schoterman (1981: 183-6). There we read:

> O fair-faced lady, next I will describe the extraction of mantra. One should draw the grid (gahvara) on a piece of even ground which is pure and well hidden, smeared with cow dung and covered with heaps of flowers and scent. (It consists of) seven times thirteen parts, of which six should be erased on one side and the same (done on) the other (dvitīya) side (of the first row). (Then one less is removed on each side of the following) six (rows) in due order. One, three and five, seven and nine, eleven, ending with thirteen – (thus) fifty less one should be fashioned in accord with the procedure.

Just as the description of how the grid should be drawn in our text is essentially an explanation of how the KMT describes it should be done; the description in the KMT is an expansion of the following one in chapter three of the TS. There we are told that it is a procedure that is already well known to its predecessors, which is probably why the prescription there is so brief:

> Having drawn a square enclosure divided into seven parts and then having multiplied them seven times, O beloved, fashion the compartments. (Thus) fifty less one should be fashioned in accord with the procedure.

caturasraṁ puraṁ likhya saptabhāgavikalpitam । punaḥ [kh, g: punas] saptaguṇaṁ kṛtvā koṣṭhakān kārayet [k, g: kāravat] priye ॥ pañcāśad unam [k, kh: -śadrunam g: -sadruṇam] ekena kartavyān [KMT: kartavyaṁ] tu yathāvidhi [k, g: -vidhiḥ] । TS 3/99-100ab (= KMT 4/78cd)

The redactor of the KMT, who drew these verses from the TS (see Godriaan and Schoterman 1988: 15-17), not only elucidated this passage, he also added an important feature to the triangle of letters. This was the identification of the starting point (the central corner) with Kāmarūpa and the centre with Oḍḍiyāna. The absence of these seats in the triangle is another indication that they are a primary feature (pradhāna), as our text itself tells us (see below 60/70), of the Kubjikā Tantras but are hardly known elsewhere. Worth noting is that the grid is used in the TS and the KMT to extract the letters of the Mālinī order of the alphabet (KMT 4/81-106). The extraction concludes with a few verses extolling Mālinī as the supreme Yoni of all mantras (KMT 4/107-110). Thus Kubjikā, who is Mālinī, is the Yoni generated from the Yoni that is set in the core of her maṇḍala. In this, as in many other ways, her energy as the Source – Yoni – of all things is reinforced. At the same time, the Tantra implicitly proclaims its own goddess as the Yoni filled with the sacred seats – a higher, more developed Trika Yoni – which is the source of the original Trika Yoni: Mālinī, who is herself identified with Kubjikā.

15. In this way, we arrive at the following diagram:

Diagram 2. The Second Formation of the Meruprastāra

16. When the triangle is located in the End of the Twelve and points downwards, the tip rests on the top of the head where the Cavity of Brahmā is located. Thus, perhaps, the letter A, which is in the first compartment of the prastāra, is the Energy of the Cavity. The triangle is explicitly said to be pointing upwards (51/26cd-27ab). Thus, if the Triangle is in the End of the Twelve, the top of it should be at the end of the twelve-finger space above the head, that is, at the end of the End of the Twelve. Above we are told that Maheśvara resides in the first compartment (8/25ab). Perhaps then the Energy of the Cavity is at the end, as the text tells us, and so corresponds not to A but to KṢa and is located in the Cavity of Brahmā on the crown of the head.

17. Concerning the Five Offerings, see above note to 6/13.

18. The account in the Ṭīkā of how the letters are placed in their respective compartments adds an important extra dimension to the manner in which the prastāra and its contents are conceived. The prastāra is, in this perspective, the triangular, intimate part of the Virgin Goddess (kumārikākhaṇḍa) demarcated and filled with the energy of her sacred sites. In addition, the corners of the sacred triangle are protected by triads of energies. The Ṭīkā explains:

Now the deposition of the letters of that (prastāra) is done. 'Kāmarūpa is indeed the letter A . . .' This (refers) to the single compartment located in the front (part of) the diagram. The sacred seat of Kāmarūpa is there and the letter A is just there (in the same place). 'Sound' (rāva) in the middle is the leader. 'Sound' is the letter Ha. That is (placed) in the core (karṇikā) in the middle compartment. Starting in this way from the eastern direction, moving inwardly progressively in an anticlockwise direction (vāmāvartana) in a 'crooked' (i.e. spiral) motion (kauṭilyākāragati) until one reaches the middle square of that (prastāra) which is the location of the letter Ha; forty-nine (letters) are (deposited in their respective compartments) in this way. Then (comes) the Imperishable (akṣaya), that is, the letter KṢa. There is a compartment located in front of the line made of thirteen compartments. The fiftieth letter, the letter KṢa, the Imperishable, is (placed) there. That (letter) destroys all things (sarvāṁhārakāraka).

*idānīṁ [kh: idānī] asyaiva [k kh: asyaiva ] varṇanyāsaṁ [k: -nyāse] kriyate | kāmarūpa akāro vai | ity asya [k:yatya] prastārapūrvadiksthitakoṣṭhakasya ekasya | tatra kāmarupīṭham tathā tatraiva akāram | rāvaṁ [k kh: rāva] madhye [k kh: madhya] tu nāyakaṁ | rāvam [k kh: nāvam] iti hakāram | tanmadhyamakoṣṭhake karṇikāyāṁ | evaṁ pūrvadiśārabhya [kh: -rabhyo] vāmāvartanābhyantarakrameṇa kauṭilyākāragatyā [kh: kautilyā-] yāvat tanmadhyamakoṣṭhakaṁ [kh: tatmadhya-] hakārasthānaṁ tāvad [k kh: yāvat] ekonapañcāśat [k kh: -śāt] tathā | tathākṣayaṁ [k kh: tathākhyaṁ] kṣakāram | taṁ trayodaśakoṣṭhakamayīpaṅktau [kh: + ma] agre ekaṁ yat koṣṭhakaṁ sthitaṁ tatrākṣayaṁ kṣakāraṁ pañcāśamaṁ varṇam | taṁ sarvasaṁhārakam | Ṭīkā fl. 2b.

Outside this grid (prastāra) is a triangle, (the shape of) a waterchestnut. It should be wrapped three times with Māyā, that is, the syllable HRĪṀ. It is because of this that (the grid is) said to be an 'inaccessible place' (gahana) or 'abyss' (gahvara) (as Māyā is). Then it should be conjoined to three tridents in such a way that there are three tridents (one for each of the) three corners. One should worship the nine energies starting with Vāmā there thus: Vāmā, Jyeṣṭhā and Raudrī of the first trident, Ambikā, Nirodhinī and Nādaśakti of the second trident and Vyāpinī, Samanā and Unmanā (this entry is missing in the MSs) of the third trident in the three corners. Now beginning from the front corner, that is, from the eastern corner, which is the corner of the letter A and the location of the sacred seat of Kāma(rūpa), up to middle compartment, which is the place of the letter Ha, (the letters and sacred seats) are praised.

asya prastārasya bāhye śṛṅgāṭakaṁ trikoṇam [kh: trikoṇaṇaṁ] । tanmāyayā [k: tamayā; kh: tamayāyā] hrīṁkāreṇa tridhā [kh: tṛdhā] veṣṭayet । etasmāt kāraṇād [kh: kāraṇāt] gahanaṁ [k: -ne; kh: -na] tathā [k kh: tadā] gahvaram ucyate [k: -resūcyate] । taṁ punas triśūlatrayabhinnaṁ kārayet yathā koṇatraye [kh: -trayo] triśūlatrayaṁ bhavati । tatra vāmādyāśaktinavakaṁ pūjayet । yathā [kh: yartha] vāmā jyeṣṭhā raudrī iti ekasya triśūlasya । ambikā nirodhinī nādaśaktir iti dvitīyasya triśūlasya । vyāpinī [k kh: vyādhinī] samanā [k kh: samānā] unmanā [k kh: missing] iti tṛtīyasya triśūlasya । iti koṇatraye । idānīm agrakoṇārabhya [kh: -rabhyo] pūrvakoṇāt akārakoṇāt [k kh: akārakarṇa] kāmapīṭhasthānād ārabhya [kh:-dārabhyo] madhyamakoṣṭhakāntaṁ hakārasthānāvadhir yāvat krameṇa vandyate ।

Ṭīkā fl. 2b-3a.

The text goes on to list each compartment successively as the place where a sacred site is located in conjunction with a letter. These places are listed above in 6/212-218 and plotted on map 1 in Dyczkowski 2004: 158. After this, the Ṭīkā continues:

(The grid) should be drawn in this way in the order (gati) of emanation, that is, by moving around inwardly (within the triangular Meruprastāra) in an anticlockwise spiral starting with the first square, which is the location of the letter A, up to the middle square, which is that of the letter Ha. The letter KṢa is below. 'The arising of the vowels and letters . . . '. How do the vowels and letters arise? In accord with the sequence of the sacred seats. Thus the letter A is in Kāmarūpa and the letter Ā is in Vārāṇasī. In this way, the fifty letters should be known in accord with the sequence of the sacred seats. The sacred seats should be worshipped there in the gahvara. There are fifty sacred seats. Amongst them, six sacred seats are the essence (of them all). These are Oḍḍiyāna, Jālandhara, Pūrṇagiri, Kāmarūpa, Trisrota and Candra. This is the group of six sacred seats. (It is said):

‘Oḍḍiyāna, Jālandhara, Pūrṇagiri, Kāmarūpa with the three corners.’

Oḍḍiyāna is in the middle. Jālandhara is in the right corner of the prastāra. Pūrṇagiri is in the left corner of the prastāra and Kāmarūpa in the front corner of the prastāra. In this way there are three sacred seats in the three corners, that is, the front, right and left corners. Oḍḍiyāna, the letter Ha, is in the middle. In this way, amongst the group of six sacred seats, the group of four seats is the essence. However, in order to gather them together (saṁgrahaṇārtha), the sacred seat of Oḍḍiyāna is in the middle of the three. It is the one root sacred seat and, pervading (the other three), it is Bhairavī. Thus the root seat is the Yoni. (Its) nature being will (icchārūpa), the sacred seats have come forth from its presence with three sacred seats, that is, KĀ, PŪ and JĀ in the grid. Oḍḍiyāna is the pervasive (seat) in the middle. For this reason it should always be worshipped as equal in aspect with the three sacred seats.

'The condition of pervasion (vyāpti) proceeds from the seat Candra.'

These four sacred seats are pervaded, that is, emanated from, the seat Candra, the aforementioned Three-peaked (trikūṭa) mountain which is supreme light and bliss (fl. 4b).

evaṁ sṛṣṭigatyā [k: gatyād; kh: -gatyāt] vāmāvartaparibhramaṇagatyā abhyantaragatyā ca pūrvakoṣṭhakādi akārasthānādi madhyamahakārakoṣṭhakāvadhir yāval lekhyaṁ [k: -vadhi yāvallekhya; kh: -vadhiḥ yāvallakhya] | adhaḥ kṣakāram | udayaṁ [k kh: udaya] svaravarṇānām ity ādi | svarāṇāṁ tathā varṇānām udayaṁ katham [k kh: katha] | pīṭhakrameṇa | yathā kāmarūpe [kh: akāma-] akāraṁ vārāṇasyām ākāram | evaṁ [kh: eva + krameṇa] pīṭhakrameṇa jñātavyāḥ pañcāśad [k kh: pañcāśa] varṇāḥ | tatra gahvare pīṭhān [k kh: pīṭho] pūjayet | pañcāśat [k kh: pañcāśa] pīṭhāḥ | tatra madhye pīṭhaṣaṭkaṁ sārabhūtaṁ | yathā oḍḍiyāṇaṁ [k kh: au- -ṇa] jālandharaṁ [k kh: jālāndhara] pūrṇagiriḥ [k kh: -giri] kāmarūpaṁ [k kh: -rūpa] trisrotaṁ [k kh: tisrota] candrapīṭham iti [k kh: -pīṭha iti] pīṭhaṣaṭkam | ojāpūkā [k kh: ū-] tribhiḥ [kh: tṛbhiḥ] śṛṅgaiḥ | iti oḍḍiyāṇam [k kh: auḍḍiyāṇaṁ] madhye | jālandharaṁ [k kh: jālāndharam] prastārasya [k kh: + prastārasya] dakṣiṇakoṇe | pūrṇagiriḥ [k: -giri; kh: pūrṇariri] prastārasya vāmakoṇe [k kh: vāṇa-] | kāmarūpaṁ [k: -rūpa] prastārasyāgrakoṇe | evaṁ śṛṅgatraye pūrvadakṣiṇottarakoṇeṣu [kh: -dakṣiṇauttara-; k kh: -koṇa] pīṭhatrayaṁ | madhye oḍḍiyāṇaṁ [k: oḍiyāṇaṁ] hakāram || evaṁ pīṭhaṣaṭkamadhye [kh: -ṣaṭkaṁ-] pīṭhacatuṣkaṁ sārabhūtaṁ vartate || kin tu teṣāṁ saṁgrahaṇārtham oḍḍiyāṇapīṭham [k kh: -rthaṁ auḍḍi-] trayāṇāṁ madhye bhairavīrūpaṁ vyāpakaṁ mūlapīṭhaṁ bhaved ekam | iti mūlapīṭhaṁ yoniḥ | tatsakāśād [k: -sād] icchārūpāt pīṭhā [k kh: pīṭhāḥ] utpannās tribhiḥ [kh: -stibhiḥ] pīṭhair iti [k kh: pīṭhāḥ iti] kā pū jā prastāre | oḍḍiyāṇaṁ [k: uḍiyāṇaṁ; kh: ūḍḍiyāṇaṁ] madhye vyāpakam | etasmāt kāraṇāt [kh: tāraṇā] tribhiḥ pīṭhaiḥ [k kh: pīṭhāḥ] samāṁśena pūjayen nityaṁ [k kh: - niścayaś] | candrapīṭhād [k kh: -ṭhā] bhaved [kh: bhavet] vyāptiḥ | ity eṣāṁ [k kh: ityeṣā] pīṭhacaturṇāṁ candrapīṭhāt [k: -pīṭha; kh: -pīṭhā] pūrvoktatrikūṭaparvatāt paraprakāśānandarūpād [k kh: paraṁ prakāśamā-] vyāptiḥ sṛṣṭir bhavati [k kh: sṛṣṭi bhavanti] || Ṭīkā fl. 4a-5b.

19. The complete Meruprastāra with the letters looks like this:

Diagram 3. The Meruprastāra

20. A is the only letter in the first row. Ja, Jha, Ā are the three letters that make up the second row. Note that the order in which the letters are listed is as they appear if you read the rows of letters in the Meruprastāra from right to left, not left to right. Similarly, in the YKh, the letters are listed in their respective rows from the shorter to the longer rows. There, the three letters in the second row are listed from left to right, i.e. Ā Jha Ja. But this probably a mistake, as the letters in the following rows are listed from right to left. However, assuming that the triangle faces downwards, as we are indeed told that it does, then the letters do appear in this order when reading from left to right.

21. The letters should be placed in the triangle in both the normal forward order of the alphabet and the reverse. These two series represent the dynamics of the entire range of manifestation from the cosmic order, at the most universal level, right down to each individual being. Oscillating between two polarities, all things arise and fall away performing their functions and contributing to the rhythmn and harmony of the One. In the following passage, the two extremes of these movements are variously represented as two complimentary opposites just as they are time and again in ritual and in the universe. In between abides the Absolute, stable and unchanging, free from the opposites. It is without gender. The YKh (1) begins by describing Śrīkaṇṭha. To the right and to the left of him are the opposites, the two series of processes, one leading away from him and the other towards him. There we read:

Emanation is on his left and withdrawal is on his right. The Path of the Gods (devayāna) is emanation. (The universe) should be withdrawn by the Path of the Fathers. (When) she is on the Great Path (mahāyāna), she protects the auspicious (śubha) condition of persistence. She is the power of the five principles and she functions (gāminī lit. 'moves') on the three Paths.

Worldly experience (bhukti) is emanation, (whereas) withdrawal has liberation as its mark. Emanation brings about the rotation of the Sun as it emanates the troups of gods and demons. (When her) nature is the radiant energy (tejas) (of the Sun), she emanates the universe. (When her) nature is the Moon, she withdraws (it). Thus she is called Raudrī who is on the right of Śrīkaṇṭha.

The Path of Emanation is said to begin with the east and ends in the north-east (īśa). (When she) bears a fierce form (raudrarūpa), (she) withdraws (the direction) beginning with the east and ending with the south-east. Brahmā is emanation (which takes place) in due order (commencing with) Brāhmaṇī. All the deities, Indra and the other (deities of the directions), reside (there) as each limb.

The sixty-four are located there in accord with the division of the sacred seats. One should worship (them) in due order, so that emanation (may take place) in the Kula tradition (anvaya). (This is done) within (the parts of the maṇḍala) beginning with the Unbroken (Circle i.e. the Point) in accord with the path (of the proper sequence) up to Śrīvṛkṣaka at the end.

It is established in emanation through the forward order (anuloma), while withdrawal takes place by the reverse (viloma) of that. The Plane of the Neuter (napuṁsaka Absolute) is in between emanation and withdrawal.

Following the reverse order one should eliminate (varjayet) everything, and worship (it) by means of the forward order. One should not do (this) in (any) other way if one desires the most excellent accomplishment (siddhi).

tasya vāme [k: bhave; g: bhāme] bhavet sṛṣṭiḥ [k: sṛṣṭiṁ; g: sṛṣṭi] saṁhāraṁ dakṣiṇe bhavet ||
devayānaṁ bhavet sṛṣṭiḥ [k: sṛṣṭiṁ; g: sṛṣṭi] pitṛyānena saṁharet |
mahāyānagatā sā [g: nāṁ] tu sthitiṁ [k, g: sthitaṁ] pālayate śubhām ||
sā śaktiḥ pañcatattvānāṁ yānatritayagāminī |
yā bhuktiḥ [g: bhukti] sā bhavet [k: bhavat] sṛṣṭiḥ saṁhāraṁ muktilakṣaṇam ||
sūryāvartakarā sṛṣṭir devāsuragaṇān [k g: sṛṣṭi-; k: devānsuragaṇān; g: devānśuraganān] sṛjan [k: missing; g: dvijān] |
tejorūpā sṛjed viśvaṁ [k: viśva] śaśirūpā [k g: śasi-] tu saṁharet ||
raudrī tena samākhyātā śrīkaṇṭhasyaiva [g: sṛkaṇṭhasyaiva] dakṣagā |
pūrvādyaṁ [k g: -dyā] yāvad īśāntaṁ [g: -śānta] sṛṣṭimārgaṁ [k: sṛṣṭidharmāṅgaṁ] prakīrtitam ||
pūrvādy āgneyaparyantaṁ saṁhared [g: saṁharendra] raudrarūpadhṛk [g: rūpadhṛk] |
yo brahmā sa [k g: sā] bhavet [g: bhave] sṛṣṭir [k g: sṛṣṭi] brāhmaṇy anukrameṇa tu [k: ta] ||
indrādidevatāḥ sarve pratyaṅgāṅgena tad vaset |

aṣṭāṣṭakāni [k: aṣṭāṁsakāni] tatra sthāḥ pīṭhabhedena saṁsthitāḥ ||
pūjayet tu krameṇaiva yāvat sṛṣṭiḥ [k g: sṛṣṭi] kulānvaye |
akhaṇḍādiṣu [k: aṣaṁḍādiṣu] mārgeṇa yāvac chrīvṛkṣakāvadhiḥ [k: -dhe; g: -dhi] ||
anulomena sṛṣṭistharh saṁhāraṁ [g: sahāraṁ] tadvilomataḥ |
sṛṣṭisaṁhārayor [g: -yo] madhye] napuṁsakapadaṁ bhavet ||
vilomāt varjayet sarvaṁ anulomena cārcayet |
anyathā naiva kartavyaṁ yadīcchet [k: yadichet] siddhim uttamām ||
YKh (1) 37/13cd-22

Worldly benefits, liberation and the eight accomplishments arise by the forward order. (So, too, the magical acts of) pacification and nourishment, passion, the Śrīkrama and the rest, the offering (bali), the rite of adoration (pūjā), the wheel, the consecration, the sacred thread, the installation (of an idol) (pratiṣṭhā), initiation, marriage, and (other such) observances (pratīkṣaṇa) – (all) this should be done by the Path of the Sun. One should avoid the (reverse, that is) the rotation of the Moon.

The magic rites (kṣudrakarman) of murder, expulsion, enmity, delusion, paralysis, and the others are in the eastern and south-eastern direction. One should not perform the magic rites performed for someone else (parakṛtya). These rites manifest (sphuranti) in due order from the east onwards.

[. . .] Such is power that moves within the Six Wheels in the sequence of emanation. O pervasive lord, (this) the sequence in the forward order (anuloma) begins with the topknot (śikhā) and ends with the pair of feet. The reverse (viloma) sequence progresses (pathyate) beginning with the feet and ending with the head. Having learned the sequence of emanation to start with, one should then commence the rite of adoration (pūjā). One should perform the rite of adoration in the reverse order (vilomāt). In the end it is established on my plane (of being). The rite of adoration in the maṇḍala is as it is in the body.

anulomāt [k: anulomānya; g: anulomāt pra] prajāyante [k: yajayeta; g: prajāyeta] bhuktimuktyaṣṭasiddhayaḥ [k: -muktāṣṭa-] |
śāntikaṁ pauṣṭikaṁ [g: puṣṭikaṁ] kāmaṁ maṇḍalaṁ [k: maṇḍalīṁ] śrīkramādikam ||
baliḥ [k g: vali] pūjā [k g: pūjāṁ] tathā [g: tayā] cakraṁ abhiṣekaṁ [g: abhikekaṁ] pavitrakam |
pratiṣṭhā ca tathā dīkṣā vivāhaṁ ca pratīkṣaṇā [k g: prati-] ||
ravimārgeṇa [g: -mārgena] kartavyaṁ somāvartaṁ [k: sonāvartta; g: somāvarttā] vivarjayet |
māraṇoccāṭane dveṣe mohane [k: mohana] stambhaneṣu ca ||

ye cānye [g: nānye] kṣudrakarmāṇi pūrvam āgneyagocare [k: pūrvāmāgneyārabhet] ǀ na kuryāt kṣudrakarmāṇi parakṛtyāni [k: parakṛtyena yāti] vai [g: ve] kvacit [k: missing] ǀǀ [. . .]
evaṁ sṛṣṭikrame [k: sṛṣṭiḥ-] śaktiḥ ṣaṭcakrāntaracāriṇī [k: -dhāriṇī; g: -cāciṇī] ǀ śikhādi pādayugmāntaṁ [k: -pāṭhayugmāntaṁ; g: -pīṭhayugmāntaṁ] anulomakramaṁ [k: anulome-] vibho [g: vibhau] ǀǀ pādādi yāvat mūrdhāntaṁ vilomaṁ pathyate [k: pacyate] kramam ǀ ādau [g: ādo] sṛṣṭikramaṁ jñātvā paścāt pūjāṁ [g: pūjā] samārabhet ǀǀ vilomāt kārayet pūjāṁ ante tiṣṭhati [k: ṣṭivati ; g: ṣṭiñcāti] me pade ǀ śarīre tu [k g: ṣu] yathā pūjā maṇḍale ca tathā bhavet ǀǀ YKh (1) 37/23-26, 45-47

1. Table of Opposites

	Śrīkaṇṭha
Forward Order (anuloma): East to North-east		Reverse Order (pratiloma): East to South-east
Left		Right
Brahmā		Rudra
Sun		Moon
Day		Night
Way of the Gods (devayāna)	The Great Way (mahāyāna)	Way of the Fathers (pitṛyāna)
Emanation	Persistence	Withdrawal
Male	Neuter	Female
Śiva		Raudrī
Worldly Benefits		Liberation
White Rites		Black Rites
From head to feet		From feet to head

22. Other names of this letter are Sky and Hanumān.

23. Possibly, another name for this letter is Tārā.

24. Another name for this letter is Two Heads. Or is Two Heads Pha ?

25. Śakti appears in places to be also the name for the letter Pha.

26. The letter Bha is also called Hara.

27. We find the same code in chapter 26 (43-47) of YKh (1) The passage is not the same, although it is structured in the same way. There, as here, the letters are first projected into the triangular grid of Meru and once this is done, the Samayā Vidyā along with the Five Praṇavas are extracted from the grid making use of these code names. The variant names listed in YKh (1) are noted in italics. See Appendix 1.

28. The worship of the prastāra goes together with the worship of the foundation on which it is drawn. The two were worshipped at the beginning when the prastāra was about to be drawn and they are worshipped again now that the prastāra has been completed.

It appears that the chalk with which the prastāra is drawn is normally kept and worshipped along with it. Thus reference to the chalk alone implies the prastāra itself and so accounts for why the prastāra is called khaṭikā.

29. saṁhāreṇa svarūpataḥ – lit. 'in accord with the nature of withdrawal.'

Now that the Prastāra has been constructed, we move on to its application. Letters are identified within the prastāra with reference to one another. For example, if the letter Ha is required. It can be located in between as many as eight pairs of letters. Or it may be located with reference solely to the letter above or below it or to either side. In the case of the letter Ha this allows for eight more options, thus making sixteen different ways in which it can be located and hence 'extracted' from the prastāra. The letters may be given directly or denoted by code names. The most common set of code names are those of the deities governing the letters of the Śabdarāśi and Mālinī alphabets. The letters may also be denoted by the part of the body onto which they are projected or, as in this case, by an independent set of names. Again, they may be denoted by the location of the macrocosmic counterparts of the compartments. These house deities. They are inner sacred places corresponding to ones in the outside world. The names of these places thus, by extension, become the names of the letters located there.

The Meruprastāra is by far the most popular of such grids in the Kubjikā Tantras. Theoretically every mantra could be extracted from it in the way described, just as they could all be extracted from any of the three or four others we find in the texts. Even so, some mantras are especially associated with a particular grid. Thus, for example, the Vajragahvara (described in ṢSS 39/49-95) is used to conceal the mantra of Vajrakubjīśvarī (ṢSS 39/96). Accordingly, the grid is described first and then the mantra is extracted from it. The same takes place here. In this case, the first mantra to be extracted is the main Vidyā of the goddess which, as the foremost Vidyā, is especially linked to Meruprastāra. This is because this is the Path of Meru, which is the source of the goddess's scripture and, indeed, all her tradition. From here Kukārā Vidyā, that is, the Vidyā of the goddess Kubjikā, comes forth in the form of a garland of thirty-two letters (vidyā devyā kukārākhyā dvātriṁśākṣaramālinī | merumārgād viniṣkrāntā YKh 16/2abc).

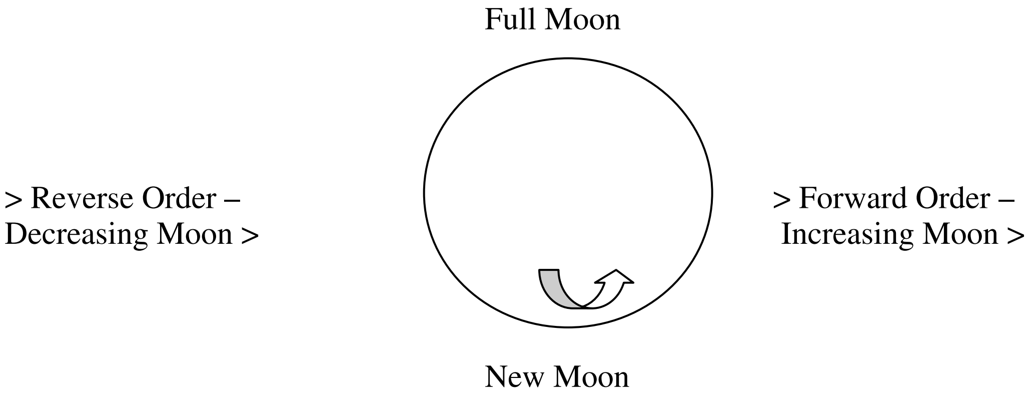
30. One of the greatest powers the initiate acquires by virtue of the Command transmitted to him through initiation is the Gaze of the Lion, which the deity itself possesses. The intensity and energy he puts into scrutinizing the grid to find the correct letters and extract them empowers them outside the goddess Triangle to be as they are within it, that is, full of the energy of the Command.

31. The following section is dedicated to the extraction of the goddess's Vidyā. It is appropriately heralded by the statement that Kubjikā is the Yoginī who governs all the Yoginīs of the letters in the Meruprastāra, who reside there in its sacred sites. The next sentence concisely describes her as the goddess of the Moon. Her Vidyā is the Vidyā of the New Moon.

32. The Vidyās of the New and Full Moon form a couple, linked by their common nature as the lunar Vidyā of the goddess. The Vidyā of the New Moon is the root Vidyā recited in the reverse order. The Vidyā of the Full Moon is the root Vidyā recited in the forward order encapsulated by the Five Praṇavas at the beginning, recited in the forward order, and at the end, in the reverse order (see below 9/58cd). The Vidyā of the New Moon does not have the energizing Praṇavas because, just as it gives energy to the energies of the of the Moon, it energizes itself.

The Vidyā is going to be extracted in the reverse order, which is that of withdrawal (saṁhāra). This procedure is equated with the dark lunar fortnight in which the moon progressively decreases. This is the Sequence of the New Moon called Amā, from which is derived the word amāvasyā lit. 'the dwelling of Amā'. It is called 'unborn' because although the digit of the New Moon is the source of the other digits and where they are finally aborbed, it is never itself visible. It is therefore never 'born' and, for the same reason, never dies, waxes or wanes. It is the source of life-giving nectar – amṛta – which is devoid – a – of anything dead – mṛta. Accordingly, this energy is thus also called Amarikā – the Immortal.

Diagram 4. The New and the Full Moon



The Vidyā recited in the forward order in accord with the sequence of emanation. This corresponds to the increasing phase of the moon, which is the sequence of the Full Moon. The Vidyā is then recited in the reverse order (8/5). This is the sequence of the New Moon, which is that of withdrawal, corresponding to the decreasing phase of the moon. In this way the lunar month, the first half of which culminates in the full moon (śuklapakṣa – the 'bright fornight') and the second half, which ends with the new moon (kṛṣṇapakṣa – the 'dark fortnight'), is complete (see below 9/58cd-59 and 9/62cd–7).

The form of the Vidyā extracted here is:

BHAGAVATI GHORE HSKHPHREṀ ŚRĪKUBJIKE HRĀṀ HRĪṀ HRAUṀ
ṄAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHI CHRĀṀ CHRĪṀ KIṆI KIṆI VICCE

Concerning the various forms of the Vidyā, see appendix 2.

33. See 10/27.

34. See ibid.

35. Each letter is a being who is located in his / her own city (pura) in the grid of fifty letters. In this context, container and contained are identifiable.

36. The goddess who loves all – Sarvakāminī – is the power of the will (icchā). This is Māyā whose letter is I.

37. The line 8/60ab is practically the same as 28/4cd.

38. Assuming that the four Siddhas meant here are those who govern the sacred seats, we can tabulate these correspondences as follows:

2. Table of the Four Siddhas of the Goddess's Vidyā

Nasal	Siddha	Sacred Seat	Age
Ṅa	Oḍḍīśanātha	Oḍḍiyāna	Kṛta
Ña	Ṣaṣṭhanātha	Jālandhara	Tretā
Ṇa	Caryānātha	Pūrṇagiri	Dvāpara
Na	Mitranātha	Kāmarūpa	Kali

39. According to the Ṭīkā and Newar litugies, Rudra's seed-syllable is, as one would expect, HRŪṀ.

40. The consonant Ma here, and in the extraction of the following syllable stands, apparently, for anusvāra. As this is the seed-syllable of Viṣṇu (see Ṭīkā MS K fl. 6b), it is sustained by him and so, I suppose, is said to be on his head.

41. These three are the Tongue of Wisdom (vidyājihvā) (see above, 8/60cd).

42. There are several problems here. I assume that in this case Śakti means the letter E which, by virtue of its triangular shape represents the Yoni: 'beautiful,' as Abhinava puts it, 'with the fragrance of emission' (visargāmodasundaram TĀ 3/95ab). According to the code given above (8/34cd-40ab), Māyā is the letter I, but here I take it to mean Śakti. Why the text says that this syllable is associated with the arising of all the letters may be because E represents the Yoni which contains all the letters. The letter Ka may represent Kāmarūpa, which is located in the bottom corner of the triangle, and so serves as the path through which the letters emerge out of the triangle into manifest form.

43. According to the KMT (16/71-84), the form or body of the goddess is 'supported by the maṇḍalas' (ibid. 16/42a, 16/83c and 16/88c, also 16/86d and 17/12b). There they are said to be twenty-five, and represent the twenty-five consonants from Ka to Ma (see Heilijgers-seleen 1994: 172-6 and 271-2). In this case probably the fifty wheels that serve as the compartments for the letters within the triangle are meant (cf. above 8/3). According to the KRU, the body of the god is made of maṇḍalas and that of the goddess of the Vidyā. The union of the two takes place when the Vidyā is projected into the maṇḍala. The notion in this case is different. The deities of the letters enter the limbs of the goddess, and thereby unite with her through the centre of the wheels to form a part of the goddess who is the Triangle in which they are located.

44. The following section from 8/71 to 8/80 concerns the twenty-sixth syllable (counting in the reverse order) of the Vidyā. This is the important seed-syllable HSKHPHREṀ. This is the Peak-syllable of Consciousness (caitanyakūṭa), also called the Heart of Kubjikā or the One Syllable Vidyā (ekākṣarī). See below 9/1-19cd for a detailed treatment.

Ha represents Śiva and Sa, Śakti. Ha, Sa and Kha are the first three letters. The first letter in a long syllable like this one made of conjunct consonants is at the top. The ones that follow are arranged along the vertical axis below it. Thus Kha is 'placed below'.

45. See below 9/3cd-4.

46. At the earliest stage of development of the Kubjikā Tantras, the Liṅga in the centre of the maṇḍala is Vāgbhava, the seed-syllable AIṀ (see 3/18 and note; also 26/58). This is identified with Kubjikā who is Kaulinī, the embodiment of the Command (3/19 see note to 3/13-14ab) and the teacher of the Krama. Here the seed-syllable is HSKHPHREṀ, which is also identified with the Command (8/80). The Root Sūtra, as its name suggests, was probably written in the early period the cult, although probably after the KMT. It extols the seed-syllable AIṀ as the Liṅga. Triangular in shape, the sacred seats are located within it and around it. The following verses assert the presence of the sacred seats in this syllable as well, which thus effectively takes over the attributes of the AIṀ except its shape. The components of the syllable HSKHPHREṀ are arranged along a straight vertical axis, like the branches of a tree. Again, radiant with energy it burns upwards, like the flame of a lamp, towards transcendence. As we shall see in the beginning of the following chapter where this syllable is analysed in detail, the upper part of this syllable, beyond its audible phomenic components, issues out into the energies of Speech that lead to the Transmental and then beyond into the Śāmbhava state. This, the liberated condition, is that of the Skyfarer (khecara). Thus this syllable is identified with the Skyfarer (8/75) whose energy is the verbal form of the gesture (vācikī mudrā) of the Wanderer in the Sky of Consciousness (8/80).

Clearly, there is an essential inconsistency here brought about by new developments in the tradition. Perhaps we can reconcile the two views by conceiving the 'straight' syllable HSKHPHREṀ to be the form of the Command (that is, the goddess), when she emerges from the Liṅga. The 'crooked' triangular syllable AIṀ, on the other hand, is the goddess 'bent' within it. In this way both these seed-syllables of the Vidyā can be identified, as they are, with the Liṅga.

47. See note to 6/10-11ab.

48. In the syllable HSKHPHREṀ, the letter after Kha is Pha and Kha comes after Ha and Sa. If we add the missing Kāmarūpa, we get the following correspondences supported by the Ṭīkā (MS K fl. 7a and 15a-15b; cf 9/3cd ff. below): 1) Jālandhara – Ra 2) Pūrṇagiri – Pha 3) Koṅkaṇa – Kha 4) Kāmarūpa – Sa 5) Oḍḍiyāna – Ha 6) Tisra – E.

49. Cf. above, 8/55a.

50. The expression pātya- (in correct Sanskrit pātavya-) literally means 'should be made to fall' which, with reference to a letter amounts to saying 'should be extracted' i.e. selected out of the letters in the prastāra.

51. We shall see in chapter eleven (11/12cd-14ab), that each of the thirty-two syllables of the Vidyā corresponds to a goddess. In the same chapter we will see how the syllables are deposited on the body. Unlike the extraction of the syllables, which takes place in the reverse order, the deposition of the Vidyā starts from the top of the head, beginning with the first syllable, and proceeds progressively down in the forward order (11/2-10). The thirty-two places on the body that house the syllables by the same token house the corresponding goddesses, and so are appropriately said to be sacred seats.

52. We have seen that the prastāra should be scrutinized with the intensity of a lion's gaze to extract and energize the required letters (above 8/40cd-41). The first of all sacred seats is the Triangle, which contains all the sacred seats. The thirty-two syllable Vidyā is the goddess who governs this seat. Her three gestures are those of the Yoni (yonimudrā), Lotus (padmamudrā) and the Three Parts (trikhaṇḍāmudrā). These three gestures, are aspects of Khecarī Mudrā who is the goddess herself. In their inner form they are flows of vital force in the subtle body that transport the individul soul, leading it into the Transcendental Void with which it merges and so attains the liberated state of Flight. First described extensively in the Trika Tantrasadbhāva, they are taken over by the Kubjikā Tantras and incorporated into the teachings of the KMT (chapter six), ṢSS (chapter ten) and ŚM (chapter eight).

53. Anything can be transformed into 'nectar' if this is required in the course a ritual. It need not be food, nor liquid, although more often than not the substance is in fact liquid or solid food. It is a simple and common procedure that forms a part of virtually all Sanskritic rituals. It is usually done by simply making the Gesture of the Cow (dhenumudrā) and repeating the root mantra. For a photograph of Dhenumudrā see ŚŚP I, plate I, 8 – 'Thread together the fingers of the hands. Join the little finger (one hand) to the ring finger (of the other hand) and the middle to the index finger. Such is the Gesture of the Cow, which represents the udder of a cow.' (Bhojadeva quoted by Nirmalamaṇi, ibid. p. 46)

Here the Vidyā is to be transformed into nectar. The process is accordingly more complex and a major procedure. Although no gesture is made in this case, the root mantra – the Vidyā itself with the Five Praṇavas – serves to transform the Vidyā into nectar.

The 'most excellent abode' (puravara) is the maṇḍala that contains the Vidyā of the goddess. The form in which the Vidyā has been enunciated is that of the New Moon. This corresponds to the burning, purifying aspect of the goddess. This Vidyā is uttered first to deplete the forces in the adept that concur to generate and sustain the impurities in his consciousness, which bring about a sense of duality. The following passage explains how this Vidyā is modified to form the one corresponding to the peaceful, emissive aspect of the goddess. This is the Full Moon replete with the nectar that is released from above to bathe the yogi, purified by the previous form of the Vidyā, in its lunar bliss.

54. Cf. 9/58cd-59. See above 5/64 where the Full Moon is said to be full of the sixteen energies and Amā is the seventeenth energy that rains nectar. For the relationship between the Vidyā of the Full and New Moon, see above, n.32.

55. The Five Kaulikī Vidyās are modified 'female' forms of the Five Praṇavas. Concerning them and the Five Praṇavas in general, see the intro. vol 1, p. 637-653.

56. These five Vidyās are actually modifications of the so-called Kaula form of the Five Praṇavas. The Ṭ appears to present the same group as the form of the Five Praṇavas that are added to the beginning and end of its version of the Samayā Vidyā to convert it into the Kaula Vidyā. They are: AIṀ HRĪṀ ŚRĪṀ KHPHREṀ and HSRŪAUṀ. These same seed-syllables are extracted again below in the reverse order 24/52 ff. There they are called Śāmbhava Praṇavas (24/60).

57. The City is the maṇḍala. The first Praṇava is AIṀ, commonly known as Vāgbhava. The Wick of the Command is a 'plough-shaped' i.e. semi-circular (7/41cd-2ab) and is associated with the Kadamba Tree in the middle of the Triangle. The Kadamba Tree is the Point (bindu) which is the Full Moon, and so the Wick of the Command is the Half Moon (ardhacandra) within it that symbolizes the New Moon that feeds it with its energy. See below 20/25 where this Vidyā is identified with Parā Vidyā, who is said to be 'the supreme – the mother of the universe'.

58. The Wheel (cakra) between the Foundation and the City of Jewels is the Wheel of the Self-supported – svādhiṣṭhāna. In the early systems Kuṇḍalinī was not just conceived to be in the lowest centre. She is also located in the navel where the City of Jewels – maṇipura – is visualized or, as in this case, in between the two.

59. The fourth letter down from A in the middle column of letters in the Meruprastāra is Ha.

60. Anusvāra is written AṀ. Clearly, the point above the A is the 'head' of A. Aśiram also means Unstruck Sound, as we can see from this reference: 'Above that (Bindu) is the principle of Unstruck Sound, which is the omnipresent 'head of A' (aśira) (tadūrdhve 'nāhataṁ tattvaṁ aśiraṁ sarvatomukham |

YKh (1) 55/11cd.

61. I understand possession here to be the penetration of the deity into the adept who repeats this syllable, rather than the power to induce demonic possession in others.

62. The Command is the Transmental (unmanī) which is at the extremity of this and every seed-syllable as the energy that conjoins with the Śāmbhava plane beyond. Cf. below 9/6.

63. An inner, symbolic explanation of this Vidyā is found below 24/27.

64. The 'plane of the Command' where the fifth and highest Praṇava is located is, presumably, the Wheel of the Command (ājñācakra). As the perfected adept recites the Five Praṇavas, Kuṇḍalinī rises within his subtle body, piercing one Wheel after another. At the highest point of her ascent she reaches the Command of the Transmental. From there he is spontaneously transported to Supreme Principle where he attains perfect and permanent freedom from the troubles and suffering of fettered existence.

65. She is called Kaulinī below 24/60.

66. The Five Praṇavas are related to the sacred seats below in 9/20-26ab where the series of Five Praṇavas is called the Sequence of the Five Sacred Seats (9/22). See also chapter fifty-four below, which is entirely dedicated to an exposition of the relationship between the Five Praṇavas and the sacred seats. For their location in the body, cf. 65/44cd ff., see also intro. vol 1, p. 650 where the correspondences listed in this and parallel sections are presented in a chart.

67. The Five Praṇavas are deposited in the places listed in the table (intro. vol 1, p. 649), drawn from 54/1-11 below. Kṣobha literally means 'disturbance' or 'arousal'. This is the word used in the Sāṁkhyā school to describe the condition of (the feminine) Prakṛti ('(psycho-physical) nature') when it comes in contact with Puruṣa – the (male) 'Person'. 'Aroused' or 'disturbed' in this way, the balance within Prakṛti is upset which precipitates its self-differentiation into the things of the world. The sexual euphemism is evident and intended. In the Sāmkhya system, this 'arousal' is binding. Whereas, on the contrary, the 'arousal' of the spiritual energy of Kuṇḍalinī is essential for every aspect of Kaula practice, and hence is liberating. Aroused, the energy of desire (icchāśakti) through which the world is created seeks to return to its state of primordial repose. Impelled, the arousal is strengthened at each of the five stations along the upward path running through the axis of the body where a Praṇava is located. Like OṀ, the Upaniṣadic Praṇava, they are similar to bows that project the arrow of the vital essence of the Self towards its target. At each station there is a wheel within the fivefold wheel that rotates around the axis. In the centre of each Wheel, a Praṇava energizes the aspect of the Self that resides there.

68. The Vidyā is the first and original seat of the deity. Repeating the Five Praṇavas together in conjunction with the Vidyā is the same as visiting and worshipping the deity in all the five external sacred seats and in the internal, original one. The deity is the goddess of the Full Moon, described below 24/60-61.

69. The Accomplishment of the Heroes is the Supreme Accomplishment (parāsiddhi), that is, liberation. Like the Accomplishment of Flight (khecaratvasiddhi), the Great Pervasion is a common way of referring to the liberated state. Abhinava equates this condition with that of the definitive experience of the universal activity of consciousness (ghūrṇi). This is the ultimate state in a progressive series of states that mark the cessation of false identification with the body and hence the progressive detachment of the living being from it. This condition is one of total detachment from the body and hence freedom from the conditioned 'non-pervasive' state of corporial and mental bondage. Abhinava explains:

> Then, established on the Plane of Truth, (the yogi) intuits that consciousness is all things and he vibrates because vibration (the realisation of the true nature of the eternal cycle of creation and destruction) is said to be the Great Pervasion. The presumption that the Self is what the Self is not and, that being so, the presumption that what is not the Self, that is, the body and the rest, is the Self, is bondage while the cessation (of these notions) is liberation. TĀ 5/104cd-106ab.

Pervasion is not a passive state – just a pure state of Being freed of conditioning ignorance. It is the positive vibrant experience of the perpetual affirmation of Being and Consciousness through everything that comes into being at each moment and every perception that, with it, arises and falls away. The lower is pervaded by the higher that contains it. The lower thus has being as the contents of the higher and so implies its existence by its very Being. In this way the higher and the lower are both present in everything. Every single thing is pervaded by all that is above and below without which it could not exist. The realisation of this pervasive fullness, which is the essential being and consciousness of one's own true nature, takes place when the individual is united with the goddess. Merging in her by her grace, he is blessed with her power and shares in her condition. The model for this union is the one that takes place between a Siddha and a Yoginī. Within the flow of the repetition of the Vidyā, man encounters the Skyfaring Yoginī and unites with her internally, just as Siddhas and Yoginīs unite in the outer world.

70. The adept achieves these things by means of a will that follows the whims of his passion (kāmagatīcchayā).

71. Although these powers can be attained in other ways, the attainment of these powers is associated in a special way with the recitation of the Five Praṇavas (cf. below 54/13-4ab).

Eight yogic powers or accomplishments (siddhi) form a standard group cited together in many treatises on Yoga. These are basically drawn from the Vyāsa's commentary on the Yogasūtra (3/45) where they are called 'lordships' (aiśvarya). In line with Vyāsa's commentary, the anonymous gloss on Bhāskara's commentary on the Śivasūtra provides a standard description of these powers, which is as follows:

> (The yogi) can, by the power of atomicity (aṇimā), reduce the size of his limbs at will in an instant and thus, by making (his) body small, enter even atoms. By (the yogic power) of lightness (laghimā), the gross body (can) move on the trail of breezes like the tip of a reed. By the (power) of greatness (mahimā) (the yogi can) make (his body) big (at will). By (the power of) attainment (prāpti) (he can) extend his limbs and so, by the length of the tips of his fingers, touch the moon even while he stands on earth. By the power of wilfulness (prākāmya), the elements do not affect (the yogi's) basic state (rūpa) either when they emerge (and are present) or are submerged (and are absent) because they cannot obstruct his determined intentions, like water (that remains the same) even when on the ground. By the power of control (vaśitā) all beings follow (the yogi's) commands. By (the power of) lordship (īśitā) (the yogi can) bring groups of gross elements together or disperse them at will and freely change the nature of the elements as he pleases. (Gloss on commentary of ŚSū 1/22 Dyczkowski 1992: 57-8).

Kashmiri Śaivites explain these powers as aspects of the divine power the yogi acquires through the expansion of consciousness. In this perspective, they are:

The power of atomicity (aṇimā) is the power to be aware of one's own presence within all things.

The power of lightness (laghimā) is the power to free oneself from the grossness of diversity.
The power of greatness (mahimā) is the power to experience the all-pervasion of consciousness.
The power to make oneself heavy at will (gharimā) [which has been omitted in the above citation] is the capacity to evolve gross forms out of one's own consciousness.
The power of attainment (prāpti) is the capacity to rest within one's own nature.
The power of wilfulness (prākāmya) is the power to grasp cosmic diversity.
The power of control (vaśitvā) is the power to do whatever one wishes.
The power of lordship (īśitva) is the yogi's unbroken (akhaṇḍita) freedom. (PTv (KSTS edition) p. 37 fn. 74; cf. MM pp. 126-127)

Note that one of the eight yogic powers is not mentioned in these verses. This is the power to make oneself heavy at will (gharimā). Also, the power of control (vaśitā) has been replaced in our text by the power of subjugation (vaśīkaraṇa). Although the two terms are similar, as are the powers they denote, the latter resonates with the added implied meaning that this is a magical power. One who recites the Five Praṇavas acquires not just yogic but also magical powers. Subjugation is one of the so-called Six (magical) Acts (ṣaṭkarma), although as an analysis of a large number of texts reveals, they are basically nine. According to Goudriaan (1978: 259), these are as follows: Pacification (śānti), Subjugation (vaśīkaraṇa), Immobilization (stambhana), Sowing Discord (vidveṣaṇa), Liquidation (māraṇa), Delusion (mohana), Attraction (ākarṣaṇa) and Acquisition (puṣṭi). Concerning the act of Subjugation, see ibid. 310 ff.

Finally, the attainment of the liberated condition, which is the 'immortal abode' and identification with Rudra, is here represented as the eighth and highest yogic power. This conception of liberation as a yogic accomplishment (siddhi) is contrary to the view of classical, Patañjali Yoga, which maintains that yogic accomplishments are attainments (siddhi) when the yogi emerges from the state of concentration but impediments for him when he is in it and hence obstacles to liberation (te samādhāv upasargā vyutthāne siddhayaḥ – YṢū 3/37). Kashmiri Śaivites, on the contrary, support the view generally held in most Tantric traditions, and by implication in the passage we are examining, that liberation is the supreme accomplishment (parasiddhi). Similarly, according to the Buddhist Guhyasamājatantra (chapter 18). Siddhis are of two kinds. One type is ordinary (sāmānya); the example given is the power to make oneself invisible (antardhāna). The other type of accomplishment is 'most excellent' (uttama). This the Buddhas have declared to be the attainment of Buddhahood.

72. Compare these five Gestures with those said to correspond to the five sacred seats in chapter six above (note to 6/6).

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER NINE

1. This is one of numerous cases of a hiatus in a compound. See above, note to 3/77d. 2. घ्, च्, छ्: देव्या

3. Note again how the goddess is addressed, as would be the god, with the vocative प्रभो. See above, note to 4/38c. 4. घ्, च्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच

5. KuKh 9/2cd, 3cd, 5cd-10cd, 11cd-19ab, = YKh (1) 50/15cd, 16ab, 17ab-22ab, 22cd-30ab. There is only one MS of YKh (1) that contains this passage. YKh (1): –वक्त्रा 6. All MSs: ज्ञातवामेकं

7. घ्: –र:; YKh (1): तं ज्ञात्वा पूर्वं महेश्वरम्

8. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्: सिद्धिस्तामा–; घ्, च्: –कर्षर्णय; छ्: सिद्धिस्तामाकर्षर्णय; ज्: सिद्धिस्तामाकर्षणय

9. See above, 8/112a. The following three lines up to 9/5cd are missing in YKh (1). This line correponds to KuKh 9/3cd = YKh (1) 50/16ab. YKh (1): जालन्धरं
तु प्रथमं पौर्णगिर्यं 10. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्: –ण 11. ङ्: च * र्थकम्

12. क्, ख्: –षष्टं; ङ्: –मोकारषष्ठ; all other MSs: पीथ– –षष्थं

13. All MSs except ख्, झ्: तिश्रोतनायकम्. The noun is स्रोतस्, so the form derived from it should be त्रिस्रोतस् but is never so. See above, note to 6/165a.

14. झ्: मालन्यास्ते; all other MSs: सालन्यास्ते

15. All MSs except झ्: –ता 16. Cf. above, 8/112d and below, 9/15b.

17. ङ्: भु 18. झ्: व्यादिशेत्; all other MSs: वि – आदिशेत्

19. All MSs: निरालंवा 20. Cf. 8/112d. YKh (1): षद्भिवक्षामि

21. घ्, च्, छ्, ज् and YKh (1): –विन्दु 22. All MSs: –नाथं

23. क्: –ऊर्द्धं; छ्, ज्: शक्ति– 24. All MSs: तु

25. क्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: तदूर्द्ध; YKh (1): तस्योर्द्धे 26. ग्: ज्ञया

27. क्: तपो–; all other MSs except ख्, झ्: ततोपरि; YKh (1): कारणा षड्भिरुत्तमा

28. ङ्: सयोगात् 29. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्: –शान्त्रि. द्वादश is the correct form here but metrically is too short. The reading is confirmed by YKh (1). See above, note to 7/9d. 30. M → N. 31. YKh (1) ग्: वक्षामि

32. YKh (1): हृदयेन 33. घ्: –सनं; YKh (1): –सनम्। च. M → N.

34. YKh (1): –पुन्य– 35. YKh (1): रूपत्व

36. ग्: सरङ्गगन–; घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: सरङ्गगण–; YKh (1) ग्: सरग्रसनसन्निभम्

37. YKh (1): होमाख्यं 38. ग्: ऊर्द्ध

39. YKh (1): तदूर्ध्वे पीठमेकं तु 40. YKh (1): उंकारं 41. YKh (1): मज्जमध्ये

42. YKh (1): –ख्ये 43. YKh (1): ऊर्ध्वे वक्त्र 44. All MSs: ध्याये

45. M → N. 46. ग्, ङ्, ज्: तदूर्द्धे; घ्, च्, छ्: तदूर्द्ध;YKh (1): तदुर्ध्वे

47. क्, ख्: आलोतक–; YKh (1): आलातचक्रसन्निभं

48. छ्, ज्: समभ्यस्य; YKh (1): बिन्दुमेकं समभ्ययै 49. YKh (1): अर्धेन्दु तस्य

50. ङ्: वापरि 51. See above, note to 3/52c.

52. YKh (1) ग्: –त 53. M → N. 54. YKh (1) च

55. The copulative pronoun required here has been omitted.

56. All MSs: हृदयादि; YKh (1): हृदयां तु 57. YKh (1): –भ्या

58. ङ्: मस्तक; YKh (1): च मूर्द्धनि 59. YKh (1) ग्: शनैस्तुञ्च 60. M → N.

61. Cf. 8/112d and 9/5b.

62. All MSs and YKh (1): –व्यापी. The regular feminine accusative singular
– व्योमव्यापिनीम् – is too long for the metre. 63. क्: तदूर्द्ध
64. YKh (1): चतुरंगुल मूर्धनि. चतुरंगुलादूर्ध्वतः would be correct. चत्वारि is the form of the nominative and accusative neuter. 65. क्: ऊर्द्ध
66. छ्: ओलिदेव्यस्त्रः *; YKh (1): अलिदेव्यास्त्रयः. तिस्रः is the regular feminine of the nominative of the numeral त्रि. See above, note to 6/55d.
67. छ्, ज्: स्मृता; YKh (1) ग्: स्मृतान्
68. YKh (1): तदूर्ध्वे तु परावस्था 69. All MSs: शतावस्थं. This emendation agrees with the reading in YKh (1). 70. All MSs: समभ्यस्य; YKh (1): समभ्यस्य
71. ङ्: सर्व 72. This line is missing in MSs घ्, छ् and च्.
73. घ्, च्: शून्यन्ते; YKh (1): द्वादशान्ते
74. All MSs: तु मने; YKh (1): मने 75. क्: कामं; घ्: कोण
76. ङ्: मुच्येति; च्: मुच्यन्ति; all other MSs: मुच्यति. This emendation agrees with the reading in YKh (1) मुच्येत. See note to 6/130c. 77. ङ्: अथान्या; छ्: अथान्य
78. घ्, च्: –शेषरं 79. ख्: तूष्णिनो; all other MSs: तूष्णिना
80. क्: –र्थ 81. ङ्: खचरं 82. –ठः
83. क्: खफूर–; ग्: खफूरम्रृति; all other MSs: खफरमेति 84. ङ्: नामं; छ्, ज्: नाम
85. क्, ख्: हसर–; ग्, ज्: हसर–ऊ ओपदांकितं; ङ्: सहर–ऊ ओपदांकितं; घ्, च्, छ्: हसर – ऊ –
ओपादाकितं. See note to 3/77d. 86. ङ्: शास्त्रस्मिं
87. क्: –ता; ख्: –रिकां; all other MSs except झ्: स्वावतारितां
88. घ्, ङ्, च्: इकारश्च 89. झ्: ई उ उ; all other MSs: इ उ उ
90. ग्: सजा–. IC. 91. ख्: –ठः 92. क्, ग्, घ्, ङ्, छ्: –वे
93. ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –र्थ 94. घ्, च्, छ्: स्वरोदये
95. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्: –ये; घ्, च्, छ्: च तृतीयकं. The rest of this line is missing in MSs घ् and च्. 96. क्, ग्, ज्: चं
97. This pāda is missing in MSs घ्, च् and छ्.
98. घ्, छ्: स्वरोदये च तृतीयकं पञ्चमे तु त्रयोदशम्.
99. ग्, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: पीठा 100. N → M.
101. All MSs except झ्: –का 102. All MSs except झ्: –का
103. ख्, ग्, ङ्: नाय–; घ्, च्, छ्: नायकीहं 104. घ्, च्, छ्: महन्तारिका
105. ख्: अद्वैतोत्कर–; all other MSs except झ्: अद्वैतात्कर– 106. ङ्: विछ–
107. क्: वाध– 108. ख्, ङ्: आ– 109. च्: –रू * णी
110. ख्: सिद्ध्य * 111. All MSs: संपूर्णकरणं
112. One is tempted to emend these last two words to accusatives, but then emendations would be required in the following line also. 113. क्, ख्: प्रोक्तो
114. ख्, ङ्: –त. M → N. See above, note to 1/5d.
115. All MSs: भगवत्यामतः 116. M → N. See above, note to 1/5d.
117. क्: पर 118. M → N. 119. ङ्: –म
120. As often happens in the Sanskrit of this text, a number in a compound is in the wrong order. 121. ग्: विष्णुमंवीजं 122. घ्, च्, छ्: रुद्रमुत्तमंण् रौद्र– would be correct. 123. See above, note to 7/87a.
124. DS. Here the cardinal has replaced the required ordinal. See above, note to 6/67c. 125. All MSs except क्, झ्: –प्ति
126. ङ्: सस्थिश्च 127. ङ्: –श

128. All MSs: सिद्धिस्तु पञ्चमे 129. The regular form of the ordinal – षोडशे – does not fit the metre. See above, note to 3/108b.
130. ख्: –संकेत. M → N. See above, note to 1/5d. 131. All MSs: कृत:
132. See above, note to 7/2c. 133. M → N. 134. ख्: धृता
135. ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: व्युत्क्रमेण; ङ्: व्यत्क्रमेण 136. All MSs: द्वे सिद्धे
137. च्: –ये; all other MSs: –प 138. M → N.
139. All MSs: –करणं; IM 6 → 7. 140. See above, note to 6/10b. 141. घ्: पुन: पश्चात्; च्, छ्: पुन: पश्चा
142. All MSs: त्रिविध: 143. ङ्: –शुद्धि 144. घ्, च्, छ्: क्रमे
145. The word शक्ति: is declined here and in the next line as if it were masculine. Other examples are found in 13/15d, 36/59c, 40/143b, 41/53d, 59/6a, 59/70c. See also ṢSS 50/27ab: तद्भावयोगशुद्धस्तु शक्तिना तु सुराधिपे। The analogous deviant form भक्तिना also appears twice at 30/38c and 58/83c.
146. च्: –कंदुकं; all other MSs: त्रिकंदूकम् 147. छ्: –ना
148. घ्, च्, छ्: यु * 149. All MSs except क्, ख्, छ्, ज्: परा
150. घ्, च्, छ्: तदाभिष्टं 151. घ्: –षं. M → N. See above, note to 1/17c. Cf. below, 13/23a.
152. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्: विसर्गसहितं; all other MSs: –सहितं
153. च्, छ्, ज्: –वर्ग. M → N. 154. क्: –मा; ख्: कुतस्मा; छ्, ज्: कुतस्तस्मा
155. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: दपि 156. M → N. 157. क्, ग्: –तो
158. ङ्: –र्घ 159. ङ्: कुत 160. All MSs: –पञ्जर:
161. छ्: –लान् 162. All MSs: –मिह
163. Here is another case of irregular visarga sandhi before a vowel. Cf.
9/54ab and see above, note to 3/22b. 164. ग्, ङ्: –सविनाशाय; छ्: –साविनाशाय.
165. All MSs except झ्: –शं 166. ख्, ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –तद्व
167. ङ्: वृद्धिं 168. All MSs except ङ्: उदयंतं
169. IM 6 + 7. 170. तस्मात्, or the like, is implied here.
171. क्, ग्: संशत: 172. ङ्: –योग. The word योग is generally treated as neuter in this text. cf. 9/61c. 173. ख्, ग्, ङ्, च्, ज्: –न
174. ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्: –मूर्त्ति; घ्, छ्: मूर्त्तिन्; च्: मूर्ती; all other MSs except क्: –मर्ति
175. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, च्, ज्: + न साक्षा; घ्, छ्: साक्षा
176. A present tense would be more appropriate here. Cf. 9/64b and see above, note to 3/14c. 177. ङ्: किचि; all other MSs except क्, झ्: किंचि
178. ङ्: –ध्य; घ्, च्, छ्: हय– 179. ङ्: –प 180. च्: पुरं
181. क्, ग्: तत्रा 182. ग्, च्: वारुणा
183. All MSs except घ्, च्: पूर्ण ग्, ङ्: –नी
184. ग्, ङ्, ज्: चंद्राशुं; छ्: चन्द्राशु. all other MSs: चन्द्रांशु
185. उभौ is used in a compound instead of the required उभय–, to save a syllable. Cf. below, 9/54a and see above note to 7/49b.
186. जप्ता is the regular form. 187. All MSs except झ्: त
188. Cf. above, 9/46b for this irregular sandhi. 189. ङ्: –णं
190. All MSs: विद्या अमावास्या
191. छ्: निग्रहाद्ग्रहे. A dual number is required here. See above, note to 5/46d.
192. All MSs: –प्रत्ययं 193. घ्, च्, छ्: तदितं 194. ङ्: क्षत्र–
195. All MSs: न 196. All MSs except क्, झ्: –न

197. ङ्ः वाक्य–. All MSs: –प्रत्ययः
198. ख्, ग्, ङ्, छ्, ज्ः द्यथा 199. क्, ग्, छ्, ज्ः –क्रमेघ; ख्, ङ्ः ओष्यक्रमेघ; all other MSs: –क्रमेध्य 200. All MSs: नि 201. See above, note to 9/19b. 202. All MSs: पन्थादौ
203. च्, छ्ः विलामान्ते। विलोमेनान्ते appears to have been contracted for the metre.
204. च्, छ्, ङ्, ज्ः व 205. पाठ्यम्, or the like, appears to be missing.
206. All MSs: गमागमे 207. क्, ग्ः नास्ति
208. क्, ग्ः –दुचरिता; ख्, ङ्ः सुकृदुचरिता; घ्, च्, ज्ः सकृदुस्चरिता; छ्ः सकृदुस्वरिता
209. Pairs of prepositions such as यदा ... तदा are required to conjoin these two dependent clauses. 210. ख्ः रुद्राशक्तो; ङ्ः मुद्रां– 211. All MSs:
लभेन्– 212. All MSs: लभेद् 213. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्ः –स्मिन्न–; घ्ः –स्मिन्वावातरिता, च्, छ्, ज्ः –स्मिन्वावतारिता 214. See 9/49c. 215. All MSs except क्, ख्, झ्ः तरु– 216. M → N. 217. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्ः विन्दंति
218. All MSs: दाता 219. All MSs except झ्ः विघ्नं–
220. ङ्ः ष्ठा 221. छ्ः स्थू *
222. Cf. 9/50d 223. ग्, ङ्, छ्, ज्ः य 224. झ्ः क्रमाः
225. All MSs except झ्ः पीठात्. N → M. 226. All MSs: नि
227. All MSs except झ्ः –वाद्यानुलोमतः 228. ज्ः –माच
229. ग्, छ्, ज्ः चकारें *; all other MSs except घ्, च्ः चकारे
230. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्ः –ता, ङ्ः विस्पिता
231. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्ः –मध्य; घ्, च्, छ्ः वि * मध्ये
232. See above, note to 3/9c. 233. See above, note to 3/9c.
234. M → N. 235. All MSs: न चास्य 236. M → N.
237. घ्, च्, छ्ः दिपकं 238. क्, ग्ः षट्जातिषु; ख्, ङ्ः षट्जाटिषु. An ablative is meant here. 239. M → N. 240. All MSs except झ्ः नमो 241. झ्ः वौषत्; all other MSs except वौषट्
242. क्, ख्ः वषत्; घ्, च्, छ्, ज्ः वषट् 243. घ्, च्, छ्ः फट् * र–
244. छ्ः –मत्र– 245. ङ्ः –त
246. All MSs except घ्, च्, झ्ः तेस्तु
247. ग्ः योगंभ्रंशा; घ्, ज्ः योगंभ्रम्सा; ङ्ः योयंभ्रम्शा; च्, छ्ः योगंभ्रसाहि
248. घ्ः –दि; all other MSs: हि 249. ङ्ः जायन्ते 250. क्, ग्ः –र्णां
251. All MSs: चास्य 252. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्ः पीठं– 253. ङ्ः आज्ञापर–
254. ख्, ङ्ः चतुर्– 255. All MSs except घ्ः –पूर्णाभेद–

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER NINE

1. The goddess is addressed as 'the Lord' repeatedly through our text. See 5/28, 5/40cd, 18/77b, 26/1d, 29/1d, 31/110b, 31/116b, 38/1, 39/20b, 40/1d, 40/110d, 40/112b, 42/49d and 67/48d, and note to Sanskrit KuKh 4/38c.

2. The following passage up to 9/19ab is also found in YKh (1) (KuKh 9/2cd, 3cd, 5cd-10cd, 11cd-19ab, = YKh (1) 49/15cd, 16ab, 17ab-22ab, 22cd-30ab). The entire section in YKh (1) of which this is a portion is called the Dvādaśaślokasūtra – the Sūtra of Twelve Verses. No mention is made in the KuKh that this is a sūtra or part of one, suggesting that the KuKh drew them from YKh (1) or from this fragment of it, possibly when it existed only as separate parts split into independent sūtras. There, the portion of these verses end with the following verse omitted here:

Omniscience arises by (this) supreme knowledge alone. These are the Twelve Verses acclaimed as being in the Śāmbhava (state).

paramajñānamātreṇa sarvajñatvaṁ prajāyate ||
ity ete dvādaśa ślokāḥ śāmbhave parikīrtitāḥ | YKh (1) 49/30cd-31ab

The name of the sūtra may well have been derived from its original length, but as we have it now it is more than twelve verses long. Other fragments are incorporated in the KuKh, as 11/18 (= YKh (1) 49/1) and 11/21-23ab (= YKh (1) 49/2-4ab). But even if the name of the sūtra is not derived from its length it is nonetheless appropriate because, divided into twelve parts, one of the names of the syllable described in this passage is Dvādaśaśloka. For the same reason it is also called the Vidyā of Twelve Syllables (Dvādaśākṣarī or Dvādaśākṣarikā). This seed-syllable has already been briefly discussed in the previous chapter (8/76cd-80ab) as a part of the Samayā Vidyā. Here it is discussed again in greater detail as a seed-syllable in its own right. So, just as we have two presentations here, similarly the Ṭīkā deals with this subject twice (both times on fl. 5b). In the first instance this seed-syllable is discussed in the context of the Samayā Vidyā of which it is a part. In the second it is discussed in the context of the Kaulikavidyā which is an expanded, 42-syllable version of the Samayā Vidyā. This seed-syllable is so important that the author of the Ṭīkā discusses it a third time (on fl. 14b) after describing Kubjikā's main visualized form, presumably implying that the former is the mantric form of the latter. It is presented there in the context of the Ṭīka's commentary on this section of the Dvādaśaślokasūtra.

We know that the Ṭīkā is a commentary of the version in YKh (1) because it comments on lines of the text found there that are omitted here. Thus in one place the Ṭīkā says that 'this Vidyā is the plane of knowledge of the Siddhas' (sā vidyā siddhānāṁ jñānabhūmikā). This is clearly a gloss on the line in YKh (1) (49/15ab): 'The one syllable (Vidyā), said to be supreme, is the plane of knowledge of the Siddhas' (ekākṣarā parā proktā siddhānāṁ jñānabhūmikā).

The Ṭīkā also refers to it the Vidyā of One Syllable Ekākṣarīvidyā, just as the syllable OṀ is called ekākṣarabrahman in the Bhagavadgīta. Other names include the Peak of the Self (ātmakūṭa KKh 10/25) and the Peak of Consciousness (caitanyakūṭa cf. 24/60. See also YKh (1) which has a section concerning this seed-syllable whose colophon reads: iti kādibhede caitanyamāhātmyam). Above (8/76cd-80ab) we are told that this seed-syllable is the Liṅga that burns like the flame of a lamp in the middle of the maṇḍala. It is said to be khecarīmudrā because the adept achieves flight by repeating it (8/75cd-6ab). According to the commentator Mukundarāja, it is placed in the centre of Kubjikā's Yantra – that is, the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala, as the very first verses at the beginning of the ṢSS and the KuKh declare. In the earliest phase of the development of the Kubjikā cult this place of honour belonged exclusively to Vāgbhava, that is, AIṀ. In the later tradition this syllabic represention of the goddess Kubjikā as the triangular Yoni continued to be worshipped there and this remains the dominant practice amongst the Newars. Later on this Peak syllable came to represent the Thirty-two syllable Vidyā of the goddess and so is called the Heart of Kubjikā (kubjikāhṛdaya) (ṢSS 8/32cd) or just the 'Heart Seed' (hṛdayabīja) as it is the 'essence' of her Vidyā. As such the sources affirm that the repetition of the Vidyā without this syllable is fruitless.

But despite the frequent occurrence to this seed-syllable and power attributed to it, its presence in the mantric system of the Kubjikā Tantras is a later development. It is absent in the KMT and the ṢSS says that it is rare (8/32). Moreover, once it has been extracted in the same Tantra, the god says in the following reference that he is revealing it to the goddess 'today', seemingly implying that he is doing so for the first time; the goddess says of it:

According to the Kula method (kulabheda), it should be placed in the junctures between the *pada*s of the Vidyā. The Kula form (kulabheda) of the Vidyā has (thus) been revealed to you today. O goddess, supreme mistress, you should keep (this) the Heart concealed. Devoid of this, the Vidyā bestows no fruit. (When applied) with all effort, it is the Kula form (kulabheda) which is very hard to acquire.

padasandhiṣu dātavyaṁ vidyāyāḥ kulabhedataḥ ||
kulabhedas tu vidyāyās tavādya prakaṭīkṛtaḥ |
gopanīyaṁ [k kh: -yas] tvayā devi hṛdayaṁ parameśvari [k kh: pā-] ||
anena rahitā vidyā bhavate na phalapradā |
bhavet sarvaprayatnena kulabhedaḥ [k kh: -bheda] sudurlabhaḥ || ṢSS 8/32cd-34

This seed-syllable replaces the seventh syllable (i.e. 'śrī' in 'śrīkubjikāyai') of the version of the goddess's Vidyā extracted in the ŚM (9/5-31) (see below, appendix 2). There we are also told that this change is essential in order to produce the Kaula form of the Vidyā, which is the effective one:

O beloved, this Peak syllable which is the seventh (syllable) of the Vidyā (i.e. HSKHPHREṀ) incorporates the letter Ra. It should be added (to the Vidyā) when 'śrī' has been elided. It is my Kaulika life. Otherwise, O goddess, the rays (of energy of the Vidyā) are averse to the one who adds (anything else) instead, for it is said to be the repository (of the Vidyā's energy) (bhaṇḍāra), the (very) essence (of all Vidyās) in the Yoginīkula.

rephasaham [g: rapha-] idaṁ kūṭaṁ vidyāsaptamakaṁ priye |
śrīlope sanniyoktavyaṁ jīvitaṁ kaulikaṁ mama [kh: mataṁ] ||
anyathā yo daded [k: vaded] devi vidviṣṭaḥ [kh: savidviṣṭo; g: vidviṣṭo] sa [kh: missing] marīcibhiḥ |
yasmād [kh: -t] bhāṇḍāram ity uktaṁ [k, kh: uktā] sarvasvaṁ [k: sarvasaṁ] yoginīkule || ŚM 9/32-33

This, it seems, is the first step towards incorporating this seed-syllable into the main Vidyā of the goddess where in most subsequent versions it finds a place. Note that we are told in both references that this is the Kula type (kulabheda) of the Vidyā. Does this mean that the other type, i.e. the Tantric type (tantrabheda), is AIṀ?

The reason why this seed-syllable is considered to be so important is because it is the 'plane of knowledge' of fully accomplished yogis. In other words, the perfected practice of this seed-syllable leads the adept through all the states of consciousness to that in which the liberated yogi attains an enlightened perception of reality. The gross serves as a ladder to the subtle and that to the supreme. The supreme, which is the being (bhāva) within the subtle body, is the experience of this seed-syllable (Ṭ fl. 14a). It marks the most excellent series of states within the body. Thus this Vidyā is the fourth of four forms of Kubjikā, namely, Guhyakubjī (the other three are, in serial order Samayakubjī, Siddhakubjī and Vajrakubjī) (Ṭ fl. 18-19) who corresponds to the piṇḍarūpātīta state.

3. The letters in brackets are those of the corresponding seats as listed in 8/77cd-79ab above and confirmed in the Ṭīkā (fl. 8a and 15a-15b). See chart below.

4. Svayaṁnātha is Ādinātha who is the Śiva principle (śivatattva). See below 9/13.

5. The upper half of the syllable renders the lower part fruitful. It embodies the energies or aspects of the Command without which no practice could be successful. Thus, YKh (1) declares:

There are many other mantras in the western Kulakaula. (But if) they are not uttered correctly the adepts cannot be successful. O Lord, without the teacher's Command those who are intent on repeating the mantra will be without fruit. This is the command of the Supreme Goddess. O Kuleśvara, he who utters a mantra that is devoid of Sound (nāda), the End of Sound (nādānta), Energy (śakti), the Pervasive One (vyāpinī), the Equal One (samanā), and the Transmental (unmanā) is without fruit there. (It is like carrying) milk in a broken vessel.

anye [k, kh, gh: anyai] ye [k, kh, gh: ya] bahavo [k, kh, gh: bahavau] mantrāḥ [k, kh, gh: maṁtrā] kulakaule [k, kh: -kaula] tu paścime |
saduccāravinirmuktā [k, kh, gh: śaṣṭuccāra-] naiva [k: naivaṁ] siddhyanti sādhakāḥ ||
gurvājñayā vinā nātha mantrajapaparāyaṇāḥ |
niṣphalaṁ bhavate teṣām ity ājñā [k, gh: teṣāṁmihyājñā; kh: teṣāṁmityājñā] pārameśvarī ||
nādanādāntanirmuktaṁ [k, kh, gh: mohanādāṁta-] śaktiñ ca [k, kh: śākraiś ca; gh: śāktiṁ ca] vyāpinīṁ [k, kh: -nī; gh: -ni] vinā |
samanāṁ [k, kh, gh: -nā] conmanāhīnāṁ [k, kh, gh: yoṁmanāhīnaṁ] uccared yaḥ kuleśvara [k, kh, gh: -re] ||
nisphalaṁ tatra tan mantraṁ bhinne bhāṇḍe ca [k, kh, gh: va] goduham [k: gāduhaṁ] | YKh (1) 2/41-44ab.

The Ṭīkā (fl. 15a) supplies an explanation and a graphic representation of each these six, which is as follows.

The Drop is a circle (●). The Moon is the Half Moon (◡). Svayaṁnātha is Unstruck Sound (anacka) ( ). Energy is a straight line ( ). Above her is the Pervasive One (vyāpinī) whose form is that of Kuṇḍalinī ( ). Above that is the Equal One (samanā), that is, the Obstructress (nirodhinī) ( ).

bindur iti vartulam | ● | indur ity ardhacandram | ◡ | svayaṁnātham iti anackam [k: anaskam; kh: nakvaṁ] | | śaktir iti ṛjībhūtā | | tasyopari vyāpinī kuṇḍalinyākṛtiḥ [k kh: -ti] |  | tasyopari samanā nirodhinī | |

6. No location is given here for this sacred seat. According to the Ṭīkā (fl. 15b), it is between the eyebrows ('the place of the Point') where Sadāśiva resides. There we read: ‘Then, there is one sacred seat above that called Oḍiyāna and, in the form of a mirror, it is pure. The place of the letter Ha is that of the Point. It is the deity Sadāśiva who is the fifth.’

tatas tasyordhvaṁ [k, kh: -rddha] pīṭham ekam oḍiyāṇābhidhānam tad [k, kh: sa] darpaṇarūpaṁ śuddham | hakāraṁ bindusthānam | sadāśivadaivatyaṁ pañcamam.

7. According to 6/211cd-212ab above, Tisra is located at the End of the Twelve. But there are only five sacred seats in the setup described there. Usually this seat assumes the attributes of the highest seat when there are six of them. The Ṭīkā explains that:

above that is the sacred seat (called) Trisrota. It is in the middle of the Unborn Face (ajavaktra) (in the End of the Twelve). Its shape is a triangle. It is the upper face. Thus it has been called the Upper Face. It is the supreme Light and its nature is bliss. It is the triangle of power, the letter E that illumines all things.

*tasyordhve [kh: tasyorddheṁ] trisrotapīṭham ajamadhye [k: * * madhye; kh: majjā-] trikoṇarūpaṁ ūrdhvavaktraṁ [k: -vaktro; kh: ūrddha vaktrā] yathā* | (citram) | evam ūrdhvavaktraṁ taṁ pūrvoktaṁ paraṁ prakāśam ānandarūpam | trikoṇaṁ śāktam | sarvāvabhāsakam ekāram |

8. According to the Ṭīkā (fl. 15b), the Wheel of Space is the Point (bindu) (see above note to 9/6). This is the first of the six phases of upward movement of the energy of the vital breath beyond the six said to be 'without support'. But in view of the division into two parts of the phases of development of the energies of this seed-syllable we find below in 11/19-21ab, it is possible that Rudraśiva, the author of the Ṭīkā, may be mistaken. Below we are told that the Command, embodied in this seed-syllable, is in seven parts. The first six correspond to the levels 'with support' and the seventh is beyond them. There the Command is said to be at the End of the Sixteen where Khecarī resides. It seems therefore more likely that the Wheel of Space (vyomacakra), which is where Khecarī resides, is not the seventh of the twelve phases as Rudraśiva maintains, but the entire area beyond the six 'with support' established in this, the supreme state.

9. The Ṭīkā (fl. 14b) adds that each one of these six corresponds to a deity who functions as the cause that generates it. In one place these are said to be Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudreśvara, Sadāśiva, Śakti and Śiva (jālandharādi [k kh: jālā-] ta eva [k kh: tadeva] kāraṇarūpāḥ [k: -rūpā] | brahmā viṣṇuḥ [k kh: viṣṇu-] rudreśvaraḥ [k kh: -ra] sadāśivaḥ [k kh: -va] śaktiḥ [k kh: śakti] śiva iti kāraṇāḥ ṣaṭ |). However, when each one is listed and described separately, the six appear to be Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśvara, Sadāśivā and Śiva. These are basically the Five Causal Deities (karaṇadevatā) corresponding to the Five Praṇavas with the addition of Śiva above.

10. The sequence of the sacred seats here ascends vertically from the heart (Jālandhara Ra) through the throat (Pūrṇagiri Pha), uvula (Koṅkaṇa Kha), palate (Kāmarūpa Sa), the point between the eyebrows (Oḍiyāna) and out through the Cavity of Brahmā (E) at the top of the head on the top of which is the Teacher's Mouth (also called the Unborn Face) in the form of the downward-pointing triangle which is the shape of the letter E. It is said to be the supreme divine light which is bliss; the Triangle of Energy (śākta) that illumines all things. Above that are a series of six stages in the upward development of the energy of Speech. These are inaudible and hence said to be without support of the phonemic sounds, unlike the previous six that are with support.

The phonemic energies of the same seed-syllable are arranged in a different way along the vertical axis; this follows the sequence of the seven Wheels (cakra) within the body and beyond (cf. 28/9-11 for the location of the seats in the body; the six seats system is also found in chapter 61). Below (in 11/19-21ab), the utterance of this seed-syllable is analysed in terms of the upward movement of the energy of the vital breath through the Wheels in the body. Their names are not stated directly there, but are indicated by the geometric shapes that symbolize the deployment of the energies within them. However, they are equated, there as here, with the six sacred seats and a stage beyond them. This data can be tabulated as follows.

3. Table of Contents of the syllable HSKHPHREṀ

Sacred Seat	Letter Chapter Nine	Nature Chapter Nine	Location Chapter Nine	Deity	Nature Chapter Eleven	Location Chapter Eleven
Jālandhara	Ra	Fire	Heart	Brahmā	Fire	Navel
Pūrṇagiri	Pha	Red flower	Throat	Viṣṇu	Sound	Hexagon
Koṅkaṇa	Kha	Autumn sky	Uvula	Rudra		Palate / Circle of the Drop
Kāmarūpa	Sa	White	Palate	Īśvara	Lunar centre	Birth of Energy
Oḍḍiyāna	Ha	Mirror	Between the eyebrows	Sadāśiva	Bindu-maṇḍala	Between Eyebrows
Tisra/ Trisrota	E	Heated gold	Cavity of Brahmā/ Wheel of Space	Śiva		Wheel of Purity

11. The Ṭīkā (fl. 15b) explains that: The Drop is similar to the circle (of light produced by a whirling) firebrand. This is the Wheel of Space. That is one. Above it is the Half Moon. Its form is said to be Light. This is the second one. Then above that is Ādyanātha who is Sound, that is, this Unstruck Sound (anacka). This is the Śiva principle which is the Unmanifest in the form of a Wheel (cakrarūpa) because it is pervasive. This is the Point and Sound. As it consists of the union of the three, the Śiva principle has been explained.

vyomacakraṁ [k, kh: -vaktraṁ] taṁ alātacakrasadṛśaṁ bindu | tad [k, kh: tata] ekam | tasyopari ardhenduḥ [k kh: -ndu] | sa ca [k kh: va] jyotirūpam ākhyātaṁ dvitīyam | tatas tasyopari ādyanātham anacko 'yaṁ [k kh: -nackayam] nādaḥ | iti śivatattvam avyaktaṁ cakrarūpaṁ [k, kh: śukra-] vyāpakatvāt iti bindunādaṁ | trayeṇa militvāt śivatattvaṁ [k kh: -tattve] kathitam |

The Transmental is the goal. When that is achieved, the adept attains liberation. It comes at the end of the series of twelve, but is not a part of it (see below 9/18-19ab).

12. The Ṭīkā (ibid.) explains that the channel of Suṣumṇā is to be 'split apart by raising Kuṇḍalinī up to the end of the nine' (kuṇḍalyotthāpanagatyā bhedayet navāntāvadhis tataḥ).

13. The Ṭīkā glosses: (That) Energy is straight and is like the hemp flower, that is, she is Smoky (dhūmra), black (kṛṣṇa) and blue (nīla) in colour. (śaktiḥ ṛjvībhūtā atasīpuṣpasaṁkāśā dhūmrakṛṣṇanīlavarṇā sā).

14. The Ṭīkā (fl. 15-16a) explains that: Then above that comes the Pervasive One. Her form is that of a coiled snake and is four finger-spans above (the previous level). Her colour is that of smoke (i.e. grey) and is in the eleventh place. Then above that comes the Equal One who is one's own essential nature and its light is equal to a billion moons. She is at the extremity of the Triple Peak and is in the twelfth place.

tatas tasyordhve [k: -rdhva] vyāpinī kuṇḍalyākārā caturaṅgula - ūrdhve [k: ūrddhva] sā ca dhūmravarṇā ekādaśa saṁsthānīyā [k:- saṁkṣānīyā] | *tatas tasyordhve samanā svasvarūpā candrakoṭisamaprabhā [kh: -sa *prabhā] trikūṭaprāntā [k kh: -nta] iti dvādaśasaṁsthānīyā [kh: * sthānīyāḥ]* |

15. Ṭīkā (fl. 16a): In this way there are eighty-four finger-spans from the toe of the foot to (the top of) the head. Then above that there are twelve finger-spans within the three energies and so the finger-spans make ninety-six. That is the End of the Twelve. Then above that is Mind Beyond Mind (manonmanā) whose nature is to reflect and to save (mananatrāṇadharmiṇī). She measures twelve finger-spans above the End of the Twelve. Thus ninety-six and twelve finger-spans both together make one hundred and eight finger-spans. That is the End of the Sixteen. Thus the three goddesses of the lineages above the Śiva principle which is Unstruck Sound (anacka) have been explained.

*evaṁ pādāṅguṣṭhād mastakaṁ [k kh: pādāṅguṣṭhānaṁ * * ] yāvad aṅgulāś caturāśītiḥ [k kh: -lacaturā-] | tatas tasyordhve śaktitraye aṅguladvādaśa | evam aṅgulāḥ [k kh: -la] ṣaṇṇavatiḥ [kh: -ti] | taṁ dvādaśāntam | tatas tasyopari manonmanā | sā ca mananatrāṇadharmiṇī [k: -trāsa-] | tasyā [k kh: tasya] dvādaśāntordhvaṁ [k: -ntā ūrdhvaṁ] dvādaśāṅgulapramāṇam | evaṁ ṣaṇṇavatiḥ [k, kh: -ti] tathā dvādaśāṅgulam ity ubhayataḥ aṣṭādhikaṁ śatam aṅgulānāṁ bhavati | taṁ ṣoḍaśāntam iti śivatattvasya anackarūpasya ūrdhve ovallidevyātrayaḥ kathitāḥ [k kh: -tā] |

Then, above these three goddesses of the lineages at the end of the Trail of Smoke (dhūmravarti), that is, at the end of the Transmental state is the Tranquil State that cannot be attained (by personal effort) (agamyā). The state there is in every respect (one of perfect) peace and that is the Śāmbhavā (state). That place is the Lord at the very end of all (levels), where everything comes to an end. For this reason, one should fix the mind there. Non-mind is attained there and by that freedom from the bondage of transmigratory existence. One should (therefore) utter the Peak syllable called the Twelve Verses as the energy of the breath is progressively established (at higher levels). That is said (in the following verse):

The Cavity of Space in the middle of the Cavity is the Cavity of Space (that induces) the blockage of the cavities. The path is that which comes out from the Cavity of Space. Block the Cavity of the Paths.

tatas teṣāṁ ovallidevyātrayāṇāṁ ūrdhve dhūmravartiprānte [k: -prānta] unmanāvasthānte [k kh: -sthāpanasya] agamyā śāntāvasthā | tatrāvasthā śāntā sarvā [k kh: śāṁtāḥ sarvāḥ] | sā śāmbhavā [k kh: śāṁbhavāḥ] | tat sthānaṁ [kh: tasthānaṁ] sarvāntīśaṁ yatra sarvaṁ nivartate [kh: tivarttate; k kh: + yāsāti] || tasmāt kāraṇāt tatra manasaṁ [k: manaḥ; kh: maḥ] kuryāt | tatrāmanaḥ [k, kh: tatramanaḥ] prāptam anena bandhanāt saṁsārān muktir bhavati | prāṇaśaktyā sthāpanakramagatyā [k: -gatyāte; kh: -gatyāt] asya dvādaśaślokābhidhānasya kūṭākṣarasyoccāraṇaṁ kārayet | tad ucyate

kharandhraṁ randhramadhyasthaṁ kharandhraṁ randhrarodhanam | kharandhranirgamaṁ mārgaṁ mārgarandhraṁ [k kh: mārgaṁ randhra]
nirodhayet ||

('Block' means) examine as follows. 'The Cavity of Space' – the word 'space' (kha) denotes the Void and the word 'cavity' (randhra) also (means) the Void. Thus the Cavity of Space is Void Beyond the Void (śūnyātiśūnya). Where is that located? Above the head in the End of the Twelve, which is called 'Ucchūṣma'. If (something is) located in the middle of the middle cavity then it is 'in the middle of the Cavity'. Then, in this way, the Cavity of Space is 'in the middle of the cavity'. Such is the Cavity of Space which, by the retention of the breath (kumbhakavṛtti) brings about the blockage of the cavities.

nirīkṣayed | yathā kharandhram iti khaśabdena tāvac chūnyaṁ tathā randhraśabdaḥ [k kh: -śabda] śūnyam eva | tasmāt kharandhraṁ śūnyātiśūnyam [k kh: śūnyādi-] | tat [k kh: ta] kutra [k kh: kotra] sthitam | mastakopari dvādaśānte ucchūṣmākhyābhidhānake | madhyamarandhramadhye [k kh: -madhya] yadā sthitaṁ tadā randhramadhyastham | tadā evaṁ kharandhraṁ [k kh: -dhra] randhramadhyasthitam | īdṛgvidhaṁ kharandhraṁ randhrarodhanaṁ [k: raṁdhrarodhaṁ; kh: raṁdhranodhaṁra] kumbhakavṛttyā karoti |

Ṭīkā fl. 16a-16b

What are these cavities? (They are) the nine cavities namely, the mouth, nostrils, ears, eyes, anus and genitals. If they are blocked, then that is (called) the 'blockage of the cavities'. Therefore by blocking the cavities of space, the energy of the vital breath is raised up to the door which is the path of the Cavity of Space. The energy of the vital breath is raised up to the extreme limit of the practice (vidhāna) called the Cavity of Ucchūṣma.

ke te randhrāḥ [k kh: randhraḥ] | mukhanāsākarṇadṛggudopasthāni iti [kh: -karṇadṛk-; k kh: -nirodha iti] navarandhram | yadā rodhayet tadā randhrarodhanam | tasmāt kharandhrarodhanāt [k: kharaṁprabodhanāt; kh: kheraṁprabodhanāt] prāṇaśakter utthāpanaṁ [k kh: -śakti utthā-] bhavati yāvat kharandhramārgaṁ dvāram | ucchūṣmarandhrākhyavidhānaparyantāvadhir [k kh: ucchūṣmaṁ-; k: -paryatrāvadhi; kh: radhrā- -yaryatrāvadhi] yāvat |

The energy of the vital breath is raised up. Then, by the activity of the vital breath, the path that comes out from the Cavity of Space (is opened). Then, if in this way the energy of the vital breath travels outside, that is, above the End of the Twelve, death ensues (utkrānti). For that reason, one should block the cavity, that is, the path called the Cavity of the (Supreme) Principle. Then the energy of the vital breath does not go outside above the End of the Twelve. The point is that one should act in such a way that the energy of the vital breath is again placed in its own location in the place that is five fingers below the navel. This is how the King of Peak syllables (kūṭarāja), (also) called the Twelve Verses, should be uttered in accord with the sequence of six and the six causes. Omniscience develops (spontaneously) by this just knowing this Peak syllable. These are what are said to be the Śāmbhava (set of) Twelve Verses.

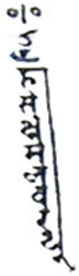
prāṇaśakter [k kh: -śaktir] utthāpanaṁ bhavati | prāṇagatyā [k kh: -gatyāt] tadā kharandhranirgamaṁ [kh: kheraṁdhranirgasaṁ] mārgam [kh: mārga] | *evaṁ [kh: eva] prāṇaśaktir [k kh: -śakti] yadā bahirdvādaśāntād [k kh: vahni-] ūrdhve gacchati tadā utkrāntir bhavati [k kh: * vati]* | tasmāt kāraṇāt [kh: kāraṇān] tattvarandhrākhyābhidhānamārgaṁ [kh: -randhrākṣabhidhānamāga; kh: -

mārga] randhraṁ [k kh: -randhra] nirodhayet | *tadā prāṇaśaktir [k, kh: + na] bāhye dvādaśāntordhve [k: dvādaśā * rdhve; kh: dvādaśānkṛrddhe] na gacchati* | tathā kāryā [k kh: + | na] punar api yathā sā prāṇaśaktiḥ [k kh: - śakti] svasthāne nābhyādhaḥ aṅgulapañcakasthāne niveśayed ity arthaḥ | iti dvādaśaślokābhidhānasya kūṭarājasya uccāraṇaṁ ṣaṭkramagatyā [kh: ṣaṭcakramagatyā] ṣaṭkāraṇagatyā [k kh: uccakāraṇagatyāt] kārayed iti anena kūṭena jñātamātreṇa [k kh: jñāna-] sarvajñatvaṁ jāyate | iti śāṁbhavoktā [kh: -tāḥ] dvādaśaślokāḥ ||

To sum up: the Ṭīkā explains that the first six letters of this seed-sylable, ranging from Sa to E, are 'with support' (sāvalamba) because they are experienced in six places in the body. Above these six letters is a series of six stages said to be without support (nirālamba) because they are experienced outside the body. The first member of the second series is anusvāra, the resonant nasalization that concludes this seed-syllable, as it does every other. The series of states above anusvāra are said to be aspects of a type of 'silent' sound (nāda) that continues on beyond the audible sound. This silent sound, although considered to be phenomenal, is not physical. It is a stream of conscious energy that develops through various phases as it travels upwards to its original source, namely, the deity who is pure consciousness. Thus the members of this series are said to be 'without support' also because they form part of a series of metaphysical states of consciousness and being.

Just as the first seven phases of the seed-syllable, which constitute its sonoric content, can be represented in written form, the remaining five can as well. They are drawn above the syllable as illustrated below. The representation of the higher phases of sound in this way is said to 'display' the syllable (akṣaradarśana) which is thus not only heard but also seen. Another example of a 'displayed' syllable is the visual representation of Navātman in the Ṭīkā (fl. 177b):

Diagram 5. Navātman



In this case, the first six members of this series are drawn as are the common letters of any word. They are conjoined to form what is called a kūṭākṣara because drawn one on top of the other, the letters form a pile (kūṭa) of letters (akṣara). The top of this pile of letters ends with the nasalization represented by a dot with a semicircle below it. Together, the dot and the semicircle, form the Half Moon (ardhacandra) and the Drop (bindu).

The first nine are treated separately as a set that culminates in Śiva. But in this case, Śiva is not the ultimate principle. Indeed, there are three more stages before the Transmental, the highest level at which liberation is attained. There are three energies here that channel the empowerment of the three lineages that flows from the Transmental. I suppose that the correspondences are as follows:

1) The Lineage of the Eldest (jyeṣṭholi) – Śakti
2) The Middle Lineage (madhyamoli) – Vyāpinī
3) The Lineage of the Child (bāloli) – Samanā

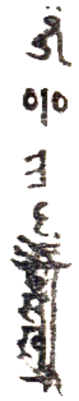
The reverse order may seem more appropriate. As the Lineage of the Eldest is the first to be generated, we would expect it to be closest to the source – the Transmental. But I propose this order on the basis of an analogous arrangement found in the KnT, which Schoterman (1981: 36) reports as follows: Kubjikā or Kālī manifests herself in three forms (jyeṣṭha, madhyama, bāla) among these śaktis: 1) jyeṣṭhāvali: Vyāpinī. 2) madhyamāvali: Samanā, in the shape (mūrti) of Tripurā. 3) bālāvali: Manonmanā, in the shape (mūrti) of Mālinī. As the Transmental (unmanī or manonmanī) is included in the series in the KnT, the three as a set have moved up a notch, as it were. Even so, the principle is clear. The 'youngest' lineage is closest to the supreme state, which is the source.

The Ṭīkā graphically represents the five states of Silent Sound beyond the Drop and the Half Moon as follows:

The Twelve Verses



Unmanā
Samanā
Vyāpinī
Śakti
Svayaṁnātha

The Ṭīkā (MS K fl. 8a) refers to another version of this series in which Nirodhī is inserted between Śakti and Vyāpinī. In the previous exposition of this syllable (Ṭ fl. 6a), the sign that is said to be Nirodhī is attributed to Vyāpinī.The second version is as follows:

Bindu =
Indu (Ardhacandra) =
Svayaṁnātha (Anacka) =
Śakti =
Nirodhī = Vyāpinī who is Kuṇḍalinī =
Samanā =

These two aspects, with and without 'support', consist of six parts each, and so the Vidyā is called Dvādaśākṣarikā. This Vidyā is 'fixed' by placing ŚRĪṀ in front of it. Conversely, it is 'unlocked' by placing it in front of ŚRĪṀ. In this way ŚRĪṀ, which is the goddess, is conjoined to HSKHPHREṀ, which is Śiva. In this way it is 'unlocked' and its energy is released and can be applied. See above, note to 8/42cd.

16. See above note on 2/39. The Five Praṇavas have been extracted in the previous chapter (see 8/92cd-105ab; see intro. vol 1, p. 639 for a table of correspondences).

17. The texts generally refer to the Five Praṇavas as the five 'instruments' (karaṇa) because they are the instrumental causes of both the cosmic cycle of creation and destruction and the microcosmic equivalent that takes place through the movement of the energy of the vital breath. Here, as in a few other places, they are called causes, implying that they themselves act directly in this way.

18. Perhaps we should read guhāmudrā ca tūṣṇikā i.e. the Gesture of the Cave and the Silent One. Inside the Cave at the End of the Twelve, the devotee of the goddess, like Bhairava himself, attains the Śāmbhava state (see above 3/170). This act is his gesture with which he participates in the stillness that is that of the goddess herself – the Silent One.

19. This Praṇava is also the seed-syllable of Kālasaṁkarṣiṇī.

20. There are several variants of the fifth Praṇava. This particular variant is called Bhairava's seed-syllable. The basic form, as presented in the KMT (5/34-40) is HSAUṀ. There are two other comman variants. They are HSŪAUṀ and HSVŪAUṀ. These two appear to be variants that have developed simply on the basis of variant ways in which this seed-syllable is pronounced. They are not, as far as I know, given a different names as is the variant we are examining. The form recorded here agrees with one given in code above in 8/104-105ab.

21. The goddess of the five seats is Kubjikā as Mahāntārikā (9/26cd). The Pentad of Mahāntārikā according to 28/23-24ab below relates to the vowels A, I, U, E, and O.

22. As a second independent source that refers to these series of vowels in relation to the seats could not be traced, it is not possible to be sure that these are the right ones. Moreover, a problem arises here with order in which the seats are listed. Above (verse 9/20) the text says that the first Praṇava is called 'Kāmarūpa' (kāmarūpākhya). Possibly the seat is meant here. In chapters eight (8/112cd-114) and 54, Kāmarūpa is the first seat. However, the text here presents the usual serial order which begins with Oḍḍiyāna. I suppose, therefore that we should not understand that the first Praṇava is the seat Kāmarūpa. Instead the intended sense is possibly as I have translated, namely, that the first Praṇava is called 'the form of passion' (9/20) as it represents the goddess's Yoni, the energy of the will (icchā). Thus the correspondences between the seats, Praṇavas and vowels are as follows:

4. Table of Correspondences between Praṇavas, Seats and Vowels

Sacred seat	Praṇava	Vowel
Oḍḍiyāna	AIṀ	Ī
Jālandhara	ŚRĪṀ	Ā
Pūrṇagiri	HRĪṀ	I
Kāmarūpa	KHPHREṀ	U
Trisrota	HSRAU-UṀ	O

23. The goddess as Mahāmāyā is the subject of a large part of chapter 13.

24. I suppose that the gross form is visualized in the genitals, the subtle in the heart and her supreme form as ‘inwardly-moving consciousness’ is in the mouth. These correspond to her aspects ‘with form’ (sākārā), ‘without form’ (nirākārā) and nondual.

25. See above note to 2/14. Sacred action – Gesture (mudrā) and sacred sound – mantra operate together. ‘Mudrā’ also means a ‘seal’ or ‘stamp’. Mudrā is the goddess. In this aspect she is ‘stamped’ onto the body.

26. Concerning Mahāntārikā, see above Mālinīstava and references there. The Ṭīkā (fl. 30b) has a long section on the Mahāntārikā Vidyā consisting of twenty-three syllables. It is also extracted in chapter twenty-eight of the ṢSS. This form of the Vidyā does not contain the Peak of Gesture i.e. HSKHPHREṀ. Moreover, it is manipulated in groups of seven rather than five as we have here. This, therefore seems to be another form of the Mahāntārikā Vidyā, possibly consisting of five units, arranged in the serial order of the Praṇavas. It may be something like this:
AIṀ KĀMARŪPE Ī HSKHPHREṀ MAHĀNTARIKĀYAI NAMAḤ

HRĪṀ JĀLANDHARE Ā HSKHPHREṀ MAHĀNTARIKĀYAI NAMAḤ
ŚRĪṀ PŪRṆAGIRYE I HSKHPHREṀ MAHĀNTARIKĀYAI NAMAḤ
KHPHREṀ OḌIYĀNE U HSKHPHREṀ MAHĀNTARIKĀYAI NAMAḤ
HSRAU-UṀ TISRAKE O HSKHPHREṀ MAHĀNTARIKĀYAI NAMAḤ

27. Here the Vidyā is presented in sixteen parts (pada) consisting of two syllables each. Another division into eight parts (padabheda) is given below 10/10cd-13.

28. These are the Five Praṇavas in the form stated above 9/20-21.

29. See below 9/37cd-38.

30. I presume that the form of the Vidyā here is that of the Samayā Vidyā extracted above in 8/43-85ab, namely:

BHAGAVATI GHORE HSKHPHREṀ ŚRĪKUBJIKE HRĀṀ HRĪṀ HRAUṀ
ṄAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHI CHRĀṀ CHRĪṀ KIṆI KIṆI VICCE

31. See above note to 9/2ab and below 24/60.

32. According to the Ṭ (fl. 6a) the Vidyāsaṅketasūtra refers to the syllable ŚRĪṀ as the 'ornament'. Here the form, is ŚRĪ. Even so, this name is quite appropriate.

33. These are the names given to these three seed-syllables in the Ṭ (fl. 6a). The form of Rudra's seed-syllable differs in the Ṭīkā from the one here. See above, note to 8/64-65.

34. If the mūrtibheda is the same as the mūrtisaṁketa mentioned in 9/32 then the mūrtibheda is GHORE. But here, in this version of the Vidyā, it seems that AGHORE replaces GHORE and so is 'threefold'. The three parts are two Siddhas and Gaṇeśa, who is Lord of Hosts. Perhaps Vaṭuka Bhairava and Kṣetrapāla are the two Siddhas. These three syllables serve to purify the three lineages.

35. We have noted already that Consciousness (caitanya) is one of the names of the One-syllable Vidyā – HSKHPHREṀ. See above, note 1 to 9/2cd-3ab. The double meaning here is clearly intentional. Cf. above 8/114cd-116ab where the same is said of the Five Praṇavas. One who does not worship the Krama with the Five Praṇavas is not himself part of the Krama. The One-syllable Vidyā is presented first in this chapter before the Five Praṇavas and the Vidyā. Presumably then, it should be uttered first or last. Below in 11/17cd the deposition of this syllable in the body is explained after that of the Five Praṇavas and the thirty-two syllables of Kubjikā's Vidyā. Possibly, then, it should be similarly uttered after the Vidyā. Perhaps the reference is to the presence of this seed-syllable in the body of the Vidyā, but the context does not appear to warrant this. Possibly the sense here is that the Vidyā, which is the complete sonic form of the goddess, should be introduced with the goddess's seed-syllable form.

36. Rudra’s seed is HRAUṀ (see note to 9/33). In this context it seems that it also stands for the other two seeds, namely, those of Brahmā – HRĀṀ – and of Viṣṇu – HRĪṀ. R is the energy of fire and should be present in all three parts of Rudra’s seed to energize them, because their function is to burn away impurities. Devoid of the fire of R they would not function.

37. I don't know what letter or syllable the Yoginī stands for. The Heart of the Yoginī is AIṀ, but this is not meant here.

38. It is not clear to me what the Imperishable is, perhaps it is KṢa.

39. The version of the Vidyā found in the KMT (7/21-22) and reproduced in the ṢSS (13/21cd-41ab) begins with the salutation ‘namo bhagavati śrīkubjikāyai’ – lit. ‘Obeisance, O goddess, to the venerable Kubjikā’ (see below, appendix 2). This simple and direct way of praising the deity is one of the most basic forms a mantra can have. Indeed, it may have been the original nucleus from which the Vidyā developed. It serves, as we are told here, to invoke the deity’s presence (āmantraṇa, lit. ‘invite’). As the version of the Vidyā extracted in the previous chapter does not begin with ‘namo’, perhaps we should understand this as a reference to the first part of the Vidyā in the form extracted here i.e. ‘bhagavati ghore hskhphreṁ śrīkubjike’. Alternatively, the author of this section had a different version of the Vidyā in mind. We have already had occasion to observe that another part of the Vidyā discussed in this section differs from the one extracted in the previous chapter (see above 9/37ab-38). A possible reason for these variants is that this section has been drawn from another Kubjikā text in which the form of the Vidyā is not the same as the one extracted in the previous chapter.

Another way we could understand what is said here is not with reference to the whole Vidyā, but the parts (pāda) of the Vidyā. If so, ‘namaḥ’ could precede each of the parts but need not be at the beginning of the undivided Vidyā.

40. As the Praṇavas are in the reverse order in the end, the last syllable of the Vidyā in this extended form is the first Praṇava namely, AIṀ.

41. The sacred seats are the Five Praṇavas (see 8/92cd-100. See 8/110cd-113 and note for a table of correspondences. Cf. 9/19cd-26ab). The Samayā Vidyā to which the Five Praṇavas are added at the beginning in the forward order and in the end in the reverse order is the Vidyā of the New Moon. Similarly, according to 8/91 above and 9/58cd-59 below, the Vidyā of the Full Moon is in between the two sets of Five Praṇavas. But in the case of the New Moon, the Vidyā, encapsulated by the Five Praṇavas, is recited in the reverse order. See above note to 8/42cd. This is the setup here. However, it is not everywhere the same. According to the following verse from YKh (1), the New Moon is simply the Vidyā without the Praṇavas:

If the Vidyā, (set) in the sequence of emanation beginning with Bha, withdraws the universe, it is the New Moon devoid of the encapsulation (of the Five Praṇavas); whereas, established in the capsule (formed by the Five Praṇavas), it is the Full Moon.

*bhādisṛṣṭikrame vidyā [k: vedyād] yadā [k: yathā; g: * thā] saṁharate [g: saharate] jagat* |
amā sā saṁpuṭahīnā saṁpuṭasthā tu pūrṇimā || YKh (1) 37/49

42. Cf. below 9/61. The letter Ra may be a part of the fifth Praṇava which is particularly related to Bhairava (see 9/44). However, if that Ra is meant here, then there is a contradiction because it is said here that it burns if the Praṇavas are not added to the Vidyā. So possibly the Ra is in goddess's seed-syllable which is within the Vidyā, or is in any or all the other syllables that contain the letter Ra.

43. Ha is the lunar downward flow of apāna. Sa is the solar upward flow of prāṇa. The Vidyā is recited in between these two currents in consonance with the flow of the breath. Vāruṇī is the energy of Vāruṇa, the lord of the Moon. It is also called Amā – the sixteenth digit of the moon hidden in the darkness of the New Moon. This, the vitalizing lunar energy of the Vidyā, flows down with the lunar current and nourishes the body and mind, gradually filling it. This takes place when the upward solar flow, which otherwise would dry it up, has been checked.

But compare 10/5 below where it seems that the letters are not Ha and Sa but Ū and Sa. There it seems that we are told that once the R of HSRAU-UṀ has been removed it becomes the energy Vāruṇī which is, presumably, HSAU-UṀ.

44. Concerning the relationship between the Full Moon containing sixteen energies and the New Moon (Amā) which is the seventeenth digit that gives energy to the rest, see intro. vol 1, p. 142-143. Taraṅgiṇī, it seems, is the energy of the Full Moon that is filled by its movement through the sixteen parts of the Vidyā (see above 9/31cd-35). Concerning Taraṅgiṇī see above 2/34cd-35ab. There she is represented as the goddess of the alphabet who vitalizes the fifty energies of the letters. She is the downward flow of the energy of the Command – the Transmental – into the world of transmigratory existence through which the teachings are propagated by her illumining and vitalizing power.

45. Concerning the signs of attainment, see below, note to 33/47-49. Eleven such signs are listed below in 13/101cd-102. This sign of attainment does not appear in that list.

46. Concerning Vaṭuka Bhairava, see below notes on 11/33cd-34ab.

47. 'Gone' is the forward order and 'come' is the reverse. Cf. 3/122cd-123ab.

48. Cf. above 8/90cd-91ab.

49. Cf. above 9/49cd-50 for this expression.

50. The Five-lettered Vidyā is the Five Praṇavas. See above 8/114cd-116ab and 125-126.

51. The New Moon is the Samayā Vidyā recited in reverse – this is the 'division of depletion' (kṛṣabheda). We have seen that the encapsulation by the Five Praṇavas in the manner described is the process by which the bare Vidyā is 'transformed into nectar' (see above 8/88 ff.). This change coincides with that of the dark lunar fortnight to the bright one. In the former the goddess is fierce and devouring. In the latter, she is peaceful and nourishing. See above note to 8/42cd.

52. See 8/92cd-100; 8/110cd-113 and note for a table of correspondences. Cf. above, 9/19cd-26ab.

53. The standard thirty-two syllable Samayā Vidyā of Kubjikā becomes the forty-two syllable Vidyā by adding the Five Praṇavas in front of it in the forward order and the same Praṇavas to it at the end in the reverse order. This Vidyā is given in full in two places in the Ṭīkā (fl. 7a and 53b) where it is also called the Kaula Vidyā (fl. 7a). The form of this extended form of the Vidyā as found in the Ṭīkā (fl. 53b) is as follows:

AIṀ HRĪṀ ŚRĪṀ KHPHREṀ HSPHAUṀ BHAGAVATI AMBE SKHPHREṀ SHKHPHRĪṀ KUBJIKE HSRĀṀ HSRĪṀ HSRAUṀ ṆAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHE CCHRĀṀ CCHRĪṀ KIṆI KIṆI VICCE HSPHAUṀ KHPHREṀ ŚRĪṀ HRĪṀ AIṀ

This is the form of Thirty-two syllable Vidyā with the Five Praṇavas according to the Ṭīkā. The same is to be done with the form of the Thirty-two syllable Vidyā given here.

54. Concerning the six types (jāti) and their application, see 4/10cd-11ab and note 15.

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER TEN

1. च्, ज्: –ण 2. All MSs: विद्याया
3. ख्, ङ्: यस्; झ्: यस्; घ्, च्, छ्: यन् 4. घ्: तेजोज?
5. All MSs: ऊ– 6. झ्: द्वै 7. ङ्: रफौ
8. ङ्: –करणं मे 9. All MSs except क्: –या: तदा
10. All MSs: किलीभा 11. च्: वयेत 12. All MSs: वदस्
13. क्, ग्: तस्यो:; ञ्: स्तस्या. All other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्: तस्या:
14. घ्, च्, छ्: –वक्रोवाच 15. ङ्: –वर; all other MSs except ख्, छ्, ज्, झ्:
प्रस्न– 16. च्: तस्य तस्य 17. All MSs: ऊ– 18. क्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, झ्: –भां; ख्, घ्, च्, छ्: –कासमप्रभां 19. ग्, च्: लापनं 20. See above, note to 7/2c. 21. घ्: –णात् 22. छ्: अन्तिम; ङ्: अतिमे; घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: अन्तिमं
23. M → N. See above, note to 1/4c.
24. All MSs except क्, झ्: वज्ञन्यपि
25. ज्: नेष्ट–. The order of the first two elements of this compound has been reversed. 26. All MSs: विद्याया–
27. घ्, च्: पतन्. This एतत् seems to refer to the first two elements of the initial compound on the previous line. 28. झ्: तस्यपि 29. M → N.
30. ख्, च्: मेरुच्छा; ङ्, ज्, झ्: मंरुच्छा; all other MSs: मरुच्छा
31. A connecting ताम् or the like needs to be supplied.
32. Here the plural of विद्यार्थिन् has taken the place of the required nom. sing.
to gain an extra syllable for the metre. See above, note to 4/3c.
33. झ्: –पूर्णां 34. ख्, ङ्: च–; ज्: वेविधिकिपदं. All MSs except घ्, छ्: च्च–; क्, ग्, ज्: –विधि–; ख्, ङ्, झ्: –किमिदं
35. ङ्: णिकिछींछां; च्: णिकिच्छीच्छां; झ्: किनिच्छीं *; SamP: णिकिछिंछां
36. ख्, झ्: खिमुघोरा; ङ्: –घों; SamP: +च 37. झ्: ?
38. ख्: ञ्डफ्म्ह्लौं?; ग्: ण्डम् स्ह्लौँ; घ्: ङ ञ म्ह्लौँ; ङ्: ङ्ग स्ह्लौँ; च्: ङ ञ स्ह्लौँ; छ्, ज्: ञङ स्ह्लौं; झ्:
ङ फ् म्ह्लौं; SamP: ञ ङ स्ह्लौँ 39. ञ्: म्ह्लाँ 40. ङ्: –ठ
41. क्: स्हाँ; ख्, घ्, झ्: म्ह्लां; छ्: सह्लां 42. क्, ग्: क–. SamP and all MSs: –कुर्
43. क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: श्री; ञ्: श्रीं; SamP: श्री
44. क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, झ्: हख्फ्रें; ङ्, ञ्: ? *?; छ्, ज्: –फ्रें
45. SamP क्, ख्, ग्, ङ्, ज्, झ्: –पदाष्टमं; घ्, च्, छ्: –ष्टम
46. क्: अघोरेखा; SamP and all other MSs: अघोरेषा 47. ख्, ङ्, झ्: पंचर्
48. क्, ख्: पूर्णे–; ग्, घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: पूर्णं–. IC. See above, note to 1/5b.
49. All MSs: अस्यां 50. ख्, ङ्, झ्: वक्त्रं–; च्, छ्: वक्रषडं–
51. All MSs: –युक्तात् 52. All MSs: पूर्वा
53. घ्, च्: * (?); छ्, ञ्: नास्ति; झ्: ?
54. घ्, ञ्: वीजंन्यासमत:; च्: वीजन्यासमत:; छ्: विजन्यासमत:; YKh (1): वक्त्रन्यासं (क्, ख्: वक्रन्यासं; घ्: वतुन्यासं) तनो: (क्, ख्, घ्, ङ्: तनु:)
55. ञ्: शृष्टिन्यासेन; all other MSs: शृष्टि– 56. YKh (1): भैरव
57. झ्: समालभ्य 58. ञ्: षावात्
59. झ्: –नन?; YKh (1): यावद् वै (क्, ख्: यांवद्धै; घ्: यावद्धै) पश्चिमाननम्
60. All MSs: शृष्टि–; झ्: –णैव?; YKh (1): (घ्: सौम्य) सृष्टिप्रयोगेन (क्, ख्, घ्: –प्रयोगे; ङ्: सृष्टि *योगेन)

61. क्: –मन्यंक्रमेण; YKh (1): रौद्रमन्यक्रमेण (क्: –मन्यंजक्रमेण; ख्: –मन्यजक्रमेण; घ्:
–मन्येजक्रमेण)

62. An anusvāra has apparently been dropped to keep the fifth syllable short. 63. ख्: क्रमो–; YKh (1): यावद् वै (क्, ख्, घ्: यावद्धे) पूर्वमाननम्

64. M → N. ख्, झ्: सहा– 65. All MSs: सिद्धाङ्गं–; ख्, ङ्, झ्: –पश्चिमं; all other
MSs: पश्चिमे; YKh (1) क्, ख्, घ्: सिद्धांसयंचकं; ङ्: पंचके

66. All MSs: शृष्टि– 67. क्: सन्तत्यां; ङ्, ञ्: संतत्या; all other MSs: संतभ्या

68. All MSs: संहारेणानिमित्तसु The emendations in this line agree with the readings of YKh (1). 69. ग्, झ्: शृष्टि–; ङ्: शृष्टिसहारयोज्ञात्वा; च्: –योज्ञात्वां; all other MSs: शृष्टिसंहारयोज्ञात्वा. It seems that a locative has replaced the required accusative for the sake of the metre. Alternatively, if the reading of the manuscripts is accepted, then a nominative plural has replaced the required accusative dual. 70. क्, ङ्, ज्: भै–; ख्: उ–

71. YKh (1): भकारादि च कूटान्तं ऊर्ध्ववक्त्रं प्रकीर्तितम्

72. क्, ग्: नामोन्तं. Cf. 10/25a. 73. घ्, छ्: ऊर्द्ध–; YKh (1) क्, ख्, घ्: मूर्तिवक्त्रा; ङ्:
मूर्द्धनि वक्त्रा 74. This line missing in MSs ख्, ङ and च्

75. ख्, ग्: डका * दि; झ्: ?*कारादि

76. YKh (1): टकारादि खाकारान्तं (ङ्: षका–) दक्षवक्त्रं (क्, ख्, घ्: डक्षवक्त्रं) प्रकीर्तितम्।

77. All MSs: अमृतादिविपर्यान्तं 78. All MSs except क्, घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: विन्यसेचोत्त–

79. All MSs: छादिं 80. ङ्: वक्त्रदं. See above, note to 3/12c.

81. All MSs: देव्यो 82. All MSs: सिद्धि–

83. ख्, छ्, ज्, झ्: तृ–; च्: त्रिपुरांमूर्त्ति. Here a final visarga has been dropped to keep the fifth syllable short as happens in five other instances (see 21/41c, 37/58c (= 41/83c), 46/225b and 59/102c).

84. The final vowel has been shortened for the metre.

85. All MSs: पूर्वका 86. झ्: –मालभ्य. This indeclinable normally governs the ablative. Cf. 28/72c, 48/75a and 48/81a and also 8/85a, 9/13c and 67/21a. 87. All MSs except क्: –योजिता. IC.

88. घ्, च्, छ्: षडडि:; छ्: डडि:; ञ्: शत्रि:. This peculiar derivative of the numeral षट् appears again below mostly as षडि: but also as षडि in 10/34c, 25/8c, 26/23d,
28/54c, 65b, 30/57a, 35/32a, 38/3d, 53/2b, 58/90d, 59/37a, 41c, 68b, 60/34a, 98a, 61/3c, 9a, 18b, 28c, 49cd, 63/1d, 2a, 4c, 6b, 7ac, 11b, 54bcd, 55a, 56c, 73a, 88d, 64/28c, 93b, and 66/15c. Although the noun अङ्ग– is correctly declined as neuter, in concord here, as below in 10/28a, it is treated as masculine.

89. झ्: न्यस्येत् 90. Cf. above, 10/19c.

91. शिरस् has been thematized to शिर – The regular form of the accusative singular is शिरसम् 92. छ्: शिखाया

93. ख्, ग्, ञ्: डादि; च्: डादिं 94. ग्: द्वावतौ

95. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: नेत्रयोन्यसेत् 96. IM 6.

97. क्: चांग्यनि; घ्, च्: चानानि; छ्: चानामि. Cf. above, 10/24d.

98. छ्: शुभ–. IM 6 + 7. 99. All MSs: –ता 100. All MSs: –ताश्च

101. ख्, ङ्, छ्, झ्: सर्वदेक्षाकरा; all other MSs: –रक्षाकरा 102. All MSs: परा

103. All MSs: पुनर– 104. छ्: + न 105. ङ्: –कमलावायी; all other MSs: –लान्वायी 106. ख्: कुरू–; च्: –ख्यां 107. च्: –णां

108. घ्, च्, छ्: –ना; ञ्: अङ्गना 109. झ्: –तं? 110. क्, ग्: एतैद्वा–

111. All MSs: –देवता 112. All MSs except ङ्: तंत्रो–; all MSs: –मुक्ता.
Here it appears that, as in 10/24d and 10/28a, the attribute of the neuter noun अङ्ग– is masculine. 113. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: सिद्धा * (?) नि

114. च्: सट्स्थि–; क्, झ्: वस्थि–; all other MSs: * स्थिरार्णवम्. See above, chapter four, note to line 63 of the Mālinīstava.

115. ङ्: –णेव. This pāda is one syllable short.

116. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: आद्यन्त. See above, note to 3/22b.

117. ङ्: –ता. IC. Cf. 10/28a. 118. झ्: –दालभ्यते

119. M → N. Although the lexicons agrees that न्यास– is a masculine word, it is often treated as neuter in Tantric texts in general as well as in the Purāṇas.

120. क्: –खो; all other MSs except ख्: –मुखा 121. झ्: भवत

122. ङ्: –कं; झ्: अंग * * 123. ञ्: षतिमुद्रा. See above, note to 10/24d.

124. All MSs: –क्रमम् 125. च्: –द्रां 126. ग्, च्: सिहा

127. झ्: ? 128. झ्: चिं? चिणी 129. च्: शूलमु *

130. च्: वक्रीका; all other MSs: वक्रिन्या. Just as the deviant form देव्या is derived from देवी and मालिन्या from मालिनी (see above 10/22c), similarly वक्रिण्या is derived from वक्रिणी. 131. घ्, च्, छ्: एतेस्तु 132. घ्, च्: सिद्धचर् * हा;
छ्: सिद्धचर्ही; ञ्: सिद्धय? *?हा The correct form of this peculiar expression is सिद्धयारूढः.
Cf. above, chapter four, line 43 of the Mālinīstava. 133. क्: मुद्रितो

134. All MSs: –मुद्रायाः. Perhaps the instrumental – मुद्रया – is intended here, but this would make the seventh syllable short. I have emended to a locative as the gentive makes no sense. Cf. below 27/68ab 135. All MSs: विद्या

136. ङ्: समत्यसेत् 137. च्: पत्राङ्गेषु

138. This adjective is free-floating. It refers, it seems, to the colour of the uppermost face of the goddess. 139. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: –नन 140. च्: –र्द्ध 141. ङ्:
पाडुरं; झ्: पादुरं; all other MSs: पांदुरं

142. The final anusvāra has been dropped for the metre. 143. ग्: चैवोर्त्त–

144. All MSs: –मालां– 145. क्, ग्, झ्: विद्यू– 146. All MSs except क्, ज्: –च्छ्यामं 147. ख्, ङ्, ज्, झ्: व 148. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: –वर्ण

149. This pada is one syllable too long.

150. च्, ङ्, छ्, ञ्: –लो 151. This is a pleonism

152. All MSs: –विनाशनम् 153. YKh (1): एवं क्रमागतंयोगं (क्, ख्, घ्: यातं). M → N. 154. YKh (1): न्यासं – 155. च्: यदा 156. ख्, ङ्, छ्: –शं; YKh (1): न्यसेत् तु (क्, घ्: न्यह्यषु; ख्: नह्येषु; ङ्: न्यस्तेषु) देवेश 157. All MSs except झ्: योनि 158. YKh (1): यान् यान् वाञ्छति कामान् (ङ्: का * न). M → N.

159. च्: तांस्तार्; all other MSs: तांस्ता. Cf. below, 10/64ab for a correct version of this line. 160. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: ल * ति. The root लभ् is normally 1Ā. See above, note to 4/35b. 161. झ्: –षो?

162. All MSs: विद्या–. 163. YKh (1) क्, ख्, घ्: प्रिया; ङ्: प्रिये

164. घ्, च्: –जन्तु; छ्, ज्: ज्जन्तु; all other MSs: –जन्तुः; YKh (1): यं (ङ्: जं) यं (ङ्: जं)
निरीक्षयेत् (क्, घ्: लिरीक्षयें; ख्: लिरीक्षये; ङ्: –क्षय) जंतुं (क्, ख्, घ्: ज्जंतु; ङ्: जंतु)

165. क्, ख्, झ्: कोपाधिष्टस्तु–; ग्: कोपाधिष्टस्तू, घ्, छ्, ज्: कोपाधिष्ठस्तुसा–; YKh (1):
क्रोधाविसस्तु (ङ्: –विष्णुस्तु)

166. YKh (1): पतत्यसौ (क्, ख्, घ्: –सो; ङ्: एतत् पसौ) न

167. ङ्: भवे; YKh (1): यादृशस्तादृशेऽ पि (ङ्: –शोपि) वा

168. ख्, ङ्, च्, झ्: पीठनासा–; च्: –न्यासेस्य; YKh (1): पीठन्यासादिविन्यस्ते

169. ख्, घ्, च्, छ्: चै; झ्: यै

170. छ्: वज–; YKh (1): सप्ताविंशस्तु (ङ्: –शति) लिख्यते (ङ्: संखिने)

171. ग्, च्: –स्फोटा; YKh (1): –टं (ङ्: –ट) 172. YKh (1): प्रवर्तेत

173. All MSs: चावलोकयेत्; YKh (1): चालनं (ङ्: वा–) (क्, ख्, घ्: भोत्रैलोकनं; ङ्:
भाषलोकनं) 174. ङ्: दिव्याः देहं; all other MSs: दिव्या–; YKh
(1) ङ्: –हे 175. च्: षपुस्तेज–; छ्: वपुस्तज–; झ्: वपुस्ते * श्चि–;
YKh (1): वपुस्थैर्यं (क्: वपुस्थेर्यं; ख्: वपुर्स्थेर्यं; घ्: वपुस्थेयं) चिरायुषम् (क्, ख्: श्चिरायुषं; ङ्: विरा–)

176. YKh (1) क्, ख्, घ्: सोभाग्यं; ङ्: तौभाग्यं

177. क्, ग्: कालिलक्ष्मी; YKh (1): कान्तिलावण्यं (क्, ख्, घ्: –वन्यं; ङ्: कान्तिनावण्य)

178. क्, ग्: विद्याक्षौभः; YKh (1): दिव्यक्षोभं

179. झ्: समन्वितः; YKh (1): प्रवर्तते 180. क्: कामेश्वर्यें; घ्, छ्: –श्वर्यञ्

181. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ञ्: चलं 182. ख्, झ्: सोर्यं; all other MSs except क्: सौर्यं

183. YKh (1): मथनं (क्, ख्, घ्, ङ्: मतनं) च तथा (ङ्: लथा) लक्ष्मी कामेश्वर्यं (ङ्: कामैश्वर्यं) प्रवर्तते (क्, ख्, घ्: प्रवर्तीत). The required plural would disrupt the metre. One could construe that the verb agrees with the expression सर्वसिद्धिः which refers collectively in the singular to the previous items of this list.

184. YKh (1): इत्यागमेन सिद्धस्य (क्, ख्, घ्: सिद्धंस्य) दद्याद् (क्, ख्, घ्: दद्याक्; ङ्: दद्या). A genitive is meant here. Has the ending been dropped to accomodate the metre or is a nominative functioning as a genitive? There are several examples in this text of the replacement of the genitive by all the cases except the ablative. A survey of the first thirty chapters reveals that a nominative functions as a genitive as many as seven other times (10/47c, 57a, 14/113ab, 16/29c, 18/23c, 26/30d, 28/80b, 114b), an accusative four times (3/161a, 8/81ab, 13/53b, 18/15ab), an instrumental six times (11/5a, 11/33c, 12/4b, 13/41c, 27/64b, 30/192a(193a)), a dative twice (18/12c, 26/54b), and a locative five times (13/86cb, 18/22c, 19/37c, 28/68c, 138b). Conversely, the genitive functions as an instrumental only twice (14/60a, 15/45ab) and as a locative just once (15/40c). Most of these changes in the case endings are adaptations to the metre.

185. YKh (1): ऊर्ध्वक्रमस्य (ख्: ऊर्द्धक्रमस्य; ङ्: छुद्धक्रमस्य)

186. YKh (1) ङ्: –मतदाख्यातं. M → N. 187. क्: –त्यंयल–

188. YKh (1) क्, ख्, घ्: सताताभ्यास– 189. YKh (1): द्वादशाब्दे
च (क्: द्वादशौव्देश्च; ख्: द्वादशौव्दैश्च; घ्: द्वादशोव्देश्च; ङ्: द्वादशाव्दिश्च) 190. घ्, ञ्: –कासगामी; YKh (1): स्वयं चाकाशगामी (क्, ख्, घ्: वाकाशगायी; ङ्: वा–) 191. The final anusvāra has been dropped for the metre. YKh (1): पातालतल (क्, ख्, घ्: पालतल)

192. YKh (1) क्, ख्, घ्: भुंजंति. The root भुज् is normally 7U. भुनक्ति or भुंक्ते would be correct. 193. झ्: न्वं

194. ख्: माध–; YKh (1): यथाहं च तथा त्वं (ङ्: चं) यथा वै श्रीकुलागमम

195. झ: जन्माता 196. च्: –स्थिता

197. झ्: महतनुः 198. All MSs: –करा. 199. झ्: –विदेश्वरी

200. All MSs: हृदया 201. The subject is विद्या and अस्याः is meant.
Double sandhi has taken place here. 202. IC.

203. स्त्री *?. This word should be integrated into the following compound, but that would disturb the metre.

204. झ्: गोवा–; छ्: –कन्तका:; ञ्: –लन्तका: 205. ख्: + व
206. All MSs except क्: –द्रोहा.
207. ग्: दुरातत्मानो; all other MSs: दुरात्मानो
208. छ्, ञ्: –दोहा; all other MSs except क्: –द्रोही
209. झ्: अग्निदोघकरा; all other MSs: अग्निदाघकरा 210. झ्: य
211. ङ्: –का; च्: –घातघा: 212. झ्: –कर
213. ङ्: उपपक्षका:. The hiatus in this compound is, as usual, in order to maintain the metre. Cf. above, note to 3/77d.
214. ङ्: वहु– 215. The substantive has switched from the agent to the action without establishing the required syntax between them.
Moreover, this compound is not valid. The two words conjoined make कृतान्यन्यायात्, the first of which presumably agrees with पापानि.
216. झ्: –मानत: 217. All MSs except क्, ग्, ज्: भस्मसा
218. झ्: याति 219. ख्: –रनाद्; घ्, च्: –रणा
220. See above, note to 4/35b.
221. घ्, च्, छ्: स्मरणानिर्मला; all MSs except क्, ग्, झ्: –ला; ञ्: –निर्मला
222. ख्: निरुज; all other MSs: निरुज:
223. झ्: –सहश्राणि; क्, च्: –शि. All other MSs: –णि
224. All MSs: गोकन्याकोटियत् फलम् 225. ङ्: –ता * रं
226. घ्, च्, छ्: गोग्रह; ञ्: –गृह. This and the following four words are missing in MSs ख्, ङ्, and झ् 227. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: युद्ध 228. ङ्: –हें
229. घ्, च्: अनेशन; छ्: अनशन. 230. घ्, च्, छ्: व 231. घ्, छ्: महायथे
232. घ्, छ्, ञ्: –ने 233. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: चन्द्र–; झ्: –सूर्यो.
234. झ्: यत्लम् 235. All MSs: विद्यायां 236. ङ्: –न्या
237. झ्: पीठया; all other MSs: पीठजा 238. All MSs: –पि
239. All MSs: सहजा 240. ख्: पद
241. झ्: सौभा *?–. Arranging the order of the components of this compound into what is presumably the one intended we read: सौभाग्यवत्सलजन:
242. All MSs: –प्राप्ति 243. घ्, च्, छ्: संपदा
244. All other MSs except क्, ग्, घ्, ङ्: रु 245. च्: कृत्य: कृत
246. झ्: श 247. क्: देवेशो 248. क्: जिह्वाया
249. The correct form is वर्णितुम् 250. ङ्: वाच्छयते; च्, छ्: -तं
251. झ्: तास्तां; ञ्: तांस्तां 252. ङ्: * * नवाप्नुयात् Cf. above 10/43ab.
253. All MSs except ज्: युग 254. All MSs: गता. One could perhaps take गता to be in concord with विद्या but then the syntax would be very skewed.
255. क्: व्रह्मविष्णुवं–; घ्, च्: व्र्ह्मविष्णिन्द्र–; छ्, ज्, ञ्: व्रह्मविष्णिव–; all other MSs: व्रह्मविणंद्र– 256. All other MSs except क्: –वेन. The ending of the word विद्या has been dropped to preserve the metre leading to the formation of this irregular compound.
257. त *?. A plural is required here for the syntax.
258. घ्, छ्, ञ्: व्रह्मेण; च्: ग्र? मेण 259. घ्, ङ्, च्, ञ्: भैरवेनापि
260. ख्: सिर्द्ध–; झ्: –किन्नरै 261. The cardinal दश has assumed the form of an ordinal for the sake of the metre. दशदिग्भि: or दशदिशाभि: would be correct but that would make the sixth syllable short. Thus दिश् is treated here as a masculine thematic noun.

262. झ्: + सर्व्वे पूजिता विद्या वंदिता त्रिदशोदिशैः
263. ख्: सर्वेः; घ्: सव; छ्, घ्, ञ्: सर्व्व; झ्: सर्वैं; च्: सर्वे 264. झ्: पूजिता
265. घ्, च्, झ्: त्रिदसैरपि 266. झ्: –यत्; all other MSs: यात्
267. च्: स्त्रीगीयते 268. झ्: द्रव्यही *; all other MSs: हीना
269. घ्, च्, छ्: पतन् ते च; all other MSs: एतत् ते च
270. घ्: –चक्रनायका; च्: –चकुनायिकाः; ञ्: –चकुनायका
271. All MSs except क्, छ्, ज्: परमेश्वरी 272. छ्: –भै * वयज्ञे
273. क्, ग्: अन्वय; छ्: * न्वये 274. झ्: –माणे? 275. ग्: लक्षलक्षपादा–
276. घ्, च्, छ्, ञ्: –वतारे
277. All other MSs except घ्, च्, छ्, ज्, ञ्: –पीथ– 278. ख्: आज्ञापर–
279. ख्: विद्यामात्म्य–

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF CHAPTER TEN

1. Presumably, the Bhairavapiṇḍa is the fifth Praṇava, which is called Bhairava in 9/22 and Bhairavī Vidyā in 8/104-105ab. The version extracted in these two places of this Praṇava is HSRAU-UṀ. The letter R is indeed located between S and AU in this seed-syllable.

2. I read this verse in this way, supporting verse 10/5.

3. Vāruṇī is the energy of Amā, the sixteenth digit of the moon (see note to 9/51). As the Five Praṇavas placed at the beginning of the Vidyā are uttered in the forward order, the fifth Praṇava is directly in contact with the beginning of the Vidyā. It is also in direct contact with the Vidyā at the end, as the Praṇavas there are in the reverse order. It appears that the form of this Praṇava extracted in the previous two chapters, namely HSRAU-UṀ, is functional when it is not in contact in this way with the Vidyā. In the latter case it needs to be modified to HSAU-UṀ. In this form it is identified with the sixteenth digit of the moon which, freed of the heating and drying brought about by the fire of the letter Ra (but cf. 9/49ab-50ab), discharges a nectar that is not consumed within the syllable itself. Thus, free to flow, the lunar Vidyā is filled by it from both sides, as it were, and so becomes the Vidyā of the Full Moon.

Mantras may be 'locked' (kīlana) or unlocked (utkīlana) by the adition or subtraction of syllables or words (see notes of vol. 2 of the translation, appendix 2). We observed that the changes that the 'unlocking' of a mantra entail in the form of a mantra may have to do, to some degree at least, with the modifications a mantra undergoes in the course of its transmission. This particular Praṇava is a case in point because it is liable to considerably more variation in the texts than are the other Praṇavas. And HSAUŪṀ is indeed a common variant, more common, in fact, than HSRAUUṀ.

4. The power to fly in the transcendent is the liberation to which Kaulas aspire. See PTv p. 214-215.

5. Rudra's energy is the goddess in the form of her Vidyā – Cf. YKh (1) 37/15cd-17ab quoted above in note to 8/34ab.

6. Literally 'one who desires knowledge'.

7. Cf. the division of this Vidyā into sixteen parts recorded above in 9/30-35.

8. The Vidyā is: BHAGAVATI GHORE HSKHPHREṀ ŚRĪṀ KUBJIKE SHRĀṀ SHRĪṀ SHRAUṀ ṄAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHI CCHĀṀ CCHĪṀ KIṆI KIṆI VICCE. Cf above – the main difference appears to be the omission of the letter R from the syllables CCHĀṀ CCHĪṀ. Although this is the form of these two syllables in the KMT, we are expressly told above (8/51) that they are 'adorned' with this letter, implying perhaps that this is an addition. Note also SHRĀṀ SHRĪṀ SHRAUṀ. These syllables in the version of the Vidyā of the KMT are: HRĀṂ HRĪṂ HRAUṂ. MSs indicate SHRŪAUṂ for SHRAUṂ but this form is inconsistent with that of the other two syllables and so has not been accepted.

If this is the form of these syllables in the KuKh, they are different from the ones presented in the parent text – the YKh (1) (chapter 17 verse 3 ff.) – where they are simply HRĀṂ HRĪṂ HRAUṂ. See above note to 8/30-31ab. However, according to the Ṭīkā, the seed-syllables are as they are here.

9. After the main (mūla) Vidyā has been extracted from the grid, the next thing that needs to be done is to purify the person who is going to use it. This is accomplished by projecting the Vidyā onto the body. This procedure is called nyāsa. The word is derived from the root as ('throw' or 'project') and the prefix ni ('below' or 'upon') from which we get the masculine substantive nyāsa. Monier-Williams records the following meanings of this word: 'putting down or in, placing, fixing, inserting, applying . . . drawing, painting, writing down . . . depositing, intrusting, delivering . . . mental appropriation or assignment of various parts of the body to tutelary deities . . . ' According to Kane (1974: vol. V, 2 p. 1120): 'nyāsa means mentally invoking a god or gods, mantras and holy texts to come to occupy certain parts of the body in order to render the body pure and a fit receptacle for worship and meditation'. He quotes the Kulārṇavatantra (18/56) as saying: 'O goddess, nyāsa is said to (take place) by depositing riches that are acquired in a righteous way onto the limbs (of the body) in order to protect (them) completely.' (nyayoparjitavittānām aṅgeṣu viniveśanāt | sarvarakṣakarād devi nyāsa ity abhidhīyate |). For an excellent and substantial exposition of nyāsa, the reader is referred to Padoux 1980.

In this case the Vidyā is projected progressively in different parts and modalities. These projections are, successively: 1) the hands, 2) the six faces, 3) the six limbs, 4) the thirty-two syllables of the Vidyā. After the projections onto the body, the Vidyā is projected into the maṇḍala, which is treated in chapter eleven that follows.

Deities are visualized as having limbs and faces that serve to represent their energies and activities. Similarly, their sonoric form – mantras and Vidyās – consist of parts. The deposition of a standard set of six limbs of the mantra of a deity is basic common practice in all Tantric ritual (see Padoux 1978: 66, 74) whether Śaiva, Vaiṣṇava or Śākta or, indeed, Buddhist or Jaina. This procedure is generally termed sakalīkaraṇa, which means 'completion', 'rendering whole' or 'energizing'. This deposition is done once the deity has been 'brought down' from its transcendental residence and is made present before the officiant. This takes place by means of a series of four ritual operations accompanied by the corresponding gestures. They are: 1) the invocation (āvāhana) of the deity, 2) the installation of the deity into the object in which it is worshipped (sthāpana), 3) the actualization of its presence (saṁnidhāna lit. 'bringing close by') and 4) detention (saṁnirodha) of the deity so that it remains where it has been placed while it is worshipped. An important compendium of Śaivasiddhānta ritual, the Somaśambhupaddhati (3/71b-74a), explains that:

> Just as the sun is invincible and powerful by virtue of its fierce rays, so too the Supreme Lord (Parameśvara) should be contemplated along with his limbs. His Heart is his power of consciousness (cicchakti), the Head his eightfold sovereignty (i.e. the eight yogic powers; see above note to 8/123-124), the Topknot, the highest of all, is his independence and lordship. His effulgence that the enemy's weapons cannot penetrate is called the Armour. His heat, which is is unbearable, his Weapon that eliminates all obstacles.

The fifth limb, the Eye, is not mentioned in this reference, as it is commonly treated separately. Thus, Abhinavagupta (TĀ 22/20-21) says that one of the mantras common (sāmānya) to all Śaiva schools, and we may add that it is well known to the Kubjikā Tantras also, is the mantra of the Eye. This is the mantra of Śiva Mṛtyuñjaya (Conqueror of Death), namely, OṀ JUṀ SAḤ (TĀ 30/40b-41ab). The Eye is the Third Eye of Śiva that emits the world-destroying fire, and so is sometimes treated together with the sixth limb, the Weapon (see, for example, ṢSS 13/42cd-59 and note below on 10/15). The Somaśambhupaddhati (3/41cd-34) explains:

> The Heart is said to be the individual soul (jīva) and, together with the Head, that is, the shaved head (muṇḍa), makes two. The tying of the Topknot is said to be mantra. As long it remains tied, one stands (firm) and is not overcome by the great fear (caused by) supernatural (divya) or other beings (adivya). O goddess, the Armour is for all the body and makes it (powerful and hard as) lightning (vajrarūpa). The Self (i.e. deity) of the Eye (netrātman) protects the eye. The Weapon frees from fear. O lady of fine vows, that a mantra has six limbs has been explained to you in order that the one who recites the mantra may be protected and always be hard to penetrate.

Thus, after Kubjikā's Vidyā has been presented in its full form and its syllabic divisions, we move on to the limbs and faces of the Vidyā that correspond to those of the goddess's visualized form. The deposition of the six limbs is basic to Tantric ritual of all schools. The six limbs form a standard set. As energies of the parts of the mantras, they are also the energies of the deity. As the number of heads of deity may vary, the deposition of the faces does not invariably accompany that of the limbs, although it often does so. The best known example is the combination of Sadāśiva's five faces with the limbs (the Eye is omitted). The way this is done is explained by Goudriaan (1986: 148-9). Another example are the limbs and faces of the mantra of Ratiśekhara Bhairava taught by Abhinavagupta in the Tantrāloka (30/10b-11a). Another example of the deposition of faces and limbs is that of the Mahāntārikā Vidyā. Mahāntārikā, a form of Kubjikā, has seven faces. In this case the deposition of the limbs of her Vidyā are six while that of her faces are seven (Ṭīkā fl. 31a-31b, based on chapter 28 of the ṢSS).

The following are two examples of the deposition of Kubjikā's faces. The first is drawn from the Ṭīkā (fl. 53b) and the other is from the Siddhakhaṇḍa (MS G fl. 48a). The Samayā Devī of forty-two syllables according to the Ṭīkā is:

AIṀ HRĪṀ ŚRĪṀ KHPHREṀ HSPHAUṀ BHAGAVATI AMVE HSKHPHREṀ SHKHPHRĪṀ KUBJIKE HSRĀṀ HSRIṀ HSRAUṀ ṆAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHE CCHRĀṀ CCHRĪṀ KIṆI KIṆI VICCE HSPHAUṀ KHPHREṀ ŚRĪṀ HRĪṀ AIṀ

The faces are projected into the hexogram of the Kramamaṇḍala in the centre of which is Ādyanatha that is, Navātman (HSKṢMLVRYŪṀ) and his consort Navātmī (SHKṢMLVRYĪṀ). The mantra for each face is structured as follows:

1) A part of the Samayā Vidyā. These sections are the same in the corresponding entries for each deposition.
2) The name of the goddess corresponding to the particular face in the dative.
3) The location of the face, also in the dative.
4) The corresponding Siddha with the usual ending. This is the same as the deposition on the hands.

The variables are:

1) Parādevīśivā – upper face – Śrīśivanātha
2) Kuladīpā – face on top of the head – Śrīvyomanātha
3) Siddhayogeśvarīmudrā – eastern face – Śrīvyāpakānandanātha
4) Śrīkālikādevīvidyā – southern face – Śrījyotinātha
5) Śrīlakṣmīdevīmantra – northern face – Śrīśaktinātha
6) Śrīkubjikādevī ājñā – western face – Śrībindunātha

The Samayā Vidyā according to the Siddhakhaṇḍa:

AIṀ 5 BHAGAVATI GHORE HSKHPHREṀ ŚRĪKUBJIKE [K G: ŚRĪṀ-] HRĀṀ HRĪṀ HRAUṀ ṆAÑAṆANAME AGHORĀMUKHI CCHĀṀ CCHĪṀ KIṆI KIṆI VICCE ||

The mantra for each face is structured as follows:
1) The Five Praṇavas 2) One of the Praṇavas. The first two faces are the fifth Praṇava. The remaining ones are the following four in reverse order. 3) A part of the Vidyā. 4) The name of the goddess's face preceded by 'śrī'. The following as suffixes in the dative are added at the end: A) Śivā B) Samanā C) Mudrā D) Vidyā E) Mantrā F) Maṇḍala (?). 5) The name of the face according to its position in the dative. 6) The name of a Siddha for each face prefixed with śrī and suffixed with 'ānandanātha' and ending with 'pādukāṁ pūjayāmi'. The Siddhas are A) Nitya B) Amogha C) Śilāśekhara D) Mahābhairava E) Jyoti F) Vyāpaka. For example, the mantra of the uppermost face is:

AIṀ 5 HSVŪAUṀ [K KH: HSRŪAṀ; G: HSRŪAUṀ] BHAGAVATI GHORE ŚRĪPARĀDEVĪŚIVĀYAI [KH: * PARĀ-] ŪRDHVAVAKTRĀYA [K: MŪRDHNI-] ŚRĪNITYĀNANDANĀTHAPĀDUKĀṀ PŪJAYĀMI ||

The SKh (MS G fl. 43b-44a) also teaches another reduced version of the deposition of the faces as well as an expanded one. The reduced version omits mention of the Siddhas. The Five Praṇavas, in the forward order, come at the beginning and end of each unit. As in the longer deposition, it consists of a part of the Vidyā, the name of the deity of that face. The expanded version includes the deposition of the energies of the faces that are embodied in the sixty-four Yoginīs that emanate from them (see below notes to 29/45 ff. for details). The Vidyā of the deity of the face is stated first, followed by a list of the corresponding energies of that face.

10. The adept deposits the limbs and faces by touching the corresponding parts of his body as he utters them. These places are mostly the same for all forms of the Deposition on the Six Limbs (ṣaḍaṅganyāsa) and are, as the KuKauM (3/69) tells us: '1) The Heart is in the heart, 2) the Head in the head, 3) the Topknot in the topknot, 4) the Armour is for all purposes, 5) the Eye is in the eye, 6) the Weapon should be in all the directions.' However, before this can be done, one must first, as one would expect, purify the hands. According to the SKh this is done by depositing the Five Praṇavas on the fingers of (presumably the right) hand starting with the thumb up to the little finger, first in the forward order and then the reverse. The KuKauM (3/57-60) prescribes the projection of the limbs (of the Tvaritā Vidyā) onto the fingers as follows: 1) Heart: ring finger, 2) Head: little finger, 3) Topknot: first finger, 4) Armour: index finger, 5) Eye: palm, 6) Weapon: thumb.

The procedure described below in chapter forty-eight is more complex (see below 48/33-37ab and note; cf. note to 10/27). This involves the entire deposition of both the goddess's six faces and limbs on the hands and fingers. An interesting procedure is described in the Ṭīkā (fl. 53b-54a) in which, unlike the other depositions, seven rather than six units are deposited onto the hands. The first five mantras are projected onto the five fingers starting with the thumb up to the little finger. The sixth one is deposited onto the wrists by rubbing them together. Finally, the seventh is projected onto the back of the hands and palms. The first six units consist of parts of the Samayā Vidyā. The seventh consists of two forms of Navātman (HSKṢMLVRYŪ/M SHKṢMALVARAYĪṀ). The structure is as follows:

1) A part of the Samayā Vidyā.
2) The first letter of the name of the finger repeated twice with a Half Moon and Drop. Note that 'aṅguṣṭha' ('thumb'), the first entry, is preceded by AṀ AṀ. However, 'anāmikā', the fourth entry, is preceded by a syllable formed from the long vowel, ĀṀ ĀṀ.
3) The name of the finger in the dative.
4) The name of a god, ending with '-nātha' followed by 'pādukāṁ pūjayāmi' ('I worship the sandals of . . .') which may be substituted by AIṀ in all the entries of the three depositions. Or else it may also be added at the end, so that there are both of them.

The variables in this case are the names of the teachers-cum-deities, which are:
1) Anādinātha 2) Tejasānandanātha 3) Madananātha 4) Ādyanātha 5) Śrīkandarpānandanātha 6) Śrī Anackanātha 7) Śrīkailāsānandanātha.

11. Here the six faces and limbs are treated together as happens in the SKh and in chapter 17 of YKh (1) (quoted below, notes 12 and 17). In all these three cases the faces are deposited first. Collectively they are called the twelve divisions (bheda), the twelvefold sequence (krama) (below 10/34) or the twelvefold deposition (nyāsa) (below 10/42). In the KMT and the related ŚM and ṢSS, the limbs there come first. Moreover, the faces are treated only briefly and, apparently, incompletely, in just two lines in the KMT (7/42cd-43ab), which are reproduced with variants in the ṢSS (13/61) and the ŚM (10/196cd-7ab). Thus, it appears that the projection of the faces was not considered to be an important part of the ritual when the KMT was redacted. This is probably because the form of Kubjikā with six faces, which became the major one, was not yet well established.

The ṢSS (13/61) quotes this verse with netram astraṁ tu pañcamam in the second quarter verse in place of pañcamaṁ tu tadagrataḥ of the KMT and pañcamaṁ ca tathā param of the ŚM. A problem arises with the presentation in the ṢSS because the Eye is omitted, probably because of the obscurity of the KMT's brief reference to the manner in which the faces and the limbs correspond. According to the ṢSS, the first four faces ranging from the uppermost correspond to the first four limbs up to the Armour. The Eye and the Weapon together correspond to the sixth head which is the western one (13/62ab). The commentary adds that the uppermost face and the upper one are counted together and correspond to the first limb, that is, the Heart. The ṢSS (13/42cd-59) lists the limbs of the Vidyā and notes the same number of syllables for each one as does the KMT (7/30) and ŚM (10/137-189), but omits the Eye. All the other entries are the same as those of the KMT and the ŚM. The commentary on the ṢSS lists the correspondences as follows: 1) Heart – Upper and Uppermost Face. 2) Head – Western Face. 3) Topknot – Southern Face. 4) Armour – Northern Face. 5) Eye and Weapon – Western Face. Unlike the other two texts, the ṢSS (13/65-67ab) provides the seed-syllables in code of the six faces.

12. The pattern of emanation is the forward, in this case, clockwise order. The lines 10/15cd-19 corresponds to YKh (1) 17/22-26ab. The variant readings have been noted in the critical apparatus of the Sanskrit text.

13. YKh (1): '. . . up to the eastern face'.

14. The 'accomplished limbs' are, presumably, the Five Praṇavas. The order of emanation proceeds from the uppermost face to the western one progressively thus: uppermost > upper > eastern > southern > northern > western. The order of withdrawal is the reverse of this. The KMT (7/30 ff.) presents the six limbs of the Samayā Vidyā in the reverse order. This, we are told, is according to the Siddha Path (mārga) or procedure. Thus, the equation made here between withdrawal and the 'Siddha aspect' (siddhāṅga) probably just refers to the reversal of the sequence.

15. Here is another example of how the orientation of the ritual procedure, practice, cosmology and the rest of the teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras is dominantly orientated towards the order of emanation rather than withdrawal. Even so, both must be known and applied. The fulfilment of this practice is entry into the goddess's Divine Face. If I am not mistaken, this is the seventh, transcendental face, beyond the six, known as the Unborn Face (ajavaktra). If so, our text is drawing here from a different symbolic scheme of seven faces, which is described in detail in chapter forty-two of the ṢSS. These seven faces belong primarily to Śiva but as they are associated with seven energies they are, by extension, said to be the faces or aspects of Śiva's one, primordial power (ādiśakti) (comm. on ṢSS 42/20ab), the Transmental (ibid. 42/18). These faces are arranged on a vertical axis and are formed by the progressive sevenfold development of the one power. They operate in the six Wheels in the body and the seventh one beyond which is the Unborn Face. Situated at the End of the Twelve, it is the cessation of all bondage (ibid. 42/44). It is the face of the omniscient and omnipresent Śiva (ibid. 42/57). Lineages and teachings of Siddhas originate from the middle fives faces. The lowest face is in the hell-worlds in the Wheel of the Foundation. It is the face of the Yoginī called Picu. The Unborn or Primordial Face (ādivaktra) is the teacher's mouth (guruvaktra) from which emerge the teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras (ibid. 42/69 ff.).

16. YKh (1) reads mūrtivaktra – lit. ‘the face of the icon’. The goddess has two aspects: mūrtā – ‘with form’ and amūrtā – ‘without form’. One would suppose that they are related to her sakala and niṣkala aspects. Cf. the expression ‘mūrtibheda’ in 9/37cd-8. The expression ‘mūrdhavaktra’ literally means ‘face of the head’. The lower four faces are arranged around this head which is in the middle above them. They are the four faces of that head. Thus the expression ‘ūrdhvavaktra’ – ‘upper face’ means effectively ‘mūrdhordhvavaktra’ i.e. ‘the face above the head’.

17. The faces correspond to the limbs as follow: 1) Uppermost face: Heart. 2) Upper face: Head. 3) Eastern face: Topknot. 4) Southern face: Armour. 5) Northern face: Eyes. 6) Western face: Weapon.

See note to 10/27 below. YKh (1) 17/27-28ab reads the following three lines in the place of KuKh 10/20-21:

The southern face is said to (consist of the letters) beginning with Ṭa and ending with Kha. Deposit the Peak (seed-syllables) in the three eyes of the northern face. These are said to be the letters beginning with Ka and ending with the vowels.

ṭakārādi khākārāntaṁ [ṅ: ṣakā-] dakṣavaktraṁ [k, kh, gh: ḍakṣavaktraṁ] prakīrtitam |
netratraye [kh: -yai] ca [ṅ: *] kūṭā ye [ṅ: *] vāmavaktre tu vinyaset [kh: vinyat *] ||
kakārādisvarāntāś ca ete [k, kh: kimādiścaivaścaitaṁ; gh: kimādicaivaścaitaṁ; ṅ: kimādiścaivacettaṁvaipaści] vai [k, gh: ye; kh: yai; ṅ: maṁ] parikīrtitāḥ [k, kh, gh, ṅ: -taṁ] |

18. Siddhayogeśvarī is a name of the main goddess of the early Trika. Our text also refers to her as Siddhayoginī (3/70, cf. 6/65) thus clearly emphasizing that she, like the other great goddesses of the Kaula and Bhairava Tantras, including Kubjikā (see 8/42ab), is also a Yoginī.

19. Or ‘the first’. See above 3/76cd-78ab and below 29/45-50. Here the six faces are:

1) Uppermost face: Parā 2) Upper face: Mālinī 3) Eastern face: Siddhayogeśvarī 4) Southern face: Kālikā 5) Northern face: Tripurā 6) Western face: Umākhecarī

The names of the goddesses of the six faces according to YKh (1) (17/28cd ff.) are:

1) Uppermost face – Parā who is Śivonmanī 2) Upper face – Amarī 3) Eastern face – Siddhavāgeśvarī 4) Southern face – Kālī 5) Northern face – Lakṣmī 6) Western face – Umādevī.

Amarī or Amarikā is occasionally found as an alternative name for Kubjikā identified with the goddess Mālinī. Again, Lakṣmī is described here as red with a beautiful slender body like a deer. This description could also apply to Tripurā. Above in 3/76cd-78ab Kulayāgeśvarī replaces Tripurā and Carcikā Umākhecarī. The six faces are named again below in 29/45-50. They are the same as those in the verse we are examining. The SKh (MS G fl. 43b) prescribes the deposition of the six faces. There the second face is Kulamālinī and the sixth is called Śrīkhecarī Umābhagavatī, which agrees with the KuKh. However, according to the SKh, the fifth face is Mahālakṣmī instead of Tripurā, as it is in YKh (1). One wonders whether the unstable position of Tripurā compared to the goddesses of the other faces may not have something to do with the late development of the Kaula cult of Tripurā. A substantial section in the YKh (1) is dedicated to the worship of the goddess Tripurābhairavī who, along with the goddess Kāmeśvarī, represents one of the two immediate precursors of the goddess Tripurāsundarī, the deity of Śrīcakra.

20. The correspondences between the faces, limbs, their goddesses and the parts of the Vidyā can be tabulated as follows:

5. Table of the Faces and Limbs of the Goddess

Face	Goddess	Limb	Goddess	Vidyā
Uppermost	Parā	Heart	Hṛtamalā	BHAGAVATI GHORE
Upper	Mālinī	Head	Kuladīpā	HSKHPHREṀ ŚRĪṀ KUBJIKE
East	Siddhiyogeśvarī	Topknot	Barbarā	SHRĀṀ SHRĪṀ SHRAUṀ
South	Kālī	Armour	Bahurūpā	ṄAÑAṆA-NAME AGHORĀ-MUKHI
North	Tripurā	Eye	Mahantārī	CCHĀṀ CCHĪṀ
West	Umākhecarī	Weapon	Koṅkaṇā	KIṆI KIṆI VICCE

The correspondences between the faces and limbs differ here from those in chapter forty-eight below. There we are told specifically that the deposition begins with the upper face and ends with western one. In this case, the uppermost and upper faces encapsulate the other four. One would expect the deposition of the hands to correspond to that of the body. One wonders, therefore, if this is the procedure that is to be followed in this case for the deposition on the hands. Cf. 48/33 ff for correspondences between faces, heads and fingers.

21. The Kaulikā Vidyā, also called the Five-lettered Vidyā, consists of the Five Praṇavas. It is accordingly referred to as the fivefold Kaulikā Vidyā (8/108).

The text instructs that it should be placed at the beginning, in the forward order, and the end, in the reverse order, of each of the six limbs. This procedure differs from ones taught in the Ṭīkā, ŚM and SKh (see following note). However, 10/24 above appears to confirm that this is what is intended.

22. These six are virtually the same Yoginīs who are said to govern the limbs according to the KMT. There we read:

> The goddess (of the Vidyā) is Kamalinī who, established in the Heart, has emitted all this from Brahmā down to the sphere of (a common) pillar. Kuladīpā is on her Head and she awakens the sixfold Path. Her Topknot is called Barbarā who is above the three Principles (of the Self, Śakti and Śiva). The goddess who is located in the Foundation of Gesture (i.e. the maṇḍala) has emerged here as Bahurūpā. Mālinī is the Armour of this Great Goddess. The great Māyā of mantra, she covers (i.e. pervades) all the Aggregate of Words. One should know that the Eye is Kiṇikiṇī, who is like an old (woman). She is very terrible and, brilliant with radiant energy (tejas), is full of the attributes of ultimate reality (tattvārtha). The Weapon is Koṅkaṇeśānī. The sixfold path is pervaded by it. She has six rays, eyes tawny brown, it is established (in the entire expanse of reality) beginning with Saṁvartā up to Śiva. KMT 7/13cd-18 (cf. ṢSS 13/13-18 and 47/88-91)

The KMT (7/39) also refers to another group of six goddesses who reside in the six limbs. These are: 1) Heart: Kamalakubjikā, 2) Head: Barbarā, 3) Topknot: Mahāntārikā, 4) Armour: Laghvikā, 5) Eye: Viśvatejinī, 6) Weapon: Koṅkaṇāvvā. This group also surrounds the central goddess of the Yoginīcakra situated in the throat. Their names, in abbreviated form, appear in KMT 14/3 and 15/79ab and the parallel texts. See Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: 128 ff. See ṢSS 13/13-18 and 47/88-91 (where Kubjinī replaces Kuladīpā as the deity of the head) for the first variety and ṢSS 13/42-60 for the second. ŚM (10/138-187) knows only the first variety.

Most of the goddesses of the limbs appear in different contexts as forms of Kubjikā (Heilijgers-Seelen 1994: note 33 p. 130). The first four appear in chapter seventeen of the KMT as the forms of Kubjikā who preside over four levels of yogic development called Body (Piṇḍa), Part (Pada), Form (Rūpa) and Beyond Form (Rūpātīta). They are briefly mentioned in the unpublished Kulapañcāśikā ascribed to Matsyendranātha. (See Dyczkowski 1988: 163-164). They are treated more extensively in the MVT (2/36cd-46ab) where they are related, amongst other things, to the states of waking, dreaming, deep sleep and the fourth state beyond. This passage is explained at length by Abhinavagupta in TĀ 10/227cd ff.. See also Dyczkowski 1992: 32-35.

The KMT integrates these four states into the Sequence of Twenty-eight (aṣṭaviṁśatikrama) as the last group of four. They are associated with the four sacred seats and the Siddhas who reside within them as well as the three transmissions (krama). The four relate to Kubjinī's body (piṇḍa) which is of four kinds: 1) Kubjā who is like the leaf of an Aśvattha tree 2) Kubjā who is like the beak of a parrot 3) Maṇikubjā 4) Randhrakubjā. These correspond to the group of four Kubjīs, one for each of the four levels: 1) Piṇḍa – Kubjeśī, 2) Pada – Mahāntārī, 3) Rūpa – Barbarā who resides in the Drop, 4) Rūpātīta – Kamalānanā who resides in the Yoni (randhra). They bestow the fruits of Kubjī's body through the sequence of the Yoga of the Piṇḍa (summary of KMT 17/48cd-53).

Four forms of Kubjikā are described, corresponding to the four states. The first, which is that of Beyond Form (rūpātīta), is Kambalī Kuleśvarī. The following three are the forms of Kubjikā worshipped in the three Transmissions. The Nagnā (Naked) Kubjikā of the state called Form (rūpa) has six faces the first of which is the Yoginī of the Topknot. They are: 1) Barbarā, 2) Alakā (Lock of Hair), 3) Bṛhodarā (Big Belly), 4) Lamboṣṭhī (Long Lips), 5) Stabdhākṣī (Fixed Gaze), and 6) Viraladvijā (Few Teeth) (ibid. 17/15-16). At the level of the Part (pada), which is that of the Transmission of the Youth, Kubjikā is Mahāntārī, who is the goddess of the Eye (ibid. 17/17-24ab). At the level of the Body (piṇḍa) she is Kujā who is the Thirty-two syllable Vidyā and is 'enveloped in (its) six limbs' (ibid. 17/24cd-28ab).

Heilijgers-Seelen (1994: 130) notes that: 'These four [goddesses] are also found in KMT 24/100-101 which refers to a vṛddhapañcaka (the 'Five Old Ones'), consisting of Kamalā, Barbarā, Mahāntārī, Laghvinī and Bimbā and forming one of a group of a sixfold nyāsa. The first three (in different sequence) occur in ŚM 10/56 as the deities of the *upapīṭha*s: Barbarā of Śaila, Mahāntārikā of Mahendra and Kamalā of Kailāsa. And KRP 6/48cd-52ab mentions three of them as the deities of three of the four *pīṭha*s: Kamalā of Oḍḍiyāna, Mahantārī of Pūrṇagiri, and Koṅkaṇā of Kāmarūpa. The fourth pīṭha of Jālandhara is connected with the deity Samarī.'

We turn now to the structure of the limbs prescribed in the sources. The six limbs are presented in code in chapter ten of the ŚM (10/139cd-187). Manuscript Kh records the full form of the mantras given in code in the margins. They are:

1) Heart: NAMO BHAGAVATE HṚTKAMALĀYAI HRĀṀ HṚDAYĀYA NAMAḤ
2) Head: HSPHREṀ KUBJIKĀYAI (+ HRĪṀ) KULADĪPĀYAI ŚIRASE SVĀHĀ
3) Topknot: HRĀṀ HRĪṀ HRAUṀ BARBARAŚIKHE HRŪṀ ŚIKHĀYAI VAṢAṬ
4) Armour: ṄA ÑA ṆA NA ME AGHORĀMUKHI BAHURŪPĀYAI HRAIṀ KAVACĀYA HŪṀ

5) Eye: CHĀṀ CHĪṀ MAHANTĀRIKE HRAUṀ NETRATRAYĀYA VAUṢAṬ
6) Weapon: KIṆI KIṆI VICCE KOṄKAṆĀVVĀYAI HRAḤ ASTRĀYA PHAṬ

The procedure prescribed by the SKh (MS G fl. 48a) is similar to the one taught here. The structure is analogous to that of the deposition of the faces. The Five Praṇavas come first. They are followed by one of the Praṇavas. In the case of the deposition of the faces they are followed one after another in the reverse serial order, one for each entry. In this case they are in the forward order. The last two entries contain the same fifth Praṇava. The names of the goddesses of the limbs are the same as in our text. The one variant is the goddes of the third limb who is called Barbarā here and Barbarakeśā in the SKh. The six Siddhas are: A) Vidyā B) Vyoma C) Udaya D) Vimala E) Amṛta F) Bindu.
Example – the first limb:

AIṀ 5 AIṀ BHAGAVATI GHORE ŚRĪHṚTKAMALĀYAI HṚDAYĀYA ŚRĪVIDYĀNĀTHAPĀDUKĀṀ PŪJAYĀMI ||

The deposition of the limbs prescribed by the Ṭīkā (fl. 54b) is not much different. The units are structured as follows: 1) A part of the Samayā Vidyā. 2) The name of the goddess presiding over the limb, usually in the dative, sometimes vocative. 3) The name of the limb in the dative. 4) The name of the Siddha corresponding to the limb ending with 'pādukā' in the accusative. 5) A final invocatory syllable. The variables are:

1) Hṛtkamalā – Heart – Udayanātha – NAMAḤ
2) Kuladīpakā – Head – Śrīkhaṇḍanātha – SVĀHĀ
3) Barbarā – Topknot – Śrīlilāśekharanātha – VAUṢAṬ
4) Bahurūpā – Armour – Śrīkapolanātha – HŪṀ
5) Mahāntārikā – Eye – Śrīcaṇḍanātha – VAṢAṬ
6) Koṅkaṇāmbā – Weapon – Śrī Anackanātha – PHAṬ

In addition the Ṭīkā enjoins that the six divine attributes should be mentioned in all three depositions of the hand, faces and limbs, one for each entry. These are: 1) omniscience (sarvajñatā), 2) satisfaction (tṛpti), 3) beginningless consciousness (anādibodha), 4) freedom (svatantratā), 5) permanent power (aluptaśakti) and 6) endless power (anantaśakti). This addition is not taught here or in the SKh, but is standard practice in analogous deposition of the limbs of Sadāśiva taught in the Siddhantāgamas in general and in the Svacchandatantra (see vol. 1, p. 15). Perhaps it is their absence in the form of the limbs taught in the KuKh that is indicated in the statement in the following verse that the Siddhas of the limbs and faces are free of the 'teaching of the Tantra'.

23. The Tantras teach the use of the six Vedic syllables of NAMAḤ and the rest listed in the next verse (see also 9/69cd-70ab). The Vidyā is free from them and so is successful (9/70). Here, as in several other places in our text, the Kaula teachings have been distinguished from those of the Tantra, which I take to mean the Śaivasiddhānta or earlier Kaula teachings. The form of the limbs taught in the ŚM and the Ṭīkā end with these six syllables (called *jāti*s). This is the normal way of forming them. Indeed, the six syllables, as a group, are expressly linked with the six limbs of mantras. However, in the procedure taught in the SKh they are omitted. One would expect the same omission to be prescribed here, in order to be consistent with the repeated injunction throughout our text that they should not be used in Kubjikā mantras, but as we can see from the next verse, this is not the case. So all that is meant here is that this procedure is especially excellent because it is novel with respect to that of the Tantras in general, and is purely Kaula. This is why the depositions are accomplished (siddha) and give good results.

24. These syllables form part of a standard set called 'jāti' of which the Vidyā itself in its integral form is devoid (see above 9/70, also 4/10cd-11ab). Whereas, we have already seen in the note 10/29-30 that five out of these six ejeculations are indeed placed at the end of each of the six limbs. OṀ does not appear here, or in hardly any of the mantras of the Kubjikā Tantras apart from the Kubjikā Gāyatrī, which is not mentioned in the KuKh. Perhaps, then, we should read OṀ NAMAḤ together as a unit and assume that OṀ is normally dropped when NAMAḤ is found in mantras or their limbs.

The expression svasthirārṇavam could be divided into two words, svasthir and ārṇavam. The first can stand on its own as it is. The Ocean of the Yoni is a common expression denoting the Meruprastāra from which the letters are generated and, specifically, the syllable AIṀ (see below 58/28cd-30ab). Another possibility is to take the expression svasthirārṇavam (meaning literally 'one's own stable ocean') to mean the syllable HŪṀ, which is the only one out of the six attached to the limbs that has not been mentioned directly here.

25. The 'yogapīṭha' is the Saṁvartāmaṇḍala (see note to 2/18 and 7/47). So the transmission associated with it is that of the goddess Kubjikā.

26. See note to 10/15 above. The twelvefold sequence consists of the six faces and the six limbs. These are also called the twelve divisions (see above 10/15 and note). A ritual gesture (mudrā) is made as each one is deposited on the body. The names of these gestures are listed in the next verse.

27. Yoni, Siṁha and Triśūla mudrās are described in the fourth ṣaṭka of the JY (2/191-194, 230cd-233ab and 2/170cd-174 respectively) in a long passage dedicated to the description of many *mudrā*s. The three gestures not mentioned in the JY namely, the Dūtī, Ciñciṇī and Vakriṇyā *mudrā*s, are more specific to the paścimāmnāya than these three.

The SKh (MS G fl. 44a-44b) prescribes a set of six mantras projected onto the goddess's six faces. This deposition is called 'vaktranyāsamudrāṣaṭka' 'the Group of Six Gestures of the Deposition of the Faces'. Each mantra first mentions the direction of the face to which it addressed, followed by its colour and the gesture associated with it. They are: 1) Uppermost (Parā's) face: Padma 2) Upper (Mālinī's) face: Piṅgalā 3) Eastern face: Śveta 4) Southern face: Vikarāla 5) Northern face: Kuraṅgiṇī 6) Western face: Yoni. These are the gestures listed in YKh (1) (see note to 10/37cd-38) except for the one of the northern face which is Dyotinī instead of Kuraṅginī.

28. The other six gestures are for the limbs. Once these have been deposited on the body, the adept should make the Gesture of the Yoni and repeat the Vidyā. The translation 'sealed within' conforms to the Sanskrit of the edited text; cf. below 27/68ab. An instrumental here would yield the meaning 'sealed / stamped with'. Mudrā is the goddess herself as the energy of the Command. The Gesture of the Yoni transmites this energy to the Vidyā just as the six gestures transmit the same energy to its limbs.

29. See 10/22-3. Pāṇḍura may mean whitish, white, pale or yellow. According to YKh (1) this face is yellow (see table) and so I have chosen this translation. A typical Newar visualization of the goddess is recorded in the Paścimajyeṣṭhāmnāyakarmārcanapaddhati. There the colour of the front i.e. eastern (pūrva) face is yellow. This is why Newar initiates sometimes refer to Kubjikā in Nevārī as māsukvaḥ mājū, the Yellow-faced Mother (see Dyczkowski 2001: plate 1 and note on p. 74). The western face may be thought to be particularly associated with the goddesses of the Western Transmission and so, perhaps, is said here to be blue and red (śyamarakta) as the goddess herself is when she emerges from the Liṅga (see above 5/30; but according to KMT 2/4 she is 'like blue collyrium' – nīlāñjanasamaprakhyā.)

30. The colours of the goddess's six faces vary in different sources. Below is a table drawn up from four of them. The colours of the faces according to the SKh agree with those listed in column four. In the one case they differ the colour is entered in brackets. Note also that the names of the six goddess differ in two cases in the YKh. These have been noted in brackets next to the name of the corresponding goddess (see above 10/22-23, note). Variant names of the goddesses of the six faces named in 3/70-71 are noted in italics.

6. First Table of the Goddess's Six Faces

Face	Goddess of the Face	KuKh 10/38	KuKh 29/45-50	YKh (1) 17
Uppermost	Parā	White	White	Translucent
Upper	Mālinī (Amarī)	Red	White	White
Eastern	Siddha-yogeśvarī Siddha yoginī	White/Yellow	White	Yellow
Southern	Kālī Kālikā	Dark blue	Dark blue	Black
Northern	Tripurā (Lakṣmī) Kulayogeśvarī	Yellow	Red	Red
Western	Umākhecarī Carcikā	Blue and red	White (blue and red)	Red

31. Cf. above 29/52-54ab. Below in 29/52, the Armour is said to have many colours. There is no mention of it being specifically red and blue.

32. 29/53 below adds that the third eye in the middle is like fire. Usually the limb called the Eye (netra) refers to this third eye.

33. In the notes to chapter 29, which is dedicated to the visualized form of the goddess, a series of sūtras are quoted from YKh (1) in which the six faces and limbs of the goddess are described in detail. The following tables record the details of the faces and limbs as drawn from chapter 17 (29cd-40ab and 40cd-49) of YKh (1). Note that although the passage that introduces the description of the goddess's faces in chapter 17 is the same as KuKh 10/22-23, the faces and limbs are not.

7. Second Table of the Goddess's Six Faces

Face	Syllable	Energy	Goddess	Siddha / Śiva	Colour	Gesture
Uppermost	Six		Parā/ Śivonmanī	Aja	Clear as a mirror	Padma
Upper	Four	Four	Amarī	Amogha	White	Piṅgalā
Eastern	Three	Nine	Siddha-vāgeśvarī	Śilātmaka	Yellow	Śvetā
Southern	Ten	Thirteen	Kālī	Bhairava	Black	* * *
Northern	(Three)	Thirteen	Lakṣmī	XXX	Red	Dyotinī
Western	Six	Nineteen	Vakrikā / Umā Devī	Parameśvara	Blue-Red	Yoni

8. Table of the Goddess's Six Faces and Limbs

Limb	Face	Goddess	Siddha	Colour	Gesture
Heart	Uppermost	Hṛtkamalā	Vidyānanda	White	Bhāvyā
Head	Upper	Kuladīpā	Vyomānanda		Saṁjīvanī
Topknot	Eastern	Barbarā	Udayanātha		Vikṛtā
Armour	Southern	Bahurūpā	Vimala	Blue-red	Yoni
Eye	Northern	Mahantārī	Amṛtānanda	Sun, Moon and Fire	Śūla
Weapon	Western	Koṁkaṇā	Bindunātha		Triśūla

34. Verses 10/42-49 are the same as YHṛ (1) 17/50-59. Yoga here means the union (yoga) of the limbs and faces that forms the complete Vidyā in the adept's body. Permeated by the Vidyā, it becomes his spiritual (divya) body, which is as powerful and full of energy as a cage of lightning flashes (see below 10/45-46).

35. The following passage that begins here and continues up to the end of the chapter extols the benefits of the practice of the Vidyā. This 'hearing of the fruits' (phalaśruti) normally concludes the presentation of a mantra, ritual or other practice. As this is the main Vidyā of the goddess, the benefits of repeating it are extolled at length both here and at the end of the following chapter as well.

36. Similarly, referring to the Mahāntārikā Vidyā, the KMT (17/23) says: He who has her in his heart when angry cuts down the man who lacks devotion, the enemy, one who is established in (false) doctrine and every other.

37. YKh (1): vapuḥsthairyam i.e. 'corporeal stability', that is, health.

38. YKh (1): divyakṣobhaḥ – 'divine arousal'.

39. See note to 3/156-158ab and cf. 5/78cd-79ab.

40. The text can be read as either 'ghorarūpiṇī' or 'aghorarūpiṇī'. The latter echoes Kubjikā's relationship to Aghora (Svacchanda Bhairava) and so I have chosen the latter.

41. The basic root mantra, or what is technically called the Samayā Vidyā of any major Tantric and Kaula system possesses the powerful apotropaic properties that these verses extol. Sanderson (1986: 163) explains: [one] who recites the samayā is freed of evil. It [i.e. the KMT] specifies that it does so 'with regard to what is to be done and what is not to be done, matters that have been stated and matters that have not' (KMT 7/2cd). It seems to me that the text ascribes to this mantra here precisely the reparative and apotropaic function which defines the samayā in the rituals of the [Kālī] Krama. After this statement at the very beginning of its treatment of this mantra, the Tantra does go on to say that if one is already pure (so that one has no need of this specific function) then there is nothing in the world which one cannot accomplish through its recitation. Perhaps we can recognise here an example of that tantric kenotheism which enables every mantra-deity to embody both specific and universal power. One might compare the case of Siddhalakṣmī who is samayā in the Kālasaṁkarṣaṇīmata, more generally apotropaic (pratyaṅgirā) elsewhere, while being everywhere the embodiment of the Absolute.

42. The Great Journey (mahāpatha) is the last journey made, to the place of its execution, by those who have vowed to commit ritual suicide to purify themselves. They must travel towards the north-east, which is Śiva's quarter, in a straight line without altering their course, whatever the obstacle, and eat only air and water until their body drops 'like a dry leaf'. See Mānavadharmaśāstra, 6/1/32.

43. The teachings of the Western Transmission are meant for the Age of Strife (kaliyuga). The Vidyā is the essence of the spiritual energy transmitted through them into the world by the supreme deity from the summit of existence where all things originate.

NOTES OF THE SANSKRIT TEXT OF CHAPTER ELEVEN

1. घ्, च्, छ्: श्रीवक्रोवाच. MSs क्, ख्, ग्, घ्, ङ् and च् add verses 11/20-24ab to the beginning of this chapter as follows : तेजो जालन्धरं नाभि तिश्रयोरविशुद्धिषु।
तालुमध्ये तु (क्, ख्, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: च; च्: ?) चन्द्रं (ङ्: चन्द्र; च्: ?) च (च्: ?) तन्मध्ये बिन्दुमण्डलम्।।
षोडशान्ते स्मृता चाज्ञा एतत् खेचर्यतु (ख्: खेचर्यन्तु; ङ्: खेचर्यन्त) क्रमात्।
पदान्वेषणशीला (च्: –न्वष–; छ्: यदान्व–)ये जीवन्मुक्तिरताश्चये।।
न (च्, छ्: missing) तेषां (घ्, छ्: missing; ङ्: तेषा; च्: missing) पनं (क्: पजनं; घ्: missing; च्: ननू; छ्: * नं) देव गतास्ते (घ्, छ्: * नास्ते; च्: * तास्ते) पश्चिमे पदे।
कृत्वा त्रिष्वपि संयोगं क्षिप्त्वा आज्ञान्तमण्डले।।
रश्मिज्वालाकदम्बं तु चिन्तयेच्च (ख्: चितयेच्च) अधोमुखम्।
नवलक्षकृते देव त्रैलोक्यमपि साधयेत्।।
कुलाचारमिति प्रोक्तं अर्घमण्डलकं शृणु।

2. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: देव्य:; all other MSs: –देव्या 3. ङ्: शभो
4. क्, ग्: विद्यादानां; ख्, घ्, ङ्: विद्यदानीं; च्, छ्, ज्: विद्येदानीं

5. M → N. न्यास– and its derivatives are always treated as neuter. No further note will be taken of this change in gender.

6. SamP and all MSs except ख्, घ्, झ्, ञ्: देव्या

7. SamP and all MSs: संयुता। The correct form is छ्: द्वातृश– द्वात्रिंशत् but it would make the fifth syllable long. See above, note to 3/9c. Presumably the following is meant: ऊर्ध्वादि देव्यो द्वात्रिंशत्वर्णसम्युता: सृष्टिक्रमेण न्यस्तव्या:।8. All MSs: देव्या
9. च्: –यश् 10. घ्, च्, छ्, ज्: –र्थीं; SamP: चतुर्ध्यं
11. SamP: क्, ग्: द्वा * *. IC. 12. ङ्: योर्व्यसेत्
13. च्: पंचमश्च; SamP and all other MSs except घ्, छ्: पंचपंच
14. SamP: षष्ठां 15. ङ्: द्वानेतौ. IC. 16. छ्: व
17. च्, छ्: भ्रूवौन्यसेत्; SamP: भ्रुवोर्न्येत् 18. च्: –मश्
19. All MSs: तथाष्टमी; SamP: तथाष्तमी 20. SamP and all MSs: नाभिवर्णा. This scribal error appears to be derived from a defective hearing of the text.

21. An instrumental has taken the place of the required genitive that does not fit the metre (see above, note to 10/47d), just as त्रयमध्ये does not.

22. क्, ङ्: वक्र; ख्, ग्, ज्: वक्रे 23. दशमक्षरम् (M → N) would be more correct but is too long for the metre. 24. See above, note to 6/67c.
25. च्: वर्ण; all other MSs except घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: –वर्णा. M → N.
26. SamP and all MSs: देव्या चतुर्दशम्
27. SamP and all MSs: त्रिदशं दक्षिणे स्कन्धे 28. च्: षाडशं
29. See above, 5/45a, 5/63d and 7/7c. IM 5 + 6.
30. ङ्: –र. This is an irregular compound. Cf. below 11/8c.
31. घ्, छ्: एकून–; ङ्, ज्: एकेन– 32. क्: हृदयं
33. SamP, घ्, ङ्, छ्, ज्: गुरु–; च्: गुभ्याश्. A locative is required here.
34. ङ्: –श 35. ङ्: त्रयोविशा–; SamP: –विंशोर्मध्ये. This is another irregular compound formed by the dropping of an ending to save a syllable for the metre. Cf. 11/7b.
36. घ्, च्, छ्: चतुर्विंश; ङ्: चतुर्विंश (?) 37. घ्: ति
38. SamP and all MSs: शुष्मनायां 39. घ्, च्, छ्: स्थिजे

40. See 1/3d and note. Also below, 11/42a.
41. क्, ग्, ङ्: सट्विशं; च्: –शे; ज्: खद्विंशं; SamP: खड्वीशं 42. घ्, च्: स्थिजे
43. ख्: सप्तो–. See above, note to 7/7c
44. SamP and all MSs: चाष्ट–; ङ्: –श. IM 6 + 7. 45. ग्: द्वावतौ; ङ्: –तो IC.
46. SamP and all MSs: जानुनी– 47. घ्, च्, छ्: एकून–; ङ्: –त्रिंश
48. च्: त्रिशश्; ङ्, छ्, ज्: त्रिशं 49. This pāda is one syllable too short.
50. ङ्: जघ– 51. च्: –शश्
52. All MSs except घ्, झ्, ञ्: –श 53. DS.
54. घ्: गगण–. The final long vowel of the intended proper name गगना has been shortened for the metre. Cf. 11/15b.
55. SamP and all MSs: चतिस्रका
56. क्, ग्: शियस्–; घ्, छ्: शृय–; ङ्: श्रय; च्: श्रिय–; SamP: श्रियस्–
57. SamP: कुर्वेर्या 58. ङ्: वैवर्त्ताण् कैवर्ती is the regular feminine form. 59. All MSs: ङ ण ना ञ भटेशवरी; SamP: ङ ण ना ञ भेटेश्वरी
60. SamP, घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्, ज्: घोरा–
61. मुसलायुधा is apparently meant here. The final vowel of this proper name has been shortened for the metre, leading to the formation of an irregular compound. Cf. 11/12c. 62. क्, ग्, च्, ज्, झ्: च्छाकरी–; घ्: च्छाकारी–
63. च्: वैव. MS क् repeats the section from हरानन्दा to च्छांकारी चैव
64. SamP: छिंछां 65. च्: व
66. SamP and all MSs: नारायणाख्या IM 5 + 7.
67. SamP क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: वेच्चिका; घ्, च्, छ्: वेर्चिका; ङ्: वच्चिका
68. छ्, ज्: द्वात्रिशतिर्देव्या; all other MSs: द्वाविंशतिर्देव्या Another possible emendation is द्वात्रिंशती देवी 69. All MSs: –कारिणी
70. All MSs: एतैस्तु पूजितैर्देव 71. ख्: एतेदेव
72. DS. तस्योच्चारं is resolved into तस्याः – उच्चारं (M → N), the pronoun agreeing with विद्यायाः or the like.
73. SamP and all MSs: स च. 74. ज्: षट्विधं; SamP: षद्विधं
75. See above, note to 2/28b. 76. ङ्: –पूर्णन
77. क्, ग्: तेजे; ख्, ङ्, झ्: तेजा; घ्, च्, छ्: तेजं. This emendation has been made on the basis of the reading found in the repetition of this section that occurs in most manuscripts at the beginning of this chapter. See note, 11/1a.
78. SamP and all MSs: नाभि 79. This honorific plural has the advantage of adding the extra syllable needed for the metre, whereas विशुद्धौ तु or the like would entail a long seventh syllable. 80. ङ्: –ख्य 81. SamP and all MSs: –मण्डले 82. ङ्: षाड–. This and the following four lines are also found in YKh (1) 49/1-4ab. The text is quite corrupt but it is clear that the context there is, as here, an explanation of the single-syllable Vidyā. 83. क्: स्मृस्मृता 84. IC.
85. घ्, च्: यदा– 86. YKh (1): वीजमुक्तिरताश्चये
87. YKh (1) ग्: तेषा 88. YKh (1): –संयोग. त्रिष्वपि is the reading found in the verses repeated at the beginning of this chapter.
89. SamP and all MSs except च्, छ्, झ्, ञ्: क्षिप्तां; YKh (1): स्थिता
90. YKh (1): आज्ञात– 91. SamP: –वदंवं

92. YKh (1): चिन्तयेत् तदधोमुखं 93. SamP and all MSs: कुलाचारमिति. This emendation agrees with the reading in the Ṭīkā MS K folio 120a.
94. ङ्: रम्य 95. SamP and all MSs: ॐकारे
96. घ्, च्, छ्: पश्चिमां–; ŚM: पशुदृष्टिविवर्जिते (ण्: –विवर्जितं)
97. All MSs: एकहस्तं–; SamP: एकहस्ते–; ŚM: मण्डलं कारयेत् (ख्: –यत्) तत्र
हस्तमात्रप्रमाणतः 98. ŚM: गोमयोदेककर्तव्यं 99. ŚM ग्: चतुरश्रकं
100. ŚM क्: सूर्यवह्निञ्च; ख्: सूर्यवद्बिम्वं 101. ŚM: वृताकारं कुरु प्रिये
102. घ्, ङ्, च्, छ्: अस्मिचन्दन–; all MSs: –रं 103. घ्, छ्: –मर्दितम्;
SamP and all other MSs: –मन्दिरम्. This emendation is based on the reading in ŚM 9/38d, for which see the notes to the translation.
104. क्, ग्: विद्याया; ख्, छ्, ज्: –विद्यायाः ; all other MSs: यां; SamP: –विद्यायाः
105. क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: –हस्तं–. SamP and all MSs: –लारुहे: ŚM: क्षिप्त्वा तन्मध्यतो देवि भ्राम्यं (क्, ख्, ग्: भ्रम्यं) दक्षकरोपरि। –तलमारुहेत् is meant here.
106. घ्, ङ्, च्, झ्, ञ्: उत्थाय 107. छ्, ज्: मुष्टि
108. The required anusvāra has been omitted for the metre. The reading is the same in the Ṭīkā. See notes to the translation.
109. Here too the anusvāra has been dropped for the metre.
110. SamP and all MSs: त्रिभिर्बीजारुहे
111. SamP and all MSs: सदलं. This emendation is based on the commentary in the Ṭīkā. See notes to the translation.
112. See above, note to 1/5a. 113. छ्: –ये
114. SamP and all MSs: देव्यशास्त्रेण.
115. Missing in SamP. 116. क्, ज्: कैलेशीं; ग्, छ्: कैलेशी
117. All MSs: –भूषिताम् 118. छ्: –रोर्प्य 119. All MSs: तस्याः
120. छ्: संबाह्य–; ज्: सं– 121. The genitive is meant here. See above, note to 10/47d. 122. छ्: सिद्धि * ष्यते; यदि, or the like, is required here to complete the syntax. 123. ŚM आनयद् 124. छ्, ज्: धेमकलसं. IM
6 → 7. 125. All MSs: तदा– 126. छ्: रौप्वजं; ŚM: अलाभाद् रौप्यजं प्रिये
127. ŚM क्, ख्: वाथ; ग्: वाद्य 128. ŚM शुभलक्षणलक्षितम् (क्: –भूषितम्; ख्: –लांक्षितं)
129. ŚM कम्बुग्रीवं सुशोभाढ्यं 130. ŚM क्षालयेच्छुभवारिणा (क्: क्षालयेदभिवारिणा; ख्: क्षालयच्छु–). The final vowel of बालुका has been shortened for the metre.
131. क्: उदकं 132. All MSs: –तो
133. The root क्षल् is 1O U. The regular form of the gerund is क्षालयित्वा.
134. ज्: धर्मेण 135. ŚM: मलयाद्यैश्चर्चितं (क्: * * * द्यैश्च–) कृत्वा
पूरयेदलिना (ख्: पूरयदलिना; ग्: –नां) ततः। 136. छ्, ज्: –ये; ŚM ख्: –यत्
137. क्, ग्: कांकणास्त्रेण; ज्: –नास्त्रेण; ŚM क्: कवचास्त्रेण
138. ŚM: कवचेनावगुण्ठयेत् 139. All MSs: –नः
140. SamP and all MSs except छ्: विद्या 141. ग्: –रं
142. ज्: आग्नेप्यं; all other MSs: आग्नेयं 143. छ्: नैर्ऋत्या
144. SamP छ्: पूर्ण–; all other MSs: पूर्णे– 145. SamP: कोंकण
146. क्, ख्, ज्: –सिद्धो–
147. SamP: त्रिकोणे. See above, note to 3/119d.
148. छ्: भगाशाखा; ज्: भगां शाखा भटेशवरी; SamP and all other MSs: भगीशाख्या. Cf.
11/9c. These emendations are based on the readings in the Ṭīkā.
149. SamP छ्, ज्: पूजितव्या 150. क्, ग्: च

151. All the MSs: सिद्धाङ्गं– 152. SamP and all MSs: शिरो
153. SamP and All MSs: स्मृत: 154. छ्: –कं
155. SamP and All MSs except छ्: अस्वं
156. M → N. See above, note to 7/9d.
157. छ्: –सकारान्तं; all MSs: –न्तं; all MSs: –भिमेखला; Cf. KMT 18/44, the edited text of which reads: अजचक्रेश्वरी रेखा. MSs GK read: स्वरचक्रेश्वरी; MS H: श्वरचक्रेश्वरी and B: सुजचक्रेश्वरी. See notes to the translation.
158. All MSs: -चक्रेभि-; KMT भान्तगा
159. SamP and All MSs: कादिनान्त–
160. SamP and all MSs: थादि– 161. KMT: तु
162. SamP: –रासिकम्; KMT त्रिभि: रेखै: स्वरेश्वरी
163. क्, ग्: शुद्धै; ख्, छ्, ज्: शुद्धै:–
164. छ्: सवौषधीषु; ज्: सर्वौषधीषु. The instrumental is meant here.
165. ख्: गोधूमाटिकपीपकै:; छ्, ज्: –माटक–; all other MSs: गोधूमाटिक–; SamP: गोधूमाटक– 166. छ्, ज्: त्रिविधिन 167. SamP छ्, ज्: माद्येन
168. छ्, ज्: –गुडोदनै: 169. क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: मांसो–. त्रिभि: here apparently stands for त्रिविधै: or the like; SamP: मांसो– 170. छ्: –मेतद्वि
171. छ्, ज्: –सं 172. छ्: पश्चाद्
173. All MSs except क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: विद्यां–; all MSs: –जलीत्रिभि:। पुष्पाञ्जलिभिस्त्रिभि: would be correct but does not fit the metre.
174. SamP and all MSs: पुष्पं च
175. Here, as not infrequently happens, the final consonant of a number in a compound has been dropped for the metre. The correct form – द्वात्रिंशदक्षर –, would be one syllable too long. See above, note to 3/9c.
176. All MSs: रुभयो; SamP: रुभयोर् 177. SamP: –य
178. क्: अंव; ख्: अवे. See above, note to 3/65a.
179. SamP ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: क्रमार्–
180. All MSs: पूज्या; SamP: पूज्यो. This and the following two emendations have been made on the basis of the Ṭīkā.
181. छ्, ज्: षद्यं; all other MSs: षड्यं; SamP: षट्पं
182. SamP and all MSs: त्रयमेकधा. पूज्या: or the like is required to complete the syntax. 183. क्, ग्, छ्: सिद्धि; SamP: सिद्धिर्
184. The locative of the word पर्वन् should be पर्वनि.
185. This line corresponds to ŚM 9/75cd, the second half of which reads: कामक्रोधादिवर्जित: 186. This and the following line correspond to ŚM 9/76: सहस्रादि च लक्षान्ताज्जपनात् सिद्धिरिष्यते।
187. ŚM: सहस्रेण तु जप्तेन प्राप्त: शत्रु: परांमुख:।
188. घ्: –पाश्य–; च्: –पाशा– 189. All MSs: यां
190. 'M' has been inserted between the last two members of this compound for the metre. See above, note to 3/21b. 191. छ्: –वत्त–
192. छ्: –मूलान्. The order of the first two members of this compound has been reversed for the sake of the metre.
193. See above, note to 4/51a. 194. छ्: –जप–
195. See above, note to 4/35b. 196. All MSs: करात्.
197. छ्: तज्येष्ठं; ज्: तत् ज्येष्ठं. 198. All MSs: प्राप्तं 199. छ्: –कृते

200. छ्: –माभौ 201. IM 6 → 7. KuKh 11/60cd-62 = YKh (1)
18/47cd-49. 202. YKh (1) ङ्: मतसा
203. All MSs –गते; YKh (1) हूहमेन; all other MSs: ह्यद्रूमेन
204. All MSs: गमने 205. YKh (1) माहात्मनः 206. YKh (1) ङ्:
स्वकायेन 207. All MSs: मनो This emendation agrees with the reading in YKh (1).
208. ग्: कुम्भ 209. YKh (1) कुम्भेन (ख्: कुभैन) कल्पयेत्
210. YKh (1) क्, ख्, घ्: सिद्धिं इ * लोके; ङ्: सिद्धिं इहलोके
211. YKh (1) यावदक्षरसन्तानं 212. छ्: –याच 213. छ्, ज्: त
214. छ्, ज्: कुर्या 215. All the MSs insert an extra two and a half verses here. These are found below as 13/100cd-103. They have been removed from here because they are much more coherent within their context there. Moreover, although these lines are not entirely irrelevant in this context, they break up the continuity of the discourse. These lines read as follows in the MSs : धुननावेशनं (क्, ग्: धनुना–) कम्पं निद्रा घूर्मि पिपीलिका।

एकाङ्गनर्तना भाषा अश्रुपातं कुरङ्गवत्।।
प्लुतिभेदं सिंहशब्दं इत्येकादश प्रत्ययाः।
रुद्रभागे पदे प्राप्ते तुर्योर्ध्वे (क्: तुर्यार्द्ध; ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: तुर्यार्द्धे) लयतां गते।।
नश्यन्ति सर्वकर्माणि तस्मिन् दृष्टे परापरे।

216. छ्: माहाम्य– 217. छ्: रु

218. All MSs: प्राप्तं. The following from 11/65 to 11/71ab corresponds to ŚM 9/76cd to 9/82. Then 11/74cd to 11/77ab correspond in their content to ŚM 9/83 to 86ab.

219. ŚM: द्वाभ्यां. Although the reading in the ŚM is correct Sanskrit, I have retained the one found in all the MSs, as there are are several examples of this strange deviant form in this and other Kubjikā texts. See 14/21a, 40/80a and 40/146b.

220. ŚM: योगं–. All MSs: –संयुतः This emendation agrees with the reading in the ŚM. 221. छ्: भाग्यं. ŚM: चतुर्भिः सुखमारोग्यं

222. छ्: रायुरारोग्य; all other MSs: आयुरारोग्य

223. All MSs: * न–. This emendation agrees with the reading in the ŚM.

224. छ्, ज्: अष्ट– 225. See below note to 14/12a.

226. ज्: प्राशत किचिञ्च्च तुकं च कलात्मकं; all other MSs: प्राशते किञ्चिच्चतुष्कं च कलात्मकम्। The reading of this line is the one found in the ŚM. 227. M → N.

228. ङ्: –क्रमे. According to the ŚM, this and the following line read: नवभिर्गुह्यकी सिद्धिर्जायते वीरवन्दिते। दशभिः प्राप्नुयात् सिद्धिं निर्वाणं खेचरक्रमम्।।

229. ŚM: दशभिः प्राप्नुयात् सिद्धिं. M → N.

230. M → N. See above, note to 5/29a.

231. ŚM: निर्वाणं खेचरक्रमम्. The cardinals from twenty to ninety-nine are singular feminine substantives, thus the regular form of the instrumental of विंशति– would be विंशत्या for त्रिंशत्, त्रिंशदा and चत्वारिंशत्, चत्वारिंशदा. Hypothetically, the plural would be विंशतिभिः, त्रिंशद्भिः and चत्वारिंशद्भिः. But, although these forms do occur (see 7/7c, 26/23c, 53/6a, 59/77a and 60/23c), none of them, except the last, in this and the following line, fit the metre. See also above, note to 3/9c.

232. ŚM: विंशभिश्चैव. See the previous note.

233. All MSs: चत्वारिंशभि. This line reads in the ŚM: मारणं विंशभिश्चैव द्वात्रिंशैः स्तम्भनं भवेत्। IM 5. 234. M → N.

235. This line reads in the ŚM: शैलानां भञ्जनं (ख्: स्तंभनं) पातं वृक्षाणां स्फोटनं प्रिये।

236. All MSs except छ्, ज्: पंचषड्भिः. Standard grammar requires that this numeral be a feminine singular. Cf. 7/46a and see note to 6/47b.

237. ŚM: षष्टिभिस्तु 238. सहस्रम्, like शतम् is normally used as a singular substantive, the accompanying substantive being either in the same case or in the genitive.

239. क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: –कन्यां. The rest of this line reads in the ŚM (cf. below 11/72cd): वेतालाष्टौ तु साधयेत्

240. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: –मां; छ्: –मं 241. नात्र has been contracted to न

242. All MSs: मानुषीषु 243. ŚM: सप्तत्यास्तु सहस्रैस्तु राक्षसीं सिद्धिमाप्नुयात्॥
The following six lines are not found in the ŚM.

244. क्: राजनं; all other MSs: राजान 245. All MSs:
मण्डलीकानां; मण्डलिकास्तु would be regular but does not fit the metre.

246. All MSs: –निवासिनाम् 247. क्, ख्, ग्, ज्: चान्यैर्; छ्: –यै

248. ते सर्वे वशं यान्ति, or the like is required to complete the sense.

249. All MSs: सप्ततीभिः 250. M → N.

251. क्, घ्, ज्: चराचलं; छ्: चरावलं–; all other MSs: देवं 252. All MSs: ब्रह्मः

253. छ्: मूर्तो 254. क्, ग्: रूपे *; ख्: रूपेन

255. All MSs: देहिनः 256. भुज् is 7U, भुनक्ति or भुंक्ते would be correct.
Cf. below 11/78b. 257. छ्: भोगात् 258. All MSs: कन्यकैः

259. क्रीड् is 1P but is frequently treated as ātmanepadī in this text. Cf.
11/80b. 260. ख्: सहस्रैश्च; छ्: सहस्रैस्तुर्

261. ŚM: नागकन्याश्च साधयेत् 262. All MSs: नवतीभिर् The regular form of this numeral is नवत्या. Although attested in the version of this line in the ŚM, emendation would require changes in the entire line.

263. ख्: प्रिये; ग्: पिय. ŚM नवत्या च सहस्रैस्तु वैष्णवं पदमाप्नुयात्।

264. एकलक्षेण would be regular Sanskrit. See above, note to 2/25c.

265. IM 7. 266. छ्: भव

267. छ्: वानवः. ŚM: लक्षैकेन भवेद् रुद्रो स्वयमेव न चान्यथा। The ŚM adds the following line: अणिमादिगुणाधारो इच्छासिद्धिमवाप्नुयात्। 268. All MSs: देव्याषट्कसमोपेतं. This emendation corresponds to the reading in the ŚM. This and the following neuter attributes are in concord with the noun विमानम्. From here to the end of this chapter, the ŚM is similar in sense but diverges substantially in form. See the notes to the translation.

269. छ्: –षष्ठि– ; ŚM: चतुःषष्टिप्रवेष्टितम् (ग्: चतुःषष्ठिषु वेष्ठितं)

270. The root व्रज् is 1P. 271. The root वस् is listed as 1P but there are instances of ātmanepadī forms of this root. 272. ख्, ग्, छ्: –लोक्य

273. छ्: –सो 274. The word पक्षिन् has developed here to पक्षिणम् 275. M → N. 276. In the following list, the animals, all of which were originally masculine, have been made neuter as happens generally in this text with items in a list. 277. क्, ग्: –मष्टं; ख्: –मष्ट्रं?

278. All MSs: मानुषं 279. All MSs except घ्, छ्: सिद्धः–

280. छ्: –या. See above, note to 3/25d. 281. All MSs: यान्यान्

282. छ्, ज्: कामान्; काम– is masculine when it means to 'wish', 'desire' or 'love' etc., but it should be neuter when, as in this case, it means an object of desire. 283. All MSs: तत्क्षणात् संप्रवर्तते

284. See above, note to 5/27d.

285. The root हन् is 2P, हन्ति is the regular form. Note also that a genitive here marks the direct object of this verb. See above, note to 5/62a.

286. All MSs: भवते 287. All MSs: –तुल्यो
288. All MSs: विद्याया–. 289. छ्: अतव्यां
290. All MSs: –गृहेषु 291. Missing in MS ख् from विद्या– up to 11/94d. M → N. 292. IM 6 → 7.

293. All MSs except क्, ग्, ज्: शुभगे

294. Note that परि– is not normally one of the prefixes of भ्राज् (1A). All MSs: –भ्रजित– 295. See above, note to 5/46d.

296. छ्: जीवलोकेसौ जीवन्मुक्ते; all other MSs: जीवलोकेसौ जीवन्मुक्तो

297. All MSs: गणा 298. घ्, छ्, झ्, ज्: परिदेवना; all other MSs: परिदेवता

299. A dual number is required here. See above, note to 5/46d.

300. क्, ग्: अटंव्यां; ख्: अतव्यां 301. ज्: चिष्मे; all other MSs: चिषम

302. छ्: –चारेण वृक्षके; all other MSs: निशाचारे–. This emendation assumes that a DS has taken place to accommodate the metre.

303. All MSs: वमादयः; स्थानेषु is implied.

304. All MSs except क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: योगि

305. क्, ख्, ग्, छ्, ज्: अस्या 306. क्: –यज्ञ

307. क्: अष्टा–; छ्: –क्र * भाषिते

NOTES OF THE TRANSLATION OF THE CHAPTER ELEVEN

1. The goddess begins by listing the topics dealt with in this chapter in the order in which they are discussed.

2. Monier-Williams explains that: 'argha (often spelt arghya-) is the 'respectful reception of a guest by offering rice, dhūrva grass, flowers, or often only water'. Brunner says that arghya is 'especially consecrated water that one offers to the god as one would an offering to a guest as a sign of homage' (ŚSP vol. 1 p. 58). The way the arghya is prepared according to the prescriptions of the Siddhānta Āgamas is outlined in ŚSP vol. 1 3/37-39ab. There it is considered to be of two kinds: common (sāmānya) and special (viśeṣa). The former is used to worship the deities and beings who accompany Śiva, the main deity. The latter is used to worship Śiva himself. The main constituent of the arghya is water, which is mixed with milk, the tips of kuśa grass, flowers, sesame, flowers and white mustard. This is technically called the arghya with eight parts (aṣṭāṅga) (ŚSP vol. 1 p. 138-39). In this case (see below 11/46cd-50) the things offered along with water are more numerous and include meat, which is excluded in Siddhānta ritual. Note also that although water is offered here to the Vidyā in the maṇḍala, it is not at all clear at first sight that the offering is an argha.

3. This is the forward order moving down from the top of the body to the feet. In chapter nine (8/43-84) the thirty-two syllables of the Vidyā were extracted in the reverse order, that is, in the sequence of withdrawal. See above 8/85-6ab and note.

4. The Circle of the Fourth State (turyamaṇḍala) is normally the Wheel of the Command that is located in between the eyebrows (see above 3/101). In this case, however, this place is occupied by the seventh letter. Perhaps, we should understand the head here to mean the topknot and this Circle to be the Cavity of Brahmā.

5. The Command is located in the Wheel of the Command between the eyebrows.

6. Presumably, the three mentioned here are the two eyebrows and the tip of the nose. These three places form the corners of a triangle, in the centre of which is the syllable KU, which is a common abbreviation of the goddess's name. Note that there is no mention of the eleventh syllable. This is probably because a line is missing in the text. This syllable is KE.

7. The main topic of this chapter is the drawing of the Kramamaṇḍala and its use in conjunction with the Samayā Vidyā to worship the goddess in the Krama. The rite of adoration of the Kramamaṇḍala requires the deposition of this Vidyā on the body. Similarly, its seed form, the Khecarī Vidyā HSKHPHREṀ is projected into the Wheels within the body and beyond. Accordingly, the deposition of the Vidyā on the body along with that of the Khecarī Vidyā is taught first as a preliminary to the teaching concerning the drawing and worship of the maṇḍala. See appendix 3 and 4.

8. The 'particular place' where each goddess has authority is both external and internal. The external place is within the maṇḍala. Her corresponding internal location is within the body. It is no less essential to know where the deity is located as it is to know the deity's identity and mantra. The deity cannot be worshipped if it has no specific location. The projection of a deity's mantra or syllable into a maṇḍala, jar, ritual enclosure, fire altar, icon, stone and the like, or onto the body are ways in which the deity is placed in its location and made present. There it can be worshipped and, empowered to act from its place, the deity exerts its authority.

The thirty-two goddesses are the energies (kalā) that constitute the supreme energy which is the goddess. She is the totality of the Thirty-two syllable Vidyā who deploys herself in time through its utterance, and in space by the deposition of her syllables.

9. Cf. above 11/2 where this is said to be the Kaulika deposition of the Vidyā. We notice that in this case 'deposition' and 'utterance' are interchangeable. This means more than simply saying that the mental projection of the syllables onto or into the body is accompanied by their utterance. The very process of uttering a mantra, part by part in due order, coincides with the development of the vital breath and energies that are located along the stations of the ascent and pervasion that thereby gradually takes place over the course of the utterance. From this point of view the utterance of a mantra coincides with the deployment of its energies in a developing progression. The thirty-two syllables of the Vidyā, as we have seen, are stationed throughout the body from top to bottom. Now the Tantra goes on to teach how the essential constituents of the essence or 'heart' of the same Vidyā are deployed in the body. These locations, as we will see, include the limbs or organs of the outer, physical body, as well as the Wheels (cakra) of energies within it, that form the ascending axis of the subtle body and that ultimately leads up outside it.

Thus we move on to the locations of the energies of the goddess within the body and beyond. These are the energies of the seed-syllable HSKHPHREṀ. Here we witness directly how this syllable functions literally as the 'inner' core of the Vidyā. It is the inner Tree the goddess in her subtle form as Kuṇḍalinī ascends in the core of her maṇdala and within her Vidyā within which the syllabic essence of her essential nature as the empowering and liberating Command is imbedded. The deployment of this, the Khecarī Vidyā, in this way has already been described above in 9/1 ff. Indeed, the following lines concerning this seed-syllable are drawn from the Dvādaśaślokasūtra which is the source of the passage in chapter nine concerning it.

KuKh 11/21-23ab = YKh (1) 49/2-4ab. This part of YKh (1) exists in only one palmleaf manuscript. Although very corrupt it is possible to make out that KuKh 11/18 = YKh 49/1. This is followed by a few lines in prose that contain the information set out in KuKh 11/19-20. One wonders whether the MS of the YKh (1) preserves an earlier version of the text that was set down 'in rough' in prose and the KuKh a later version that had been subsequently polished up and set in verse. One gets the same impression further ahead in the same MS. There we find a description of a sequence along a path of ascent through the stages of Sound. This is also in prose, although here and there it seems that there has been an attempt to set some lines into verse. Is this the result of gross copyist errors or is the text still in a rough, incompletely redacted form?

10. The seed-syllable is called the 'sevenfold Command' because it is in seven parts. The first six correspond to the part of the syllable which, we have seen, is said to be 'with support' (sālamba). The six aspects that are 'without support' (nirālamba) are here omitted. The yogi leaps forward directly into the highest state, which is here reckoned to be the seventh 'beyond the six'. Following the sequence of the stations of ascent marked by the Six Wheels, the yogi attains the bliss of liberation in the seventh place beyond by abandoning these six (KuKh 25/28). Thus, as we shall see further ahead: (KKh 25/19-20a).

Abandoning the six (Wheels below), it is the seventh (Wheel, located) in the Sky – that is, within the Circle of the Void (śūnyamaṇḍala). That is said to be (the state) Beyond the Fourth from which the six (Wheels) have emerged. In accord with the sequence of emanation, it is contemplated from above.

The Wheels are described below in 3/103cd ff. and above in 25/5 ff. and 35/48-55.

11. This syllable is called khecarīmudrā above in 8/75cd-76ab. As it generates this, the liberated state, it is not surprising that it should itself be the Skyfarer – that is, the deity in the liberated condition.

12. The teachings of the Kubjikā Tantras are transmitted by the empowerment that takes place through initiation, which is ideally imparted to the disciple as the goddess imparted it to Bhairava, that is, by the Lion's Gaze (siṁhāvalokana) (see above 5/30 ff.). The Transmission of the Lion is therefore what is imparted in this way. Here this is said to be the sixfold instrument of mantra. This is, presumably, the Krama which is divided into six groups of mantras.

13. Refer above to 9/1ff where this seed-syllable has been analysed, especially to the table (in note 10 chapter 9) where the phases of the utterance of this seed-syllable in these two accounts are compared. The correspondences here are as follows:

1) Oḍiyāṇa: This seat is within the Wheel of the Command between the eyebrows. This is an appropriate location because the Command is said to emanate from Oḍiyāṇa to form the sacred seats and the teachings transmitted from them.
2) Kāmakhya: The place where energy is born is called the Wheel or Place of Birth – (janmacakra / janmasthāna). This is located between the genitals and the anus. It is also called the Wheel of the Foundation (ādhāracakra). The contraction of this Wheel pushes its energy upwards towards the initial union of Śiva and Śakti that takes place in the next centre above.
3) Pūrṇagiri: This is located in the centre of the next Wheel in the ascending order. This is the Wheel of the Self-supported (svādhiṣṭhāna). It is represented by two superimposed triangles symbolizing the union of Śiva and Śakti.
4) Jālandhara: This is in the navel where the Wheel of the City of Gems is located (maṇipura). Kuṇḍalinī is wrapped around this centre and is awakened by the impulse that is generated by the union of the couple that takes place in the Wheel of the Self-supported. As this is the place where Kuṇḍalinī, the energy of the vital breath, rises, perhaps this is why Jālandhara is the first seat in the sequence presented above in chapter nine (see 9/8 ff).
5) Tisra: This is located in the Wheel of Purity (viśuddhi) in the throat.
6) Candra here replaces Koṅkaṇa (cf. above 9/9). Candra is probably short for Candrapura, which is the capital of the land of Koṅkaṇa and so they effectively stand for one another. Candra may also be Candragiri and so represent the whole Triangle at the End of the Twelve. In the body, Candra / Koṅkaṇa is located in the uvula at the back of the palate. In the centre of this Wheel is the Lunar Drop that oozes vitalizing lunar nectar.

The highest Wheel is called Anāma in Dakṣa's Hymn (3/113-114). It is the seventh Wheel, beyond the six, which is that of the Skyfarers. Located at the End of the Sixteenth, it is the Wheel of Amā, the seventeenth energy (see note to 9/18-19ab above concerning the End of the Sixteen).

9. Table of The Inner Wheels and the Sacred Seats

Sacred Seat	Wheel	Location
Oḍiyāṇa	Command	Between the eyebrows
Kāmākhya	Janmacakra	(Between Anus and Genitals)
Pūrṇagiri	Svādhiṣṭhāna	(Belly)
Jālandhara	Maṇipura	(Navel)
Tisra	Viśuddhi	(Throat)
Candra	Lambikā	Palate
	Anāmā	End of the Sixteen

14. The expression 'paścimapada' can also be translated as the 'last or final plane of existence'. The two translations are quite compatible, as it is here that the teachings of the Western Tradition (paścimāmnāya) of the goddess Kubjikā are fully realised. This is the Śāmbhava plane, which is the Transmental (unmanā) (see above 9/18-19ab), that is, the state Beyond the Fourth which is the liberated condition from which, unlike the Fourth state, there is no longer any danger of falling.

15. A variant (see note to the Sanskrit text) reads triṣv api saṁyogaṁ – 'the conjunction within the three also'. The three are, I suppose, the three goddesses of the lineages (oli) that form the last phases of the development of this seed-syllable. These are, in ascending order, Energy (śakti), the Pervasive One (vyāpinī) and the Equal One (samanā) (see above 9/16cd-17). The conjunction that takes places of these three and within them leads to the full realisation of the Command on the ultimate plane of its development as the Transmental. Thus the syllable, now fully formed and energized, is the veritable embodiment of the Command. As such it assumes pride of place in the very centre of the maṇḍala into which it is now projected. There, in this condition, it is the sacred Kadamba, the tree in which the goddess resides. It grows by the Kadamba Cave, that is, the Void in the centre in which she rests immersed in meditation. The Tree blazes with energy. Its rays are directed downwards to grace the lower regions into which the creation and the teachings are emitted.

16. Instead of 'kṣiptā' (= placed) YKh (1) reads 'sthitā' (= located). Having formed the conjunction of the three, the Command is located in the maṇḍala at the end. In the previous verse we were told that the Command is in the End of the Sixteenth (11/20-21ab). The 'maṇḍala at the end' is therefore the End of the Sixteen.

17. Concerning the Kadamba tree in relation to the maṇḍala, see above note to 6/10-11ab and below, note to 14/16. The Command that is cast into the maṇḍala is the syllable that is projected into the centre of the maṇḍala, thus energizing it and giving it life. This may be AIṀ or, as in this case, HSKHPHREṀ. Written down, it looks like a tree and so is called the Kadamba tree which grows out of the Drop in the middle of the maṇḍala. This is the Command in the centre, the highest point in the maṇḍala. From there it radiates its energy down into all the other spheres of the maṇḍala and hence the entire sphere of emanation.

18. The Ṭīkā (fl. 120a ff.) comments directly on verses 11/24ab ff. The passage is introduced by the Ṭīkā as a response to a question by Śrīkaṇṭha, which is not the context here. Thus it appears that the author of the Ṭīkā either drew the passage from a different source that I have not been able to trace, or else from an earlier recension of the Kumārikākhaṇḍa. Whatever be the case, the relevant comments the Ṭīkā makes on the following verses concerning the preparation and the worship of the maṇḍala are presented in the notes.

The core of the maṇḍala described in the following passage is the same in both the Kramamaṇḍala and the Gurumaṇḍala. One of the sources of the Ṭīkā's exposition of the Gurumaṇḍala is chapter 23 of the ŚM. I make use of the readings in the Ṭīkā wherever appropriate.

We are not alerted by the text that the maṇḍala it is describing is the Kramamaṇḍala. This is because the rite outlined in the rest of this chapter is dedicated to the worship of the Vidyā which is projected into the maṇḍala, rather than the entire Krama. Although the visible form of the maṇḍala is the same, it is variously named according to the rite of which it is the focus. The Ṭīkā confirms that the same maṇḍala may be filled out with different groups of mantras in various ways to serve differing purposes. Essentially, it consists of a central triangle surrounded by a hexagon. Sometimes the triangle is drawn within a square. Outside the hexogram encompassing lotuses may be arranged according to the content of a particular rite, that is, the Krama.

Thus, for example, the same maṇḍala may be used to worship the lineages of teachers by the addition of permutations of Navātman projected into it in the manner prescribed. In this way it becomes the Gurumaṇḍala. In this particular case, the maṇḍala described in the Ṭīkā accomodates what is termed there 'the sequence of thirty-two'. This consists of six groups consisting of 6-5-6-6-5-4 mantras. The Ṭīkā gives these mantras in full. They are projected into the corners of the hexogram in the centre as follows: 1) East: the first group of six. 2) South-east: the first group of five. 3) South-west: the second group of six. 4) West: the third group of six. 5) North-west: the second group of five. 6) North-east: the group of four. Another sequence described in the same way in the Ṭīkā is one of 86 mantras divided into eighteen groups (ogha) which are four of four, five of five, six of six and three of three (Ṭīkā fl. 105a). This is called the Mahāvākyānandakrama.

The most important of these sequences is, of course, the main Krama. However, this is not the same for all the texts (see KuKh vol. 3 notes, appendix 8). Although distinct in their details, the procedures in differing sources are paradigmatically identically. Thus, the Ṭīkā helps to clarify our text, despite the variations in the rite taught there with respect to that of our text.

Another variant of this maṇḍala worshipped in conjunction with the Samayā Vidyā is described in ŚM 10/1-68. Where relevant this will also be compared with the one here as we go through the text. A clearer account is found in chapter twenty-three of the ŚM. It begins with the description of the Gurumaṇḍala which is explained in the Ṭīkā. There, as in the Ṭīkā, the same maṇḍala is used for the worship of the Krama. As the Ṭīkā explicitly says, the only difference between these two maṇḍalas is that, in the case of Kramamaṇḍala, the projections of Navātman that are associated with the worship of the teachers are not done. In this context, the ŚM presents the full set of mantras of the three Kramas of the Aged, Middling and Youngest required for the complete worship of the Krama. As we shall see below, the ŚM explains how the Kramas, projected into the maṇḍala, are all linked with the Samayā Vidyā.

The rite described in this chapter of our text is not concerned with the worship of these Kramas. It focuses only on the worship of the goddess in the maṇḍala who is projected into it as the Samayā Vidyā. The purpose being to offer her libation (argha), the maṇḍala is accordingly called the Maṇḍala of the Libation.

19. See above 11/2.

20. This is the main maṇḍala of the Kubjikā Tantras; it is not just one of the many that have some special function or that are related to a particular deity in the goddess's retinue. Like every great maṇḍala that forms the core of a major Tantric system, this one is a sacred symbolic represention of the unity all things collected together in this form to serve as the seat of the deity who is the object of worship. The KuKauM presents the following interesting etymologies of the word 'maṇḍala', which although not philologically correct, serve a useful didactic purpose.

The maṇḍala is said to be the essence of the teaching which is the fruit, both superior and inferior. It receives (lāti) and gives (dadati) and so it called maṇḍala. All the Mothers are in the letter Ma, the hordes of Ḍākinīs in the letter Ḍa. The Lākinīs are in the letter La and so it is called 'maṇḍala'. The Self is always in the letter Ma, the hordes of Khecarīs in the letter Ḍa. The principle of the Self is in the letter La and so it is called maṇḍala.

The god without defect is in the letter Ma while Śakti is said to be in the letter Ḍa. The sixfold emanation (of the Krama) is in the letter La and so it called maṇḍala.

The Śiva principle is in the letter Ma. The Vidyā principle is in the letter Da, while the principle of the Self is in the letter La and so it called maṇḍala.

maṇḍalaṁ sāram ākhyātaṁ phalaṁ sāraṁ parāparam |
lāti yasmād dadatīti maṇḍalaṁ tena kīrtitam ||
makāre mātaraḥ sarvā ḍakāre ḍākinīgaṇam |
lakāre lākinīvargaṁ maṇḍalaṁ tena cocyate ||
makāre nityam ātmānaṁ ḍakāre khecarīgaṇam |
lakāre ātmatattvaṁ tu maṇḍalaṁ tena cocyate ||
mārṇe nirāmayo devo ḍakāre śaktir ucyate |
lakāre ṣaḍvidhā sṛṣṭir maṇḍalaṁ tena cocyate ||
makāraṁ śivatattvaṁ tu vidyātattvaṁ ḍakārake |

lakāre ātmatattvaṁ tu maṇḍalaṁ tena kīrtitam || KuKauM 7/2-6.

One attains Śiva by means of the letter Ma. The supreme goddess is in the letter Ḍa. The seventy million mantras are in the letter La and so it is said to be maṇḍala.

The five causes are in the letter Ma, (the goddesses who are both) supreme and inferior are in the letter Ma. The five of Aparā are in the letter La and so it is called maṇḍala.

Knowledge of reality is in the letter Ma. That called 'letter' (varṇa) is in the letter Ḍa. The (supreme) plane is said to be in the letter La and so it is called maṇḍala.

Mahāloka (the celestial world) is in the letter Ma. The mortal world (martyalokaka) is in the letter Ḍa. The lower world called Tala is in the letter La and so it is called maṇḍala..

All the worlds are in the letter Ma and the aggregate mantras are in the letter Ḍa. The energies (kalā) are said to be in the letter La and so it is called maṇḍala.

makāreṇa śivaṁ vidyād ḍakāre parameśvarī |
lakāre saptakoṭis tu mantrāṇāṁ maṇḍalaṁ smṛtam ||
makāre kāraṇāḥ pañca ḍakāre tu parāparāḥ |
lakāre aparāḥ pañca maṇḍalaṁ tena kīrtitam ||
makāre tattvavijñānaṁ ḍakāre varṇanāmakam |
lakāre padam ākhyātaṁ tasmād maṇḍalakaṁ smṛtam ||
makāre ca mahālokaṁ ḍakāre martyalokakam |
lakāre talapātālaṁ maṇḍalaṁ tena kīrtitam ||
makāre bhuvanāḥ sarve ḍakāre mantrasaṁhitā |
lakāre ca kalā proktā maṇḍalaṁ tena kīrtitam || ibid. 7/7-11

(The Five Causes) Brahmā, Viṣṇu, Rudra, Īśvara, and Sadāśiva are referred to as a maṇḍala and so that is called maṇḍala. All the planets, the guardians of the quarters, snakes, Bhairavas and the rest reside in the maṇḍala and are said to be merged in all the directions. The Lord of the Maṇḍala has been revealed sixfold, beginning with Ananta and ending with Śiva, and so pervades the maṇḍala. Another (aspect is) the one who is all-pervasive and so is more than the maṇḍala. Thus, the maṇḍala should be worshipped by one who desires the fruits of worldly benefits and liberation. This, O lord of the gods, is the rite of adoration (pūjākrama) (performed) by the yogis who have (attained) accomplishment by means of Navātman. This is the visualization (dhyāna) of the maṇḍala taught in the Kulatantraka.

brahmā viṣṇuś ca rudraś ca īśvaraś ca sadāśivaḥ |
ucyate maṇḍalenaiva yat tan maṇḍalam ucyate ||
sarve grahāś ca dikpālā nāgā vai bhairavādayaḥ |
tiṣṭhanti maṇḍale līnāḥ sarve dikṣu matā yataḥ ||
anantādi śivāntas tu ṣaḍvidhaḥ saṁprakāśitaḥ |
asti maṇḍalakeśo hi maṇḍalavyāpakas tataḥ ||
sarvavyāpī tathā cānyo maṇḍalād ādhiko yataḥ |
tena maṇḍalam abhyarcyaṁ bhuktimuktiphalārthinā ||
pūjākramaṁ tu deveśa navātmāsiddhayogibhiḥ |
pūrve ca kathitaṁ bhadre vidhir evam udāhṛtaḥ ||
itīdaṁ maṇḍaladhyānaṁ nirdiṣṭaṁ kulatantrake | ibid. 7/12-17ab

21. The Ṭīkā (fl. 120b) explains that:

> The letter E is the triangle that serves as the calyx of the Wheel. To the west of that, that is, in the western direction, is its main corner which faces downwards. Place that in front (of oneself) in the western direction.

In other words, the adept faces east. He begins by drawing the centre of the maṇḍala, which is a downward-facing triangle that faces towards him, that is, to the west. The Ṭīkā continues:

> In that place, free from the company of the uninitiated, one should cause to fashion a square, the size of one handspan, with cow dung and water.

iti ekāraṁ trikoṇaṁ karṇikārūpaṁ cakrasya tasya paścimasya | tasya paścimadiśāyāṁ [k kh: -diśā] mūlakoṇam adhomukham | tat paścimadiśāyāṁ sanmukham upaveśayet | paśusaṅgarahite [k kh: -tam] tatra sthāne ekahastapramāṇaṁ caturasraṁ [k kh: caturaśraṁ] gomayodakena [kh: gāma-] kārayet | Ṭīkā fl. 120b.

22. The Five-lettered Vidyā consists of the Five Praṇavas.

23. The Ṭīkā explains:

> A round circle should be drawn in the middle of that (square) the shape of the solar disc and in the form of the sky. With what substance? It should be made with wine, sandalwood, camphor, vermilion and musk whilst reciting the Five Praṇavas. 'Having placed (that) with the five-syllable mantra . . . '
>
> Then, once the maṇḍala has been fashioned thus, the right hand should be placed there and, as long as it is there, one should worship with the Five-syllable mantra. As (was said) before:
>
> 'One should worship Vāgbhava (AIṀ) in the north-east, while Māyā (HRĪṀ) is in the south-east. Śrī's seed-syllable (ŚRĪṀ) should be worshipped in the south-west . . . '

(The Ṭīkā adds that the fourth Praṇava (KHPHREṀ) is projected in the north-west direction and the fifth one (HSHŪAUḤ) is placed in the middle).

. . . Then, having moved one's hands all around, one should worship the Unbroken Circle in the middle, where the thumbs are.

tanmadhye sūryabimbākṛtir [k kh: -kṛti] vyomarūpaṁ vartulaṁ maṇḍalaṁ kārayet [kh: kāyait] | kena dravyeṇa | madyacandanakarpūrakuṅkumakastūrikābhiḥ [k kh: -kāyām] pañcapraṇavoccāryamāṇaṁ kārayet | kṣiptvā pañcārṇamantreṇa [k kh: paṁcārṇava-] (KuKh: kṣiptvā pañcārṇavidyāṁ tāṁ) iti | evaṁ maṇḍalaṁ kṛtvā tatas tatra dakṣahastaḥ [k kh: hastaṁ + tatraiva] sthāpitavyo [k kh: sthātavyam] yāvad [k kh: + yāvatī] pañcākṣaramantreṇa [kh: -raṁ-] pūjayet | pūrvavad [kh: -vat] yathā
īśāne vāgbhavaṁ pūjyaṁ [kh: pūjya] māyā vai vahnimaṇḍale ||
śrībījaṁ nairṛte pūjyaṁ [k kh: pūjya] || [. . .] yathā aiṁ īśāne | hrīṁ āgneye | śrīṁ nairṛtye | khphreṁ mārute | hshūauṁ madhye | iti pañcārṇamantreṇa [k: pañcārṇavaṁ maṁtreṇa] pūjayet | tataḥ hastau samāntataḥ [k, kh: samanataḥ] bhrāmya madhye aṅguṣṭhasthāne akhaṇḍamaṇḍalaṁ pūjyam | Ṭīkā fl. 120b

The formation of the maṇḍala up to this point is described as follows in the ninth chapter of the ŚM:

I will (now) explain the maṇḍala of that (Vidyā) so that it can be used when repeating it. One should fashion the maṇḍala there in a sacred seat or a sacred field. Facing west, the divine extraction (of the maṇḍala) has come forth there. One should cause to fashion the maṇḍala, the measure of a handspan, there in a secluded, beautiful place where there are no people and out of sight of the uninitiated. One should make the maṇḍala square with cow dung mixed with water. O beloved, in the centre of that, fashion a round solar disc made of liquor, sandalwood and saffron (kāśmīra) consecrated (mantrita) with the Five Praṇavas. O goddess, casting (them) in the middle of that, one should move the left hand around above the right hand in an anticlockwise direction. Placing the thumb in front, one should deposit a flower in the middle (of the maṇḍala).

asyā maṇḍalakaṁ vakṣye [kh: vakṣaya] sevanāj japakarmaṇi |
pīṭhe vāpy athavā [g: vāpyatha] kṣetre [g: + vā] tatra maṇḍalam ārabhet [k: -ruhet; g: maṁḍarā-] ||
paścimābhimukhaṁ [kh: -mukho] divyaṁ [kh: devyaṁ] uddhāraṁ [k kh: .okāraṁ] tatra nirgataṁ [k: nirgamam] |
ekānte vijane ramye paśudṛṣṭivivarjite ||
maṇḍalaṁ kārayet [kh: -yat] tatra hastamātrapramāṇataḥ |
gomayodaka kartavyaṁ maṇḍalaṁ caturasrakaṁ [g: caturaśrakaṁ] ||

tanmadhye sūryabimbaṁ tu [k: sūryavahniṁca; kh: sūryyavadvimvaṁ] vṛttākāraṁ kuru priye |
alicandanakāśmīraṁ [g: -kāsmīraṁ] pañcapraṇavamantritam ||
kṣiptvā tanmadhyato devi bhramyaṁ dakṣakaropari |
kartavyaṁ vāmahastena [k: haste tu; g: hastaṁ tu] vāmāvartakrameṇa tu ||
aṅguṣṭham [k: aṅguṇam] agrato nyastvā madhye [g: -dhya] puṣpaṁ pradāpayet |
ŚM 9/35-40ab

The procedure is also described in chapter twenty-three of the ŚM as follows:

There, in a secluded beautiful place where there are no people, out of sight of the uninitiated, fashion a maṇḍala the size of one handspan. One should make the square maṇḍala with cow dung mixed with water (gomayodaka). In the centre of that make a round maṇḍala like the solar disc with liquor, sandalwood and saffron consecrated (mantrita) with the Five Praṇavas. O beloved, having placed the palm of the right hand (there) with the root mantra and having established (it) in conjunction (with the Samayā Vidyā), rotating the clenched fist in an anticlockwise direction, the Unbroken Maṇḍala is in the middle (where) the thumb is (placed).

ekānte vijane ramye paśudṛṣṭivivarjite ||
maṇḍalaṁ kāryet tatra ekahastapramāṇataḥ |
gomayodaka kartavyaṁ maṇḍalaṁ caturasrakam ||
tan madhye sūryavad bimbaṁ maṇḍalaṁ vartulaṁ kuru |
alicandanakāśmīraṁ [kh: -kāśmira] pañcaPraṇavamantritam ||
kṣiptvā vai mūlamantreṇa [g: pūrṇa-] dakṣahastatalaṁ priye |
saṁyogena tu saṁsthāpya vāmāvartaparibhraman [kh: paribhramāt] ||
muṣṭim aṁguṣṭhamadhye [kh: -maṁguṣṭa-] tu akhaṇḍam iti maṁḍalaṁ |
ŚM 23/5cd-9ab

From these references it appears that the Unbroken Maṇḍala is the Point (bindu) in the centre of the maṇḍala. Other references, however, indicate that it is also the whole maṇḍala. See above 2/3cd-4ab where the maṇḍala of the Kaula tradition, i.e. that of the Kubjikā Tantras, is described as 'unbroken'. Again, according to 3/128 the Unbroken Maṇḍala is the 'Great Jewel that is the foundation of the living being (jīva).' The Great Jewel is the navel centre where the individual soul resides (see above, 3/120-121 and notes, 3/128 and above 58/93cd-94ab and 59/75cd-76). When the energy of Kuṇḍalinī is awakened in the navel, the adept exhibits the initial signs of possession (āveśa) by the deity and he spontaneously clenches his fists (13/122-24ab). Perhaps this gesture is made when the Point in the centre of the maṇḍala is worshipped in order to reproduce this sign of empowerment and hence induce it (cf. below 48/8-11).

24. The eight ramparts are the group of eight Vidyās of the Mothers (mātṛkā), the Kulāṣṭaka (see above 3/6). As usual, the eight Mothers are deposited beginning with Brahmāṇī who is in the eastern quarter (cf. Ṭīkā fl. 52b-53a). This is done by repeating their seed-syllables three times while they are being deposited, that is, drawn, in the maṇḍala. These are:

1) East: Brahmāṇī – AṀ. 2) South-east: Maheśvarī – KAṀ 3) South: Kaumārī – CAṀ. 4) South-west: Vaiṣṇavī – ṬAṀ. 5) West: Vārāhī – TAṀ. 6) North-west: Indrāṇī – PAṀ. 7) North: Cāmuṇḍā – YAṀ. 8) North-east: Mahālakṣmī – SAṀ

The description of the drawing of this circle, in the form of an eight-petalled lotus, is missing in the Ṭīkā and the ŚM. There can be no doubt, however, that it part of the Kramamaṇḍala according to the ŚM, insofar as the mantras for the eight Mothers (kulāṣṭaka) are given in full in the context of describing their worship. The mantras include references to the locations of the Mothers' sacred seats, their form as low-caste women and their Bhairava consorts. Finally once this has been done, the hand is raised from the maṇḍala. The Ṭīkā explains that, according to the procedure it is expounding, which is that of chapter twenty-three of the ŚM, Navātman is only incorporated into the Gurumaṇḍala. The Kramamaṇḍala contains only the Five Praṇavas. According to the ŚM (23/10), at this stage five flowers are placed in the maṇḍala, supposedly one for each of the Praṇavas. Then the hand is removed from the maṇḍala. In chapter nine the ŚM says:

Then having deposited the pervasive one in to the centre along with the Five Praṇavas, one should place the Navātman (syllable) of the Great Lord in the (primary) and secondary directions. (Thus) one should deposit (Navātman), the Peak syllable, enveloped by the letters (akṣarāntarita), onto the maṇḍala.

vyāpakaṁ madhyato nyasya pañcapraṇavasaṁyutam ||
digvidig [kh: digvidika] vinyaset kūṭaṁ [k kh: kūṭān; g: kūṭāṁ] navātmānaṁ [g: navātmāṁnaṁ] mahāprabhoḥ [kh: mahāprabho] |
akṣarāntaritaṁ [kh: akṣarāṁntaritaṁ] kūṭaṁ vinyaset maṇḍalopari ||
ŚM 9/40cd-41

The rite described in chapter nine of the ŚM incorporates nine Navātmans into its Kramamaṇḍala 'enveloped by the letters (akṣarāntarita)'. The ŚM is saying that the adept should deposit Navātman (HSKṢMLVRYŪṀ) in the eight directions within the outer circle of the maṇḍala with a ninth 'pervasive'

Navātman in the centre. This is confirmed in chapter twenty-four. Although we must bear in mind that, in this part of the procedure outlined in chapter twenty-three, the Gurumaṇḍala is being described. Thus, it appears that the Kramamaṇḍala described in chapter nine, unlike the one described here in the KuKh, incorporates Navātman.

25. There is no mention of a mirror in either of the two accounts in the ŚM, whereas the Ṭīkā (fl. 121b) goes to comment on what is practically our text:

> 'One should then purify the mirror . . ., Now the procedure regarding the Kramamaṇḍala is explained. The (mirror) is the size of sixteen fingerspans. The circle is three times the size, that is, forty-eight fingerspans. It is thick, measuring one finger (width in thickness), and so should not be shown to all. Then the mirror should be placed on a firm seat of flowers with the divine weapon. It should be installed with this mantra:
>
> AIṀ 5 KIṆI KIṆI VICCE KOṄKAṆĀMBĀYAI ASTRĀYA PHAṬ ǀ
>
> Then wrap it with the mantra of the armour:
>
> AIṀ 5 ṄA ÑA ṆA NA ME AGHORĀMUKHE BAHURŪPĀYA KAVACĀYA HUṀ ǀ

darpaṇaṁ [darpaṇa] śodhayet [sādhayet] paścād ity ādi kramamaṇḍalasya [krame-] vidhiḥ kathyate yathā ǀ ṣoḍaśāṅgulapramāṇavistarāt ǀ vartulaṁ [vartulā] triguṇaṁ aṅgulāṣṭacatvāriṁśat [-śāt] ǀ ghanatvād aṅgulaikamātram ǀ tat tasmān na prakāśayet ǀ tataḥ darpaṇaṁ puṣpāsane sthire sthāpitavyaṁ [sthātavyaṁ] divyāstreṇa ǀ anena mantreṇa sthāpayet ǀ tataḥ kavacamantreṇāvaguṇṭhayet ǀ

26. The Weapon is one of the six limbs. It is used, as its name suggests, to remove negative forces, demons and obstacles. The Weapon of Kubjikā's Vidyā – called the Koṅkaṇa Weapon – is considered to be especially powerful. The Newars consider it to be so effective that they use it in most if not all their Kaula rituals, irrespective of the goddess that is being worshipped. The YKh (1) declares that it should be recited along with any mantra in order to make it effective. We read there:

> Koṅkaṇa is the supreme weapon; it is very powerful, as I am. It protects from the many obstacles (vighna) and removes bad animals, Śākinīs, ghosts, Vetālas, great Rakṣasas, snakes, the evil and cruel mantras that do harm to the adept – all these obstacles are removed by uttering it just once. It frees from (all) afflictions, thieves, frightening things, bad dreams, evil omens, the weapons of others (paracakra), calamities, death, Alakṣmī, loss, fear of you, poison, passion, attachment, grief, fear and the like – by recollecting the Weapon they are all removed. It destroys fear from the guardians of the field and of Gaṇeśa's obstacle. It also removes sins. There is no trouble from male (apasmāra) or female demons (mahāmārī).

(The adept) is immune to (the afflictions brought about by) any living being or by witches (śākinī) and wicked demons (rakṣas) and whoever else there is causing affliction (vighnada) – by worshipping, repeating, visualizing, and making fire offerings, he removes obstacles (vighna) and sins. The adept (sādhaka) becomes my equal, the lord of the gods; he has the form he desires, is very powerful, he is immune to attack and is very fierce; he does what he wants and enjoys as he chooses. Accomplishment (siddhi) is at each step (he takes).

He wanders unobstructed and conquers the path of the lower worlds (pātālapatha). Like copper that is pierced by (alchemical) mercury that does not become copper again, in the same way the Yogi who is pierced by the Weapon is (never) overcome by afflictions (vighna).

koṅkaṇaṁ [k, kh, gh: kokaṇaṁ] paramāstraṁ [k, kh: -māstaṁ] tu mama tulyo mahābalaḥ |
rakṣaṁ tu vighnasaṁghātāt [k, kh: -saṁghātaṁ] duṣṭasatvān [kh: duṣṭāsatvān] vyapohati [k, kh, gh: -nī] ||
śākinībhūtavetālā mahārakṣāś ca [k, kh, gh: rahā-] pannagāḥ |
duṣṭamantrās tathā krūrāḥ sādhakasya tu hiṁsakāḥ ||
sakṛduccāraṇāt [k, kh: sakṛdurvāraṇāṁ; gh: sakṛdurvāraṇāt] tasya [k: nasya] vighnā yānti parāṅmukhāḥ |
ye te [k, kh, gh: ke] vighnādayaḥ [k, kh, gh: vidyādhayaḥ] sarve [k, kh, gh: sarva] santi [k, kh: śaṁtu; gh: saṁtu] caurā bhayāvahāḥ ||
duḥsvapnā [k, kh: duḥśvapanā; gh: duḥṣvapunā] durnimittāś ca paracakrasya [k, kh: paracakrāśca; gh: paracakrāñca] yadbhavam |
āpadānaṁ [k, kh, gh: āpadāna] ca mṛtyuṁ [k, kh: mṛṁtyuṁ] ca alakṣmī hāni te bhayam ||
viṣalūtāgraholvīṭaṁ [kh: -holvāṭaṁ] rāgaśokabhayādikaṁ [k, kh, gh: -śokā-] |
smaraṇādastrarājasya yānti sarve [k: sarva] parāṅmukhāḥ ||
kṣetrapālabhayaṁ [k, kh: khyatrapālā; gh: kṣekhyatrapālā] hanti gaṇeśasya [k, kh: gaṇaiśasya] vighnaṁ tathā |
apasmāraṁ mahāmārī [k, kh, gh: -māriṁ] tasya vighnaṁ [k, kh: tasyovvāgarn] na vidyate ||
avadhyaḥ sarvabhūtānāṁ [kh: savvabhū-] śākinīduṣṭarakṣāsaiḥ [k, gh: -rakṣasāḥ; kh: -rakṣakṣasāḥ] |
anye ye vighnadāḥ [k, kh, gh: -dā] kecid astrarājasya [k, kh: -dastarājasya] arcanāt [k, kh: acināt; gh: arcināt] ||

japadhyānena [k, kh, gh: -dhyānaina] homena pāpān [k, kh, gh: yāvo] vighnān vyapohati [k, kh, gh: vyavohati] |
matsamo bhavate so hi sādhakas [k, kh, gh: sādhakes] tridaśeśvaraḥ ||
kāmarūpo mahātejo [k, kh, gh: -tejā] vikrāntaś ca mahotkaṭaḥ |
svecchācaritrabhogaś ca siddhistasya pade pade ||
nirvighnaḥ paryate [kh: -ṭe] so hi pātālapathasādhakaḥ [k, kh: pātālavāthasādhakaḥ; gh: pātālevāthasādhakaḥ] |
rasaviddhaṁ yathā tāmraṁ [k, kh: tamraṁ] na bhūyas tāmratāṁ [k, kh, gh: -tāṁpratā] vrajet ||
astraviddhas [k: astavidvaṁs; kh: astavidvas; gh: astraviddhaṁs] tathā yogī na vighnaiś cābhibhūyate [k, kh: vighnaścābhi-] | YKh (1) 1/254-264ab.
See below, note to 34/16.

27. The Weapon and the Armour, in this case, are two of the limbs of the Samayā Vidyā (see above 10/27). The Weapon serves to install and purify (11/36, 34/9). The Armour is regularly used for a protective procedure technically called ‘envelopment (avaguṇṭhana)’ of an object such a jar (11/36), or a place such as a firepit (34/8) where the deity is invoked and by means of which it is established (cf. below 11/37).

28. The core of the maṇḍala according to both the ŚM and the KuKh is a triangle, in the centre of which is the seed-syllable of the goddess. The Ṭīkā treats this triangle itself as the seed-syllable of the goddess Kaulīśī. The letter E drawn in the centre of the square in the beginning of the procedure below the mirror also has the form of a downward-facing triangle. Kauleśī is Kubjikā, the Kula goddess of the Kubjikā Tantras (3/170). She has two seed-syllables, AIṀ and HSKHPHREṀ. AIṀ is shaped like a downward-facing triangle, which fits the description of it given here. According to the ŚM, the seed-syllable in the centre of the triangle is that of Parā. It is extracted in ŚM 9/43cd-44 but the text is corrupt. The Parā Vidyā according to KMT 18/30b-31 is HSRAUṀ. In the Ṭīkā it is HSPHRAUṀ (fl. 70b), which is the form of the fifth Praṇava in most of the mantras of the Ṭīkā.

The ŚM (9/45ab) adds that one should worship the Siddhas, Śrīkaṇṭha and the rest there in the middle (within the triangle). These are probably the Siddhas of the Five Praṇavas. They may also be the Siddhas who govern the Letters. The latter are not mentioned in this account of the maṇḍala in the KuKh, but they appear in that of the interiorized form of the same maṇḍala above in 3/31 along with their corresponding Yoginīs.

29. See above 3/13cd-14ab concerning the goddess in the centre who 'faces downwards'. The group of six is represented by a six-sided figure made by drawing two superimposed triangles, one facing upwards and the other down. The Ṭīkā (fl. 121b) says:

Then here in the middle, one should draw Śakti, who is called Kaulīśī, in the form of a triangle facing downwards. The meaning is that there is a triangle in the square. Then, outside that, one should fashion a hexagon. That should then be decorated with three enclosures, that is, (it should be) decorated with three circles.

tataś cātramadhye trikoṇākṛtiṁ śaktim adhomukhīṁ [k, kh: -khaṁ] kaulīśy abhidhānāṁ ullikhec caturasre [k kh: catuḥsame] trikoṇam ity arthaḥ | tatas tasya bāhye ṣaṭkoṇaṁ kārayet | taṁ punar mekhalātrayabhūṣitaṁ vartulatrayabhūṣitaṁ kārayet |

Similarly, the ŚM prescribes that:

In the middle of that one should write (the symbol) of the energy whose form is an excellent triangle and (then outside that there are two more triangles of energy). The first (energy) faces downwards. The second faces upwards. There are three enclosures outside and the Supreme Seed (parābīja) is in the middle.

tanmadhye cālikhec [k: ca-] chaktiṁ śṛṅgāṭākṛtim uttamām |
adhomukhī ca prathamā dvitīyordhvamukhī [k: dvitīyordha-] sthitā ||
mekhalātritayaṁ [kh: mekhalātraya] bāhye [kh: vāhyantu] parābījaṁ tu [kh: ca] madhyataḥ | ŚM 9/42-3ab.

30. According to both the Ṭīkā and the KuKh there are two jars. The first one is placed in the maṇḍala. The second one is placed in front of the maṇḍala. The ŚM refers to only one jar, which is placed in the north-east (īśānakoṇaga). Concerning the former jar the Ṭīkā says:

Then one should place a Hero's Vessel, that is, the Vessel of Mantra (which is the) wine jar (surāpātra) there in the middle (of the maṇḍala). Then the limbs (are projected) into the hexagon, like the group of six faces. One should worship (the group of) six limbs beginning with the Heart and ending with the Weapon. The vessel of the hexogram will be discussed later. The Kramamaṇḍala, internally and externally, is thus.

tatas tatra madhye vīrapātraṁ mantrapātraṁ surāpātraṁ āropya sthāpayet | tataḥ ṣaṭkoṇe aṅgāḥ vaktraṣaṭkaṁ yathā | ṣaḍaṅgahṛdayādi-astrāntaṁ ṣaḍaṅgaṁ pūjayet | ṣaṭkoṇasya pātraṁ [kh: patra] tad agre kathyate | sabāhyābhyantaraṁ krama-maṇḍalaṁ hy evam | Ṭīkā fl. 121b

The Ṭīkā goes on to mention two varieties of the Kramamaṇḍala and says that:

All of these (varieties) are with hexagons and so then the maṇḍala is common to all and such is the Kramamaṇḍala. Now here (in this case), the sequence is that of (the Vidyā) divided into thirty-two divisions. (Thus) one should cause the hexogram to be fashioned without southern or northern corners (see below 11/40 ff.) and it should be drawn (the measure of) sixteen fingers on the mirror and then, as explained, (draw what is) outside the hexagon.

